Ali again. Ellis did well for three or four rounds until Joe got to smoking full steam ahead and from then on it was no contest, leading to a ninth round TKO win for Frazier.Ellis was a very good fighter who had a excellent jab, good defense, and a good right lead that often caught fighters by surprise. The right lead was the same kind of punch Ali used to success, an example of Ellis' similar style to Ali's.|1/10/04 10:24:37 AM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10|I've just read the past posts I've been out of town for a week so Paul, sorry about this, but I watched the "Thrilla" again and what a fight it was. I haven't seen it in a while but it has to be one of the greatest fights of all time. Ali won the first 4 rounds hands down. He rocked Joe, repeatedly buckling Frazier's legs. Joe started to come on the end of round four and and continued in the fifth, Ali seemed to take a break and Frazier jumped on him keeping Ali in his corner almost the entire round. Between the fifth and eleventh round it was Joe's fight Ali may have stolen a round, eight or nine with his last minute flurries, but Joe's punches were doing much more damage. I scored the fight even going into the tenth round, Frazier took the eleventh, again battering Ali. Where ever it came from I don't know, in round twelve Ali came back and pounded Joe with rights and whipping left hooks, Joe was not bobbing and rolling as in the middle rounds and was a sitting duck for Ali's head shots. The thirteenth was even uglier for Joe, Ali launching his mouthpeice, buckling Joe's legs, distorting his face and nearly flooring him. The fourteenth was more of the same, I really don't see how Frazier came out for the fourteenth round, much less finished on his feet. The same for Ali in the eleventh, he was completely battered by Frazier. Ali was on his stool when Dundee grabbed his arm and told him it was over. Ali got up and then went down on the canvas, weather from exaustion or relief, and then his people got him up on his stool. My feeling is Ali would have continued to batter Frazier if there was fifteenth round forcing the ref to stop the fight. Joe was in bad shape and Ali's eyes were clear and focused at the end of the fourteenth. He may have been dying between the round, but would have been able to go on and pot shot Frazier. I also don't think Frazier would have been counted out if the fight continued, the ref would have simply stopped it and led Joe to his corner. So at the end of the fight I had Ali 8-6. The eighth and ninth could have gone either way, I gave eight to Ali as he was up on his feet again and landed some good combinations, Joe landed the harder punches, you could give to Joe and call it even. Either way it was one of the most thrilling fights I've ever seen and truly lived up to the hype. As for Holmes vs Frazier. I don't think Holmes would beat Joe. He would hurt him for sure but the pressure from Frazier would have been too much. Frazier wins a decision. Frazier vs Norton. Frazier in five. Marciano vs Tyson. We know which Marciano would show up but Tyson is another question. Rocky never faced someone as big and quick as Tyson. Both men came right at you, Tyson relied on overwhelming opponents with quick, powerful combinations, hooks and uppercuts, Rocky on wearing guy's down and simply out lasting them. I still have to go with The Rock here he had icewater in his veins, Tyson, even the young Tyson is a complete nutbag. Yeah, I might be one too. |1/10/04 10:37:51 AM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10|BTW, I watched the fight with the sound off. I hate the way Don Dunphy calls an Ali fight, he is so clearly biased toward Ali it makes me cringe. When Joe was killing Ali in the middle rounds, Dunphy would make comments like, "Those punches are not really hurting Ali". And when Ali landed a weak combination "I don't know what's keeping Frazier up". Maybe some people think he's legendary...I think he's a quack.|1/10/04 11:55:54 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|Frazier won the third round in Thrilla in my opinion, even if it was only because Ali' allowed Joe to hit him to the body for about 1 minute.|1/10/04 12:32:07 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||||10|BOB: yes i agree what a battle Ali-Frazier III. One thing about ALI he fought everybody, all the big guns and Mr. Tyson can not say the same. Frazier was one hell of a gladiator, and I really get upset how people could bad mouth him. Personally I think he might have had his hands full with say a RON LYLE OR EARNIE SHAVERS. I only went to his site a few times mostly because of all the terrible names people called him "was not right" I sure wished Jerry would have stayed away from him in 74'. I cringed when the bout was officially signed, for I figured Jerry was gonna get a clear 1 Million$ shot at the WORLD TITLE. Joe of course crashed those dreams and that was about it, JERRY had bills to pay especially when he has a wife who was "high maintenance" etc. QUARRY-BONAVENA probably would be a real thriller, they were up and down against each other in the world ratings for ten years. |

|1/10/04 12:40:07 PM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com||||10|Bob - I'd go for Marciano over Tyson, too. Marciano would have soaked up the punishment and as the fight continued Tyson would have got very tired and dispirited and his head movement would have stopped. Marciano's punches would by then be connecting and I see a late rounds stoppage. And, while I don't think Tyson would be back for a rematch, Rocky would stop him very early if he did. |

|1/10/04 01:13:06 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Marciano-Tyson is a tough one for me to call. I was born in 1963 so I never saw Marciano fight, except for some highlight reels. I have a video of great knockouts and knockout punchers, co-hosted by Tyson. Tyson pays tribute to Marciano on the tape. I think it would be a brutal fight and the way I see it, Tyson would win the fight early, or Marciano would win it late. If Tyson connected in the first 5 rounds, he could finish Rocky with a typical Tyson knockout. But if Marciano could take him past the middle rounds, I think he would wear Tyson down and take the spirit away from Iron Mike. For me, Holmes-Frazier is also tough to call, but I would favor Holmes. I think Holmes' height advantage might help him a little, and his foot movement and strong left jab would keep Frazier away (to the extent that you could keep Frazier away). I think Holmes would win a unanimous decision by outboxing Frazier. Holmes ability to take a wicked punch and survive a knockdown is underrated. For my money, Shavers hit harder than Frazier, and Holmes took the best Shavers had to offer and managed to come back strong, to beat Shavers not once but twice. True, Frazier had more stamina than Shavers did, and would likely keep smoking toward Holmes, but like a bull fighter, I think Holmes would keep moving back and to the side, clipping Frazier with sharp jabs and the occasional hard right, scoring more points and taking rounds on "ring generalship." Holmes by decision whether it was 10, 12 or 15 rounds. |

|1/10/04 02:35:21 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Massimo -I too gave Frazier that round. I don't agree with the Olympic system that all punches count the same, but at the same time, in the pros, body shots don't consistently count the same as ones to the head, and that's wrong too.Don Dunphy was so bad, an argument could be made for him knowing the result and doing a voice over on the tape, but he ~is~ there, and some remarks are obviously real time besides. Frazier would be crawling all over Ali and there was silence, or Ali was "setting Joe up," or something like that, then Ali would throw three punches, miss two, and "Joe's in trouble." I remember at the beginning of the 11th in fight one, he said "Frazier's lost the timing he had earlier," just before the drama started.It's unfortunate Frazier's web site closed due to fools. I suppose the higher you are, the bigger the target.I really see Marciano taking Tyson only because of his greater mental stability. Also, Marciano would not have been afraid of him. Otherwise, I think Mike would be too much for the Rock. |

|1/10/04 07:13:09 PM|charles anderson|ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com||||10|frazier(69-71) would have eaten foreman alive(prime), anybody else too.|
But Primo Carnera, of course!
i was a big fan of primo's too. his fights against Young(mighty Joe) and Reeves (hercules) were classics. (he lost those too)!

Primo was much better than people usually think (or thinks). I have seen Carnera-Sharkey 2 and Carnera-Loughran and, in this way, I realized that he was powerful and had a good jab. Even his chin was better than people usually think (or thinks). ... He took a couple of hard rights from (or by) Sharkey. After 1935 it's true, he was a bum! But before 1935... No way!

i was a big fan of primo's too. his fights against Young (mighty Joe) and Reeves (hercules) were classics. (he lost those too)!

Just kidding, Massimo. Primo was quite a physical specimen. Just by looking at him you'd thought he could whip the world. I always enjoy reading or seeing something about him.

Do you know that Jack Dempsey admired Primo very much as a boxer? He wrote an article on an Italian newspaper "Illustrazione del Popolo" in which he said that Carnera was a great boxer! Maybe it was a bluff by the fascist government but probably it was all true! Carnera lost sometimes against fighters who were one half of his size and, in this sense, he was surely disappointing!

Holmes beating Frazier just the way you described it. I always liked Holmes and even now I don't think he gets the credit he deserves. I can also see Tyson over Marciano, Mike fought much bigger men, and in my opinion better fighters than Rocky. And the Rock did cut easily but Marciano had that extra "something" that Mike never quite had. Both the Tyson-Marciano, Frazier-Holmes fights would have wars and both are hard for me to call. Dunphy did the same thing during the Ali-Foreman bout, saying Georges body shots weren't hurting Ali. George hit Ali with punches that would take down my yard shed...nana they didn't hurt at all. Jimmy did O.B. and Jerry even come close to signing a deal? That would have been a great fight. Oh yeah, I've seen pictures of Carnera, what a sliced up, mountain of muscle he was. The was huge. Hey Massimo, did the Italians have steroids back then? Maybe was it the veal. Whatever Primo had to be one of the best built big men to ever put on gloves. Light on his feet too.

Holmes beating Frazier just the way you described it. I always liked Holmes and even now I don't think he gets the credit he deserves. I can also see Tyson over Marciano, Mike fought much bigger men, and in my opinion better fighters than Rocky. And the Rock did cut easily but Marciano had that extra "something" that Mike never quite had. Both the Tyson-Marciano, Frazier-Holmes fights would have wars and both are hard for me to call. Dunphy did the same thing during the Ali-Foreman bout, saying Georges body shots weren't hurting Ali. George hit Ali with punches that would take down my yard shed...nana they didn't hurt at all. Jimmy did O.B. and Jerry even come close to signing a deal? That would have been a great fight. Oh yeah, I've seen pictures of Carnera, what a sliced up, mountain of muscle he was. The was huge. Hey Massimo, did the Italians have steroids back then? Maybe was it the veal. Whatever Primo had to be one of the best built big men to ever put on gloves. Light on his feet too.

I don't think that Primo made use of steroids! He just got involved in many heavy works in his youth, never getting much money (poor Primo). The verb "slice up" is not in my dictionary, I have found "to slice", but not to "slice up". I hope it's about the same! RS! RS! RS! )))! It should be VERBOTEN to use expressions that are not in my dictionary... Carnera was a dancer, just like Ali' and Sugar Ray... FLOAT LIKE A BUTTERFLY, STING LIKE A BEE! AAAAAH! RUMBLE, YOUNG MAN, RUMBLE! AAAAAH! YOUR HANDS CAN'T HIT, WHAT YOUR EYES CAN'T SEE... infamous "jock strap" comment was a mistake, and he regretted it from the beginning. The context was that Peter Marciano was at the press conference after the fight, glowing because Holmes lost the decision to M. Spinks. It got under Holmes skin that people were rooting for him to lose so that he wouldn't match Marciano's undefeated record. Sort of like rooting against Hank Aaron so he wouldn't break Ruth's record. Holmes was about to make history, had a questionable decision take it away from him (wasn't knocked down, wasn't cut, landed the harder punches, but lost his title) and now Peter Marciano was standing in the back of the room, obviously happy that Holmes lost. Larry Holmes made the jockstrap comment to dig at P.M. more than anything else and later, really felt bad about it. Even back then, Holmes had photos of Rocky Marciano hanging at his training facility and was an admirer of the former champ.

I don't remember using "slice up," but I'm guessing whoever did was using a knife metaphor for a fighter who was severely cut. Carnera wasn't on steroids - they weren't around then. He was "normal" muscular, like the guys in the old California muscle beach photos of the '50s, unlike the juiced-up guys of today. He was just a giant, muscular man, who could actually move well, a forerunner of modern day football players who're built like bears, but move like deer. Primo on steroids would have produced a 300 pound block of chiseled muscle! That "jockstrap" comment was blown way out of proportion. Holmes said it right after the heat of battle, after a fight he thought he won but was taken from him by the officials. As Angelo suggests, Holmes apologized to the Marciano family and to Marciano's fans but this is never brought up. Holmes was a great champion and he is a class act and he deserves to be cut some slack for a poor, but understandable choice of words. After all, in his mind he should have been celebrating tying Marciano's record, not explaining why he lost.

In the fight itself against Michael Spinks, Spinks did land more punches but Holmes landed the harder blows. It is back to the question about who really won that fight. The judges sided with Spinks' quantity over Holmes' quality of punches. I tend to think Spinks had a slight edge in the fight but did he really go out and decisively take the title from the champion? I don't believe that he did. A case can be made for either fighter winning and a draw would have been a fair decision.

As far as Holmes verses Spinks 2, Holmes was robbed by the officials in that one. Holmes stepped up his performance but he was denied by officials with "sour grapes" for him.

BOB BUMBERA: They(Quarry-Bonavena)Had a tentative agreement for July 25th 1973,But Oscar pulled out citing he needed more time to train,that when Shavers came into the picture and winded up ko'ing Jimmy Ellis in one JUNE 18TH,Which doubled both fighter's purse for the DEC.14TH QUARRY-SHAVERS.I was reading Ali's 10-0 title defenses after he beat Foreman,WEPNER,LYLE,NORTON,FRAZIER,COOPMAN,DUNN,YOUNG,SHAVERS, EVANGELISTA,BUGNER .It would have been tough for any heavyweight to beat those 10 in a row,especially the "LION OF FLOUNDERS".Well at least LYLE,FRAZIER,NORTON,SHAVERS,YOUNG. were tops albeit bouts had a little controversy to them.
Ali, The Lion of Flounder's manager said the Lion was the only person on earth who thought he had a chance. He (manager) said they wouldn't have taken a fight with Frazier or Foreman, because, "Those guys were killers." The thought was that Ali was not, and this was good, since everyone who knew Jean Pierre was concerned only with him getting out without being hurt badly.That's amazing that just about everyone of those bouts had controversy or questions of some sort.Quarry-Bonavena would have been a super fight! Bonavena was a nut though, so who knew what was in his crazy head. I really would see it going the distance, and Jerry would have been one tired fighter, though I can't see OB winning more than a handful of rounds.

John, the comments Holmes made before the Cooney fight were part of the hype that Holmes, and everyone involved, got caught up in. I don't think it was typical of how Holmes is most of the time. The Holmes verses Cooney fight brought out the worst in a lot of people.These days, Holmes is very respectful of Cooney and vice versa.

Larry Holmes was a great fighter, unfortunley he had to follow ali who is a hard act to follow, so he never got the adulation he deserved and coveted. i think never fighting Foreman hurt his chances being remembered as a great champ. i think he could have beat big george if having the chance. i guess we will never know.Charles, Holmes didn't fight Foreman because Foreman had already retired by the time Holmes himself fought for the title and Holmes was ready for retirement when Foreman made his comeback ten years later.Foreman left the game in 1977 after his loss to Jimmy Young and Holmes defeated Norton for his first title in 1978. It would have been too soon for a young Holmes to take on Foreman when Foreman was champion or just after Foreman lost the title. It is not Holmes' fault Foreman retired.

Massimo, your Primo comments have been entertaining. Like Wilt, he suffered from the fact that no one rooted for Goliath. A very good moving boxer for a big man of his day, but reminds me of Gerry Cooney defensively. Since both had clear short-term successes, that may not be such a negative comparison... No way Holmes beats Frazier for the Philly title. Holmes a master boxer yes, but not a strong chin as many of his opponents revealed. JQ might last a full 12 with Holmes also as Larry had average power as well, though Holmes would get the decision there. Frazier by late-round KO over Holmes. I don't rate Holmes as high among champs, but like Frazier, is a very likable guy, very down-to-earth. Jerry would counterpunch Oscar and suffer a knockdown a la Chuvalo, but would get the decision, I think. Especially if no former Globetrotters ref the match... I'm watching the Lakers-Cavaliers NBA game, not the L.A. season many imagined, eh? Personally, I'm glad to see the Lakers have to earn something for a change.|
he's really a bright, and a funny guy to listen to. | 1/13/04 11:29:42 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|RS--

"Moonlighting fighter...either"!! Is this English? Maybe it's Thai!! I accept it only because I trust you, but if it was an Italian to say that, I'd say to him: "You can't speak English, sucker! You'd need to go to English lesson!"

I wonder if Primo Carnera could speak proper English! One thing is sure, I have read a few of his letters and his Italian was a disaster!!

"Moonlighting fighter...either"!! Is this English? Maybe it's Thai!! I accept it only because I trust you, but if it was an Italian to say that, I'd say to him: "You can't speak English, sucker! You'd need to go to English lesson!"

The other is "How To Taunt Those Philly Boo Birds" As a completely objective, unbiased, fair minded sports writer, I'm sure you've been following the Eagles road to the Superbowl. These two articles had me falling out of my computer chair laughing. They are great!!

Thanks! If I said that I already knew that I'd be a liar!!

Hey you mugs SPREAD OUPTTT!! I Have the patent on "THE LION OF FLANDERS" for I'm the first one to ever bring him up on the site! Stoooge Steve (Shemp) the only reason Philly is even going on is Brett Farve's imitation of us in OT! Had they gone for one on the PHILLY 41 it might have been a different story! with 2-minutes left, AS for they other stooge CURLY Q. LINK. (KENT) Coopmans 24-3 14 ko's enabled him the momentum to go after ALI, PLUS wins over the "antwerp twerp" DOMINGO SILVERIA W 10 TERRY DANIELS DISQ 7 FERET KRISTOPFZACK WF 3, HE WAS JUST RIGHT FOR ALI, also contributed to HOWARD COSELL'S RETIREMENT FROM ANNOUCING! European champ Jean Pierre than was HOT again taking 4 of his next 5. Than ran into human locomotive ALFREDO EVANGELISTA KO BY 1, BEAT JANET LUBBERS W 10 , THEN DROPPED HIS LAST 5 AND RETIRED IN 1981, AN ALL OUT COMEBACK IN 99' HAD THE LION BRAWL TO A DRAW WITH FREDDY de Kerpel in 6. Before retiring "to the den" with a 34-14-2 record with 20 (40%) devastating ko's. TAKE CARE!!

Thanks! If I said that I already knew that I'd be a liar!!

Hey you mugs SPREAD OUPTTT!! I Have the patent on "THE LION OF FLANDERS" for I'm the first one to ever bring him up on the site! Stoooge Steve (Shemp) the only reason Philly is even going on is Brett Farve's imitation of us in OT! Had they gone for one on the PHILLY 41 it might have been a different story! with 2-minutes left, AS for they other stooge CURLY Q. LINK. (KENT) Coopmans 24-3 14 ko's enabled him the momentum to go after ALI, PLUS wins over the "antwerp twerp" DOMINGO SILVERIA W 10 TERRY DANIELS DISQ 7 FERET KRISTOPFZACK WF 3, HE WAS JUST RIGHT FOR ALI, also contributed to HOWARD COSELL'S RETIREMENT FROM ANNOUCING! European champ Jean Pierre than was HOT again taking 4 of his next 5. Than ran into human locomotive ALFREDO EVANGELISTA KO BY 1, BEAT JANET LUBBERS W 10 , THEN DROPPED HIS LAST 5 AND RETIRED IN 1981, AN ALL OUT COMEBACK IN 99' HAD THE LION BRAWL TO A DRAW WITH FREDDY de Kerpel in 6. Before retiring "to the den" with a 34-14-2 record with 20 (40%) devastating ko's. TAKE CARE!!

Roadscholarette|Chicago||Chicago||10|Massimo - "moonlighting" is when someone does something as a second job or undertaking that might become a job. Such an effort is usually either not as serious as their regular job, or hasn't gone as far yet. A moonlighting fighter might not have very many fights or be very good. This isn't to say a moonlighter can't -get- good though. Bill Gates used to moonlight, writing code and with program development when he was very young, and working for someone else.

Roadscholarette|Chicago||Chicago||10|Massimo - "moonlighting" is when someone does something as a second job or undertaking that might become a job. Such an effort is usually either not as serious as their regular job, or hasn't gone as far yet. A moonlighting fighter might not have very many fights or be very good. This isn't to say a moonlighter can't -get- good though. Bill Gates used to moonlight, writing code and with program development when he was very young, and working for someone else.

Roadscholarette|Chicago||Chicago||10|Massimo - "moonlighting" is when someone does something as a second job or undertaking that might become a job. Such an effort is usually either not as serious as their regular job, or hasn't gone as far yet. A moonlighting fighter might not have very many fights or be very good. This isn't to say a moonlighter can't -get- good though. Bill Gates used to moonlight, writing code and with program development when he was very young, and working for someone else.
this. As I have already said I have read a few of his letters written for his beloved wife) written in Italian and they seem written by a 8 years old guy. Now I say that if he had so much trouble with his native language, I honestly don't believe that he could speak other languages very well! Thanks again!

[1/14/04 07:56:36 AM] Kent | La Habra, Ca | | Kentallenent@aol.com | | | | 10 | Massimo, that Carnera didn't have good writing skills in even his native language, Italian, still doesn't tell me he wasn't smart. Reading and writing skills show someone's education, not his intelligence. He very well could have spoke four languages but perhaps he didn't read or write any languages well.Remember that guy who came to this site and he said the posters here were a bunch of illiterate goons and Jerry was a racist? He also insulted some of the towns Jerry lived in and my hometown as well as being trailer park trash towns, which means in derogatory terms, lower class white Americans. He may not have even used this term but he sure inferred it showing his own ignorance in the process. My point is, this kind of person would automatically say someone like Canera was a stupid person without having any proof this was true. Just like he said the people who post here are stupid when the opposite is the truth. I find some good intellects here, even if their English grammar and spelling, a problem I also have at times without spellcheck, is not always perfect.

[1/14/04 08:39:24 AM] Massimo | Roma | | | | 10 | Kent - You're right, but I have never thought that Carnera was dumb! I simply don't know how smart he was. In reality, I can't define intelligence exactly and I don't like to judge people's smartness. Sometimes, anyway, there is such overall quality difference between two persons, that is obvious who is "better" than the other. More often judging who is smarter between two guys is very hard. It's perfectly possible ( if not probable) that Primo Carnera was much smarter than me.

[1/14/04 11:05:05 PM] Kent | La Habra, Ca | | Kentallenent@aol.com | | | | 10 | Steve, are you actually an Eagles fan? I am not. I was just comparing them to the old L.A. Rams, who got close a lot of times but always came up short. I don't even have a football team anymore as the St. Louis version is not my Rams. In my mind, the Rams have never won the superbowl.Shouldn't you be rooting for the New Jersey Giants? after all, they are no longer in New York.

[1/15/04 05:28:27 PM] Steve | N.J. | | dmmsrm@comcast.net | | | | 10 | Hey Massimo, some current thought has it that there can be physical genius, musical genius, interpersonal relationship genius, as well as scientific or philosophical genius. There are linguistic geniuses, and there are idiot savants. I like this site because, so far, we are not trying to use each others opinions on 70' s, heavyweights, as an indication of our intelligents. Except for the two stooges, Jimmy Dorsey and Kent Apell, who have turned on me in their obvious frustration over the Eagles winning the Super Bowl. I am afraid, of course, that I will require an apology from both Stooges after Feb. 1st.

[1/15/04 07:56:05 PM] Kent | La Habra, Ca | | Kentallenent@aol.com | | | | 10 | Steve, are you actually an Eagles fan? I am not. I was just comparing them to the old L.A. Rams, who got close a lot of times but always came up short. I don't even have a football team anymore as the St. Louis version is not my Rams. In my mind, the Rams have never won the superbowl.Shouldn't you be rooting for the New Jersey Giants? after all, they are no longer in New York.

[1/16/04 05:26:00 AM] John Gerard | NYC | | rock289z@yahoo.com | | | | 10 | MARK: Roy Jones
is negotiating a rematch with Ruiz in a fight that no one wants to see. I think Toney will beat McCline quite easily! I have seen Jameel in the Boswell fight and he was losing badly until the last round! He has no class, definitely isn't a top 10 heavyweight (even if I think he is a very good heavyweight). Primo would have had a good chance of beating McCline, in my opinion. Vitali is gonna beat Lewis, as I don't think Lennox can come back in good shape, at this point of his career. Anyway, it's a very interesting fight. I was thinking how cool would have been a wrestling fight between Primo Carnera and Andre' the Midget. Better than sex with Anna Falchi! First of all, it would have been a very exciting height contest, even if I'd put my money on "the Midget". Good weekend to everybody!

Is Lewis fighting Klitschko for sure? I get a lot of press releases and I haven't gotten anything on this yet. The only thing I have seen is an article on a website that says he may be making his return, probably against Klitschko. Interesting match up with depending on how much Lewis has left. Lewis suddenly looked old in their first bout. I am not knocking Klitschko but he is still a somewhat unproven commodity. When he wins the title and defends it multiple times and dominates his competition, then we can say he is great but until then he is just a talented prospect.

Vitali needs a chance! Nobody has never given him a chance so far. He has lost a fight for an injury and another for a premature stoppage. I consider him undefeated and hope somebody will give him a real chance before he will be 50 years old!

Interesting match up with depending on how much Lewis has left. If Lewis wins, and wins impressively (not one of his L-O-N-G boring, plodding, fights, but instead a fast paced KO or TKO), he'll win a lot of respect and add to his legend. Conversely, if he loses, or wins by holding, staying away and pitter patting (sort of like his "wins" against Holyfield), he'll reinforce the opinion of many that he's a really tall, big and strong guy who is terrified to mix it up. I guess you can say that he should fight his own fight and win however he can---but if his fight is to survive and rest on his title, then he deserves whatever criticism he gets. With that said, he might just surprise us with a great performance and shut me up!

MR. Jimmy (Moe) Used to tell me that Jerry told him he didn't think the Rams would ever win the SUPER BOWL when they were in LA. On a sad note, And I do not mean to bring anyone or anything on the site down, Jerry had 53 different pro opponents, and only one passed away before he did (BUSTER MATHIS). TONY ALONGI just recently. NO real point to make its just if JQ could have stayed retired after 1975, He most probably would still be with us. He was one guy who, actually was too tough for his own good. And too much intestinal fortitude.

I've long enjoyed your postings on this site, you have a very entertaining insight regarding Jerry, who is one of my all-time sport heroes, thanks. Makes me think of friends of my own who are no longer around also. In a perfect world, so many fine people would know when to say enough, but these are the lessons we learn, especially those still here who miss the friend departed. Jerry made a huge impression on many. They may be his biggest compliment.

Steve, if you are an Eagles fan, too bad again! The Eagles always seem to almost make it but lose in the last game before the superbowl. Like I said, being an Eagles fan is like being a Jerry Quarry fan, they get you going by looking great one moment, only to fall just short. I have to put in a dig to my buddy Joey B. from Philly. Naaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaa! I called it, didn't I? He isn't on line but I will make sure he sees this post.

1/19/04 09:18:47 AM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|THANKS GERRY I really appreciate the kind words,My STOOGES buddy Steve(Shemp) I can relate because his Eagels beat my Pack last week, When Brett Farve had stooges flashbacks of when he was a Atlanta Falcon. His "MONDAY MORNING QUARTERBACK" Commercial is a classic thou. Anyone remember the Quarry's Miller Lite commercial "saved by the bell"? that was also a classic.

1/19/04 09:40:47 AM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Gerry Schultz I just re-read your post on Quarry-Ali a while back,And I could not agree more Ali just had his number,(NO SHAME IN THAT).One thing for sure I can not think of one fighter,who was not in tip-top shape vs Quarry (Even "SCRAP IRON").Another point you made was that although he clowned around with Jerry, Quarry did have Ali's absolute attention,and few can lay claim to that! Recently read a 1975 RING mag. where Pedro Lovell ko'd Billy Daniels in one and the California Athletic Commission took 2/3 of Daniels purse, (so he made nothing!) How about Akinwande's DQ vs Lewis where he received his $millions?|

1/19/04 12:05:03 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com||||10|I MIGHT BE ALONE ON THIS , BUT I THINK THAT BRETT FARVE LOOKS SOMEWHAT LIKE JERRY, WHAT DOES EVERYBODY THINK??|

1/19/04 12:51:11 PM|Sabrina Porter (Quarry)|Florida||sabrinalporter@aol.com||||10|kookoo you must be really kookoo to say that my Uncle Jerry looks like Farve...hahahahahaha...LOL...have a great day!|

1/19/04 12:52:56 PM|Sabrina|Florida||sabrinalporter@aol.com||||10|i meant that Farve looks like Jerry...|

1/19/04 12:52:57 PM|JERRY QUARRY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|I think he does look a little like Jerry for sure. I know a former Utah linebacker that is the spitting image of a 1970 Jerry,talks the same,actions etc.probably weighs 215,PEOPLE THAT DIDN'T EVEN FOLLOW BOXING WOULD TELL HIM "HEY YOU LOOK LIKE JERRY QUARRY!" would have been the perfect Quarry in the Ali movie,other than the out-of-shape-one that they pulled off out of the nearest tavern!|

1/19/04 03:07:04 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|I'm still waiting for someone to tell me why "Favre" is pronounced "Farve" - shouldn't it be "Fav-ray?" Oh well, who cares? I suppose if "Farve" were a little blonder, he could look a little like Jerry, but I wouldn't have thought of it on my own. I heard that Favre's toes were so long that he could pick up a baseball with them! That's like a monkey! LOL!|

1/19/04 10:52:48 PM|KOOKOO|NY||KOOKOOclock000@YAHOO.COM||||10|LOOK SABRINA, I DON'T MEAN FAVE IS BETTER LOOKING, HE'S NOT, BUT THERE IS A SLIGHT RESEMBLENCE TO JERRY, SORRY I BROUGHT IT UP, WISH YOU WERE NICE LIKE SONYA!!! SHOW SOME RESPECT FOR THE CLOCKSTER|

1/20/04 11:16:02 AM|Massimo|Roma|||10|RS<-br>Maybe I can help you on this subject ... " Farve" is probably a slang pronunciation... |

1/20/04 12:55:53 PM|Sabrina|Florida||sabrinalporter@aol.com||||10|kookoo i was just messing around.please don't get offended.i didn't mean anything by it...lol|

1/20/04 09:16:45 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com||||10|OK, NO PROBLEM, YOU KNOW JERRY'S NO. 1 WITH ME, BRETT HAS NOT DEVELOPED THAT LEVEL OF COOLNESS|

1/21/04 07:05:28 AM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia90101@aol.com||||10|Yes, Uncle Jerry is No. 1, to alot of us. Hey all what's shakin? Have fun, and be good! We love & miss you Dad, & Uncle Jerry!|

1/21/04 08:32:35 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Yeah, and while Favre throws interceptions, Jerry was throwing punches! How is Ken Norton doing? I know he had a car accident, maybe 15 years ago?? He suffered head injuries. I read about it in SI (The article was actually about Ken Norton Jr.). Why was Norton's relationship with his son strained? Does anyone know if he made a full recovery from the injuries? Interesting because he had started to do some acting back when he was still boxing, but I haven't seen or heard from him in a long time.

How is Ken Norton doing? I know he had a car accident, maybe 15 years ago??? He suffered head injuries. I read about it in SI (The article was actually about Ken Norton Jr.). Why was Norton's relationship with his son strained? Does anyone know if he made a full recovery from the injuries? Interesting because he had started to do some acting back when he was still boxing, but I haven't seen or heard from him in a long time.

I am glad when some fighter with questionable credentials doesn't win at least a piece of the heavyweight title. Last year Kirk Johnson had a good chance of holding on to a slim lead in the ninth round and winning his fight against John Ruiz for the WBA title but he was disqualified for low blows. It is bad enough that we have to refer to Ruiz as a former champion even though he can't compare to our own Jerry Quarry, who we can't call an ex champ, but Johnson too? That would have been another slap in the face of our Jerry.

It is not that Johnson has no talent, because at times he has looked good. It is his poor work ethic. He is 6'3" and he weighed in at 260 pounds for his fight against Vitali Klitschko. That was disgraceful!

James Toney hit the nail on the head a few months ago when he was asked about the big size of the heavyweights these days. He had this to say, "a lot of them are just plain lazy. They don't like to train hard and they don't like to run. That is why their weights are so high." He added that he runs ten miles a day and that he just would eat differently at heavy weight but continue to train just as hard, to keep himself in top condition, even at higher weights than he used to fight at.

Norton is not doing too badly but he has slurred speech as a result of the accident that he didn't have before.

Norton, in his book, says that the problems he had with Ken Jr. had to do with the younger Norton choosing to get married at an early age. Norton Jr. took it as his father disapproving with who he was marrying. The split between father and son lasted longer than either one of them wanted because according to Norton Sr., they were both stubborn and neither one of them, for a long time, would make the first move at ending the feud. Both of them took the attitude that the other one should say he was sorry.

Regarding the weights of today's heavies: years ago, and up until the 90's the idea of training was bring a fighter down to as light as possible a weight, without weakening him. Today, it seems the idea is to get as big as possible. I heard Lou Saverese interviewed and he was boasting that he "put on 15 lbs. In training camp". Too many fighters think that because they lift weights they can weigh just about anything or eat anything they want. Marciano for example could have easily weighed 200 lbs. But Charlie Goldman knew he would be just as strong, but more effective at 188 or so.

The problem with weights and weight gain is that too many people think if they lift and gain, they're automatically gaining all muscle. In truth, you can almost double the strength of a muscle without any increase in size, so unless a fighter, or anyone, is on steroids, true muscle gain is slow. Guys who say they added "10 pounds of muscle" in some short period of time, are fooling themselves. With a lot of running, gain is slower yet. Hagler said he used to run 15 miles a day for some fights. This and Toney's claim of running 10 a day are ~very~ suspicious, particularly if they're doing anything else. Fifteen a day (average) is what an elite, world class marathon runner does, and 10 isn't far behind. They might do these distances ~sometimes~, but not everyday.

I would say 6 to 8 miles is more likely but Toney's point is well taken, I do believe that heavyweights of today don't train as hard as Jerry and his contemporaries did.
Yes, a lot of the fighters are bigger than earlier eras but no way is Johnson supposed to weigh 260 pounds. About 230 is better for him. Would he have done better against Klitschko if he came in lighter? I believe he very well would have done better as he would have been more likely to avoid the punches he got knocked out in the second round with and more likely to land punches of his own. Klitschko still may have won the fight but Johnson would have made a better fight of it.

| 1/22/04 09:07:48 AM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 |

No doubt everyone can learn and benefit from modern day training information, but it has to produce to be valuable. Strides have been made in diet, and I think weights are good, along ~with~ traditional boxing training. I think there's value in interval training, but only with lots of long slow (not ~too~ slow!) distance running as a base. But, in the main, there's no other sport that'll get a person in shape as boxing, plus one that includes elements of training that are actually useful and carry over, even as guys trained three quarters of a century ago.

I think many modern fighters do faddish, flashy things, eat like hogs, are too lazy to run and train really hard, and rationalize that they're really big, so they must be bad. As long as they fight guys with similar attitudes and training regimens, they're fine.

Conditioning a person maintains year 'round isn't ultimate peak form, but at the same time, I'm not sure an athlete who takes huge amounts of sedentary time off (often accompanied by drinking and weight gain), is able to get into peak shape either. A wiser plan to is maintain somewhat of a base all the time. With the money involved and the potential for serious injury, I'd be scared ~not~ to! you are so right roadman, sugar ray leonard said once he only runs 2 miles a day. anymore is a waste, that time and effort must be put in sparring jumping rope etc.. You would lose muscle tissue and fast twitch muscle fiber that you need for boxing, hagler could run 15 miles, but theres no way he would do it everyday!

| 1/22/04 10:36:35 PM | kookoo | ny | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 |

you are so right roadman, sugar ray leonard said once he only runs 2 miles a day. anymore is a waste, that time and effort must be put in sparring jumping rope etc.. You would lose muscle tissue and fast twitch muscle fiber that you need for boxing, hagler could run 15 miles, but theres no way he would do it everyday!

| 1/23/04 12:14:15 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 |

Ciao RS ! When a fighter says he runs 10 miles a day does he mean 10 miles in a row or 10 miles distributed somehow in the whole day? I'm sorry if this question is ingenious or silly, but I really don't know! If I ran for 1 mile in a row, I'd die of heart failure! |

| 1/23/04 05:28:58 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 |

MASSIMO: He means 0 miles in a row, without stopping.

| 1/23/04 06:07:38 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 |

Thanks John! I'm not sure that I could do 10 miles using a bicycle... I guess maybe I am not ready for a Thrilla in Manilla yet...

| 1/24/04 06:52:21 AM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 |

I saw a funny interview on a boxing bloopers tape once about a fighter who decided to set up training in an area where some other fighters had trained, and there was a lake nearby. He asked another fighter he knew who'd trained there where he ran, and the other guy replied, "Around the lake." The lake was huge, probably on the order of a half marathon or more, and uussccessfully trying to run around it the first day left the fighter exhausted. The next day he called the fighter who'd given him the advice, and was told, "Not ~all~ the way around, just around the lake~area~!" :-) that was written in a training book put out by floyd patterson era 1974, i remember it!

| 1/24/04 07:02:09 AM | kookoo | ny | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 |

| 1/25/04 01:28:44 AM | Sean | Jersey | Emailppsinc@aol.com | 10 |

Hey in a topic not related to Joe Frazier, Jerry Quarry or Muhammad Ali, what the hell was Larry Holmes so bitter about? I just got done watching Larry vs Carl The Truth Williams and Williams got robbed. He didnt beat Larry he kicked his ass, I also thought witherspoon got robbed against Holmes, pooint being I guess was Larry was a great champion no doubt but why cry over the Spinks decision when he received two great gift decisions in my eyes.

1/25/04 02:43:33 PM| Kent| La Habra, Ca|| kentallenent@aol.com | ||| 10
Sean, it has been years since I have seen either Holmes verses Williams or Holmes verses Witherspoon, but my impression was they were both close fights. There is an unwritten rule that says the challenger has to take the title from the champion decisively. Did Williams really kick Holmes' ass, as you say? What do some of you other people think about this?

1/25/04 03:34:50 PM| George Vreeland Hill| Los Angeles|| broadway4you@yahoo.com | ||| 10
Jerry Quarry was a solid fighter, and one of the best ever.
If he were in the ring today, he would be champ!

1/25/04 11:51:48 PM| Gerry Schultz| snowy Ohio|| jgschultzll@aol.com | ||| 10
I've always thought Larry Holmes had several very suspect performances, not a strong champ in my opinion. But a very good guy and master boxer... Ali was given credit, rightfully, for fighting everyone during era. If you compare the opponents of Quarry with Frazier, Foreman and Norton, who would say took on the best competition overall for a career?

1/26/04 12:31:58 AM| Sean| Jersey|| emailppsinc@aol.com | ||| 10
Kent I am fully aware of the unwritten rule of taking the title but at what point does it go too far. If you pull a fight out on the 10 point must and most observers have you winning the fight by say 2 rounds wouldn't that be enough to get the decision.

1/26/04 09:02:54 AM| Pete| Gold Coast Australia|| aussie_0@hotmail.com | ||| 10
Can anyone verify and/or give me details to a supposed fight years ago? Friend says that Tony Mundine (father of Anthony) once fought Cassius Clay (before he changed to Mohamid Ali)

1/26/04 10:13:01 AM| Kent| La Habra, Ca|| kentallenent@aol.com | ||| 10
Sean, good point on how far the unwritten rule of taking the title from the champion decisively can get. I think the same rules should apply to all fights. Whoever wins, wins, title at stake or not.
The defeated champion and the promoters can use his not being dominated as a means of hyping the rematch.
I think the ultimate of favoritism shown a champion was in the Ali/Wepner fight in which although Ali clearly dominated the fight, winning almost every round, there were a couple of rounds when Ali did nothing.The announcer, after about the sixth round, said, "I would have to call that round even as Ali did nothing." How obscured is this? Because even if all Wepner did was pursue Ali and land a few ineffective body shots, which he did in every round, if Ali did nothing, Wepner wins this particular round, right? I would think so but probably the judges didn't think so.

1/26/04 11:12:36 AM| Carl Weingarten| TJQF|| TJQF | ||| 10
Hello friends. I spoke to Brandi Quarry this weekend, and I wanted to let everyone know that the web host for TJQF has been making changes that will affect this page. Somewhere in the next week they are moving the web site to a new server. It’s likely that the Letters page will go off line temporarily. It is also possible that the messages you have written over the last year will not be transferred to the new server and will be lost. I apologize for this. I have been in touch with the host, but unfortunately, they have not been helpful. Hopefully the break will not be too long, and the Letters page will be back in a new format. In the mean time, I am rebuilding the site in its new location, and looking for a new web host as well. Thanks, --Carl

1/26/04 11:55:15 AM| Massimo| Roma ||| 10
My messages will be lost !!!!! It's like losing a Mozart's symphony !!!!!!!!!!

1/26/04 06:22:38 PM| Roadscholarette| Chicago|| roadscholarette@hotmail.com | ||| 10
I'm certain Earnie Shavers can hit very hard. Ali said so, and Tex Cobb (who TKO'd him) said, "If Earnie hit any harder, I'd have to shoot him!" However, I was checking his record, and for the first forty or so matches, I’d never heard of any of his opponents. Most were early KOs. I know the early fights of any future champion are with nobodies, even stiffs or beer bellies, but with Shavers, it goes on and on, even when he began to fight better people. Ron Stander KOd him (I wouldn’t have heard of Stander if not for Joe Frazier’s bag workout with him), then a few more nothing fights, and he takes out Young and Ellis. Maybe he’s for real. Then Jerry Quarry massacred him, followed a little later by a KO by Lyle, a controversial loss to Ali, and a decision by Homes. He took Young again (UD), then a washed up Ken Norton and Joe Bugner, and by that time, he was back to nobody-city. Earnie seems like a nice guy, and admits he was an incomplete fighter, working on power at the expense of technique. His stamina was OK, not sensational, as was his chin. Now I won’t necessarily go so far as to say he made a career and KO record on Butter Beans, but does he deserve to be mentioned in the same conversation with the legendary punchers – Jeffries, Dempsey, Marciano, Liston, Frazier, Foreman? Oh, and Carnera, of course – almost forgot, Massimo! |

If Shavers was a Baseball hitter, he would be considered a "tough out". His fights with Holmes, Ali, Ellis, Norton, Young, Clark, Bugner AND HOWARD "ko" Smith attest to the fact that he was a top heavyweight of his time, His bout with Ron Lyle was a true classic. (a GREAT BOUT). The reason for the "no-names" on his record was mostly due to the fact, nobody would fight him, until Jimmy Ellis finally came out and gave him a chance, it would have been very interesting had he fought, FOREMAN, FRAZIER, BONAVENA among others to see what he could really do. |

Shavers was indeed one of the hardest punchers ever but lets not forget he was KO’ed in about 8 rounds by Ron Stander. Stander said it was like being hit by a baseball bat over the head. Shavers had a fair jaw, average stamina, and average boxing skills -- but what a punch in either hand.
war! Tyson's punches also weren't too bad! |

[1/28/04 01:47:21 PM] Carl Weingarten | TJQF | TJQF | 10 | Okay, the new site is online. Sorry we lost some messages from the last couple of days. Otherwise, everything seems to be running. Brenda please repost the great news about Mike. Thanks, --Carl |

[1/28/04 03:28:43 PM] Jimmy Dorsey | Ventura California | RONNYRAINS@yahoo.com | 10 | No I do not think Oscar was Gay at all, I knew a guy that knew Oscar personally and lived up where he was murdered. The guy who shot Oscar, Ross Brimer is also out of prison and dead of peculiar circumstances. Joe Conforte who had OSCAR done in was hid in exile in Argentina of all places last I'd heard. Oscar was too into the ladies, then anything else, if Shavers fought like he did against Norton and Lyle, I'd have to throw some dough in on Ernie vs Ringo, they both went 15 with Ali AND incidentally both looked good, Oscar got the nickname "RINGO" from BEATLES ringo STARR, for their hairstyles! |

[1/28/04 06:52:26 PM] Daniel | LA | danielz@hotmail.com | 5 | For some time I have read postings on this site without injecting my own comment and generally it must be said that most posters have been sincere and informative. However there is someone on this site plainly intent on ruining reputations. This small minded woman - without any evidence whatever - writes that she heard "somewhere" that Oscar Bonavena had a sexual affair with a man. Many of you will remember that last year she also wrote that Emile Griffith was gay and once again she did not produce even one iota of evidence. On top of this she accused George Foreman of being a "wheezing pansy" and then there were allegations against Ali, Foreman, and also judges and referees, of being cheats and fixing fights. Like the gay allegations against Bonavena and Griffith, not one shred of evidence was produced to sustain these smutty accusations made by an anonymous person without the courage to attach her name to the dirt that she writes. I invite you all to do a google search on the name 'roadscholarette'. You will find that this know it all presents herself as an expert on everything - movies, medical procedures, religion and now, of course, boxing. On one site she described herself as being a "professor in literature at Northwestern". I opine that she is a frustrated lesbian, addicted to prescription medication, unemployed, scorned by her family and with no friends, who spends her entire day surfing the net posting smutty allegations whilst trying to impress others with concocted expertise. Judge for yourselves and ask the question - has she ever posted ANY evidence to sustain the allegations she makes? The answer is clearly no, yet she is allowed to demean this otherwise wonderful site with unsustainable allegations of smut against well known sporting figures. I don't intend to visit this site again, mainly because it insults me that a frustrated lesbian with too much time on her hands falsely calls fighters like Bonavena and Griffith gay. |

[1/28/04 08:43:12 PM] Brenda | ca. | thethid@hotmail.com | 10 | I wanted to let Mike's fans know he is being inducted into the Calflower Hall of Fame, on March 6th at Steve's Steak House, in the City of Commerce 1.a. area, the tickets are $25 you can contact Don Frazer. This is all so Mike's birthday week-end he will turn 52 on the 4th. So come all and party with Mike. Jerry will also be honored during this luncheon. Thanks and God be with. Brenda (I will post # when I get it) |

[1/28/04 10:10:40 PM] roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 | LOL! Nope, sorry, Rufus (under whatever handle you post to me), straight as an arrow, not a prof at NU, and am retired (before 40), when we sold our biz last year. Bozos do clumsily imp me now and then, however. You most likely believe everything you read online, huh? Do you wear your baseball cap backwards? :-) (probably over your head, sorry).Massimo -I've never heard of Ermino Spalla? Who's he?Bonavena-Shavers? I'd prolly go with Bonavena, unless Earnie landed. How good was Shaver's chin? |
I agree that Oscar was not involved in sexual relations with men quite the opposite a major playboy with the women. One more thing to bring up. I love this site but i would appreciate it if we would not speak of Emile Griffith's sexual preference what ever that may be. He is a friend of mine and a very nice person who brought dignity to a sport that catches many black eyes. | I ONLY POST WHEN I THINK IT'S WORTH IT, WELL LET ME TELL IT IS!!! GET OFF THIS BULLSHIT ABOUT GRIFFITH AND BONAVENA BEING GAY , IT'S 100% FALSE, ANYONE WITH A BRAIN KNOWS BONAVENA WAS A WHOREDOD THAT CHASED WOMEN LIKE A CRAZY MAN, GRIFFITH ALWAYS WAS A GENTLEMEN , CLASS GUY, STOP WITH THE LIES!!! | I am with you completely Sean. It is wrong for anyone to discuss those things on an open site like this, especially when it involves good men, and moreso again when the writer produces not one shred of evidence. All this malicious gossiper can say is that she "heard" it on some site she is unable to identify. The damage is magnified when the (cowardly) author is anonymous and can't be traced. Yet that is precisely what this small minded woman relishes. First it was Emile Griffith she accused of being gay, and now it is Oscar Bonavena. And the evidence ? None ! Not one iota. Zilch. She is a repressed lesbian trying to come to terms with her own sexuality by accusing others of being just like her. It makes her feel better by pulling others down to her level. If this wasn't the case then why has she twice, without any prompting from anyone else, raised the subject of someone else's sexuality. Why is that so important to her ? No one else mentioned it and the subject came right out of left field. Think about it. Also, I never wrote that she is a "literary professor at Northwestern". In fact, she described herself on another site as a 'literary professor at Northwestern'. Her words; not mine. Do a google check on her name. Mark my words, ladies and gentlemen, this woman is big trouble. She thinks it amusing and fun to slander decent people like Emile Griffith. She has too tiny a character to admit the error and apologize for it. The woman just moves on to attacking someone else and on this occasion it is the dead Oscar Bonavena. Who's next ? I will not post here again (her posts make me puke), but those who continue to visit must call the witch of slander to account, and please don't allow her to demean this tremendous site by using it to defame decent men like Emile Griffith. Emile - rest assured that none of us believe what the witch writes. You were a great champion. | Erminio Spalla was an Italian heavyweight who fought between 1919 and 1934. He was Italian and European heavyweight champion. He fought the heavy-hitter Fred Fulton ( a draw ), Luis Firpo ( L KOT 14) Uzcudun ( L pts 15), Gene Tunney ( he was ahead after 6 rounds but was stopped in the seventh) and lasted all the fight against the terrible George Godfrey. Many boxing experts think he was still better than Carnera ( and this is surely a prove of greatness !) ! He was less Shaq than Carnera (only 6' 1" for about 190 lbs). Tonight on ESPN Classic they' ll talk about Bonavena, Frazier and Foreman. All I know about Bonavena as a person is that Joe Frazier thought he was a racist but, of course, I have no idea if this is true or not. Probably they' ll show some of their fights ( I hope Frazier-Bonavena 1 and Frazier-Bonavena 2, since I have already seen Foreman-Frazier 1,2 several times and Foreman-Bonavena never happened). A few days ago I saw Ali'-Lyle on ESPN. Ali' fought like a crazy guy in that fight. He just clowned in rounds 1-3-4-10 and danced almost without scoring in rounds 5 and 6 ( even rounds). He fought well rounds 7-8 and of course 11, where he literally kicked Lyle' s ass ! But Lyle never hit Ali' with dangerous shots and Cassius looked always in control of the fight. My impression is that he didn' t train for that fight. Is it true ? | Brenda, thanks for the great news about Mike's award. You know I will be there for Mike is a true gentleman and I can't think of many who deserve recognition more than him! I hope some of the regulars on the board can somehow make it to the celebration. It would be cool to meet you in person!

If this meeting will be in Caianiello, I will be there!

Luis Firpo was very famous (el toro of the Pampas in an Italian-Spanish-English mixing), he fought Dempsey! But what is really hard to accept is that you didn't know Spalla! Ali' yes but Spalla no? It's absurd!

Do you tape the boxing programs you mention? The reason I ask is that ESPN and ESPnCL show different programs depending on their audience and market, and you may get fights we don't see here. For instance, I've seen Bonevanya bouts and other Latin American fighters listed on the Spanish language ESPnCL that were not shown on the mainstream channel. Just wondering, thanks.

Well, I see that Spalla gave Gene Tunney a pretty decent fight before the fight was stopped. Tunney was a super cool customer, maybe the coolest and most patient HW champ. He used to even do "patience exercises," methodically doing frustrating things, to hone this mindset. Kept his cool when nailed too, as good as Ali in that regard. In the Long Count, Dempsey didn't go to his corner after flooring, but didn't the ref begin counting in the Ali-Liston, while Ali was standing over the Bear, yelling?

Firpo knocked Jack Dempsey out of the ring. Dempsey hit his head on a typewriter, and just managed to clamber back into the ring at the count of nine. Whew, close call. Firpo had already been down seven times, and Dempsey KOd him in round two, but Firpo was the first Latin to challenge for the title.

I'm beginning notice about Frazier, he says a lot of bad sh.. about the people he fought, fighters say a lot of things before fights, I promise you if Bonevanya were alive today he would have nothing but praise for Frazier, Frazier needs to get over what Ali, Bonevanya and others said, his attitude sucks, I view him as a bitter ex-champ that can't except he lost 2 of 3 to Ali, live with it Joe!!! individuals?Carl, why would you want Brenda to post the "good news" if there is no good news?Mike really does deserve better than what those fools are shoveling his way, if they are for real!!

[1/29/04 04:02:04 PM]Massimo|Roma||4||||10|RSI have just seen all Frazier-Bonavena 1, but round 1 since my mother switch off the light ( for washing the dishes, snort ! ). It was a very close fight ! Since the commentator said the first round was even, I have Frazier 1 point ahead at the end.BONAVENA won round 2 ( 2 points) and round 10 ( the last ).FRAZIER won rounds 4-5-7-9

[1/29/04 06:03:46 PM]Brenda|Ca.||thethis@hotmail|||10|Yes there is a lucheon on the 6th of March. I know it sounds kind of hookie, but it is something for Mike and he has always felt he was in Jerry's shadow. So we his family are trying to make it a big deal for him. Please who ever can make it do come. Brenda |

[1/29/04 09:47:57 PM]Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Of course I will be there to support Mike. For a moment there it sounded a little bit disrespectful but as long as he and the Quarry family are not taking it that way, then I won't take it that way either.I am waiting for contact information and I am in.[1/29/04 11:40:56 PM]mINTO|fUNNYVILLE||laughter@aol|||7|Of course I will be there to support Mike. For a moment there it sounded a little bit disrespectful but as long as he and the Quarry family are not taking it that way, then I won't take it that way either.I am waiting for contact information and I am in.

[1/29/04 12:49:41 AM]kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|STOP TRYING TO BE LIKE ME SMUT MAN, THERE'S ONLY ONE CLOCK MAN, YOUR TRYING TO STEAL MY THUNDER BUT YOU DON'T KNOW JACK ABOUT BOXING OR WHAT THE QUARRYS ARE ABOUT YOU MORON!!

[1/30/04 02:37:01 AM]mINTO|fUNNYVILLE||laughter@aol|||7|ME AND ROADDIKE CANT BE SILENCED BY A DUMB CLOCK. ROADIKE GOT SOLE HUMOUR. YOUR WIPING IT OFF YOUR BOOTS AND SHES LAUGHING AT U. SISTER ROADDIKE GOT THE DOPE ON KKK FOR BEING A FAG. YES U KOO KOO. THE CLOCK HAS LOST HIS TIC TOC. NOW GO POLISH ROADIKES BOOTS BOY. HA HA.

[1/30/04 09:15:37 AM]kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|Da , what did you say? da, you need to rewind your clock to whenever you had a brain, da, if you ever had one, DA DA DA moron|

[1/31/04 06:05:54 AM]Paul|Sydney, Australia||PIMLs4@aol.com|||10|To change the subject, was that a fluke punch by Max Schmeling that stopped Joe Louis in their first fight ? Did Max just catch Joe on a bad night ? Or was Joe's chin not absolutely bulletproof ? Would that punch from Max have been good enough to stop every other heavyweight in history ? (including Ali - I have my doubts). In his prime, I think Louis was at the very least the second best heavy of all time. Minus the Schmeling knockout, I would have rated Joe the best ever heavy (by a considerable margin) and also the greatest pound-for-pound. That's until I remembered the deeds of Sugar Ray Robinson - how can you pick anyone pound-for-pound above him ? Henry Armstrong ? Transposing Robinson from that era to today, was he capable of winning titles from welterweight to light-heavy ? I think he was. Would Jerry Quarry have beaten Max Schmeling ? Jerry would win that fight on sheer 'mongrel', in my opinion. It would have been a great fight, though. I think Jerry would have gone at Schmeling like he went at Frazier, but with a different result. Schmeling couldn't tolerate the sustained pressure Jerry would have given him. |

[1/31/04 06:58:00 AM]Massimo|Roma||4||||10|PaulWelcome back ! I have seen Schmeling-Louis and Max didn't win for a lucky punch ! He already had Joe on the canvas in the fourth and was ahead after eleven rounds ( even if it was a hardly fought match). Max said after the fight that he had discovered a flaw in Louis's style, but I don't remember exactly what it was about !What do you think about the two following matchups ?Quarry- TerrellQuarry-
Joe Louis had a tendency towards a "three step jab" ie, jab, drop the hand, bring it back up, and Schmeling capitalized, countering with his own right. This was remedied in fight two!

At that point in Louis's career, Joe dropped his left after throwing the jab. Schmeling noticed this after attending several Louis bouts. He also studied film of Louis. Max threw his powerful right over Joe's jab and nailed him all night. Joe took to many of Max's shots and it confused Joe. He just couldn't get out of the way.

Max was a great fighter, with a tough chin, he took some hard shots from Joe, very quick and with an explosive right hand. Louis was, at least at that point, never out of shape. Max just taught him a lesson that night. Of course Joe taught everyone a lesson a few years later when they fought again. You can knock me down or knock me out...but you never want to fight me again.

Writing this post reminded me of Norton's first fight with Ali. Kenny was told to throw his right at the same time Ali started his jab. The punch would land at the same time making Ali think Kenny was just as fast as Ali, of course he wasn't, but it gave Ali some to think about...besides the broken jaw. Could there be an RS imposter? He, she, it's last few posts ain't as literate as her previous ramblings. Although anyone who thinks Roberto Duran is a great fighter can't be all bad.

RS can write pretty well in English, still a little better than me, and I am almost Milton! I have chosen her as my English teacher on this web site and I am not dumb!

I have found footage of Jerry Quarry's first fight with Brian London and I need someone from The Jerry Quarry Foundation to help me obtain it. I'm sure no one has seen this footage since it was first aired. Please help, Evren.

It is true, Schmeling's first fight with Louis was no fluke. He found Joe's weakness and he exploited it. Joe's trainer, Jack "Chappie" Blackburn, corrected the problem in subsequent training and Joe, being a good student of boxing, learned his lesson well. Joe may have made a mistake once but he never made the same mistake twice and he destroyed (creamed!) Schmeling in the rematch.

Norton's awkwardness really caused Ali problems, not just in fight 1, but the other two as well. Norton could easily have been a 2 to 1 winner from those 3 against Ali. To his credit, though, Norton never whined about those losses. My impression is that Norton is a really decent guy.

Some trivia: as someone mentioned before, Russell Crowe is in training to play James J. Braddock in the movie Cinderella Man. Over Christmas Angelo Dundee was in Sydney tutoring Crowe. Anyway, last week Crowe injured his shoulder and needs surgery and that will delay the film. Also, Kostya Tszyu was in training to fight Sharmba Mitchell on February 7 in Moscow. Tszyu hadn't fought for a year after an achilles injury. But he's now done a shoulder tendon and needs surgery and the fight is off. He can't fight for at least another 6 months. I hope I'm wrong, but this may finish him. He'll fight again (Tszyu is a real warrior and loves it), however he'll struggle through age and inaction. In their first fight in 2001, Mitchell gave Tszyu heaps of problems before Mitchell injured his leg.
Wow, way to go, Road'ette. While I've enjoyed some of your posts on Ali and Frazier, passing rumors like these are just ridiculous, and anyway who cares? Oscar's girlchasing probably got him killed, I've heard. Whatever the case, he was a top heavyweight who earned the respect of both Ali and Frazier in the ring. Let's keep the focus there... Glad to see someone else give props to Max Schmelling. A great boxer for his time, very good sixe for his time, actually bigger than JQ. Max should get more credit for his intelligent win versus Louis, who could be outfought as Billy Conn and Jimmy Bivins proved. Their second fight was so politicized, Schmelling may have been very bewildered at all the press, he was never a Nazi, Louis was enraged enough to nearly kill him. May have been the Fight of the Century. Schmelling's initial win against Joe, and Standers win versus Shavers prove that all these matchups are decided in the ring no matter what they look like on paper. It'll be the same tomorrow when Patriots face Panthers in the Super Bowl, Pat fans will see if their team can back up all the talk.

I thought Norton clearly won the third fight with Ali...but what do I know. I've watched that fight several times and I still think Norton won. I have a weird thought, speaking of Max Schmeling...did you notice how much Omar Sheika looks like him...with a little Dempsey thrown in. Not in style mind you but his face. His first fight with Pemberton was a great one and I thought maybe Omar would pull it out this time...again, what do I know.

I agree Norton took Ali in the Third fight, but i am one who thinks that Ken Norton was one of the most overrated Heavyweight Champions. Kenny had a great style for Ali, but take a closer look and you can come to the conclusion that he was nothing more than an above average heavyweight a good fighter. On his way up he was ko'd by Jose Luis Garcia, then there was the Foreman debacle. Ernie Shavers walked through Kenny, Scott LeDoux got robbed in a fight that was called a draw and Gerry Cooney nearly killed him. His three biggest wins in his entire career not counting the Ali fights was over a faded and poorly undertrained Jerry Quarry, Duane Bobick a great amatuer but a sub par pro at best and Jimmy Young a very good boxer but he couldn't break an egg. Case and point this is not stuff legends are made of.

I think Kenny Norton was avoided by a lot of guys, certainly his first five years. Great athletic package, could be puncher, could also box. A prime JQ vs Norton matchup to me would be a great fight. Whoever started hotter would probably win. Either way, he certainly got the best of an older, softer Ali while being one of many who wilted under Foreman's power. I don't think he took a punch as well as some, JQ was better boxer also. I think he beat Holmes, especially as belt holder that night. Le Doux, Cooney just mauled him, he stayed too long, like so many do. Norton was like Lyle in that he was pretty far along when he got his due. An unappreciated heavy in my opinion. JQ vs. Terrell I always thought would have been a great match, a lot of height there, Terrell was also quick and very game. JQ would probably end up counterpunching him, which of course he did very well. Also, glad to hear something's up for Mike. Like Jerry, I consider him a former champ, I enjoyed watching him fight in the 70's. Sounds like he is doing well.

Frazier-Bonavena 1 was a very good fight, almost a "Classic". I think Frazier deserved to win, unless you judge round 2 three points for Oscar ( and maybe, with the 2 knockdowns, it should be possible, I don't know this rule exactly. Anyone know ?). Now I have the whole fight and I wanna watch it over and over! I wanna be the N.1 Frazier-Bonavena 1 European expert !!!!!!!
Aw, the Bonavena gay thing was no big deal, though it did bring out the intellectual riff-raff. The article I read may have even been a misprint, who knows? If I had to guess, I'd say no, but you never know about anyone else. It is interesting how people respond to the issue though, whether OB, Griffith, Lewis, whoever. Who cares (sheesh)! Eddie Futch said one observation and a couple of strategies played heavily into Norton's victory over Ali (officially in one, unofficially, in two). One was to mirror Ali, particularly when he jabbed. The second was to not rush him immediately after a landed punch. Something Norton watched constantly was Ali's face. Probably no top level pro telegraphed punches like Ali; his face changed dramatically whenever he was ready to punch. Only his speed allowed him to land anyway. Norton's a strange guy. Never quite crossed over into greatness, and the fork in the road when he started returning to normal man status came fast and obviously.

Ali's Super Bowl commercial was a nice surprise. The Champ looked good. The recent posts about Norton might be a bit unfair. As an Ali fan, I of course didn't like Norton back in the day. He not only broke Ali's jaw, but fought him tough all three times. And for all the people who thought Norton was "robbed" in the Yankee Stadium fight, you're hypocrites if you don't think Jimmy Young outpointed Norton in their "title" fight. But with that said, Norton was far better than an average heavyweight. His ability to frustrate Ali, demolish Bobick and take Jerry Q. (admittedly a poorly prepared/rushed Jerry), have to rank Norton as being better than average. And his loss to Larry Holmes, while legitimately a loss, served to show that Norton had the heart of a true Champion. After the first 6-7 rounds, Norton had no business being in that fight. But it's amazing that he clawed his way back into it and nearly won. Shavers pile driving bombs pounded Norton out of the title picture forever, but Norton's loss to Gerry Cooney was so far after the fact---like Ali losing to Trevor Berbick. Didn't matter. Norton holds a place as one of the five most influential heavies of the period: Ali, Foreman, Frazier, Holmes and Norton go down as the heavies who made that middle 70's period the best ever. Jerry Q. had the best part of his career late 60's into early 70's, or he would make the list too. But the five I mentioned held the belts.

Just one more thing, RS - is it unfair of you to write that Brenda is "intellectual riff raff" for the comments she made regarding your propensity for posting unsubstantiated allegations against well known boxers. Brenda just happens to be one of the hosts to the site that you use to demean boxers you don't like, and she also happens to reflect the views of the majority visiting here. If you haven't got anything nice to say, RS, then please say nothing at all. There'd be many here who would not be unhappy if you just went away after all the distasteful comments you've made against Bonavena, Griffiths, Ali, and Foreman, et al. Maybe if you were more constructive and positive about others, you'd begin to feel better about yourself. I think you are deliberately trying to cause trouble. The subject had changed, the spite was gone, people had restarted posting constructive comments, and then you take the debate back to the gutter again. You are going to kill this site RS.
Interesting - and predictable - reconstruction of reality. I think I already mentioned that I thought you, and your various other handles would be happier back at BBB and/or Dotcom (one of your other handles mentioned something one of my imps said only in one of those places). Doesn't really matter though - every court needs a jester...

I just looked up some things on the "LATE GREAT" California heavyweight LOU NOVA. I could not believe the similarities in the careers of him and "IRISH" JERRY QUARRY both California Title aspirants who at one time were both ranked Ring Magazines #1 contender in the world. Nova's record ended at 51-9-4 (31 knockouts) and of course Jerry's 53-9-4 (32 knockouts) Both honored at the Cauliflower alley club in STUDIO CITY. Nova was 6'3 196-208 LBS WITH A 76 INCH REACH, Jerry 72 inches 6'0 AND ABOUT 185-205 POUNDS. Nova lived until 1991 was born in 1915. Both were susceptible to cuts around the eyes both had a devastating wallop, would have been a major bout in California for sure. TAKE CARE!

You post that Griffith and Bonavena were homosexuals and when called to account (and after being told that you had upset people), you added that Lewis was homosexual as well. And when called to account for that, you make further nonsensical allegations. Look, I am using my real name on this site and if anyone wants to contact me and get a reply then it can be done via the e-mail attached to this post. Unlike RS, who remains anonymous while making sordid claims that have become the trademark of her posts. I came to this site to have sensible and polite conversations on boxing topics. I do not come here to read RS defaming former great boxers like Griffith (you called him 'gay'), Foreman (you called him a 'wheezing pansy'), Ali (a 'cheat and fight fixer'), Bonavena ('gay'), our host Brenda ('intellectual riff raff') and now you call Lewis gay as well. RS, leave the personal stuff out about others. Brenda asked that this personal nonsense be stopped (and she mentioned that those making 'smut' allegations lacked intelligence - hence your 'intellectual riff raff' counter punch), and you came straight back and not only repeat your claims about Griffith and Bonavena, you then added Lewis to your list. You are obviously not a true fight enthusiast to speak the way you do about former great boxers. Anyway, all your views and purported 'expert' comments were plagiarised from some other web site or book. You were caught before taking comments from Joe Frazier's book and then posting them verbatim here as your own. A very grubby and sordid type you are indeed. Not an original thought of your own.

RS, if you are directing comments towards Brenda, realize that she is no other than Brenda Quarry, Jerry's sister, and she is indeed one of our hosts here at this site. Maybe implying certain boxers are (were) homosexuals may be no big deal to you but you know full well, in this environment that it would be insulting to some of the people who post here. Whether this is right or wrong is not the point, you knew how they would react. Just saying something to upset people and get them going is not funny and it is rather childish.

One more thing to add to my last post, whoever is calling R.S. Roadyke, this is stupid too. I am guessing that R.S. probably doesn't care that you are calling her this, as she likely doesn't care what you think of her, but calling her a ridiculous name adds to a juvenile atmosphere that we don't want at this site. Fair is fair, I don't want to be accused of being one sided by telling R.S. that she shouldn't label fighters a certain way when some other poster does the same thing to her.
percent correct. Everyone should post using their correct name - if only the first one - and also a correct e-mail address. As you know, Kent, mine is correct. I know that yours is too. Perhaps RS (or whoever she really is) should be just as responsible. RS enjoys the bickering. Over the last few days she's been asked by several posters - 3 or 4 I think - to stop the accusations. But she continues, enjoying the resentment and hurt she causes. We had Koo Koo posting that he doesn't enjoy visiting here as much and now does it less often. I am the same. The atmosphere created by RS with her accusations has diminished the enjoyment here. Her ridiculous posts are attracting loonies. She thinks she owns the site, and can say what she likes, despite what one of the hosts here said a day or two ago. A friend of Emile Griffith even wrote of the upset RS caused with her comments, but she quickly repeated the hurtful information.

|2/2/04 11:32:58 PM|KOOKO0|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|R.S. HAS BEEN ON HERE SPOUTING OFF AT THE MOUTH FOR SOME TIME, HE NEEDS A LIFE BESIDES THE QUARRY SITE, MAYBE HE IS REALLY ANOTHER OUT OF WORK WRITER OR A FORMER MALE STRIP DANCER IN A GAY CLUB, I THINK HE IS MOST LIKELY TOO OLD FOR THAT NOW, BUT THERE'S SOMETHING VERY ODD ABOUT HIM THAT HE WOULD BRING UP ALL THIS GAY STUFF HE SAYS HE'S READ, READ SOME STRAIGHT BOOKS SOMETIME GAY BOY!!! KOO KOO KOO KOO ))))))))))))))| to keep his opponents from getting the ball. Wilt was also a better passer, Wilt was faster up and down the court. He also had better timing on blocking shots. Wilt would let an opponent think he had gotten the shot off and then Wilt would time the ball at the top of its flight and he would block it at the last moment.Most of Shaqs moves are pure power and while Wilt was also very powerful and he could dunk with a couple of guys hanging on him like Shaq, Shaq is the stronger of the two players and harder to stop when he is intent on dunking (as Wilt was too). Another thing in Shaq's favor is he has more guys his own size and sometimes even bigger to compete with. Wilt was guarded by guys around 6'10" or 6'11" compared to his 7'1" height. There were not that many players over 7'0" when Wilt played.Thanks again ! If Wilt was better, Shaq is very close to him, anyway... I have seen Raptors-Lakers, and Shaq was unstoppable !Another pivot I like very much is Sabonis ! Another is Warren Coolidge...Most of Shaqs moves are pure power and while Wilt was also very powerful and he could dunk with a couple of guys hanging on him like Shaq, Shaq is the stronger of the two players and harder to stop when he is intent on dunking (as Wilt was too). Another thing in Shaq's favor is he has more guys his own size and sometimes even bigger to compete with. Wilt was guarded by guys around 6'10" or 6'11" compared to his 7'1" height. There were not that many players over 7'0" when Wilt played.2/3/04 11:44:01 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|Kent-2/3/04 02:18:56 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|Roadschollete: In regards to which champion JQ would have beaten. Here are some off the top off my head: Braddock, Sharkey, Schmeling, Carnera, Ingo Johanson, Patterson. AND MAYBE: Charles and Walcott.|2/3/04 02:25:41 PM|Paul|Sydney||PLMls4@aol.com|||5|Angelo - I would have thought it boring that RS has returned to the gay subject ad nauseum, calling whomever she does not like homosexual, cheats or fight fixers. The list of her targets is long, but the evidence for her accusations is non-existent. If that type of behaviour is allowed to continue, Angelo, then this site will live in the gutter. There should be some standards of decency, particularly when the author is anonymous and the targets of her venom are former boxers who are also decent, honorable human beings with families and friends. RS should not be allowed to use this site to slur the reputations of good people on a whim as she has been doing. We've ignored her in the past but that hasn't worked. Others are entitled to object. |2/3/04 03:35:05 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|In regards to which champion JQ would have beaten. Here are some off the top off my head: Braddock - could be. The "Cinderella Man" got lucky winning the crown anyway, over a nutty, inconsistent, sometimes not in shape Baer. Sharkey - pretty hard puncher, but really just a place holder waiting for someone decent to come along. Schmeling - he could fight, but his win over Louis wasn't indicative of his ability, but rather of an ability to capitalize on a stylistic flaw of Louis's.Carnera - I wonder what Massimo has to say about this? :Ingo Johanson - it still amazes me that he beat Patterson. Not that Floyd was an immortal or anything, but he was better than Ingo. Just got caught, I guess...Patterson - he drew and won a split over him. How would JQ have done against a super prime FP? Patterson didn't have a super chin, but very quick hands, a decent punch (not Foreman!), and good fundamentals. Charles and Walcott - think so? I think there's a chance too, though these guys held in there pretty tough with the Rock.|2/3/04 03:44:23 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|There are some recent Champions who Jerry Quarry would have beaten. Starting with Ali's loss to Leon Spinks, some men have held the title, who Quarry would have taken. While Holmes held the WBC title, there were a few different guys who won the WBA title. And before and during Tyson, a few more "Champions" who Quarry would have outclassed easily. Michael Dokes? Greg Page?Gerrie Coetzee? These names represent talented, top notch sparring partners for an in-prime Quarry. Holmes, Tyson and Holyfield would have managed to beat Jerry, but "other" Heavyweight Champs in the same eras as these "real" champions would lose. |2/3/04 03:59:56 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Starting with "Neon Leon" and on through a lot of the silly paper champs, I'd see JQ doing well, on a good night. Someone in Eastside boxing asked how Carnera would do against Butter Bean! I agree with one of the posters in there - when people say Carnera wasn't a good fighter, that's only in comparison to some of the immortals. He'd kill the ridiculous Butter Bean. BTW - I think Wilt was a better overall player than Shaq. My husband was young when Wilt was in his prime, and saw him live as a little boy. The Stilt did everything well. I admire Shaq for finishing college because he promised his mom he would. Like he needs it (worth easily a quarter of a billion or more), but he gave his word! BTW2 - the adman who did the Byrd/Jordan "Horse" commercial for McDonald's said that Larry didn't miss a single shot, ever, in all the hundreds of ones he attempted while filming the commercial.

I think that probably Larry Bird has been the greatest player ever. He didn't miss a shot and was incredibly smart on the court. Magic was the most amusing (I should say, following the English grammar, the "amusingest" but it sounds so badly... Forgive me!) ever. MJ was pretty good too. I didn't respond immediately on Quarry-Carnera because I'm a gentleman and I'm writing in a foreign language and in a foreigner site. But we know the thruth! JQ, in his best night, would have had a good chance against anybody but Carnera, Spalla and Damiani. Any champinon has (or got, or has got) his own limits! Not a chance in hell against these guys! PS: ABOUT SHAQ: I see the facts: when Kobe doesn't play the Lakers are still a great team! When Malone doesn't play the Lakers are still a great team... When Shaq doesn't play the Lakers ain't shit!}

Okay then, the standard devised by Angelo and RS is this: RS is allowed to post whatever she likes about whomever she dislikes without any obligation to the truth. The rest of us must ignore RS's scandalous allegations without objection or comment. Sounds like the presumption of innocence just got trashed. That's not something I'm going to be part of but, before I go, I have to tell Massimo something - it is crass and impolite to use the "F" word in your postings. | 2/3/04 06:23:58 PM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|RS

I'm so sorry that Paul wants to go away! You have at least one friend on this site: me! Sigh! Don't go away! Stay posting, please! | 2/4/04 01:38:39 AM|Sean|Jersey||emailppsinc@aol.com|||10|OK

I like to make a quick point. The 80's Heavyweights get a bad name. There was a good crop of fighters that all seemed to spiral out of control at the same time. And why I would agree with anyone that the heavy's of the 60's and 70's are a class above any other time, I took a little time to go back a look at the Ring's top 10 heavyweights at the close of 1982 and compared them to today's heavyweights at the close of 2003 and this is how I believe it would have worked out in a head to head match up using Rings top ten in order.10. Tim Witherspoon vs Mike TysonAt the end of 1982 Witherspoon was five months away from losing a highly disputed decision to Larry Holmes. And as later point ill make with David Tua when was the last time Mike beat a very good heavyweight. Witherspoon works behind a very good jab to take a Decision.9. Randall Cobb vs Fres OquendoOquendo a little to good on his feet for the very slow Tex Cobb. Oquendo by clear decision.8. Pinklon Thomas vs Wladimir KlitschkoThomas with perhaps the best jab since Liston out classes Klitschko all day long. Pinky by ko by round 8.7. Gerry Cooney vs Hasim RahmanGerry to big to strong and punches to hard. Hasim most likely fights Gerry's fight stay's to close a little to long. Cooney ko by 4.6. Greg Page vs David TuaVery good fight this time frame may have been one of the best for Page still a very focused heavyweight at this time in very good shape. I like Page by Decision. Using speed and movement to get by a very good puncher that is very limited at best. (Oh by the way when... was the last time Tua beat a quality fighter)

5. Trevor Berbick vs James Toney
Very good fight. Berbick coming Toney slipping. I like Toney by Decision using the angles.

4. Renaldo Snipes vs Vitali Klitschko
1982 may have been the last good year for Snipes. But I think this fight plays out alot like the Holmes fight with Klitschko controlling the early rounds but like the Holmes fight sometime around round 7 or 8 Snipes lands that right hand fired from hell only difference is Viltali dont get up like Larry did. Snipes by KO.

3. Gerrie Coetzee vs Roy Jones
You gotta like Roy in this fight, but hold your breath if Coetzee lands that bionic right. Jones by Decision. to fast for the slow footed Coetzee.

2. Mike Weaver vs Corrie Sanders
Sanders wins the first three rounds against a very slow starting Weaver. Weaver starts to come on around the fourth or fifth round and catches up with a tiring Sanders around the ninth or tenth and stops Sanders.

1. Michael Dokes vs Chris Byrd
Dokes at this point in his career was a very very fast swarming heavyweight with decent power. Byrd a very good boxer doesn't have the punch to keep a young Dokes off him. Dokes by a decision.

World Champion. Larry Holmes vs Lennox Lewis
1982 may have been Larry's last very good year and 2003 may have Shown signs of the last of Lennox Lewis. I like Larry behind that very good jab and nice foot work. Holmes by a late round stoppage maybe 11th. or 12th.

As a follow up to my earlier posting regarding which champs JQ would have beaten. I should have included Leon Spinks and don't know if Mike Weaver was a legit champ or not. If he was, put him on that list too.

Mike Weaver was WBA champ once, KOing "Big John" Tate. I'm not sure when the paper trail nonsense began in earnest, with no end in sight, but there have been runs of champs, er, I mean champs who could almost qualify as a cast of lumberjacks such as the five George Foreman beat one after another on the same night.

I was re-reading your description of Sharkey "just a place holder waiting for someone decent to come along". Now I got ( I try with "got" instead of the trivial "have") a question for you: WHO WAS THIS DECENT GUY ? Another question: what was Wilt's shoe size ?

I'm sure that everyone in this site would love to know that even if somebody would never admit it to himself !

Sharkey was knocked out by none other than da Preem! I don’t know what Wilt’s shoe size was. From pictures I’ve seen, he changed in appearance at the two ends of his career. At the beginning, he was a beanpole, but at the end, he looked like he’d lifted weights - still lean, but more rangy/muscular than skinny. Shaq wears size 22, I think, so I’m guessing Wilt would be up there too. I wear a 6. I’m pretty small (a little under 5’4”, 110). Sportmart used to have a life sized cardboard figure of Shaq, and people were always getting their picture taken beside it (me included). I could have put both my feet and both my hands in his shoes, and still had wiggle room! Ali’s on a new commercial now, for Linux operating systems. He’s telling a little kid to “shake up the world.” He doesn’t look bad. Even though he only says a short line, it sounded pretty good too. Not that overweight either. Of course, he always did have a fleshy face, and one side effect of the medicines he’s likely taking is fluid retention.

Where is that sportmart exactly? I’m gonna take the first flight for the USA, cause I wanna get that picture taken beside Shaq’s cardboard too!! If you find a Andre the Midget’s life sized cardboard, I’ll come to the USA by swimming...!

I know KooKoo, we Italians are just a lower race... We Italians ain’t shit! But you Americans we’ll never have a fighter as great as da Preem! Ah, another fundamental thing :) Andre’ the Giant wasn’t 7’ 5”, he was only about 6’ 9“ !!!!! Now, live with it if you can!!

I don’t know who this Gotti was, I haven’t had so much to do with gainsters in my life, even if I grew up in the worst streets of Rome. Do you know what saved me from drugs and criminality? OOOOHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHHH.... The Physics! LOL! RS-I have seen in Italy the "exact size" cardboards of "Pippo Baudo", "Jerry Scotti" etc, but these guys are bums, we haven't the legends you have! Do you want to compare Pippo Baudo with Shaq, RS ?

Sean's post on 80's vs. 90's heavyweights was interesting. I guess I implied in an earlier post that the 80's heavies weren't good---but in fact, I think they were decent. My point was that some of them who became alphabet soup champions weren't worthy, and JQ could have beaten most of these guys. Compared to the 90's group, the 80's contenders weren't all that bad. And while I agree with most of Sean's picks in his dream matchups, I take exception with his comment that Pinklon Thomas had the best jab since Liston. Holmes had a better jab, and Ali's was faster. Foreman's was underrated---not fancy, but like Cosell said, it was a "telephone pole" jab. Finally, the best of the 80's contenders (not (alphabet champions) might have been Tim Witherspoon. I think he had the best overall package and good heart as well. The problem with Witherspoon was questionable management at times, and a conflict with Don King, which cost him dearly. Spoon was avoided like the plague and kept out of title matches he deserved. The kind words about the picks in those match up's. I also agree that Jerry may have taken all those alphabet champions; and Tim was avoided and boxed out by the Plague.

2/5/04 11:42:41 PM Sean | Jersey | emailppsinc@aol.com | 10 | Angelo thanks for the kind words about the picks in those match up's. I also agree that Jerry may have taken all those alphabet champions; and Tim was avoided and boxed out by the Plague.

2/6/04 01:20:33 AM kookoo | ny | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 | I SEE YOU FOR WHAT YOU ARE NOW MASSIMO, A PUPPET FOR THE R.S. ROADMAN IS A BUFFOON THAT MANAGED TO COP YOUR MIND(WHAT YOU HAVE THAT IS) PRIMO IS THE GREATEST, RIGHT MASSIMO, YOU KNOW NOTHIN, I DON'T KNOW WHO JOHN GOTTI IS, YOU REMEMBER BECAUSE HE'S JUST LIKE ONE OF YOUR UNCLE'S FROM THE OLD COUNTRY, WHERE YOU BELONG, PROVE A MAN, STOP LISTENING TO THAT NON STOP CRAP FROM ROADMAN, ROADMAN IS A PROFESSOR OF NOTHING, STOP THE INSANITY MASSIMO!! KOO KOO KOO KOO

2/6/04 11:09:33 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | What is amazing about Tim Witherspoon is that he was competitive well into his forties which shows his talent but also the weakness of the division lately. The "Spoon" was a legitimate top twenty, but not quite top ten contender as recently as two years ago. He is definitely one of the best, if not the best of the so called Alphabet boys, split champions, of all time. He held either the WBC or the WBA belt twice. Don King had a way to mess up any fighter's mind. Witherspoon had easily defeated James "Bonecrusher" Smith by unanimous decision but in their rematch held about a year after their first meeting, Smith won by first round knockout. Witherspoon said he was so upset by King and his B.S. that he walked into the ring against Smith mindless and he was kayoed.

2/6/04 11:26:59 AM Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Another fighter who was fucked by Don King was Mitch Green. Don King promised him the moon and gave him crap!

2/6/04 11:40:35 AM John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 | By now, everyone knows what Don King is. Anyone that goes ahead and signs with him deserves anything they get. He makes Franke Carbo and Blinky Palermo look like honest men.

2/6/04 12:48:31 PM Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia90101@aol.com | 10 | Hey all lets be cool, and everyone please get along. We love & miss you Dad, and Uncle Jerry!!

2/6/04 02:39:21 PM Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 | Don King is no dummy, plus, while a little slippery perhaps, seems like a fast talking, but essentially OK guy when you see him. Stir into the mix an unsophisticated young kid, a bunch of money, and promise him that he's on the way to making all the dreams he has come true, and it's easy for the beginning boxer to overlook a lot. If he's "heard things," it's also easy to think everyone was wrong. In nature, we have the Venus Flytrap. And then there's Don King...

2/6/04 03:29:47 PM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Don King is a piece of shit gangster who likely bought his way out of a conviction for manslaughter by probably paying off an outgoing "lame duck" governor to gain a pardon. Can I prove this? No, but I think that is how it happened. That he beat to death a man who owed him six hundred dollars, during Don's loan sharkin days, who by the way weighed one hundred pounds less than Don did, is not in dispute. His early release from prison and his subsequent pardon are at the very least, suspicious. Add to the above event all of his allegedly shady business dealings and we have a not a very decent man at all. He can drive around in all of his fancy cars and wear fancy suits but you still have a man who has no class and who never will have any.

2/6/04 04:32:19 PM kookoo | ny | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 | WHY DON'T ALL YOU DUMB ASS'S WATCH YOUR LANGUAGE ON HERE, KENT YOU SURPRISE ME THE MOST, YOU BEING
CLOSE TO THE FAMILY, YOU KNOW BETTER, MASSIMO JUST KEEP BEING DUMB, THAT'S WHAT YOU DO BEST, |
|2/6/04 04:53:26 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|That's official, Lennox Lewis has quitted his ring career. Honour to a champion. Cheers! |
|2/6/04 05:16:32 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Don King looks out for number one, no doubt about it. One of his genius practices is taking jurors on exotic vacations once they find him not guilty of his latest escapades. Of course, the jury pool knows this, so it increases the odds that he'll get off. King has committed his share of transgressions, but you've got to love the fact that like a cockroach, he survives through everything. For all his bad points, the guy was really a spectacular promoter of events. He screwed the fighters and lined his own pockets, but he filled stadiums like no one before or since. I talk about him in the past tense because there just isn't the talent there right now for dream matchups---to make the kind of impact that Ali, Frazier, Foreman, etc. did back in the day (not to mention Leonard, Duran, Hearns, Hagler, etc.). Hell, give me an in-prime "Dynamite" Dokes now, and he'd probably rule the heavies! That's sad! Here's one to contemplate: Tex Cobb vs. David Tua! I'd love to see everyone's pick on this! For my money, it would be a 10 round draw with no knockdowns, but a whole lot of swelling! |
|2/6/04 05:54:32 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Angelo-Tex Cobb would have beaten Tua in about the same way he beat Ernie Shavers! His style was so odd, he threw punches like he was knocking the door! |
|2/6/04 11:00:08 PM|mark sargeant|uk||mark_sargeant2003@yahoo.co.uk|||10|So there we are the retirement of Lennox Lewis and boxing is much the poorer for it. No, he was not as good as Ali, Louis, maybe not even Foreman, Frazier or Holmes but he was a wonderful boxer who dominated the toughest scene for over 10 years and would just slot into the top 10 of all time heavyweights. It was not his fault that he didn't fight in the top generation but he defeated more no 1 fighters than anyone in history-Holyfield, Tyson, Mercer, Morrison, Ruddock, Bruno and Tucker from one generation, and Tua, Rahman, Klitschko, Golota from another. Although he should have fought more in the last couple of years, what no boxing fan must forget is that Tyson DELIBERATELY avoided him in 1996 and Bowe did the same in 1992-maybe management were at fault but his willingness to fight both and his calls for each fight determine his bottle. Please remember that he was willing to fight both of these! Although he was defeated by average heavies his comeback wins prove something as well-so no not in the class of Ali, Louis and Frazier but damn close. Lewis has done an enormous amount for boxing. A class apart in the ring and outside of it. As good as both are, Tyson is a rapist and Bowe beat his wife to a pulp-not pleasant to think of but some people will slant Lewis and prop up these two as 'heroes'-wonderful fighters yes but not decent human beings at all-Shame Quarry, Shavers and Lyle from the unheralded era aren't around now. I think they would have a feast. |
|2/7/04 09:52:08 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|THATS RIGHT IGNORE ME MASSIMO, YOU DUMBASS, I THINK I'LL CALL YOU DUMB DUMB FROM NOW ON, YOU WERE IN A MOVIE ONCE BUTCH CASSIDY & THE SUNDANCE DUMB DUMB, TAKE CARE DUMB DUMB |
|2/7/04 10:08:31 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|KooKoo, you ain't a bum! You dare to call me names only because ( or as, or since) I'm not right there and you'll never meet me! Otherwise, right besides my huge 5' 6" 128 (and shoe size 40), you would look up and you would be scared at death! |
|2/7/04 04:24:33 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Back to Boxing: from Ring Magazine there were only 48 heavyweights who graced the top ten from JULY 1965 TO JUNE 1975 120 ISSUES and ALL during Jerry Quarry's then career 50-8-4.(which of course is what it should have stayed at)he was 11-8-1 against those top ten fighter's during that time.Quarry was outweighed by his opponents 21-40-1.I've also been researching Muhammad ALI'S weigh ins vs his opponents and is 41-14-1 with 5 ( of his bouts undetermined in-which I'm still searching) 41-14-1 in Ali's favor that is.

2/7/04 04:51:55 PM | Observer | LaLa Land | inagoda@vida.com | 1 | kookoo, do you even have a high school diploma? You're an unbelievable idiot. No one cares about challenging you, because what's the point? Sober up, get a job, get an ugly girlfriend.

2/7/04 05:03:15 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Observer, I guess you can say what you want about the Koo Koo Klock but why do you have to rate this site as a 1 out of 10 and bring our average down? Koo Koo is just one poster and even if he is one of Jerry's biggest fans (he calls himself Jerry's biggest fan) he isn't the site itself. I am posting just to get it closer to 10, where it belongs.

2/7/04 10:12:33 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 | Speaking of Lennox Lewis... For nearly ten years, the world was treated to the largest collection of great fighters in the heavyweight division ever seen in boxing history, competing at the same time - "The 70s." Not only were the Big Three top 10 all time champions, but never were there so many top rate contenders as well. There are a lot of boxers in the past we'd all like to see face the trio of champions, and the contenders as well, but let's look at the time beyond when Ali, Joe, and George were gone. It would have been a thrill a minute to have had Tyson, Lewis, Holmes, and Holyfield around in the Golden Era!

2/7/04 10:12:33 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 | Speaking of Lennox Lewis... For nearly ten years, the world was treated to the largest collection of great fighters in the heavyweight division ever seen in boxing history, competing at the same time - "The 70s." Not only were the Big Three top 10 all time champions, but never were there so many top rate contenders as well. There are a lot of boxers in the past we'd all like to see face the trio of champions, and the contenders as well, but let's look at the time beyond when Ali, Joe, and George were gone. It would have been a thrill a minute to have had Tyson, Lewis, Holmes, and Holyfield around in the Golden Era!

2/7/04 11:02:10 PM | TRYTHIS | USA | ???.com | 8 | I used to post here. I couldn't put up with the idiots anymore and left. It would be great if people had to register a username so that the quality of posts could be better. Try Larry Holmes' new site. He actually answers the questions himself!! It is larryholmes.com.

2/8/04 06:54:52 PM | KOKOO | NY | KOKOOCLOCK000@YAHOO.COM | 10 | KENT I KNOW THE WAY YOUR MIND WORKS, ARE YOU ATTACKING ME USING OTHER NAMES. DUMB DUMB, WOMEN ARE NOT MY MAIN FOCUS RIGHT NOW, I WOULD LIKE TO GET RID OF ALL THE DUMMYS FIRST, BREnda, SONYA WILL ALL HAVE TO PARTY SOME TIME, THE KOKOO CLOCK ROCKS!

2/8/04 09:25:23 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Koo Koo, you obviously don't know me at all if you think I attack you using different names.Kent Appel is my real name and the only name I have used at this site ever. Ask Jimmy D. or Steve from New Jersey if I am a real person or not. Too bad Mr. Jimmy Q is not alive anymore because he too would verify that I am for real.I don't take time to think of ways I can insult you. In fact, I don't think about you very much at all. You may find this somewhat insulting but it is the God's honest truth.The truth is, and everyone who has visited this site for a while knows this, is that is was you for a long time who kept insulting me.

2/9/04 12:20:00 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Bum, bum......... Sucker, Sucker !!!!!! (KooKoo)You cannot beat me physically (of course) and you cannot beat me mentally! I can't see a KooKooClock whipping me! I can seem stupid sometimes but I know for sure that I am not that way!!

2/9/04 09:42:14 AM | kookoo | ny | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 | KENT, I BELIEVE YOU FOR NOW, MASSIMO YOU ARE A NOTHING LOSER THAT ONLY TALKS ABOUT SCIENCE AND PRIMO CARNERA, YOU ARE A TOTAL LOSER, ROADMAN YOUR ABOUT THE SAME, YOU AND DUMB DUMB PROBABLY LIVE TOGETHER, THE THING IS FOLKS I DON'T LIKE IT WHEN PEOPLE THINK THEIR BETTER THAN THE KOKOO CLOCK.

2/9/04 09:57:34 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | I don't think I'm better than you or better than anyone else! And it's not true that I talk only about Science and Carnera... I talk about Andre' the Midget, also!!

2/9/04 11:02:30 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Massimo, you also talk about Shaq and Wilt and that other guy, the world's largest body guard or security man, who's name I can't think of right now. You also talk about Spalla too. That is a large range of subjects to write about. Heck, I could be kept spellbound just reading about Andre the Midget!

BRENDA, ANY INFORMATION ON MIKE'S EVENT NEXT MONTH AS TO WHO THE CONTACT PERSON IS AND THE TELEPHONE NUMBER?

Anyone who might have the weigh-in stats for the "COCKY STOCKY" Jerry Quarry. I need 4 bouts 1-his pro debut with "Sergeant" Gene Hamilton 2- 9/24/65 rematch with Ray(Junior)Ellis 3-AL"Tiger" Carter and his major California Bout with Joey Orbillo in 1966. Mr. Jimmy told me Jerry was 192lbs but did not know Orbillo's.I started this as a hobby in 1999(Conclusive detailed stats of Quarry's record) and what seemed deemed impossible there might be a light at a long tunnel. I read in a boxing mag. Where they had almost every stat of Roberto Duran,fighter's weights, time TKO OR KO, UNAMINOUS OR MAJORITY DECISIONS,SCORE-CARDS.Obviously it made a lasting impression. But on the bright side iv'e found out a lot, Take care!

The person to get in touch with is Don Frazer at 818-761-4887 he will send you direction and your tickets. Hope to meet some of your there, for Mike. God bless I am sorry i can not give my real e-mail address, it's only because of the first time i did put it out there i recieved 1500 e-mails in three days. Boxing was my brothers life and even being on the web from time to time still hurts and makes me miss my brothers. I talk to Mike a lot and no he is not good either. So to hear stuff about any fighter who had the guts to get in the ring is just sad. Know one knows the life these boxers live after they retire it is not pretty and a lot don't even have family to turn to. This foundation is just for such fighters as these, so please reach out to them make a difference. | 2/9/04 02:17:27 PM|BJ|LA|bjla@hotmail.com|

The only thing on that issue I will address is the last person to call Emile Griffith a faggo. Emile tragically killed in the ring (Benny "KID" Paret).I have a Ring Magazine that Shows Mr.Griffith out at a Casino pool with three very attractive Bikini-clad women. on "RING CAMERA CLICKS!" thats good enough for me.I used to have another issue of thr Ring that shows JQ holding up two play boy bunnies on his shoulders.Must have been when he was training For Shavers at the catskills. which makes sense in fact that both fighter's had training rounds at the playboy club.

Regarding the recent derogatory posts that have been appearing here---my comments weren't meant to encourage R.S. (or anyone else for that matter) to make mean-spirited, unfair or vulgar comments on the site. My only point was, and is, that when people are here to share views of boxing, boxers and the foundation, it gets very frustrating when nearly a full page of posts turns to chastising visitors... to the site. I agree that people should be careful about what they write—but I still feel the best course of action by others is to ignore offensive posts and just respond to respectful opinions and questions offered. Instead, when we finally start getting something good going—be it predictions of upcoming fights or discussions about dream matchups—or debate about decisions—whatever it is—just when it gets interesting, there will be a bunch of posts that totally take us off topic and these posts have never stopped anyone from continuing to write whatever they want to. It was said that my idea of ignoring offensive messages doesn't work. Well, neither does writing volumes about how terrible the posts are—and all this accomplishes is taking up space and also taking us off positive, interesting discussions. Look, as someone who always has and always will respect Muhammad Ali, I don't agree with some of R.S.'s views on him—and other people here have also attacked Ali for dodging the draft, getting lucky on some decisions or owning judges—people are entitled to their opinion and freedom of expression. Why don't we just agree to disagree and move on, keeping the site moving forward?

| 2/9/04 05:52:37 PM | Rhodescholar | Nevada | rhodesscholar@hotmail.com | 5 | Angelo, why should everyone suffer because of just one idiot (Roadscholarette). Others DID ignore her attacks on great fighters but she just kept repeating the information until someone was so outraged that they responded. Fools like you attack the respondent and not the cause. People come here to discuss boxing in a friendly atmosphere and not be badgered by an arsehole like he/she/it, or to be lectured by a pinhead like you. I gave up posting here six months ago because of the gossip being posted by that person. I look in from time to time and see that nothings changed and last time I looked she added Lewis to her list of fags. He/she/it is also posting under different names and then she has the suckhole twins, you and Massimo, giving he/she/it air. Anyone who truly loves the sport wouldn't write the crap he/she/it does. It is enormously disrespectful to call great fighters cheats and pansies and fags, yet she/he/it does it all the time and you want us to ignore it. Seems to me the only way people can ignore it is by not coming here at all. The reason you attack us and not Roadschollarette is because you are too scared to cross she/it/her or maybe you agree with what it says but hasn't the courage to say so. Keep it up and only Raodschollarette and the suckhole twins will be here. |

| 2/9/04 06:30:25 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 | Amgelo - That's always been fine with me, though there seems to be bewilderment over automatic reciprocation between "great fighter," and "great person." Heaven forbid that I should insinuate that a sports figure might have feet of clay, or that the pristine sport of boxing might not always be above reproach. I came to discuss boxing and boxing in all its many facets, though not necessarily to Canonize its participants. Others seem to want a Bianca-like ~duh~ flame page. Sheesh. |

| 2/9/04 08:53:03 PM | Rhodescholar | LA | rhodescholar@hotmail.com | 5 | What a liar. All the time posting speculation as to the sexuality of famous fighters, some dead and who cant defend themselves, isn't debating legitimate boxing matters. Neither is calling great fighters cheats or fight fixers. You treat everyone here like fools. Spoiling reputations is a game to you. Its obvious you have to much time on your hands and spend you're entire day on the net disrespecting great old boxers. You have no shame. Go get a job and stop defaming dead boxers like Bonavena. Its about time you apologized to Griffith for what you wrote about him. You plainly dont like boxing or fighters cause otherwise you wouldnt spend so much time slagging them. Find some other house to haunt you fool and take you're 2 tiny suckholes with you. |

| 2/9/04 09:13:23 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia90101@aol.com | 10 | WOW THE LANGUAGE ON THIS SITE, AND THE ATTITUDES, AND GETTING SAD. LET'S ALL GET ALONG, BE NICE TO ALL, OR JUST KEEP IT TO YOURSELF. WE LOVE & MISS YOU DAD, AND UNCLE JERRY! GOOD LUCK UNCLE MIKE, WE LOVE YOU TOO!

I just want to say, I thought Brenda's post was very poignant, am a little saddened she had to make it, regarding the innuendo. Clearly it goes well beyond friendly discussion, and I've never seen the relevance anyway. Let's show the Quarrys some respect please, as well as those named, just pathetic... Am glad to see a very good champ, Lennox Lewis, decide to hang up his gloves. He has nothing left to prove in his era, and his retirement will add life to the division, given his inactivity. Klitschko-Sanders for WBC is a fight that will draw some long-overdue interest... Glad to hear about the event for Mike, too bad CA is so far from OH, I'd love to be there. Best wishes always to the Quarrys, who I've always admired.

This site used to be real good but in my opinion has declined alot. One other poster suggested that people have to register by their real name. I think that would be a real good idea for the sake of quality on this site. I am on another site now and it is fantastic. People really know their stuff and I have learned so much. My best to Kent, Jimmy, Paul, Angelo, Gerry and all the Quarry clan. Evren

All the best Evren its been a real pleasure and you are a class act, I'm not going to preach to anybody but people lets keep this site a class act just like the fighter who is named for this site and was always a class act with more courage then he had Beans. If you want to bicker take it outside and keep it off the site. When were supposed to be stooges you people are coming off like a bunch of clowns and Jerry for one would not be laughing.

THAT'S RIGHT AND JAMES QUARRY (MY FATHER) WOULD NOT BE HAPPY EITHER. PLEASE LETS KEEP THIS SITE GOING AND STOP ALL THE B.S......

The trash talking kind of goes in cycles. Believe it or not, it was actually worse about two and a half to three years ago, when Mr. Jimmy was around. But back then he had a way of posting and calming down the situation. Everyone here knew he was fair and they would behave better because of this. One thing Mr. Jimmy encouraged was freedom of expression and I don't think this should change but, a few people here can take advantage of this and drag the site down. I came to discuss boxing in all its many facts, though not necessarily to Canonize its participants.....Sheesh.

The trash talking kind of goes in cycles. Believe it or not, it was actually worse about two and a half to three years ago, when Mr. Jimmy was around. But back then he had a way of posting and calming down the situation. Everyone here knew he was fair and they would behave better because of this.

One thing Mr. Jimmy encouraged was freedom of expression and I don't think this should change but, a few people here can take advantage of this and drag the site down. I came to discuss boxing in all its many facts, though not necessarily to Canonize its participants....Sheesh.

All the best Evren its been a real pleasure and you are a class act, I'm not going to preach to anybody but people lets keep this site a class act just like the fighter who is named for this site and was always a class act with more courage then he had Beans. If you want to bicker take it outside and keep it off the site. When were supposed to be stooges you people are coming off like a bunch of clowns and Jerry for one would not be laughing.

Please lets keep this site going and stop all the B.S...... to make a point. Using bad words, such as how much Calvin Lane gets rid of in the bathroom is considered rude by most people here. I realize you are probably only trying to be funny but people here didn't take it that way.

I watched 'When we were Kings' again for the first time in a while, and was struck by a few things differently this time. One, Road'ette did have a real point in mentioning how well Ali took punches. He took a lot of them not just from Foreman, but from so many as he fought nearly everyone. Second, there was that sequence where George was just popping that body bag and just caving it in, one big slug at a time. Man, who would want to be in front of that? The movie was just a big Ali fan flick, not nearly enough of George, who was only the defending champ after all. Music performers were interesting also. After that, I was further impressed with Jerry, who at just 200lbs., was taken so seriously by these giants. That JQ had their attention to the degree he did is a big compliment professionally. I reread George Foreman's posting here a few weeks back, and was really impressed. I believe George Foreman was a real Jerry Quarry fan, and that speaks volumes to me about Jerry.

In addition to Ali being among the all time elite in terms of taking a punch, he also enjoys top status as being among the hardest ever to corner, and in terms of handling himself when hurt. I don't agree with his methods long term in preparing for this - going to the "half dream" as he called it, in training, so he'd be ready, but it seems to have worked. He was also nearly impossible to follow up on, even when rocked. When We Were Kings was an Ali fan movie, but also at that time, George was a pretty sullen, withdrawn guy, not the happy go lucky Teddy bear he is today, so it may have been difficult to approach him and get much out of him.

BTW, just a FYI - I'm being imped, with copy and pastes as well as clumsy imitation attempts. Registered handles might not be a bad idea...

George Foreman wants to coming back for another fight (he says it will be his last fight) at 55 years of age. I can't see a good reason for doing such a thing, I don't agree at all! We already know that he is still very strong and we already know that he can't be as strong as he was when he defeated Joe Frazier in Kingstone. He is training hard, he wants to coming back at about 225 lbs (this is about his "in prime" weight, and I don't think it is possible).

I apologize with you and with everyone else in this site for having used impolite expressions. Now, after some thinking, I realize that it wasn't the case, even if I don't think that that behaviour makes me automatically Pol Pot, Jeffrey Dahmer or Hitler. I will be more careful in the future to show the respect I have for Jerry Quarry, his family and all the posters on this site. I realize that I use to joke too much! It's just my nature! Maybe I'd need some help...

I hope George Foreman decides not to fight. If he wants to be more active in the sport, maybe he can become a trainer. He has a lot of knowledge he can pass on to young fighters. There is some talk about matching him with Larry Holmes. I would give the same advice to Larry. Be glad you got out of the sport in good health.

Sometimes a fighter can take one too many fights. PLEASE, GEORGE AND LARRY, DON'T RISK ALL THAT YOU HAVE!
two famous fighters above, be glad you got out in one piece. | 2/11/04 11:16:59 AM | Roadscholarette | Chicago || roadscholarette@hotmail.com ||| | 10 | Massimo -

George made in the neighborhood of $100 million by selling his share of George Foreman grills (though he still promotes them). He, like Larry Holmes obviously loved the sport and all the excitement, attention, etc., though neither need the money. Larry’s stayed consistently in shape, but George is fat as a pie wagon, so he can’t be doing much. Both may find that the sport they love may not reciprocate. I think of the line in the movie, Devil’s Advocate, when Al Pacino (as satan) says, "Vanity - ~definitely~ my favorite sin!" You act fine - no need to apologize. I appreciate your light heart and sense of humor. |

2/11/04 01:43:24 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM ||| | 10 | Gerry Schultz: I could not agree with you more, I've talked to the few people around where I live now, that really know anything about boxing and, we could not come up with anybody who was not in absolutely tip-top shape when they took on Jerry Quarry, I witnessed "live" the JERRY QUARRY JAMES J. WOODY bout, in Vegas. You really do not realize how fast these pro's are till you see them up close. It was an extremly fast-paced brawl for two rounds. Quarry was actually the undercard to FOREMAN-ROMAN closed circuit, too bad it was not Foreman-Quarry. Would have settled over 30 years of issues. Take Care! |

2/11/04 02:18:17 PM | Massimo | Roma || 4 || 10 | RS- Thanks for the nice words! I have no problem to apologize... It's free! I could apologize for the wars between Rome and Annibale or for what the Turkeys did to the Greeks, some time ago. I was sincere this time, anyway! I am sorry for Foreman has said he has lost about 44 lbs in the last month and that he will be in shape as soon as possible! |

2/11/04 02:43:00 PM | steve | N.J. || dmmsrm@comcast.net ||| | 10 | Hey Kent, Jimmy D., and Angelo. I couldn't agree with you more about the strange turn of events on this site lately. I agree with the idea of having to register your e-mail name and address. What's the harm in that? It would discourage all the nightcrawlers and trogs we seem to be attracting. It's getting childish, it's becoming pretty obvious that these people are using different e-mail names and addresses and then, comically, they use the same exact language, speech patterns, opinions and modes of attack on the same few people they seem to get fixated on.

I recently watched Tyson vs Hollyfield I and 2. I then watched Tyson vs. Berbeck and Ruddock. The main difference in the outcome of those fights was the fear factor. Hollyfield simply met tyson's charges in the middle of the ring with his own combinations, then tied him up and proceeded to outmuscle him all over the ring. I believe Jerry Quarry would not have given Hollyfield or Tyson the advantage of the fear factor. I also believe he hit harder and faster than Hollyfield, took at least as good a punch, had as good a rating as Hollyfield for stamina, and the same refusal to be defeated. Remember, Jerry was never stopped for any reason other than cuts. I would give Hollyfield a slight edge over Quarry, only for the cut factor. If no cuts occurred, Jerry would outcounter punch, and outslug Hollyfield for a late round tko or a close decision.

I can also verify that Kent is a real, live person. He seems like a reasonable, intelligent gentlemen whom I've had several conversations with. He also has a pretty good sense of humor as he held his own insulting me and the N.J. of speaking English. |

2/11/04 04:07:49 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago || roadscholarette@hotmail.com ||| | 10 | Massimo - Larry Holmes is in shape. George always loved to eat. People think he was slow footed in career one because he was in his mid 40s, and certainly ~no one~ is AS fast in their 40s as in their 20s, but the difference isn't as much as many think; a 65 year old has 85% the capacity of a 25 year old, all things being equal (injuries, condition, illness). In tests done with resistance training, over 100% gains have been evidenced in people in nursing homes, even into their 80s and 90s. If George gets back in the 220-230 range, he'll be amazed at how fast he is, and my guess is that his punch is still there. People who ~stay~ in shape age very slowly. Larry Holmes and George seem to have a very real animosity. A fight would be interesting - two all time top tenners...

Meant to say, "...people thought he was slow footed in career TWO, because..." not in career one.

And what about Foreman-Tyson? I have read that Tyson has financial problems ( noooooo ! Unbelievable ! ) and wants to come back ( or to come back ) in June. I have read also that maybe Iron Mike will fight in Rome! "Wants to coming back " or " want to come back" ? Sometimes I have problems to conjugate ( or in conjugation, or for conjugating) the verbs !

And what about Foreman-Tyson? I have read that Tyson has financial problems ( noooooo ! Unbelievable ! ) and wants to come back ( or to come back ) in June. I have read also that maybe Iron Mike will fight in Rome! "Wants to coming back " or " want to come back" ? Sometimes I have problems to conjugate ( or in conjugation, or for conjugating) the verbs !

They said on the news that out of $200 million that he'd earned, Mike Tyson now has only a little over $5,000. There are a lot of things about MT that can ruin a person's sympathy for him, but if you read and listen to the things he says (even if they're goofy or mean), he's clearly intelligent, but virtually friendless, and has lived a terrible life. Sometimes, I think all he wants is a friend, but lacks the wherewithal to make and keep any. People who have him on shows, of in movies say he's a real sweetheart to be/work with. I also suspect he, like Ali, has a lot of little boy in him, hence is vulnerable to sharks like Don King. As Leno joked last night (pretending to be King), "What? He has $5,000? How'd I miss ~that~?" Sad.
sport, and if true, it figures. Larry and George are physical phenoms, actually even freaks of nature in a good way. I only hope that they can be honest with themselves. It is true that an older body, however capable still, is hurt more easily, and heals more slowly. Also, amazing that they might yet be, boxing is a "lose an inch, lose a mile" sport. They're two of the fortunate ones to get out whole. What a tragedy it would be if they lost this to a fight neither needs.
Time is a thief, but in strong matters of the heart, the mind seldom listens. At these times, it's like the dual masks of drama, one smiling, the other miserable.

2/11/04 06:48:36 PM|steve |N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Hey Jimmy D.As a stooge,you might have information on these two areas that I've never been able to get an answer on.Do you know what issue of Boxing Illustrated or The Ring magazine showed a smiling Jerry and his new bride, Charlie,She was a beatiful blonde who looked like a movie starlet.Did they have any kids? What year did they divorce?

2/11/04 09:44:05 PM|Kent|L:a Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|R.S., my trainer's talking about riding the rodeo circuit at age 66 may be just wishful daydreaming on the part of an older man. But who knows, he could be serious as he often says he doesn't feel old.I, at times, say I would like to have a fight. My background is karate, which I trained in for four years in my teens and early twenties but I also used to spar with boxers for cross training purposes. I had one boxing match, in a tough man contest about seventeen years ago and while I thought I won my match and most people in the audience thought I won also, the judges voted for my opponent. I have begun to train in karate again for weight lose purposes and the thought crosses my mind, that once I get in acceptable shape, I visit some boxing gyms or find some full contact sparring partners. But maybe this isn't a good idea and I should leave well enough alone myself. So I do understand what these fighters are thinking, only on a different level from them. At this time, all I do is some karate routines called kata and I hit the bags too. I am not even doing any controlled or light point sparring yet. But maybe this as far as I should take it with adding the light sparring later and leaving the full contact stuff alone.

2/11/04 11:05:42 PM|Sean|Jersey||Emailppsinc@aol.com|||10|Hey I was wondering if anyone on this site had ever seen the Mike Quarry vs Jimmy Dupree fight.Also was thinking about som lightheavy weight contenders from that time frame that would have been intresting to see Mike fight and that was Johnny Persol from NY. and Eddie (Bossman) Jones from Oakland. I was looking to see what you guys thought and how think Mike would have fared in those fights.

2/12/04 01:06:22 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Sean, Mike, on any given night, would be a good bet to beat almost all light heavys, including Bossman Jones and Persol.He was on the short end of some close fights in which he could have gotten another shot at the title if he had been given the verdict even once. These include: The second fight with Mike Rossman, vs. Pierre Fourie, vs. Chris Finnegan, and vs. Yaqui Lopez.As good as Jerry's pure boxing skills were, Mike's skills may have even been better. What Mike lacked in pure punching power, he made up for with heart and he always came to his fights in shape and prepared. I never saw the fight with Dupree but know Mike won by techical decision.

2/12/04 01:09:25 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|LET ME TELL YOU FOLKS SOMETHING, I JUST READ AN ARTICLE ABOUT FORMER HEAVYWEIGHT GREG PAGE , AS MOST OF US KNOW HE WAS SERIOUSLY INJURED IN 2001 , SUFFERED A STROKE AND BRAIN SWELLING AFTER BEING STOPPED AT AGE 42, HE NOW REQUIRE ROUND THE CLOCK SUPERVISION, THIS IS DONE BY HIS WIFE , WHO I TAKE MY HAT OFF TO, MY POINT IS THAT A PERSON 42 IS STILL YOUNG FOR LIFE, BUT IS ANCIENT FOR BOXING, ANYBODY THAT AGE IS IN GREAT DANGER TRYING TO COMPETE IN A YOUNG MANS GAME, DON'T THINK BECAUSE YOUR TRAINED IN SOME MARTIAL ART THAT WILL SAVE YOU, THERES GUYS ON THE STREET THAT CAN KILL YOU JUST BECAUSE THIER FIERCE, YOUNG AND MAYBE DRUGGED UP, FALSE CONFIDENCE THAT WHAT A LOT OF BLACK BELTS HAVE, IT'S BETTER THAN NOTHING THOUGH.

I think it's not Don King's fault if Mike Tyson has financial problems, it's Mike Tyson's fault! I have nothing against Mike Tyson, but how many Ferraris did he buy? How much money did he throw out of the window?

In Italy there is a lot of people who live with 800 Euros a month. I can't feel sorry for Mike Tyson's financial problems. He could have kept 0.01 percent of his money in bank. Was it so complicated to do?

Technically, Mike Tyson's financial situation falls on his own shoulders, yes. Don King's no Mother Teresa, and I'm sure Tyson's contracts weren't written with him (Tyson) in mind. When he attained a position of power as champion, Mike (if he realized what was going on) should have said, "Enough, time for a new deal!"

However... My guess is that Tyson saw how much was coming in, not how much ~should~ have been, and likely didn't read or understand the small print and various other provisions in his deals. Tyson's a smart guy, buy with someone like King, he was a goldfish swimming with piranhas.

In terms of his personal life, no one forced MT to buy dozens of cars, multiple mansions, tigers, expensive jewelry, or indulge in all the other wild extravagances that a young, impulsive man, once poor, suddenly fabulously rich, could be expected to indulge in. Mike never had a person who was knowledgeable, cared about him, that he trusted and listened to, who could advise him. And then, the question remains, ~would~ he have listened?

Technically, Mike Tyson's financial situation falls on his own shoulders, yes. Don King's no Mother Teresa, and I'm sure Tyson's contracts weren't written with him (Tyson) in mind. When he attained a position of power as champion, Mike (if he realized what was going on) should have said, "Enough, time for a new deal!"

However... My guess is that Tyson saw how much was coming in, not how much ~should~ have been, and likely didn't read or understand the small print and various other provisions in his deals. Tyson's a smart guy, buy with someone like King, he was a goldfish swimming with piranhas.

In terms of his personal life, no one forced MT to buy dozens of cars, multiple mansions, tigers, expensive jewelry, or indulge in all the other wild extravagances that a young, impulsive man, once poor, suddenly fabulously rich, could be expected to indulge in. Mike never had a person who was knowledgeable, cared about him, that he trusted and listened to, who could advise him. And then, the question remains, ~would~ he have listened?

 дороги школа: you are wrong when you say that Tyson never had anyone that cared about him. His original management team did. But he dropped them for King. Had he retained his original team, he could have retired ten years ago fabulously wealthy. Bill Cayton did not have much personality but he was honest and a very good manager. Rooney was also a good trainer.

you are wrong when you say that Tyson never had anyone that cared about him. His original management team did. But he dropped them for King. Had he retained his original team, he could have retired ten years ago fabulously wealthy. Bill Cayton did not have much personality but he was honest and a very good manager. Rooney was also a good trainer.
came, it could also go. With the amount of money he earned, and ESPECIALLY the amount of money his fighting talent generated for so many others, there's no way he should be broke. If only he had invested in the right kinds of long term assets (like Larry Holmes did), he'd be rich beyond belief. I'm still not convinced that he doesn't have money left. Also, he's probably good for another big payday and maybe he can make that money last.As for average street joes fighting against someone with ring experience: I've done it. Let's put it this way, against other inexperienced guys my size, I'm very capable of holding my own or even winning with ease at times. But the few times I stepped in with someone with even a little REAL boxing experience, I was so far out of my league, it was laughable. The thing that's most amazing about trained boxers is how fast they throw punches. The speed and volume of punches is what will confuse an average guy. Sure, you might be good at taking a punch or even powerful enough to hurt someone with a punch---but you're in against a good boxer and you go to punch him and he's suddenly in a different place. You have a hard time avoiding his punches because they're coming from odd angles and your reflexes are one step behind. These guys took it easy on me and still I had trouble defending. But it's the same with anyone who practices a craft. I can hit a tennis ball around with most people, but once I played against a good amateur player and his serves were impossible to return. The ball went off his racquet and just looked like a long green tube speeding at me. I didn't mind losing the tennis match, but didn't really like having my mouth bleeding after losing to the boxer! Question: Who is the best pound for pound HEAVYWEIGHT of all time? Marciano? Our own J.Q.??? Holyfield?A lot of it had to do with two men he really trusted, Cus DiMato (I never know how to spell his name) and Jimmy Jacobs, both died, early on in his career. He still had Bill Cayton but Cayton was not a father figure to Mike, like Cus and Jacobs had been and Don King drove a wedge between Tyson and Cayton as well as trainer Kevin Rooney by using the race card that Mike could not trust whites, when it was King himself Mike should have been watching out for. King's own racist rhetoric convinced Mike that he cared about him because they were both black, when the truth was that King only cared about green, how much money he could get out of fighters, did a lot to drag Tyson down. | 2/12/04 03:02:27 PM| Angelo | Washington, DC || funktron@yahoo.com ||| 10 | Kent. True, Cus D'Mato (Is that the spelling???) had earned Tysons trust---Tyson loved him like real family---but beyond that, the early inner circle didn't hold up. You're right---Don King had an easy time breaking things up and getting it to go his way. Too bad for Tyson. Not only was he mismanaged financially, but I truly believe that his greatness as a fighter was hampered by bad management. Imagine Mike Tyson if he stayed the course he was on when he was 20 years old. If Tyson focused primarily on boxing and shunned the celebrity factor (no Robin Givens for example), he'd have been better off. If he had a strong management team and steady trainer (like Ali and Leonard had Dundee), he would have fought more frequently. I can't comment on his jail term---who knows if a better situation would have kept him out of this trouble---but I do know that inactivity in the ring spoiled his skills. If he kept busy enough as a Champion or on his comeback trail to fight three times a year and stay in training, he'd be more of a historic force. With that said: No excuses for losing to Buster Douglas and precious few excuses for losing to Holyfield. | actions often do little to elicit sympathy, but the man is a smart and extremely troubled boy/man, and in many ways a very tragic - possibly self destructive - figure. He may no longer know how, or possess the wherewithal to be the sort of socially acceptable, and media cuddly person the sports public likes to like.
Tyson may have already gone around the bend to ghost town, and the point of no return. He's certain to fight again, and will win some, because talent-wise, he's one of the very best elite who's ever stepped in a ring. Inexplicably, I've always had a sort of soft spot for the man, against all odds, and hope he does well, makes a few million, and manages it wisely, living the rest of his life in some peace. It's unfortunate that listening to him, one can begin to detect the effects of too many landed punches. A nice financial nest egg can soften that some (ask Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier), but I question now his ever finding peace from the demons...|
agrees.

| 2/13/04 01:16:20 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenton@aol.com | 10 |

I hope I didn't step on any toes in my last post by repeating something I heard quite a few months ago. I would hate to upset anyone in the Quarry family because, even though I should know better, Mrs. Quarry's comment was likely off of the record and I might have shown more thought before repeating it, especially at this later date. I would like to express my apologies if anyone was offended. The Quarrys are fine people and they should be treated as such.

| 2/13/04 07:12:55 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 |

ANGELO: thanks for your comments. If Tyson was sincere about making the most out of his last few years in boxing, he should go to an honest, old-timer like Angelo Dundee and tell that he knows he has very limited time left in boxing and wants some honest management and training. In that way, he will go the furthest and not have to watch his money. Just concentrate on what made him great in the first place.

| 2/13/04 09:23:31 AM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 |

Loyalty is loyalty and don't give me any of that "social graces" crap.

When judging public figures, social graces, the brief exposure via sound bytes, are almost always all we know of the person, other than anecdotal innuendo, which can spin out of control, like gossip in high school. Mike Tyson do doubt has many personal problems, possibly some chemical imbalances, which Zocor is only partially able to curb, but he's also obviously a very impulsive person, who says whatever enters his mind. There's an old saying, "Hell has nothing on the everyday thoughts of the average man and woman." When Thomas Hearns began coming of age in the big time, he saw a "social coach," someone who helped him conduct media interviews, learn what to say, what not to say, how to say it, so he didn't appear inarticulate, even gnomish. MT might have benefitted from such counseling.

I don't know all the true private ins and outs of his range of management. It would seem he did better early on than later, in terms of quality of association, but who knows? The King money had to be mighty appealing, and I'd have to wonder why his first group wasn't getting it for this immensely talented man? Maybe Mike wondered the same thing. Perhaps there were things that happened that didn't warrant further loyalty. Who knows?

Mike Tyson does have a faculty for destroying sympathy just when he starts to garner it. His entire life and the resultant inner demons have made him something of a wild animal in many ways, yet you can still see glimmers of someone who wants to be otherwise.

| 2/13/04 12:34:07 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 |

Also, a point to be made is that Thomas Hearns had the motivation and good sense to see a "social coach" and Tyson probably would have very little interest or patience for something like this. I don't view this exercise as humbling for the athletes at all. To the contrary, even Ivy League educated executives take training courses for various reasons, including interacting better with media, labor negotiators, etc. The smartest, best trained people in the world could benefit from a little advice to make them look their best in front of the public. More power to Hearns (I didn't know he had done this) and to Tyson---all I could say is it wouldn't have hurt to do the same.

| 2/13/04 12:48:07 PM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 |

What a load of nonsense about Tyson. His problems don't stem from a lack of social graces they stem from being an unappreciate person who dumped the people who brought him to the top and made him a millionaire simply because Don King promised MORE money and used racism as a wedge. I know plenty of guys from the ghetto who also lack social graces but they have enough class to keep their friends and remember who was good to them on the way up. All the sound byte prepping in the world won't give Mike Tyson a sense of appreciation or an understanding of the virtual of loyalty. When the Black Muslims wanted Ali to drop Dundee because he was white -- Ali said no. But a more accessible and less sullen Tyson would have played better to fans, the media and possibly corporate endorsements. Of course, social grace lessons probably wouldn't have kept him out of jail for the rape conviction or for assaulting a motorist who was involved in an accident with him. Psychiatric drugs maybe, but social lessons, no.

In the movie, "North Dallas Forty," Nick Nolte clumsily tries to pick up Dayle Haddon, is shot down, and asks for a second chance, commenting that, "I got all my social graces from football coaches." Thomas Hearns wisely realized that being thrust into the mainstream media storm, after a life in the ghetto and the Kronk gym might leave something of a communication gap that could be to his disadvantage. What you say is very true. Executives, political candidates, and others in the public eye, whose regard will be affected by how they come across, regularly avail themselves of services that will allow them to more positively present themselves, since publicly viewed people are judged on very brief, and often shallow images.

Tyson's milieu is a bit more difficult. His life and his responses to it has likely set up a vicious cycle/circle of bad choices begatting more of the same, with a resultant helplessness with any idea of ways to break out of them.

Massimo --

Very honestly speaking, I'd never trust Mike Tyson! I'd never trust to stay alone in the same room with him. If I said something he doesn't like I don't know how he could react. How many of you would trust? There are/were many fighters who are/were clearly good guys: Evander Holyfield, Primo Carnera, Lennox Lewis, Erminio Spalla, Joe Frazier, Francesco Damiani, Muhammed Ali', Nino Benvenuti etc. etc., but for Mike Tyson I really don't know. I haven't still understood if he is good or bad. To rape a girl it means being a monster. Nobody knows if he really did that to Desiree Washington in 1991. Nobody but Mike and Desiree.

I have no illusions that Tyson is just a person who has been misunderstood as he has done some bad things in his life. While denying that he raped the girl he was convicted of raping, he says he has done other bad things he was never caught and punished for, so he understood that he deserved to be in jail. What are some of the things he did but wasn't punished for? Did he rape others or did he murder someone? Only he knows this. It is ironic that people from higher classes continue to get training and education, such as corporate executives in the public eye would get public speaking training while when someone like Hearns gets the same type of training which he needed, people are surprised.

The same hold true for education because if someone from the working class, for example, continues to go to school, even if this person is working a job (but maybe not the best job), this person can be labeled a "professional student," which is a derogatory term because he or she is never seen as leaving the safety of school to take their place in the "real world." While someone from the upper classes never leaves school, so to speak, and this person gets a different, more positive label of university professor. The professor is allowed to study his or her whole life and it is not looked down upon even though he or she has never worked in the so called, "real world."
green all the way down the boulevard” mode. He does things because he wants to, and when. While "sociopath" is a broad wastebasket term in many respects, casually speaking, that's what he seems to be. Knowing the probable reasons for why he became what he is doesn't negate reality. Boxing is probably the only thing that's insulated society from more problems with Iron Mike. I wonder what'll happen once he's out, and possibly broke on top of it?

2/13/04 11:43:47 PM|charles anderson|ark.||ctjandfam@aol.com|||10|mike tyson is a bad apple. his fault or somebody else's, he is a bad apple.he has had his fair chances to to change, but he hasn't, maybe he he simply cannot. too bad, because he could have been the best that ever laced on a pair of gloves. maybe he and george can hook it up.

2/14/04 10:30:16 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|RS--I had just said that Joe Frazier is a good guy when, a few hours later, I have discovered that he has recently hit ( or hitten) his wife !I have read it on " TuttoSport", it was a very short article. If you buy it there in Chicago, you" ll read it too. It's very easy to read as it's written in Italian. There's no need of dictionaries !In an argument, I can see how things can get heated, but the more capable the man is, the more cowardly it is to assault anyone, particularly a woman. You're right. Maybe he isn't such a good guy, huh? |

2/14/04 12:32:52 PM|Patty Tackett|Grand Junction Colorado||Robbiec@gjrealsource.com|||10|Just wanted to say hello to my family. I am Jerry, Jimmy, Mike, Robert, Diana, Brenda, Janet, and Wilma's 1st cousin. Did I forget any one? It's been a long time. Love your website. Hope you will e-mail me back. Love you all.

2/14/04 12:45:18 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|If it is true Joe Frazier assaulted a woman, then that is a big disappointment. SAY IT AINT SO, JOE! But if it is true, he needs to be treated the same as if he was a plumber or locksmith, doctor, or whatever. The law should see no difference between celebrity athletes and "average Joe's."
case of being attacked by the man ~or~ the woman! However, the article said that Philadelphia statutes required an arrest when an assault is alleged to have taken place. Police minimizing things on the spot is how Jeffrey Dahmaer continued on - lazy cops being conned by a killer. Police minimizing things on the spot is how Jeffrey Dahmaer continued on - lazy cops being conned by a killer. OJ got off because of a legal team few could afford, and in the end because of a jury who may have been starstruck with what they'd always thought the Juice was. | 2/15/04 03:25:24 PM | Forest Ward | New York City | NY, NY | 110 | Joe Frazier, is one of my all time favorite fighters; and among living fighters he is my all time favorite. I saw the most recent picture of Joe on the internet after he was arrested, and he looks to be in failing health. The last time I saw him in person was about 10 years ago, and he looked great. But, for a heavy drinker 10 years is a long time, especially between the ages of 50 to 60. Add Joes advancing years, the punches to the head, the alcohol, diabetes (he already has had a toe removed) and it's easy to realize Joe has major health problems. I honesty love the guy for all that he has accomplished in boxing. He always gave 100%, and never made excuses after a loss. I pray for Joes well being | 2/16/04 07:54:08 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 110 | Didn't Frazier lose the toe because of an accident with a lawnmower while he was cutting grass? I didn't think it was because of Diabetes. Regarding his latest episode, I guess we all have to wait to see what the story is. Hopefully it's something that was a minor incident---though any type of domestic abuse isn't acceptabe. It was a shame for Riddick Bowe's family when he "kidnapped" them. I'm not sure they were ever in danger (I don't think Bowe would have harmed them) but it was a trauma for his estranged wife and children that they shouldn't have gone through. | 2/16/04 08:32:18 AM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 110 | I once read a story about a fighter who was accidentally kicked in the face by his young daughter while they were playing, and was very upset because of the split second instinct it triggered. Let's hope the Frazier incident was of such variety - a flash reaction under the influence, as opposed to a dominant life pattern response. I hadn't heard of a ~diabetes~ related toe loss. If true, that's not good. The Chicago Cub's diabetic Ron Santo is now a double amputee, having had multiple surgeries, removing more of his legs each time. A janitor at our building when we worked was going through a similar experience, starting with toes. With high blood pressure anyway, plus being overweight, drinking heavily is just about the worst thing JF could do (not to mention what it's doing to an already damaged brain). The incident occurred at 7:00 am, and if he was drunk at that hour, that's another very bad sign... | 2/16/04 09:24:27 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 110 | Of all places, Frazier was on the Howard Stern radio show a few years ago when the topic came up about him losing his toe. I thought it was because it was run over by a lawnmower. Frazier has been a regular on that show over the years and seems to get a kick out of appearing there. | 2/16/04 12:27:37 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | RS-Does JF have serious brain damage ? | 2/16/04 04:16:07 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Who was the MVP of the ALL STAR GAME ?Hey guys, Wilt who ? He ain' t even close !I have nothing against Wilt, he was a good pivot, he held his own in basketball, but... You cannot stop 34 !!!!!!!!!!!!!He could be a great wrestler and a great bouncer also if only he wanted ! | 2/16/04 05:18:50 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 110 | I saw a repeat on ESPN of an interview with Red Auerbach---and although he admitted to being biased, he said that Bill Russell outplayed Chamberlain most of the time. It was interesting because he said the statistics lied. His point was that if you look at the games closely, you'll see that the first half stats almost always favored Russell---close, but he would outscore and outrebound Chamberlain. Red said that by the end of the 3rd quarter, the Celtics would be far enough ahead that he would sit Russell. In what was left of the 3rd quarter and all of the 4th quarter, Chamberlain would dominate and rack up the points, playing against the Celtics bench. So at the end, it would look like he outplayed Russell, but in fact, wasn’t even playing against him and had been outplayed earlier. Of course, this reminds me of Ali losing to Norton then beating him in two close fights. I think history shows that Ali was comfortably better against most opponents than Norton, but for some reason, Norton gave him trouble. I think Chamberlain might have been the best ever, but Russell just knew how to play him. Plus, Boston's supporting cast was amazing. Bill Russell was a big part of all those championships, but he didn't do it alone!

The problem is that nobody on earth knows how to defend against Shaq. Ben Wallace looked like an amateur. "The Big Daddy" would have dunk (or dunked) right on Bill Russell’s face!

Bill Russell had a way of coming up with plans to offset his opponent's strength. He has a tremendous knowledge of basketball but he also was a master of the psychological aspects of the game. For example, he would find a spot on the court his opponent at center liked to set up on his opponent's offensive end of the court and Russell would race up the court and occupy that exact spot first, which would confuse and throw off his opponent's rhythm. One of one, Russell was outmatched by Wilt and he would be too by Shaq but he would find a way to be effective anyway. He might just let Shaq score all he wants and work on double teaming Shaq's teammates, to keep them from being as effective. Remember, basketball is a team game and no one player can win by himself. Russell knew this and worked it to as close to perfection as possible. Russell was like a second coach on the court but ironically, when he became a coach himself, he was never effective beyond the talented Celtic team. He just couldn't deal with players who didn't want to play for the team or who were not as talented as he was.

You mentioned the character Warren Coolidge from The White Shadow, Bill Russell made a guest appearance on the show and he played a one on one game with the actor who played Coolidge. Russell, completely outplayed the younger man with his better ball handling and over all skill, even though Russell was retired and very much past his best playing days. Professional players are better than everyone else and the guy who played Coolidge was an actor, not a basketball player.

Regarding Joe Frazier, I thought Joe lost his toe to diabetes, but that was only assumption on my part. Is it really appropriate on this site to expend so much space on basketball?

I've read many times over the last few years that Joe Frazier's toe was removed because of diabetes. I have never heard of the lawnmower thing. I have also read that he had quit drinking because of "The Sugars", as my grandmother calls diabetes. If it is true that he hit a woman, whatever the reason...I hope he get's help. Probably won't but I hope so.... trouble with interviews in which he's asked to think about something, and come to a conclusion, or deal with subjective, abstract topics. There's no doubt he has serious damage from all the terrible punches he's taken, not to mention his wars in gyms, but as I said, only doctors could tell you how much and his possible future. One common problem with repeated head injuries is a widening of the septum, often leading to problems controlling emotions, particularly temper.| 2/16/04 10:21:21 PM|Gerry Schultz|Cleveland, Ohio||jgschultz11@aol.com||9|
A lot of judging here lately. Frazier is human, is clearly on the downside of a life that included epic fame, which is addictive, even maddening to some, especially for blacks as they can rarely move on when it ends. I hope the Frazier thing is untrue, but if not just add it to the pile. People here like to dig on Tyson, both have my sympathy, as do others... Massimo and the cult of Shaq, if only you knew where the NBA was when Wilt played and where it has fallen to. I interviewed Ben Wallace when we both were in JC for the school paper, he's 6-7. If you can appreciate classic heavyweights like JQ, maybe it's time you saw the NBA of the same era, that was better then too... Quarry-Holyfield at 200 lbs. each has always been a great fantasy fight for me. Two of the real greats at that weight or lower. Jimmy D, Quarry-Foreman will always be the one that got away, terrible shame. Thanks again.| 2/16/04 11:43:47 PM|sheri|CA||lizardluver@hotmail.com||10| i have not written on this web site sense 1998, so i guess it is time. i am Jerry and James' niece sheri and brenda's daughter. i just wanted to say thank you to all of those who are and who are not fans of this site and my family. because of all of you (friend and/or foe) the memories live on. that is what most want in life...to be remembered.| 2/17/04 12:44:55 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|
Sorry Forest, but Massimo seems very interested in Shaq and in comparing him to players of the past.
It is probably better to talk about these things at a basketball site though.| 2/17/04 01:09:39 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com||10|
I SAW FRAZIER
WITH ALI ON TV IN 1991 DURING THIER 20TH ANNIVERSERY OF THIER 1ST FIGHT. FRAZIER AT THAT TIME AT 47 LOOKED VERY GOOD FOR HIS AGE, SINCE THAT DRINKING AND HIS SUGAR PROBLEMS HAVE LED TO HIS BEING A VERY WEAK LOOKING MAN, OLDER THAT HIS YEARS, I HAVE TO WONDER IF IT WAS HIS NOT BEATING ALI IN THOSE LAST 2 FIGHTS THAT LED HIM TO DRINK MORE OR MAYBE HIS EGO FOR BEING A HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMP, HE IS IN MY OPINION IN HIS FINAL FEW YEARS.| 2/17/04 04:03:39 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|
OK, I'm not gonna speak about basketball anymore! Just two more thing: Shaq is a great champion, he is second only to Dino Meneghin. The legendary Warren Coolidge ( Byron Stewart, 6' 8" just allowed Bill to outplay ( or of outplaying ) him for a matter of kindness. I don't think that Joe Frazier cares too much about his two losses against Ali'. When you are rich and in good health, what the hell do you care ?|
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|hi GERRY SCULTZ, yes that Foreman-Quarry 73'or 1974 bout would have been really something, Boxing of course is a battle of styles JQ would have probably been at least a 12-5 underdog. A lot of people thought Jerry might have been hurt permanently, for Foreman was so awesome. George also had a great chin. Did anyone see the punches Lyle hit Big George with? I still would rather had Jerry in there with Foreman for all the marbles, than say "smokin Joe". They interest that this particular bout would have been enormous say for Madison Square Garden. |

[2/17/04 01:46:20 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Guilty again about getting off of boxing topics but as far as the White Shadow goes, I liked Goldstein. He always stuck out like a "sore thumb." Whoever heard of a jewish kid playing on an inner-city L.A. basketball team anyway. Also, I am sure every team in the area had a kid named Salami too, right? These kids were the token whites every television team would have to have. It kind of throws off the concept of the white coach having to prove himself at the ghetto school anyway, doesn't it? The Doobies were cool and still are but who would have thought Rog, Duane, and Rerun would be into them?|

[2/17/04 02:11:03 PM|brenda|ca||meme@aol.com||||10|Ha Patty is it you? Have not heard from you in years. Is that your e-mail? We are going to plan a blood, inlaws, outlaws and friends, family reunion. Please get in touch. I feel bad for JF if he does have brain damage, its possible he knows not what he does. The lives of fighters, after their career is over, seems to be the forgotten aspect of a fighters life. The disabilities a man faces and they know it for awhile. It is just so overwhelming that they turn to anything familiar for comfort. This could be booze, drugs, family and now the foundation. Thanks bq|

[2/17/04 11:48:57 PM|Sean|New Jersey||emailppsinc@aol.com||||10|I'd like to take time to comment on Quarry - Foreman for a second. I think that styles make fights like most people believe and I think that Quarry had the perfect style to beat Foreman if he stays on his game. I seen Jerry fight about 20 time and think the best Jerry Quarry I ever seen was that one against Ron Lyle in Madison Square Garden. Jerry took Lyle apart, clearly out boxed and out punched when he needed to but most of all out thought Lyle. I think that George and Lyle had very similar styles George with a better jab and a better puncher but very similar with his straight forward, slow footed, unwillingness to adjust style. I think that if you take Lyle out that night and put in Big George in the night may have ended in similar fashion, maybe George even gets stopped late. Just one more quick point; most people when they talk about George and his career forget his fight with Gregorio Peralta in the Garden. Peralta gave George fits with his boxing and not folding under Georges aura and punches. Thats the one stand out fight and other reason I think Jerry would beat George and not just give him fits.|

[2/18/04 12:22:51 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Sean, could Jerry have beaten Foreman? On any given night Jerry would have a good chance of winning because as you point out, styles make fights. Most of the time though George would win as he was too big and strong for Jerry. It would not be an easy fight and Foreman would have trouble with Jerry, unlike his fights with Frazier and Norton, who both beat Jerry, although Norton did catch Jerry on the way down. The comparison to Peralta is a good one and one can argue that Jerry had a similar style to Peralta and that Jerry hit harder than Peralta. But also remember the Foreman Peralta gave tough fights to was still not fully mature physically and George was stronger when he became champion. I do believe that Jerry could have beaten Foreman on the night Foreman lost his title to Ali and also on the night Foreman lost to Jimmy Young. For whatever reason (the connection likely was that George couldn't handle the heat), Foreman just didn't have it on both of those nights. Take nothing away from Ali's or Young's wins but we were not seeing Foreman at his best. The talk that the fix was in in Zaire, when Ali beat Foreman, doesn't hold water when you consider the Young fight also showed George couldn't handle the heat. I have never heard anyone claim Foreman's fight with Young was fixed. Now that really would be absurd! I don't think Jerry could have beaten Foreman at Foreman's very best, the nights he kayoed Frazier and Norton.

I have seen a synthesis of Foreman-Peralta 1, was really an exciting fight! Big George won clearly, he hit Peralta with many hard punches. Gregorio "Goyo" showed a great chin! However, Peralta held his own in that fight. Not many humans ever fought as good Big George as Peralta. Sorry for talking about boxing. Back to "White Shadow"! I'm sorry for Ken Howard's death! I spent a good time watching "White Shadow"! Is Warren still in good shape? Thanks!

The Gregero Peralta vs George Foreman fight always surprised me. Peralta managed to go the distance with probably the hardest hitting heavy of all time, but Peralta was stopped by Willie Pastrano probably the lightest hitting lightheavy weight champion of all time. It was on cuts that he got stopped (and Peralta was a big favorite to win title having beaten Pastrano in a non-title fight) but he was still stopped by him. Mass: I saw ur hero Carnera a couple weeks ago on espn classics he was ahhhh ummm big. How come u never mention Nino Benvenuti? His shoe size not big enough for u? You could fantasize about fighting Nino but Primo way to big for you, his finger as big as your arm!

I have almost never mentioned Nino Benvenuti for 2 good reasons. The heavyweight division is THE DIVISION in boxing. A light-weight champ would have his ass whipped in a bar's brawl. To whip the HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMP's ass it needs Calvin Lane... For me it's hard to talk about someone with a shoe size under 13in! Nino Benvenuti doesn't need to be defended! His greatness is evident for everyone! He won a gold medal in Rome in 1960 and beat Emile Griffith twice.

Foreman improved steadily after the Peralta fights, especially in regards to balance, footwork, and power. It is unfair to evaluate him by those kiddish performances. It is like judging JQ by his loss to Eddie Machen early in his career. Jerry improved 200% in later years and was far better than that one fight would indicate.

In recent months I've obtained films of Peralta. I have him fighting Wayne Thorton, and the second fight with Pastrano (I have previously seen the Foreman fights). Peralta was a heck of a fighter. He was a very good scientific boxer, who was willing to mix and trade punches. His problem was that he was too big to be a lightheavy weight, and to small to be a heavyweight. Willie Pastrano probably fought the best fight of his life beating Peralta in the second fight. It was a very interesting fight. When boxing is done right, it's a great sport, thats how I felt watching Peralta-Pastrano II.

Yes, Peralta was a very good fighter, a likely winner of the crusierweight title had the division been around when he fought. In addition to his fights with Foreman and Pastrano, Peralta had two fights a piece against Ron Lyle and Oscar Bonevena, He lost a decision to both of them but held each of these fighters to a draw in their other meetings. Another factor that caused problems with Peralta for Foreman was the fact that Peralta had over 90 pro fights when they first fought compared to about 16 for Foreman, a tremendous advantage in experience for Peralta.
given George a tough fight at any point of Georges career. I remember George stopped Peralta in their second meeting (10 tough rounds). The fight Pastrano had with Peralta sticks with me because no one expected Pastrano to win and Willie was criticized (esp. by Archie Moore) for not having a punch. Pastrano came out bombing from the opening bell and won by tko in 6th round. Couple other interesting things about Pastrano is he won title as big underdog against the great Harold Johnson as a substitute for a substitute. I forget who the 2 fighters were that had to miss out on title chances but Willie really cashed in on his big chance. I also heard that Ali picked up a lot of boxing knowledge from Pastrano. They had same trainer Angelo Dundee.

I have just seen a wide synthesis of Ali'-Bonavena and it was a very close fight! I'm not sure that Ali' was ahead after 14 rounds. Oscar hit him with several hard left hooks. What a tough fighter Oscar was! A hell of a fighter! Even if his style was quite clumsy he knew how to fight, he knew all the tricks and his left hook was very hard. Ali' looked in trouble at the end of round 9. If that fight were 12 rounds fight maybe Oscar would have won on points, or obtained a draw. The simple fact that Peralta held his own twice against Bonavena and Small George proves he was a great fighter!

I always felt that if there had been a Cruiserweight division at the time, Peralta would have been a champion. I think him and Patterson would have been a good match up. Bonavana was what I call akwardly clever. He was a strong guy, and a clumsy cutie. Ali had only gone three rounds since him comeback (against JQ) and needed to work off a lot of rust -- so Bonavena was perfect for him. Had Ali had about two more tune-up before the first Frazier fight, he may have won. John, Ali needed two more fights after Jerry and Bonevena before he went after Frazier. My plan for him would have been two fights with fighters below the top ten contenders, then Bonevena, and Jerry after this, before Frazier. The problem was, nobody except Jerry and Bonevena would fight him. Ali didn't make the same mistake twice by not being totally prepared for his second comeback title shot. He fought about fourteen times against a lot of the current contenders of the times, including his rematch with Jerry and his loss and win against Norton, and his rematch win over Fraizer, who had lost the title to George Foreman, before challenging Foreman for the title.

There dozens of fighters who would have fought Ali when he wanted to return but of course, you could be correct that more fighters were willing to take on Ali and the time factor was definitely a consideration because as I said before, the threat of Ali going to jail was real, as Forest states also. Ideally of course Ali would have been better prepared for Frazier had he had more than two tune up fights before his title shot. It was still a great victory for Frazier as Ali did fight at a high level. Frazier/Ali one will always be one of the best fights of all time and it truly lived up to its title of Superfight.

Yeah the ninth round of Ali vs Oscar fight was the focal point of the fight. Before the fight Ali promised he'd knockout Oscar in the 9th, so Oscar fought doubly hard in that round. After the fight Ali admitted he almost got knocked himself in that round. I remember Bonavena was a really wild acting guy (I seen him play real rough with Howard Cosell, punching him in the stomach), so much so that Ali didn't go into his usual crazy acts with him. Ali probably figured Oscar would over react and go nuts for real on him.Oscar was also considered to be the strongest heavy in the division at that time. Ring magazine made a big deal of him coming from Argentina. They compared him to Luis Firpo, the fighter from same place, that knocked Jack Dempsey out of the ring before Dempsey K O'ed him.

Oscar was also considered to be the strongest heavy in the division at that time. Ring magazine made a big deal of him coming from Argentina. They compared him to Luis Firpo, the fighter from same place, that knocked Jack Dempsey out of the ring before Dempsey K O'ed him.

[2/20/04 10:16:01 PM] Gerry Schultz | Ohio || jgschultz11@aol.com ||||| 10 | Kent, Sean, John G. all make good points regarding Foreman-Quarry. I think Jerry would have really bothered George for a while, but today, these guys would not even talk about meeting as they would be 20-25 lbs. apart. It isn't just size, Foreman must be given his due. JQ's wins versus Lyle and Shavers proved that bullrushing and glaring not only didn't work, against Jerry it'll get you beat. Foreman was clearly better than both of these very good fighters. As Jimmy D says, it would have been a great match anyway... Massimo, 1960 Rome Olympics had a lot of great performances in many events, including basketball. 5 Hall of Famers on the USA team that year... and yeah, that Clay kid was pretty good too. Oh yeah, I like the Doobie Bros also, well named, but very talented band. I wonder who Jerry's favorite music performers were?

[2/21/04 11:41:07 AM] Jimmy Dorsey | Ventura, California || ronnyrains@yahoo.com ||||| 10 | I read an article where Luis Firpo died rich, and with his smarts intact, I sure hope it was true, and very rare, Quarry-Bonavena would have been very interesting, their career's just did not need the other, as both had their sights on other fights ALI, Frazier, Lyle the WBA tournament etc. Gregorio Peralta could have had other interesting matchups Henry Cooper, Jimmy Ellis, George Chuvalo, Joe Bugner, Duane Bobick etc.

[2/23/04 07:29:00 AM] John Gerard | NYC || rock289z@yahoo.com ||||| 10 | Yes, not only did Firpo die rich he was very generous to his old opponent Jack Dempsey when the stock market took much of Jack's earnings. He had a reputation for being cheap, but actually at times he was very generous.

[2/23/04 07:47:30 AM] Massimo Cini | Roma ||| 10 | "I'll outspeed that big Carnera fellow" said the great Tommy Loughran before their 1934 bout. He had just beaten the giant Ray Impelletiere, Max Baer, Ernie Schaff and all the best heavyweights of that time and so he thought he could whip Carnera too. He was wrong. He couldn't survive Primo's shuffle!

[2/23/04 04:25:12 PM] Joyce Ferre | Orange County, California || bonyknees@msn.com ||||| 10 | This is a wonderful site! I knew Jerry briefly back in the early 80's. It's true, he was a wonderful, funny, non-pretentious individual not to mention a great athlete. He showed me his great mimic of "Ali" and his softer side. His love for his sport and family stood out. We will all remember and miss him. God Bless, Jerry Q.

[2/23/04 06:26:36 PM] Kent | La Habra, California || kentallenent@aol.com ||||| 10 | Joyce, did you meet Jerry in Anaheim Hills? I lived there for about a year but I never saw him but I heard he lived there around the early 80's.

[3/1/04 03:37:23 PM] Carl Weingarten | TJQF ||| 10 | Hello Everyone,

[3/2/04 01:50:57 PM] kookooroo | ny || kookooclock00@yahoo.com ||||| 10 | I KNOW FOR A FACT THAT JERRY WAS NOT ONLY A FAN OF ELVIS' BUT KNEW HIM AND GOT BACKSTAGE PASSES TO SOME OF HIS SHOWS. WHILE I USED TO LIKE THE BEATLES, I DON'T LISTEN TO THEM ANYMORE, VERY TIRED OF THEIR MUSIC, EXCEPT FOR SERGEANT PEPPERS & ABBY ROAD ALBUMS, THE REST IS BUBBLEGUM MUSIC, WHICH TOMMY ROE WAS KING OF, WHO I LIKED, HE WORE HIS HAIR LIKE JERRY TOO :))

GLAD TO SEE WE'RE UP AND RUNNING AGAIN...HOPE IT STAYS THAT WAY...THIS WAS VERY IMPORTANT TO MY FATHER JAMES (MR.JIMMY) AND UNCLE JERRY.....THANKS...

Great to have the site back up! I think it's pretty well-documented that Jerry was likeable and down-to-earth with the fans. I'll also add that unlike other boxing/sports V.I.P. families, the whole Quarry clan seem to be well grounded, good people. We know that Mr. Jimmy started this site to coincide with furthering the foundation. It's good to get the legislation updates and keep an open dialogue about the real purpose here. Of course, it's also fun to post our great boxing memories, dream match-ups, predictions, etc. (Yes, even Massimo's basketball and TV series references are great!). Let's all keep visiting, expressing our views, and let the Quarry's know how much we appreciate their family (and extended "family members" like Kent, who consistently contribute to this forum). Here's a question to start a new volley: Does anyone think that Leon Spinks would have had a chance against Ken Norton back in 1978-79? Remember, Spinks lost the WBC title by not defending against Ken Norton. Instead, Spinks gave Ali a rematch and it was only for the WBA crown since the WBC stripped him for not fighting Norton. Is there any chance that if Spinks would have defended against Norton, he would have won? Then, if he gave Ali a rematch, it would be for both titles. This would have changed history, since Norton wouldn't have been awarded the WBC crown---and wouldn't have lost it to Larry Holmes! Spinks vs. Norton: How would this have played out?

Yes Koo Koo, Jerry was a big Elvis fan and he did meet Elvis. I just didn't know if he was Jerry's all time favorite, though I am guessing he was.

I am also a big Elvis fan and I did meet Elvis. I just didn't know if he was Jerry's all time favorite, though I am guessing he was.

Leon was just a light heavy but a fierce fighter, he didn't have the knock out power to intimidate Norton but he was so fast and had such good head movement he would have given Norton problems and could definately have beaten Norton if he was at his best. But Leon wasn't going to be on top for long. He had pure heart and great skills he just shot his bolt in the amatuers. So the night he beat Ali I think he could have beaten Norton. After the distractions of winning the title maybe not. Leon and Norton weren't in the same class as amateurs, Leon won everything in the amateurs.

| 3/3/04 01:58:46 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA |

| 3/3/04 02:52:40 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca |

HI Fran: Fran this is just boxing talk (so please don't be offended) I personally think Norton would have personally killed Leon Spinks. Spinks ducked him to where they WBC had to intervene and take away his title. For some reason Norton gets a little underrated on this great site. I very much doubt it, But Norton might have had the skills to beat Jerry Quarry his whole career. Although JQ SUPPOSEDLY KO'D HIM 1970 in a sparring match. Of course if Quarry would have won a title, he'd have only lost it in the ring, I think Norton would have ko'd Leon, much like he did Randy Stephens, where he actually had to wait and let him fall. TAKE CARE!

| 3/3/04 04:22:06 PM | Fran | Philly |

If Leon could get under Ali's Jab what makes you think he couldn't get under Nortons. Pure boxing wise Norton wasn't in Leon's class. They were both on the same all marine team and Leon went way farther than Norton. Norton was big and strong and was able to last and learn and make a name for himself in the pros. Leon beat anyone they threw in front of him he was just too small. Anyway just look at the amateur career of both. Norton was ko'd by Shavers and would have been kaed by Lyle or Mac Foster. Norton just had a name.... Jerry would have iced him in a prime vrs prime.

Muhammad Ali' wasn't that good anymore when he fought Spinks. He was, at that time, just an average heavyweight. I think that a 36 years old Lenox Lewis was a lot ( or much) stronger. I have recently seen Charles-Louis and I have to say that a 36 years old Louis would have beaten a 36 years old Ali'. It was an exciting and very close fight. Both fighters fought almost all the fight with a closed eye and showed great heart. Both were tough warriors. Ali'-Tyson, both 36, would have been an interesting fight among two great "has been" fighters. The James Toney who has beaten Holyfield, would have without a doubt beaten the Ali' who fought Spinks. But, at his best, Ali' probably was the fourth best heavyweight ever ( after Spalla, Carnera and Damiani). That is a good placing in history. He has nothing to be ashamed of. FS; Lennox Lewis' s shoe size is 15.5in. He can be proud of his feet! Among the heavyweight champs he is second only to Da Preem. I'm back, cheers ! FS; Angelo, thanks ! You' re cool, and you know what are the important things in life.

| 3/3/04 05:32:16 PM | VIDEO POST | The Jerry Quarry Foundation |

<image src="/images/realwedgebk.jpg"> <Font color="lime">b>VIDEO POST
A dedication to our friend Massimo Giulio Leonardo Cini!

Max Baer vs Primo Carnera | Rounds 1-2 | New York | June 14, 1934 | Play Video ——> <A HREF="http://www.jerryquarry.com/media/baercarnera56k.ram">56K <&#124> <A HREF="http://www.jerryquarry.com/media/baercarnera150k.ram">DSL | 3/3/04 05:43:54 PM | M.G.L. Cini | Roma | 4 | 10 | Oh thanks! Now everyone will see that Primo Carnera was the greatest! | 3/3/04 05:52:36 PM | M.G.L | Roma | 4 | 10 | Baer 3 times down in the second round...

What did I say? |3/3/04 10:04:17 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | Kentallenent@aol.com | 4 | 10 | Fran, as Massimo points out, the Ali L. Spinks was able to get inside on was not the same Ali anywhere near his best. Even the Ali who Norton beat in their first fight was much better than the version Spinks beat. Spinks could not have gotten inside Ali unless Ali had nothing left, which is how Ali was when he fought Spinks. Spinks would not have gotten inside a still close to his prime Norton. I repeat, Norton beats Spinks handily. | 3/4/04 03:13:25 AM | Fran | Philly | plc7755@aol.com | 4 | 10 | Spinks was a razor sharp amatuer with all the moves and speed and combination punching, things that Norton never posessed. Leon was just a lightheavy in reality who for a few years was unbeatable. I understand your view is much more logical than mine but I was on the same team in the Marines as Leon and he was the best in the world he was an Olympic champ and never got the respect he should have. | 3/4/04 05:34:46 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | Kentallenent@aol.com | 4 | 10 | Fran, I respect Leon Spinks as he did something most fighters only dream of. He beat the man, who beat the man, to become heavyweight champion of the world. He also was an olympic gold medalist. No matter what else happens in his life, no one can take those honors away from him. | I just think Ken Norton was a better fighter. | 3/4/04 11:22:46 AM | Mormon Joe West | Bell Gardens, CA | hurricanego@aol.com | 4 | 10 | Los Angeles Times, Sports section, page 1, March 4, 2004 | Back From the Brink | Boxer 'Indian Red' Lopez wandered for years after losing world title bouts. Now, he will be reunited with his family and inducted into Hall of Fame. | By Diane Pucin, Times Staff Writer | FORT WORTH — Ernie "Indian Red" Lopez was lost, and now he is found. | That is the short version of how it has come to be that Lopez, a boxer of some popularity in Southern California in the 1960s and '70s, will be inducted Saturday into the California Boxing Hall of Fame. | It is an honor that Lopez's tenacious and loving family had feared might be a posthumous one. But after 12 years out of contact with relatives, the former welterweight contender turned up in a homeless shelter here last month, setting the stage for a long-awaited reunion today. | Lopez — son of Lucille May Hackford Lopez, a Ute Indian, and Ernest Paul Lopez, a Juaneno Mission Indian — was born with flaming red hair and stubborn courage, strong legs and knuckles of steel. So Lopez became a boxer, as his father had been and his older brother Leonard was and his younger brother Danny would become. And Lopez came upon his nickname because of his red hair and Native American heritage. | Twice Lopez fought for the world welterweight title in front of sellout crowds of more than 14,000 at the Forum, and twice he was laid out by Jose "Mantequilla" Napoles. Napoles, a tough Cuban who had found his way to Mexico, beat Lopez once in 15 rounds and once on a seventh-round knockout. | That knockout hurt more than any other. By all accounts, Lopez had won the first six rounds. He had cut Napoles over and under the eye and on the bridge of the nose. But at the start of the seventh, Napoles, hardly able to see, caught Lopez flush on the face. It was a knockout punch. Lopez lay unmoving on the canvas for three minutes while Napoles cradled Lopez's head and wailed, "Please wake up. Please wake up." Lopez woke up, but his life was never quite the same. "I think Ernie lost his self-esteem when he didn't win the title," said Marcia Iannone, his former wife.
It was the losses to Napoles and the divorce that sent Ernie into a tailspin," said Ernie's brother Danny "Little Red" Lopez. "He was a hurt man." Lopez sat in the cluttered office of Dennis Pennington, program manager for the Presbyterian Night Shelter here, earlier this week. Although the shelter is closed during the day, Lopez remained inside. Pennington did not want to lose track of Lopez, who until two weeks ago had been lost track of for 12 years. After his boxing career ended in 1974, and after his divorce, Lopez became a wanderer. He would show up to visit his four children — daughters Cindy, Kami and Tracy and son Lance — every few months. He would work construction and odd jobs for a while, then he would go away. In 1992, Lopez came to stay with Cindy in San Bernardino, where he was visited by his other three children and some of his seven brothers and sisters. He eventually left, but his pattern had been to call someone in the family, a child or a sibling, at least once a year. A year, two, three went by and Lopez never called anyone. Even though she was remarried to R.H. Iannone, a school superintendent, and living happily in Alta Loma, Marcia said she never lost her affection for Lopez. Her children, now grown and with their own families, always ached to have their father in their lives. So every couple of years, Iannone would contact police, asking for help in tracking down Lopez. But it isn't the job of detectives to find adults who wander. As the years passed, his children began to think the worst.

"I feared he was dead," said Lance Lopez, 38, who lives in Utah with his five children. A few months ago, Tracy Hadaway, 35, Lopez's youngest daughter, saw an item in the Los Angeles Times that mentioned her father as well as Don Fraser, president of the California Boxing Hall of Fame and promoter of many of Lopez's fights. Hadaway called Fraser, telling him about Lopez's disappearance and wondering whether he could help. While he did not think he could do much to find Lopez, Fraser recalled in an interview this week, he realized that Lopez belonged in the Hall of Fame. Determined either to find Lopez or to learn for certain that he was dead, the children and Iannone made another call to the Los Angeles police. "I told them there really wasn't much we could do," said Det. Christine Beltran. "This typically isn't what we consider a missing person. Their father was a man who went away." But Beltran was also touched by the circumstance. "They told me about the honor of the Hall of Fame," she said. "It seemed like we should make an effort." Her checks of arrest and death records turned up nothing.

While Beltran said she could not disclose how she located Lopez, Iannone said she received a phone call about two weeks ago from the detective. Beltran said Lopez's Social Security number had come up in association with the Presbyterian Night Shelter. Iannone called the shelter. Yes, she was told, Ernie Lopez was there. "Ernie, you've been lost for a long time," Iannone told him. "I'm not lost," Lopez replied. "I'm right here." Over the last week, joyous phone calls have been exchanged among father and children. Fraser has arranged for Lopez to fly to Los Angeles today. He will be taken shopping for new clothes. About 40 members of his family will gather, including 23 grandchildren. Lopez is 58 and looks older. His red hair has turned bright white. He wore a blue stocking cap, a faded flannel shirt, worn jeans and boots covered with dirt. His eyes were bright, his smile wide. "This is the humblest man I've ever met," Pennington said. And Lopez asked five times, "Why are they doing this for me? I wasn't good enough for the Hall of Fame." "Yes he is," Fraser said. "Absolutely." Hedgemon Lewis, who fought Lopez three times and lost twice, called Lopez a ferocious fighter. "He was aggressive and always on the attack," said Lewis, who was inducted into the Hall of Fame last year. "Ernie was a crowd-pleaser because he was a fighter. Period. He fought." Ryan O'Neal, the actor of "Love Story" fame, was Lewis' manager when Lewis fought Lopez. "Lopez was a warrior," O'Neal said. "He was also a gentleman, a decent man. But as a fighter, Lopez would hit the other guy so much he would become exhausted. Because of that, Lopez would always fill an arena, because he would give the fans their money's worth... It was his heart that made him win."

For much of his career, Lopez fought out of Los Angeles' Main Street Gym. He and his brother Danny, who won a world championship, were managed by Howie Steindler. "Howie treated me like a son," Lopez said. "I loved Howie." Lopez was born on the Ute Indian Reservation in Fort Duchesne, Utah, the third of eight children.

"Our life wasn't easy," said a sister, Naomi Adams. "There was trouble at home and many of us ended up in foster care." Lopez says his father taught him to box. "But sometimes I learned when I watched my father hit my mother," Lopez said.

Lopez met Marcia when they were students at Orem High School, and the couple moved to Pasadena when Lopez began fighting out of the Pasadena YMCA. Over a decade, Lopez compiled a 51-18-1 record, fighting champions such as Napoles, Emile Griffith and Katsuya Nakano. He fought in England, Hawaii, Japan and Mexico as well as all over Southern California and Nevada. "My biggest purse was $40,000," Lopez recalled. "But it's gone." Lou Filippo, 79, a veteran referee from Downey who worked many of Lopez's fights, says that if Napoles hadn't been in Lopez's way, "Ernie would have been a great champion.... I feel so good for him. He deserves this. I hate to say it, but when I heard his story, it brought tears to my eyes." Fraser said he was going to introduce Lopez at Saturday's induction in the City of Commerce, "but I think I'm going to ask someone else because I will not be able to keep from breaking down." Lopez says he's not sure when, how or why he came to Fort Worth. He remembers living with a church family in Missouri, shoveling snow for a hotel owner in Portland, Maine, sleeping in New York's Central Park, working construction in Florida and cleaning hotel rooms in Phoenix. "Twice at that hotel, I went to clean a room and found a dead body," Lopez said. "After the second time, I left." Lance Lopez has spent many years collecting bits and pieces of his father's boxing career. "I've found video clips of some of his matches by searching the Internet," he said. "I've turned up some newspaper clippings." He wants to share these things and some other memories with his father. "I remember we'd have this big jar of silver dollars on a shelf," Lance said. "Whenever I'd hear the ice cream man coming, I'd grab one of those silver dollars. Later on I found out that fight fans had thrown those silver dollars into the ring as tips." On Halloween, Lance would dress up in his father's boxing robe, recalling that people would stop him and say, "Oh my goodness! Do you know Indian Red?" Many years later, Lance took Ernie to the Forum to watch boxing. "I snuck down during the first match. Gil Clancy was there. I told Gil my dad was in the stands. Gil said, 'Oh, no, you're kidding. Indian Red is here?' Before I could even get back to the seats, they were introducing my dad. He got a standing ovation." Pennington and others at the shelter have worked hard to get Lopez ready for his flight home. They took him shopping for pants and shoes, and to the airport for a dry run. Pennington told Lopez he might have to take off his shoes for security "because of 9/11." "What's that?" Lopez asked. Pennington says he hopes that when Lopez gets on the plane today, that it is a one-way trip: "We all hope he finds a home." Daughter Kami, who lives in Apple Valley with her six children and her husband, William Watkins, gets choked up when she considers the reunion this weekend. "I had a dream years ago that my dad had died," Kami said. "It really, really scared me. From that time on we all started pitching in, being more proactive about finding him. We'd call police stations in places we knew where he had been, checked out unidentified John Does." "It's very exciting we have found him alive but also very sad that he was so alone. We just want him to know now that he is always welcome in any of our homes."
Ernie Lopez was a solid, hard-punching fighter who stood in with the best of them. Along with Jerry Quarry, Mando Ramos, Carlos Palomino, Hedgemon Lewis, George (Scrap Iron) Johnson, Reuben Navarro, Frankie Crawford, Baby Cassius, Joey Orbillo and other great kids from the area, Ernie was one of the outstanding fighters in Aileen Eaton's Olympic Auditorium heyday in Los Angeles, lasting from the mid-60s to the mid-70s. Ernie was not too hard to hit, but very hard to hurt, and he punched like a mule kick. I just hope to God he's not too badly impaired now. The funny thing is that he looks real good in his current photos. Where is Danny?

He was of course a great friend of Jerry's, Last i'd heard when living in Laughlin Nevada, a few people said Ernie was living at the Colorado River, on the banks of the Arizona side, They said it was Danny, But (BEING A BOXING FAN, I KNEW IT WAS ERNIE). HE WAS ON A LOT OF TV SHOW, One in particular he ended Sugar Ray Robinson's TV CAREER-might have been on MANNIX. Of course he should be in the California Hall of Fame. "Irish" Gil King a great California welterweight, Originally from Ohio, Always talked about Ernie and Jerry, and how he raced Quarry's El CAMINO. When they were at the Massacre Canyon INN Training facility, Nearby San Jacinto. King had a great record. One heck of a 147lb puncher Like Ernie "Red" Lopez. Last I'd seen Danny they were interviewing him on America's most wanted. And the Howie STIENDLER murder. I can remember Sugar Ray Robinson putting on 3-round exhibitions at the Olympic vs Mike Nixon in 1971 and 1972.

Lopez was a great contender that article was very touching hope he gets back with his family. Thanks for putting that up. I remember watching the tape delays of fights from the forum and saw all those guys. Napoles was one of the all time greats I haven't seen a tape or anything of him since the 70's I'd like to see tapes of him and Olivares from back then any on the web???? Take care everyone...

I'm not gonna run Neon LEON DOWN, but just who did he knock-out of any consequence? I saw him lose about every round vs Scott LeDoux. And was granted a draw. (a guy Duane Bobick owned) Muhammad Ali himself said, he hit like a baby. Not even in the same league as Norton 1978. They threw Spinks to the wolves and made a dollar off him, just like they do 90% of all fighter's. He's in Joplin Missouri a lot, I've had friends seen him there and he's very corgial. Had a terrible up-bringing in East St. Louis (there was no Cus D'Matto for Spinks). Was a crowd-pleaser, who was there to give fans their money's worth. Won a world title that counts for something. And yes had an impeccable amateur record as a light-heavy.

3/4/04 02:32:32 PM | Kent | La Habra, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | Good to hear Indian Red Lopez will be getting his just due this Saturday at the California boxing hall of fame awards ceremony. I am honored to be attending, as I will also be there to cheer for our own Mike Quarry and of course Jerry, who is also being honored posthumously. I hope I get to meet Indian Red, a fellow California Mission Indian, as I am part Luiseño Mission Indian.

3/4/04 09:59:59 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia90101@aol.com | Kent, is it this weekend that Uncle Mike, is being inducted in Boxing Hall of Fame?

3/4/04 11:50:51 PM | Kent | La Habra, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | Yes Sonia, Mike is being honored by the California boxing hall of fame this Saturday, March 6, at a luncheon at 11 AM at Stevens Steak House in the City of Commerce. I wish I had known that some of the Quarry family didn't know when it was as I would have posted it here. I do know Brenda posted the telephone number and contact name on how to get tickets about three weeks ago. That is how I got my ticket.

3/5/04 02:13:28 AM | Kookoo | ny | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | YOU PEOPLE ARE ALL SICK, WHAT A BUNCH OF WIMPS, LET ME BREAK OUT MY VIOLIN, CRY ME A RIVER KENT!

3/5/04 02:13:28 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia90101@aol.com | Just seen on the news that Mr. Lopez, had been missing for 11 yrs, and they found him in a homeless shelter. When Spinks beat him---what's more, by training harder and focusing more on the rematch, Ali basically pitched a shutout against Leon. Of course, later, he dropped to, I think, about 217 1/2 to fight Holmes (mostly by diet pills unfortunately) and got his clock cleaned. He was probably better off at the later point, heavier, when he fought Berbick and again he lost. Norton should have been able to take Spinks with relative ease, but style make fights and one never really knows until they get it on! Leon was like a poor man's Joe Frazier and who knows, that type of pressure might have bothered Norton. But once Norton figured out that Spinks didn't have the punch to take him out, I think he'd fight aggressively and win going away.

3/5/04 01:53:29 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | usual | I've mentioned in other forums, as well as in RL, the stories of fighters whose lives have turned sour, particularly after retirement. The overwhelming, almost unanimous opinion is that, "We don't even get the ~chance~ to make that kind of money, or be that famous - it's tough if they wind up broke or busted up. They knew what could happen."
playing, is clearly tempered by hidden resentment, and later by indifference if they fall on hard times. This has been hard on players who actually thought all those people loved him for ~him~. Boxing is loosely "controlled," and fighters are not concentrated under the financial umbrella/control of owners as is the case in the big four. There is no union, or joining together of fighters of any sort, to exert pressure. Unlike other pro sports, you don't have to be good to fight professionally, so those fighters don't have a bargaining position at all.

One can debate till the cows come home whether athletes (or entertainers of any sort) should make the kind of money they do, but that's the way it is, and the owners of the team sports (and promoters in the individual sports of golf and tennis) make out like hounds, so why not? The McCaskey family, who own the Chicago Bears, make in the neighborhood of fifty million a year, AFTER taxes, salaries, and various other expenses. | Shouldn't the owners make the lion's share? They take all the financial risk to put themselves in a position to acquire a franchise, then they shouldn't make a lot of money? Why not? The players deserve a high salary because they put the fans in the seats. If the salaries go too high, or the owners get to greedy, or both, and ticket prices skyrocket----fans always have the option of not supporting the sport. If the NFL goes nuts and decides to make the Super Bowl pay per view, or if regular season games no longer appear on broadcast TV, again, the fans control their own wallets and can find something else to do on Sundays. But as long as people can afford the product, and want to support it, I say more power to the owners and players. Now, on the topic of former boxers and former athletes in general: What "hidden resentment" are you referring to? I think fans who resent athletes salaries/success/lifestyles don't keep it hidden, they definitely give their opinion. And after an athlete's retirement, in most cases, the fans are still mesmerized. They'll pay money at card shows to have old timers sign something. They'll buy former players drinks at a bar. Hell, they'll even HIRE unqualified people because they have great memories of when these people competed at a high level. No, I don't think retired athletes have it bad because of any hidden resentment. Instead, I think it's because they become accustomed to, and expect God-like treatment and let's face it, when they're no longer playing, they just aren't as relevant. And when they stop playing and stop making the huge money, if they burned it all having a life that most wage slaves can only dream about, what are we supposed to do about it, pitch in so they can have a new Escalade? That isn't hidden resentment talking, it's reality. For every Larry Holmes, who invested wisely, stayed grounded, and now owns businesses has the respect of his community, I'm sure there's a Mike Tyson who "went Hollywood" and spent every nickel he made on tasteless crap. It's not the fans' fault. | But what about someone like Ernie Lopez, who came along before the really big money came pouring in? I thought that is what we were talking about.

The players deserve a high salary because they put the fans in the seats. And the public demands winners and thrills. A bit of trivia: you could buy an NFL team for $50,000 back in the league's early days. Now, the top franchises would sell for close to a billion. Fans always have the option of not supporting the sport. That doesn't happen though. Fans stop coming when teams are consistently lousy, and not even then, always. Teams serve many purposes for its fans, going way beyond the big, lucrative businesses they really are. It can get pretty ridiculous sometimes, but intense emotion always has that potential, in any area.What "hidden resentment" are you referring to? Let's call it ambivalence instead, love/hate. The fan finds it absurd that players make millions for playing a game, and it ~is~ pretty dopey, but they still show up at the games, or watch them on TV; the fan is complicit for creating the atmosphere in which the foolishness they deride is allowed to flourish.And after an athlete's retirement, in most cases, the fans are still mesmerized. In ancient times, accomplished athletes were believed to be shirt tail cousins of the gods. This hasn't changed much. Idolotry, and an overlying halo effect regard, typically spanning all phases of the athlete's body and character, is rampant. Along the lines of the god metaphor, they also remind many of all people's irrational and subconscious quest for immortality. Many relive the old days, and this is fine, but a lot of it is a "long live the king (god)" psychology.They'll pay money at card shows to have old timers sign something. They'll buy former players drinks at a bar. It's more common than not for a top athlete to have been a prince among men since he was a little boy. They come to believe that people love them for ~them~ rather than for the thrills they provide as paid entertainers. Many athletes are truly adored, but the majority of the public forgets them day in, day out, when they can no longer play, and there's new meat on the hoof to provide excitement.Hell, they'll even HIRE unqualified people because they have great memories of when these people competed at a high level. It's also typical for exploits to grow, much like a story in high school does, as it makes the rounds. When they're no longer playing, they just aren't as relevant. True, relevance fades. A member of the Bears summed up a lot of it once when he was cut, and commented that it took him a long time to deal with the "Bill ~who~?" reaction from his "adoring fans," and that he was cut because he was no longer a good football player, not because he'd become a bad or flawed person. That isn't hidden resentment talking, it's reality. True, and there usually isn't much excuse to blow the fortunes most make. It just seems to me that there's a certain glee just under the surface, seeing the mighty fall, as if their former place on the pedestal was a negative reflection of the imperfections in everyone else. It's not the fans' fault.I agree. You make a point I didn't really think about: Most great athletes have ALWAYS been great athletes. This usually means that they were always the "first picked" on the playground, and probably popular, often not because of their general goodness, but because of their ability to do well on the field. They go from being "first picked" among their piers, to "Coach's Favorite" (as well as Teachers'/Parents/Adults in the community's Favorite). It means special treatment and free passes in life, as a kid. Then, the college and pro experience is more of the same, on a bigger stage, with lots of money. Now I think I understand what you were getting at: When that's all over, it's like falling off a cliff. I was looking at it from the point of view of an adult. I figured that if suddenly I was a great athlete, making lots of money, I'd be wise and invest and I'd also realize that when I'm forty years old and no longer the best, it would be over. But if I had been getting this special treatment since age 6 or 7, I would never have known life without it---and that's probably the root of the psychological woes that hit some former great athletes (plus their inability to fit in when their great talent is diminished or gone).
great athlete, choose your parents well!" While athleticism runs in families, it doesn't necessarily always bless all, or equally. Genetics is the single biggest necessity for becoming a star. Hard work, toughness, character, etc. only affords an edge over the ~other~ talented athletes. Often not because of their general goodness, but because of their ability to do well on the field. Lots of good athletes are good guys, but many are bums too. Their failings are almost always overlooked however, in direct proportion to how good they are. It means special treatment and free passes in life, as a kid. And often a sense of entitlement. When the backstage passes in life slow down or end, this can be very hard on the athlete. Then, the college and pro experience is more of the same, on a bigger stage, with lots of money. Yep, and girls, and everyone telling you how wonderful you are, just the way you are, and no matter what you do (as long as you continue to perform). It almost reaches Biblical proportions, with satan in the garden.

Now I think I understand what you were getting at: When that's all over, it's like falling off a cliff. I was looking at it from the point of view of an adult. I figured that if suddenly I was a great athlete, making lots of money, I'd be wise and invest and I'd also realize that when I'm forty years old and no longer the best, it would be over. But if I had been getting this special treatment since age 6 or 7, I would never have known life without it---and that's probably the root of the psychological woes that hit some former great athletes (plus their inability to fit in when their great talent is diminished or gone).

Men, more than women, tend to identify with what they do as who they are. Not all, and not totally, just more. In a sports mad world, the sports machine is almost a form of brainwashing, and can really skew values, even though no one is actually setting out to do that. What the bullet proof young athlete (and even "grizzled veterans" are young men when they're forced to quit) never sees is the dichotomy, the mixed messages. On one hand, he's treated like a god, but on the other, despite what's happening on the surface, he's also being used. Used by his coaches, the owners, handlers, hangers-on, and fans out for a thrill and vicarious Walter Mitty excitement, everyone. In the football movie, "North Dallas Forty," the character played by Mac Davis says, "Hey, we're all whores anyway, so we might as well be the best!" This is a reflection on the system, and may sound cynical, but in truth it's pretty right on.

No intent to preach with yet another Biblical reference, but vanity ~is~ definitely satan's favorite sin.

It was great to see Mike Quarry get his California boxing hall of fame award and to see him and all of his and Jerry's surviving siblings and their mother gather on the stage to receive the award. They also picked up an award for Jerry, posthumously. The awards ceremony also honored Ernie Indian Red Lopez, Armando Muniz, Andy "The Hawk" Price, and many others but the promoter of the show, Don Fraser, saved the best for last as the Quarry brothers once again shared center stage.

Hey Kent, INDIAN LOPEZ WAS NOT AN INDIAN AT ALL, HE WAS JUST ANOTHER BEAN BURNER THAT DRANK IT UP, COMMON SENSE KENT THATS WHAT LOPEZ LACKED, HEY, I USED TO DRINK, BUT YOU GET TO A CERTAIN POINT, HEY YOU CAN'T TAKE IT NO MORE, MEXICAN LOPEZ WAS NEVER SMART TO BEGIN WITH, LETS LEAVE IT AT THAT |
It's great to see ex-fighters get their due. Ernie Lopez was an exiting fighter that I had almost forgotten about and reading the story about him brought back a lot of memories of him and his brother Danny. The Norton-Spinks thing... Michael would have given Norton all he could handle but Leon, he just couldn't take a heavyweight punch, and Leon took a lot of punches. Leon took the title from a guy that was in the beginning stages of what he suffers from now, and should have not been in the ring at all. Not taking anything away from Leon, I watched him during the Olympics and he was a thrilling fighter but had he fought Holmes, Norton or Ernie Shavers the night he beat Ali he would have soundly thrashed. He was in the right place at the right time. Massimo, my favorite foot fetishest, who had the smallest shoe size amoung the heavyweight champs? I believe it was another Italian guy?

I fear that we Italians haven't had too many wordl heavyweight champs... Only 2: Primo Carnera and Francesco Damiani ( WBO). I'll try to discover Damiani's shoe size. But, for now, all I can say is that Kareem Abdul Jabbar's shoe size is 16. Kareem in person said that! I wonder, what's Warren Coolidge's shoe size?

I think that Tommy Burns was the heavyweight champ with the smallest shoe size.

I think maybe Bob Fitzsimmons had the smallest shoe size among heavyweight champions.

You're right. I remember Michael Spinks’ s glance just before fighting Tyson as it was yesterday. He was scared at death. I had never seen anyone as scared as him that night before. He was looking forward that the fight was over. The only chance he had of winning the fight was that Tyson died of heart failure that very night in the ring. Mike Tyson is a very intimidating guy. He can knock a man out just by watching him in the eyes. I think in the history of boxing there were only two guys more intimidating than Iron Mike: LISTON and FOREMAN.

Spinks was not hit hard enough to be knocked out in the fight against Tyson. Spinks simply didn’t want to fight. He took a dive to avoid getting hurt. Going into that fight, I really thought that he had a chance to win a decision by using that awkward style, sticking and moving, clenching and yes, taking a few punches in the process. But it became clear before the fight started that he was frightened out of his mind. I’ve never seen anyone that scared in a professional boxing match.

As for Jerry, the record speaks for itself: You could stop him on cuts, but that was the only way to stop him. He would have mixed it up with Tyson and win or lose, we’d have seen some fireworks! A "punchfest" as Don Dumphy said about Shavers-Quarry.

Some are a mixture of Spanish or Mexican ancestry and Indian and others are a mixture of White ancestry and Indian, such as myself. Without knowing all of the details of the Lopez family history, I would bet they probably are as much as half Indian mixed with Spanish or Mexican ancestry. But what difference does what race they are make anyway? Ernie "Indian Red" Lopez's story is still a touching human story and you sir have no heart! I am sure you wouldn't have gotten up and said what you posted at the awards banquet filled with Indian Red's friends, fans, and family, would you have? You make a lot of brave noise hiding under a fake name on the Internet. I never said I was brave, there's nothing wrong in being a chicken, you live longer for one thing, stop being so pc kent, now your trying to make Lopez an Indian, on just a possibility, give it a rest kent, stop all the spin, you should be in politics, the clock man always lives to fight another day, Lopez is alive that's great but this guy still is depressed about his losses to Jose Napoles and even worse he still thinks about his ex-wife, what a moron, wasting all those years )))))))

I don't agree with you and you don't agree with me. In fact if I didn't call you on your B.S., if I just sat back and said nothing, that would be PC by just letting you slide without being challenged for your nonsense. Surprise, sometimes what most people think is right is actually correct. I am not kissing the ass of the liberals and the minorities and I don't, deep down, agree with your bigoted views. It is what I really believe. I believe you are wrong.

I'd like to clarify my last statement. When I said I don't kiss as* to minorities and liberals, I meant I don’t treat any group of people other than how they deserve to be treated, as human beings. I believe the statement by Dr. M.L. King, "judge people not by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character" and I try to live by this at all times. It makes no sense that my esteemed friend, Mr. Koo Koo Klock should bring race into the Ernie Lopez story as it would be the same story, a touching human story, no matter what race Mr. Lopez is. I AM NOW NOT GOING TO DISCUSS THE RACE ISSUE ANY FURTHER AT THIS TIME. IT IS NOW BACK TO BOXING AND OF COURSE, SHOE SIZES OF VARIOUS ATHLETES!!

I have to say that Tom Gola, a former Warriors (who the hell are?) teammate, measured him in the gym using a ladder and found he was 7'1 3/4 tall. But Wilt's shoe size is more secret than the formula of Coca Cola. Maybe, I guess, he wore 6' 1/2 and they don't want to destroy his legend. Kobe's shoe size is 12 1/2. For those wimps who still believe that Wilt was 7'1" tall, I'd pay a lot of money for having a picture of Wilt with Andre " the Midget" Rousimoff.

But back to boxing:

boxing is an exciting sport. Cheers.

AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|12-1/2? That's not very big for a man Bryant's size. There are average sized men (5'9") who have feet close to that. You know what they say... :-) No, seriously, there's no relationship at all between predictable size of one body part compared to another.

I wonder why the Nevada State Athletic commissions were not tougher on their fines and suspensions of various heavyweights the last 10 years or so, AKinwande-Lewis (LMS mills lane wanted to clobber AKinwande). They could have cashed in on these guys making millions and fleecing the public. How about Oliver McCall/Lewis? I Feel sorry for anyone who bought a ticket to Mike Tyson-Michael Spinks. I Happened to be right across the street NEW YORK NEW YORK CASINO. When Tyson took the easy way out biting Holyfield's ear (no I do not consider Mike Tyson an alltime great!) He knew he was going to get KO'D again! Talk about pissed off people! Tyson's took the ten count three times, vs not all that great opposition. How many times did Ali, Joe Frazier, Rocky Marciano, Ever took the ten count-NONE. JQ of course might as well be on that list. As far as Ernie Lopez is concerned, He was an alltime great, so was one of his good friends, Jerry Quarry, So if you have no respect for Lopez, That tells me you have no respect for Quarry- why even come to the site? TAKE CARE!

I do not remember making Mike Tyson out to be a hero? Anyway i've seen Both Lopez brothers bouts too many times, Its almost like they part of a Boxing Institution in California, Kids do not impress easy, I was impressed with Danny and Ernie IN THE 60'S 70'S 80'S. This has nothing to do with anything, and I know they were great friends of the Quarry's. I HAVE A PICTURE IN 1969 OF JQ AND INDIAN RED SPARRING, Before Frazier bout, Jerry liked to work out with him for hand speed. I do love boxing trivia, Especially when you lived it, and where actually there, I'D HAD LOVED TO HAVE KNOWN tough-guy actor Mike Mazurki who founded the Cauliflower alley club, And LOU NOVA, whom Unlike Jerry enjoyed his retirement. A lot of people who were not impressed with JQ (AND EVERYONE HAS THERE OWN OPINION) have no idea how tough Jerry Q. was. People have no idea how AMOS LINCOLN top ten contender (and, at the time) for RING MAGAZINE and 20 year old JERRY used to go at each other sparring, Jerry got the best of Frazier in 1966 at MAIN STREET GYM, Till Frazier knocked Jerry's teeth thru his lower lip and cost him an up coming bout with a left hook. Eddie Futch himself kept them away from each other, Until they could fight for something $ (THE TITLE) There's a sight on the internet Pro-Marciano, who voiced his opinion on how THE ROCK could beat Frazier, "SAY WHAT YOU WANT ABOUT JERRY QUARRY, THE MAN WAS NOT A PUNCHER" No He was the only non-champ to beat 8 top ten contenders between the 60's and 70's. AND ONLY KNOCKOUT 4 OF THEM. Say what you want about Rocky Marciano, I'll throw a few bucks Quarry's way! Jerry probably only knocked out a few hundred people and 5 in three days (NATIONAL GOLDEN GLOVES) BUT NO HE WASN'T A PUNCHER !!!!!!!!!!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/9/04 03:31:08 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Not only do I think Joe Frazier would have a good shot at beating Marciano, I think Jerry would have a good chance also. Marciano threw a lot of telegraphed punches while moving in that JQ could have avoided and countered. But some things in Rocky's favor are that once he got inside, he threw very short punches and he also was a very accurate puncher. Rocky's pin point sharp punching could spell doom to a fighter prone to cuts like Jerry. And all and all, a Marciano versus Quarry fight turns out to be a great fight, a real war.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/9/04 05:21:23 PM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I read somewhere many years ago that Muhammad Ali had good things to say about Marciano's boxing/punching ability after staging the 15 round &quot;Computer&quot; fight with Rocky. Apparently, a computer decided that Ali would win a decision in a 15 round title fight against Marciano. Marciano was retired, but he agreed to put on the trunks and enact the &quot;fight&quot; against Ali on film. Ali thought that the fight would be more exciting if it ended in knockout instead of decision. Marciano said &quot;I'm not going to get knocked out by anyone.&quot; to which Ali said he'd take the KO for a more exciting outcome. Anyway, during the filming, they had to throw some leather and Ali said that even an older, retired and rusty Marciano had surprisingly good movement and skills, as well as punching power---and he really wasn't throwing anywhere near full force.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/9/04 11:49:38 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Angelo, the actual ending that the computer picked was Marciano winning by thirteenth round knockout over Ali.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/10/04 12:53:42 AM</th>
<th>kookoo</th>
<th>ny</th>
<th>kookooclock000@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>HEY LOOK, I'M JERRY'S BIGGEST FAN, BUT I HAVE TO PICK ROCKY BECAUSE OF CONDITIONING, ROCKY WOULD HAVE OUT LASTED JERRY, JERRY'S AHEAD EARLY BUT GETS STOPPED LATE, I THINK MOST PEOPLE WOULD AGREE WITH THAT, JIMMY'S KINDA OUT THERE ON THE LIMB PICKING JERRY IN THIS ONE, SORRY, BUT I HAVE TO GIVE MY REAL OPINION.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/10/04 07:25:30 AM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Kent: One of Ali's books---a paperback autobiography from the 70's---gave the story that the computer picked Ali by decision.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/10/04 01:30:42 PM</th>
<th>Jimmy Dorsey</th>
<th>VENTURA CALIFORNIA</th>
<th>RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| It's really hard to make a point against a guy who was 49-0 with 43 knockouts, Jerry did fight better opposition, (no-GRAND PA'S) Being a betting man and a SELF DEBRACATING STOOG, if the match ever took place, Hipathetically, I'm taking the odds and Quarry or Frazier, How this got started, one of the Gents on the boxing circles said JERRY was not a puncher! I Just have to beg to differ. I read an article that Liston just intimidated the hell out of Marciano, and Rock working for some column or network, did not even want to interview CHARLES! What about the monsters Quarry fought? The LYLE'S, SHAVERS, FRAZIER'S, ALI'S, NORTON'S, FOSTER'S, SPENCER'S, MATHIS, Chuvalo's. They only Boxers he really missed, where Foreman, Bonavena, Bugner, and Bob Foster. And these guys obviously didn't want Quarry! Rock's gonna win the stamina factor for sure. Marciano's UNDEFEATED RECORD. Is nothing short of amazing. Gil Clancy stated JERRY WAS THE HARDEST PUNCHER HE EVER TRAINED. And had trouble keeping sparring partner's. It would be one of the very few (if only) matches, where Quarry would have every advantage physically, height reach, weight, speed etc. Frazier or QUARRY, would have been ROCKY'S toughest bouts. If you look on his record.

| 3/10/04 01:57:37 PM | John Gerard | NYC || rock2892@yahoo.com ||| 10 |

JIMMY DORSEY: The story about Marciano being intimidated by Liston before interviewing him started was originally told by Howard Cosell. Cosell naturally made himself the hero of the story and wrote how unafraid of Liston he was and how scared Rocky was. So take the story with a grain of salt. A major one. Regarding JQ vs. Marciano. Jerry was a very, very good, game figher. A real warrior. Let's leave it at that.

| 3/10/04 03:55:32 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 |

I would give JQ a real shot at beating Marciano because of like I said, Rocky threw wide looping punches as he moved in and Jerry could have avoided and countered these. Finding a way to keep Rocky from working from in close is the key which means also Jerry would have to avoid the urge to slug it out with Rocky, which sometimes Jerry did when tagged hard. Could Jerry had done that, I don't know for sure but I do know Jersey Joe Walcott did that for nearly thirteen rounds and if he had somehow not ran into the tremendous knockout punch near the end of round thirteen, a short right hand delivered from in close, Rocky would not have retired undefeated as he would not have even won the title that night, although Rocky likely would have won the title at some point. Walcott, up until the final devastating punch, had avoided a lot of Rocky's wide, looping punches as Rocky moved in and he effectively countered Rocky's punches almost all night long.

| 3/10/04 05:39:12 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC || funktron@yahoo.com ||| 10 |

Marciano probably would stop Jerry on cuts. If Jerry could avoid serious cuts/bleeding, he could beat Marciano, but that's a huge "if." I don't think the Rock could KO Jerry or outpoint him. Plain and simple, I think he would have to win by TKO and I think he WOULD win by middle round TKO. This was part of Jerry's career. If not for the cut factor, Jerry would have retired with a better record.

| 3/10/04 06:30:34 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 |

I have an article on the homepage of Eastside Boxing, www.eastsideboxing.com, about Mike Quarry's career and his induction into the California Boxing Hall of Fame. I hope you folks read my article. It should be up on the Eastside homepage for up to a week.

| 3/10/04 09:30:58 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA || Sonia90101@aol.com ||| 10 |

Kent, read your article it was cool. Thanks! I even made sure some of my friends recieved it also. Keep checking out this site all. Take care and be safe. We love & miss you Dad, and Uncle Jerry. Congrats to you Uncle Mike, we're all really proud of you, and we know Dad & Uncle Jerry, would be too.

| 3/11/04 12:41:30 AM | kookoo | ny || kookooclock000@yahoo.com ||| 10 |

JIMMY, JIMMY, JIMMY, WHAT GIL CLANCY SAYS MEANS NOTHING, I'VE HEARD HIM SAY SOME OF THE MOST STUPID THINGS I'VE EVER HEARD, I'M VERY SURPRISED HE MADE IT AS A TRAINER. JIMMY, JERRY HIT HARD, BUT DO YOU REALLY THINK HE HIT HARDER THAN FOREMAN? THATS NON-SENSE, JIMMY HAVE YOU BEEN DRINKING AGAIN???

| 3/11/04 01:24:41 AM | Ed | Cicero n y || mooseygoop@aol.com ||| 10 |

It's too bad Rocky didn't fight Floyd Patterson for his finale, we'd have a common opponent to compare each other to.

| 3/11/04 01:40:28 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 |

Patterson would have been a good test for Rocky because his quickness would have caused problems for Rocky. Patterson would have to stay away from Rocky because if he stayed in front of Rocky, Patterson's chin would not have stood up to Rocky's power. Thanks Sonia for the support regarding my article.
Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?

Jerry was a great fighter! He was skillful, he had very fast hands, could take a hell of a punch and had a huge heart but... How many fighters did Jerry beat who had great jabs? I'm not an expert of Jerry's career but I think only Buster Mathis. What he suffered the most were the great jabbers like Ali', Holmes and Spalla. Am I wrong?
because at his best, poor Floyd would have had a rough night before being knocked out. Marciano was a latter day, smaller Jim Jeffries, and no champion ever could have claimed a "given" against him. It's nice to be a fan of a fighter, but Jerry against Rocky? He would have exposed the Rock's faults early, succumbed to his virtues late. In that dopey computer fight, he was amazingly quick for a mid-forties man, and would have given Ali a rough night, though I don't believe could have triumphed. Frazier might have, Foreman almost certainly...Actually, Rocky did begin training for a comeback against either Floyd or Ingo, but gave it up. Dan Duva was going to train him that time around.The problem with dealing with a legend like Marciano is that the legend can get in the way. I am not just being a fan of JQ, I am giving reasons why Jerry would have a chance of winning a fight against Rocky. My reasons are based on what I see in Rocky's fight films such as, Walcott staying away from Rocky's power for almost thirteen rounds and counterpunching brilliantly. This would have been a good plan for Jerry as well, in and out movement, like he did against Lyle, coupled with strong two fist counter attacks. Jerry would not want to fight a war of attrition, like he did against Frazier, because this would lead to a probable mid to late round stoppage win for Marciano. Do I think Jerry could beat Marciano? I don't know if he could but if he fought the correct fight plan, I would give him at least a fair chance of doing so. |Comment on Patterson–yes his chin wasn't great but he was only knocked out by Ali, Liston (both of which are forgiveable!) and Johansson who although limited packed an absolute hell of a punch, one o the most underrated i've seen–remember him knocking Machen out cold in 1. Quarry was a great finisher and floored Patterson twice but Floyd not only got up but outboxed him for a lot of the rest of the fight into a tight finish. He also survived punches from Bonavena and Chuvalo who could bang. So yes his chin wasn't Marciano or Ali but it was not glass either. His speed would have worried Marciano until very late stoppage. Patterson really was a good fighter and at 13.5 stone for most of his career should have been given high praise.
Rocky had problems with Archie Moore on his last defense but Floyd handled Archie with ease. But whoever would have won fight it would have been great historically because Floyd being so young (21), we'd have some comparisons (of the great Marciano) to fighters that fought Patterson in the 60's and 70's. (That is unless the Marciano fight took years off of Floyds career).

Have you seen the punch Marciano knocked out cold Rex Layne with? One of the best punches ever thrown in the ring. It was very similar to Iron Mike's final punch against Trevor Berbick (the tragic ballet). The man could punch! I think JQ vs. Bonavena would have been a much more competitive fight than JQ vs. Marciano. Actually, Marciano vs. Bonavena would have been interesting too. Charlie Goldman trained Oscar for his first few fights here in the USA.

John, you don't mention why you don't think Marciano verses Quarry would have been very competitive. Is it because you believe Rocky was better conditioned, hit too hard, had more heart (which if it was more than Jerry, that is incredible), or some other reason? I have given reason why I think it would be competitive and why Jerry would have a shot at winning such a fight but not much is said why Jerry would lose decisively. KENT: My gut instinct is that we are matching a great one against a good one. But on a more tangible level, if excellent crafty boxers like Walcott and Charles could not outbox Rocky, I find it hard to believe that JQ could. I also wonder if JQ's skin would hold up to rocks sledge hammer shots. Frankly I think he would bust up on impact. Neither man had much of jab, and I would rate them even on left hooks and give a big edge to Rocky on right hand power. Fighting out of his awkward duck crouch, Rocky was deceptively hard to hit, with lots of punches going over his head and sliding over his back. I think Rocky would wear Jerry down just like he did to Moore and score a late round TKO. Even though many people consider it a once in a million fluke, the fact is, Chuvalo KO'd JQ, and anything George could do, Rocky could do better. |

A lot of people did not know that Charles "Sonny" Liston bet his entire 1970 Wepner purse on Mac Foster vs Quarry, I heard Wepner himself had to dig out Liston's end from his own pocket, I wonder for all his guts and gore, he knew the whole thing was going to the SPORTS BOOK? A friend recently told me they saw Quarry on the movie "caveman" with John Matuszak and Ringo Starr, I highly doubt it. He also tried to con the promoter into more money by refusing to get into the ring unless he was paid more than the agreed upon amount. He did not get a cent more. |

That was also an old MSG Oscar Bonavena trick, Pulled it on Teddy Brenner and Harry Markson a few times, Ringo got the extra dough from the Garden. Vs Chuvalo among others, One time he actually kicked in the Madison Square Gardens front office doors over one dispute. |

I used to be of the mindset that Rocky was overrated because most of his major opponents were older fighters. But how many fighters would have beaten Ezzard Charles and Jersey Joe Walcott they way they fought Rocky (in Walcott's first fight against Rocky, of course)? Probably not very
I do think Joe Louis would have beaten Rocky, prime against prime. Joe actually won a couple of rounds with a fine use of the left jab when he was a shell of himself and he would have done so for more than a couple of rounds in his prime. Joe also would have been much more effective with the use of the right hand in his prime. I have heard people say Rocky took it easy on Joe because Joe was his hero growing up. I don't believe this for a minute because in the ring, Joe was a fighter standing in the way of Rocky's rise to the top and there is no way any fighter would give that up just to be nice. At that level they work too hard to get there and there is a fine line between the very best and the also rans.

Joe Louis, in his prime, is one of very, very few fighters who would have a good chance against Marciano. And no, I doubt that Rocky "took it easy" on Joe. I will say, there are times when a great fighter pays respect to a former great by not fighting as fiercely as possible. Holmes vs. Ali comes to mind. Sonny Liston was truly a great fighter, but not a great champion. To me, he was a little like Tyson. Once the mystique was broken by a loss to someone who stood up to him, the intimidation factor was compromised to the extent that he could be beat. I'm not so sure that Liston would have his way with Marciano. Getting tagged a few times and fighting against someone who could take a punch and come back with two more would rob Liston of the confidence that comes easy when someone is afraid of you. Think back to Tyson's glory years, when guys were beaten before the fight started (i.e. Spinks). Once James Douglas stood in front of Tyson, jabbed him to death, took his punch and got back up, then proceeded to pound on Tyson until he KOed him, Tyson was no longer the king of the playground. Suddenly guys like Razor Ruddock would trade leather with him and not fold up.

To those who may claim that Rocky took it easy on Joe Louis, then why did Rocky so brutally knock out Joe in the eighth round? He sure wasn't taking it easy then, was he? Rocky saw an opportunity to take care of business and get Joe out of there and he did just that.

As far as I am concerned, I want to say that I have recently seen the whole Charles-Louis and Joe was still a very dangerous opponent at the time. Charles clearly deserved the decision as he dominated the last four or five rounds, but, in the first 10 rounds, Joe produced a great performance. "wanna" means "want to".
in the first fight against Roland La Starza and in the first fight against Ezzard Charles. On the other hand, Primo Carnera deserved all his great victories and was even robbed in some of his fights (for instance in his first fight against Jimmy Maloney). Cheers.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both fighters for who they were, but remember that Rocky was a GREAT champion...."Maricano" by Everett Skeehan is available at Amazon.com a must read for those interested.

While realizing the letter page is for opinions, I think it is unfair to both Quarry and Marciano for anyone to think Jerry could have beaten him. Jerry was a good heavyweight with some serious flaws....Rocky Marciano's record, punching power, stamina, will to win, and ability to throw hundreds of punches per round is documented fact. Marciano destroyed Lowrey, whose biggest accomplishment was to go the distance....Marciano clearly won the first Charles fight....let's just appreciate both figh...
thats just great!!Should have got the DQ ALL THREE TIMES VS FRAZIER,he held Joe like a long lost AUNT,He had too!

| 3/14/04 04:22:52 PM | Mike Stevens | Ohio || brownss@bright.net ||||| 10 |
| Sean, you might be right but we will never know. On ESPN sportscentury, a documentary/profile of Rocky Marciano is often repeated. I can only tell you that Angelo Dundee considers Rocky one of the greatest of all time, no question in his mind. But I accept your viewpoint. |

| 3/15/04 07:09:11 AM | John Gerard | NYC || rock289z@yahoo.com ||||| 10 |
| KENT: I agree with you that prime Louis would have beaten prime Marciano. I think he would have cut him up. But I remember the trouble that Godoy gave Joe and he did not have Rocks power so it would have been interesting. |

| 3/15/04 07:57:48 AM | Roadscholarette | Windy City || roadscholarette, etc.||| 10 | Marciano, in the late '60s to late '70s, would have had problems with the big three - Ali, Frazier, Foreman, but much of anyone else, any more than they did. I imagine he'd have wound up with a loss or two from these guys too, just as they did from each other.My guess is Marciano takes Louis prime or not. He just made it look easier when it happened. |

| 3/15/04 08:41:41 AM | Massimo | Roma || 4 ||||| 10 |
| RSYou don't live in Chicago anymore, RS! Now you live in Windy City! Have a nice time in Windy City! I live in Sunny Country yet! Seven straight cheers ( or cheerses ). If Louis could beat Carnera, it's obvious that he would have literally kicked the c@#p out of Marciano, who was twice smaller )})})

| 3/15/04 09:37:05 AM | Roadscholarette | Windy City || Same ||||| 10 |
| Ha, "The Windy City" is the nickname for Chicago, because it's...windy! Lou Rawls referred to the knife-like winter winds coming in off Lake Michigan as "The Hawk." I forgot about Louis demolishing Da Preem. Certainly, that means Louis would have destroyed the Rock! Sorry. |

| 3/15/04 12:54:42 PM | John Gerard | NYC || rock289z@yahoo.com ||||| 10 |
| On Marciano vs. Ali, Foreman, Frazier. Of the three, I think Rocky would have the best chance to beat Frazier, the least chance to beat Foreman, and I don't think he could beat Ali, but he would have had a solid chance to. |

| 3/15/04 01:39:26 PM | Roadscholarette | Windy City || rs@hm ||||| 10 |
| I see Foreman putting Rocky away, ala Frazier. Marciano-Ali? Prolly Ali two out of three. Not many could ever hit Ali often, follow up, or hurt him when they did (and he recovered amazingly fast). With Frazier, you'd have two street brawlers in a phone booth, and whomever could best capitalize after catching the other would stand the best chance of winning. Both were volume punchers, with Frazier harder to hit.All would have a big weight advantage - Joe twenty pounds, Ali and Foreman about thirty. Not that the Rock didn't take big men, but not ~this~ quality of big man...

| 3/15/04 01:48:20 PM | John Gerard | NYC || rock289z@yahoo.com ||||| 10 |
| MARCIANO: believe it or not, years ago, I met Foremen's trainer, Sandy Saddler (not Dick Saddler who was Foreman's manager) and asked him who he would have picked on a Foreman vs. Marciano. He said Marciano would have won. Remember, Saddler, along with Archie Moore was part of Foreman's original team and was the hands-on trainer. His opinion has to be taken into consideration. |

| 3/16/04 03:53:30 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com ||||| 10 |
| Remember, Marciano was not your average 185 pounder by any stretch of the imagination. He was much stronger and he hit much harder than his size would indicate.As always, with Foreman at his best, it would depend on if Marciano survived those first two or so rounds but if he did, Rocky's chances of winning would get better every round. Rocky would have a huge advantage in stamina and an advantage in hand speed over Big George. My verdict? Foreman by early knockout or Rocky by late round knockout or decision. |

| 3/16/04 04:51:03 AM | John Gerard | NYC || rock289z@yahoo.com ||||| 10 |
| Against Frazier, in a phone booth war, in a fight for the ages, I give Frazier a slight edge for being a bigger version of Rocky's style. Believe it or not, one of the reasons I shade with Frazier is his busier punch output. I keep hearing how Rocky threw 100
pinches a round but in which fights? I know some rounds he did throw that many punches but every round? I have most of his major fights and Frazier, in his major fights, is throwing more punches than Rocky is. One thing going for Rocky is his very accurate punching from in close and Frazier could be hurt, as seen by Foreman, especially early in a fight. Frazier lost the first round in just about all of his major fights and often the first two rounds. Frazier also was most vulnerable to being knocked out before round three, when he usually started to "smoke" full steam ahead. This can be seen by Frazier getting knocked out by Foreman in round two in their first fight and by Bonevena knocking down Frazier twice in round number two in their first meeting as well. Ali, prime against prime, would outpoint Marciano on the basis of keeping Rocky at a distance with the use of the left jab. Ali would win by number of punches landed but he would know he was in a real fight as Rocky would land some savage body shots and if people think Ali was feeling it after taking Chuvalo's body attack all night long, just think how he would feel after taking those shots from Rocky! Who would win, Ali or Marciano, also would depend on who is judging the fight. I don't see anyone getting knocked out in this one. Both fighters had great chins. Oldtimers would give Ali less credit for moving away much of the time and they may side with Rocky's better quality of power punches over Ali's quantity of punches. They would also view Rocky's pressing the action in high favor. Latter day judges likely would go with Ali's volume of punches landed. I don't see Rocky landing very many head punches against an in prime Ali. Rocky would land short punches to the head whenever Ali would try and rest and hold but Ali at this best didn't do this as much as he did later stages of his career.
for every inch. I don't think Jerry had the discipline to do that. Jerry would have caught Rocky at some point and gone after him and the trap would be set. The Rock vs. Patterson? Marciano in no more than five. Floyd couldn't take the drubbing. And the Liston thing, I used to think Liston would beat Rocky with the long left jab, he out reached Marciano by 17 inches, But after watching several Liston fights I had never seen before, Burt Whitehurst and the Eddie Machen fight I don't think Liston would go the distance with Rocky. Like Holyfield-Tyson, Evander was not at all intimidated by Tyson, and Mikey had to stand up or fold up. The same is true with Liston-Marciano. Liston might have looked meaner, "The Rock" just was......Oh on the shoe size thing, I read a book by Nat Fleisher a long, long time ago who wrote that Marciano had a size 10E shoe. Why that stuck with me I don't know....kinda freaky huh?

3/19/04 02:37:38 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|Bob-Thanks for the precious information on Marciano's shoe size! Charles- Quarry would have been another very interesting fight. Charles was a good puncher, a warrior and a very skillful boxer.The left hook he knocked out Bob Satterfield with was a beauty! 3/19/04 11:19:42 AM|Fran|Philly||Pic7755@aol.com||||10|I think Quarry would have kayoed Marciano in the early rounds. It would have been a brawl like the first Frazier fight with the only difference being Marciano was easier to hit than Frazier was so Jerry would have been dropping Bombs on him and Landing I don't think Marciano could have withstood Jerry's power. Not taking anything away from the great Marciano but they fought different levels of competition, the fighters of Jerry's era were bigger stronger faster hit harder and had more boxing skills than Marciano's era. 3/19/04 02:23:30 PM|Gerry Schultz|Cleveland, Ohio||jgshultz211@aol.com||||10|Wow! I thought this page was gone, glad to see it isn't. St. Patrick's Day makes me think of Jerry, what can I say? My wife and I have a brand-new baby son since my last post... JQ vs. Rocco, I guess we're running out of matchups? Jerry did beat better guys than Rock, but Rock is probably top 5 all-time, dominated his era. Rock was rare, just granite tough, more power than Frazier. I saw Archie Moore try everything he could in Rocco's last fight, no dice. I love JQ, he'll always be my favorite boxer, but it would go like Frazier I if he fought Rock prime-prime, no insult in that. A real compliment that Marciano was a Quarry fan even after Eddie Machen. JQ has/had a lot of fans in high places. Congrats also again to Mike Quarry, a real pro's pro, glad to hear he got his due.3/19/04 02:57:55 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Fran, wow you pick JQ to kayo Rocky? You are a real dedicated Quarry fan! I don't go that far though I just say he would have a good chance at winning. I tend to shade Rocky in this one as Jerry would find it hard to resist trading toe to toe with Rocky and Rocky with his very accurate, short in close punches would likely bust up Jerry and cut him. It would be a very good fight.3/19/04 04:33:35 PM|Massimo|La citta' eterna ( the eternal city)|
And Kent don't forget that Rocky beat Rex Layne, who was 9-5 favorite against him and one of the best heavyweights ever... Gino Buonvino, who means "Gino Goodwine". The legendary Rex Layne beat Walcott on points, Bob Satterfield by KOT in one of the most exciting fights of the 50s and fought 3 times against Ezzard Charles (1 win and 2 losses). I apologize that I don't know Rex Layne's shoe size. I'm ashamed of that! Cheers.

The legendary fighters of the past were legends in their time but how many guys the size, skill and power of Lyle, Shavers, Foster did Marciano beat? I mean did he beat the young hungry black fighters of the era like Jerry did? Jerry was the baddest white guy I ever saw. Bar none. Marciano was great in his era like Louis was in his... But Quarry at his best was a tough fight for anyone past or present that's why in 74 before Frazier 2 there was so much talk about Jerry vs Foreman you just couldn't count him out. This site is the greatest take care everyone.

What happened to Max Kellerman on Friday Night Fights? I liked the guy, he had different and well thought out views on things.

Max Kellerman is now working for Fox Sports Network. His first show is this Sunday on Sunday Night Fights I believe the show starts at 7 PM. Check your local listings.

It was the card I was at last Sunday and the broadcast this Sunday will show the headline bout between junior lightweight contender Robbie Peden of Australia verses junior lightweight contender Nate Campbell of the USA. The CO feature bout, which will be shown the following Sunday, features Jr. Middleweights Keith Holmes and some guy from Uzbekistan who's name I would have to look up again. I was there wearing my black Eastsideboxing.com shirt in press row but I was behind the camera man so I don't know if I was ever on camera or not.

I hope they show one of the prelims, my buddy former national golden gloves heavyweight champion Malcolm Tann, 9-1 as a pro.

The way I see the decade from '67 through say '77 (and let's throw the great Larry Holmes in there too, even though he just missed this time) is that it's -The Era-. Greatness of others must be judged by this time. The champions, the Big Four (including Holmes), could have been champion in any other time. At times when the competition was stiff, the title would have likely gone back and forth. Many of the contenders from the golden age would have been champions in many of the other times. Can any other period make these two claims? No.

As I've mentioned before, it's easy for perspective to blur, with past guys becoming invincible. This can happen with a current champ too. Sometimes, it goes the other way though, and people can lose sight of how great someone from the past was (factoring in the fact that past fighters would have to come up to speed in terms of style). Varies, depending on appeal of a fighter for a given person.

Langford had the size of a proton and whupped (not whipped as I believed) big guys' asses (George Godfrey etc.), but he was a legend. James Toney says he wants to fight the Klitschko brothers and has called them bums (even James knows what the word 'bum' means). I don't think he can beat the Klitschko brothers. Maybe Wladimir, but Vitali? Primo is dead and nobody in the world can beat Vitali. Cheers if you want.

Sam Langford had the size of a proton and whupped (not whipped as I believed) big guys' asses (George Godfrey etc.), but he was a legend. James Toney says he wants to fight the Klitschko brothers and has called them bums (even James knows what the word 'bum' means). I don't think he can beat the Klitschko brothers. Maybe Wladimir, but Vitali? Primo is dead and nobody in the world can beat Vitali. Cheers if you want.

Kent Allenent@aol.com

Kent, it was Holyfield you are talking about. Holyfield, the good smaller man actually did defeat Bowe once out of three fights. Holyfield, at his best, weighed anywhere from 205 to not more than 215. The 220 pound version of Holyfield is the older, washed up model. Skill can overcome size, a recent example is Roy Jones Jr., who had to bulk up to weigh 193 pounds, defeating John Ruiz, 230 pounds. Also, in the past, Joe Louis, in his prime about 6'2" 200 pounds beat fighters such as Canera who was 6'6" 270 pounds, Abe Simon, who was 6'5" 260 pounds and Buddy Baer, brother of Max, at 6'6" 250. Not to mention Max Baer, himself 6'3" 215 and Tony "Two Ton" Galento, at about 5'9" 230 pounds.

Our own Jerry Quarry had a field day with Buster Mathis about 6'5" 240 pounds and dominated Ron Lyle at 6'3" 220 pounds, the same Lyle who gave George Foreman absolute hell just three years after losing to Jerry.

Point being, even today, smaller skilled heavyweights are finding ways to beat larger supposedly stronger men. Until he gave up the WBA belt, Jones and Chris Byrd at 6'2" 212 pounds, held two of the three major heavyweight title belts.

When more of the giants start winning titles and holding on to them, then we can say it is the age of the supersized heavyweight. In recent times, only Lennox Lewis and Bowe have proven themselves to have real talent. The Klitschko brothers have potential but they are still somewhat unproven.

Size doesn't follow a completely smooth and gradual curve that translates predictably into proficiency or power, and certainly not speed. Most of the time, a good bigger man should beat a good smaller man, but it depends on where each sit on the cusp on diminishing or expanding returns on their respective body dimensions.

I think many people lump huge guys together, many of whom were just galoots, and then dismiss the whole group, ignoring the big guys of latter day who were really good - in addition- to being big. Guys are getting bigger, and the best are retaining their speed as well. The coming of the fast big man, which began in the late 50s and revolutionized sports, would spell doom for many of the guys in the past."

The Undertaker has whupped Kane's ass! What a surprise! Unbelievable! What were the bookmakers? The Undertaker 10000000000000000000-1 favorite!"

since the Klitschko brothers will never fight each other, at least The Undertaker and Kane fight each other. After all, they are brothers in real life. What do you mean I can't get any odds on Undertaker versus Kane, the rematch? What do you mean professional wrestling picks the winners before the matches? It seems real to me!!
The wrestlers themselves admit that! I have read a Small Show's interview and he said that sometimes the organizers tell him to lose (or of losing) against wrestlers who are still smaller than him. Still, I have some problems to believe that a buried alive man can go out from two or three meters under the ground and win a fight! But, I have spent a good time watching Undertaker-Kane even if I think that my chances of beating Vitali Klitschko would have been better than Kane's chances of beating the Overtaker...

What? The wrestlers themselves admit they are told to lose? What next? No Santa Claus?

I think a buried man can win just as easily as anyone else in Professional wrestling. All joking aside, the athletes are very good in the wrestling game and even if the matches are staged, a lot of the stunts they do are real and injuries do occur. I hope the wrestlers who do get injured in the ring doing their shows are taken care of medically and financially and when they leave the profession. But my feeling is they are probably not any better treated than their boxing counterparts. That would be a shame as no wrestlers, means no wrestling shows and no money for promoters like Vince McMahon.

You're right, some wrestlers show great skills (for instance Ray Mysterio). A picture with me, Small Show and Coolidge would be cool!

Does anyone think for one moment that the late great Archie Moore, could imagine or visualize any scenario, where Jerry Quarry defeats Rocky Marciano?

Yeah I think Archie Moore saw the talent in Jerry Quarry, (how could he not) as far as beating Marciano who knows what he thought, but one thing is for sure he wouldn't have said it would have been an easy fight for Marciano. Jerry in a 5 round Brawl as he is to fast slips and counters and to much movement. Marciano can't hit him and Jerry is fighting like Frazier 1, Shavers 1.

A long time ago, we went to a pro wrestling match. It was fun! The crowd was as interesting as the wrestlers. An awful lot of these guys were good athletes in other sports first, and it shows - these huge men executing amazing acrobatics, not to mention ballet-like quickness throughout the matches. Sure, things are choreographed and all, but they ~do~ get hurt for real, what with all the falls and other shenanigans.

I read recently that the ones with the super bodies who stay around a long time are on the juice big time (duh!), as well as a never ending cycle of pain medication for injuries. They evidently think it's worth it when they're younger, since the stars make a lot of money, but the after shock of all the drugs and body destruction might make them think otherwise when they're older.

Of course there would! These guys are behemoths, and most are unbelievably strong as well. Even a little kid jumping on someone can knock the wind out of them, and the jumps, slams, kicks, and other things are way over the top for what a body could stand, if they were real. The punches and forearms are the funniest though! They clearly don't land, but when we went to the match, "punches" that obviously didn't land, or that couldn't have cracked an egg sent the crowd into a frenzy!
Like I said, the crowd was as entertaining as the wrestlers. Numerous members of the audience got into loud, profane arguments with each other over the matches. LOL!

3/23/04 07:25:02 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|R.S. and Massimo, yes a lot of the professional wrestling stunts are controlled and many outright miss, but some do connect and some are real and they are becoming increasingly more real to keep up with the more sophisticated audience of today. Injuries do occur. Why do you think certain wrestlers disappear for months at a time? I just hope they are not just tossed aside and forgotten when they are of no use to wrestling anymore. Also, the steroid use appears to be rampant. A lot of you probably remember the fate of football player Lyle Alzado, who died of cancer he believed was brought on by steroid use.

3/23/04 02:38:23 AM|Ed|Cicero n y||mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|Yea ur right about Superstar Billy Graham, Kent. His ankle bones didn't just break they turned to dust (according to him). He went on an anti steroid campaign to warn others about the dangers of using the hormones.

3/24/04 02:38:23 AM|Ed|Cicero n y||mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|Yea ur right about Superstar Billy Graham, Kent. His ankle bones didn't just break they turned to dust (according to him). He went on an anti steroid campaign to warn others about the dangers of using the hormones.

3/23/04 04:17:01 AM|sm|melbourne aust||sm|||7|i have been reading the site for sometime without responding. the subject on quarry vs marciano is a interesting one. i read once in a boxing magazine ,an interview with jerry quarry. i presume after his retirement before diagnosed with puglist dementia . jerry said [quote these are his words]my record was like rocky marcianos and i serious would have beaten him, rocky marciano couldn,t beat all with handful of rice.in this interview also he said something about the great white hope tag that he didn,t like about which i can,t recall.as far quarry vs marciano goes .the fight would have been the most thrilling.they both had alot of heart

3/23/04 07:09:46 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|Archie Moore had great respect for Marciano. In the book IN THIS CORNER, he speaks very highly of the Rock and called him a great champion. Moore was not a guy to throw roses at anyone so if he said Rock was good, bet the ranch he was GOOD. JQ was a fine fighter and a fine man, but the Rock was in my mind, a few notches above him. Rocky was awkward but not slow and I need not tell you guys about his power, stamina, and will to win.

3/24/04 08:34:00 AM|Roadscholarette|Windy City||RS|||10|Not only do steroids improve performance tremendously (strength, speed, stamina, recovery time), but they're psychologically addictive as well. There've been cases even in athletes who've experienced terrible problems, who have gone back to them to feel the rush of power again. Now, there are new products that don't show up on tests. Better athletics through chemistry! In a way, it ruins sports where they're rampant, but OTOH, use is so universal that it sort of evens the playing field again. What's a young athlete to do when he's working his buns off, and is getting destroyed by peers who're 30 pounds of more (of muscle) heavier, are faster, don't tire, and recover in a snap? Sad.
health to the devil and nothing good can come of it. How many Alzados and Superstar Grahams does there have to be before they wake up? If people wonder why all of this talk about something as silly as professional wrestling, remember part of the charter of TJQF is to make contact sports safer, not just boxing and folks pro wrestlers, like it or not, are athletes. I must not forget, Superstar Graham also borrowed aspects of his wrestling character from Gorgeous George, the original blond haired heel. Muhammed Ali also got his idea of bragging and calling rounds from George, the wrestler. Probably everyone's heard of the famous survey of top athletes re drugs. A group of college and pro athletes (many of whom were no doubt already on drugs) were asked if they'd take X drug that would guarantee success, championships, titles, etc. in their given sport, but the price would be death in ten years. 84% said yes. Of course, in one's bulletproof youth, no one thinks anything'll happen to ~them~. Or it's like the dopey drug ed in school where kids are led to believe that if they even smoke grass, they'll become heroin addicts, if they don't drop dead on the spot. When this doesn't happen, and they actually feel good, they unconsciously assume nothing ever ~will~ happen, regardless of what they do. Lots of steroid users rationalize that if a doctor is "monitoring" (translation: team and/or unscrupulous doctors prescribing) them, or if they cycle the drugs, things will be fine. Doseages, of course, continue to increase - "more is better," right? They see people who ~don't~ end up like Alzado and Graham (countless others too), and identify with ~them~, plus as I said, the feeling of power is incredible. One time power lifting champ Larry Pacifico, who suffered a heart attack from steroid use, stated he'd probably go back on them, he liked the feeling so much. Drug damage is often going on undercover too, and/or will emerge later. I remember Ali and Frazier, when they were in their twenties, poo-poohing the dangers of brain damage in boxing - same sort of thing. I personally would rather be a non-star than to pay the price drugs can exact. Guys say, "Why me?" Why ~not~ them? In a sports mad world, athletes need to use a little sense when it comes to "doing whatever it takes." But of course, denial is a powerful driver.

I wanted to let all boxing fan's know about a very fine fighter, and a great human being in the person of Rufus Brassell who passed away this February 6, 2004 of Lou Gerhigs Disease at the age of 60. I had the privileage of talking to his son. a very upbeat and positive person.

A lot of good points regarding Rocky Marciano, who was often the smaller but stronger man in his matches. Rock had little reach, poor defensive skills, but could not be knocked out, was always in shape, was just as good late in a fight as in Round One, and of course had rare power. In an era of sub-200 pounders he was unbeatable, but he was much better than that also. Seeing the Frazier/Ali trilogy, I'd love to see Rock and Ali. JQ had limited reach also, but undoubtedly would have the chance to take rounds from Rock. Still, Rock was rare puncher and a dominant champion... a lot on steroids lately, which I guess will always be there as long as people want to win. I remember Billy Graham, your basic steroid psychotic who paid a high price for his fame. I personally can't imagine taking that step, I'm amazed so many do.

I have just read that Andre' Roussimoff, at autopsy, was 6' 9" 1/2. It's not right to call him Andre' the Midget ! He was the same height as Bill Russell, taller than Coolidge. It took a long time to me to discover the truth, I think I' m gonna cry ! I guess I' ll call him Andre' the Tall. God bless his soul, anyway ! Have a good weekend and make treasure of this information !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
Andre was still a giant in other ways as he weighed over 500 pounds, he was a huge man. All of the physical activity must not have been good for Andre's health as he suffered from gigantism. Have you seen the movie The Big Fish? I don't know if you get all of the American films over there. There is a man in the movie, who by the way plays a giant in the story, who has to be close to eight feet tall. He is a true giant. I wonder what his shoe size is?

I have never seen The Big Fish, it has to be a masterpiece! I'd be pleased with Kazaam in that movie. I have looked for it, but in vain! (and they say that Italy is a civilized country!). I have seen Wilt in a movie with Arnold Shwarzegger and he was pretty tall. What do you think of Sultan Kosen? He is a Turkish basketball player. Beside him, Yao and Calvin would look short. He is about 20 years old, 7'11" and still growing. They say he should reach 8'2". That's more than average, in my opinion! His shoe size is 60 (in the Italian system), I guess about 23 in the American, Britain etc. etc. one. Maybe he'll play in the NBA in 3 years. Good night, now it's late and I have to go in my huge bed, where I use to sleep diagonally, of course...

I have just acquired my first computer, and although I have looked at the web site before. I have never really got into the depths of what it is all about. So this is my e-mail address and if anyone would like to talk with me you are more than welcome to. For people whom do not know me. I am Bob Quarry. Jerry and Mike's younger brother. I was the one who did not uphold the Quarry name in the manner that it should have been. I would like to say a few words to defend no that's not the right word. I do not feel I need to defend myself. Although I wasn't what I had the abilities to have become. Or so I would like to think so. With that really being neither here nor there. I boxed from the age of about 4 years to the age of 7. Where I engaged in 7 jr. amatuer.
PROBABLY GET TO ASK THEM TWO QUESTIONS. IF ANYONE HAS A QUESTION THEY WOULD LIKE TO ASK EITHER OF THEM, AND IT IS BETTER THAN THE QUESTIONS I COME UP WITH, I WILL ASK THEM.

3/29/04 02:07:43 PM|Massimo|Rome is magic||4||10|Kent-First of all, greetings from the wonderful Florence, where I am right now. You'll say: who cares? I care, for God's sake! You should ask Vitali the following question: HOW LONG WOULD HAVE TAKEN FOR PRIMO TO WHIP YOUR ASS? THAT'S A SMART QUESTION! Greetings again and... Dikembe Mutombo's shoe size is 22.

3/29/04 08:28:27 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Massimo, greetings from sunny Southern California! Summerlike weather in late March. Who could ask for more!

I may use part of your question. I could ask both Klitschko brothers, "how does it feel to be compared to Primo?" Because of their size. I like to get a lot of questions prepared because if there are over twenty other people asking questions, often someone else uses my questions before it is my turn. I like doing interviews as fun stuff like James Toney yelling at me over the telephone because he didn't like my question and being ordered out of a fighter's dressing room by a manager for the same reason. I am not rude to the fighters but I ask honest questions and right after a fight can be when people are the most sensitive.

Believe it or not, I am very polite to anyone I talk to. People on the Internet are ruder than I have ever been. This last statement is not directed at anyone here in particular but it is about the Internet in general.

3/29/04 09:28:02 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago||sadmspats@yahoo.com||10|Kent, who ordered you out of their dressing room. Have you always been a reporter or is it a new gig. I haven't been around much since James' untimely passing. Take care.

3/29/04 10:03:48 PM|Gerry Schultz|Cleveland, Ohio||jgschultz11@aol.com||10|Bobby, sorry I could only rate your posting a 10, it's very good of you to say a few words to us Quarry fans. Anybody good enough to meet Tommy Morrison is pretty damn good to me... I was not impressed with Joe Mesi's near-melt down to Vassily Jirov, a very, very good cruiserweight he could have made a statement against. How old is Joe now? This fight might auger worse things for Mesi. Kent, one question you might ask the Klitschkos is what they are going to do when they own the heavyweight division, which seems now inevitable. Who can beat these guys now? While on the subject of outstanding cruisers, here's one for you: JQ vs. James Toney at 200 lbs. Any thoughts?

3/30/04 01:29:43 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Joe, welcome back, your comments have always added a lot to our discussions. I hope you continue to post. I have been doing a boxing column for mainly one other site, eastsideboxing.com, but sometimes for others for three years now. Jim Quarry was very supportive and he always told me to plug what I am doing. It was Jr. middleweight contender J.C. Candelo who along with his manager didn't like it when I told them I thought his bout with a fighter named Angel Hernandez was much closer than the five point+ point margin Candelo got in 2002 from all three judges. The manager pointed towards the door when I further suggested the fight could have gone either way with Hernandez possibly having a slight edge. On the way out, one of them, the fighter or the manager said, "what does that guy know? He eats too many hotdogs." I am overweight but I thought that was uncalled for as I wasn't rude to them. I then turned around and shook both of their hands and thanked them for their time anyway. I treated them with respect, my comments that I say or write are just my opinions, and I expect to be treated with respect in return.

I am jotting down the suggestions I get for the Klitschkos' interview and adding them to my own ideas and I will let everyone know if I use any of the suggestions.
participated in interviews with the likes of Lennox Lewis, James Toney (I will recount my encounter with him sometime), Evander Holyfield, The Klitschkos, Kirk Johnson, John Ruiz, Ricky Hatton, former jr. lightweight champion Gabriel Ruelas, and others.

I also asked a third question, I believe it was the last one of the conference, about stylistic problems the K brothers will have in their upcoming fights on April 10 and April 24, Wladimir verses Lamont Brewster and Vitali verses Corrie Sanders, respectively.

Hi everyoneIts hard to figure the Klitschko Bros.. They seem to have skills and are well trained and look unbeatable sometimes but then they lose a fight over an injury or a ko. I'd never bet against them but the big draw of being "undefeated" like Joe Frasier, M. Ali, and Mike Tyson were during their peak years isn't there.

Mass: I am surprised u didn't have Kent ask a question about their shoe size??

Thanks for the honour !This is a hard time !!

I thought you might like to know that the Senate approved the boxing oversight bill yesterday. I know Jim would be so happy that it has finally been past, this is the bill he went to congress with. So thanks Jim for all your work it is finally done something to help boxers not promoters, managers. Lets just hope your mission to have a home with doctors also comes true

Yes, Brenda, Mr. Jimmy would be very happy with the bill passing the senate. Special thanks to Senator John McCain of Arizona who has been there from the start pushing for the improvement of boxing, as well as again to George Otto from TJQF. I am sure Alex Ramos and his Retired Boxers Foundation also had a hand in this. Ramos, a former middleweight contender is at the forefront of working to help the fighters, not just the promoters, as Brenda stated. Jimmy wanted a home for boxers who get injured, with doctors staffed to look after them. You never know, it could happen!

Not only is Jimmy's spirit pleased, Jerry's also is smiling down upon us because of the good news.

I HATE JAMES TONEY'S GUTS, HE'S ANOTHER COCKY, TRASH TALKER, ROY JONES HANDLED HIM, KENT I ASK THAT YOU NOT INTERVIEW THAT UGLY BASTARD, WHATS AN UGLY MAN LIKE HIM GOING TO DO BUT FIGHT, I FORGOT TO ADD HE'S DUMB AS HELL TOO!! KEEP YOUR STANDARDS UP KENT.

I saw him a few weeks later, in person, and he didn't remember it was me he was yelling at on the phone or he doesn't remember my name. But whatever the case, he was pleasant to me, joking around with me about things like shaving my head bald, like him, as my hair was getting pretty long.
I meant to say James Toney, he seems like a mellow guy off stage, not it seems like a mellow guy offstage. |

James Toney, he seems like a mellow guy off stage, not it seems like a mellow guy offstage. |

KENT PLEASE LISTEN TO KOOKOO DON'T BOW DOWN TO THIS GUY, THATS WHAT YOU'LL BE DOING IF YOU SHAVE YOUR HEAD! DON'T LET HIM THINK THAT YOU ADMIRE HIM, THAT A TERRIBLE MISTAKE!!!SAVE YOURSELF!!|

Koo Koo, I told Toney I wasn't cutting my hair and he just laughed. Toney recognizes a lot of the local reporters and some of the hard core fans that are at a lot of Southern Calif. events, so he remembers who I am even if he doesn't know my name. Toney's promoter, Dan Goossen, is based in Southern Cal. To me, it seems like he is different when he is off stage. |

Have you seen Nicolay Valuev's first round win over Dick Ryan? Nicolay has only beaten a long list of bums so far, but maybe he has potential! Valuev vs Toney would be as cool as hell, and maybe even cooler...After watching Max Baer-Max Schmeling on ESPN I have to say that Baer-Quarry would have been a good matchup. Jerry was much better as an overall boxer, but Baer probably punched harder. |

Alright, that's more like it, for a minute I thought you were losing it.|

I was watching FNF last night and Teddy was talking about a top heavyweight "prospect" that might die the next time he fights......does anyone know who he was talking about? The first person that came to my mind was Evander Holyfield, although he is not a "prospect", he doesn't need to be fighting anyone anymore. Massimo, Foot Freak News Flash!......Mike Tyson wears a size 13 1/2...US of course. Remember "BigFoot" Martin....he wore a 9 1/2. Go figure. |

Kent-|

I have seen Joe Mesi in his last fight against Jirov and I think he is not that good. He can't punch hard and can't take a good punch. He ain't definitely a top contender.|

Yes, I don't think Mesi is going to be a champion. It has been a long time since I have seen a winner of a fight get beat up as bad as Mesi did against Vassiliy Jirov. Jirov, who lost most of the earlier rounds, knocked down Mesi three times in the last two rounds to come up just short on the scorecards. Jirov, a former cruiserweight champion, weighed in at 211 pounds and I felt he was too heavy and he would have boxed better and won the fight if he would have been closer to 200 pounds.Mesi also was floored in his previous fight against Monte Barrett, which Mesi barely won also.Some people at another site were saying Mesi would have destroyed JQ. I just laughed at them and told them, if Jirov and Barrett can knock down Mesi, then JQ would have destroyed him and it doesn't matter that Mesi weighs in the 230 to 235 range, their reason he would beat our Jerry. They say he is just too big and strong for Jerry to handle.
Barrett, by the way, dropped Baby Joe with a left hook, JQ's best punch. Mesi does have a good punch, and he has shown he has a lot of heart, but do JQ's critics really think he hits harder than Earne Shavers, Ron Lyle, and Mac Foster? Three punchers who's power Jerry stood up to and defeated.

Regarding the passage of S. 275 by the U.S. Senate, I want to thank Brenda and Kent for acknowledging that event. However, one important question remains. Will the House pass a version of this bill that immediately considers the major financiers of boxing events (the cable, pay per view operators and casinos) as promoters and thus under the jurisdiction of the boxing commission? Both TJQF and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing have consistently promoted this position concerning S 275 and the establishment of the commission. And here is the reason why. Without having immediate authority over these media outlets and the casinos as promoters the Commission as a federal agency would have little control over the major fights or the boxing industry itself. I realize that this might be confusing so feel free to contact me about these issues if you have any questions. Thanks for allowing me to make these comments that I am sure would be supported by both James and Jerry.

To Mr. Otto you must know by now how slow our government works, to to get anything passed is pretty good, be proud of what you and others have done. This is just the beginning, and now that something is down in writing it opens a door where before it was just a window. It is just the start on the right road and not a dead end anymore. me

I would like to encourage anyone from the U.S. who visits this site to write letters, make telephone calls, or send E-mails, to their congressman from their district and also to President Bush to ask that they support this bill in the form that was passed by the senate.

John McCain (who should be President) has been there for the recent passing bill, which I was very glad to read about. Boxing has hope after all... I agree regarding Mesi, JQ would probably pound the guy. JQ contended after just two or so years, Mesi has been messing around for how long to this point? Who is Mesi's Floyd Patterson or Thad Spencer? I don't see any for him. I'd like to see him fight Fres Oquendo, Chris Byrd or Kirk Johnson. Then Buffalo can go back to following the Bills... Glad to see someone else remember Max Schmelling again. Before politics and racism took over Joe Louis, a clear-headed Schmelling owned him. Max was pretty bewildered the second time they met, under better circumstances their rematch would not have been so brutally one-sided. Given Louis' high-rank all-time, it says a lot for Schmelling, who probably ranks ahead of JQ, that would be a very good match... I like James Toney myself, the guy definitely does fight and does back up the bluster, which is more show than substance... ESPN Classic ran Jerry's two fights with Ali again last night here, but also his first fight with Joe Frazier, which was great to see again. While JQ's wins were discussed, it's his efforts against these two in defeat that most seem to know about. Floyd Patterson was quoted as saying Jerry gave just 35% of his effort against him, and insinuated JQ was shortchanging himself by not trying harder. History, I think, proved Floyd wrong.

It is funny how just because a fighter is a white American and he wins some fights, even against nobodies, he is the next white hope and compared to JQ. Sure Mesi fans will say, "he destroyed DaVarryl Williamson," who also had a good record, but all this shows is Mesi has a good enough punch to, at times, bail him out of his shortcomings.

People have no answer when I point out that JQ would likely have won going away over Mesi. The only argument is he is too big for Jerry. If they look at the facts, Jirov is a cruiserweight who looked sluggish throughout much of his fight with Mesi because he was about ten pounds overweight for the fight, which means he is about the same size as Jerry. If Jirov can knock down Mesi three times in the fight, then it proves Jerry would not have been too small to do the same thing or more to Mesi. Jirov made the mistake that a lot cruiserweights make these days when they venture into the heavyweight ranks, they bulk up too much and they can lose their main advantage, speed and mobility. Al Cole is another example. He was cruiserweight champion but he now fights in the 220 pound range and he is nothing more than a stepping stone for up and coming heavyweights. During the press conference with the Klitschko brothers, one of the reporters made a comment that it is unusual for two white guys to be fighting for the title, in referring to Vitali verses Corrie Sanders. In the transcript whoever wrote it down tried to be politically correct by phrasing the question, "two guys fighting for the title." This makes no sense as either it has to be a typo or someone was trying to avoid the race issue. Vitali and Emanuel Steward handled the question with class. My main questions were the first two questions when the floor was opened to the reporters and they are the ones I modified from Gerry and Massimo's suggestions. The transcript does leave out the reference to "The Preem" though. It should still be on the homepage of www.eastsideboxing.com and is/was on a lot of other sites as well.

Mesi has actually gotten farther then I thought he would. His opponents have been so carefully picked its only lately hes been fighting anybody that actually had a "pulse". Jirov, although smaller then Mesi, is a real tough cookie and Mesi took some pretty hard shots early in the fight and didn't flinch. Also Mesi showed me something by still mixing it up with Jirov in the 10th when he had fight won (although maybe he wasn't aware of it...which indicates a weak corner). I rate him as a solid "pro fighter" but not a contender...who knows though, with him gaining fight experience as hes now doing, he could develope into a contender.

It's amazing the way Baer dominated and destroyed Schmeling. The only round I gave to Schmeling was the seventh. Baer was clumsy in the ring, but carried an hell of a punch. He took almost always a left-right combination. He almost never attacked with a single punch. And now, it's time to talk about Primo! He fought the n.6 heavyweight contender "Big" George Godfrey on 23 June 1930. There were 35000 boxing fans in the stadium. Godfrey was a "beast", as strong as Liston and Tyson. Before the fight he said: " I will destroy Primo within 3 rounds". In the real wordl, Big George won the first two rounds, but Primo won round 3 and 4. He was beginning to smoke... A frustrated Big George hit him under the belt in the fifth, right to the g...s and was disqualified. Yeah, it's true, Primo was one of the worst heavyweight champions. But, in his prime, he was a legittimite contender, a very tough guy. He fought 6 rounds against an in prime Joe Louis and, in the first five, was never on the canvas. Baer and Sharkey couldn't reach this goal !

Jerry Quarry would have beaten Mesi. There's no doubt in hell about that ! Mesi has not skill and fire enough to beat him. Primo would have probably beaten him too. Damiani would have, without a doubt ,beaten him. Vincenzo Cantatore, who is a devastating puncher, would have a decent chance against him. Erminio Spalla would have killed him in 30 seconds...PS; Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart is the greatest genius who ever lived. He wrote the Linz symphony K 425 in 4 days and... You can't note a single correction in the manuscript ! He was greater than Antonio Salleri ! They say he was a very short man. I wonder what his shoe size was... I love his g...s !

Messi is a hoax who is waiting to be exposed. If I were his management, I would have one big payday before that happens. I would sigh for Tyson and at least make a few million while being exposed. If JQ and Messi ever met in their prime, you would not need a referee, you would need a priest. If JQ and Messi ever met in their prime, you would not need a referee, you would need a priest. You can't put Messi in the same sentence as......

Jerry Compare him to Scott Ledoux or Tex Cobb. I think he has some skills and talent but at 30 he still hasn't beaten anyone yet. He reminds me of Duane Bobick but not as good an amateur as Bobick was. He has no chin. No big punch and can't box that good. Jerry may have been white but he fought like all of the great fighters fought and he fought against the great black fighters won most lost a few. Jerry was a great fighter plain and simple white or Black.

Good comparisons concerning Messi. Ledoux, Cobb, and Bobick while good fighters, were all limited and were exposed as such at the higher levels of the sport. Ledoux and Cobb could take a good punch while Messi appears closer to Bobick in that regard. One thing I am impressed by Messi is he has something you can't teach and that is, he has a lot of heart. He got off of the canvas in both the Barrett and Jirov fights to hold on to wins, even if barely in both cases. Personally, I thought the Barrett fight should have been scored a draw and the Jirov decision was correct as Jirov only won three rounds, the first, the ninth and the tenth. So even with 10 to 8 and 10 to 7 round scores in nine and ten, the Mesi/Jirov decision was fair. Monte Barrett appears to be a spoiler in his tough appearance against Messi and also in his recent upset win over Dominic Guinn, another up and coming heavyweight who was being billed as a world beater. It seems now that a lot of the people who handle good prospects may now stay away from Mr. Barrett.

How do you think Jerry quarry would have done against Sam Langford? Both were excellent fighters neither won championships. Old time films really don't do him justice and no doubt Dempsey called him the best fighter he ever saw and no doubt he had to fight "with handcuffs on" just to get a payday sometimes. Jack Dempsey called him the best fighter he ever saw and no doubt he had to fight "with handcuffs on" just to get a payday sometimes. Dempsey may have had trouble with the science that developed over the next 50 years when we were in the golden era of heavyweight boxing. Dempsey may have ducked Langford but Jerry wouldn't have. Jerry by a knock out over Langford toooo much skill power and finesse. Would have been a great fight. Would have been a great fight. Would have been a little costly vs Duane,But i've never been into looking for a White Hope anyway. (THERE GOOD FOR THE GATE I GUESS).|

Mesi's to Messy to ever have competed with the likes of Quarry, Jerry just got used up like they did 90% of the fighter's in L.A. And would have been a prototypical Cruiserweight and probably dominated the division. Foreman could beat Mesi right now! Bobick was sort of a mystery. I'm sure Tommy Morrison would have ko'd him. Bugner's lack of aggression, and punch. Would have been a little costly vs Duane, But i've never been into looking for a White Hope anyway. (THERE GOOD FOR THE GATE I GUESS).|

The old time fighters of Langford and Dempsey's era would have had trouble with the science that developed over the next 50 years when we were in the golden era of heavyweight boxing. Dempsey may have ducked Langford but Jerry wouldn't have. Jerry by a knock out over Langford toooo much skill power and finesse. He was National AAU champ and Olympic Representative beat Larry Holmes and other good fighters in amateurs.

I definety agree with that, Bobick going to Joe's stable to me was a mistake, they even had him boring in and crouching like SMOKIN JOE, with a reach of 82 inches and 6'3" Bobick did not have to fight like Frazier, And we all saw the results, yes Fran I remember his gym wars, if you saw Bobick's face before and after he joined Frazier and Futch. It changed dramatically. They did get him some good paydays he may have never received with BILL DANIELS IN DENVER.

It isn't so much white hopes that are popular in America. It is American white hopes. No one ever called Ingemar Johansson, who was briefly undisputed heavyweight champion or Gerrie Coetsee, who was briefly WBA champion, white hopes. Why? Because they are not American. We are also not seeing many white Americans jumping on the Klitschko brothers' bandwagon or Corrie Sanders' either. Again, because they are white but they are not Americans. In fact, I would not be surprised that a lot of white Americans were rooting for Ray Mercer, a black American, to defeat Wladimir Klitschko when the two of them fought. I know I was.

A big 2 or 3 weeks ahead for the heavyweight division. Ideally the Klitschko's will win their fights and so they should to really stamp their authority on the division. From there I hope they take on the best as in Byrd, Ruiz, Tua, Toney and not weak opponents to really bolster their credentials. One gripe I do have is Andrew Golota having the opportunity to face Byrd—how has he deserved this having only fought once in 3 1/2 years? His only top performance was 8 years ago in two thrilling encounters where he showed plenty of skills and guts. From there he was a rabbit caught in headlights against Lewis and Tyson and even had the feat of being knocked cold by Michael Grant. Oh dear.

One guy capable of defeating the Ukrainians is David Tua, particularly as he has knocked cold the 2 fighting for the WBA belt this weekend as well as Rahman and Moorer. Unfortunately he is in a current dispute with former trainers and he probably won't fight again this year meaning ring rust will ensue and leave him a limited fighter—too bad as he would have bought plenty of colour.

As for other prospects the untidy performance of Mesi and defeat of Guinn has left me to root for Audley Harrison, the 2000 gold medallist. Dubbed Audrey after a few disappointing victories in his early career by the British press, the same ones who helped poor, good-natured Frank Bruno (possibly the nicest heavyweight boxer ever—he is an icon here and opens elderly people's homes and believe it or not is more popular than the vastly superior Lewis), Harrison has 14 victories and no defeats and is improving at a really fast tempo with a superb ability to fight on the inside like a Riddick Bowe of 90-95. Predictions for the heavyweight division possible but the way fighters are matched and perform nowadays is impossible to predict. We may have champions in a couple of weeks like Brewster, Osquendo, Golota and Sanders—now that would be bad!

Bobick had some decent skills, but couldn't take a legitimate heavyweight punch. His two notorious first round KO losses (Norton and Tate) ended so quickly, he never had a chance to establish any type of fight strategy or rhythm. I wouldn't blame Frazier's gym for Bobick's failures in the big fights. In fact, if Bobick had a better chin, he might have been a lot of trouble for the best of his era. He had good stamina, was aggressive and had a good punch. He could throw punches in combinations and didn't seem to be a bleeder. His downfall was suspect defense and inability to absorb hard punches to the head. I think it's unfair that people joke about Bobick. He was an above average fighter who came up against an all-time great heavyweight (Norton) and a very good fighter at his peak (Tate) and will forever be judged on those losses.

Jimmy D: I do agree with you though—I question a tall guy with long reach having to crouch and bore in.

Bobick had a very questionable chin. If you remember, Teo Stephenson ko'd him in the Munich Olympics. I don't know who was better, Bobick or Cooney. Cooney was a much harder puncher. I think Morrison would have beaten both of them.

Cooney was better than Bobick. Cooney beat quality fighters, although they were past their prime. Also, he gave a pretty good effort against an in-prime Larry Holmes, for my money, clearly a top-five all time Heavyweight Champion. Cooney's all-out early attack would take Bobick out in short order.

Very good point about Bobick not being able to take a big punch and a matchup with Cooney would have been interesting of course in the pro's Cooney went farther but Bobick was the best in the World in the amatuers untill Stevenson knocked him out in the Olympics in 72. The year before at the 71 Pan Am Games Bobick beat Stevenson for the gold he may have been the last to beat Stevenson before he went on his great run. It seemed like after he was ko'd by Stevenson he was never the same. Cooney would have had his hands full with Bobick a guy who was the best in the world going into the 72 Olympics he had beaten Stevenson and Holmes in the amatuers and I am sure he beat a few others of that era in the amatuers and he beat Mike Weaver in the pros, I wonder if he ever fought Norton, Lyle or Shavers in the amatuers. Bobick was very respected but left his best in the amatuers.

I agree that Cooney did better against Holmes than Bobick ever could have. They both fought Norton, but there was nothing left of Norton when he fought Cooney. Of the three, I think Tommy Morrison was the only one who actually enjoyed boxing. Cooney clearly hated it. I think Morrison was also the best all around athlete of the three, although he admitted to taking steroids and that negates alot.

There is a prospect named Malcolm Tann that I met at some of the fight cards I have been attending who was a former national golden gloves heavyweight champion and who is now 9-1 as a professional and I agree that his loss a couple of fights ago against a journeyman heavyweight named Willie Chapman was a good thing for Tann.

Chapman, who has about forty professional fights and about a 50% win/loss record, taught Tann a valuable lesson, never take anyone lightly, especially one who has a lot of experience.

I had the same respect for Bobick in the early 70's as an amatuer I had for Jerry Quarry I thought they were similar in that they were both the best, Jerry as an amatuer and pro and Bobick as an amatuer. Remember Bobick beat Holmes easily in the amatueres and I think they were around the same age. He just shot his bolt in the amatueres. Cooney was getting rich in carefully set up fights and was loaded before he fought for the title and afterwards he was not hungry at all. Morrison was always hungry just too musclebound and couldn't get out of the way of a train going 10 miles an hour. Looked tough though. When they put him in with guys who could think punch move and set him up he was done. George Foreman probably made more money "losing to Morrison than he does with the Grills he sells ( I have 2 of them). Take care Everyone.
Michael Grant was not knocked out by any bum. He was knocked out last year in the seventh round by highly touted prospect Dominic Guinn, who is 29-1 and was undefeated when he beat Grant. Guinn recently suffered his first loss to Monte Barrett. The same fighter who gave Joe Mesi a lot of trouble in dropping a split decision verdict to Mesi.Grant, who is 36-3 in his career, has also been knocked out by Lennox Lewis and Jameel McCline.Grant seems to suffer the same affliction that effects a lot of heavyweights these days. He doesn't seem to take a punch very well.I think that is why someone like John Ruiz can win a portion of the heavyweight title as it seems Ruiz is one of the rare breed these days, in that he can take a good punch as apart from a first round knockout loss to David Tua a few years ago, he has stood up to some power punches.

Hey Kent give me a jingle

It took me a moment to figure out who you are. it seems you are up late too but I will wait til a better hour to call. Will call sometime in the AM, depending on when I wake up. Hope everything is well with the Mr!

I meant that a bum has been knocked out by Michael Grant in 6 rounds. His name is Hatcher. What did I say ? English is not as easy as most people say. Even if ,of course, Russian and German are more difficult. My teacher RS has( or is ?) gone away for a while and maybe I'd need an English lesson...

Ruiz is a rare breed in that he is a wrestler competing as a boxer. He doesn't get knocked out because his first move is to try and get you in a headlock. I understood what you meant Mass.

Ruiz will always attempt to win by disqualification. After a body punch he will invariably fall to floor cluthing his groin. If the ref says "no low blow" he magically jumps up as if nothing happened. I guess he figures, its worth a try. Mark my words, he will try it again.

A lot of people at other sites have been critizing Grant recently and I thought you were doing the same thing but you weren't. Sometimes it is a good thing to take some lesser opponents after a tough loss. It is part of the rebuilding process.

Do u get that HBO show "The Sopranos" where u r?Its my favorite show ever and the cast members are big fight fans.

No, I don't. Do you know Rino Tommasi ? He is the n.1 boxing commentator in Italy. I remember when Bruno hit Tyson with an hard blow in the first round of their 1989 fight ( a fight that Mike clearly won ) he shouted TYSON E' SCOSSO !!!! TYSON E' SCOSSO !!!!! It means TYSON IS SHAKEN UP !!!! I didn't realize that Tyson was in trouble. I did need the replay to understand...

Do u see fights where u r? HBO or what?

This is not easy to explain in English, but I will try ! Until a few months ago the only way I had to get boxing fights was by watching Berlusconi's Canale 5 and Italia 1. They show very few fights, essentially only Tyson's fights. That meant that I could see a fight every three years and usually it didn't last too much! And never fights from the past ! It was a disaster ! Since I have bought Sky , the situation is changed ! Now I get tons of fights. For instance, last night I have seen Michael Grant's fight. Now I even get worderful fights from the past, once a week, by ESPN. I have already seen for instance Frazier-Bonavena 1, Quarry-Shavers, Ali'-Lyle, Ali'-Blin, Ali'-Bonavena, Ellis-Quarry, Charles-Louis and, dulcis in fundo, Carnera-Sharkey 2 - Carnera-Loughran and Carnera-Godfrey !!!!!!!!Wow !

[4/10/04 07:51:24 AM] Fran|Philly|plc7755@aol.com|||10|Speaking of fights I have never seen Jerry vs Ellis Mathis Or Middleton would like to see them. If anyone knows how to get those fights let me know.......Thankks Wow !

[4/10/04 05:45:17 PM] Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Fran, Quarry verses Mathis is not available anywhere. We all have been looking for that one for years. Too bad, as it was one of Jerry's best performances. You should be able to find the others at any tape seller, such as Pat Merrick's boxing videos, he is on the Internet, is one that comes to mind. There was a guy who used to post here that had tapes for sale so if you are still out there, now is your chance to maybe sell some tapes.|
WON THAT FIRST FRAZIER FIGHT, 2 KNOCKDOWNS, IT WAS ENOUGH FOR JERRY IN THAT 2ND PATTERSON FIGHT. |

Bonavena was originally trained by Marciano's trainer Charlie Goldman for about his first nine fights. I don't know whey they broke up. Oscar had real potential. |

Thanks Kent I'll check them out. Was the Mathis fight telivised? If so then the networks would have a tape guess it wasn't.  Klitschko is inexpeirienced, shouldn't be with Steward, and should get a good physical before he does anything. The difference in corners was huge Brewsters people were right on every bit of advice they gave, Steward didn't give Klitschko anything "nice fight" is all I heard him say. He could have said throw the uppercut more or just straight punches and aim the right at Brewsters chest. He was hitting brewster high on the head except the one that almost took Brewsters head off, he wasn't hurting Brewster. Klitschko has talent and looked good but is very raw. I don't think he was hurt just ran out of gas and has no way of maintaining his composure when he is tired or hurt he just falls a part. Jerry was on the other hand very tricky and dangerous when hurt. Klitschko seems like he has never been tested. He didn't know what to do with a big southpaw who could bang or with a guy just trying to wear him out. |

Oscar Bonavena never beat Joe Frazier. If ( or weither) you give the second round 10-8 to Oscar, Frazier is 1 point ahead at the end of the fight, if you give the round 10-7 to Oscar, you have a draw. As the second knockdown wasn't that impressive, I think it was a 10-8 round, not 10-7. Bonavena won round 2 and 10. Frazier won the following rounds: 4, 5, 8, 9. I'm an expert on this subject ! I have the tape of the fight. But Bonavena was very very strong. Oscar Natalio would have easily beaten Lamon Brewster ! Lamon is, yeah, a good fighter but you know... He is no Carnera... |

I thought the first Frazier-Bonavena fight was very close. Could have been called a draw. Joe clearly won the second fight. Oscar took a real pounding and could not even see at the end of the fight and actually had to be led out by his handlers. Oscar was NOT the first man to scored a knockdown against Joe - 245lb Mike Bruce was the first to deck Joe in the pros. |

Klitschko just isn't world class. He's showed flashes of talent on occasion---maybe SOME of the raw skills it takes to be world class, but that's about it. If you're inconsistent, have a questionable chin and no stamina, you're not a Top 10 fighter. Guys (and ladies), Klitschko ain't world class material. Never has been. I think a lot of people WANT him to be great. That's not enough. |

There are some rumors floating arong the Internet that Wladimir Klitschko is a diabetic and that he had dangerous blood sugar levels after the fight.But even if this is true, it doesn't solve the problem that he can't take a punch because even if he would have made it back to his corner after round five, he still would have vunerable to the next bombs Brewster would land in round six and thereafter. Klitschko fans should face it. Every time Wladimir gets hit with a big punch, he folds up like a card table. He can solve all of his stanima problems but this won't solve his inhearent weak chin problem.
Wladimir reminds me of Duane Bobick in this regard because remember Bobick could look like a world beater when his opponents didn't have the skills to fight back hard but once Bobick faced fighters who could fight back hard and hurt him he folded up too. People forget Bobick was 36-0 or 38-0 when he fought Norton and was knocked out in less than one round and that Bobick at times looked like he had the skills to become heavyweight champion of the world, just like Wladimir.

Yes, but I really believe that Vitali is a champion. We'll see him soon against Corrie Sanders. I think that Vitali Klitschko is the best heavyweight in the world right now.

Bonavena went 25 RDS TOTAL W/Frazier without getting hurt, they gave the first fight to Frazier because he was a up and coming fighter, Frazier was very overrated, all he had was that funky left hook that did him no good against Foreman, why? Because it didn't have the power that everybody thought it had. Frazier could be hurt and should have been knocked out in the 2nd Ali fight, he was not at all a Superman!!

Klitschko's loss is baffling, but also revealing. All the talent in the world, but no chin. Reminds me of another 6-6 or so guy who fell short to Larry Holmes despite his best efforts. You need a chin to last in this sport, and even more than that. Without it, even this former Olympic champ can fall to a trial horse puncher he may have taken very lightly.

Unbelievable... Comparing Joe-Oscar to Jerry-Floyd not very accurate. Oscar had four very good rounds, was clearly outpunched even in most of those. Joe wins on points, despite Oscar's terrific effort. I'd call Oscar a more energetic Chuvalo, not quite as big a bomber. Clearly a top five contender in his best days, Jerry would have beat him. Jerry could not be hurt by Floyd in any round, boxed surprisingly well for being so young, was not up against a puncher like Joe, could wait for Floyd to come in and counter. Jerry-Floyd had draw rounds, I didn't really see any in Joe-Oscar. Floyd also is a good picture for Klitschko. Floyd was a brilliant boxer, so-so chin sent him to the canvas more times than Picasso. It's a tough sport... I agree regarding Mesi, this guy should cash in vs. Tyson or someone rather than trying to win one of the fifteen, um, world belts.

They did not give Oscar enough points for the knockdown, I really don't think that Frazier could compete today, just too small. His punches would mean nothing to these giants now a days.

I have seen the whole fight 3 times. Yes, if you give the 2 round 10-7 to Bonavena, it might have been a draw. But in no way Bonavena won that fight. Joe Frazier was always the aggressor, while Oscar fought a defensive fight. At the time, Frazier wasn't as good in defence as he became later. He didn't move the head as well as in his bouts against Ali'. I don't agree in part with you with the fact that Joe would be too small against today's fighters. I think that today's fighters are often too heavy! For instance Jameel McCline. He weights 265 lbs, but I don't think he is that good. He doesn't hit that hard, he is so clumsy in the ring. He was having his ass whupped by Boswell, he was dominated by Wladimir Klitschko. He is a good fighter and would surely be a very good bouncer, but he definately ain't a top contender. He is so clumsy in the ring, he moves like a mummy! I think I'm gonna call him "the mummy". Jameel "The Mummy" McCline. Do you really believe that McCline would have beaten Joe Frazier, Jerry Quarry or Rocky Marciano? I really don't think so! Don't forget that Joe Frazier clearly beat some big guys in the names of Mathis and Bugner, for instance. And I wouldn't call Muhammad Ali' a midget even if he wasn't a big heavyweight for modern standards and he did look a dwarf beside Wilt and would have looked short.
beside Andre' the Tall or Warren Coolidge! It depends on what you mean when you say that he couldn't compete today. I think that Joe would have had problems against the big and skillful fighters like Vitali Klitschko, Lennox Lewis or Riddick Bowe. I don't know, maybe Joe would have lost against these three guys in their primes.

In this so called age of the giants, the IBF title is held by Byrd, 211 pounds, the WBA title was recently vacated by Roy Jones Jr, 193 pounds (dripping wet!), and is held by John Ruiz, 225 pounds and the not so prestigious WBO title is held by Lamon Brewster, also 225 pounds. These fighters are not giants and they are not much bigger than fighters from JQ's era and Frazier's and Jones is smaller than both JQ and Joe F and he proved he is better than Ruiz. Not to mention, Vitali K still has to prove himself against another 225 pounder in Corrie Sanders and this result is still very much in doubt.

There I have presented many examples of why Joe Frazier could compete today, that the giants of the game are not dominating. I doubt any of the fighters I have listed could defeat Joe or JQ for that matter, at their best. In fact, smaller fighters, in the range of 210 to 220 are holding their own. OF COURSE KOO KOO NEVER GIVES FACTS AS TO WHY JOE COULDN'T COMPETE, JUST HIS BIAS AGAINST JOE. The fact is if Jones, Jirov, Byrd, and Barrett can compete well today, than Joe would do even better than them!

You use Oscar Bonevena, one of the most durable and toughest fighters of his era to prove Joe had no punch. this doesn't prove Joe had no punch, it proved Oscar was tough and could take a good punch. You use George Foreman, a bigger fighter than Joe, as an example of why Joe couldn't compete with the bigger fighters of today because he knocked Joe out twice. Again, you would be missing the point. The point being that Foreman had a high skill level, higher than today's fighters. This high skill level was what was needed to beat Frazier, not just size.
by KO during the 1990s well into his forties shows the weakness of recent heavyweights as far as skills go. Larry Holmes and Tim Witherspoon were also effective well into their forties. This again shows fighters from the past were better than their recent and current counterparts.

| 4/14/04 01:03:57 PM | kookoo | ny | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 | KENT YOU MUST BE CRAZY! WHEN SINCE DID FOREMAN EVER HAVE ANY SKILL, SIZEBRUT FORCE IS ALL HEEVER HAD, I JUST WISH I COULD BE ABLE TO SET IT UP, SOME THESE LINEMAN IN THENFL WOULD KNOCKOUT FRAZIER, IT'S NOT A MATTER OF SKILL AGAINST FRAZIER, YOU JUST HAVE TO BE BIG AND HIT HARD, FRAZIER HAS BEEN SHOOK BY FAT BOY RON STANDER, ALI 2ND FIGHT, JUMBO CUMMINGS, WHO JUST HAD MUSCLE NOTHING ELSE, I HATE TO ADMIT THESE THINGS AS I LOVE THE HEAVYS OF THE PAST, BUT THIS IS REALITY KENT, SHOW ME ONE FIGHT WHERE FRAZIER KNOCKED SOMEONE OUT WITH 1 PUNCH, IT DIDN'T HAPPEN, EVEN IN HIS BEST CONDITION FRAZIER LOOKED FAT, BECAUSE IT WAS HIS NATURAL WAY OF BEING, I DON'T BELIEVE ANY OF THAT CRAP FORMAN SAYS, HE ALWAYS BUILDS PEOPLE UP, WHAT A LIAR HE IS!! |

| 4/14/04 02:40:48 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Linemen from the NFL knocking out the great Joe Frazier? Now that is funny! I could take any average journeyman heavyweight with say, forty professional fights, even one in the 215 pound range, and match him against any 300 + pound football lineman who has no boxing experience and the football player would be lucky to make it out of the second round. Haven't you ever seen the toughman contests on television where the football players fight it out? They are pathetic as far as boxing skills go and most of them couldn't even beat me if I was in any kind of shape let alone Smokin Joe Frazier. Another example is about last year, 210 pound Davarryl Williamson knocked out 320 pound American Corey Sanders (not to be confused with South African Corrie Sanders). American Sanders has much more boxing skill than any NFL football player but he still lost. You Koo Koo would have said a football player could probably beat Williamson because he is a small heavyweight. It is true alot of potential boxers go into football at an early age and these players could have been good boxers if they had boxed from an early age but they haven't boxed and they wouldn't last in the ring because of this.All things being equal, size will win out if skill levels are even, that is why boxing has weight classes. But skill can often overcome size if the skills are above the larger fighter's level.|
super-sized heavyweights who have been shown to be better than smaller heavyweights. I was trying to show koo koo that even now, when the average heavyweight is somewhat bigger than they used to be (but not giant), that a lot of smaller heavyweights are still having success in the division and that people such as Joe Frazier could compete now and do well. I hope you take the time to comment on Joe Frazier verses some NFL linemen!

I hope you take the time to comment on Joe Frazier verses some NFL lineman!" (QUOTE) Joe Frazier would have no problem with ANY NFL lineman or any other pro athlete who thinks he can jump into a ring and box. The toughman contests are a good example which were mentioned earlier. These guys can't even execute a punch properly and run out of steam inside of the first three minutes. Just because a guy is big and heavy doesn't mean he can box. I have to agree that the smaller heavyweights are more of a total package. When you consider the likes of FRAZIER, TYSON, MARCIANO, CHARLES, DEMPSEY, QUARRY...to name just a few, as well as ALI, LOUIS AND HOLMES, who were not exactly giants. These guys were key players throughout the history of the heavyweight division. Although Joe was not one of my all time favourites, it would be a mistake to under-rate a fighter of his profile. He was the main event from '68 to '72, as was Ali during his reign and Tyson through the middle to late 80's. If you look for one dominant heavyweight currently, you won't find one. Today's champion (and there are many) is tomorrow's chump. They come and they go, but they never seem to be consistent. Let's unify the title, get rid of crooked promoters and we just might be able to restore the GOLDEN ERA of heavyweight boxing.

TRUE THE LINEMAN WOULD NEED ABOUT 1 YR TRAINING, BUT NOT ALL OF THEM, LOOK AT SOME OF THOSE GUYS THEY WOULD JUST OVERPOWER FRAZIER, HOW MANY BIG MEN DID FRAZIER EVER BEAT? ELLIS, QUARRY, BONAVENA, SMALL COMPARED TO NOW, THINK ABOUT IT, IN ALL OTHER SPORTS THEY'VE BETTER, IS THERE SOMETHING DIFFERENT ABOUT BOXING THAT THESE PEOPLE COULDN'T EXCEL, NO WAY. FRAZIER WAS GREAT FOR HIS TIME, THAT'S IT. HE DID NOT HOLD THE TITLE THAT LONG, AS YOU COULD ONLY COUNT HOW LONG HE HELD IT AFTER THE FIRST ALI FIGHT, NOT ELLIS, THAT WAS A JOKE:))

Was Buster Mathis small? Was Joe Bugner small? Bah! Was Jimmy Ellis a joke? He dominated Oscar Bonavena, Jerry Quarry and Leotis Martin, while Joe Frazier dominated him! Anyway, LYLE and SHAVERS would have been dangerous opponents for Joe Frazier.

Jimmy Ellis did not dominate Jerry. Ellis won a fifteen round split decision over Jerry in 1968. It was a very close fight in which some observers thought Jerry won. By the way, Jerry fought that fight with an injured vertebrae. He essentially fought Ellis with a broken back that wasn't discovered until after the fight.

You know that I think that Jerry Quarry was a great fighter even if not in the class of Ali', Foreman and Frazier. He is a legitimate top 30 all time heavyweight but this doesn't change what I think about the Ellis-Quarry bout. I have seen the whole fight on ESPN, but round 11 and, very honestly, I think that Jerry won only the fifth round. I have 9-1-4 for Ellis on my scorecards. Jerry wasn't brilliant on that night, he almost never took the initiative. His best punch was a left hook in round 13. I just don't understand how that fight was judged a split decision. Of course, the fact that he was injured explains at least partially what happened that night. I just wanted to make a point: Jimmy Ellis was not a
The only football player that I have ever personally seen who could fight a very little was the late Lyle Alzado. He did fight in the amateurs and was beaten by Ron Stander who years later fought Frazier. The other guys like Too Tall Jones, Mark Gastineau, etc. were jokes. Gastineau was too dumb to know his fights were fixed -- well maybe he did know.

I wouldn't say that ELLIS was a joke either, but he wasn't top shelf by any means. His fight with QUARRY was close, as I recall. JERRY had difficulty fighting his fight that night. ELLIS was cagey enough not to be turned around on the ropes. JERRY was quite an effective counter puncher. That technique works beautifully if your opponent fails to connect. It wasn't JERRY'S night, unfortunately.

Getting back to ELLIS; PATTERSON took him apart when they met, but they gave the decision to ELLIS. FRAZIER beat him and so did ALI, twice. As is often the case, when a paper champion meets the real deal...well I think we all know the general outcome.

Ellis might not have been WELL POSITIONED on the top shelf, but he was still ON the top shelf among others of his time! He beat some very good fighters---showed good speed, boxing ability and foot movement. Had adequate power when he needed it and when the opportunity presented itself. He wasn't a good textbook defensive fighter, but he had a style that worked to make his opponents miss. He won a lot more than he lost and his in-prime losses were to some of the all-time greats. He was cursed with one of the same things Jerry was---fighting in an era of the best ever heavyweights. In fact, I'd place him in Jerry's company and that's definitely top shelf.

Pete, Ellis was a very good fighter and I would not call him a paper champion. Yes Frazier proved to be the better fighter when the two of them fought but it wasn't Ellis' fault that Frazier had decided against entering the WBA tournament and Ellis won the tournament fair and square. Because before Frazier and Ellis fought, their seperate titles were disputed, not paper titles and this was settled in the ring. Frazier held the title recognized by the New York State Athletic Commission, several other states, and some foreign countries that would later be recognized as the WBC. Who is to say Frazier's title, before he fought Ellis, was any better than Ellis' title? Of course Ali, before he fought Frazier, was saying he was still the real champion as no one had taken his title in the ring.

WHAT I MEAN IS THAT FRAZIER CLAIMING BEING CHAMP BY BEATING ELLIS IS A JOKE NOT ELLIS BEING A JOKE. BUGNER CAN'T FIGHT, BONAVENTA CAN'T FIGHT, STILL ALMOST BEAT FRAZIER, WHAT DO YOU SAY TO THAT?

Even the great Ali' had a very hard time against Bugner. Maybe he wasn't even ahead on points after 14 rounds or if he was, not by much. I have to say that Frazier fought Bugner soon after his devastating loss against the "monster" George Foreman. He didn't fight a bum as so many fighters do soon after a defeat. He fought an European Champion ( or former European champion I don't remember), a guy who beat Mac Foster ( even if an over the hill version of Mac Foster), gave Ali' a tough fight ( Ali' himself said that his first fight against Joe Bugner was tough) and lasted the whole fight against Ron Lyle. A curiosity: I have recently read on the Internet a Joe Bugner's comment in which he says that he took his worst beating in the ring by (or from) Ron Lyle. He says that after the fight he had a broken jaw and broken ribs and that many weeks were needed to recover. He also said that fighting the distance against Ali' and Frazier wasn't close to be so hard! RS, WHERE ARE YOU? PAUL IS GONE, NOW EVEN RS IS GONE! THIS SITE AIN'T THE SAME WITHOUT YOU TWO!

I wouldn't say FRAZIER'S title was better than ELLIS' title, Kent, but FRAZIER was "THE" most significant heavyweight on the scene at that time. If you saw him demolish GEORGE CHUVALO...well it was apparent that he was well on the way. FRAZIER made the right decision by staying out of the tournament. It created an extra pay day for him, although I found the tournament quite interesting, particularly when SPENCER floored TERRELL. "WHAT I MEAN IS THAT FRAZIER CLAIMING BEING CHAMP BY BEATING ELLIS IS A JOKE" (QUOTE)

Who else was there for him to beat KK? He was the best heavyweight at that time, with the only exception being ALI who was forced out of the ring during the peak of his career. ALI/FRAZIER '68 would have been a great fight to have seen. Both fighters would have been at the top of their game. I'd put my money on ALI!!!

Smokin' Joe was a great warrior, but if Ali never went into exile---a 1968 Ali would have boxed circles around Frazier and in my opinion, would have won a fairly easy decision. The fact that Ali had ring rust from three years of inactivity, then minimal rounds of tune-ups, and STILL fought Frazier closely tells me that if he was never away from the game, he would have beaten Frazier decisively. The most amazing part of Ali's career is that for all his accomplishments (too many to list), the BEST THREE YEARS of an athlete's career were not even in the mix for him.

Buster Mathis was a good fighter who at 6'5" tall and 245 pounds was the size of all of the fighters you say would kick Joe Frazier's butt. Remember, you think this is way too big for Joe to handle. Mathis was a good boxer who had a decent punch and he was at least as good, but probably better than Michael Grant, Jameel McCline, Lou Savarse, and maybe even better than Wladimir Klitschko, now that we now Klitschko cannot take a punch. All these again are examples of the giant fighters you think would destroy Joe because of their size. Yet, Joe wore down Mathis on the way to stopping him in the 11th round. Mathis fought well in this fight and in fact won probably the first three rounds and he was even on one of the scorecards when he was knocked out.
think Mathis couldn't fight, then look at his biggest win over George Chuvalo. It was a dirty fight in which both fighters almost made it a street fight. Mathis overcame adversity in this fight to pull out the win, by decision. Mathis was 30-4, 21 by KO in his career and his only losses were to Frazier, Muhammad Ali, Ron Lyle, and our own Jerry Quarry, not bad company I would say and it's no shame to lose to those guys!

Mathis was 30-4, 21 by KO in his career and his only losses were to Frazier, Muhammad Ali, Ron Lyle, and our own Jerry Quarry, not bad company I would say and it's no shame to lose to those guys! |

4/16/04 12:23:21 PM|Sabrina Quarry-Porter|Florida||sabrinaquarry-porter@aol.com|||10|HAPPY BIRTHDAY DAD!!!!!WE LOVE AND MISS YOU ALWAYS IN OUR HEARTS FOREVER!!!!|

4/16/04 12:40:14 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|KENT: by the time Mathis fought Lyle he was totally washed up. Nothing left. His legs were gone.|

4/16/04 02:29:34 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|One thing about Ring Magazine they did not recognize either the WBA tournament or the New York Athletic Commission and had Ali as Champion until his official retirement in 1970. Although Frazier fought for it and won it, he was a much more active Champ then most early on, taking on top rated Mathis, Ramos, Bonavena, Quarry on his way to Ellis. While Ellis had the long layoff after his controversial decision over Patterson in Sweden. I think our Mr. Quarry was rushed upon the scene way to early I know Ali and Tyson were brought up faster to the title, but they were exceptions to the rule, Jerry was really rushed vs Alongi who was in the worlds top 20 at the time.|

4/16/04 06:51:55 PM|mark sargeant|uk||lpu00mts@reading.a.uk|||10|With all due respect anyone who criticises a boxer cannot realistically acknowledge the depth of pain and torture some of these men have to go through during fights and sadly for some like Quarry, Ali and Page for a long time afterwards. Men oft derided such as Coopman, Evangelista etc are often panned despite the fact that they were skilled and brave fighters. You can't compare everyone to greats such as Ali, Louis and Foreman and then regard the rest as average. Mathis for such a big guy was a very, if not remarkably skilled boxer who Frazier acknowledged in his book outboxed and outthought him. He had some creditable wins and brave performances and was no way a chump. Bugner took huge punishment against Frazier and Lyle yet didn't quit and also beat a couple of fine fighters such as Ellis and Foster. Not every fighter is as good as Ali so criticising the ones who come up short is terrible and insulting-you can bet the top guys who fought them had real respect for them and hence lesser mortals like us should certainly be more respectful.|

4/16/04 10:26:17 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Well said Mark, anyone who calls certain fighters chumps or questions their courage obviously has never even set foot near a boxing ring and they have no credibility.Not only did Bugner show a lot of guts for lasting the distance against brutal fighters like Frazier and Lyle, he was very much in both of these fights. Bugner fought back hard and I am sure has the respect of both Frazier and Lyle.|

4/16/04 11:43:45 PM|kookoo|ny||kookoooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|KENT LETS' NOT TRY TO MAKE MATHIS BIGGER THAN HE WAS, HE WAS 6'3 BY ALL ACCOUNTS. A YESTERDAY BIG GUY, WHICH MOST OF KNOW DO NOT MOVE AND PERFORM LIKE TODAYS BIG GUYS, I DON'T MEAN TO SOUND COLD , BUT GREG PAGE CAN BLAME HIS HARDHEADED SELF FOR WHAT HAPPENED TO HIM, IT'S ALL EGO WITH THESE GUYS, THEY THINK THEY CAN FIGHT FOREVER|

4/17/04 04:26:39 AM|Jeffrey B.|LA||jeffreybee@yahoo.com|||10|Frasier is a big disappointment. The recent charge against him for assaulting his girl friend is bad enough. Ive just read a book in which Frasier adsmits being a car thief as a child. On top of that he is an alcoholic. The other thing that aloyed me about him was that he always had an excuse when he lost. He never took a loss on the chin. He comes across as very, very bitter. Every other fighter has civil things to say about Ali but not Frasier. Frasier said that he was glad that Ali has brain damage and stuff like that. As soon as I read that I stopped respecting Frasier. I think its sad that Frasier ended up so bitter and twisted. He ended up with no dignity. Someone said that Frasier was finished after the 3rd fight against Ali. I think Joe was shot after the first Ali fight. He had long periods of inactivity and avaded the main contenders after then. Frasier was overated for sure.

I just don't understand why Joe Frazier is so angry with Cassius Clay. Cassius, during his career, said bad things about all his opponents, and it was only for promoting fights! It happened 30 years ago, and wasn't, anyway, too important. Joe should find the strengh to forgive (or of forgiving) Ali'.

Frazier probably wouldn't be recognized as a great champion without his three fights against Ali'. Besides that, there were occasions in which Muhammad spoke with great respect of Joe Frazier, for instance soon after the Thrilla in Manilla. In that occasion Cassio Marcello said that Frazier was the second best heavyweight of all time. There is no doubt that Joe Frazier was a champion, but maybe he is only a worm as a human being.

Joe Frazier is human, he has made mistakes as all of us have also.

I admire Joe Frazier as a boxer and while I thought he had more character than he might have, I have no way of knowing as I don’t know the man and I have never met him. Like I said, he is a flawed human being, no more or no less than my plumber example.

I keep hearing this is the age of the super-sized heavyweight but not one of them, with the exception of Lennox Lewis has acheived anything close to greatness.

I will say it again, when someone such as Vitali Klitschko wins a major title and defends it again't all comers numerous times, then we can say that a giant of today has shown greatness, not until then.

On the other hand when smaller heavyweights such as James Toney, Monte Barrett, Chris Byrd, Fres Oquendo, Dominic Guinn, and Vissilly Jirov are fighting at or near the top ten level of the sport, this shows me the smaller men are doing at least as good if not better than the bigger fighters.

Once again, the Koo Koo Klock says as if it is fact that the bigger heavyweights are better than smaller heavyweights, because of their size and strength. But he never gives facts or examples as to why this is so.

What's a plumber? I'd need a dictionary or RS!

I have watched on Internet and I have learnt that a plumber is " un idraulico ". Well, 1 word today, one word tomorrow... Thanks Kent !
in other sports such as track and field where faster is measured as being better but it doesn't work for boxing. Did Lewis beat Holyfield just because of size? Or did he catch a champion who had already started to slow down due to age? If Lewis did win because of his size advantage, then this only one example. There has to be more than one example for this to be the age of the bigger heavyweights and I don’t see the bigger guys doing any better than their smaller counterparts.

---

4/17/04 09:00:57 PM| kookoo| ny|| kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10
OK KENT, WHY DON'T WE LET SOME OTHER PEOPLE WEIGH IN ON THIS SUBJECT, IF SKILL WAS EVERYTHING THEN SUGAR RAY ROBINSON WOULD HAVE BEEN HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMP, IF JERRY QUARRY HAD THE SAME REACH AND SIZE OF ALI, THEN ALI WOULD WIN ON POINTS, NOT A KNOCKOUT, YOUR FORCED TO EAT PUNCHES WHEN YOU SHORTER, THATS A FACT!! KOOKOO IS A LONGTIME STUDENT OF THE GAME AND I'M MORE QUARRY LIKE THAN YOU KENT!!

4/17/04 09:03:44 PM| kookoo| ny|| kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10
BRENDA, SONYA, WHERE ARE THE QUARRYS? I'D LIKE TO SEE SOME UPDATES ON THIS SITE, I WANT TO HEAR MORE STORIES ABOUT JERRY, CARL WAKEUP! MAKE THE CHANGES!

4/17/04 11:08:52 PM| Sheri| Paso Robles | 10
it is really sad to see this sit turn to a battle of wits. i thought these pages were for you the fans to talk about boxing and other things. not turn it into a site were if you don't like what the other person is saying to verbally abuse them. i thought you were all adults? you act like my kids and they are 3 and 2. my uncles would be very sad to see what you as fans are doing to this to eachother.

4/17/04 11:12:54 PM| Sheri| Paso Robles | 10
oh and by the way Trace Atkin has a shoe size of 16 E but he is only a country singer that is 6'7".

4/18/04 01:40:48 AM| Massimo|Roma | 10
16 E is exactly what have written on their soles Duncan and Jabbar ! Not bad at all ! I'm a  5'6" pituitary giant ( I have played this role in many movies) and I wear 40 in Italy, I guess I'd wear about 7 in US.... Is that big or what ?

4/18/04 08:57:10 AM| brenda| ca| 10
I was sitting her thinking of Jim his Birthday just pasted, he would have been 60. I sure miss him. Then we have Jerry's next month. However, i was thinking about a time when Jim and Jerry were in high school. Jim would start a fight with someone, then just as it was getting to the niddey gritty Jim would yell ok Jerry take him. Jim sat around for years laughing about how many fights he got Jerry into. Have a good day everyone and thanks for still comming to the page. Hopely soon there will be more one the page.

---

4/18/04 09:58:43 AM| kookoo| ny|| kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10
YOU SEE THAT KENT YOU CHALLENGE A QUARRY TO DO SOMETHING , THEY STEP UP, OK BRENSA I WILL BACK OFF THE SUBJECT WITH KENT, KENT IS RIGHT THERE HAVE BEEN MUCH WORSE TIMES ON HERE, WITHOUT A DOUBT YOUR BROTHERS MEMORIES DESERVE RESPECT

4/18/04 03:40:18 PM| mark sargeant| uk| 10
Rather predictably saturday's big fights were disappointments. Ruiz, and i suppose you have to give him some credit as he notched another top 10 fighter on his win list and neither is he afraid to fight quickly unlike Byrd and Tua, served up a real yawn with Osquendo. Byrd and golota was much better with Byrd showing some good, crisp but hardly explosive stuff and Golota using some intelligence and pretty neat skills at the end. Sadly a draw is pretty unsatisfactory for the division and the thought of waiting another 6 or 7 months for a rematch is not something to look forward to.

Mark, I was at a local fight card in the afternoon and I didn't make it back in time to watch the heavyweight card. A lot of the fans and the media are saying Galota won but was robbed of the decision. Who do you think won the fight? Anyone else out there, please post your opinion.

It appears that Ruiz once again pulled out a win in a sloppy fight. It seems he has an uncanny ability to rise to the occasion even when the rise is not to a very high level.

Golota is a very strong fighter, with probably a decent shoe size. His only flaw is the lack of "mental stability". Tyson-Golota was "Stell" Mike Tyson's last great fight! Too bad for Mike that he destroyed his own win by assuming mariujana. I was thinking: Ruiz is heavyweight champion of the world, Byrd is heavyweight champion of the world. I think that Jerry was better of both them. Nowadays he would be heavyweight champion of the world! Maybe not undisputed, but anyway champion of the world. Ciao. Eat lasagne, they are so good! I haven't seen Byrd-Golota, so I can't judge the fight.

If you go to the Las Vegas Sun website (lasvegassun.com) and hit "columnists" then go to "accent columnists" you will find an April 16 article about JQ.

Thanks JQ Fan!

I think you put it very well. That pretty much sums up how fights are scored and why people see things differently---leading to disputed decisions. I didn't see the fight. The way you describe it, I'd probably score it for Byrd. Of course, it also depends how consistent the fighter is throughout the fight---the old "stealing a few rounds" method. Ali managed to get decisions over Shavers and Norton, who clearly landed the harder, more effective punches. Apparently the judges saw merit in what both fighters did in the fight, hence the draw verdict.

I think you put it very well. That pretty much sums up how fights are scored and why people see things differently---leading to disputed decisions. I didn't see the fight. The way you describe it, I'd probably score it for Byrd. Of course, it also depends how consistent the fighter is throughout the fight---the old "stealing a few rounds" method. Ali managed to get decisions over Shavers and Norton, who clearly landed the harder, more effective punches, by landing more (albeit lighter) punches himself. He'd win more rounds even though Shavers and Norton had far better rounds in the ones they won. When I scored a fight, it would take a knockdown for me to give it to someone 10-8 (on the point must). For that reason, Ali would win a lot of 10-9 rounds by looking better (ring generalship) with the pitter-pat punches. I could see how you would score Norton the winner in their third fight, but in Ali's fight against Shavers, I think he won fairly comfortably even though Shavers got the better of him with the harder punches. If there was any doubt, he erased it with the strong finish.

Saw Jerry Quarry on 'Knight Rider' the other day and remembered this site. Anyone ever see this episode? Norton was in it, Palamino was in it...and David Hasslehoffer!! of the real Quarry's a book and the truth comes out. I know what was happening with the Quarry's back when Tina is talking about and they did not stay together that long. Jerry would get money from his family to send to Tina. But anyway the real truth will come out someday and those so called friends will not like reading the truth about them selves for the world to read, i will even help them if they decide to write such a book. Knowing them as i do they will say just consider the source. Seems to me she still wants her name in the paper, if remarried why still use quarry?

[4/20/04 08:41:54 PM|KENT|LA HABRA, CA||KENTALLENENT@AOL.COM|||10|Real fan, what did Tina say about Jerry in the article? In a way I don't want to hear negative things about Jerry but you got me curious. WELCOME BACK EVREN! YES WE ARE STILL HERE! I HOPE YOU COME BACK OFTEN AND CONTRIBUTE!|]

[4/20/04 10:00:18 PM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree, Ca||Sonia90101@aol.com|||10|Hey All, whats up? Computers been down, for the last couple weeks, Windows crashed on us, so having to use this old one, with the AOL 7.0, but hey it works. Anyways, is everyone being good or what? Take care and be safe all. Dad, and Uncle Jerry, you are really loved, and missed daily!|

[4/21/04 08:11:12 AM|brenda|ca|meme@trien|||10|I am doing a school paper on the dangers of boxing, does anyone know where i can search for this information? I have found some research on the brain trama however i need at least ten resources only have five. real fan read vegas paper, i don't get it either Jerry was very good to his wifes and there children they all love him and respect him Jerry was a humanbeing and when he and tina meet Jerry already had brain damage please don't kick when he was down. |

[4/21/04 12:18:22 PM|Fran|philly|plc7755|||10|I didn't know anything about Jerry from 77 on except the comeback in 83 and within the past few years the 92 comeback so reading that article was interesting because I know that he married a third time and was married for 10 years thats a long time. Thanks for posting it.|

[4/21/04 12:21:50 PM|Fran|philly|plc7755@aol.com|||10|Brenda I think they did a big study on Boxing and dementia in England within the past 10 years if I find it I'll let you know|

[4/21/04 02:34:42 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|I read the article too and I didn't see anything that was really putting Jerry down. She mentions some things we have already heard about, such as drug use and drinking and that their marriage waw up and down but she also says that she and Jerry remained friends after their divorce.The one part of the article that might upset the Quarrys is she says they took Jerry off of life support at the end of his life and she disagreed with that decision but couldn't do anything about it as she was not married to him anymore. This is something I can't comment on as this is a family matter involving the Quarrys.|}

[4/21/04 04:04:46 PM|brenda|ca|meme@timtin|||10|Maybe people don't see this as bad, but i do because jerry did so much good for people including tina that why not talk about the good and not keep putting the bad he did. He drank beer and yes he tried some drugs but not enough for people to say he was a drugie because he was not. He did not even smoke cigs. He took care of all of his family including his ex's even after they had split up. most boxers have taken a bad rap for their life styles. I remember when my mom's camper caught on fire the head lines read quarry's lose again.I suspose that's the price you pay for fame. I just felt if you are going to talk to the press, why not the good instead of the bad. But that's me |
I DIDN'T THINK THERE WAS ANYTHING WRONG WITH WHAT TINA SAID IN THAT ARTICLE. EVERYONE IS ENTITLED TO THEIR OWN OPINION... SHE SAID WHAT SHE FEELS. AND THE TRUTH MAY HURT SOME PEOPLE, BUT IT WOULDN'T HURT UNLESS IT WAS TRUE.....

Regardless of whatever anyone says about Jerry, I still have a lot of respect for him. So someone pointing out he had some flaws does not diminish my respect for him one bit as he was a human being who made some mistakes in life, as we all have. I do believe that there was more good than bad in Jerry by far and that is how he will be remembered.

The article wasn't that bad. Nothing really new. No one claimed Jerry was perfect. No one is, no one should be expected to be. But as someone else pointed out, if she has remarried why does she still use the name Quarry? I was just happily surprised to see Jerry remembered in a newspaper article in 2004. It's been a while since I've seen anything written about him outside this site. I thought other Quarry fans would find it interesting as well. Putting aside the mention of his problems - which we'd all heard about - the piece made reference to Jerry as a guy with a heart of gold and the greatest fighter never to win a title. Not bad. I was especially pleased, as I expect all of Jerry's fans were, to learn that his son Jonathan is doing well. I can tell you that life can be particularly challenging for young men growing up here in Las Vegas; as you might imagine, there are plenty of "distractions". Jonathan's decision to devote his energies to ROTC is commendable. If you happen to read this, Jonathan, congratulations to you, and best of luck as you prepare to enter into the service of your country. Be safe. I am sure that your father would be proud of you.

Among the heavyweights I think the greatest fighters are: 1. Muhammad Ali - he beat all the best in 2 decades of fighting. 2. George Foreman - he completely creamed the only two fighters who beat Ali when Ali was still pretty close to his prime (Frazier and Norton), besides coming back a decade later to become the oldest heavy champ ever. 3. Joe Louis - I'm not really in his generation, but he had a great record. He couldn't have beaten Foreman because he was more of a puncher than a clever boxer and he was smallish heavyweight. Ali would have found a way to beat Louis by outboxing him. There is no absolute 4. There are a lot of fighters that I would rate at 4: Lennox, Evander, Larry Holmes, Tyson, Frazier, Liston, Norton, maybe even Riddick Bowe, oops, I left off Marciano - well, like Louis it would be difficult for me to rate him, he's just not in my generation. Jerry Quarry was a great fighter too, based on his victories over Ron Lyle, Eddie Machen, etc.
also... Andrew Golota showed up, Chris Byrd got another sketchy keeping of his belt, rematch is a must. Golota has been an enigma, obvious talent, so much emotionality. Actually was bombing Micheal Grant all thru their fight before inexplicably quitting despite being way ahead in points. Claimed horrendous injuries against Tyson, but is fine now? Was a deer in the headlights vs. L. Lewis, but has some major wins against contenders. Which Golota shows up next? ... Klitschko/Sanders is this weekend, any thoughts? One of those Russians needs to deliver, where is the division if he doesn't? Sanders is very savvy and tough, could go 2-0 versus these guys. I have to think Vitali won't let it go that way. Enjoyed watching them on '60 Minutes'.

| 4/23/04 07:11:12 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 |

Ted:Nice analysis---though I happen to think Larry Holmes is better than most of the guys you grouped him with. Holmes took all comers for about 7 years and consistently delivered. Like Foreman, he had an interesting "Seniors" second career, beating up Ray Mercer (much younger and highly regarded at the time) and giving an in-prime Holyfield a spirited challenge for the title. I also have fond memories of Holmes because he usually carried himself well outside the ring and he was the last great champion to defend his title on network television, for ALL fans to see. When Holmes went away, so did free, live viewing of heavyweight title fights. Remember those Friday nights when Holmes defended on ABC, with Cosell announcing?

| 4/23/04 07:45:33 AM | kookoo | ny | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 |

THE REAL HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMP IS SOMEWHERE IN THE NFL, NOT BOXING, THEY GET THE HEAVYWEIGHT REJECTS!

| 4/23/04 08:17:09 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 |

Koo Koo:You mean someone as skilled in boxing as Too Tall Jones? Lyle Alzado? Mark Gastenou (His boxing was about as good as my spelling of his name.)? You find the prototype huge NFL guy of your choice---the most athletic, "bad" guy out there---train him in boxing for two years, let him spar with the best, get him the best trainer money can buy---I GUARANTEE YOU, any top 20 heavyweight would make him look silly. In fact, 50 year olds like Foreman and Holmes would have enough saavy to take your dream NFL guy out in short order. If your point is that very good POTENTIAL boxers are in other sports because they can make a lot of money without getting punched in the head, I agree with you. But if you're saying that a current NFL player can transform into a great boxer, you're not just Koo Koo---you're Koo Koo for Cocoa Puffs!

| 4/23/04 08:31:56 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

Once again, no one in the NFL, even if they took a year off with a world class trainer to devote completely to boxing with no previous boxing experience, could even beat an average journeyman heavyweight boxer with say thirty professional fights and with probably thirty or so amateur fights before that, let alone become heavyweight champion of the world. The boxer has been training at a specialized skill since an early age. Something the football player, with maybe more natural talent, did not choose to do.My boxer, with a record of 17 wins, 13 losses as a professional, would knock out any NFL player within five rounds and even if he didn't knock out the football player, he would win every round convincingly. I would bet my entire life savings on it and I wouldn't lose my money.Now if the hypothetical NFL player had decided, at an early age, to devote his talent to boxing, then Koo Koo you are right, there may be a football player who could have been a great heavyweight champion. But the point is the NFL player didn't choose to go into boxing.

| 4/23/04 08:41:14 AM | Jonathan | Las Vegas | Jonnyqa@hotmail.com | 10 |

There always seems to be some sort of argument made at this site, and concerning the one about the article here in Vegas (April 16,2004) There were some misconceptions I hope to clear up. First of all about the alcohol and drug issue reporters will ask questions and write down what they want to write down. I said many More Things In the Interview That were good things but yet all of it wasn't Quoted. My mothers decision to keep the last name Quarry is no buisness of mine. I dont know why either but maybe it is because I was her last child. Please I'm asking everyone to please stop with the negativity it's not going to help with anything. I do however want to thank all the people who have been supportive through the years and it is greatly appreciated. I'm sorry if i may have seemed rude in this letter, that is not how it is meant to be taken and that is not the type of person I am. Thank you also to all my family for always being there........To you dad, I Miss You|

| 4/23/04 08:50:17 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Angelo, I
| 4/23/04 09:05:25 AM|Sabrina Quarry-Porter|Florida||SabrinaLPorter@aol.com|||10|I agree with my cousin
| 4/23/04 09:14:58 AM|Angelo|Washington,
DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Kent:Something people don't understand about boxing is that it's not just physical ability and fighting skill you need---it's the psychological toughness to face off against someone who is trying to take your head off. I've boxed a little, and those first few moments of a fight are something that's very hard to describe. Some guys take that nervousness/anxiety/excitement and parlay it into winning. Other guys (like me) end up behind a desk! Don't get me wrong---it's fun to square off against someone of your basic skill level. I also had fun some years back, taking on guys who were clearly better, and spending most of (typical 3 rounds) on defense just trying to finish. I've been knocked down (and almost out) and also scored knockdowns of my own. But it was fun and games---not even anywhere near good amatuer or professional action. And when you're in a pro fight, against someone who is trying to make a living and feed their family, I'm sure it's a scary (not fun) prospect to stand in there waiting for the bell to ring. It's a dangerous business.Jonathan: The debate on the board is usually all good---but yes, the arguments go too far when it gets personal (aside from joking with the Koo Koo Clock). But seriously, if you stay on the ROTC path, thank you for your service to our country.       |

| 4/23/04 09:34:03 AM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree,
Ca||Sonia90101@aol.com|||10|Go Jonathan! Let's keep this site positive, and not so much negativity. Its the way Dad, and Uncle Jerry, would want it. I love you & miss you Dad, Uncle Jerry, we love & miss you also. Be good all!! such a young man and he has made it and is a very good man. no drugs or booze that i know of that alone is a giant step today. This has nothing to due with what was said about Jon. This is a family having to still read bad about a brother that helped all he knew. Can we not talk about the bad all the time.Jerry was a great man made mistakes in his life but so much more good than bad. Maybe if his own family focused on these the this kind of stuff wouldn't be printed. All of you have a right to your opinon as am I and i think it is wrong. My dad alway said if you don't have something good to say about someone don't say anything at all needless to say in print. |

| 4/23/04 11:43:15 AM|ME|USA||YOU KNOW DOES IT REALLY MATTER|10|Ya know you all are too funny, you say everyone is entitles to their own opinion, yet when people tell their opinions, you come down on them. The stuff thats said isn't a lie, yes it was a long time ago, but maybe its the boys way of healing, ya ever thought of that. So give him a break, and get over it. Let's get back to boxing.|

| 4/23/04 12:08:00 PM|janet|ca.|tyetye@hotmail|10|FLAWS AND WAS A VERY VERY GOOD MAN AND PERSON. THE MOST GIVING MAN THAT I WAS HONORED TO HAVE BEEN A PART OF HIS LIFE. I HAVE NOTHING BUT RESPECT FOR HOW JERRY CHOSE TO LIVE HIS LIFE IT WAS HIS LIFE NO ONE ELSES. THE FEW THAT WANT TO BUILD THEMSELVES UP BY TRYING TO MAKE JERRY LOOK BAD I AM SURE THERE ARE OTHER WAYS TO BUILD YOURSELVES UP. EVERYONE HAS A PAST AND FORTUNATELY THAT IS RIGHT WHERE IT STAYS WHY NOT LEAVE A MAN WHO IS NO LONGER HERE ALLOWED TO REST IN PEACE AND LEAVE THE WRONG HE MIGHT HAVE DONE TO REST ALSO. |

| 4/23/04 12:49:53 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC|funktron@yahoo.com|10|You know, it sort of proves the point about Jerry---deceased for a few years, retired from boxing (for all intents and purposes) since the 1970's, out of the public light for a couple decades. And still, so many of us come here to offer opinions, defend Jerry and his family---and get very emotional about it all. Why? Because Jerry Quarry was a great boxer to some, but also a fine man to many others. People (strangers, not just family members), talk about meeting him many years ago, when he was on top---and how nice he was to them, giving them time and making them feel like they belonged in his company. I'm sure he wasn't perfect because none of us are. But he touched a lot of lives and I'm amazed at how loyal his family and friends are to his memory. Had he merely been a good boxer, he wouldn't inspire this many strong opinions. To Jonathan and all of Jerry's family: Keep doing what you're doing! |

| 4/23/04 02:04:47 PM|Kent Appel|La Habra, Ca|kentallenent@aol.com|10|It is nice to see more of the Quarrys giving their input. Of course their views are welcome here any time because it is because of their family that we are here at this site at all.It is amazing, as Angelo points out, that we are still talking about Jerry Quarry and his legacy.Now, I am going to talk about some of the negative things I have gone through in my life and even though I feel there has been more good than bad, HERE GOES! WHAT? NOBODY CARES? You know what? I am even bored by this. Because my life has never made an impact anywhere near what Jerry Quarry's life made and my life likely never will.One thing I can say though, even though I have never been high on the totem poll in the sports writing business, I have never exploited an athlete for my own gain and even though I don't think the writer of this article was using Jerry's name for these purposes, there have been many down through the years who have done so shame on them!As a fan, I don't think the article was too negative but if it was about my own family member, who I knew well and loved, I might think differently.OH ONE MORE THING, I WOULD ALSO LIKE TO THANK JONATHAN FOR HIS COMMITMENT TO SERVING OUR COUNTRY! GOOD LUCK IN THIS ENDEAVOR! |

| 4/23/04 03:16:32 PM|Massimo|Shaq 2.... Yao 0... Yao, who ?|Roma, la Fontana di Trevi|10|This is not true ! I'm very interested about your Life, Kent ? Where were you born ? Do you have toothache often ? Do you have headache often ?
Are you better in basketball, in baseball or in football? Do you prefer Yao or Kareem? All the best to you! Good luck!

Sorry if I upset everyone I was just thinking of my brother and know that no one would want stuff written about them and there past. but it did spark the old fighter in me to protect my family especially my dead brothers. so i guess if you want us to be here more just say something about one of us. lol thanks |

Johnathan, stay on the ROTC path. I also thank you for your service to your country. Has everyone heard about Pat Tillman? What a true Hero!! Jerry was too old for the Vietnam draft. I'll bet you if he'd been drafted, he'd have gone into a unit like the Rangers, and fought his ass off! Kent and Angelo, try to keep things in their proper perspective. Angelo, you are correct, anytime you face another man, I mean I MEAN FOR REAL not just for sparring or kidding around, but in combat, fists, street fighting, which could mean anything, knives, guns. The psychological factor is huge, probably determining as much as 40 percent of the outcome. Kent, do you have a clear perspective on the athletic ability necessary to become a pro football player? Do you think these guys go through life without ever getting into for real fistfights?

Your right, just jumping in to the ring lets say at 28, it too late, but over all boxing is not getting quality big men, even though I still think people lennex lewis' size is how big you have to be to compete, almost any NFL lineman would knock out Marciano of Frazier, just on pure strength alone,

BRENDA, TAKE IT EASY, I KNOW THIS ARTICLE UPSET YOU, BUT PEOPLE HAVE BEEN TALKING SH... ABOUT JERRY FOR THE LAST 39 YEARS, NOTHING NEW, THOSE WHO LIKE AND RESPECT HIM WILL CONTINUE, THOSE WHO DON'T WILL ALSO CONTINUE, JERRY WAS ONE OF THE MOST INTERESTING PEOPLE I'VE EVER SEEN, ALL THROUGH HIS CAREER AND EVEN AFTER, LET NOT YOUR HEART BE TROUBLED, YOU ARE A QUARRY AND THE NAME LIVES ON!

I agree with you Steve. Footballers are usually great athletes and can adapt to most sports. Over here in Australia an elite professional football player retired in his mid-20s to become a boxer in 2000. Anthony Mundine is now the super middleweight champion of the world. Recently in Sydney another elite professional footballer (Lance Thompson) had a fund raising fight for charity against an established professional heavyweight. Thompson won easily. (By the way, our footballers don't wear all the 'nancy boy' protection your guys have. No helmets - none of that sissy stuff over here!) Also, Marciano didn't take up boxing until he was in his 20s and look what he did. Sometimes people who began boxing in amateurs at an early age are stuffed by the time they reach their twenties. Am I right in saying that Jerry Quarry was an all-round athlete before he boxed? Didn't he play baseball? Jerry became one of the bravest men in boxing. Steve is also right about street fighting. As grotesque as it is, it takes ability, discipline and courage to be a good street fighter and those skills are readily transferrable to the ring. Where do you think Duran learnt his craft? In the gutter, that's where. Koo Koo - you are right and wrong! You are right that Frazier was incapable of competing against the really big guys. When you look at his record, he was very fragile. He had trouble enough taking Ali's pitter patters, but was no chance against the bombers. That's why his opponents were mostly handpicked. But you are wrong about Marciano. He absorbed the punishment from the big guys and then went on to beat them just like he did with Walcott. Marciano could also dish the dirt out, too (ala that right cross and vicious elbow). Finally, my sympathy to all of you after the death of your guy who gave up playing football to serve in the army in Afghanistan. His loyalty to your country humbles the rest of us. It really does.

You two retards with the fixation for footballers ought to hook up w/each other(try frisco). The only thing either of you have ever boxed are apples and oranges at the local grocery store. If ozzies tried to play American football w/out the equipment they'd be smashed to bits. Sorry "nancy boy", but the Americans are to big and strong (pharmasutically advantaged)for those shrimp eating outcasts from every decent society. I agree that pickens are slim these days in the heavy wt division, but your bagging on Joe Frazier! Send any NFL line man you want from any time, just make sure he brings condems cause old Joe can't afford no child support. Let me take a wild guess -- you're both liberals, right? |

|4/24/04 06:51:42 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||Kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Ray, I think Thompson and Mundine are exceptions to the rule of footballers not becoming good boxers. I would suspect that both of them had some boxing experience on the way, it is very likely, especially in Mundine's case as his father was very good pro boxer. Mundine probably learned from his father.Thanks for your mentioning Pat Tillman, a footballer who was a hero in all respects.Steve, I have respect for footballers as they are fine athletes who are experts at what they do, but they are not boxers although a lot of them likely would make good street fighters as they are very strong.Street fighting is another ball game as it has no rules. Head butting, poking in the eyes, kicking in the groin, throwing elbows, using a backhand (a commone karate technique), while all illegal in boxing, are all things one may have to do in order to survive a street attack.I don't have a lot of respect personally for people who constantly streetfight on purpose as it contrary to societies norms (and I am not talking about someone who got into a few scraps in their youth). I would never fight someone in this way unless there is no other way to survive without walking away first. Down through the years, most of the time I have backed down from fights even when I was certain of victory as I don't care what some guy with an ego problem cares about me.Welcome back Steve, I hope you start posting regularly again. I don't always agree with everything you say but I always respect your opinions.Welcome also to Ray from Australia. I like it when more people take part in our discussions.|
7'2" guy whose name I can't recall right now !
| 4/25/04 02:22:22 AM| bk| ireland|| mydarkcolleens ||7| wow, rba, I guess I really hit a soft spot w/the ozzie footballers! I would like to take this opportunity to formally apologize, I didn't realize your mother still played -- I thought she was still a hooker. If "Braveheart" was the film you were referring to I believe it was a Scottish Epic, not Irish. You've already shown your ignorance in boxing, you really want to continue? PS bag on Ireland all you want most of them are liberal cunts like yourself. I moved to the USA when I was four. |

| 4/25/04 02:48:21 AM| bk| ireland|| mydarkcolleens ||7| Massimo from Rome, the most beautiful city on earth (Paris could have been, but they'd have to get rid of the French), you are correct about Vitali Klitchko -- he would make quick work of anyone from the NFL (and anyone from the NFL would make quick work of those Australian nancy boys). You've got to realize that a big goofball like Klitchko is only at the top because no one else is available. We will never see it, but I truely wish we had Jerry Quarry today. He would have surely had the career he deserved. By the way, in regards to the aforementioned letter, Tina Quarry told the truth. Of all the people in Jerry's life, besides his mother (who's partial to her own family), Tina loved him most. |

| 4/25/04 03:07:14 AM| Ray| Brisbane, Australia|| rba@hotmail.com ||10| BK - I forgot to mention the most famous Irish movie of them all. The quintessential Irish love story. Padraic and Lassie ! |

| 4/25/04 05:50:52 AM| Massimo| Roma||4||10| Vitali-Corrie was a fantastic fight ! Almost another George-Ron ! Corrie Sanders is a very tough guy ! It's unbelievable how strong he still is at 38 ! He has got a dynamite left hook and an almost Chuvalian chin ! Vitali showed a huge heart in this fight. But I have to admit that he is clumsy in the ring and can be hurt ! The problem is that there is nobody out there ( I don't try with "outta", it's too dangerous) good enough for beating him ( or to beat him).PS: BK, you' re right ! Rome is not ugly at all ! |

| 4/25/04 08:38:11 AM| bk| ireland|| mydarkcolleens ||7| rba -- do you realize Irish Jerry Quarry would have hated you for all the BS you spew! You know nothing about boxing and you hate Ireland. Try a new website www.my mother was an Aborigine hooker and my father a gay erotic dancer.com PS I'm sorry your boyfriend from Dublin broke up with you. |

| 4/25/04 09:47:37 AM| Party Pooper| Here||14u@ifeltathigh.com ||6| Who cares if Jerry Quarry would have hated anyone? Get a life! Where are all the posts about how Jerry would have counter punched Vitali Klitschko to death? What a laugh! |

| 4/25/04 10:17:17 AM| real fan| ny|| toby@aol.com ||10| How nice of you to talk about a family you don't even know. The Quarry family grew-up with boxing and got into a sport that they had no idea what it would be like. Jerry untill the very day he died loved Charlie his second wife. Yes the Quarry's were a wild lot but very good people. To set the record straight the family chose to pull the plug because the doctors told them that Jerry would remain in a home for the rest of his life with a tube in his neck so he could talk or even eat. They were told he would have to have a bag comming out of his side just so he could pee. I know this because i was there. He was my friend. The family did not want Jerry in a home not being able to even move around or knowing anyone even his family. So you see there is always more to a story than just one side. So those who think that his family didn't love him more than a ex you just don't know what you are talking about. It was his family who took care of him from 1992 untill the day he died no one else. They took him to all his dr. app. cleaned and feed him they are the one's he told all day long i love you. No one else even asked if they could help. so now what is love it is when you give up your own life to take care of one of your own. So say what you want, but you have no idea what you are talking about.|
[4/25/04 01:28:27 PM]Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Real Fan, I have gone through the posts and unless I have missed one, no one here questions the Quarry family's love for Jerry, with the exception of someone called G-man who calls the rest of the family parasites. That is a real cheap shot as parasites would not take care of their dying brother, especially if they had nothing to gain for it except the love he gave in return.I did say that maybe The Quarrys might be upset that Tina, the ex-wife from the article, mentioned pulling the plug on Jerry and her not having any say so about it, but I didn't make any judgement about it one way or the other. If you read my post,
I said, "it is a family matter that I can't comment on." Again Real Fan, who on this letter page, with the exception of the stupid comment by G-man calling the rest of the Quarry family parasites, has questioned the Quarry family's love for Jerry? I know I have never said that as I have great respect for what they did in caring for him.|
read an entire document of interviews from people close to Jerry. It was turned into a screenplay which fell out of preproduction but now I hear that it got hooked up with a new producer and it's back on the go. Not certain of exactly what's gonna end up on the screen. The working title is "Hard Luck" |
[4/25/04 06:37:51 PM]Glenn C.|LA||Glenn (2)|||3|Jails dont give prisoners access to the net, so how is BK posting here. Calling someones' mother a hooker and using the C word is real low class stuff. Thats what you are BK, a real low class criminal. So what jail you in. How many boyfriends you got. |
[4/25/04 06:45:22 PM]Glenn C.|LA||Glenn (3)|||3|Forgot to mention that GK sounds like a real big noting loser. So what if you read things. Are you bragging that you can read. Nobody cares what a dopey fool like u does. So crawl back in to you're jail cell and shut the hell up. You and BK are the same posters anyways. Get back to you're boy friends. | [4/25/04 07:18:06 PM]Glenn, I think you're getting two dudes confused here. If you're referring to me it was Chino State, but I'm out now. Don't you worry though, you're still my only boyfriend. Big kiss.|
[4/25/04 07:54:07 PM]Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|I know I said
I like it when more people post at this site but lately the quality of the posts is suffering. Some of the newcomers seem to get a kick out of being petty with each other and even talking garbage about the Quarrys on their own site. Don't some of you folks realize you are on a site dedicated to the memory of a fine athlete and decent person and that you are disrespecting Jerry Quarry's memory. THIS IS NOT JUST SOME SITE WHERE GOOFBALLS CAN TRASH TALK EACH OTHER. IT IS A SPECIAL SITE, LIKE NO OTHER. COME ON FOLKS, SHOW SOME CLASS AND LET'S LIGHTEN IT UP A BIT!|
[4/25/04 08:54:58 PM]Sounds like G-Man and Glenn are an item. You guys should pay attention to Kent and stop the nonsense. How is my old friend Massimo ?|
back ! I' m fine thanks, and I hope you are fine too.I think that probably J. Toney would have a chance against Vitali. What he lacks in shoe size, he has in skill. He is a true warrior with a chuvalian chin and is much more skillful than Vitali. But I'd put my money on Vitali, anyway.Vitali-Golota would be another interesting fight.| absolutely beat that big goofball, Vitali, down to the ground. Unfortunately he's out for good -- severed his achilles tendon. PS Glenn, why don't you read how that Ozzie fruitcake was bagging on Frazier and Ireland before you stick your nose in it.

Pretty exciting heavyweight fight Sat. night. Time will tell with Klitschko but he looks the best so far.

Kent: Did u see the mystery fighter Teddy Atlas was talking about was Joe Mesi? Dangerous brain condition according to Atlas but Mesi down played it when interviewed about it.

With the greatest respect bk, you are unsuitable for this site. People using the C word and calling the mothers of other posters 'hookers' (as you lamentedly did) are not welcome here. Try a 'google' search. Type in 'dopey, ignorant fools' and you will find like-minded imbeciles to share your moronic views with. The JQ site has too many problems already. Koo Koo is a repressed alcoholic. My old friend Massimo was tossed out of the priesthood for undisclosed reasons (but he has since repented). Kent thinks he is Ritchie Cunningham from 'Happy Days'. And G-man is an old friend who hasn't been truthful about his identity. So go away, bk, put the cork back in the glue pot you've been sniffing, and wise-up forthwith. Your smut is unwelcome here. Warm regards anyways.

My deepest Evan, I didn't realize you were the son of a hooker as well. Nice soliloquy, though. Sounds like you have everybodies number -- I believe they call that type of behavior projection.

Kent, Jimmy D., Angelo, Ray, and KooKoo, this may sound crazy, but I think Quarry might have had a chance against Klitcho, he didn't look right, and Sanders ain't going anywhere.

Hey Kent, I'm going to try a little experiment. I'm going to try to make a reasonable post on this site. If I can't ask a question or express my opinion without having my ethnic heritage, manhood, or intellect insulted by some crazy, who I suspect is one guy using three or four different e-mail names, then I'm going to contact my internet provider. I will ask him to contact the webmaster of this site, and have him start blocking some of these posts. I don't know what happened to this gentlemanly, vastly informative site about the Quarry family. I do know when people start calling other people's mother's whores and c---s, I'm not gonna post here anymore.

Oh golly gee Fonz, I mean Evan, I guess that makes Massimo Ralph Malph? No matter how you say it, we agree this new clown(s) has to go. He is disrespecting Jerry Quarry and his family by his lood comments. Carl, maybe you should consider banning some people if they (he) continue to stink this joint up!

Hey Kent, I'm going to try to make a reasonable post on this site. If I can't ask a question or express my opinion without having my ethnic heritage, manhood, or intellect insulted by some crazy, who I suspect is one guy using three or four different e-mail names, then I'm going to contact my internet provider. I will ask him to contact the webmaster of this site, and have him start blocking some of these posts. I don't know what happened to this gentlemanly, vastly informative site about the Quarry family. I do know when people start calling other people's mother's whores and c---s, I'm not gonna post here anymore.

Another loss for a meatball.

Come on people stop the bickering, it's getting old. That's not what this site is for. I would really like to know more about this screenplay. Like who the producer is?

Back to boxing, any veracity to these stories that Joe Mesi has some kind of brain damage, or that James Toney has a completely severed Achilles tendon, that could end his career?

O'kay, party pooper, why don't we get real? How do you think the big Russian would have done against George Foreman, Ron Lyle, Ken Norton. Remember, the Russian only came in at 245 lbs. He still has not mastered the jab! Corrie Sanders is not in the same league as Ron Lyle, yet look what Quarry did to him. That Russian has got serious stamina and ability to take sustained punishment problems.
know. I'm involved to some extent in the movie biz. There was this big, bald white dude from the show OZ and he paid like twenty grand for the rights to the story from Jerry's oldest son who was supposed to rep the family and divide the loot and he kept it. Then the dude went to Jerry's older brother Jimmy and the dude wanted the story to be about him and how he took care of Jerry but that didn't fly with the OZ dude. The guy I know is the writer and he interviewed a bunch of the family. He said there was a lot of disagreeing and everyone was mad at the father. I know he finished the screenplay and they made a really cool tape with interviews from all them dudes Jerry fought (and he wasn't no meatball either) whiteboy could box! Straight up apology for offending the family, cause some of them were supposed to be cool. I just heard some warn't.

4/26/04 10:09:17 PM|bk|Ireland||mydarkcolleens||||7|1. Answer to Steve -- I'm certain James Tony's out for good. Bruce Silverglade who runs Gleason's in Brooklyn told me about it three weeks ago. I've heard further reports since then.2. I will not apologize, but I'll keep my language clean as long as nobody aggravates me. And I never called a woman the c__ word, I reserve that terminology for weak spirited men.3. There are possibly four heavyweights in the last 20 yrs. who could have been competitive in the golden age (70's) of the big boys... Larry Holmes, Evander Hollyfield, Mike Tyson and Riddick Bowe. No one else!

4/26/04 11:36:22 PM|steve |NJ||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Hey B.K. I agree with you on your first three choices for being able to hold their own among the 70's greats. I never thought Riddick Bowe had that fire in his belly after the Hollyfield fights. Look at the terrible damage he suffered in the Gollota fights.

4/26/04 11:36:32 PM|steve |NJ||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Hey B.K. I agree with you on your first three choices for being able to hold their own among the 70's greats. I never thought Riddick Bowe had that fire in his belly after the Hollyfield fights. Look at the terrible damage he suffered in the Gollota fights.

4/27/04 01:54:42 AM|Evan B.|Belfast||(same)||||8|BK, please don't post the C word ever, whether or not anyone aggravates you (not 'aggravates' as you wrote - use a dictionary). You should also try being more civil and polite to people. Calling someone's mother a hooker is very low class. Using that term lets everyone know that you're not witty enough to think up a better insult. In regard to your grammar, I'm sure there are classes you can go to, but that's just a suggestion. Perhaps download something from the net. Sounding the longer words out will help as well (ie. ag gra vates - it's not difficult to do if you practice). Now moving on, you don't rate Lewis, huh. Do you think that you have mis rated him? (I'm sounding the longer words out for your benefit, BK) I consider Lewis to have had marvelous skills and I think he was a more competent fighter than some give him credit for. Perhaps people on this site could do some exercises to try and help BK with his spelling. Maybe we can deliberately put a error in and see whether BK can find it. That's just a thought, though.

4/27/04 02:51:07 AM|bk|Ireland||mydarkcolleens||||7|Evan, perhaps your mother was a hooker in Belfast but you are most certainly not from there you lying CUNT -- imagine this should bring some efficacy to your school boy pontificating? Everyone else, sorry for the disparaging comments, but as you can see I'm dealing a reprobate who's spent his fictitious sex life on his computer and in person has as much courage as a beaten house wife w/an acne problem. How's my spelling now?

4/27/04 03:05:23 AM|bk|Ireland||MDC|||7|Steve, although Bowe lost it he did have the equipment necessary -- similar to Tyson. You can fix just about anything on a fighter besides his mind -- both of theirs fell apart. Lewis was a big lazy half-hearted dope who never would have got away w/dropping that left hand after his lungy jab w/a guy like Quarry. He would have capitalized with that sneaky counter right, left hook and lights out for Lewis. Lewis's best fight was his battle w/Mercer. It was the one time that big pussy impressed me.

4/27/04 03:28:02 AM|Evans|Belfast||(same)||||7|BK, whilst there is no need to be em barr assed about your lack of formal ed uc at ion (we were, after all, all ig no rant before we went to school), you should feel bad, however, about your repeated use of the C word. That is NEVER ac cept able, especially since females visit this site. So lose the C word out of your vo cab u lary.

Anyways, my last post was not about trying to em barr ass you. I was merely opening the way for you to not only use this site to in tro duce you to some basic boxing knowledge, but to also teach you social skills as well as providing some reading and writing practise (so that you have a better chance of getting a job). It's no shame to ac ept help when it's offered and others hear will have patients with you. (PS. How did you go picking out the errors? Here's a clue - there's more than one. Come on BK, it'll be lots of fun to give it a go, so post me back with what the misstakes are. Thanks.)

4/27/04 04:31:21 AM|steve |N.J.||drmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Hey, b.k. Your write about one thing. You can fix everything about a fighter except his mind. Mike Tyson, what a waste.

4/27/04 07:29:13 AM|Party Pooper|Here||14U@ifeltathigh.com||||5|Don't go too far with correcting grammar and spelling here. There wouldn't be any posts left.

4/27/04 08:58:24 AM|G-man|cali||coolio|||8|yo BK you need Jesus bro! stop bickering with that fool cause hes just intimidated by you I dont think anybody hears him. you think Tyson might might still have enough juice for a comeback? hes still got all that power right?

4/27/04 08:59:05 AM|Jonathan Quarry|Las Vegas||jonnyqa@yahoo.com||||10|I Have NO Idea What it is Going to take to get you people to stop arguing. It's Not Right. I dont know when this site lent it self to profanity and slander if you want to debate and put somebody down, become a politician it's not needed here. I hate coming to this site everyday seeing all the Bickering. I'm 17 years old and still I hold my self to a higher level and show more respect then many of you. Grow Up! It's amazing how so many people can put down a man that has done no wrong to them. So Knock it Off! keep the posts clean.

4/27/04 10:17:26 AM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||SONia90101@aol.com||||10|Come on everyone lets all get along. You know my Dad, or Uncle Jerry, would not like what's happening here, so please lets stop it, and do the right thing. We love & miss you very much Dad, and Uncle Jerry!!

4/27/04 10:57:14 AM|Katherine|Atlanta||katherine Freitas@hotmail.com||||10|I have looked back at the archives of letters posted on this site, and realized how much Jerry is loved by his fans, friends, and family. They are dedicated to preserving his memory. I am sure he was a wonderful man and it makes me so angry that you men would be so disrespectful. From the looks of it Sonia and Jonathan visit this site on a regular basis and I am sure your slander is the last thing they want to see. This is a heartfelt website, and a wonderful page, it is a shame that people have to see your stupid senseless remarks.

4/27/04 12:14:11 PM|Sabrina Quarry-Porter|Florida||sabrinalporter@aol.com||||10|you trash mouth people need to get a life. if you don't have anything nice to say then SHUT THE F__K UP....go crawl back under the rock where you came from....

4/27/04 12:44:49 PM|Massimo|Roma||Francesco Totti: Zico' s genius in bigger shoes !!!!||10|I think Joe Frazier was a great hooker, as his left hook is in the legend of this sport and put down people like Ellis and Ali'. This is the way I understand the word " hooker ". But, I don't tknow, I have the impression that you guys mean something different. But I have no idea of what it's all about! In Rome we say " parla come magni ", it means " parla come mangi ", it means " speak like you eat ". It means, speak in a way I can
I would like to ask the decent folks that come to this site, the people who want to preserve a positive memory of JQ's life and career, and who also want to help fighters who become injured in the ring and to try and make boxing as safe as possible, need to ignore certain individuals. Often when no one responds to garbage, the offenders go away. A little debate on issues and disagreement is good for the site but cheap shots and name calling never is.

Well said, Kent, and I share your sentiments entirely. This is no place for profanities, so keep it clean guys. G-Man, I've spent some time in the States as my father worked for IBM when I was growing up. I met a big fat bald Italian guy involved in films in Vegas and he was very interested in doing something on boxing. His name was Giancarlo. Is that the guy you were referring to in your post?

You would think that the colorful language and arguing back and forth would make things interesting, but to the contrary, it gets boring really fast. Dialogue and debate on the boxers is far better! Speaking of which, Riddick Bowe on a good night could hold his own against some of yesterday's greats, but the problem is, it would be tough for him to have that good night with Ali, Frazier, Foreman, etc. bearing down on him. Tyson matches up well against Frazier but would lose to Ali or Foreman. Lewis wouldn't have the toughness to stand in with these guys—I think he would crumble if Foreman landed anything on him and I think Ali would probably take every round against Lewis and end it with a TKO in the middle to later rounds. As far as Larry Holmes goes, I consider him to be one of the greats of the 70's class. He gets lumped in with Ali, Frazier, Foreman and Norton and in my mind, could take everyone except maybe an in-prime Ali—and might have trouble with Foreman.

To the Quarrys—realize that most of the people visiting have great respect for Jerry, Mike, James and the whole bunch of you. We love the site and like the updates on what the foundation is doing. Don't let the idiots get you down.

Hey Kent, Jimmy Dorsey, Angelo, KooKoo, Massimo, and all the rest of the regulars. You know what really is starting to annoy me? I've posted three times asking for boxing info on James Toney having a career ending severed achilles tendon. I've also asked about Joe Mesi having some form of brain damage. I can't seem to get a response because no one on this site is listening. Your all too fascinated in this Belfast, Ireland blowhard!

One of the weaknesses of a totally free-access chat page is occasional attacks from the partially brain-dead. If I was you gentlemen, I'd be more than embarrassed that a young man like Jon already knows more than you about acting like an adult... I was glad to see a Klitschko finally answer all the hype, though Corrie Sanders has more than earned my respect. Given the bouts of Ruiz and Byrd, it at least looked like a heavyweight title fight is supposed to. I'd like to see Vitali challenge Ruiz for the WBA or rematch Byrd for the IBF. Byrd's lucky rabbit's foot has to be about wore-out, he's been more than lucky. Lennox Lewis continues to circle in the background also ... Angelo, I disagree with some of your legends assessments. I take a prime Tyson over the defensively flawed Foreman, who was beat to the punch by Jimmy Young and Ron Lyle. I agree Riddick Bowe was a huge raw talent, I've said the same about Greg Page. Ali would have more trouble with Lennox Lewis than you think. Tall guys who can box were rarely seen by Ali. Ken Norton and even Joe Bugnar both seriously challenged Ali, Norton beat him at least twice. The early 90's had a very good group of heavies... Laker fans have to be impressed with what Mr. Laker, Jerry West, has done with the NBA Memphis franchise. Cleveland's LeBron was predictably Rookie of the Year. What's his shoe size, Massimo?

Steve, at the risk of sounding redundant, Tony's OUT -- for good! And he was back w/a vengence too. Gman, chances are Tyson will not be back. Like I said before the mind is unmendable. Does anybody know that I have an interview on tape of George Forman saying that he intentionally avoided only one man (Jerry Quarry). He was supposed to fight the winner of the Quarry/Lyle fight and he did not. I hear people talking about Ali having trouble w/a tall fighter like Lewis. Maybe he would but Lewis would not have been around long enough in that era to face Ali. There were too many gate keepers like JQ for instance who Lewis couldn't have gotten by. Ali was durable. I never thought he beat Norton either, but he beat others who did. Now honestly imagine how many of those battles against such calliber fighters do you think Lewis would have survived. Big dope has had himself quite a cushy career hasn't he? Evan/glenn/ray (same guy I imagine), I'm sorry for bickering and swearing. Please forgive me. I won't do it anymore. And good luck w/the penial implant!

Your problem, Steve, is that you want this to be a totally American site. Describing posters from Belfast and Ireland as "blowhards" is hypocritical in light of you asking others to stop with the abuse. Practise what you preach or shut up. Anyways, going back through your posts I can see that you have been the most boring of posters here, and that little game concerning the Three Stooges is childish. |
sometime this week, whenever time permits, to ask him if Toney is through.The thing is, he may not tell me as I am a member of the press and they might not want it publicly admitted, for whatever reason.Yes, being a stooge is an inside joke, and the people not involved in it may think it is silly, but being one of the stooges here is an honor. Being called a wise guy by Mr. Jimmy, Jimmy D., Steve, and myself is something to be proud of.Your motives differ from your words, Steve. You want others to believe that you are not being inflammatory, and then you do just that. You plead "can we just let it go" (or words to that effect) and then you ask an inflammatory question. It was the same with the foul-mouthed bk. Each time he used the filthy 'C' word, you would post him in an effort to encourage the vulgar scumbag to return. Is bk the type you want coming here? On the issue you mentioned - yes, I remember that I was going to put an evening aside for you. If I remember correctly, you went into hiding after beseeching other posters for offers of support. Let bygones be bygones, brother, and let's just talk about boxing. Peace be with you. G-Man, was that film guy Giancarlo? Are you hearing me?|4/28/04 06:48:31 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|If I had any insight or info on Mesi or Toney, I'd definitely share it. Sorry to ignore the questions---hopefully Kent could uncover something.On the legends discussion: Ali might not have faced too many tall guys who could box, but Lewis never faced anyone with the skills and heart of Ali. I still say it's a no-contest with Ali dominating. Also, I don't mean to bash Lewis, because he was the best of his class for a few years, but let's get serious: If Oliver McCall and Hasim Rahman drop him down and out, what would Earnie Shavers do to him? Probably kill him. They'd still be counting.even you just some silly old white dude who frontin like you all smart. I dont think anybody thinks your very smart. My mama taught me to ignore fools. Didn't your mama teach you no shame? The family asked you to stop fighting on this site. Seems like everybody has except for you. I will forgive you and answer your question if I see that you being cool for once.|4/28/04 08:18:28 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||||10|ON FOREMAN VS. QUARRY. I distinctly remember reading the Boxing Illustrated issue that covered JQ's win over Larry Middleton in England, that Foreman had agreed "in principal" to fight JQ in England. Obviously George had second thoughts or the reporter was wrong.|4/28/04 10:29:47 AM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com||||10|After Jery beat Lyle Foreman had just beaten Frazier and it looked like Jerry had the style to beat Foreman. Move Counter make him work. After Jerry beat Shavers it seemed like a letdown to fight Frazier Jerry was set to fight Foreman. I still can't believe Frazier beat him in the second fight. Klitschko looks like and amatuer I haven't seen any Russian except Kosta look like a pro they all fight like amateurs. I thought Oleg Maskaev was going to do something he has been the closest thing to Jerry I have seen yet. Just couldn't take a punch like Jerry.|4/28/04 10:45:10 AM|JQ fan|Vegas||Anon||||10|JQ Fan: Too bad you're anonymous---you should take the credit for a great post! The Quarry family is giving us this forum and I think I speak for most of the people who post here—we love the site and appreciate the opportunity to log on and chat. Also, it's great when members of the Quarry family stop by to comment, keeping alive a link to Jerry and James for all the fans.

Yes, after Jerry beat Shavers, he was primed for a title shot. I think it was hard for him to get motivated for Frazier. Joe had already beaten him once and it seemed as though Jerry had nothing to gain by taking this fight. He had earned the right to fight for the title and instead, he gets put in against Smokin' Joe. I wish Jerry would have taken on a lower rung fighter or two to kill some time before forcing a fight with Big George. Of course, by that time, Ali might have regained his belt, setting up a third Quarry-Ali fight.

| 4/28/04 01:14:21 PM | Massimo | Roma | Totti: GENIUS and POWER! What a player! |
| 4/28/04 02:09:20 PM | Party Pooper | Here |  |
| 4/28/04 03:52:08 PM | Evan B. | Belfast | (same) |
| 4/28/04 04:47:44 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com |
| 4/28/04 06:07:25 PM | G-man | cali | coolio |
| 4/28/04 06:31:28 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM |
| 4/28/04 06:32:31 PM | G-man | cali | coolio | 10 | JERRY QUARRY was an alltime great, no doubt about it, Anyway you look at his career, it was great, there's probably a lot... of fighter's who could have taken Jerry on any given night, and vice-versa, but did they have A CAREER like JQ. I agree with Kent, JERRY was brought up a little too fast, age 28 to 32 should have been his prime years to go after the title not 22 to 25! hi STEVE(SHEMP) STOOGES ARE FUNNIER THAN CLOWNS!@

[4/28/04 06:41:57 PM]Evam B.|Belfast|(same)|(same)| | | | | | |Right on, G-Man. I'm thinking that bk is a groovy dude, but using the C word and calling someone's mother a skanky ho is slam dunk ignorant. You know it, bro, and so do Steve and Angelo and the whole crew. But I'm past that and have repented. I won't mention any of that pu$$ again. ANYWAYS, I think that film guy's name is Giancarlo and I'm thinking that you know this dude much better than you are letting on. |

[4/28/04 07:18:18 PM]G-man|cali||coolio||| | | | | | |you sharp Evam I'll give you that. The truth is I got friendly with the writer and his name is johnny he wrote a couple other movies. The big bald dude I do not know personaly so Im just covering my own self you hear me? Its not the guy you think, that Im sure.| |

[4/29/04 03:25:00 AM]Evan Bearscove|Belfast|(same)|(same)| | | | | | |You got that right, G-Man. Jimmy's a real funny dude, isn't he. 'Stooges are funnier than clowns'. Gotta remember that one for the guys down the bar. Just have to think up a context in which to use it, so I can nail it like Jimmy just did. Might wait until they've had a bunch to drink. Something along the lines of working out who are the clowns and who are the stooges and who might be both. I'll think of something. ANYWAYS, I hope you remember that guy about the film. Suppose there is lots of big, fat bald guys around. Be easy to mix all them dudes up. Later.| |

[4/29/04 04:57:28 AM]Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com| | | | | | |Good points about Jerry having so many tough fights and being worn out at 30. I disagree about Spinks win against Ali being a fluke. Leon was sharp, strong, hungry and very well schooled with some of the latest techniques that even Ali hadn't seen at the time. Jerry on the other hand could have beaten Ali at his best he didn't need to catch him on the way down. Jerry was always dangerous and had the power. The first Ali fight would have won if not for the cut. Ali was tired and it was only the 3rd round. |

[4/29/04 05:56:58 AM]John Gerard|NYC||rock2892@yahoo.com| | | | | | |I don't want to start the JQ vs. Foreman thing again, as I posted many times, I think George would have won. It was a matter of a very good one fighting a great one. Regarding a third Ali-Quarry fight, Ali simply had too much cutting power in his fists for Jerry to handle. Jerry beat some very good ones, lost to some great ones. |

[4/29/04 07:43:49 AM]Party Pooper|Here||14u@ifeltathigh.com| | | | | | |C'mon, Quarry was a good fighter. He was not a great fighter. Champion in another era? Only against fluke champions, ones who got their clocks cleaned by greats. There are lots of fighters who coulda, woulda, shoulda, if everything was perfect. The fact is that the greats DID. He didn't. He lost big against greats, and lost too against some not so greats. It's ridiculous to say he was great because at his peak, he coulda beat Ali if he'd crashed. |

[4/29/04 07:45:57 AM]Fran|Philly||plc7755|| | | | | | |Jerry was always dangerous and had the power. The first Ali fight would have won if not for the cut.Ali was tired and it was only the 3rd round. |

[4/29/04 08:01:00 AM]John Gerard|NYC||rock2892@yahoo.com| | | | | | |FRAN: Jerry was a fine fighter and a fine man, but he never under any circumstances could have beaten Ali. As far as Ali being tired, well he had not fought for 3 and a half years and still came back to beat the #1 contender. Ali did not come back against stiffs like Tyson did after his jail time. Give the man credit where credit due. As far as Jerry "having the power" if hitters like Liston, Foreman, Shavers could not stop Ali, do you really think Jerry could? Let's be honest in our memory of Jerry -- a fine man, very good boxer, courage to spare. But lets also be honest in our memory of his contemporaries. |

[4/29/04 08:48:06 AM]Party Pooper|Here||14u@ifeltathigh.com| | | | | | |Quarry couldn't have beat Ali in his dreams. The cut only shortened the inevitable. Ali was humiliating him. Quarry was a tuneup, plain and simple. Power? Adequate. Ali and Frazier walked through his punches like they were nothing.

| 4/29/04 09:12:28 AM | kookoo|ny|kookoo|clock000|||10|PARTY (DOPE HEAD) IS A MORON, SIZE IS THE REASON QUARRY WOULD LOSE TO ALI EVERY TIME, I DON'T THINK THAT SKILL MEANS THAT MUCH, IT'S WHAT YOU CAN TAKE AND WHAT YOU CAN DISH OUT, PATTERSON VS QUARRY , SPENCER VS QUARRY ARE GOOD FIGHTS BECAUSE THEY ARE ABOUT THE SAME SIZE, IN ANOTHER 5 OR 10 YRS ALI WILL BE CONSIDERED A SHORT FIGHTER FROM THE PAST, THAT LOUD TALKING, DRAFT DODGING PUNK!! |
| 4/29/04 10:25:18 AM | Party Pooper|Here||14u@ifeltathigh.com|||5|You calling anyone a moron is like a hippo calling an elephant fat. You're a totally illiterate dull normal, without a single useful thing to say, ever. You can't write, you can't spell, you're stupid. What year did you drop out of high school? Do you work? If you do, I laugh to think at what. Why don't you go get drunk? That's probably the only thing you do well. No wonder you idolize Quarry. It's to make up for your own failed life. |
| 4/29/04 11:20:37 AM | brenda|ca|meme@thien|||9|I am very sorry if i started all this talk because i was upset about the article. I hope everyone will just get back to talking about boxing. I myself will never respond to something an ex chooses to write again i hate seeing this happen to the site. Jerry and Jimmy were good people and i will leave it at that. If someone really wants to write a movie or book present it and lets go from there The title hard luck comes my my dads hands he has tatoo on his fingers. I ask at this time if you will pray for my dad he is very sick and close to the end of his life. I ask that he doen't have to suffer to much. He says he ready to go with his sons. Thank you |
| 4/29/04 01:32:40 PM | Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Everyone's entitled to their opinion. Most of us here, even the biggest of Quarry fans, agree that he wasn't the greatest ever---that the best of his era defeated him. No excuses. With that said, while it's okay to disagree about how good Jerry (or even Mike) were as boxers, I think it's unacceptable to come to this page to launch personal attacks against these fighers and their family---to belittle their careers. To me, this is like the Quarry family home, and we're guests. I think it's disrespectful and alsolow-class to make vile comments of a personal nature against anyone, especially the Quarrys, who are the host here.Back to boxing: In-prime Ron Lyle vs. in-prime Lennox Lewis: Who would win, and how? |
| 4/29/04 02:09:57 PM | charles anderson|ark.|ctjjandfam@aol.com|||7|what does someones shoe size have to do with this site? i'm outa here. |
| 4/29/04 04:21:43 PM | Evan B.|Belfast|||same|||10|Brenda, I'm sure all the posters here sincerely wish your father, yourself, and your family, great strength. The squabbling here has nothing to do with you.| | 4/29/04 04:40:54 PM | Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Evan Bearscove, I'm going to explain this to you just this once. Why in this lifetime would I have to "plead" with you for anything? I didn't go into "hiding" after your terrifying threat to "set aside an evening for me". The fact is, I stopped posting for awhile due to the death of a family member. As far as the poster who said,"all you Irish dudes talk that way", maybe your right. My mother and half my uncles and aunts where born in Ireland. I don't need any other posters from this site to protect me from you, Evan. You whanna cool it now? My apologies to the Quarry family. I have had my last say on this stuff and am willing to let it go. |
| 4/29/04 05:59:08 PM | charles anderson|ark.|ctjjandfam@aol.com|||7|evan, i stated some time ago that the language on this site should be cleaned up. but i have been reading about shoe sizes for quite awhile now and i am sorry you took offense. when yhis site started there were a lot of people who posted here but now it is the same 5 or6 who dont sem to have much to say, that is why i have gone from 10 to 7 on my scale. i love to read anything about jerry but not a lot of other stuff i see here, sorry but that is the way i feel, sorry for my spelling. |

[4/29/04 06:40:17 PM] steve | N.J. | dmmrsrn@comcast.net | 10 | Angelo, I think Lyle and Lewis would be a great fight! Lyle was a bit of a plodder, but had pretty fast hands and a knockout punch in either hand. He had a rock for a jaw, and plenty of heart as he showed against Quarry and Forman. Lewis was a much better boxer, but with a suspect chin. I think Lewis would have pulled of a close decision. I think Foreman vs Lewis would have been even more interesting. |

[4/29/04 08:08:28 PM] Party Pooper | Here | 14u@ifeltathomhigh | 5 | Party Pooper - you're coming off as working class unemployable. Coolio it. Oh yassuh, boss, just because you said it, I'll be sure to attend to it post haste. How you wish that were true, but of course you know it isn't, don't you? Please say yes. Your opinion means so much to me. |

[4/29/04 08:18:21 PM] bk | ireland | mdc | 7 | who besides me is now totally ignoring Evan b the walking dichotomy who is not really from Belfast? Party Pooper you truly underestimate the quality boxer and warrior that JQ really was! Koo Koo you're still lusting after the big fellas. Size wouldn't have helped Lewis or Klitchko against the bad asses from the 70's -- a rare breed they were. PS your big footballers, Gastineau (spelling) and 2 tall didn't fare too well in the fight game, did they? |

[4/29/04 08:19:36 PM] Jerry Schultz | Cleveland, Ohio | jgschultz11@aol.com | 9 | Brenda, please don't feel any responsibility for these classless postings, it's not you. Perhaps it is time for some security on this site... While this is a site for Quarry/boxing fans, there's nothing wrong with stating you're not one, Jerry and Mike did have their detractors. Just show some manners when doing it. You would not want someone looping it up when they enter your house... Sorry, but I feel both Jerry and Mike were great fighters, both would-be champions. JQ was better than Ellis, no insult to Jimmy Ellis. He was basically Top Five 1967-1975, only a real talent does that in the greatest era in boxing history. Barely 6' and rarely 200 lbs., he did rile and seriously challenge Ali early, and did embarrass Ali when he relaxed. Few can say that. He nearly beat Frazier, nearly KO'D Norton on two-weeks notice, and clearly raised Foreman's eyebrows at ring side. Who else did all this? No power?? Ask Earnie Shavers, Ron Lyle, Mac Foster or Thad Spencer, all top-rated heavies, if JQ could bang. Read Joe Frazier's bio and what he says about Jerry, or Foreman's website entry on him. He would certainly have been cruiserweight champ also, was rated #1 contender multiple times when it was just the WBA, and was treated like a champ often. I might also add, he came across as a great guy. Why does all this need to be re-explained? New posters, check the rest of the site, you might learn something... I was glad to see Cleveland's own Don King get the boot for not having a permit recently. It's about time boxing's higher power's, whatever they may be, checked that guy... Brenda, if I had the credentials, I'd love to see something made on Jerry and the rest of your family, I've been a fan for years. Maybe Kent or someone can take the lead on that. I recently wrote ESPN Sportcentury and told them what a good story Jerry and you guys would make... Angelo, you're right on Lewis's chin, but his skills would have fit right in in the 70's. I rate him even with Larry Holmes, another great boxer with some funny performances. A Bowe- Lewis fight, about 1993, could have been the fight of that decade. Early 1990's also had Tyson, Holyfield, Mercer, Morrison, others, an underrated group in my opinion, though not as good as Jerry's era, I agree... Sorry Kookoo, real champ isn't in the NFL, boxing is a skill sport, usually anyway."

4/29/04 11:40:34 PM|KOOKOO|NY||KOOKOOCLOCK|||10|PARTY POO POO , WELL AT LEAST YOU GOT HEART AND YOUR NOT PC , LIKE A LOT OF PEOPLE, I HOPE THAT ONE FORMER BASKETBALL PLAYER GETS DOUBLE LIFE, SHOT HIS LIMO DRIVER, THIS SO CALLED STAR ATHLETES NEED TO BE TAKIN DOWN, HE'S GUILTY, LIKE O.J. PARTY POOPER YOU INSULT LIKE A REAL MAN, YOU MIGHT BE THE NEXT KOO KOO WHEN I RETIRE))))))))]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]]} stopped it. Like I said, I love Ali more than anyone, but I don't see how you'd view him as dominating that fight. | 10:22:33 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|Angelo-

I have Lyle 3 points ahead after 10 rounds. But I think he was ahead only because Ali' did nothing but clowning for almost all the fight. In round 7 and 8 Ali' got abruptly serious and Lyle was in trouble. I think that Ali' was killing Lyle in round 11. Lyle was already shaken after the first right and Ali' hit him with 20-30 other punches. Ron had no chance in hell to survive (or of surviving) the round. Watching the fight I got the impression that Ali' was always in control of the fight and never hurt or in danger. If he had fought with the determination he showed against Foreman, I'm sure Lyle wouldn't have been ahead after 10 rounds, and maybe wouldn't have been up on his feet. Just my impression.

I have watched only a synthesis of Ali'-Spinks 2, not the whole fight, and Ali' didn't look that good in my opinion. Besides that I think the fight was pretty boring. Just different views.

4/30/04 11:27:15 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Angelo, look at Lyle's eyes when the referee stopped the fight. They were glazed over and he was not throwing punches back. He was out on his feet and taking a large amount of punches. That right hand that started it all by sending Lyle sagging against the ropes was a hard punch.

Massimo, Lyle fought a strategic fight and he scored with enough punches, even if a lot of them were not as hard as he could punch, to lead on the scorecards. You are right, Ali did very little in a lot of the rounds and Lyle did just enough but there were times when he hit Ali hard. Lyle was saving energy for the latter rounds.

By clowning around in the fight, Ali also was saving energy for the latter rounds but he almost waited too long to get going because if he doesn't score that knockout in round 11, he is facing a powerful fighter with energy left. Lyle likely would have fought as hard as he could against Ali in rounds 12 through 15 to go after the win.

Ali, later in his career, until the Shavers fight, was hitting harder than he was earlier in his career and there probably would have been some hard toe to toe action in the last rounds of the Lyle fight.

Against Foreman, my memory of the fight was from seeing it has it happened and that all Ali did was lay against the ropes and tire Foreman out. But after viewing it on tape a lot of times since, Ali is counterpunching and tagging Foreman hard throughout the fight, bouncing off of the ropes and hitting Foreman in between wearing Foreman out with the rope a dope. The key to this fight is Ali hitting Foreman with hard lead right hands early in the first round to let Foreman know he was in for a real fight this time.

4/30/04 11:47:22 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|Kent-

Yes, I agree with you, Ali'-Foreman was very close after 7 rounds. After round 5 Giorgio Eduardo was not in the fight anymore. He was already ready for his own big bed.

4/30/04 11:51:52 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|Massimo---I think you're right that Ali-Spinks second fight was boring to watch. Sometimes, good boxers like Jimmy Young, Eddie Gregory (Eddie Mustafa Muhammad), even Lennox Lewis look boring when they win decisions.

Kent: The crazy thing about Ali-Foreman round one was that Ali even tried throwing right hand leads---much less the fact that they connected that hard. "When We Were Kings" comments on that. It's insulting to a pro fighter to throw right hand leads because they leave the guy throwing them so vulnerable to counters. But I think Foreman was stunned by the strategy and that's why he got caught. And it's very interesting that you mention your old recollection of the fight and then your experience watching it again. Ditto for me. When I first saw that fight, and for many years after, it was as though my memory told me Ali's only really good round was eight, when he scored the KO. But watching it again shows that he fought brilliantly for at least half the rounds, including coming off the ropes and popping Foreman with crisp punches. The punch that ended it was one of the best of Ali's career---and had Foreman beat the count, Ali would have tortured him in the next round.
| 4/30/04 12:27:02 PM | Fran | Philly | | plc7755@aol.com | | | | | Thanks Mass. In the second Spinks fight if I remember right Ali just held on to Spinks the whole fight and really didn't do anything but hold and tie up Leon....that was back in the day when they made up the bull that you had to KO the champion to take the title so Ali holds on and gets the decision cause Leon couldn't hurt him. The fight where Ali fought Lyle seemed very hard to believe that Lyle could take Foremans Bombs but couldn't take Ali's light punches. | | | | | | | |
| 4/30/04 12:35:55 PM | John Gerard | NYC | | rock289z@yahoo.com | | | | | I remember before the Ali-Lyle fight, Lyle said that everyone who fights Ali for some reason goes out there and tries to kill him. Lyle said his plan was to win even if the fight went to a decision. I had Lyle ahead and I think the fight was stopped too early. My friend was a ringside and he agreed. Cosell's calling of the fight was horrible. He had it in his mind that Lyle had no chance and he would not concede that Lyle was doing well even when he clearly was. He called Lyle "muscle bound" and said something to the affect that "Lyle was one of the few fighters who could claim a loss to Quarry" | | | | | | | |
| 4/30/04 01:54:47 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | | funktron@yahoo.com | | | | | It's a shame about Cosell----I enjoyed his call on fights and I think he made Monday Night Football interesting too. I don't remember the derogatory comment about Quarry during the Lyle/Ali fight but as I recall, he said something very similar about Earnie Shavers when Shavers fought Norton---one of the few fighters to claim a loss against Quarry. The thing that makes me scratch my head is that Cosell really seemed to like Quarry early in Jerry's career. I have tapes of Cosell praising Quarry both as a fighter and as an intelligent guy outside the ring. I wonder why he turned like that? Cosell was frustrated by boxers getting hurt or being in mismatches. Maybe he had a problem with Jerry hanging around too long?? | | | | | | | |
| 4/30/04 03:18:34 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | | | | | If you weren't ALI,JOE NAMATH OR O.J., you just did not rate with Cosell,just ask Dandy DON,Howard was hard on boxer's and Washington Redskins(Alvin Garrett). he was a weird duck anyhow,and a highly paid one.Handsome Howard skated thru life. easier than a fox in a hen-house | | | | | | | |
| 4/30/04 03:29:32 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | | | | | Maybe HOWIE was jealous JERRY QUARRY BEAT him out for Boxing commenting awards in his first year(1976)Call it how you see it,I can respect that,What he did not see was JQ beating more top ten Ranked contenders (7-0) than any other non-champion in the 1960's and 70's combined.His appraisals of Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers,As well as others show you how ignorant to the sport HUMBLE HOWIE really was.Glad he got the big bucks!NOT!! | | | | | | | |
| 4/30/04 04:51:59 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | | kentallenent@aol.com | | | | | Steve, I called that office I spoke about yesterday to ask if Toney's career was done. I left a message for someone to call me back and no one has yet. I will try again Monday or Tuesday. I also E mailed a couple of reporter friends of mine to see if they know anything about Mesi but haven't heard from them either. Of course, if they did know something, they might not share it with me as it is a big story. It was worth a try though. My feeling on the subject of Toney being through is he isn't through as he recently was seen shooting his mouth off about the Klitschkos after Vitali's win over Sanders. I think Toney only does that to promote himself into getting big money fights and he wouldn't do it if he wasn't going to fight again. | | | | | | | |
| 4/30/04 10:02:47 PM | Gerry Schultz | Cleveland, Ohio | | jgschultz21@aol.com | | | | | Just rewatched Byrd-Golota, Golota not as aggressive as he could have been, but I thought he won a narrow decision. Chris Byrd does not impress, I have to think his bell is about to be wrung soon. Howard Cosell's bio was called "I NEVER PLAYED THE GAME", which I suppose is supposed to have a double-meaning, to me it clearly means that what he knew about fighters could barely fill a matchbook, he was not complimentary of JQ to the degree Jerry deserved and just gushed for Ali like a schoolgirl, Howie was overrated in my opinion... Ali-Spinks was a farce. Larry Holmes and Ken Norton were the top guys by then, Ali had become a cartoon. I still remember "Neon Leon" on Letterman after his win, hilarious stuff at his expense. Brother Micheal was much better.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>4/30/04 10:50:25 PM</th>
<th>Steve</th>
<th>N.J.</th>
<th>dmmsrm@comcast.net</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Thanks Kent for your efforts at getting that info on Toni and Mesi. Your article on Mike on the Eastside boxing site was a great tribute to Mike and his family. Still, I agree with Gerry Schultz. Why don't you take the lead on writing something more in depth on Jerry and his family? Perhaps you could approach it from the viewpoint of writing a book. Not as an unbiased journalist?</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/1/04 05:09:12 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca.</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Steve, I am glad you enjoyed the article about Mike. I have actually written a book, a book of children's stories. It is not related to sports at all. It is a collection of short stories. I also have had a book of science fiction short stories in the works for a while now but it hasn't been finished.
I have never written a novel or a non fiction full book length before. Everything I have done is article length or twenty five pages or less short story length.
It would be quite a challenge but it is something to consider as we haven't heard much about the gentlemen who were working on a book idea lately. Daryl Breese, if you are out there, what's up with the book? |

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/1/04 08:29:30 AM</th>
<th>Fran</th>
<th>Philly</th>
<th>plc7755@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Cossell was a joke but to the casual fan he was believable he helped sell the Ali show and all the needed explanations of any weird stuff that his fights generated near the end. He knew nothing about boxing. Kent did you write an article on Mike if you did where can I get it.....Thanks</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/1/04 08:53:16 AM</th>
<th>Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)</th>
<th>Joshua Tree, CA</th>
<th>Sonia90101@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Yes, Kent, we'd like to check out the article also, can you please send us the link to it. Keep checking out the site all. We sure love &amp; miss you very much Dad, and Uncle Jerry!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/1/04 01:16:05 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca.</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Sonia, I tried sending you the link to the article but it didn't go through. So to you and Fran also, and anyone else who would like to read my article about Mike, go to www.eastsideboxing.com and click on the link that says "The Time Tunnel." The link is on the left side of the homepage. A list of articles will come up and the article about Mike is about the third one down from the top of the list.
Also, I have another article in the Time Tunnel section about Jerry's 1973 fight with Ron Lyle, near the bottom of the list of articles in the section and there is an article about Jerry from another writer in the section too. You will have to go to Eastside boxing right away because the editor of the site told me they are going to a new server and the site may be down for a couple of days. |

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/2/04 11:52:32 AM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Fran: Cosell knew about the personalities in boxing, the fighters, trainers, promoters, etc. He obviously never boxed himself, limiting his first hand knowledge of technical aspects of the sport. On the other hand, lots of judges have never boxed either---you can still score a fight or in Cosell's case, comment on it, without having been a pro. In fact, I find that some of the better sports announcers have never professionally played the sport. Of course, it's changing now---ex-jocks are the only ones hired to do color and they're even taking over play-by-play. The problem is that I don't think they can be impartial. Say what you want about Cosell heavily favoring one team or performer over the others---I think it's all a matter of perspective. It's funny that some Baltimore Orioles fans I know think Cosell favored the Pirates during the '79 World Series. I'm a Pirates fan, and I can remember being irritated with Cosell for favoring Baltimore. I agree with you though, that he had a relationship with Ali that clouded his coverage of the sport. Cosell had his faults, but I'm not a Cosell hater. I think he brought an intelligence to sports coverage that made it journalism instead of cheerleading. Sometimes there's nothing wrong with a little controversy. Also, by and large, he had integrity. He did have a few slip-ups (like during Olympic boxing, when he was getting fight results passed to him, then acting like he was predicting the outcome). But normally, I think you could trust that he was giving his views without being bullied by the network pressure. Other announcers take the company line and ignore stories that Cosell would jump on and report. In the end, I think his downfall as a serious sports journalist is that he began to believe his own hype—he loved interacting with celebrities and ended up too much on the entertainment side of sports instead of the athletic side.

Angelo, it does help to participate on even a limited level when reporting on a sport such as boxing. I do my part time column for the other site(s) and it helps that although I had no official bouts, I have put on a pair of boxing gloves in the gym and I have been punched in the face. This perspective gives me a respect for boxers and what they go through because at least I have an idea what it feels like and it is the reason, besides my basic instinct towards fairness, Evan B would call this the "Richie Cunningham" in me, that I never take cheap shots at any fighters. Some writers who like to dig up dirt on boxers I suspect are the very ones that never have laced on a pair of gloves ever. Thankfully most writers are the opposite and by and large have at least some integrity.

True enough, writers who never played the game take cheap shots that are unwarranted. Kent: Do you see the stars lining up for a resurgence of the heavyweight division? I'm not necessarily saying that tomorrow's crop of fighters will be Ali, Norton, Tyson, etc., but it seems to me that interest is picking up and there are a few guys on the horizon (or even active already) who are making for some intriguing bouts. I think that after Holmes—with the exception of Tyson, none of the guys appealed to a large fan base. Also, there weren't good natural rivalries. At first, Holyfield was viewed by some as an inflated Cruiserweight. I think he proved himself, but he gets beat by Bowe, who gets hammered by Golata. Put Lewis in the mix—a big guy with an engaging personality, who often is boring in his wins—he takes Golata rather easily, but loses to guys like McCall and Rahman—let me rephrase that, he doesn't just lose, he gets destroyed. Holyfield was the closest thing we had to excitement because he'd mix it up with anyone. Lewis was the closest thing we had to competence because he ruled for so long. But when they fought each other, it produced two snoozefests. Yes, we can make a case that the post-Holmes era produced some very good fighters, but not a lot of general fan interest (save for George Foreman's comeback—and he PRE-DATED Holmes as a factor in the sport! In my mind, lately that's starting to change. Kent, from your viewpoint as someone who is speaking with fighters/managers and is covering fights, do you see the division turning the corner? At what point do you think one of today's contenders will emerge as the clear best in the world—someone to shoot for? Forget the alphabet soup belts: Fans will know when one guy is clearly deserving of the title "Champion" and will consider his fights as the real title fights and other "champions" title defenses as elimination bouts.
Audley Harrison is one heavyweight who comes to mind who could make things interesting. He needs a little more seasoning but he is one to watch. He is big and quick. Vitali Klitschko of course is the man at the moment but he needs to take on all comers and come out on top before we can say he is more than just for the moment. Wladimir K. has a lot of talent but he seems to crumble up every time he is hit with a big punch and he has stamina and/or health problems that will hold him back. As far as American heavyweights go the pickens are slim indeed, former national golden gloves champion (like Jerry!) Malcolm Tann could surprise a lot of people if he learns to settle down in the ring and box and use his natural height advantage, he is 6'6" and at 230 pounds, is always in shape, but he tends to brawl more than he should and he sometimes leaves himself open to punches. He is 10-1 as a professional and I have seen him fight several times, including his only loss as a pro this past November to journeyman Willie Chapman, a veteran with almost forty professional fight and about a 50% win rate. Tann has already sparred in the gym with James Toney, Wladimir K, Kirk Johnson, and Chris Byrd, among others.

We could very well be in a resurgence of the heavyweights as there are also several Eastern European fighters that are climbing the ladder. The problem is, none of the prospects seem to get together and fight each other, they just seem to pad their records and it is hard to tell who is for real and who isn't. It isn't like it was when Jerry was coming up and he was already fighting Eddie Machen and Floyd Patterson by the time he was twenty-two or when Joe Frazier was already taking on Oscar Bonevena in his 11th professional fight.
Howard Cosell for what I thought was his biased favoritism for Ali. That and his at times snide remarks about Jerry whenever he lost a fight. He even described Quarry's two fights with Patterson as "failures". I'll never forget his remark that "Jerry will be fine as soon as he finds something he's good at." Then again, whenever I watch an Eagles game, I feel like the National commentators all hate the Eagles and are unfair in their coverage. Maybe that's just typical fan reaction, especially when your team is getting clobbered. One incident I did resent, however, is on the Jerry Quarry vs Norton fight. The one commentator, not Dunphy, makes the remark, with a little laugh, "boy, Norton is really painting pictures now, on Quarry, isn't he? This was at the end of the fight, when Quarry was taking a brutal beating. One thing I'll say for today's referees, they don't allow that kind of slaughter to take place anymore."

---

5/3/04 03:08:59 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA
CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10 | STEVE(SHEMP)

If my QB Farve would have forgotten his time as a Falcon and not threw that yo-yo interception in OT, The PACK might have been in there against NEW ENGLAND. I AGREE though JQ had a lot of media detractors. And most of them do not know boxing, One thing for sure, the knowledgeable fan THINK Jerry was a great fighter whether they liked him or not, the not so knowing (Cosell etc.) were less impressed. I still wish I could find the 1974 "superstars" competition were JQ finished third with the NFL'ERS. That would have shown Howie a few things Jerry was good at. Like GOLFING, BOWLING, BASEBALL HITTING, WEIGHT LIFTING (HE WENT OUT AT 230 LBS IN THAT ONE) BICYCLING, He wasn't even the same guy who showed up at ROTUNDA FLORIDA a year later.

5/3/04 03:12:57 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | 10

I think Jerry was a victim of the Sport of Boxing as it was conducted at that time, and his environment. Today, with a savvy promoter, management and trainer, he could have easily accomplished much more than he did in the sport. He would have been brought along more carefully and slowly. He would have been making ton of money on the way up. With a real pro management and trainer team, he would have been taught discipline. That is, he would have been taught to go after an opponent's weaknesses, instead of always challenging his opponent's strengths. Also, in Todays sport, if he did lose the occasional fight, it wouldn't have to be by a brutal beating.

5/3/04 03:40:09 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | 10

Hey Jimmy Dorsey, you knucklehead, yuk, yuk. How're you doing? I'm gonna try to write to the network, which one was it? They must have a tape or microfich of those 1974 and 1975 superstars events. They never just throw that old stuff away. I would love to have both those shows! If it costs some money, maybe we could share the cost. I know I'd be willing to.

5/3/04 04:33:47 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA
CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10

Yes Steve I would be all for it, they filmed those things in January/February of the particular year. Jerry was there to win that 74' competition and received more points (28) far more than any other boxer. He'd just Ko'd Shavers RANKED No. 3 FOREMAN 1- ALI 2- FRAZIER was in shape and on a roll. He even lifted 220 lb, when one year later he would go out at 210 lb after O.J. had favored him to win. Quarry fans would love how he determined to win he was at every event he was in. I HAVE THE 75' VERSION, and JERRY DIDN'T SEEM TO be in the shape he was in the year before, another thing that gets me, is 74' he did a lot better and against far more superior athletes than in 1975.

5/3/04 05:27:39 PM | Evan B. | Belfast | (same) | 1

It's sad watching this site go round and round in circles. You guys posted exactly the same comments about Cosell last year. The same criticisms, the same biases. You recycle a topic every few months, making the same utterances as if it was all something new and inventive, happy to post in the company of the proudly racist Koo Koo, whilst giving each other gratuitous little pats on the head. Posting ridiculous comments that Jerry Quarry was one of the greats (when everyone else knows he was gutsy and good and worthy of respect - but nothing more). Believing that you can somehow look into the mind of a fighter because someone punched you in the playground at school. It is all so very, very silly and sad. This site has become the reserve of four men ("knuckleheads") posting alongside a poison-tongued racist. A happy little clique wasting time and ensuring that few others bother visiting here. Charles Anderson left because he tired of the trivial topics covered. I'm going because of the bigots and racists. I bid you adieu.

[5/3/04 10:19:10 PM] Kent [La Habra, Ca] | Kentallenent@aol.com | | | | | | | | | | | | Yes Evan B, we do sometimes recycle topics but notice it is someone new who wasn't on the topic when it was brought up before who brings it up and we just comment on it. What are we supposed to say when something is brought up again, we already talked about this we can't discuss this again? Unless I missed something, it was John Gerrald, not one of the four knucklehead you are referring to, who started talking about Cosell this time around and it was Massimo who brought up the Ali/Lyle fight. Massimo wasn't around when we did in fact talk about that fight before. Again, he isn't one of us knuckleheads either. As far as a certain someone making racist remarks, notice none of us comment on anything he says of that nature, we ignore it. If we did, there would be constant battles going on around here. Something we all promised the Quarrys we wouldn't do.

WE HAVE NO CONTROL OVER WHO POSTS HERE AND WHAT THE CONTENT IS BUT I HOPE EVAN YOU RECONSIDER AND KEEP POSTING HERE AS YOUR INPUT IS MOST WELCOME AS CHARLES' INPUT IS AND ALWAYS HAS BEEN AND I HOPE HE DROPS IN HERE AGAIN AS WELL.

Steve [N.J.] | dmmsrm@comcast.net | | | | | | | I think George Forman, the younger version, would have flat out walked down Lennox Lewis and knocked him out cold in about three rounds!

Steve [N.J.] | dmmsrm@comcast.net | | | | | | | | | | | | For me, the point of posting here is to get attention! When I post my opinion here or ask for info on the Quarry family, I greatly enjoy getting a response. Instead, relevant posts are getting ignored while we keep trying to defend this site against the same split, or should I say, multiple, (at least four that seem pretty obvious to me) personality.

Evan B, "because he tired"? You are speaking incorrectly! But for the 1st time I agree with you about something...
Koo Koo not only knows shit about boxing but he's most certainly an anti-semetic, back pedaling CUNT! |

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/4/04 06:33:43 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Steve, I was speaking in general terms as I don't remember who wrote in about a certain subject. I was responding to Evan B's knitpicking about the same subject appearing here from time to time. To me, he was making a big deal out of nothing because if someone comes here and brings up a topic we already talked about before, then he or she should be able to do so and we should be able to comment on it.</td>
<td>&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Evan is entitled to his opinion even when we think it is wrong.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/4/04 06:44:15 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Steve, I agree that George Foreman would have knocked out Lennox Lewis, probably fairly early in the fight.</td>
<td>&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;George would be throwing too many punches early for Lewis' somewhat weak chin to stand up against. Now if Lewis survives say, into the six round, it could be a whole different ballgame and Lewis could either keep an increasingly tired Foreman at a distance for a late round stoppage or decision win for Lewis.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/4/04 08:04:17 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I think that probably Big George ( I mean Foreman, not Godfrey ) would have knocked out Lewis but I am far from being sure. I have seen the 1968 Olympic Final between Foreman and Chepolis ( I'm sorry but I'm not sure this is the right way of spelling that name.)&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I don't speak Russian very well, the only words I know are &quot; da &quot; and &quot; spassiba &quot; and, at 19 years of age, George was already a &quot;beast&quot;!&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I think he would have killed and buried a 19 years old Cassius Clay. But I also think that when in shape, focused and in his prime, Lennox Lewis is one of the greatest heavyweights of all time. I mean, read his shoe size, watch his fights against Ruddock, Golota, Grant, Botha, Bowe ( Olympics ) Rahman 2, Tuа etc ! And then, if Gregorio Peralta gave Foreman so much trouble, maybe even Lewis would have had a good chance of doing the same. Who knows ?&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I have just seen the first Shannon Briggs' s fight in Kl. He won in ( or on ) impressive fashion ! Bummmm, and the fight was over ! I don't think I could be a great champion in Kl. There are a few guys stronger than me in the world !&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;3 in New Jersey, 5 in Connecticut and 3 at Chattanooga Tennessee ! And even Bob Saap is a little stronger than me. More than 100 Kg heavier than me. Speaking of Briggs, I think that a Klitschko-Briggs fight would be interesting. I'd like to see Briggs-Tyson too ! I think it would be a slugfest !&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Speaking again of Ron Lyle I have to say that his career was really odd ! He began fighting professionally at 30 years of age to become one of the best heavyweights of the 70s. Just unbelievable ! Still, he came back in 1995, when he was 54 years of age to whip young asses !&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;PS:&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Evan B. you' re cool ! Please keep posting ! We have already lost true legends like Paul from Sydney and Roadscholarette from Chicago ! We are losing too much guys on this beautiful site !</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/4/04 08:13:38 AM</th>
<th>Sonia Hathaway</th>
<th>Joshua Tree, CA</th>
<th>Sonia90101@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hey BK, can you please not use that word, or words like that on here. This is a decent site, not a trash site that uses them bad words like that. Ok lets all do the right thing, and get along so this site keeps going. Do it for my Dad(Mr. Jimmy) and Uncle Jerry! Thank you! Dad &amp; Uncle Jerry, we sure do miss you both, and love you both. Always!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/4/04 08:19:04 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Too many guys, not too much guys... Sorry John Milton !</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/4/04 05:59:04 PM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Massimo: Big shoe size or not, I think Lennox gets flattened very early against Foreman. Foreman simply had way too much firepower. In fact, I look at the Foreman vs. Lyle fight, and figure that either of those guys, at that point in their careers, if they brought the fight to Lewis early, would knock him out in short order. Lewis is a very good and competent Champion of his era, but I don't think he... could stand in against the Super 70's guys---even the second tier (Shavers, Lyle). Lennox is a good boxer with good power and good defense. Good, good, good, but not great in any area. He's got a nice size advantage, but that's about it, and in my opinion, that's offset by a questionable chin. I'll go out on a limb and say that another of the 70's second tier guys, Jimmy Young, would outbox him and win a decision. It's interesting to note that among the top tier, I actually think Lewis would have a chance against Frazier and Norton. As they say, styles make fights and I think Lewis, with a fast start, could give problems to Frazier and Norton, not known for being strong starters. I think that if Frazier and Norton got out of the early rounds intact, they'd come back to beat Lewis. Ali, Foreman and Holmes take Lewis without too much difficulty. Oh, and let's put Jerry in my second tier (gee Evan, hope you're satisfied). Lewis could beat Quarry by cutting him and keeping him away with the long reach and big height and weight advantage. I think it would be very hard for Quarry to get inside (Evan, I'm sure you're loving this---wow, I admit that Jerry isn't the second coming of Jesus, or even the greatest boxer of his era...oh boy, how exciting). Now for the big letdown Evan, if Jerry could manage to force Lewis to fight instead of clutch and run, he'd KO him.

By the way, on earlier posts, I think I said that Duane Bobick beat Jody Ballard. I don't think that's the case---not sure if they ever fought. The fighter I was thinking of was Bunny Johnson. Maybe it's just me, but for some reason, I confuse Jody Ballard, Bunny Johnson and Young Sanford!

Tonight I saw some footage of Bob Foster's knockouts and his fight with Mike was one of them. Mike had just finished trading some good shots with Foster in the fourth round when almost out of nowhere, Foster exploded with his left hook. Mike was out cold and a very concerned Mr. Jimmy, who was working in Mike's corner, can be seen rushing into the ring to take out Mike's mouthpiece. I have a lot of respect for Roy Jones Junior as he has a lot of talent but I think he would have had his hands full with Foster. One thing that surprised me at watching Foster knockout Mike, Vincent Paul Rondon, and Dick Tiger, was how fast Foster was. I don't remember him being fast when I was watching him fight when I was a kid. Foster, although he had his problems when he tried to move up to heavyweight, in my book is one of the best five or six light heavyweights of all time. The others, in no particular order, Jones, Archie Moore, Billy Conn, Michael Spinks, and Ezzard Charles. Although Charles never won the light heavyweight title, his best years were spent as a light heavyweight.

Another Jones I respect very much is Doug Jones. He fought toe to toe with Cassio Marcello, did eat alive Bob Foster (kot 8 with Bob Foster down in the first round and hurt in round 7 and 8) and knocked out Zora Folley. Zora Folley outclassed Oscar Bonavena in their first fight, he was no bum! Doug Jones was the James Toney of the 60s. How do you guys see these fights? Are they on TV. Bonavena is a fighter that I would have liked to see more of. His career was parallel to Jerry's interesting they never fought. Probably wouldn't have been big money for Jerry. Was there ever any talk of a fight between the 2.
these fights? Are they on TV. Bonavena is a fighter that I would have liked to see more of. His career was parallel to Jerry's its interesting they never fought. Probably wouldn't have been big money for Jerry. Was there ever any talk of a fight between the 2. |

Unfortunately I have never seen Folley-Bonavena 1 and Jones-Foster. I know that stuff because I'm pretty literate in heavyweight history )). This month in Italy on ESPN Classic they' ll show Bonavena-Mildenberger, Bonavena-Patterson and Foreman-Lyle ! Of course, I'm looking forward to watch these fights !

CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||||10|ANGELO: No Bobick and Jody Ballard never fought ironically Ballard holds a 10-round win over Rodney Bobick. Foreman said in his book Ballard admired him so much, that he hated to Ko him in a exhibition.Fran: yes Bonavena-Quarry were actually Signed twice, one Bonavena suffered a broken hand. And they other 1973 Bonavena needed more time to train, so it went Quarry-Shavers May 25 which Jerry pulled out for the flu. then the bout ended up June 18 MSG Ellis-Shavers. With Ernie getting the KO. Brenner worked hard to get a Foreman-Quarry in those days. Would have answered all the 30 years of questions! Take care|

CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||||10|Kent: I just read your old post on Ring Magazines top 50 Heavyweights of alltime, 1998 Mr. Jimmy had informed me of Jerry being #27, He was also #27 in BOXING WORLDS ALLTIME IN 1979. That list would have to change drastically today. Pinklon Thomas #49?? Might as well have Tommy Morrison! Ring Magazine is the best Ratings for boxers for alltime. But that 1998 list leaves a lot to be desired. 6 years can really make a difference I guess. One THING about Ring, they always saved the 8th 9th and 10th spots in the top ten for the European fighters, such as Evangelista and Urtain, Peralta, Blin, Bugner, Boddell, Cooper, London, Corletti, What top ten contender (at the time) did these guys ever beat? Not meaning to bring up old posts, and we'll never know, But I still THINK JERRY would have outclassed Bonavena, People say WELL how come Quarry lost to Chuvalo, Who was also similar to Oscar? well JQ Was on the verge of being only the second guy to stop George C. Whom would later be George Foreman|

CALIFORNIA||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Jimmy: I watch the Chuvalo-Quarry fight and can't believe the outcome. Let's face it, that was the cheapest KO ever. It borders on a disqualification if you ask me...more a lack of following rules (not beating the 10 count) than being hurt on Jerry's part. I understand how people look at Jerry's record after retirement, see a couple of his losses, look at his relative light weight, and say we're all crazy for putting him in the elite category—even THINKING he had a chance against Foreman, who was so devastating in the early 70's. Well, for the skeptics out there, yes, let's take Jerry's losses first: During the meat of his career, he lost mostly to the best of the best. In those fights, he gave a good accounting of himself—was competitive, won some rounds, hurt the best in the business. On the downside, with short notice and not in fighting shape, he gave a very good fighter, Ken Norton, some trouble. Okay, now look at the wins. I know, I know, we've all covered it too often on the site. But for new visitors, Jerry beat some guys he wasn't supposed to. The boxing establishment started trying to make an "opponent" out of him against Mac Foster, Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers, etc. Lyle and Shavers went on to fight for the title and beat up on some of the best heavyweights ever. Seems as though Jerry's lighter weight didn't bother him against larger, muscle bound guys. The most frustrating moment of his career, for me, is the fact that he hurt Jimmy Ellis and couldn't follow up to land a KO. It simply wasn't Jerry's night. He was outpointed, but to me, on most other nights of his career, after he landed that punch to stun Ellis, he would have closed the deal—-look what he did to Shavers. | 5/5/04 05:08:27 PM| Angelo| Washington, DC|| funktron@yahoo.com ||| | 10 |

Does anyone remember the "Night of the Heavyweights?" I think it was back around 1977. Norton fought against Lorenzo Zanon (and KOed him in the 5th Round). On the same card, Jimmy Young fought, Larry Holmes did too. I think there was one other contender who fought that night. I'd love it if a major network did the same thing today. |

5/5/04 05:42:13 PM| Evren| London||| | 10 |

Angelo - I have that card on tape: - It was Norton vs Zannon, Holmes vs Young Sandford, Ron Lyle vs Stan Ward and Jimmy Young vs Jody Ballard. Leroy Jones was on that card too..What four matches would you choose now? |

5/5/04 07:03:32 PM| Angelo| DC|| funktron@yahoo.com ||| | 10 |

Evren: What was the result of the Ward-Lyle fight? Wow, I don't know what four I'd pick now. The Klitscho's would figure in. I think Corrie Sanders vs. Tua would be on the card, maybe Byrd and Holyfield??? |

5/5/04 07:41:10 PM| Jimmy Dorsey| Ventura California|| ronnyrains@yahoo.com ||| | 10 |

Angelo: Ron Lyle beat Ward on a close decision. Thats another top ten contender LYLE beat.Ward was kinda lazy, and allowed Lyle to take the play away. Ward had tree trunks for legs! You never heard much from him after that, Lyle had a great career, especially for starting as a pro so late, That Foreman brawl was a stinger for Lyle, AS ONE TIME BIG George landed face first only to get up and win, was just amazing. Of the 7 guys who decked QUARRY, JERRY IS 7-3-1 WITH 5 KNOCKOUTS. Roy Crear, AL "MEMPHIS" Jones, Floyd Patterson, George Chuvalo, Rufus Brassell, Joe Frazier, and Joe Alexander. And Brassells din not count, for it was after the bell. |

5/6/04 06:11:17 AM| Fran| Philly|| plc7755@aol.com ||| | 10 |

Quarry was killing Chuvalo he was off Balance and Chuvalo caught him with a jab. Jerry goes down and jumps up and they motioned him to go back down on 1 knee he does and they count to 10 and waved the fight over. ..... |

5/6/04 09:57:55 AM| Angelo| Washington, DC|| funktron@yahoo.com ||| | 10 |

I saw Ward fight Jeff Merrit (decent heavyweight). Merrit looked crisp for a few minutes, thought that as the cagy veteran, he'd take Ward to school. Merrit, in my opinion, got overconfident and Ward (nicknamed the Avalanche) caught him flush and KOed him, I think in about the second or third round. Ward was a smart guy (Psychology major in college) with good boxing skills. I had high hopes for him as he seemed very focused and as a young guy, fought like he had more experience than he really had. I think after Stallone took over his management, it rejuvenated him in a way---but then he got taken out in one round by Gerrie Coetzee and that was that. I was also a fan of Leroy Jones. I don't think he gets the credit he deserves as a very quick (for his large size) good defensive boxer. I don't see a record of him ever fighting again after losing his title shot against Holmes--and I think it's been said here that Holmes thumb ended Jones' career. I don't know if that's really the case, but I'm surprised that Jones didn't rebound from that loss. He could take a punch, and could outpoint most of the 80's fighters. |

5/6/04 02:02:02 PM| Charles Anderson| Arkansas|| ctjjandfam@aol.com ||| | 10 |

i met a guy the other day who fought gold gloves and we talked about jerry. he said jerry was one of the strongest people he had ever met. also one of the nicest. i really enjoyed the conversation. |

5/6/04 02:15:02 PM| Jimmy Dorsey| Ventura California|| ronnyrains@yahoo.com ||| | 10 |

Steve (Shemp) email me your address Steve, if you would, I have some stuff on JQ that i've researched from microfilm for the last 5 years. |

5/7/04 02:22:23 PM| Forest Ward| New York||| | 10 |

Regarding the Quarry-Chuvalo. Quarry got a fast count from the referee Zack Clayton. Clayton was notorious for giving fast counts. Look at the Ali-Foreman count, Clayton was the referee. Granted Ali would have won anyway, but it was still a fast Jerry was far ahead in his fight with Chuvalo, but Jerry was getting tired, and discouraged. With 3 rounds left in the fight he was no lock, even though Chuvalo eyes were closing, and the fight might have been stopped in the next round. I will always remember what Vince Lombardi said, "fatigue makes cowards out of all of us." One more note, I waited outside the MSG that night for Quarry to leave the MSG. Quarry and his entourage left together, they were not a happy group, and the father Jack Quarry was drunk. It was like they were coming from a funeral.

One more note, I waited outside the MSG that night for Quarry to leave the MSG. Quarry and his entourage left together, they were not a happy group, and the father Jack Quarry was drunk. It was like they were coming from a funeral.

Forest Ward: I can just imagine, how happy that group was! WOW, I'd wished I'd been to half those Garden bouts, you've witnessed Forest! it was actually better for JERRY in the long run, for had he stopped Chuvalo in the 8th, doubt he'd fought Foster and got that No. 1 contender, and the "BIG BUCKS" vs Ali. I'LL bet that first round QUARRY-CHUVALO had a few fans MSG on their feet. Just before the bell.

Who brought up Quarry verses Chuvalo again? According to our critic, we are not allowed to talk about the same subject twice. Well anyway, since it was brought up, I think Jerry forgot he had jumped right up after the knockdown before he kneeled back down to take the eight count and that Jerry somehow thought the count was only at eight instead of ten. I don't believe Jerry was hurt but was trying to do the smart thing by taking the eight count and it was a momentary lapse of concentration on his part and not because Chuvalo had hurt him that cost him the fight.

This fight along with the Ellis fight, both fights I thought Jerry should have won, plus the second Ali fight are the most frustrating for me as a Jerry Quarry fan. Ali # 2 because for a large part of that fight, Jerry just plodded after Ali throwing one punch and every once in a while, two punches at a time. I wish Jerry had torn into Ali and at least if he lost, he would have known he gave Ali a tough fight. In Ali # 2, Ali was having an easy time of it for most of the fight and this should never happen whenever Jerry was in a fight. I am not frustrated by Jerry's first fight with Ali because Jerry did fight hard in that fight but he got cut.

You're right about the second Ali fight, though Jerry impressed even Ali with the little rally he had. I heard Ali in an interview, recall that fight—he was surprised that Jerry hung in there and had the energy to fight back. The Ellis fight frustrated me to no end because 1) I thought Jerry was better and 2) I thought he could have scored a knockout with a good follow-up to the punch he landed late in the fight—I think the 13th. I think he showed too much respect for Ellis' power.

Ever go to the induction ceremonies at Boxing Hall Of Fame in Canastota N Y? Its coming up in June (every year) and for a week or so we (I live like 30 miles from it) have all kinds of famous fighters in town. Canastota is a very small town put on the boxing map back in the 50's by Carmen Basilo, who grew up on an onion farm there and by his nephew Billy Backus in the 70's. http://www.ibhof.com/04pressconf/04announce.htm this event if I planned it as I do have enough money to attend if need be. So, you never know. It sounds like a great way to see a lot of big names and to mingle with them.

Forrest Ward, I'll have to dig out that Quarry vs Chuvalo fight again. My understanding was that Jerry immediately jumped to his feet after the knockdown. His corner yelled at him to take a knee! He also stumbled halfway across the ring before falling down. This suggests someone caught off balance. He should never have taken the knee!

Forest Ward, that quote "fatigue makes cowards out of everyone", must be the worst oxymorons ever uttered! Total, extreme fatigue occurs when your body will no longer obey your mind's commands! Your courage is no longer a factor. Written by a football coach who had been worshiped for too long.

Steve: I don't think Lombardi meant that literally. His point was that fatigue makes you lose the appearance of having courage, and the ability to react to situations in a courageous way. It's figurative—and believe me, say what you will about Lombardi, but his guys bought into all of it and that's why he was a champion many times over. FYI, "Winning isn't everything, it's the only thing." is often attributed to Vince Lombardi. His actual quote was "Winning isn't everything, but wanting to win is." He made a big deal out of the will to win more than he did the talent to win. Sure, lots of Lombardi's motivational techniques are now old cliche, but back then, his guys would go into combat for him like no one else. I think about how it applies to Jerry Quarry—he didn't have the biggest talent, but he had the heart to give it his all every time.

JQ fan: Quarry-Chuvalo was the first fight I ever went to. Can you believe it was 1969 - Woodstock, Man Walks On The Moon, the Miracle Mets? A friend couldn't make it so we sold his ticket to a guy outside the Garden. We sat with us for about 5 rounds, then left to collect from his bookie—he had bet on Jerry and he was certain that a TKO was imminent. I remember Jerry ducking and countering Chuvalo all night long. Look at the photos of Chuvalo's face, they are evidence of the boxing lesson he was getting. While the film speaks for itself, it is by no means dispositive of what occurred that December night in Manhattan. It seems that Jerry caught a bit of a shot, stepped back a little, then he went down. It may have been a stumble, or a delayed reaction to the punch. But he got up immediately and took a knee, and then either barely missed the count, or just made it and got hosed by Clayton. It certainly appeared that he could have continued the whipping he was putting on tough George. Everyone must know that Chuvalo was not in Jerry's class; the result was an anomaly. But give him credit, he never quit, and he put Jerry Quarry down, however briefly, a feat accomplished by few. It has to be the highlight of George Chuvalo's career, and another example of "Hard Luck" for Jerry Quarry.
ref decided that fight and not the fighters. The fight's outcome does not represent this matchup at all. Chuvalo could beat Jerry on a given night, but Jerry was better as the early moments showed. Weird outcomes in boxing? Unthinkable. Jerry was better than Oscar Bonavena also, but the same thing could happen there as well... Massimo had a good comment on Lennox Lewis-JQ. Lewis had the so-so chin, but great size and real skills. Jerry would really bother him early and would have his real chances in this dreamfight, but Quarry had problems against tall boxers, as Ali, Norton, Ellis even Alongi showed. Lewis by decision... The younger Klitschko's loss to Brewster is being investigated, might be more than smoke there. This was a mismatch, Klitschko was well ahead, then the guy just collapses? I still don't believe it... Just wanted to add my name to those being really impressed with and saddened by the commitment and passing of pro footballer Patrick Tillman, what a waste... I haven't heard from the Golota detractors since his solid showing versus Byrd, are some of you rethinking the big guy from Poland? And, can Mike Tyson make the big comeback in the division as it currently sits? | 5/9/04 03:18:26 AM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Jimmy D.as soon as I get my e-mail problem solved,I will contact you about researching old microfilm on Jerry.Does anyone remember the outcome of a fight,when officially disputed,ever being overturned? When a fighter takes an standing eight count, the ref.whipes of his gloves on his shirt, tells him to put his hand up,looks in his eyes, and asks him if he wants to continue.This whole process must give the fighter an additional five or six seconds to recover.I'm not saying it's wrong,I agree with it.I't just makes the idea of taking a knee ,and risking a short count,even more bewildering. | 5/9/04 03:37:53 AM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|I'd like to correct my last post.I didn't mean to say when a fighter take a standing eight count,I meant to say when he's been knocked down, and get right up, he still gets basically the same treatment by the ref., and hence the same few precious extra moments of recovery time. | 5/9/04 08:24:07 AM|fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com||||10|Graet Posts on The Chuvalo fight, for 35 years everytime that fight is mentioned as a loss it seems like an explanation of what happened is required. Jerry was killin him but I don't remember him being tired that is interesting, I haven't seen the fight in 35 years. As Far as Jerry beating Taller fighters what about Ron Lyle and Mac Foster. He was a giant Killer thats why all the talk of him being able to do the same magic on Foreman....... | 5/9/04 11:33:53 AM|Massimo|Roma||jamesfinlayson.com||||10|On Mac FosterHe was the only fighter with a 100 ko percentuale ( I don't know percentuale in English, maybe rate). I think he won 30 fights scoring 30 knockouts. How good was him? Was he one of the hardest punchers ever?I know he beat Cleveland " Small Dog " Williams twice, but Cleveland was over the hillat the time. Was Quarry-Mac Foster an exciting fight? Thanks. | 5/9/04 11:49:06 AM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10| Angelo,this is the great part about rehashing old discussions.No matter what the critics say.As I understood it,Jerry fought Ellis with a cracked or broken vertabrae in his back.I to was dissapointed with his performance.I was alot more dissapointed years later,when I learned on this site that he would risk a Title fight by climbing into the ring with a broken back.| 5/9/04 12:30:06 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Massimo,Cleveland"large feline" Williams was the hardest puncher of the late fifties'except for Sonny Liston.His career may have been hampered by the fact that he received a severe gunshot wound to the abdomen in an altercation with a policeman.I think Mac Foster was 30 and 0, all ko's, when he met Quarry.He didn't seem that much bigger than Quarry.He was a standup,little upperbody boxer.He had tremendous power in all the conventional weapons he used.If he hadn't run into Quarry ,he might have gone 35 and 0.Unfortunatly for him ,Jerry was at his best that Jerry took some heavy shots in the middle rounds, but when he finally got to Foster, I think it was one of his most sensational knockouts. Jerry was a great finisher.

As Ward said, about seeing Quarry's entourage, leaving after the MSG bout with Chuvalo, how would you like to see those guys in a dark alley? "PARDON ME GENTLEMEN, I WAS JUST GETTING THIS NEWSPAPER!" I have to agree about Lombardi, great coach, I think he was motivating his players in his concentration camp, Bart Starr QUATERBACKING 5 World Titles in 7 years will never be equaled, right Joe Montana? I've seen people have even more courage in battles, for they knew there gas tank was low, and had to make things go quick! Actually All the time in L.A.

Hey Jimmy D., where you in Nam? It sounds like you might be a fellow vet. I apologize if you think I desrespected Vince Lombardi. I still have to maintain my position, you can only get to a point of fatigue and dehydration, and your body will fail you! It has nothing to do with courage.

Not Nam, but closely there after, No Steve, I know you did not disrespect Lombardi, I AGREE being out of shape or winded does not necessarily mean anyone's a coward, I think Lombardi used it to motivate his training camp, they did win everything!

Speaking of an entourage coming in all pumped up full of positive energy and then leaving after a fight all deflated, I was at the Vernon Forrest verses Ricardo Mayorga welterweight title fight about a year and a half ago in which Forrest, a five to one favorite, was knocked out in the second round by Mayorga. Forrest had a couple of rap guys coming down the aisle with him doing their thing to a loud rap beat. I happened to be standing right next to the entourage when they left the dressing room area and just before they left to go to the ring, I said to one of the rappers, a big heavyset black man, who is probably someone well known in field, even if I don't know who he is, "are you ready?" He responded with a hard "high five" to me and a loud, "Yeah!" A whole different ball game after the fight when the group headed back to the dressing room area with their heads hanging low after their fighter, Forrest lost a fight almost everyone thought he would win. It was one of the saddest scenes I have seen in a long time.

HAPPY MOTHER'S DAY TO ALL YOU MOMMA'S OUT THERE! WE LOVE & MISS YOU VERY MUCH DAD (MR. JIMMY) AND UNCLE JERRY! YOU'RE FOREVER IN OUR HEARTS.
Mac Foster was big at least 6'2 or 3 and The fight with Jerry was the most exciting fight I ever saw. Foster was winning going into the 6th when Jerry came out and stood still and the announcer was saying Jerry was very tricky then he slipped a jab and went under Foster and just punched him all over the ring they had to carry Foster out on a stretcher. He was a good fighter but was never the same after that Knock out.

Foster wasn't just tall and big, he was also muscular—the guy's build was scary. Great performance by Quarry—though the Shavers KO was more impressive and the Lyle victory was a bigger achievement.

Mac Foster was a stand up boxer who worked behind a long hard left jab, a very good one at that. His drawbacks were he didn't throw a lot of combinations and he wasn't overly fast but he could hit hard, his career mark of 30-6, 30 by KO is a testament to that.

Foster hit Jerry with a right hand in the third round that would have taken most fighters' heads off but even though Jerry wobbled momentarily, he shook off the punch. Foster won the first three rounds of the fight behind his fine jab and Jerry came on in the fourth, fifth, and sixth rounds. I saw the fight as being even at the time of the knockout in the sixth.

Foster was about 6'3" and he weighed in between 210 to 220 pounds most of his career. If a fight was won on looks alone, Foster was one scary looking guy. He was very strong looking physically and very strong in reality, as Jerry says in the post fight interview.

I'd love to get a copy of that fight. That was Jerry's most impressive fight. Foster could have been a top contender afterwards but he just fizzled out. It would have been interesting to see him fight Norton or Foreman. I think he could have beaten Norton.

I like the ascent of an undefeated guy as much as anyone else, but I also like when someone who's been around a while, with some ups and downs, suddenly starts to put an impressive string of fights together. Examples: Jimmy Young and Mike Weaver. Young had some bad losses and a few good wins, entering his fight for the title against Ali. Although he lost the decision, Young seemed to gain a lot of confidence in that fight, and his career started to take off. He beat Jody Ballard, Ron Lyle, George Foreman---it all ended with what I consider to be a good showing against Norton. It was close, but Norton won. I must say, after that, Young was certainly still a big part of the competitive heavyweight division, and in my opinion, would have undoubtedly gotten a title shot against Larry Holmes or Mike Weaver, except for two losses in a row to Ossie Ocasio. What a waste. Young wasn't in his best shape for these fights, especially the first one, and didn't fight his type of fight. I could see losing focus and getting upset the first time, but after that, by losing again, it pretty much ended Jimmy Young's hopes for ever being a factor again. He gave Cooney a few tough rounds too, but it was the end of the road for Young. On the other hand, Mike Weaver turned his career around by reeling off a few wins, and of course shocked a lot of people (not me) by icing John Tate. I picked Weaver to win that fight, but if anything, was surprised that he lost so many rounds to Tate before landing the KO punch.

... And poor Sonny Liston, who did bet all his purse of the Wepner fight on Mac Foster, lost his money! " If you want to lose your money, be a fool, bet on Sonny ", said Cassio Marcello. Forty years ago! But this is another story, and we'll talk about it another time...
heavyweight fight for the first time and is turned off on boxing because he saw first hand how brutal it is<<his words...... I notice a lot of posters here go to live fights a lot. My question is, is boxing much different seeing it in person? Does TV take away some of the ugliness? Just curious and something i never really thought about till now. | 5/12/04 02:41:25 AM|Ed |Cicero N Y||mooseygoop@aol.com||||10|Sorry previous post was shortened somehow..Okay, i've been watching boxing for a long time on tv and have only gone to 1 pro fight (a fairly tame welterweight fight years ago). A friend of mine went to a heavyweight fight for the first time and is turned off on boxing now because he saw first hand how brutal it is (his words).....I notice a lot of posters here go to fights. My question is, is seeing fights live much different then seeing them on television? Does television sort of sanitize fights? Just curious and something i've never thought about till now. | 5/12/04 03:55:14 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||Kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Yes Ed, it is more brutal to see boxing in person as opposed to television. The blood and the pain are very real. At times I have questioned why I like such a violent sport and I haven't quite answered that question in my own mind let alone am I able to verbalize it to someone else.I do know I am against violence outside of sport except in cases of self defense and in general I oppose the use of military force except when we are attacked, "911" and Pearl Harbor are examples when military force is needed. So again, why do I like boxing and football, another violent sport, who knows?| 5/12/04 07:26:50 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Why indeed. Yes, the fights are different in person than they are on television. First hand looks and sounds of punches landing lend a reality that television can't. Why do we like it so much? I don't know. But I saw that 60 Minutes II. piece on the Klitschkos and I remember someone saying (I think it might have been their manager) that boxing is EVERYONE'S favorite sport. He said something that stuck with me. If you approach a four way intersection---on one corner, there's a basketball game, and on another corner two guys fighting, and other sports on the other two corners---almost everyone would stop to watch the fight. Can't explain why, but he's right. If people would prefer going to see basketball, tennis, etc., maybe that's because they're supressing their basic instincts. Because he's right---in a spontaneous setting, we'd all watch the fight on first impulse. | 5/12/04 08:59:06 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Angelo,Kent,Ed,yes.tv definitely sanitizes and distorts the viewing of a sport. One thing I always noticed about viewing a live fight at the Blue Horizon,or the Eagles play live at the Vet.,or even the Phillies playing live,was how much faster the action and the athletes actually are in real life. The athletes seemed to move much faster and hit much harder perhaps because you can hear the grunts.Most of the time, however, except for the overall fun exsperience of going to a live sports event,your much better off watching it on tv.I mean that in terms of knowing exactly what's going on at all times.We all have violence and the fear of violence in us.These basic instincts are hard wired into us.I think sports are like a public opiate,or catharsis,a way of getting the violence or fear of it worked out of us by viewing it and experiencing it vicariously. | 5/13/04 11:49:19 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|I agree---the comfort of a living room chair and sensibility of instant replay make staying home my preference. I will say though, that viewing sports in person gives you the advantage of seeing action away from the ball/puck. On television, they focus on a large picture of a small part of the action (albeit the main action). In person, you see an overall view of the entire field of play. Baseball: You see the ball hit off the bat, traveling through the air, and you see the outfielder running to meet the ball. On television, you see someone standing there waiting for the ball to come down.Football: In person, on a long pass play, you see the ball travel to the area of the receiver and also see defensive backs running to meet the action. On television, it focuses on the quarterback dropback and than the catch. I also like to watch lineplay, which normally isn't shown up close on television.

Kent, Angelo, Steve,

Thanks for the excellent insights, my goal now is to check out a heavyweight fight (top contender one) in person!

P S Mass, u didn't comment? Are u a stay at home fight fan too??

Massimo " Wilt, who " Cini|Roma|massimo@comcast.net|10|Ed-

There aren't great boxing fights in Rome. Vincenzo Cantatore sometimes fights in the Eternal City but he isn't (it's slang) exactly Cassio Marcello or Giorgio Eduardo, even if he is a good puncher. Anyway, very honestly speaking, I'd have some moral problems to go to a boxing fight knowing that in that very night, a young man ( or maybe even two young men) potrebbe ( may, might, could I'm always uncertain how these three words work )die. Watching the fight at home, I feel better with myself, I feel innocent. I almost never go to a sport event. Going ( or to go) to a soccer game ( AS Roma or SS Lazio) is very exciting, you see a sea of flags ! But it's not free and there is unfortunately so much violence outside the court ( people fighting with the police etc.). I'd love watching a NBA game, mostly the Lakers, but Los Angeles is a little too far from my huge bed. I'd also love having my picture taken between Shaq and Yao, to make them look like midgets. But probably, this is not going to happen.

Some interesting comments on the comfort/interest on being a boxing spectator. I saw the '60 Minutes' that made the intersection comment, that was Max Kellerman, he makes a sobering observation. For me, the Mancini- Soo Kim match, one of the five or six best I ever saw on TV, changed the way I looked at boxing because Kim died. The racism to me also is a turn off, but I still watch as a fan and would not have trouble attending, I take it for what it is... I recently checked Boxing Rankings and was amazed by the inconsistencies. Champs for the top four belts are often not listed among the top fifteen contenders for the other belts? Why? The WBC has V.Klitscko as champ, Mesi is #3, Toney is #5, Tyson#8, Byrd/Ruiz not ranked. WBA- Ruiz is champ, W.Klitschko #3, Mesi #7, Holyfield #11, Oquendo#12, V.Klitschko not ranked. IBF- Byrd is champ, Tua is highest here, #3, Golota is #15. WBO- Brewster is champ, Toney #1, Mesi #5, W.Klitschko #6. Why is there such disparity in assessing these guys? I can't believe more consistency isn't possible in creating better fights, I can only guess that the guys doing the rankings are either stupid or corrupt, what do you guys think? Thanks.

hi Gerry, Yes I whole hardly agree about that,boxing ratings have always been shady,They only real one we've ever had, that showed the less biast (RING MAGAZINE). the W.b.a. ACTUALLY RANKED JQ a little better,But I still went by were ever Ring had him ranked. Ring Magazine did not even recognize Ali losing his title out of they Arena until 1970, When he announced an official Retirement.

Reportedly, he had "kill or be killed" written in Korean in his dressing room before the fight.

The thing about this fight was it was a very competitive match and Ray Mancini won by knockout in the fifteenth round. The knockout didn't seem out of the ordinary and it was only later we learned the extent of Kim's injuries. Kin was a real warrior and that is part of the attraction for boxing, I admire the bravery of its contestants. Beyond this, as I said, it is hard to explain my attraction for the sport.
even two young men) potrebbe ( may, might, could I'm always uncertain how these three words work ) die. That line u wrote brought back memories of a fighter that did die in the ring... Benny "kid" Paret, in the early 60's. Emile Griffith was his opponent. It was the first time someone was killed on national tv. Of course a year or so later Lee Harvey Oswald was shot to death on national tv, but boxing has the sad distinction of being the first. That line u wrote brought back memories of a fighter that did die in the ring... Benny "kid" Paret, in the early 60's. Emile Griffith was his opponent. It was the first time someone was killed on national tv. Of course a year or so later Lee Harvey Oswald was shot to death on national tv, but boxing has the sad distinction of being the first.

That line u wrote brought back memories of a fighter that did die in the ring... Benny "kid" Paret, in the early 60's. Emile Griffith was his opponent. It was the first time someone was killed on national tv. Of course a year or so later Lee Harvey Oswald was shot to death on national tv, but boxing has the sad distinction of being the first.

| 5/15/04 05:22:01 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | | 10 | The Preem, Primo Canera was part of an unfortunate accident that caused the death of a fighter named Ernie Schaef (correct spelling?). After landing a seemingly normal left jab, Schaef suddenly went down for the count and lost the fight by knockout. I don't remember if he was carried from the ring or not but the fans booed him with beer cups and debris when he left the ring, yelling, "fix!" "fix!" thinking Schaef had taken a dive. What really happened to Schaef was he had some pre-condition that made him much more in danger of head damage than other fighters. A tremendous beating at the hands of Max Baer in a previous fight didn't help matters any. I wonder how the idiot fans who were booing Schaef and throwing things at him felt when they found out he had died?

| 5/15/04 06:20:07 AM | Massimo | Roma | calvin lane 2.27.com | | 10 | Kent, my friend, one thing I know for sure. Canera is not the correct spelling. The correct spelling is CARNERA. Regarding the right spelling of Schaef, I can't help you. That's an English name and English is something you know better than me (even if I dominate such difficult words like( or as) ain't, bum, ass, chump and sucker). What it's amazing in Shaef 's collapse in the ring (caused by the lightest left jab ever thrown in a boxing ring) was that after the Baer fight (in which he was knocked down with just a few seconds left in the fight) he fought three more fights before the fatal fight, and won by KO two of these fights.|

| 5/15/04 11:56:59 AM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | | 10 | Kent: Dennis Mulholland won the W.A.A. (World Athletic Association) Boxing world Welterweight title July 18, 1984 at BAKERSFIELD, And Strongbow (the DOME) which was later to be affiliated with the IBF. Happy birthday Jerry Quarry (59). |

| 5/15/04 01:22:10 PM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | sabrinaquarryporter@aol.com | | 10 | HAPPY BIRTHDAY UNCLE JERRY..WE LOVE AND MISS YOU VERY MUCH...|

| 5/16/04 12:24:54 AM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | | 10 | HAPPY BIRTHDAY, JERRY. He's probably looking down at this site, and laughing his ass off, Mr. Jimmy too!! I watched the fourth round of Jerry vs Ellis, twice today. I thought Ellis was a goner. You could hear Jerry's corner yelling, "move in Jerry, finish him", why Jerry backed off for the rest of the round is a mystery to me. When Jerry had a guy hurt, he usually went all out. |

| 5/16/04 01:12:45 AM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | | 10 | Angelo, I don't agree with you on getting a better view of what's happening on the field in the stadium, by being there, or at a fight. You still have to contend with the noise, the crazies, people standing up in front of you. I once had box seats in the 200 level at a Phillies game. My wife, myself, and five kids, had to move up into the upperstands twice, because of rain. Not to mention a crazy guy with a long beard, who was naked, except for a pair of shorts, who spent the entire game shouting obscenities at Lance Parrish. |

| 5/16/04 02:24:37 AM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | | 10 | Kent, you admit you have delved into boxing enough to get punched in the face with a boxing glove. You admit you are a student of martial arts. Yet you say you don't understand why you love boxing and football? Admit it!! You are a savage! Just like everyone else on this site. We watch violent sports to soothe our inner demons. I don't mean to insult anyone on this site. Lets face it, though, the basic wiring is there. It's called fear or flight. |
Yeah, the truth (Williams) is that we are all monsters, very sick people! Hitler and Pol Pot were angels in comparison to (or with) us.

Wow, Steve, you're such a beast. Probably the scariest most savage beast that ever sat in a lounge chair drooling at everyone else doing the fighting. You luv the blood and guts so long as it's not yours. Go look in the mirror, bruiser, and knock ya self out because you ain't frightening nobody else. You got a black belt in Nocando, ya melon head. You couldn't knock an old lady off of a toilet seat, but if you want to make believe that you are tuff, I won't spoil your fantasy. Keep practising those scary faces and we'll all cower in mock horror when you shout 'boo' (or in your case 'boo hoo'). Who would have believed that all the guys on here are psychopaths? Scary.

Boy, here we go again. Last night I posted three times. I meant them all as reasonable opinions. Except for the last one, where I was trying to have a little fun with Kent. Kent knows I like to kid him and doesn't take it literally or personally. On my last post, I meant to say that basic instinct IN EVERY HUMAN BEING, FIGHT OR FLIGHT, IS WHY WE SURVIVED AS A SPECIES! I WAS NOT INFERRING THAT EVERYONE ON THIS SITE IS A PHYCO! Even though my posts are poorly typed, bad grammar, and lots of misspelled words, I still think most of them are reasonable. Yet the only responses I seem to get lately are from this same frustrated fifteen year old nutbag, who's pretending to be about four different people. Yes, party pooper, I admit it. I love to watch violent sports, and I don't think I'm a tough guy. I used to think I was, but I'm now 56 years old.

Take it easy Steve, you're cool! Take it difficult Party Pooper (I'm joking)!

Tuffest hombre on here is our man Steve. Gets off watching gore and has a diploma in insults. I've got four different names? Get a life. I'm the one and only Party Pooper, so get used to it. Aged 15? I wish. I'm younger. Maybe we should get a name for Steve. The Mauler? No, doesn't fit. Sexy beast? No, he's neither. Arm Chair Murderer? Yes, that's it. Steve is the Arm Chair Murderer. He uses the remote to watch everyone fight and lukes it.

Staying home makes for a better overall experience, but I was just saying that sometimes, television coverage can't catch certain aspects that an overall view of the field of play can. By the way, I grew up seeing the Phillies at the Vet---I always liked the 300 level "Terrace Box" seats because of the cover. If it was 88 degrees with strong sun, you were in shade. If it was raining, you were dry. Good view too. The Vet might not have had much personality, but I saw an Eagles playoff game back there in the early 80's and many Phillies games too. I miss the place.

Speaking of The Vet, Old Packers coach Lombardi, Sure ruled with an iron thumb. Veterans were worried about their jobs every July, or worse, living in constant fear of being traded to the Eagles!! That statement not being in shape makes cowards of us all, Sure did not apply to JQ VS Norton (who took that bout on 17 days notice). There is some great info on Oscar Bonavena on the internet "murder at the Mustang" And Oscar is sitting right next to Ross Brymer (his killer) when you punch in Ross Brymer who is also deceased, Tells a lot more to the story, and interesting stuff. shape Quarry would have a style and intensity that would cause problems for Norton. At any point, Norton could have beaten Quarry on cuts, but aside from that, JQ would have the advantage. It's funny to me that Norton "always wanted to fight Jerry Quarry." Well, he ended up fighting a Quarry who was not only past his prime, but also untrained and let's face it, you can't take on a world class fighter with two weeks notice. I'd say Norton never fought the REAL Quarry. But with that said, there was a period of a few years that Norton really shined. In fact, I don't agree with this, but Muhammad Ali thinks that if Norton had known that the winner of Norton-Foreman would fight Ali in Africa---a Superfight for the Ages---Ali thinks Norton would have found a way to beat Foreman. I disagree. I think ten out of ten times, Foreman would KO Norton, mostly in the first or second rounds. I think Ali respected Norton because of the tough fights Norton gave him, and this clouds his view.

In the above scenario, we could substitute Joe Frazier for Norton as well. Notice neither Norton or Frazier really hit Foreman with their best shots as both were badly hurt early in the fights. Of course, for either Norton or Frazier to have a chance, they would have to survive the early Foreman onslaught, not an easy task at any time. Ron Lyle also showed that by hurting Foreman early, he had a real chance of victory. Foreman ended up winning in the end but it was hardly an easy walkover, to say the least!

I think Norton's jaw wasn't good enough for taking Foreman's bombs. Foreman hits harder than me.

You may be right. I've always given Norton no chance of beating Foreman (never gave Frazier a chance either) but Ali knows a little more about boxing than I do, and he thought both of them, especially Norton, could beat Foreman under the right circumstances. And I think the philosophy was like you said---Norton had to establish an attack early to take some of Foreman's confidence away. Norton performed so well against guys who didn't have one-punch KO ability, like Ali, Young and Holmes...but did so poorly against the big hitters. I think it was bizarre. The guy had the ability to take a punch and showed heart---but against Foreman and Shavers and too late against Cooney, he got a sort of stage fright, ironic because it's what happened to Bobick against him. Whenever people say Norton couldn't take a hard punch, I tell them to watch Norton-Holmes. Larry Holmes hit him with repeated shots that should have taken him out or at least knocked him down a few times. Conversely, Norton, later in the fight, did the same to Holmes. When Norton was in the thick of a fight, he stayed upright and pounded it out. When he got hurt very early, he seemed to deflate and not have any ability to defend himself or go on the offensive.

I am just wondering how or what all thing about the new TV show casting for boxers. The winner takes all and has a real big fight in LV. win a lot of money but you must have boxing in your past. Channel 4.

Yes I agree for the most part, If Lyle could hit Foreman with his great arsenal, and not come home the victor, I doubt very seriously if Norton would have either. That's one thing JQ Could have accomplished against Big George (get his respect early). And lean in with those hooks, of course George great ram-rod jab could come into play. Foreman would have been at least a 13-5 favorite and 8-5 a knockout! Angelo, Norton was scheduled to fight non other then Oscar Bonavena, who again broke his hand, When Jerry was offered the bout, in Hawaii at the time, Jerry was contemplating a bout for 50 grand vs EITHER BOONE KIRKMAN IN SEATTLE, or a rematch with Lyle in Denver.

I wonder how Bonavena would have done against Norton? Brenda: Yes, I heard Stallone is involved with the reality boxing series. I guess the show will have the fighters and their families profiled. It will be an elimination of sorts---and the guy left standing will get some good boxing management and a big money fight. Sounds interesting.

I'll say one thing how about they old actor William Smith and not the one who played Ali, I'm talking the character actor who was on Rich Man Poor Man, and the anyway which way but loose series etc. playing Oscar Bonavena? what a natural!

By 1975, Jerry had very little left, in shape or not and Lyle would have beaten Jerry at that point and maybe even Kirkman too. There is no way Jerry should have fought after the second loss to Joe Frazier. In that fight, Jerry fought well for the first two rounds but after Frazier got warmed up, he gave Jerry a bad beating that should have retired Jerry for good. It is similar to when Evander Holyfield fought James Toney last year. Holyfield looked good for the first two rounds but after that, Toney gave him a beating. I can't believe Holyfield continues to insist he wants to fight again. He recently fired his entire staff because they didn't believe in his chances of coming back and he is looking for new people who believe in him as much as he believes in himself. I always thought Holyfield had some brains in his head and I have heard he has made some sound investments so money isn't the issue but I guess Holyfield is disillusional and hopefully no one will give him a license to fight. Anyone that does should be fed to the Lions. Holyfield is playing with fire!

Massimo, you know, back in the day, there were alot of great Italian fighters. Rocky Graziano, Vito Antufuermo, Marciano, My all time favorite middleweight from Philly, Joey Giardiello, who could have given boxing classes to any alltime great. These men where all small in stature. They where all reputed, whoever, to have unusually wide feet!

Kent, do you think there should be a mandatory age for retirement? Even more importantly, How about a certain amount of Pro fights a guy can fight? How about a certain number of fights in proportion to his losses. Say if a guy has lost 25 or 30 percent of his fights, or even a lesser percentage, shouldn't he have his license pulled? It would sure eliminate alot of trail horses, and guys like Holyfield.

Think about it. Most fighters could still get pretty seasoned in 20 to 25 fights. This without walking through all the stiffs they normally do to build up their records. By this time in their career, they either have it or they don't. A limited time in the Pros would seem to be a way to cut down on all this brain damage. I think the countless punches they absorb in sparring for fights, probably does as much long... term damage as the actual fights do.|
[5/18/04 02:48:05 AM|Massimo|Roma||Ezzard Charles b Bob Satterfield KO 2 (1954)||||10|If Holyfield really thinks he can whip Vitali he is dumber than someone who believes in horoscopes. It should be verboten to fight after you reach 40 years of age. It has no sense ( or meaning) in hell. Holyfield has some million of dollar more than me in bank. But even if you have economic problems after you have earned many millions of dollars it means that you deserve to have economic problems.SteveBeing Italian ( better if from Pisa ), Danny De Vito's feet... That's thesecret of greatness in life !PS: I think Ezzard Charles would be heavyweight champion in modern today with guys like Ruiz and Brewster. He beat a long list of good fighters in his career ( a young Archie Moore 3 times, Baksi, Layne, Satterfield, Joe Louis, Walcott). He would have probably his ass whipped ( not whupped) by Vitali,anyway.PS2:Timoteo Duncan, take it easy, take it difficult, take it like you want ! Anyway, Shaq did junk right in your face and now rules. Wilt, who ?And K.B. is M.J, babies ! |}
[5/18/04 04:15:54 AM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||||10|Massimo,why Pisa? Doyou think if their feet where too wide and not long enough,they might fall into the Arno River? |
[5/18/04 04:34:14 AM|Party Pooper|Truthful||(everywhere)||||6|Can you experts tell me whether someone sitting in a lounge chair becomes looney and stupid from watching too many fights on television. If so, then I have just diagnosed Angelo's problem. He has watched way too much boxing. Steve has too. I'm not sure about Massimo or Kent, though. They might be unstoppable truthtellers. Koo Koo Clock has disappeared. Is he too wired to log on ? If he stopped drinking he'd be destined for much bigger things. |}
[5/18/04 06:25:44 AM|Massimo|Roma||Pisa: Galilei, Fibonacci, Pacinotti.com|||10|StevePisa because I was born in Pisa, very close to the pretty famous tower. Pisa is small, and of course can't be compared with Rome, but in its own weight division is one of the best. It's worth visiting once in life. As a Pisan I'm surprised and proud that you know the Arno river. Unfortunately ( my fault ) I know nothing about Old Jersey.|
[5/18/04 07:54:40 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||||10|Steve, no I don't favor mandatory retirement ages or limited number of fights however, an older fighter should have to prove he can perform at a set level of physical performance to get a license, as would any fighter of any age. Remember, Jerry was only twenty-nine when he fought Norton and he should not have been in the ring at that point.Mr. Jimmy favored an annual MRI exam in order to get a license. Any sign of damage, then no license. This would have at least stopped Jerry's fights in 1983 and of course the ill fated match in 1992. In 1983 Jerry took an exam and it showed signs of brain damage. The California commission gave him a license to fight anyway on the basis of Jerry having no apparent symptoms and also because they didn't want to deprive a man of his livlihood. Could it have been possible that they didn't want to give up their sanctioning fees? while I don't think the number of losses should be considered, the commissions should question whether someone who has say, ten losses in a row, belongs in the ring or not.|
[5/18/04 08:51:57 AM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||||10|Party Pooper: If I'm brain damaged, I doubt that it's from watching too much boxing---too many Seinfeld reruns maybe, but not too much boxing.By the way, what does everyone here think of Tarver laying out Roy Jones Jr.? Nothing against Jones, but part of me LOVES the fact that someone dropped him like a ton of bricks. I read an interesting column in the Washington Times yesterday---the sports section---and the writer said that Roy Jones isn't nearly as great as everyone thinks/thought. He said that Jones fought a whole bunch of nobodies---his claim to fame by beating Ruiz is a farce because Ruiz sucks---and also, he editorialized about Jones getting clobbered by Tarver. He brought up the Larry Holmes-Earnie Shavers title bout. I'm paraphrasing, but he quoted Holmes as saying "My legs felt like Jello but something in my head told me that this guy is about to take your title---about to take YOUR title---and I managed to survive." Basically, Holmes got clocked by maybe the hardest hitter ever--- probably didn't know where he was for a moment---but gutted it out and made it through the round. The writer's take was that it showed that Jones isn't so great. |

| 5/18/04 12:09:47 PM | charles anderson | ark. | cttjandfam@aol.com | | 10 | how come jerry never fought boone kirkman? that should have been a good fight and a money maker as well. |

| 5/18/04 01:42:32 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | | 10 | Kinda funny how, Duane Bobick, Gerry Cooney, Joe Bugner, Boone Kirkman, Henry Cooper, Jose Ibar Urtain, Jose Luis Garcia, Chuck Wepner, Alfredo Evangelista, Among others, Never beat a World Ranked Top Ten Fighter? Jerry Quarry only beat 8!! |

| 5/18/04 04:19:06 PM | steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | | 10 | Massimo, if you ever travel to the south end of your country, visit Calabria. My wife's family are all Calabrese. DiMarco's and Lupinacci's. |

| 5/18/04 04:35:31 PM | Party Pooper | Truthville | (everywhere) | | 8 | Steve's a 'made guy' with the mafiosa so we'd better be careful how we talk to him. He'll make us an offer we can't refuse, Sea Biscuit's head in your bed, etc. Angelo - get up from the lounge chair and stop watching too much tv. You're too fat already and you'll look better with your hairpiece on. If Massimo could give away the booze, you can too. Give it a try before it's too late. And get your hand off of it, Kent. You'll have Massimo doing it if you keep it up. |

| 5/18/04 04:38:11 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | | 10 | Jimmy Dorsey&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Henry Cooper beat Zora Folley on points in 1958. Wasn't Zora Folley a top ten contender at the time? |

| 5/18/04 05:25:14 PM | steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | | 10 | Kent, I agree with you that fighters should have MRI's, or whatever medical tests exist today to monitor any change of brain damage taking place. Yes, at least once a year. |

| 5/18/04 05:29:16 PM | Gerry Schultz | Cleveland USA | jgschultz11@aol.com | | 10 | Some good comments regarding the visible pain of live boxing and brain damage. Kent, gotta disagree regarding age limits. Growing old gracefully and moving on when you've had enough are lost concepts to this sport, I've never seen it benefit anyone. If your a 38-year old former- whatever, and you're still out there, you've failed life. Just because you might still be able to do it doesn't mean you should. Even the best should be able to maturely realize when their day is ending, and a good sport doesn't keep it's stars pathetically hanging on... I agree again, Jerry came up too quickly, but he had the hype few could match, at least he wasn't Pete Rademacher. Except for NFL running backs, I can't think of any sport players that are as ground up young as boxers. The fact that guys like Joe Frazier and Jerry Quarry had little to offer after age 30 points again, LOUDLY, for the need for headgear. Even with as much as these guys and others took, they could have stayed longer and suffered less. In a sport where the central goal is to smash the other guy in the head, the absence of headgear to protect against long term effects is a gigantic mistake. This site, more than any other, needs to lead the cause against head trauma by insisting on both headgear and a retirement age. What more evidence do you guys need?
[5/18/04 05:37:46 PM|Steve|NJ||dmmrsm@comcast.net||||10|Kent.my idea was that if you could come up with some sort of formula ,say a fighter has had forty fights, is thirty five years of age ,and has been knocked out or badly beaten in a loss, let's say five times.wouldn't that be a prudent time for a sanctioning body to deny him a license to fight?]
[5/18/04 08:10:17 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|And I guess there won't be a Roy Jones vs. Mike Tyson fight anytime soon!]
[5/19/04 04:05:07 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|The bottom line is if someone shows signs of brain damage even if it only shows up in a test and not in symthoms and/or cannot show he is in good enough shape to fight, then no one should grant them a license. This would keep fights such as Norton/Quarry from happening because Jerry could not have shown he was in good enough shape to fight. It gets harder to get in such shape as we age so this cuts off most of the people who are older. But what about exceptions to the rule such as George Foreman and Archie Moore? They should be allowed to compete if they can show they are fit. Foreman was 17-3, 12 by KO after the age of forty and he won the heavyweight title during that time. So he showed he was able to compete.Losing a number of fights later in a career can be a sign that a fighter should hang it up. For example, Holyfield has only won two of his last eight fights. Time for him to quit.Jimmy D. notice I said Kirkman maybe could have beaten Jerry in 1975, not that he in fact could have. Lyle, at that time would have beaten Jerry soundly if they had met instead of Jerry's fight with Norton.
[5/19/04 04:19:21 AM|max hord|fernandina bch,fla||rasluc@msn.com||||10|A fighter boxing out of our gym in Fernandina lost his life last month after taking a lot of shots in the 4th and last round of a match in Georgia. He was a picture of health and strong as an ox. Who knows "when or "where". How much can YOU take?  | [5/19/04 04:49:43 AM|Perry Mason|Supreme Court||(supreme court)||||8|When approving or denying a boxing license, authorities must consider the individual's right to freely trade his skills. However, the right to do so has to be weighed against the potential for injury or impairment. In other words, if it is more likely than not that the applicant, either through advancing age or pre-existing medical ailments or whatever, will be injured, then duty of care would obligate the authorities to deny the license. Also, even if a license is issued, the promoters, referees, and trainers still have a duty of care to ensure the safety and well being of that fighter as best they can and above all else. The only persons without a duty of care are the fighters themselves and, of course, the spectators. Had this obligation been strictly enforced, then many of the great fights might never have happened. (Frazier, Leonard and Holmes all fought with retina problems.) Fortunately or unfortunately, depending on your point of view, fighters weren't litigious decades ago and guys got in the ring who had no business being there. Great fights happened that should never have happened. Promoters and trainers ignored their duty of care to make a fast buck, the governing councils got their sanctioning fees, spectators satisfied their blood lust, and great fighters got more and more damaged until they became greeters at casinos or worse. Don King bereft of jewellery and riches would be a good look, and should have happened, but it didn't. If courts enforced in boxing the same rules applying to the rest of society (eg, workplace safety) then the 'sport' of boxing would cease to exist and then we'd have illicit 'fight clubs' (ala prohibition). The ugly truth about boxing is that every time there is a great winner in a great fight, there is usually also a greatly damaged fighter.
Still, we're all fans and our patronage saved the sport time and time again and we all share blame. There's no shortage of aspiring fighters, either, usually the poor and uneducated. Boxing can be the most thrilling experience without peer on this planet, but it is often also the saddest and greediest. |
I don't disagree with you about the '75 Quarry having declined to the point where Lyle likely would have taken him and in fact, Norton did. But let's remember that even if Quarry wasn't the same fighter he once was, he didn't train properly for Norton with only two weeks notice. That performance wasn't the best he could have given. Ken Norton was a top five fighter---Quarry would have required at least three months to prepare, not two weeks. Years later, he did KO Lorenzo Zanon (though Zanon was well ahead on points when Quarry landed the KO punch). Quarry looked so good in '73 and on this forum, we often talk about him having a chance to fight Foreman in '74 for the title---and people here generally give him at least some small chance of actually winning---it's amazing to me that his skills deteriorated so drastically between '74 and '75. You brought up the Frazier fight earlier...I've got to believe that JQ entered this fight as a live fighter, still dangerous. Do you think this fight itself was the straw that broke the camel's back? I haven't seen the fight in a while, but it occurs to me that cuts were what ended it more than anything else. At one point, didn't Frazier and JQ stop the action on their own and just stand back because of the cut eye? Joe Louis was in way over his head---what a ridiculous idea it was for him to be overseeing this fight.

Quarry's cut wasn't why it was stopped. Frazier was beating Quarry like he was his daddy. Joe Louis was an incompetent ref and should have stopped the slaughter earlier.

Actually, I beleive it was a vicious body shot that injured Jerry in his second fight with Joe. JQ looked set to challenge Joe much better in that fight before he was actually dropped by that punch. Kent, you mention Holyfield's recent record and make the obvious point he should quit. Yet the same fighters who call for a pension and medical help are still trying to duke at 40. What does it say about a sport that lets former greats like Holyfield, Ali, Louis, Tyson or even Jerry get back in the ring so they can be pounded? This is my point.

Welcome back Max Hord. It is very sad to hear about the fighter from your gym, as it is always is when someone dies in the ring. I believe it is more likely for someone to die or be gravely injured the less fit and the more damaged a fighter is when entering the ring however, since boxing is a dangerous sport, it is something that can happen at any time, to any fighter. All we can do is try to make it safer by enforcing what rules are now on the books and also by making new regulations to further that end.

Another rule that Mr. Jimmy here at TJQF favored being implemented is a mandantory expanded three knockdown rule is which not only does three knockdowns in any round end a fight, three knockdowns in any entire fight would cause the fighter knocked down to be determined a loser by knockout.

As brutal as boxing is, even with all the proper regulations in the world, the sport would be much worse if it did go underground if it was outlawed. I for one, if boxing was ever banned, would not take part in watching or following underground, illegal boxing. At least with regulations it is less likely for fighters to die or become gravely injured.
Jerry took from Lyle and even a couple from Shavers as well contributed to Jerry's ability to not be able to compete at the top level by the following year. | 5/19/04 11:32:35 AM|JQ FAN FOREVER|Everywhere||anywhere@|||10|PARTY POOPER GO AWAY...GO FIND SOMEONE WHO CARES ABOUT WHAT YOU HAVE TO SAY!!!!!GO FIND YOU DADDY!!!!!!!| 5/19/04 01:13:42 PM|Party Pooper|Here||ifelta@thigh.com|||4|You aren't smart enough to even know what I'm saying. Drop the caps too, fool. No one does that anymore. Get a life too. Stop living off being a fan of an athlete. That's just plain pathetic. | 5/19/04 01:35:48 PM|Fran|Philly||pl7755@aol.com|||10|The second fight with Joe the talk was of Jerry fighting smart this time and not trying to slug with Frazier. I remember him moving and countering real good but he was using up to much energy. He was probably favored to win. I don't think he was in the greatest of condition. Just a guess or maybe Joe made him work to hard. That fight was it for Jerry. His career ended in that fight. He went down on one knee after being hit with a left hook to the body. Who was he sparring with for that fight where did he train? | 5/19/04 01:37:04 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Kent: i've said all along i'd like to know who or what party was responsible For Jerry's 1992 BOUT,and yes they should have gotten some hard time (maybe for wrongful - death)!They werent celebrities, so they could have been prosecuted! Lyle beating Jerry in 75? I THINK HE WOULD NEVER HAVE BEAT HIM EASY, Jerry was still quicker. Glad we did not find out! Jer had just too many wars, But was still a world class heavyweight in 1975, I agree Norton bout, should have definitly been his final. if not before! The People who say Jerry was not a great fighter, Than why did everyone he fight come in at the best shape of their careers? For crying out loud even,James J. Woody,Tony Doyle And "SCRAP IRON" Johnson!Fighters at that level don't train like that for a "tomato can!" Kent, do I have to tell you what Arena your in again!? KNUCK!KNUCK!KNUCK!| 5/19/04 04:46:46 PM|Steve|N.J.|dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Does any one have info. on Franky Crawford? Ithink he was a Calif. lightweight champ.I saw him being introduced at the beggining of a Jerry Quarry fight.I remembered him, but none of the details of his career. | 5/19/04 04:52:02 PM|G-Man|over there||overthere@aol.com|||6|Its clear that Angelo knows nothing about boxing, he is a fool. Party Pooper is right. You guys get some class and drop this poor fool Angelo. He thinks he is the font of all knowledge, he isnt. Lets get back to talking boxing. Jerry would have beaten Ali had Ali been wearing blue shorts instead of red. Jerry would have beaten Frazier if Frazier hadn't of got up. Jerry would have won the title if someone else didn't beat him to it. Come on Angelo add to this list. | 5/19/04 05:46:07 PM|Steve|N.J.|dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Jimmy D.,you seem to have a pretty good collection of Ring Magazine and Boxing Illustrated Magazine.I remember an article about a fighter named Luther MaCarthy.I think he was active during the 1920's.Anyway, he collapsed in the ring,during a fight,and was pronounced dead right there in the ring.The reason I remember it ,is because there is a haunting photograph with the article. I shows the guy laying on the canvass,with a ray of sunlight shining directly on his body through the roof of the stadium.I am asking you this question,because you seem to enjoy doing research,and I have long since lost all my old magazines.| 5/19/04 05:53:03 PM|Party Pooper|Here||ifelta@thigh.com|||4|Jerry Quarry would have destroyed Ali, Frazier, and Norton, if only he hadn't lost and been beaten so badly. End of discussion. | 5/19/04 07:41:59 PM|charles anderson|ark.|ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|steve, i had the same magazine. mc cartey was a bright young prospect being groomed to fight jack johnson, many fight experts thought he had a real chance to beat.
johnson. sadly enough he never got the chance. later it was learned he had a terrible fall from a horse and he actually died from a brain hemmorage resulting from the fall.|
If you go through the archives, you might still find his number. He seemed to be legitamet. This is one of the reasons I enjoy this site so much. You can ask questions, and get answers from gentleman with some very good memories and serious boxing knowledge. You can express your opinions, and even if someone disagrees with you, as Kent usually does with me, it's done in a civil, respectful manner. I guess it's now Angelo's turn in the barrel. Jimmy D., who did Franky Crawford fight at welterweight? Was he ranked? Did he ever fight anyone from the East coast?

I think Frankie Crawford was a tall Jr. Lightweight and very tall. I heard he was a good amateur, Gil King was a welterweight I saw him on tv a few times. When did Frankie Crawford die?

Kent and Jimmy D., since you two knuckleheads are football fans, I'll make this comment, I'd I may stray off of boxing for a moment. This is the year the Eagles win the superbowl! Since you from Philly, did you ever see Gypsy Joe Harris fight? I loved this guys weird style. He got all the way up the contenders list to a fight with Emile Griffith. Only after that loss was it revealed he only had one eye!

Fran, you and the others should be happy that guys like me and Party Pooper visit. If it wasn't for us, there would only be five posters regularly visiting here. You guys are so insular you don't allow outsiders with new ideas to enter what you consider your private domain. This whole site has become dedicated to five posters max who behave like incestuous hillbillies what with all this 'lunkhead' nod nod wink wink crap. If you guys were really dedicated to the legacy of Jerry Quarry, you would be welcoming new ideas and posters. The only guy who tries to do that is Kent. Instead, you others recycle the same topics with each of you chumps falling over the other to agree and pat the other guy on the head, just like that guy Even wrote before. Dare to be different. Allow people to express alternative views. Only five or six guys regularly visit this site. Most of the time when someone new visits, you guys ignore them and address only the posts of the regulars. That's like talking over the top of someone and that's why others poke fun at you. As soon as an outsider expresses a view, a regular like Angelo jumps in and calls them illiterate. Imagine that. Angelo can hardly put two words together, coming over as a verbose ignoramus, and he's name-calling others. Anything to make an outsider feel unwelcome. I know he doesn't like me because I'm coloured. Someone should bitch slap Angelo back to reality. Who's funding this site anyway? Fran? Angelo? Grandpa Steve? I didn't think so. In reality you guys don't have any more pull than us. We have as much right to visit here as you. Get used to it. My greatest heavies in order - Louis, Ali, Johnson, Marciano, Holmes.

Angelo: See, you and I are finding common ground now and the world is becoming more peaceful. Your top five heavies are pretty close to mine. I'd put Ali above Louis, and maybe even rank Holmes higher than you did, but we're splitting hairs here. By the way, the fact that you're coloured just makes me like you more---I mean, you have Halle Berry and Jada Pinkett Smith on your team.

Not to mention George Clinton and the whole Parliament-Funkadelic thang.

G-man read your posts again and you will realize that 95% of what you write is negative hateful and trying to attack people, easy to see through. You blew it. Steve Never saw gypsy Joe he was before my time, saw all the great philly fighters at the Spectrum in the 70's.
it never is.You have brought up our "stooges" club several times, saying how childish it is, or something of that order.Let me tell you where that came from and maybe you will understand why it is special to us.Almost three years ago or so, Mr. Jimmy (aka James Quarry) and I were trying to remember where a fight between Jerry and a fighter named Eduardo Corletti. We had both been at the event and Jimmy thought it was at the L.A. sports arena, while I thought it was at another venue. Jimmy Dorsey jumped in and said it was at the L.A. forum. I kept insisting it was not at the forum and I think Jimmy Q thought it could have been another venue other than the ones we mentioned. We were just going around in circles and one day, I called Jimmy D. a "lunkhead" (stooge terminology) and I think Jimmy D. called me a wiseguy in return, thus the reference to the stooges was born.The reason it is special to us is Jimmy Quarry has since passed away and we dubbed him Moe because he is one of the founders of this site and foundation, along with Jerry, hence he was the leader of this place. He was our friend and he posted often and we keep the stooges thing going in his memory. Oh by the way, Jimmy D. was right, the Quarry/Corletti fight was at the L.A. forum, the "wiseguy!"Of course newcomers and different opinions are welcome. We just don't want this site to degenerate to the level of some of the other sites out there where everyone is calling each other names all of the time. | 5/20/04 06:44:21 PM|Jimmy Dorsey|Ventura California||ronnyrains@yahoo.com||||10|STEVE (AKA-SHEMP) YOU said the Eagles were going to win it last year!! Frankie Crawford lost on 2 occasions for the Featherweight title, both 15 round decisions IN JAPAN to Shozo Saijo. One I was informed was highway robbery, one of his last bouts was a decision loss to a guy named Bobby Chacon 3-20-73. He was only stopped 4 times, mostly due to cuts, and had 18 knockouts in 38 victories, there was a write-up about his untimely death on the internet, but now I can find nothing. I'll talk to Gil King. | 5/20/04 09:14:23 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Has anyone heard what Roy Jones Jr. future plans are? Rematch with Tarver? It's funny how five minutes of one night can change everyone's plans so drastically. One guy I talked to said it was a "lucky punch" like Rahman landed on Lewis. One punch certainly shattered the mystique of Jones. | 5/20/04 09:44:06 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Hey, g-man, I haven't heard any self respecting A fro-American, black man refer to himself as a "coloured" since 1950. Who do you think your kidding?| 5/20/04 10:11:07 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Hey Angelo, Ignoring this guy is one thing. It's a good strategy to a point. Responding when he insults you, and suggests you be bitch slapped into reality, HMM, I wonder what he thinks when you tell him that at last you guys have at least agreed about the top five heavyweights and now peace can prevail on this site. | 5/20/04 10:37:57 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Steve, the Eagles will not win the superbowl until they move to St. Louis! Then they won't be the Eagles anymore, just a pale imitation. The Eagles remind me so much of my beloved and almost champion on several occasions, the Los Angeles Rams. The St Louis version is not my team and I know nothing about them as I don't follow them at all. I mind the Rams never won the superbowl as they ceased to exist when they left the Los Angeles area. | 5/20/04 10:55:39 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Kent, it's very reassuring and stabilizing on this site to have you as the voice of reason. Ever wonder where koo koo clock has been during this last period of attacks on everyone else? I still think we're dealing with one adolescent nutbag. | 5/20/04 11:26:17 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Kent, I can see where your feelings of betrayal by the Rams have disrupted your usually fair and unbiased look at Pro football. However, the Eagles are not leaving town, ever. My feelings are hurt that you would suggest that could happen here! If and when the Eagles reach the N.F.C.C championship game again, I will personally pay for and send you and the other non-believer, Jimmy D., tickets for that game for all three of us, plus my five dumb Irish sons at the vet. Oh, I mean are brand new stadium! Oh, bye the way, Kent and Jimmy, when we win that NFC Title, and go on to the Superbowl. After I have treated you guys to Philly hoagies, in our brand new beautifyl stadium, I will expect formal apologies for your remarks on the Eagles.

| 5/21/04 12:16:02 AM | G-Man | (anywhere) | near you | Steve, why can’t you accept that more than one person outside your clique of lumpheads is capable of disagreeing with you. I am one person. Who are you? I think that you and Koo Koo are one of the same and always have been. When you are here, Koo Koo isn’t. I also think that you have alzheimers. Start being polite to other posters while you still can. You know nothing about boxing and you know nothing about me. You’re 56 and done nothing, been nowhere, and you are going nowhere fast. If you don’t want to be polite, then don’t post. Greatest pound-for-pound: Ray Robinson, Louis, Armstrong, Ali. I haven’t decided on the fifth place yet. |
| 5/21/04 01:07:27 AM | Steve | NJ | dmmsrm@comcast.net | Kent and Jimmy, is my rapier wit so dry, that no one knows when I am kidding? I’m serious about the Eagles tickets! I hope you guys understand I’m not trying to be hostile. Your wrong, g-man, every time you post, I know a little more about you. I know your not black. I know your a very young man. I know you underestimate other peoples intelligents. Accusing me of being KooKoo is a pretty feeble attempt at reverse phycology. I know your not from the states. |
| 5/21/04 03:21:13 AM | Massimo "Big all over" Cini | Roma | kevin garnett can play basketball | Joe Louis Barrow was a one-night champion! I mean, he showed how great he was only once: on 25 June 1935. However, Ezzard Charles-Joe Louis was a great fight! Charles deserved the decision, but Joe Louis fought like a lion, and was ahead after the first half of the fight. Then, he probably got tired. |
| 5/21/04 04:05:15 AM | G-Man | over there | over here | Believing that you know everything, Grandpa Steve, is an early to mid onset symptom of Alzheimers. Trying to convince others that you have a "rapier wit", instead of accepting what everyone else knows (ie that you don’t), is not. That is a personality flaw needing psychiatric correction. You are what we call a known known Steve. We all know what you are and we all know what you are incapable of. On the other hand, I am a known unknown. The only thing you know about me is that you really don’t know. Trust me, Steve, I am in the medical industry and I know that you know that I really do know what you really don’t know. I also know that you are too unknowingly set in your dumb ways to engage in meaningful debate about boxing or anything else. I tried to get you debating the all time greats, pound-for-pound and the heavies, and your failure to respond indicates that you don’t know. Once again you are a known known. Okay. Let’s talk about simpler things that you would know. How many beers does it take before the alcoholic husband begins beating up on his defenceless wife? I don’t know the answer, but I do know that you know, Steve. You are again a known known. Anyways, I still don’t know what my fifth pound-for-pound all time great will be. |
| 5/21/04 06:49:08 AM | G-Man | over here | no, other there | One more thing, Steve, what you really have to avoid is the unknown unknowns. They are the real dangers. When you don’t know what you don’t know then what you do know is that you are in for a terrible surprise. Unknown unknowns are a real bummer. I hope that clarifies it all for you. |
| 5/21/04 11:10:28 AM | CHARLES ANDERSON | ARK | ctjandfam@aol.com | Steve, I enjoy reading your posts, along with fran and kent’s. Have you talked to mr. breece lately? I think a book would be a best seller, Jerry was loved by millions. Movie would be great to do in the right manner. |
| 5/21/04 02:14:09 PM | Steve | NJ | dmmsrm@comcast.net | Okay G-Man, you win, I surrender! I want to argue with you about boxing, but nothing else. If you want to call me grandpa Steve, that’s fine with me. Since I am a grandfather several times over. Your correct, you have as much right to post here as anyone else. Please forgive me Irish temper. Now, let's get ready to rumble. I don't think you should have listed only the top five heavy's. That leaves out too many great ones that could be argued to be interchangeable. What about Frazier, Foreman, Walcott, Tyson, Liston? What about your top five middleweights? I have Sugar Ray Robinson 2. Ray Leonard 3. Stanley Ketchell, 4. Carlos Monzon 5. Marvin Hagler 6. Billy Conn?

Charles Anderson, I spoke to Daryle Breece twice last year, I have since lost his phone number. He gave his number on this site, so I took that to mean he was pretty serious. I asked him why he didn't just e-mail guys like Kent and Jimmy D. They both have a lot of information on the Quarry family? He said he was in the process of getting interviews. That's the last I've heard of him. I know he left his number on this site. I started going through the archives, but am afraid some of them might have been lost last year due to a change in internet servers. I'm sorry I can't find the number, but I will keep looking. I agree with you, a movie or a book would be great.

Hey Steve how is it going? Over the years I have found you to be one of the most knowledgeable boxing historians on this site, and also one of the most tolerant. G-Man used post on this site under the name of Tubby Breslin (see posts from 9/03). He is a very angry, opinionated (normally wrong), would be elitist. Sadly he can't shake his humble background. And as a result, it is guys like him who give drunks a bad name.

Wow, can't we all just get along? Why the need to get personal? Just opinions here, everybody has them... Was impressed with Antonio Tarver's win over Jones, a big-time fight for that weightclass. Just out of curiosity, does anyone have a fighter in the current heavyweight division that they think JQ could NOT beat? Given that Jerry was best at about 200, someone like Kookoo must have something to say on this. Personally, I don't really see any.

Thanks for the wrap Forest. Just who is Tubby Breslin? It's not me, but what does it matter anyways. I can be Tubby if you want me to be. Tubby now becomes a known unknown. Anyways, you are pretty free with the insults, Forest. I am trying to guess your claim to fame. Let me see. Is it because you spend so much time in jail, and I'm guessing here that you are not the chief warden? You call others drunks, but my guess is that you hang around jails and gutters because you keep getting kicked out of the bars where the rest of us drink. I guess that makes you a swell guy in your own mind, some sort of victim full of hard luck stories. Well, Forest, we haven't got time to listen to 'em. Now Steve, off the top of my head, my top four middleweights in order are Robinson, Monzon, Leonard and Hagler. Not sure about the rest as I'm still shaken by Ward's vicious assault on my reputation.

Kent - I have just been to Anaheim in LA. When I looked on the map I couldn't believe it was so close to La Habra...isn't that where you're from?? While I was in Las Vegas I went to see the Ray Austin vs Gilbert Martinez bout - great KO!! I met Kevin Kelly and Eddie Mustafa Muhammad among others - everyone was happy to give me their time.

Kent - I have just been to Anaheim in LA. When I looked on the map I couldn't believe it was so close to La Habra...isn't that where you're from?? While I was in Las Vegas I went to see the Ray Austin vs Gilbert Martinez bout - great KO!! I met Kevin Kelly and Eddie Mustafa Muhammad among others - everyone was happy to give me their time.

Hey Fran, I know your from Philly. If you saw 70's fights at the Spectrum, then c'mon, tell me about them! Do you remember Eugene, [cyclone] Hart? Willie [the worm] Monroe? You and I might have both been at some of those great Philly fight. If we were, it would be fun to hear each other's perspectives on the same live fight.

Hey Gerry Schultz, regarding your last post. I know one fight I'd like to have seen. Jerry Quarry at his prime vs James Toney as he was beating Hollyfield. I live about ten miles from Anaheim and I am there quite often, two or three times a week. In fact, I was just there Wednesday and will be there again Saturday night. I wish you would have told me you were in town as I would have liked to have met you in person. Next time you come to the area let me know in advance and I will come see you.

I was out of town last weekend but I would have made a point to come back at least one day if I would have known you were going to be here. Steve, even if I don't agree everytime, I still think you have a lot of knowledge of the boxing game and that goes for Jimmy D, even if he is a wiseguy sometimes, soitenly (certainly), knuck, knuck, knuck!

Steve, I think you have a brutal streak in your nature. You don't particularly like the guy (particularly all that political and religious stuff), but I wouldn't wish him or anyone else a brain injury. It intrigues me that on the one hand you enjoy boxing so much that you go to Hall of Fame annual events, yet at the same time you hate someone who did so much for boxing (whether or not you like Ali's principles, etc). Your attitude is a real conundrum, Mr Ward.

I have just seen the first fight (1907) of the great legendary Tommy Burns Bill Squires trylogy. Tommy was given 9-10 undercard as Bill was the Australian heavyweight champion but still won by KO 1 knocking the hell out of Bill. Anyway, if Tommy Burns was a heavyweight, then I'm a pivot! Even Warren Coolidge (6'8") was too short for being a pivot! I know, the Octopus was just like the fans at the VET!! I don't really even know how true the story was Kent, it was out of 1969 Ring Magazine where I was reading on the Mathis-Quarry bout. And how Nat Fleischer admitted how wrong he was about Quarry. I liked old Galento thou, and how much reach he had to give up, he was a natural as a bad guy in movies, and a pretty damn good actor, from what I've heard, maybe he was just being himself!
2003, you wrote about a guy "who got out of jail a few years ago after serving time for killing someone. Not that that makes him a bad person." I haven't bothered to check other posts by you and I suppose that I will now be the target of your hopes for a "slow and painful death." But I'd like to know what made you such a hateful and glib person. Someone has a different opinion to yours, and you despise them for it. Seems a bit silly to me, and I can't wait for the posts defending you by all your apologists on this site. Forest, instead of gloating about Ali's awful condition, I would have thought that a boxing fan like you would be instead rejoicing the golden era his presence brought to the sport, regardless of his politics and religion. I read where you recently chastised someone for mentioning basketball on this site, yet it is okay for you to go off on tangents about Fonda's politics and Ali's "draft dodging" (to use your term). Anyways, Steve, you must be so proud receiving that huge compliment from Ward. A wrap from him makes you a real swell guy, I'm sure. And you being such a great "historian", I assume you knew of the posts I mentioned above when you stated that your chest swelled with pride when praised "by someone as great as Ward" (or words to that effect).

5/22/04 07:37:30 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Gerry: I think JQ at his peak could handle most of today's heavies. Lennox Lewis would be a possible exception. Lewis has the giant size to cause problems, plus good movement. At this point in his career (retirement I guess) he'd lose to Quarry. But a couple years ago, he might have enough to win. I can't think of anyone else off the top of my head who would handle JQ. I always say, any live heavy would have a chance to open cuts on JQ and win by TKO stoppage due to bleeding. |

5/22/04 08:45:09 PM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com|||10|Steve, I probably saw all of the great fighters from Philly during the seventies. Did you used to go to The Monday night fights at the Spectrum. Saw Bad Bennie fight many times, was at the Tyrone Everett title fight against Escallera when Everett got robbed. Saw Bennie Fight Hagler.Alot of very talented Fighters. |

5/22/04 08:45:18 PM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com|||10|Steve, I probably saw all of the great fighters from Philly during the seventies. Did you used to go to The Monday night fights at the Spectrum. Saw Bad Bennie fight many times, was at the Tyrone Everett title fight against Escallera when Everett got robbed. Saw Bennie Fight Hagler.Alot of very talented Fighters. |

5/22/04 08:48:18 PM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com|||10|Quarry would have killed Toney no fight there Quarry toooo strong.|

5/23/04 12:36:50 PM|Gerry Schultz|Cleveland USA||jgschultz11@aol.com|||10|Fran, Angelo, I agree regarding Lewis, JQ would give him a great fight and would have his rounds with Lennox's so-so chin, but Lewis was a very good boxer, not just a big guy, I didn't count him in my earlier post as he has retired, at least for the moment. Quarry-Toney or Quarry-Holyfield at 200 lbs. would both be great matches in my opinion. I was recently re-reading about Eddie Machen and saw his classic fight with Liston on ESPN, he was very good in my opinion. Word is Jerry loafed against him as he did many early in his career, but prime-prime this too would be a great match at 200...

5/23/04 01:37:50 PM|Massimo|Roma||27/18|||10|Steve/Kent, interesting that you both discuss moving NFL franchises, here in Cleveland we know of such things also. Why Rams, Colts, Browns were allowed to move is beyond me. If they can be moved, anyone can. Steve, you could find yourself following the New Jersey Eagles faster than you think. The Rams, incidentally, won the NFL title first as the Cleveland Rams, with UCLA's Bob Waterfield at QB, before the better Browns, also league champs, chased them out... Kudos again to Antonio Tarver for doing what he said he could, also glad to see De La Hoya out there again after being ripped off again in his last match. Massimo, Byron Stewart is 6'7''. But Jerry Lucas, Wes Unseld, Dave Cowens, Willis Reed and Elvin Hayes are all Hall of Fame centers at 6-9 or under who would still star today. Thanks again.|
This is devastating to me, I was sure that Coolidge was 6'8" !!!!!!! The Big Show is not 7'4" but is only about 6'8", The Giant Gonzales is not 7'7" but is only about 7', Hulk Hogan is not 6'8" but is only 6'3". Let alone Andre' who was affected by nanism... They say that Shaq is 7'1", I hope he is at least 6'9"...I'm only 5'6", but at least it is true, for God's sake!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!Ah, I forgot, for a good part of my life I was sure that Primo Carnera was 6'7" 1/2... How hard it has been to discover he was only 6'5 3/4 !How tall are Muhammad Ali' and Joe Frazier ?

Did they show the whole Liston-Machen fight or only a synthesis ? I'm asking this because ( or as, or since) I have only a few rounds ( about 10, 15 minutes) of that fight. The fight was close, but pretty boring. Liston was always the aggressor while Machen fought on defense, counterpunching Liston in a few occasions. I'd like to know whether the fight was close or not ! And, of course, whether Liston deserved the decision or not. I too think Eddie Machen was an excellent, almost great fighter. He was a top contender for many years and did beat a long list of good fighters: Nino Valdes, Joey Maxim, Willi Besmanoff... And his two draws against a prime Cleveland Williams and a prime Zora Folley were good accomplishments.

Did you ever ask you uncle why he was a fan of Mussolini? My relatives didn't back Mussolini in WW11 did they???

Thanks for the information on ( or about ) the Liston-Machen fight. One of my uncles was Benito Mussolini’s N.1 fan, just as ( or like) KooKoo is JQ's n.1 fan. I don't like any kind of tyranny.I don't like both fascism and comunism. I like democracy, even if nothing is perfect, of course. Benito Mussolini spoke and wrote in a very good Italian tough. He was an excellent journalist.

I met Jerry Sherk also, he was NFL Defensive Player of the Year once, wrestled in college so had great hands, Brown's were still annual contenders then coached by Forrest Gregg. I believe Ali was 6'3 1/2, taller on his toes with at least 80" of reach and so damn skilled. Frazier was 5-10, 5-11 at most, and like Jerry, crouched a little to fight Ali, who had height and reach on almost everyone he fought, among other things. Hulk Hogan is 6-6. The tallest athlete I ever saw was at Cleveland State one day when I was going to class. As it turned out, he was Manute Bol, who may have been conservatively listed at 7"8". I remember being pretty bewildered to be walking down a hall and seeing such a tall person standing there, actually scared me at first.
bet if any of your relatives were killed in the same way that your uncle would not have admired Mussolini.

Years ago, I stood next to Wilt (who) Chamberlain and a fellow Laker named Mel Counts, who was listed at 7'0" but looked to me as tall as Wilt was, listed at 7'1". A couple of years later, we had a guy who played here at La Habra High School who was 7'0". His name is Steve Manker but I don't know if he ever played anything more than for a small college somewhere. He was tall as a tree to me too but it wasn't as shocking as it would have been if I hadn't seen Wilt and Counts before.

I was about ten years old and my father had taken me to watch a public workout of the Lakers and I got Wilt's and Counts' autographs. Those guys looked to be as tall as tall trees to me and it was the first time in my life that I ever thought my father, at 5'7" was small.

I haven't had a chance of asking my uncle why he was Mussolini's No.1 fan, when I was an under 10 years old kid, he was an over 80 years old man. All I remember is that he knew perfectly all Benito's speeches and sang often " Giovinezza, giovinezza" ("Youth, youth") a typical fascist song. I know that there are many over 80 years old (I mean, maybe 1 percent) Italians who are nostalgic of Mussolini. Even my grandmother, who is now 87 years old and is an angel of a woman, shows some liking for Mussolini. The most amazing thing is that there are many fans of fascism even among the Italian teenagers, who have no idea of what fascism has been. I agree with you, Kent, Mussolini was a bastard, a criminal and a motherf......r. Soon after he went to power he killed or exiled all his political enemies (Matteotti, for instance). It was Vittorio Emanuele's (the Italian king at the time) fault if Mussolini conquered the power in Italy. Adolf Hitler was worse of him, tough.

I too only saw snipits of Machen vs Liston. I know he was one of only a few to go the distance with him in Liston's heyday. I did see Machen fight Joe Frazier, and believe me, he was hanging on for dear life through most of the fight. He said to Frazier during a clinch, "your smoking now, Joe". Frazier liked that so much, that he adopted the name, Smokin Joe Frazier.

Have you seen the whole Frazier-Machen fight? Great! I have seen the knockdown in the first round (and poor Eddie of course was the guy who hit the canvas) and the last round. I guess it was an easy fight for Smoking Joe! Is it true?

Have you seen the whole Frazier-Machen fight? Great! I have seen the knockdown in the first round (and poor Eddie of course was the guy who hit the canvas) and the last round. I guess it was an easy fight for Smoking Joe! Is it true?

Sorry, I submitted before I was done my last post. I can see now that you two wiseguys, Kent and Jimmy D. need to clear your calendar for the week of the N.F.C. Title game here in Philly. Hey Jimmy D. If you think we made Billy Kilmer look good? Do you remember Roman Gabriel?? line allowed him to be sacked something like six or eight times in a row in tier first game back.

Massimo, Yes, I saw the entire fight. I wouldn't say it was an easy fight for Frazier. As he was pretty young and inexperienced. I think Machen taught Joe a few tricks that night, as he was such a masterful survivor. However, Joe truly was a "truth machine" that night. He was relentless, and never gave Machen a second to breath.

Massimo, you never responded to my comments about Calabria. Have you ever been there. If so, I'd like to hear you describe it to me, as I have never been there. They say the Women there are all beautiful, as is my wife. However, they also say the men have unusually large feet. This has me worried.

Steve: Probably I have been in Calabria, but it was so many years ago, that I barely remember the trip. I had to be a child, under 7 feet tall at the time. It seems to me that there was a wonderful sea, the most limpid water I have ever seen in Italy. Again, it was a lot of time ago. Mussolini's corpse was still hot...

PS: Adolf Hitler was 5' 8" tall, while Benito Mussolini was a little shorter, my best guess is 5'6" 1/2. I have no information on their shoe sizes.

G-Man: I agree with you Party Pooper. Some people will pretend to tip Jerry to beat Lewis, but ask them to put their house on it and they'll soon change their mind. As gutsy and strong as Quarry was, it defies logic to tip him to beat Lewis. On his best night he wouldn't come close. Lewis was a lot better than many give him credit for. I also agree that Marciano was a great 'small' heavy, although Frazier wasn't. Great heavies don't get smashed twice like he did against Foreman. He also had terrible trouble getting over Bonavena, although he apparently flogged his girlfriend without raising a sweat. It's sad. At least Ali is ageing with his dignity intact, but Joe's out there giving drunks a bad name. I hope he finally stops drinking. By the way, the other great 'small' heavy was Tyson and it would have been great to have seen him fight Frazier. I think Tyson would have finished it in three. It would have been as wild as Hagler v Hearns.

G-Man: I admit to flip-flopping on Tyson vs. Frazier. Part of me thinks Tyson would come out fast, like he did against so many opponents (including M. Spinks and also including Joe's son Marvis). If Tyson broke out of the gates throwing and connecting with bombs, he could take Frazier out like Foreman took Frazier out: Very, very early, maybe even inside the three rounds you mentioned. But another part of me says that Frazier could gut it out against him and being the great champion he was, outlast Tyson. If Frazier could take him to the middle rounds and actually fight back (something no one did against a young Tyson---except Buster Douglas) then Tyson could be taken. If I had to bet the ranch on it, I'd pick Tyson I guess. As for Quarry vs. Lewis or Quarry vs. Klitscho: Don't sell Quarry short. Watch his fights against Foster, Lyle, Shavers---the guy could take a punch like almost on one else, and threw hard punches in combinations. Believe me, Lewis' size wouldn't be as big a factor as everyone seems to think. How big was Oliver McCall? Also, a guy like Earnie Shavers (or Ron Lyle for that matter) would ice Lennox Lewis inside five rounds. Being taller and heavier wouldn't make Lewis any better at surviving an Earnie Shavers onslaught, or at trading bombs with Ron Lyle. Jerry Quarry stood in against these guys and beat them. I'm not a cheerleader for JQ: As I've said before, there are guys I couldn't see him ever beating (Joe Louis, Muhammad Ali, Joe Frazier, Larry Holmes, probably even Sonny Liston). But if he banged with Shavers, Lyle, Foster, I have not doubt that he could take the fight to Lewis and make a good showing. We'll never know if he would win, but I'm convinced he would have a chance.
If you ever saw the fights Live that Jerry had against Foster, Lyle, Shavers in which he won, or against Chuvalo who he was taking apart, or outpunching Frazier in the first fight or Getting under Ali's jab in the first fight then you knew that Jerry had the science down and could beat anyone. The ability and skills were there. As far as Lewis goes that would be a very tough fight for him but on his best night (Lyle, Shavers, Foster) I'd bet the house every time on Jerry. I always bet on him. Lewis was the best in his time but with no chin he would not have been in the top 10 back in the early to mid 70's. Those guys could bang and Lewis would have gotten a chincheck. To be great you have to have a chin. Holmes would have beaten Lewis. Holmes would get rocked but not put to sleep like Lewis. Sleeping on the job does not get you in with the all time greats.

As far as Klitchko and most of the Russians go they are amateurs still even though they are fighting at the level they are at in the pro's. They throw arm punches and still run out of gas. I feel sorry for them because when they meet up with a seasoned pro like Toney or the guy that just wore out Wladimir they are destroyed. Back in the Jerry's era amateurs never got to that level and if they did it was only for one fight. All you have to do to beat those guys is be there when they run out of gas. Read a newspaper between rounds and smoke a cigar.

Fran: I agree. And to take it a step further, the ability to get off the canvas after being dropped (see Holmes vs. Shavers II and Holmes vs. Snipes) is what made Holmes a great Champion, while Lewis (no go against McCall, no go against Rahman) was simply a good, steady Champion of his time, but not an all-time great. Like I posted a few days back, Roy Jones not showing the ability to continue against Tarver makes many doubt him. In the Washington Times, a columnist mentioned the Holmes-Shavers bout and Holmes recollection of it. A little voice told him that Shavers was about to take his title and that he had to fight Shavers off or lose his crown. When things are going well, a talented guy like Lennox Lewis, with his great size and skills, will look unbeatable. It's when the going gets tough that you separate the greats from the "very goods." And I'm not making the ability to take a punch and get up from it the end all/be all---a lot more goes into a good fighter. But I think it gets to the heart of an all-time great when they're rocked and can get up and continue. You know, on a smaller scale, you have to be impressed with the Jimmy Young-George Foreman bout. Young was clobbered in the 7th round. To this day, I don't know how he did it, but somehow he cleared the cobwebs and actually started hitting Foreman with crisp punches at the end of the round. Foreman was such an amazing finisher---the fact that Young survived was amazing. Does it make Jimmy Young an alltime great? No, because something else was missing in Young---and that was the dedication to training and showing up ready to fight every time---another element of a champion. Ossie Ocasio was the only thing between Jimmy Young and Larry Holmes (and a shot at Holmes' title) and Young let Ocasio eat his lunch! What a shame, because I think a Young-Holmes title bout would have been fascinating to watch.

I would have to say Lewis would beat Jerry, probably by decision, although that long jab might slice up and cut Jerry's tender skin. Realize most of the time Lewis at his best was good at avoiding the bombs that could test his somewhat weak chin. Remember, Lewis has often been put down for not getting in and mixing it up with fighters such as David Tua, who punches hard but Lewis pitched a shutout from long range. The style of caution first may have been boring to watch but it worked. The knockout losses to McCall and Rahman were almost lucky punches as Lewis beats those two guys nine times out of ten. I just can't see Jerry getting inside of Lewis' long jab. Of course Jerry was much stronger than the average 200 pounder and he did have enough power to hurt Lewis if he did tag him with his best shots. So Jerry would always have that chance at winning.

Your analysis might be correct (especially the strong possibility that Jerry could be stopped on cuts by Lewis), but I don't buy into the theory that the Rahman and McCall KOs against Lewis were "lucky." In a heavyweight fight, there's a good chance that hard punches will be landed by both fighters. There are exceptions: Bobick didn't put leather on Norton. Spinks didn't touch Tyson. But look at another one round KO: Shavers DID hit Quarry (No matter what Jerry said in the post-fight interview, the tape doesn't lie and Shavers hit him hard.). My point is that Lennox got tagged like a lot of guys were hit by Rahman and McCall. The difference is that on those nights, he didn't have the chin or the will to absorb the shots and fight back. Yes, Lewis MIGHT pitch a shutout against Quarry. I don't fault Lewis for boring us against Tua or Holyfield. Tactical, defensive fighting might be boring, but it's smart and it wins. But with that said, if JQ got under the jab (as he showed he could do against other very good fighters) and tagged Lewis with the type of punches he landed against Shavers, whose to say how it would end? It would by no means be lucky---it would be a legitimate heavy hitting a guy who can't take the hardest punch. I don't think Mike Weaver got lucky against John Tate. I think he caught up with Tate, who didn't have the sturdiest chin, and legitimately KOed him (after Tate had his way with Weaver for most of the fight). Speaking of which, Weaver is another 70's/early 80's guy considered to be "average" back then, who in my mind could take Lewis.

Steve I was just going to ask what ever happened to Gabrial as an Eagel, for they were so high on him, I can remember When Billy finally had a bad game and got beat twice by the Eagels (1975) And Gabrial was in the locker bragging it took a lotta B---s TO WIN THIS GAME,and beat his old coach Allen, who incidentally did not make him a Ramskin! We had KILMER and later another Eagel "ASASSIN" JOHN RIGGINS!

You can't compare Tua and Holyfield with an early 70's Jerry Quarry. Jerry was very tricky and could fight Lewis many ways. Tua one dimensional and an overly muscle bound Holyfield had no dimensions left. An over the hill Mike Tyson looked good in the first round and was able to tag Lewis. Lewis with no chin wouldn't have made it that far back then. If Mediocre fighters could land a lucky punch then what would those guys have done to them. Lewis would be a cheese steak hoagie easy pay day for Ali Frazier Shavers  Quarry Lyle Norton. guilty of showing him TOO MUCH respect. Do you honestly think he could hang with an in-prime George Foreman? He might try to avoid the bombs and keep Foreman away with the jab, but a 1973 Foreman would force him to fight--- something Holyfield couldn't do. And David Tua shouldn't even be in the same sentence with George Foreman.Foreman would pole-axe Lennox Lewis. If he didn't have the chin to stand up to Oliver McCall's punch that he didn't see coming, I guarantee he wouldn't stand up to the barrage of Foreman's punches that he did see coming.

Foreman would pole-axe Lennox Lewis. If he didn't have the chin to stand up to Oliver McCall's punch that he didn't see coming, I guarantee he wouldn't stand up to the barrage of Foreman's punches
that he did see coming.

Foreman would pole-axe Lennox Lewis. If he didn't have the chin to stand up to Oliver McCall's punch that he didn't see coming, I guarantee he wouldn't stand up to the barrage of Foreman's punches
that he did see coming.

Foreman would pole-axe Lennox Lewis. If he didn't have the chin to stand up to Oliver McCall's punch that he didn't see coming, I guarantee he wouldn't stand up to the barrage of Foreman's punches
that he did see coming.

Foreman would pole-axe Lennox Lewis. If he didn't have the chin to stand up to Oliver McCall's punch that he didn't see coming, I guarantee he wouldn't stand up to the barrage of Foreman's punches
that he did see coming.

Foreman would pole-axe Lennox Lewis. If he didn't have the chin to stand up to Oliver McCall's punch that he didn't see coming, I guarantee he wouldn't stand up to the barrage of Foreman's punches
that he did see coming.

Foreman would pole-axe Lennox Lewis. If he didn't have the chin to stand up to Oliver McCall's punch that he didn't see coming, I guarantee he wouldn't stand up to the barrage of Foreman's punches
that he did see coming.

Foreman would pole-axe Lennox Lewis. If he didn't have the chin to stand up to Oliver McCall's punch that he didn't see coming, I guarantee he wouldn't stand up to the barrage of Foreman's punches
that he did see coming.
won, and I think deep down, Lewis might have an inkling that Bowe would have won. All these years later, Lewis is a retired Champion, who beat most comers, won some impressively, defended for a lot of years. He retired with his belts, and his body and mind seemingly intact. Lewis would be nuts to come back—he's set financially, and has nothing more to prove to anyone. But Riddick Bowe has been rumbling about a comeback. I think that after the two fights with Golata, Bowe might have won the fights, but lost cognitive ability. Before those fights, he was articulate and humorous—a smart guy with a lot of confidence. After those bouts, he never seemed to be the same. I don't think he should be sanctioned to fight again if it's proven that he has brain damage from boxing. But if Bowe does return, it would be a natural to see him fight Lewis. Now, Lewis would probably win the fight—I don't imagine Bowe has much left. Bowe-Tyson would also be interesting. I don't know how that one would play out. | 5/25/04 05:07:52 PM|G-Man|over here||other there|||5|Kent, it was G-Man who suggested that we could have disagreements without putting curses on each other. I don't have a voodoo doll for anyone. You have been realistic in your assessment of Quarry and Lewis. In regard to some of the match-ups mentioned, Lewis would stop Frazier early. Joe was always vulnerable early, but you had to be a big puncher to stop him. Ali didn't have enough (as shown early in the second fight), Foreman did. Lewis punched hard enough to stop him and Lewis was so tall that Joe's left hook would be rendered ineffective. It would struggle to reach up there with the same power. Lewis v Foreman would be much different. We all know that Lewis was vulnerable to power and power was what Foreman was all about. George would take some hits early, before finishing Lewis in the middle rounds. I gotta say that I think we tend not to give Holyfield his due. The guy was not a natural heavyweight but fought absolute wars against some very good and very big fighters. He kept coming back for more too, and he gave as good as he got. In any era, Holyfield was a great warrior. He was almost unbeatable at cruiserweight and can you imagine how good a fight it would have been to watch Holyfield and Bob Foster. That would have been something, one of the best match-ups ever. I'd go for Foster though. Holyfield and Quarry would have been hectic, too. Two aggressive and gutsy fighters standing toe-to-toe until the other dropped. It wouldn't go the distance and Holyfield would be hurt before he went on to win. One thing about Quarry, no one ever got an easy night against him. | 5/25/04 05:25:25 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|G-Man: What about Bowe-Holyfield (who would win this one today, and who would have won prime vs. prime)? How about Tyson-Lewis, prime vs. prime?Quarry would not KO Holyfield and Holyfield might stop JQ on cuts. I'd give the nod to Holyfield, but it wouldn't be a cakewalk. I agree—we sometimes forget how good Holyfield was because he hasn't been competitive in a long, long time and we're starting to get used to today's Holyfield instead of remembering his great wins. | 5/25/04 05:28:14 PM|Massimo |Roma, Europa||coolidge was cool.com|||10|I wanna say that life has been unjust with Donovan Ruddock. I mean, this guy had great potentialities! I still haven't understood how it happened that he had the worst career in boxing history! Donovan Ruddock punched probably harder than Tyson. His knockout of Michael Dokes was really impressive! It is a shame that he never won a title, while chumps like Ruiz and Brewster have belts. The turning point in his career was his defeat against Lennox Lewis. But it's not a shame losing (or to lose) against Lewis. When he lost against Tommy Gun in 1995, he wasn't the same guy any more, he was overweight. I have rooted for Ruddock in the past because I thought he deserved a belt.Oliver "Atomic Bull" McCall is underrated! His chin is really chivalian and he can punch hard as he showed knocking out Lewis, Maskaev and Akiwande and stopping the "almost" all time great Francesco Damiani. I remember well his second fight with Lewis. It was amazing that he got completely crazy and that Lennox Lewis still looked afraid of him and couldn't knock him out in a convincing way! PS:
Francesco Damiani taught a boxing lesson to a guy whose name I can't remember right now.... UHHHMMM...... Oh yeah, now I remember: TEOFILÓ STEVENSON

Now it's late here in Rome, and I have to go to my huge bed! Tomorrow, I will read with joy what you guys have to say.

Bowe v Holyfield in their primes is difficult to assess. While Bowe wasted his career and skills, Holyfield got every little squeeze out of his lemon. Bowe had an awkward style for Holyfield and I would have to go with Bowe by decision. Tyson v Lewis in their prime. I rate Tyson above Lewis, but Lewis had the style to beat him and is way taller. Without any confidence, I'd say Lewis. Holyfield is on the way to being another tragic figure in boxing. He stayed around way too long and didn't heed the lesson that Ali's career should have provided. Felix Trinidad seems to have listened to that message. Apart from Marciano, not many in history got out on time.

Among heavyweights, Marciano got out on time and in a weird way, Foreman and Holmes, even though they boxed way into their 40's, still seem to have it together—maybe it's just genetics in their case. It seems like Lennox Lewis, if he stays retired, is out on time too. He walks away as the Champion, with a full wallet and in good shape. What about middleweight Marvin Hagler? I don't think he ever fought again after losing the title to Leonard. Very surprising that he didn't come back because there would have been some nice paydays waiting for him. He didn't even care to win the title back and THEN retire. He just left it open-ended. I heard he went to Italy to live, to study acting.

Massimo: If you liked Ruddock so much, what about Frank Bruno?

Frank Bruno was an excellent fighter and can be proud of his career. He had good skills and could punch hard. If you look at his career, it is amazing how many fights he won inside 3 rounds (ask Gerry Cootzie, for instance...). He often gave good performances even in defeat. He was ahead against a young Lennox Lewis until the stoppage. He had just one very bad performance against Mike Tyson in their second fight, when he got abruptly cheeken and took a beating. His major flaw was the chin, that did prevent him from being a really great champion. He eventually won the title beating the tough guy Oliver McCall. Frank Bruno was a very good fighter and maybe deserve even the appellative of CHAMPION.

Fraziers hook wouldn't have to "reach" Lewis head because by the Time Joe was up to a full smoke his left hook would have been doubled up on Lewis body first. Lewis had a gas tank problem and Joe would have taken him out late. Too many hooks to the body. Lewis has never seen that before. Lewis beat Bowe for the Olympic gold and probably would have done it in the pro's at least that's what Bowe thought that's why he threw the belt in the can. I think Quarry could KO Holyfield don't know if he would. Jerry could feint and open you up for hard counter punches skills Holyfield may not have seen. Holyfield would be good in any era.

You're right on the mark with those comments about Frazier/Lewis. Look, all things being equal, I'll take a bigger/heavier guy against a smaller guy every time. But usually, all things aren't necessarily equal. A smaller guy with superior skills can equalize the bigger guy's size or weight. We've seen this over and over. Some of the jumbo heavyweights of the past were soundly beaten by smaller guys. Now, in the lighter weight classes, I think as little as five pounds can make a difference. I picked Aaron Pryor to defeat Alexis Arguello for one reason only: Pryor had a little more natural size. Both guys were warriors. I viewed them as being top notch fighters without much separating them. So I picked Pryor to win, just on his size (of course Leonard won a decision against a naturally heavier Hagler, but that's another story). But when you reach 200+ pounds, you have the punching power to hurt anyone, even a 250 pounder. You also have the body mass to absorb punishment from someone who is larger. A 6'3" 220 pound George Foreman in 1973 is plenty large enough to take on someone who is 6'5" and 250.
To me, that's about even. Larry Holmes gave away two inches and at least 30-35 pounds to a good big man, Leroy Jones, and still dominated most of that fight.
Also, today's muscular guys weighing 240+ don't impress me anymore than yesterday's power punchers. Earnie Shavers and George Foreman used leverage and brute force to club opponents into being knocked out. If a chiseled body makes for a better boxer, Norton would have won every fight he was in. Other factors go into it—and if there's a such thing as a "punch-o-meter" that measures punching power, Liston, Shavers and Foreman would score a lot higher than Lewis or the Klitschos. And we know that being taller or weighing more doesn't give a guy a better chin. Yes, a bigger guy could lean on an opponent, clench (like Ali used to do) and tire him out over 8 rounds or more (Ali was very strong and used this tactic against smaller guys). But my guess is that if Lennox Lewis or another of today's big guys tried to use this strategy against Foreman, Shavers, etc., they would be dispatched early.

Who said Quarry nearly beat Frazier? Get real. He stayed with him for a round or two, then wilted. He was never in the second fight, a slaughter. Frazier showed pity and stepped back, and Quarry was ready to quit too.

Some very good posts from Fran, Angelo, G-Man, has me thinking about these matchups.
Lewis would probably try to take Frazier early and would look very good as an Ali-type tall boxer, but I still think his chin would get him in trouble. Ali, JQ hit Joe alot, he was still there smokin'. To me, Lewis, Bowe and Tyson were the best bunch since the 70's, and should have met mid 90s at the latest. Holmes had little real competition thanks to the job Don King did on several very good perspective heavies, among them Greg Page. Fans were flat-out robbed by King where both groups are concerned. True, Holyfield does not quite get his due now, though he had the huge hype for a while. He parallels Quarry in some ways, and was a true warrior. But if the other three are set and clear-headed, they own the 90s. It's too bad we got stuck with Ali-Leon Spinks when there were much better matches to be had, Holmes also had some very average opponents, LJones, Evangelista, Cobb among them. As a Clevelander, I can tell you we don't claim Don King too loudly, he effected nearly every ranking and contender for three decades, this should be figured into all that has come to pass regarding title fights. Even JQ, who lost his shot at Foreman, has been affected by King. How might the sport have gone without him?

Frazier was a top 10 all time heavy. Jerry falls about 25-30. Small difference seemingly, but at the tip-top of the food chain small differences are alot. Jerry wouldn't ever beat a pre Ali I Joe Frazier. However a prime Quarry against 1974 Frazier would be a toss-up.

Let's continue to remember our soldiers. My son is in Bagdad. He is OK but has lost one of his men. Thanks and have a safe Memorial Day weekend.

Kent, we must not forget about the people in the armed forces who are facing danger every day and we also must not forget those that have fallen before them as that is what Memorial Day is all about.

I know there are people out there who think it was a bad decision to go to war but to them I say, don't blame the soldiers, honor them as they do not make policy and they have a duty to perform.
It is the same brave duty they would perform if a foreign army invaded our homeland.

One of the biggest disgraces in the history of the United States of America was the poor treatment of the soldiers as they returned from Vietnam. A lot of Americans still owe those veterans a collective apology for how shabby the vets were treated.As far as the policy itself goes, I hear a lot of critics pointing out that President Bush made the wrong decisions but I don't hear these same critics giving any alternative solutions as we are already in Iraq. That decision has already been made. I don't want to hear any Monday morning quarterbacks saying what we should have done. I want to hear what we should do from this point on as we cannot take back the decision to go to war. Flat out pulling out of Iraq as fast as possible is not a viable solution even though that is what a lot of Bush's critics would have us do.|[5/26/04 07:05:43 PM]mark sargeant[uk]|mark_sargeant2003@yahoo.co.uk|10|On their best day in their prime a good fighter could come close to any major top 10 star. Earnie Shavers had weaknesses and lost to several mediocre fighters but on his day his punching power could have meant victories over any heavy weight in history. If he caught Holmes (which he did), Foreman, Tyson or Lewis, who are all better fighters with that right hand perfectly he could have knocked them out.With Jerry Quarry, he was a very good fighter in a wonderful era. His handling of Ron Lyle who really was as mean and good as you get without winning the title, was more impressive than how Ali, Foreman or Shavers handled him. But he did have his bad days as well. He was beaten by a past-prime Machen, Chuvalo and Ellis and when tossing up matches with fighters such as Holyfield or Tyson you have to remember these performances as well. Quite simply if he had fought these 2 or Lewis like he did in these disappointing matches he would have got beaten easily against good heavies.Lewis at his worst was ko'ed by 2 average heavies but dominated the era for 10 years or so and placed a number of good fighters like Ruddock into early retirement. Simply at his best Lewis would have beaten Quarry. He had a great jab and size to control the fight and had greater punching power. I'm a fan of Quarry for many reasons and have no doubt that at his very best could have caused an upset, but unfortunately in a few fights that really mattered like Ellis and Frazier and Ali he came up significantly short and was well beaten. I'd take Lewis to win on points or by late stoppage for cuts. Holyfield fought magnificently in his fights with Bowe and Tyson but even in his prime had problems with lesser fighters like Moorer and was shown a thing or two by an ancient Holmes.|[5/26/04 10:14:01 PM]Fran|Philly|plc7755@aol.com|10|Came up short against Chuvalo, did you see the fight? Beaten badly by Ali? It was a cut Jerry was doing good the fight hadn't even started. Did you see those fights? |[5/27/04 04:20:09 AM]Kent|La Habra, Ca|kentallenent@aol.com|10|Mark, Jerry was not well beaten by Ellis. He lost by a split decision and such a verdict often means the fight could have gone either way. Jerry was also well ahead at the time of his freak knockout loss to Chuvalo. It is doubtful Chuvalo would have won if not for the unusual circumstances.I also agree with whoever said Ali was not completely dominant in Jerry's first fight. Jerry was very much pressing the action in that fight and I gave Ali a slight lead at the time of the stoppage. I agree with your assesment of Jerry verses Lennox Lewis as seen by my recent post about that subject.|[5/27/04 04:38:49 AM]Fran|Philly|plc7755@aol.com|10|I wouldn't want Jerry to fight Lewis. Definately a tough fight and the fact that boxers have evolved to be bigger and still keep the ability to move like Lewis. However had Lewis been coming up during the late 60's and early 70's and had he found himself in the ring with a young Jerry Quarry a guy who thrived on upsetting #1 contenders a guy who Beat Mathis Spencer Foster Lyle Shavers, you could never feel comfortable if you were Lewis manager. Add to the fact Lewis had no chin and a stamina problem (most big guys do) Then you have to agree that Jerry had a chance. Too00 many sensational upsets against #1 contenders too hard a puncher thats why Foremans people avoided him. Ali Frazier proved over time to have success over him I'll give you that one but Jerry beats most everyone else. |[5/27/04 08:52:03 AM]Angelo|Washington, DC|funktron@yahoo.com|10|Gerry:
I've said it before---King prevented Tim Witherspoon (and others) from having an opportunity during their primes to fight the best in the division. King did serve the purpose of generating crazy interest in title fights, and also staged the fights in locales (Zaire, Caracas, San Juan, etc.) that made them attractive to a world audience. I'm a little too young to remember much about pre-King heavyweight boxing. Did all the stars come out for Clay-Liston and other 60's title fights? Or did the King promotions bring Hollywood into the crowd? Going further back, when Joe Louis was champion, was it a Hollywood style audience watching him, or the pool room cigar smoker set?Kent: Without trying to make this site a political forum, I agree with you. I've never served in the armed forces---because the volunteer military, made up mostly of brave and honorable young people, allow the rest of us to pursue other careers/other interests. We owe them a lot for defending our country and carrying out our leaders' policies whether we agree with the policies or not. And you know, I'm not the President's biggest supporter by a long shot, but all I hear from his opponents is the Monday morning quarterbacking you refer to. They seem to change positions as things unfold, but if you listen to previous statements from them, they held opposite viewpoints a few months or a few years back. I think the word for it is hypocrisy or at the very least, indecisiveness.

5/27/04 11:08:29 AM|Gerry Schultz|Cleveland, Ohio|||jgschultz11@aol.com|||10|Angelo, good points regarding King, he did add something to the division, not just take. But overall, I view his contribution as clearly negative... Pooper, we disagree on Frazier-Quarry, which is fine, but you might want to read what Smokin' Joe himself had to say about JQ and those fights, check out Frazier's bio when you get a chance, you may learn a few things... Also not wanting to get political, I did serve. I would not call it "Monday QBing", as everything that has happened, except the prisoner abuse, has been predictable in Iraq. If we had McCain, we'd clearly be better off, you may want to note which guy McCain himself favors.

5/27/04 01:38:28 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA|||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|JERRY would have had his hands full with any of the top fighter's today, not to say he would not have been very competitive, Holyfield-people have forgotten just how good he was, he's really hurting his legendary career by staying around too long. And what's worse he does not need the money (especially if he dosen't have to drive anywhere!!) Riddick Bowe, and Tim Witherspoon and Lennox Lewis would have been hell for Jerry. Anyone who were perpetual motion with a strong jab could beat Jerry, Mr. Jimmy was the first to admit this, however, Quarry was only beaten by the very best in his division, And you never quite knew about the outcome of his fights with his temperment, aside from Ali, and Frazier (2-all time greats) If Ali was not allowed to hold, hug, and push they other guys head down with his weight, without so much as a warning, His alltime ranking might not be so high! Especially against Frazier. Quarry was at his best against guys who came to him, This is why I think he would have beaten Bonavena, Kirkman, Tua and Ruiz handily, I also think he would have beaten Bugner easily (WHO NEVER THREW MUCH IN COMBINATION, AND GOT VERY LAZY, WITH NOT MUCH WALLOP) Holmes is another fighter who would beat Jerry, AND "iron MIKE needs to beat a top fighter, too tell!"

5/27/04 01:48:43 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Jimmy: Good post. And yes, Jerry would be competitive with anyone. It seems as though he brought out his best when he was the underdog. My biggest regret for his career was the Jimmy Ellis fight. If he had a bad back, he should have postponed the fight. If he DIDN'T have a bad back, he should have thrown caution to the wind and gone after Ellis with everything. As it is, I think the decision could have gone either way. He hurt Ellis more than Ellis hurt him, but Ellis did land more.\n\nGerry: Thanks for your service. You won't hear me second guess guys who sign up (Whether you go to war or not, you put yourself in a vulnerable position when you sign on for the armed forces and it takes a lot of courage to do that.). I agree with you---McCain would have handled the war idea better, though I don't know if I'd go along with his taxes/economic policies as well.

Hmmmm....I wonder if Bush and McCain boxed eachother, who would win?  McCain is like Frazier, coming forward and bobbing and weaving. Bush would be more like Ali, jabbing and running.

Bush has done a great job of fighting these chumps on thier turf not ours. Instead of them killing our people here they are being picked off by the Marines over there. Our Marines are terrorizing the terrorists.  The legendary Marine General Black Jack Pershing 100 years ago was sent to fight against the Muslim uprising in the Phillipines when he got there he told his men to go out and catch some of them. So the Marines bought back 11 of them alive, General Pershing told his men to make them dig thier own graves. When they were done they tied them to posts that were right behind the graves. Then they got a bunch of pigs and sliced them up and threw them in the graves. The order was given and 10 of the 11 were shot and buried with the pigs...... They let the 11th guy go...... 70 years went by without a problem. Strategy just like boxing its all strategy.

Kerry is a Traitor phony and a Herman Munster look alike he will sell us out. A fight in the Garden between Bush and Kerry would be the biggest money maker of all time. Thats the only way the country can heal these 2 guys can't get along so they have to throw hands. Settle it like men. If Bush can't beat Kerry then we are in trouble. |
Palestine and Israel they look for new problems. All the dissension in the world leads back to this. The fact is that Israel have broken many UN 'Resolutions' but the US have never lifted a finger- they just supply weapons...to Israel!.

Why? Half the US Government is Jewish! Why do the Palestinian attack with suicide bombers? Well how could they possibly retaliate against such a 'loaded' army? What choice do they have?? You never hear the other side of the story but there I'm telling you. A lot of the world's countries are becoming anti-america because of there heavy handed not to mention underhanded tactics. I wish there were 'real' peacemakers in this world and less of the tyrants that we have witnessed over the last 100 years! All I am saying is ' who are we to preach when our countries morals are non-existent and our policies laced with deception? Think about it!

Ok I thought about it.... And I believe you drink Kool Aid. As G-Man said so well these punks just want to kill us and don't really know why. They threw the first punch. If you are walking down the street and some guy comes up to you and punches you in the face what do you do? Try and talk it out? I garuntee that gets you another punch in the face. Sometimes you have to fight and this is one of them. United this will be over quick these guys can't fight. But with everyone drinking Kool aid and worrying about the very weasels, that are hiding behind women and kids shooting at our guys, this is going bad. Sorry Peacemaker but these guys want to kill you too.
to keep George off him for the first five or six rounds. Lewis hit hard, much harder than Ali, Peralta and certainly Jimmy Young. I think George would run out of gas and be there for the taking. Now we are talking about the Big George of 74-75 vintage and a "prime" Lennox Lewis. Ok, maybe i've fallen off my Harley one time to many (I have been known to ride without a helmet), but I don't think this is too far fetched.

I'll add that no, America isn't perfect, but never in the history of the world has any other country been as generous with their wealth and also as responsible with their military superiority as the U.S. has been. We're not God, we're not a saint, but by and large, we've been a pretty positive force. Sure, Peacemaker can come up with a list of things we've done around the globe that have been self-serving and haven't worked out---but for every one of those, I can come up with dozens of examples of where we've helped poorer countries in need and come to the assistance of nations under unfair attack. I can also come up with dozens of examples of how other powers have been very negative and irresponsible with their power. Most of the time, America tries to do the right thing. And a lot of the time, we get crapped on for it. We're at a point in history where technology is available to every whack-job nut case terrorist out there. We've been attacked and dragged into a conflict against our culture and way of life. It's clearly become a case where we kill or be killed. If the Islamic radicals (notice, I did not say ALL Islamic people, just the radicals) hide behind their women and children, then THEY are the ones who will be responsible for the deaths of the innocent. Many women (and maybe some children too) were among the 3000 casualties on 9-11. Talking isn't going to bring them back or stop it from happening again. We've got to stop fooling around and go in strong to eliminate the enemy. If the enemy are cowards, and hide among women, children and hide in places of worship, they all of that goes down with them. Countries who stand by and do nothing while these kooks set up training camps on their soil should be in our scope as well. They're not our friends if they're celebrating 9-11 and allowing terrorists in, and they should pay dearly for it. Peacemaker: I'm not Jewish. That's very interesting that you found that statistic that half of our government is Jewish. Where did you get that data? Gee, I had no idea. Israel has been our only steady friend in the middle east. I would say that it might be a good idea to make sure that democracy stays in place.

Great responses, G-Man gave us a history lesson to go along with putting everything in perspective. And Dubya does have balls. He is not perfect far from it but he can slip in the polls and keep slippin because come nov 2 when everyone walks in to vote the one thing that it will all boil down to is who has the balls. Dubbya KO in 3 over Herman Munster  I understand lewis vrs Jerry that Lewis should win would be a favorite to win, But Jerry had the Balls and a hell of a left hook. Thats why as always I'd bet on Jerry.

I didn't want to make a politcal topic out of supporting our troops but I knew there were probably people out there who opposed the war before it started and continue to do so. That is fine, as I had my doubts about going into Iraq as well. But the very people who deserve all of our support, the people of the armed forces, often get lost in the shuffle during the debate about policy and this should never happen. When talking to war protesters, when I ask them, what is your solution to the situation in Iraq and all they do is shout, "U.S. out of Iraq!" They never offer any solutions to our present situation, just empty slogans, which they repeat over and over again. They also are often anti-American and they never give credit to the good America does in the world, which by far outweighs any of the bad America has done. The world would be a worse place if not for the free nations such as U.S., The U.K., present day Germany, Italy, and yes, among others, even France. At least in these countries, policy can be freely debated, not so in a lot of the other nations of the world. Whoever brought up the troops who are serving in Afghanistan, I agree, they deserve our highest praise and we cannot forget about them especially.

Its the Kool Aid |

Kent, you did open the lid on this... As to what Kerry would do, or what Bush should have done, the info is all around you, regarding Iraq or the economy, it's practically reprinted by the hour. If it comes across as empty or slogans, the fault may lie with you, not the info/message. To say he made obvious avoidable errors in policy is a clear understatement... We do get a little carried away with JQ in these fantasy matchups, Jimmy D makes some more great points, tall boxers were tough for JQ, Holmes and Lewis both would likely win on cuts or by decision, as I said, but JQ would likely take rounds from both. I did not consider a Witherspoon matchup, he may have been most hurt by King, a real fighter. I do like JQ over Byrd, Ruiz, Tua, Mc Cline, Mesi, which again, does not leave out much of today's guys. Not bad for a 200 lbs. heavy with so-so defensive skills... Fran, you can call Kerry names if you like, it just shows you don't know enough politically to do better. In 2000, they called Bush Alfred E.
Neumann, they were childish morons too. Incidentally, those who favor the smallish Bush in ring fights may want to reconsider. The much taller, stronger Kerry, who did serve his country, would pummel Bush, as would Gore. Not that this is how an intelligent nation should choose its leaders... Peacekeeper, your Pershing story, and the fact you are impressed by it, is solid Section 8 stuff. You may find it ironic that what Pershing was practicing is called terrorism. Americans can and should expect better. Thanks.|

I had the pleasure to meet Jerry Quarry a few Times, Was and still am Honored to have Met him and his Family.....I pray for them each and every night...if I had to do it all over again--I would....I'm his Ex-Son-in-law...and at one time I was married to one of the Most Beautiful Women in the World...Jerry's Daughter, Keri....We had some good times and Some Bad...but I will always care for her....I pray for her Happiness each and everyday....she can be a slugger herself but she has the biggest heart around....there's alot of love in her....to me shes the strongest one in the whole Quarry Family...lets not forget MaugerMom either....Love You Keri and Mom...Always.....things do get better...Amen.... |

Charles Anderson, I know the anxiety you must be feeling for your son!God bless him every night of his tour. I'm sure he will come back safe and sound. He may need debriefing and carefull counselling from P.T.S.D. PROFESSIONALS!, when he does return safely home. Acknowledge this one fact in your mind. He will not be the same baby boy you sent over there.

Gerry, I wasn't really talking about John Kerry as much as I was talking about the protesters that are out in the streets from time to time. I had a discussion recently with some local protesters on a street corner and all they say is U.S.
out of Iraq and no war for oil, slogans that offer no solution to the situation.
On the other side of the street was some very pro Bush and pro war people who tended to swallow Bush's policy lock, stock, and barrel. I questioned them as well and I was called unpatriotic for daring to question what they were saying. I am proud to say I was called a war monger by someone in the anti-war group for suggesting we can't just pull out as fast as humanly possible. I am proud to say I was viewed as being on the opposing side by both groups. It is a great honor to not fit in with either extreme group. Once again, my main point is we can't forget the troops in the field, wherever they may be.
we were face to face you would not refer to me as a childish moron. I did not want to go there with the ridiculous talk of our leaders fighting it out but we all did so what the hell I added my 2 cents. That was my story about General Pershing and it was nothing more than some good old Marine Corps History. Part of our training at Parris Island was to know the history of the finest fighting force the world has ever seen. I am very proud to be a former Marine. I care only about our guys over there fighting for us. And if they are fighting for us then lets Unite behind them we can argue about policy later. I was just sharing it with the site since we were on the subject. Kerry is a Traitor and they will do anything to get him in power even if it is inspiring our enemy's to fight harder and kill more of Our Marines.

As far as Jerry Quarry having trouble with taller heavyweights how do you explain the Ron Lyle, Thad Spencer, Mac Foster, Buster Mathis Fights.......? In the first Ali fight Jerry was getting under Ali's Jab and moving on him pretty good. Jerry could move on his feet and had great head movement he was far from a one dimensional fighter.

Tonight, they'll show Bonavena-Mildenberger (1967) and Patterson-Bonavena (1972) on ESPN Classic. That's what I call LEGEND ! This is a good reason for you guys to come to Italy. But you have to take the first flight as (or because) they'll show two fights at 20 o'clock ! You would be all welcome !LET'S GET READY TO RUMBLE !

The fact that the US have helped other nations is without question. What has been worrying is that the US now have a now total disregard to international law having taken part in an illegal war. They have put themselves above UN Power and broken UN resolutions in going into this battle. Kent:- it would have been nice to see the worlds leaders trying to establish diplomatic decisions and results. Instead lies were made up (WMD) and used as the incentive to go to war. Now don't get me wrong the people that kill themselves and innocent people in the name of their religion are scum. They are not religious but extremists! What really worries me is the amount of people now dying - we now have a situation where the 'Iraqis' will never give up their fight and Mr Bush will never step down. The real problem, as I said, that needs to be addressed is the Israel and Palestine problem. Without this resolve, terrorism, I fear, will never end. How can you battle it? There are millions waiting to join the queue to give their lives to their 'religion'. No! We need a diplomatic resolution. The US are seen as International bullies after their disregard for International law. They are not the worlds police officers and have made a big mistake in getting into this War.
A fair quarter has to be given to the Muslim people who are treated terribly by the outside world - they really do not want interference from the West and do not want to be influenced by 'Western Morals'. The forces that have been torturing Iraqi POW's should be charged and ashamed of themselves as representatives of their countries 'light and way forward'. 'Hearts and Minds' Huh ! What a joke!!!!!!!!!!! To the person who mentioned about the oil. Well they didn't count on such resilience. Why were so many oil and construction companies given contracts before the war was out. How terrible and how unjust? See both sides of the coin people. The US and Britain are extremists too - you just cant see it on your side of the defence. I hope all the brave, good soldiers of the coalition get home safe, I really do. They do an honest job and risks their lives for a dead end cause. Peace.|
reason 911 happened in the first place. I join many veterans in supporting Kerry until a better man comes forward to defeat Bush and put America back on a better road... Peace to all of you.

5/28/04 11:11:22 AM|Fran|philly||plc7755@aol.com|||10|Give that guy another glass of Kool-Aid....He's on a roll.... Good point about why so many companies had contracts already before the country is even secure. We are fighting Syrians in Iraq as much as Iraqis. |

5/28/04 11:38:44 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Peacemaker: I think one thing we can all agree on this Memorial Day weekend is the hope that your wishes come true, and all of our men and women return home safely from the war. The sooner that's over, the better.I do take exception though, to the concept that the U.S. must follow some sketchy U.N. protocol to defend ourselves. On 9-11-01, America was attacked. We identified the group(s) who committed the murders of 3000 of our civilian citizens, and made the correct decision to declare war on these groups and the nations who harbor them. As for Iraq, they disregarded the U.N. resolutions established when they were defeated after invading Kuwait in 1991. As the U.N. was unwilling to enforce their own resolutions (not followed by Iraq), the U.S. was within its rights, in my judgement, to go to war with Iraq. There were connections evident between the leadership there, and the terror groups responsible for killing around the world (funding and "reward" money from Saddam to the terrorists). Further, I know the Bush administration overestimated how many WMDs were in Iraq---but the real point is that Saddam would not allow the inspections that he agreed to when he surrendered in the early 90's. By not allowing inspections, he opened himself to the conjecture that he was hiding weapons. It was the correct decision to go to war against him and remove him from power. We should never allow the U.N. or other nations to dictate U.S. policy. They do not have our best interests in mind---and further, the U.N. has proven to be corrupt and not trustworthy (refer to their laughable yet disastrous weapons for food program, which diverted money for food for starving children into the wallets of U.N. officials.). Kofi Annan should not be directing America's foreign policy and right to defend itself. |

5/28/04 03:16:37 PM|CHARLES ANDERSON|ARK.||CTJJANDFAM@AOL.COM|||10|STEVE, THANKS FOR YOUR THOUGHTS AND PRAYERS. ANYONE THAT KO'D 5 STRAIGHT OPPONENTS IN THE NATIONAL GOLDEN GLOVES WAS NOT A ONE DIMENSIONAL FIGHTER. (TO WHOEVER THOUGHT JERRY WAS ONE)|

5/28/04 05:06:16 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Massimo, you are lucky to get those fights as ESPN classic is not showing those fights in the U.S. We are getting Ali verses Wepner and another program about Ali for the one millonth time! &gt;&lt;&lt;&lt;&lt;&lt;&lt;&lt;&lt;Last week they gave us Ali verses Foreman and a program on welterweights of the 50s and I have seen both of those many times.&lt;&gt;&lt;&gt;&lt;&lt;&lt;&lt;&lt;CHARLES, THANKS ALSO TO YOUR SON AND MY PRAYERS AND HOPES ARE WITH HIM WHILE HE DOES HIS DIFFICULT DUTY. I MEANT NO DISRESPECT WHEN I BROUGHT UP THE POLICY ISSUES.|

5/28/04 06:30:37 PM|Massimo|Roma||1)Warren2)Meneghin3)Shag|||10|Kent--&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I have just seen both fights. Bonavena looked very strong against Mildenberger. He dominated the fight knocking Karl down several times. Mildenberger did hurt him once.&lt;br&gt;though ( I think in round 9). Very good performance by Oscar and great fight.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;In the Bonavena fight Patterson just showed how good he was. He outclassed and outboxed Oscar winning quite comfortably on points ( I have Floyd 3 points ahead at the end of the 10 rounds). This was really a great exhibition for a 37 years old fighter ! Floyd Patterson had really a huge talent, if he had had Chuvalo's chin he would have been probably the greatest fighter ever. John Gerard said once that Oscar had a damaged hand in this fight. This might be an explanation for Oscar's disappointing performance. Jerry Quarry fought so well against Patterson and this says alot about ( or on ) his technical ability and strength. Patterson-Bonavena was a very good fight, but not as good as Bonavena-Mildenberger. I already know that next month they won't show pieces of legend, unfortunately.Anyway, they'll show the 1984 Roland Garros final Lendl-McEnroe. As the N.1 John McEnroe's fan (I really love his "genius") I haven't yet swallowed his defeat in that match. If he had won that match, now he'd be remembered as one of the greatest champions of all time. Above Lendl, of course.Now it's very late here in Rome and I have to go to my king sized bed.I never said I was tough. I simply said that you would not call me names to my face as you did on this site. To insult someone from a distance like that is the mark of a coward. The Marines over there are fighting for us and our safety and are winning. Whether you like it or not or think it is good. I hope they all come back asap. Kerry hyped a book written about American atrocities in Vietnam and that book was proven to be all lies. So he didn’t tell the truth. He was there for four months and all of his commanders and most of the men who served with him have all signed a petition saying he is unfit To be Commander and chief. And by your logic it was our fault 9/11 happened. I can understand and respect other opinions but not that one.Bonavena fight once against Ali and just clips of him I'd like to see his fights. Does the digital cable give you access to those fights. Who won between him and Lyle? He fought around the same time as Jerry against the same guys. There are alot of interesting comparisons. Like Bonavena didn't get cut against Ali and gave him hell that's why I have always been convinced that if it weren't for the cut Jerry would have beat Ali in the first.Regarding Ali'-Quarry, Ali' won in such a dominating way in their second fight, that I can't imagine how Jerry could( or might, or may) have beaten him. Stiles make fights and probably in Ali's style there was something Jerry couldn't handle. Jerry did a little better in their first fight, though.I think the combination of Ali's size, speed and style neutralized JQ's best attributes. I think that even if JQ weren't cut, he'd have lost a decision. The amazing thing is that Ali was able to win this fight, against one of the best fighters in the world, without more tune-up coming out of exile. Ali should have fought a few more before challenging Frazier though.Hello Massimo! Did you by chance video tape the Lyle, Patterson and Bonevena fights? Do you know anyone who tapes ESPN there? Thanks, --Carl|
I have a close friend who tapes ESPN, yes! That's me! I tape ESPN. Since yesterday, I have a tape of Patterson-Bonavena and of Bonavena-Mildenberger as well. They are like saint relics to me! Better, I couldn't care less about saint relics, while I care very much about these legendary tapes. I have also the following tapes: Ellis-Quarry/Quarry-Shavers/The Greatest-Godfrey/Marciano-Walcott 2/ Ali'-Lyle/ Ali'-Foreman (Kent, if you want, I can give you that one)/Ali'-Bonavena (almost the entire fight)/The Thrilla/Frazier-Ali'/ Charles-Louis/Frazier-Bonavena 1/Baer-Schmeling/Foreman-Chuvalo/Foreman-Norton/Foreman-Frazier 1,2/If you give me 1 million dollar and the Heavyweight Championship of the World, I'll give you these tapes, though! PS: The Greatest is Primo Carnera, of course, ain't that sucker Muhammad Ali'... happens, I pray and hope for your fine sons safe return home as soon as possible! |

5/30/04 05:42:23 AM| Peacemaker| Space || spacer@spacer || || || 10 |

Thank you Rhys for your honest comments. It's not always the people but the power. Sorry for airing political views here. Best of safety to all the soldiers. |

5/30/04 05:42:04 PM| Fran| Philly || plc7755@aol.com || || 10 |

Gerry .... I did not call Kerry names from a distance I was commenting on him to you. I Did not call you names. And I am not a coward. I don't think you are either. Thats why I reminded you so You didn't look like a childish moron. Steve you are definately a hell of a guy to have done all that I am very impressed.  I can see Jerry Quarry beating Ali in the first fight. Ali with 3 years of rust no legs no timing and just one training camp under his belt I think would have been hurt by Jerry. Ali may have been desperate to get the money he needed with a Frazier fight thats why he took it. He definately got better with every fight, then had the fights he needed after the Frazier fight to get himself back all the way. There was a monumental difference in Ali from Quarry 1 to Quarry 2. he was much better. I was listening to the fight on the radio from Atlanta and the drama as it unfolded via the announcers commentary was of Quarry commuting on and landing body shots to Ali and Ali breathing hard. Then a fluke cut. The Drama was cut short. Broke my heart. It wasn't his fault he got cut. He was there to win. I was 15 and he was my hero. I knew he was better than Ali that night. |

5/30/04 05:53:56 PM| Brandi Quarry| Indiana || brandiquarry3@msn.com || || 10 |

If my husband, (Mr Jimmy) was still alive, he would not like all the political comments on this site. He would wish and pray for all to return safe. Our site is for the love and memories of the old and new boxers, please lets just stick with these. there is so much, and so many to talk about. Thank you |

5/30/04 08:16:56 PM| Kent | La Habra, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com || || 10 |

I should have known the political comments would almost draw attention from remembering those who fell in battle and those who have served their country in the armed services but that wasn't my intention.  I meant to say, whatever people think about the war, don't forget the men and women in uniform. |

5/30/04 08:58:18 PM| G-Man| every where || I felt@high || || 10 |

Peacemaker - you talk about breaking international law, but how about all the U.N. resolutions Iraq broke since the 1991 Gulf War. You haven't got enough fingers and toes to count them. How about resolution 1441 Iraq broke leading to the recent war (this is the one that made America's intervention legal, by the way). You talk about abuse of prisoners. I haven't seen our guys slitting throats and beheading prisoners prime time like they do on Al Jazza television. I haven't seen our military deliberately targeting passenger jets, shopping centres, or bars. The most prolific killers of Muslims are Extremist Muslims. It wasn't America blowing up the Mosques in Turkey and elsewhere. And guess what ? The biggest saviour of Muslims are Americans. It wasn't the extremist Muslims who saved the Muslims from slaughter in Bosnia. It was American soldiers. We went over there and did the world's dirty work. Thanks for appreciating the lives we lost doing it. Tell me this: is the world a safer place with or without Saddam. (If you say the former then it is proof positive that you are a moron addicted to Kool Aid.) Think about something else. Every time we try and stay out of a war, someone shoots us in the back. You must remember Pearl Harbour, surely. And every time the Israeli's tried to swap war for peace, they got shot at, too. The Israeli leader (Rabbin) shook hands with the Palestinians and made huge concessions for peace in the early 1980s, and what did he get for his trouble ? An assassin's bullet in the back of his head, that's what. These extremists don't want peace. They want us dead or enslaved. They don't tolerate other religions, beautiful women, democracy, human rights, equal opportunity, or judicial fairness. They hate our way of life. They hate tolerance. They hate your mother more than they hate themselves. And they hate peace. How do you negotiate with that ? What part of your lifestyle and aspirations are you willing to sacrifice to appease these murdering bastards? Extremists don't want a few concessions from us; they want the whole lot and they are sworn to kill us until they get it. Jihads and Fatwahs are more important to them than peace and freedom. Slaughtering us is the Extremist Muslims' key to heaven. If the difference between life and death for your loved ones is treating a few terrorists robustly to obtain life saving intelligence, then you'd be handing our guys knuckledusters. The Genova Convention and all that gentlemanly crap went out the window just like our people did at 110 stories on 9/11. The world changed and Chamberlain groupies like you will get us all killed. By the way, Peacemaker, Saddam did have proven links to terrorism. He was the nice guy giving $25,000.00 US to the family of each suicide bomber of Jewish school buses. He was the guy who used chemical weapons to kill and maim tens of thousands of Kurds. And, lastly, when you're assessing the well being of your wife and kids in November, then ask the terrorists who they'd rather have as US President - Kerry or Bush. And then vote for the guy they don't want. |
|5/31/04 12:10:22 AM|Gerry Schultz|same ||same|||8|With Memorial Day here, I certainly feel the due paid by those who came before us, especially as a vet.
This year I'm also reminded that controversy has also followed previous U.S. conflicts, Korea, Vietnam, even World War One had fragmented support and divided politics, so the Bush campaigns are not unique. The key thing is, these Americans have answered the call of our nation and made the ultimate sacrifice for it. Politics aside, there's no question that the commitment of our troops to fulfill their missions, as well as our freedoms, are part of the very greatness that is America. That, and not our nation's current divisions, is what I will choose to recognize this weekend. Best wishes for a safe Memorial Day to all of you. |
|5/31/04 05:25:46 AM|Peacemaker|space||space@spacer|10|G-Man - you watch too much US telly. You obviously never read my notes carefully. I said that I was totally opposed to terrorism. You just hear what you want. So if every Muslim is a terrorist/extremist are you against Muhammad Ali? Also you mention Iraq's use of chemical weapons etc - ask yourself who they were supplied by. You are an ignorant person I'm afraid. What it comes down to is that the Muslim nation don't WANT YOUR WESTERN 'MORALS'. What it comes down to is that none of us are perfect especially America and Britain who continually harangue nations about their 'Human Rights' while exploiting others! American policies in some states dictate execution - how humane G-man. You are quite totally a fool.
|5/31/04 06:01:34 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Well said Gerry. G man and Peacemaker, why don't you guys exchange private E mails and continue your debate on war policy there? &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I would think that after Mrs.
Quarry asked us to cool it with the political talk that we could get back to boxing.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I am joining Gerry S. in honoring our troops, especially those who have fallen, on this Memorial Day and I hope all of the rest of the regulars can do so also.|
|5/31/04 08:32:08 AM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com|10|I hope all of our troops come home as quickly and safely as possible. The attention on "political" topics reflects all of our concerns for our Troops who are in harms way. We may disagree on how we got here but we all want the same thing. This is Memorial day the day we remember that the cost of our freedoms has been high there are millions of Americans who never made it back to enjoy these freedoms. This day is for them. |
|5/31/04 08:41:43 AM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com|10|Very well said G-man.
Very clear. I enjoyed reading your post. Ditto 200% |
|5/31/04 09:25:04 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||Kentallenent@aol.com|10|Very true Fran, this the fallen troops day and we all deep down want the same thing, for our troops in the field to be safe and make it home safely as well. |
|5/31/04 10:31:43 AM|Evren|London||@|10|Kent - So sorry I never met up with you in LA. Would have been really funny to meet up! We went to Knotts Berry farm and that was real cool. I found everyone to be very polite and I was made to feel most welcome. I liked Anaheim but preferred LAS VEGAS! Wow! What a place. Has anyone seen any new Quarry material on video? Kent - I'm up for another competition - what do you say Pal? What numbers, what era's? Evren. I was thinking Marciano onwards - 64 boxers. Let me know.

| 5/31/04 10:56:58 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia90101@aol.com | |||10 | We love & miss you very much, Dad, and Uncle Jerry, Mom too. Let's pray for the safe return of the troops, I give them alot of credit for doing what they are doing for all of us. I hope everyone keeps coming to this site, and supporting it. |

| 5/31/04 12:29:47 PM | JQ Fan | Vegas | Anon | |||10 | Today is a fitting time to recognize an American hero, and one of boxing's good guys - Mac Foster. The son of a career Army Sgt. who named him after General Douglas MacArthur, Marine Sgt. MacArthur Foster did two tours in Vietnam, and was involved in 14 major operations. Mac was recommended for a Silver Star for knocking out a 50 caliber machine gun with a grenade at a place called Chu Lai. He was inspired to box when, while serving in Vietnam, he read a quote from Ali in Stars and Stripes that stated that it takes more guts to fight in the ring than in Vietnam. Mac said "I'd like to see him face the Viet Cong, then we'd see how much guts he's really got". (After suffering his first ring loss to Jerry, Mac later went the full 15 round distance with Ali.)Mac was marching in Memorial Day parades back when it was unfashionable. The last thing I heard about him was that he had attended Jerry's funeral. I hope he is doing well. Mac, thank you for your service to our country and best wishes. |

| 5/31/04 04:11:08 PM | G-Man | over here | over there | |||10 | Peacemaker - if you read my post again, you will see that I mention Extremist Muslims and then Muslims. The Extreme Muslims are the terrorists. It's not a hard concept to understand, even for you. Perhaps it's time for you to show some courage. You criticize Americans and Britain, but where are you from? I picture it as being somewhere with legal drugs and gay marriages. Better still, you give us a solution to the world's problems. If it involves firing cruise missiles into sand dunes as a warning, then we did that and failed. If it involves singing 'All we are saying, is give peace a chance', then it failed, too. Peace marches haven't worked either, and you'd be the only one game enough to have a bed-in with Yoko Ono and Jane Fonda. Resolutions, sanctions and weapons inspections failed, too. Noam Chomsky has run out of ideas, but I'm sure a dirty haired Peacenik like you can dream up some more loony stuff. Try some more LSD bro, and those peace ideas will start flowing. |

| 5/31/04 04:26:57 PM | Peacemaker | space | space@spacer | |||10 | So your resolution is to let thousands and thousands of people die in the name of what? Your solution to problems is war and creating more instability in the world than ever. This all started long before 9/11. May I reiterate that the extremists and suicide bombers of the innocent are beyond evil. My prayer is that no more young soldiers die in fighting this war. I'll say no more on the matter here as someone stated it is not the place, quite correct. G-Man I'll say to you finally - I hope your heavy handed views and thoughts in support of war bring harmony to the worlds problems...we'll have to wait and see. Peace. |

| 5/31/04 04:46:49 PM | Massimo " at least 7'4" Cini | mafia, camorra e 'ndrangheta | calvin rules ! Andre', who ? | |||10 | Just a curiosityBesides the Jerry Quarry Foundation, there is another foundation on the web: the Primo Carnera Foundation. It's dedicated to providing financial assistance and spiritual support to children in need. It's address is: www.carnera.orgAnyway, I have to admit that Primo Carnera wasn't the greatest heavyweight of all time !br>Big Ray Impelletiere was !br>|
resort and war has been the last resort in Iraq. If you don't like America and Britain and our values then show some principle - boycott our technology, inventions and products. You'll be living in a dark, damp cave eating roaches and feeling warm and fuzzy towards camels. You can have the last say if you want, but we'd better wrap this up. |

| 6/1/04 12:17:05 AM | Kent | not too far from Anaheim, Knottts||Kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Evren, wow you were almost at my door as Knottts Berry Farm is only about eight or so miles from where I live. I have been there many times over the years.If I had known you were in town, I would have invited you to a local bar (that's pub in english)in Anaheim to hear me do the midnight set with an oldies band. You could have been one of the few who have heard me sing, live in person and not just karaoke, but the real thing, oh lucky you! I do this most Saturday nights.I think 64 fighters takes too long but 32 from Marciano to now would be good for a tournament.I don't think we ever finished the one we had going at the Frazier site as the posters there got too nasty and Joe must have had the plug pulled. Too bad, I liked that site. Can you imagine what some of the posters over there would have done if they heard me sing? I probably wouldn't get one song done. Not that I am bad, some of them just didn't like me.|

| 6/1/04 01:12:29 AM | Steve | N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Peacemaker,I am a Vietnam combat veteran.I've been biting my tounge this past couple of days., but your posts have nothing to do with boxing!The last fucking thing I need to hear on Memorial Day is a lecture about "AMERICAN MORALITY" Know this one thing for sure,baby boy,I've been there,done that!All morality and humanity cease to exist in combat! That includes both sides!God turns a blind eye to combat,and leaves us to our folly and savagery.This,unfortunately, is a time for wage war.You guys do remember 9-11,don't you.On this day I salute all of my "absent companions'' |

| 6/1/04 01:32:31 AM | Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|I apologize to the Quarry family for my anger, but this subject really hits home.Now, Evren, welcome back! Let's get going with that tournament again!I nominate you to supervise it again.You did a great job last time.Plus now we have a lot of new posters with differing opinions.|

| 6/1/04 01:40:42 AM | Steve | N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Kent, what oldies do you perform? Can you do Elvis,Dion,The Skyliners?The Platters?|

| 6/1/04 01:47:20 AM | Steve | N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Steve, I salute you and all the other vets. You have every right to blow some steam, and no right thinking person blames you for it. |

| 6/1/04 03:40:03 AM | Evren|London||@||10|If we had but 32 contestants we may miss out on Jerry? Is there any rush Kent? I would have loved to hear you sing...would have been a great night - I am in a band too called 'Shaker' and I could have got on stage with my guitar and joined in!!! My lasting memory of LA - The Prom Night kids setting off all the fire extinguishers and having the Hyatt Regency Orange County evacuated at 4am!!! That was scary - being on the 9th floor with smoke (so we thought at the time) bellowing thru' the corridors. Those kids were just having fun but I can see why you guys are on edge over there in the States!! So 64 contestants guys or what??????? If too many we will carefully have to choose 32.|

| 6/1/04 09:30:53 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca||Kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Evren, of course Jerry would be in it. Because if Jerry was number 27 of all time in Ring magazine, then he would be at least in the best 32 from Rocky onward.Steve, I call oldies anything that by today's standard is old. Most people label it as music from the 50s and 60s only but on Saturday nights, my friend has me sing with his band and I usually do about a half hour with them around midnight. I sing what he wants me to sing (what his band knows, that I know) and a typical quick set is Burning Love (Elvis), Daddy's Home (whoever did it), Johnny B Good (C. Berry), Make with You (Bread), Great Balls of Fire (J.L. Lewis), Dock of a Bay (Otis Redding), Lady (Kenny Rogers) Little Sister (Elvis).
You would not hear me doing those artist styles exactly though as I do my interpretation of the songs, not an imitation (I am not good at copying exactly). Evren, I am sure my friend would have let you come up for a couple of songs as Saturday nights are kind of laid back.

I am also the lead singer of a new tribute to the sixties band (nameless, so far) and we do songs throughout the sixties with a focus on the British Invasion period. I also do a variety of other songs from the 50s to about the 80s, just songs I like, not any particular artists. I will say though, I do a good version of New York, New York that doesn't sound like Frank Sinatra but usually goes over well.

To those who couldn't care less about talking about music here, understand the regulars here are like old friends so I hope you tolerate us.

Let me know if anyone wants to make changes:
1. Muhammad Ali
2. Joe Frazier
3. George Foreman
4. Larry Holmes
5. Rocky Marciano
6. Lennox Lewis
7. Evander Holyfield
8. Mike Tyson
9. Ezzard Charles
10. Riddick Bowe
11. Cleveland Williams
12. Ingemar Johansson
13. Michael Moorer
14. Jimmy Ellis
15. Jerry Quarry
16. Jimmy Young
17. Ken Norton
18. Ernie Terrell
19. Tim Witherspoon
20. Zora Folley
21. Pinklon Thomas
22. Ron Lyle
23. Earnie Shavers
24. Sonny Liston
25. Michael Dokes
26. Vitali Klitschko
27. Floyd Patterson
28. Eddie Machen
29. Tony Tucker
30. Mike Weaver
31. Bonecrusher Smith
32. Ray Mercer

Let me know of any omissions/changes:

Evren

Whoever will win this competition will be considered the second greatest heavyweight of all time. This greatest is Primo Carnera! No doubt in hell about that! He was just too strong and too fast! He did float like a butterfly and did sting like a bee. And his chin was better than Chuvalo's! I'd like to see Donovan Ruddock and Oscar Bonavena in the list. And what about Erminio Spalla?

I'll add Lorenzo Zanon to that list too...an all time great!

Hello Massimo: I'd like very much to trade with you for your copy of the Patterson-Bonavena video. I have many recent and vintage boxing videos and films to offer in exchange, including several 2nd generation videos of Jerry Quarry. Please post the email where I can reach you directly.
Thanks --Carl|
|6/1/04 03:50:10 PM|Steve|N.J.|dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Gerry Schultz, your absolutely right about the First Amendment. However, there is a time and place for appropriate comments. I didn't feel that Memorial Day was the time for a lecture on American immorality in wartime. I apologize if I offended you. |
|6/1/04 04:10:49 PM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|Carl-My e-mail address is Cini_Massimo@libero.it|
|6/1/04 04:48:42 PM|G-Man|over here||over there|||5|Yes, Gerry, you are right, but as soon as a view alternative to that of the elitists is expressed, we suddenly become ignorant, racist, bigots. When they begin the name calling I know that I am on the right track. The answer to every problem nowadays seems to be to hate Bush and condemn America. We're allowed to express a view on that, aren't we Gerry? It's better than getting splinters from sitting on the fence, too scared to have a say. Anyway, before your wise crack, the subject was dead. You write as if you are looking down at the rest of us, casting judgment, dispensing unimpeachable wisdom, while the rest of us ignorants are 'just letting off steam.' Maybe we should get NASA to bring you back down to earth.| |
|6/1/04 05:05:30 PM|steve |NJ||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Evren and Ken, I'm all for doing 64 fighters. The amount of time it takes just makes for more opinions and more debate. Who knows, we just might come up with some different, more interesting fights., and maybe even a different winner this time. Oh, by the way Kent, did you ever hear of a singer from N.J. named Billy Horner? He had a monster hit called "Sally's saying Something" How about Frankie Ford, His hits, "Scenic Cruise", and "Time After Time" These guys played all the Atlantic City and Wildwood, N.J. nightclubs in the sixties and seventies. Man, they where fun times! |
|6/1/04 05:17:44 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|No Steve, those folks don't ring a bell, probably east coast folks as the coasts were further apart in a lot of ways back then.Yes Gerry, been singing many years but at times have hit roadblocks being a non famous male singer who doesn't play an instrument well and who looks less like a front man than I used to.When I met J.Q. years ago, he liked it that I knew he was a singer. I actually had the guts to say to him, "I may be a better singer than you but you would probably go further in music because of your boxing career." He knew I was kidding and after playfully flexing his fist at me and pretending to scowl at me, he said, "you may be right about that." It helped my cause when I said to him after he flexed his fist, "Jerry we already know you are a better fighter than me but that won't help you sing better." I somehow knew he wouldn't take offense as we seemed to hit it off.In reality, I don't know if I am better than he was at singing as I am somewhat limited to what I do and the secret to my sound is careful selection of material and keys. As stated many times here, Jerry had an excellent singing voice, among his many other talents. |
|6/1/04 05:18:28 PM|Evren|London|||10|I'm up for 64!|
|6/1/04 05:18:28 PM|Evren|London|||10|I'm up for 64!|
|6/1/04 06:26:30 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||Kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Gerry, one more thing about my singing. My claim to limited fame these days is that at an ESPN 2 boxing card about a year and a half ago, I was serenading Amy Hayes, the beautiful ring announcer and another woman from the Goossen Tutor promotion office at the weigh in the day before the fight card. The ESPN 2 guys came out of a room they were using to tape interviews with the fighters and they told me to shut up as they had to re-ask a question. In my defense, they had started their interviews fifteen minutes early and I didn't know they had started. Amy is now a regular on Fox Sports Network and remembered me and the incident when I mentioned it when I saw her at a fight card about two months ago.|6/1/04 06:44:49 PM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com|||10| Billy Horner the Human Perculator I thought everybody knew who he was. Hy Litts brother in law or something wasn't he Steve. This tournameant sounds good I am looking forward to it. 64 gets everyone that was decent in the last 50 years which will make for some good matchups. There are some very sharp and outstanding charachters on this site so this tournameant will be interesting.

| 6/1/04 07:23:04 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | If not 64, maybe 48? Would that work? I guess the problem is that you'd end up with 3 finalists instead of 4---we could always add someone back in as a wildcard. But I'd vote for 64 over 32, just for the fun of more matchups. |

64 gets everyone that was decent in the last 50 years which will make for some good matchups. There are some very sharp and outstanding charachters on this site so this tournameant will be interesting. And would keep the topic on boxing and not depressing and divisive topics I wish we'd never touched. 64 fighters would be great. Reading the thoughts of other posters on each fighter will certainly broaden knowledge of them. It'll also be fun researching information on each before posting an informed prediction. Are there any rules, for example are the fights over 15 or 12 rounds. With guys like Marciano, that would matter. My guess would be 15 rounds. Gerry - I was too harsh in my last post and I apologize. Your comment was a little ambiguous and perhaps I misinterpreted it. I thought you were giving Steve a kick and I didn't like it. I'll take ten deep breaths before responding in future. Once again, I apologize.

| 6/1/04 07:47:47 PM | G-Man | over there | over here | A tournameant sounds great and would keep the topic on boxing and not depressing and divisive topics I wish we'd never touched. 64 fighters would be great. Reading the thoughts of other posters on each fighter will certainly broaden knowledge of them. It'll also be fun researching information on each before posting an informed prediction. Are there any rules, for example are the fights over 15 or 12 rounds. With guys like Marciano, that would matter. My guess would be 15 rounds. Gerry - I was too harsh in my last post and I apologize. Your comment was a little ambiguous and perhaps I misinterpreted it. I thought you were giving Steve a kick and I didn't like it. I'll take ten deep breaths before responding in future. Once again, I apologize. |

| 6/1/04 10:45:08 PM | Gerry Schultz | Cleveland, the Rock Capital | jgschultz11@aol.com | G-Man, no prob. I've never been against anyone having their say, quite the opposite. I did get a chuckle out of the NASA comment, I do have a tall soapbox sometimes ... Kent your Fox gig still sounds like a pretty cool one even if you got shushed. I've been lucky enough to record some original music and open for some national acts here in Cleveland, huge fun that gave me a chance to meet some well-known folks and friends I've hung on to for years... 64 sounds very good, sounds like the focus might be post-1960 with the best 50's guys added, which is good. I have to admit I had to do some head scratchin' last time when Ken Norton, a relatable 70's star, was paired with legend Max Schmelling, very tough to compare some of those guys. This set might bring together matches between guys more easy to 'see' in a match. Peace. |

| 6/1/04 11:02:45 PM | Steve | NJ | dmmsrm@comcast.net | Evren, thanks for taking on the job again.0,kay,pardner,let's get to work.Give us the first two matches.Evren, was it you who had a kind of board game that computed a fighters strenghts and weakness,and then somehow predicted a winner? Kent,since you ignored my offer to supply you with backup singers such as Jimmy D.,and myself,how about Gerry Schultz and Massimo? |

| 6/2/04 04:03:17 AM | Massimo | Roma | shaquillerashauno'neal.com | Just a curiosity-Do you know guys Italian legendary singers like ( or such as ) Claudio Baglioni, Lucio Battisti, Georgia, Mina, Lucio Dalla, Adriano Celentano and Gianni Morandi? |

| 6/2/04 04:09:25 AM | Fran | Philly | plc7755@aol.com | I am an Eagles fan Steve and this should be the year for them I can't imagine any city following a team like we do the Eagles every year they are exciting. Every game the whole area stops. Dick Lee's was around a long time. I always liked Jersey. The human perculator A barber he probably does good bussiness. Is the draw random for the tournameant? |

| 6/2/04 04:54:06 AM | Evren | London | I'll work out another 32. Just to remind you guys. I keep 64 names in a 'hat' and then pick out two randomly. Then we give a designated amount of time for posters to give their results. Once we tote them up the one with more votes goes through and the other is out. |
Scheduled rounds is 12 until the quarter finals when it goes up to 15—this does pose a problem in respect of today's fighters not having that distance anymore but we'll have to get by.

Gerry, who did you open for? That is something I always wanted to do. I have never quite got out of the bar band scene but still am amazingly plugging away somewhat. Part of the problem is I like to rock but I have a somewhat mellow voice and I should croon more. I have a good ballad sound and also can do country but I don't know many of those songs. Ironically, I write my own material and it tends to be country flavored as I come up with stories. I also do some good 70s and 80s R and B ballads like "Show and Tell" by Al Wilson, Let's Stay Together by Al Green, and Bobby Caldwell's "What you won't Do For Love."

I have a good friend from Philly so I will have to mention Billy Horner to him. There was a regular here a while back who does a good Elvis act who wouldn't want me to mention who he is, at least when he was posting he didn't think it was a good idea. Just think, we could probably put on a heck of a show just from the people here. I have never quite got out of the bar band scene but still am amazingly plugging away somewhat. Part of the problem is I like to rock but I have a somewhat mellow voice and I should croon more. I have a good ballad sound and also can do country but I don't know many of those songs. Ironically, I write my own material and it tends to be country flavored as I come up with stories. I also do some good 70s and 80s R and B ballads like "Show and Tell" by Al Wilson, Let's Stay Together by Al Green, and Bobby Caldwell's "What you won't Do For Love."

Massimo and Jimmy D. background vocals. You never know. I have to admit, Fran, Steve, and my buddy from Philly are very loyal Eagles fans. Me, I am more of an Eagles fan of the Hotel California and Take it Easy variety, ha! ha! You know, "I was standing on a corner in Winslow Arizona such a fine sight to see." Alas to say Massimo, I don't who the Italian performers are.

Evren, if you are pairing randomly, does that mean that there won't be a seeding for the first eight or 16 guys? Please don't put Vonda Ward in there, the current women's 190 lbs. champ. She hasn't fought a guy yet, I wish she would... Kent, I don't go as classic as some of you, the groups I opened for were 70's hard rockers, still pretty cool for me. I definitely am an Eagles fan, the group more than the NFLers, but the football team is very good too. If they don't win their division, what will you do, Steve? Our Browns are looking at a tough year... Incidentally, I grudgingly have to give the Lakers their fair credit. I'll now soak my hands in Listerine for typing that... the Golden Egg". The Funkadelic stuff is good too!

Tommy Morrison
Thad Spencer
Joe Bugner
Carl Williams
Gerrie Coetze
John Tate
Leotis Martin
Renaldo Snipes
Leon Spinks
Michael Spinks
Mac Foster
Hasim Rahman
Frank Bruno
Gerry Cooney
Oscar Bonavena
Greg Page
Henry Cooper
Doug Jones
Trevor Berbick Tony Tubbs
Karl Mildenberger
Nino Valdes
George Chuvalo
Buster Mathis
Buster Douglas Hurricane Jackson
David Tua
Oliver McCall
Wladimir Klitschko
John Ruiz
Chuck Wepner
Razor Ruddock
What do you guys think???

The list is pretty good! Maybe George Godfrey, Sam Mc Vey, Joe Jannette, Fred Fulton, Sam Langford, Peter Jackson, John Sullivan and Jake Kilrain would be noteworthy but they fought too much time ago, and not many people remember them. George Godfrey was a 6'3" ( 220/260 lbs ) mountain of muscles, as strong as Tyson or Liston. He survived four rounds against Primo Carnera... He was obstructed in his race to the title by racism, sadly.

Gerry Schultz
I admire you for giving Lakers credit. It shows how a nice guy you are. I remember a Kobe Bryant's quote two years ago: "...Have a nice time, enjoy your summer and remember, don't hate the Lakers... They can't be stopped! " He was right. Kobe, Shaq, Karl, Gary, Stanislav, Derek ( Bo ), Luke, Brian, Bryon, Jannero, Rick, Kareem, Jamal and Horace, as a Pisan I'm so proud of you. The legend goes on... Wilt, I'm sure ( almost sure ) that you too from the sky are rooting for the Lakers on your huge bed made of clouds!

Kobe Bryant lived for many years in Reggio Emilia, Italy. Kobe, sei grande quanto Michael Jordan! Almeno...

Evangelista, that must have been a tough cut, he was a hell of an athlete...

Leroy Caldwell isn't on the list. Geez, this thing must be fixed! Seriously, the field looks solid. The fun part will be the random draws to see who fights who--maybe luck of the draw will come up with some interesting matches we haven't even considered.

Chris Byrd belongs there more than Chuck Wepner. I would say James Toney belongs but he only has one fight at heavyweight so far.

What do you think of Ike Ibeabuchi? I think he was a nut, but very strong. He knocked out Chris Bird... in five in 1999. He looked like Sonny Liston, but was bigger. This tournament is gonna be as cool as hell! I can't wait, I can't wait! |
| 6/3/04 08:41:30 AM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com|10|What do you guys think of Oleg Maskaev getting in? He had some big wins and looked like a future champ until he lost his ability to take a punch. At his best before he lost it he could have beaten a lot of the guys on the list. |
| 6/3/04 08:46:18 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Massimo, Ibeabuchi had a lot of potential that likely he won't ever be able to use as he is in prison. Yes he did beat Byrd but overall Byrd has had a better career and Byrd deserves to be in the tournament more than a criminal who threw away his chance at a better life. If Ibeabuchi replaces someone, it would have to be someone else besides Byrd. |
| 6/3/04 09:09:38 AM|Charles Anderson|ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com|10|What do you guys think of Oleg Maskaev getting in? He had some big wins and looked like a future champ until he lost his ability to take a punch. At his best before he lost it he could have beaten a lot of the guys on the list. |
| 6/3/04 09:35:00 AM|Evren|Turkey||ctjjandfam@aol.com|10|I agree with Byrd over Wepner...not convinced my Maskaev...I think I'll change them two and do the first selection now. Evren |
| 6/3/04 09:49:16 AM|Jimmy Dorsey|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|10|Sonny Liston b Joe Bugner KO 6 |
| 6/3/04 10:33:34 AM|Evren|Turkey||ctjjandfam@aol.com|10|Hasim Rahman wins over Berbick by decision. His upset over Lewis and war with Corrie Sanders who he knocked out and fights against top guys in their prime. He already beat Berbick but Berbick was way over the hill by then. Hasim Rahman over Berbick by decision. |
| 6/3/04 12:31:52 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|Trevor Berbick b Hasim Rahman on points |
| 6/3/04 12:32:47 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|Trevor Berbick vs Hasim Rahman on points |
| 6/3/04 01:19:44 PM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com|10|Hasim Rahman wins over Berbick by decision. His upset over Lewis and war with Corrie Sanders who he knocked out and fights against top guys in their prime. He already beat Berbick but Berbick was way over the hill by then. Hasim Rahman over Berbick by decision. |
| 6/3/04 01:49:22 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Bugnar goes 9 grueling rounds with Liston, frustrates him a lot, even takes a couple rounds, but the Bear's big left jab brings this match to an ugly conclusion, too bad.
Bugnar got matched with a potential top 8 seed so early, Berbick, who might struggle with Bugnar, out works the bigger but slower Rahman. Rahman keeps trying to land the Bomb, the few times he does he cannot follow up. The guttier Berbick takes him the full 12, with Rahman tiring down the stretch. Liston and Berbick are my picks. Go Pistons!

Bugner did not have the punch to hurt Liston, and his only chance of a stoppage would be if his 'survive to arrive alive' tactics bored Sonny to death. Bugner lasted against Frazier and Ali, but Sonny's jolting jab was much harder and it would set up an early ending. Liston didn't have a long attention span (Attention Deficit Disorder ?) and he would press the attack until Bugner is on the ropes needing the ref to save him. Bugner's chin was dependable however, and for mine, it would be a tko (and not a ko) stoppage by 7 in Liston's favour. Berbick and Rahman is harder to predict. I think Rahman would eventually manage to land the big one, but only late in the fight when Berbick, despite a sizeable points lead, was tired, lazy, and punched-out. Rahman smashes home a roundhouse right late in round 11, KAPOW, and Berbick pirouettes twice on the way to the canvass. The gloved hand of the ref pulls out his mouthguard as the count reaches 10.

Evren, did I miss it, or isn't Jersey Joe Walcott's name on the list. Maybe instead of Hurricane Jackson. I know he's basically before Marciano, but he could give alot of these guys a helluva fight.

Evren, did you realise that you left Jack Johnson off the list? We can't leave him out.

Steve, not to worry the Eagles will be in the Superbowl this season as long as Brian Westbrook stays... healthy. Last night on the news they were talking of a big race between Westbrook and Smarty Jones. Everyone agreed they would need to give Smarty a big lead. My vote again, Rahmin w over Berbick by decision. I think Sonny would destroy Joe Bugner in 1 or two rounds. Fran, hanging the Eagles hopes on one guy staying healthy, Westbrook, is not very much depth. A good team would find a way to win without him, not to say the Eagles are not a good team. So they could still have a shot even if the bad news for you Eagle's fans comes and he gets hurt. An example of this is years ago when the Dolphins' starting quarterback, Bob Griese, was hurt most of the season and they still won with their back up quarterback, I can't remember his name. I think it was even the undefeated season, which still hasn't been equaled.

I just can't see anyone beating the Patriots, in either conference though. I would have to bet on the horse, over Westbrook, in a race. I saw two novelty races on television once, one between a giraff verses a man and the other between a zebra, which is similar in speed to a horse, verses the man. The man, a sprinter who I didn't know who he was, actually beat the Giraff in a 100 meter race with the man getting a headstart. The zebra, on the other hand, beat the man at least ten years after the man got his headstart. In all respect to the giraff, I don't think the animal knew it was in a race as I can't see a man beating a giraff either.

Sonny Liston vs Aussie, Hungarian, English Joe Bugner - A tougher fight for Liston in my opinion than many expect. Bugner had good size, speed and was used to a high level of competition - he also had a solid chin. Liston of course would be a strong favourite. I see the fight being competitive for three rounds then Liston starting to get closer and land hard clubbing rights that would bring 'Oooohh's' from the crowd. After taking heavy punishment Bugner would be rescued by the referee cut, bruised and battered but valiant in defeat. Liston TKO 8.

The second fight is much closer - I would have to lean slightly in favour of Berbick who when he was 'right' was a real handful with underestimated skill - in a close battle I take Berbick to win on points.

Where did Bugner get all the speed from, next thing about Bugner-all the sudden he hit hard! Evren do not get me wrong he was an accomplished heavyweight for sure, But i've never seen the man put together a combination against great competition which he was against, one post said how much faster he was than JQ-not in my life time! Jerry would have got inside Bugner and ate him up. Liston by 4th round TKO. also people have to remember just because guys like Bugner and Bonavena could go the distance vs Ali and Frazier has no bearing on beating other world class fighter's. I think Bobick would have beaten Bugner, And maybe even Bunny Johnson, Who was never given the chance. I ADMIRE JOE BUGNER for anything else his longevity, But I also saw him fight many times. Take Care.
out the brackets. Then in each bracket, #1 meets #16, #2 meets #15, #3 meets #14... and so forth. It's a way tournaments keep great teams/players from meeting too early, and keeping the expected true contenders in a given tournament, though there is always a chance for an 'upset'... Massimo, you crack me up, yes they will burn in hell, lol. Pistons have a very good defensive team, the Lakers should expect a strong workout. But they have no 300-pound answers for Shaq when the ref's not looking. Lakers in six. By the way, that big blue thing next to L.A. is not a lake, it's the Pacific Ocean. Tell someone on your team who can read an atlas to rename your Lakers, please. It's almost as bad as the Utah Jazz. Louis Armstrong was a mormon? Thanks again.

Massimo, you crack me up, yes they will burn in hell, lol. Pistons have a very good defensive team, the Lakers should expect a strong workout. But they have no 300-pound answers for Shaq when the ref's not looking. Lakers in six. By the way, that big blue thing next to L.A. is not a lake, it's the Pacific Ocean. Tell someone on your team who can read an atlas to rename your Lakers, please. It's almost as bad as the Utah Jazz. Louis Armstrong was a mormon? Thanks again.

Massimo, you crack me up, yes they will burn in hell, lol. Pistons have a very good defensive team, the Lakers should expect a strong workout. But they have no 300-pound answers for Shaq when the ref's not looking. Lakers in six. By the way, that big blue thing next to L.A. is not a lake, it's the Pacific Ocean. Tell someone on your team who can read an atlas to rename your Lakers, please. It's almost as bad as the Utah Jazz. Louis Armstrong was a mormon? Thanks again.

I don't know if ( UHMMM... Maybe weither )there are any lakes near Los Angeles, unfortunately I have never put my giant feet in the USA. But maybe you're right !They should be the Los Angeles Oceaners !

Larry Brown was supposed to have another shot at the Lakers in the championship with the 76ers game but... so he is back with another team. Its possible, he knows the mistakes he made in 2001. He is probably wishing he had the Awnser on this team though. |
Stars or the Coasters. Oddly named as they are, they still are the flagship of the NBA... You mention two of Cleveland's worst transactions with Paul Warfield and Jim Thome. The Browns, still contenders back then, traded Warfield, as good a WR as I've seen, for the rights to Mike Phipps, a fairly good QB but not even close in talent. Warfield made the very average Bob Griese look like a passer, opening further Miami's great ground game, led by Cleveland area natives Larry Czonka and coach Don Shula, a former Brown. Thome, the Indians all-time HR hitter, wanted a much longer contract than Cleveland's owner would pay. Though he is not young, he still crushes the ball. The Indians had a nice run in the 90s, now we watch the kids. I don't know Thome's shoe size, sorry.

| 6/5/04 02:57:01 PM| Angelo| Washington, DC| funktron@yahoo.com | 10|

Fran:I've always been a Pirates fan---so by default, I've followed the Phillies too (they used to slug it out for the NL East crown when there were just two divisions). Anyway, I grew up listening to Harry Kalas and Richie Ashburn broadcast the games, and even though I loved the Pirates, the Phillies had the best announcers in baseball. I think the best Phillies teams never made it to the World Series. They were the Danny Ozark teams of the late 70's. Remember when they beat out the Pirates in '77 and '78, but lost to the Dodgers in the NL Championship? Bob Boone, Larry Bowa, Mike Schmidt, Greg Luzinski, Garry Maddox, Bake McBride, Steve Carlton, Tommy Christenson---what an awesome lineup of all-stars. At the time, as a kid, I hated the Phillies because they were the Pirates rivals. But looking back, they were a superb team and should have gotten to the series. I remember one year, an umpire's bad call pushed the Dodgers into the series and the Phillies should have been there instead.

| 6/5/04 04:50:22 PM| Bob Bumbera| NC| renfbera@aol.com | 10|

Two snoozers. Liston wins an easy decision over Bugner. A Liston hook drops Joe in the fifth and a jab, actually a cuff, cuts Joe in the ninth. Bugner offered little resistance except for a quick jab that kept Sonny occupied and some exceptional clinching. Rahman over Berbick in 12. Another dance contest, a Rahman right drops Trevor in the tenth. A pretty close fight up until then. Berbick landing the better body blows, Rahman's jab more active. Berbick did little after the knockdown.

| 6/5/04 07:38:00 PM| Steve| N.J.| dmmsrm@comcast.net | 10|

All NFL predictions are difficult at the beginning of the season. The major factor is always injuries. However, the top teams have always seemed to acquire depth to offset injuries. The Eagles reached the NFC title game last year without Westbrook, and their entire defensive line. Geez, Kent, I can't imagine any one butting heads with you over football! Even though your obviously a broken and bitter fan because of the Rams, I would still be interested in your top five power rankings in the NFL when you post them. Where do you post them at? I still cannot believe you don't know who Billy Horner and Franky Ford are. You know, you may still feel free to insult me on any subject we are discussing, as you always have in the past. Except my spelling.

| 6/5/04 11:11:20 PM| KOOKOO| NY| kookooclock00@yahoo.com | 10|

Hey Massimo, I see that the Italians are laying down in the streets in your country in protest of the war. Those losers have NO GUTS, America saved their ass' and this is that thanks they get. While you fools are talking basketball (SPORTS a Blackman's only chance in life) this country is under attack from within. That's what most Americans don't understand. We need to chase the Liberal scum out of this country, they're bringing us down along with God knows what plans Muslims have HINT: destroying us!! I'll tell you the KKK got's some good ideas as far as I'm concerned. I'm very close to joining.

| 6/5/04 11:30:35 PM| Kent|La Habra, Ca| Kentallenent@aol.com | 10|

Steve, but if for example next football season the Patriots are 2-1 after three weeks and all of the games are close and I don't rank them number one, my friend from Boston will complain to me that they should be number one because they are the best team. That is the way hard core fans of a particular team are.
say there was no way, for example, the Eagles, if they are 3-0 after three weeks should be ranked above the Patriots. But in my rankings what a team did last season has no bearing on my weekly rankings in a new season. |

| 6/6/04 12:14:58 AM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | ||| | 10 | Hey Kent, you do realize I'm just kidding around with you, don't you? I'm still interested in your top five picks, in three week interims, statistically and as far as a power ranking goes. Just post it here! Did you watch De La Hoya get a gift tonight? |

| 6/6/04 12:21:15 AM | kookoo | ny | kookooclock | ||| | 10 | THANKS FOR PROVING MY POINT, SOUND ASLEEP |

| 6/6/04 01:24:14 AM | G-Man | Over here | there | ||| | 10 | That obviously isn't Koo Koo posting those comments. Someone is pretending to be him trying to get something started.

| 6/6/04 02:54:43 AM | Steve | NJ | dmmsrm@comcast.net | ||| | 10 | Kent, this should tell you how slow I am on the uptake. I just reread your post where you use some lyrics from the song, "Hotel Calif.", by the Eagles musical group. Do you know what group sang these lyrics? "'I've been searching so long, to find an answer, now I know my life has meaning'"? Was it the Eagles or the Beach Boys? |

| 6/6/04 05:56:26 AM | Kent | La Habra, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | ||| | 10 | Steve those lyrics are from a song by the group Chicago. I don't remember the actual name of the song though. The Eagles' lyrics I quoted are from the song Take it Easy. My NFL rankings are weekly after the third week of play. My example of the hard core biased fan is if the Patriots are 2-1 after the third week and say the only loss was a close game and say a penalty cost them the loss, my buddy would probably say something like, "they called clipping on our guy but he didn't even touch him, so the refs cost us the game. The refs favored the other team". He would also say his team is still the best. How many times have you heard fans of a particular team say something just like that after a tough loss? My rational rankings get some flak from people just like him a lot of the time. I PROMISE TO RETURN TO BOXING TOPICS. JUST WAITING FOR THE NEXT BOUTS OF THE TOURNEY. |

| 6/6/04 06:44:04 AM | Evren | Turkey | at@city.com | ||| | 5 | Okay – Liston and Rahman go through – the next two bouts in the tournament are: – Michael Spinks vs Mike Weaver Wladimir Klitschko vs George Chuvalo |

| 6/6/04 12:35:00 PM | Anti KKK | Places | at@city.com | ||| | 5 | The KKK is perfect for KooKoo. A bunch of angry failures. |

| 6/6/04 02:22:04 PM | Kent | La Habra, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | ||| | 10 | Both of these new bouts feature come from behind victories. Michael Spinks boxes well for five rounds and is ahead on all of the cards when he runs into a tremendous right uppercut from Mike Weaver, which puts Spinks down and out for the count. The winner, Mike Weaver by sixth round knockout. George Chuvalo takes a tremendous beating for seven rounds and he is hit with every punch in the book by Wladimir Klitschko. Chuvalo is still standing but his eyes are swelling badly and he has cut a whole over his right eye, courtesy of the long left jab of Klitschko. The referee tells the Chuvalo corner that he is only going to give Chuvalo one more round to turn things around or he going to stop the fight. Chuvalo comes out desperately in the eighth round and he hurts K with a series of left/right body shots. Klitschko tries to hold on but he is met with a hard left hook that wobbles him badly. Chuvalo jumps on him and lands a hard right to the head that puts K down for an eight count. K rises but is met by a barrage of punches that has him staggering around the ring and the referee jumps in and awards the bout to Chuvalo by eighth round TKO. Unlike Chuvalo's win over our JQ, there is no doubt that Klitschko cannot continue as he is out on his feet at the time of the stoppage. |

| 6/6/04 04:28:40 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | ||| | 10 | I do think that this war is right! I like America very much and I always did. Those guys are not the ITALIANS, are a small part of the Italians. The problem is that they make a lot of noise. Michael Spinks b Mike Weaver on points
| 04:34:58 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 |
Weaver over Spinks, late round TKO and Klitschko over Chuvalo by close but clear decision.
| 06:14:53 PM | Gerry Schultz | Cleveland | same | 9 |
Ignorance rears it's ugly head again, this time pointed at blacks and Italy, don't take it seriously ...
"Searching So Long" is the Chicago song, it's also on their first greatest hits, which I recommend.

| 08:49:46 PM | Gerry | Cleveland, remember Nate Thurmond? | same | 10 |
I agree with Angelo reading the late 70's Phils, what a group. I especially liked Schmidt, Boone, Maddox and McGraw. Along with the great Orioles teams of the late 60's, those Phils were my favorites... Micheal Spinks, a champion who might be a great pick in a 200 pound tournament along with Jerry and others, easily outboxes Mike Weaver who tries vainly to land the Big One. Spinks by decision, winning at least seven rounds. Chuvalo- Klitschko is a barnburner that keeps the crowd on it's feet throughout. Both men nearly win by KO in round 1, taking turns with big tags and knockdowns. Draw rounds are numerous, with Chuvalo pressing the Ukrainian giant, who turns to jabbing and using his height/reach. Both men bleed and get ugly, but the middle rounds have Klitschko, today's best heavy, gaining control with his jab. Chuvalo doesn't know the meaning of quit, but Klitschko drops Chuvalo for the third time in the 10th. Though Chuvalo can still go, the ref takes one look at his battered face and stops it, TKO 10 for Klitschko. The ref actually puts on a windbreaker in Round 5 to keep both fighters from bleeding on him. What a match! Sorry, I don't know Klitschko's shoe size. A tough draw for Chuvalo.

| 03:25:17 AM | Evren | Turkey | @ | 10 |
Gerry - you say that Wlad Klitschko is the best heavy out there today - do you think he is better than Vitali?|
| 08:57:23 AM | Fran | Philly | PLC7755@aol.com | 10 |
The Phils of 76 77 78 were a great team that started forming in the early 70's. After 3 seasons of getting knocked off in the playoffs they needed to get the great Pete Rose who taught them how to win everything. He was a big influence on the team. The 1980 team was most of the same guys they had during the 70's. I have to admit though the 1993 Phillies were the most exciting team I have ever seen even more exciting than the big Red machine of 76. So we have had 3 straight seassons of second best before and maybe the Eagles will take it with the Addition of Davis......
Klitscko can be beaten and still has the stamina of an amatuer but Chuvalo doesn't have any way of ducking or avoiding Klitscko's punches. Klitscko wins easy on a TKO in 5. Target practice.
Mike Spinks was a great fighter at lightevy and could probably beat some heavyweights but not the original Iron Mike Weaver. To strong for a Light heavy. Weaver rocks Spinks throughout the fight but Spinks hangs on to lose a decision.

| 09:03:20 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |
Gerry, Wladimir K the best heavy out there today - do you think he is better than Vitali? He has been knocked out twice in the last year. I think there may have been something medically wrong with him to tire as badly as he did only after five rounds against Lamon Brewster. But that doesn't make up for the fact that every time Brewster, and Corrie Sanders before him, hit him with hard shots, he folded up like a card table, the man cannot take a punch and that is a seperate issue from his stamina problem. The man has excellent offensive skills and he probably could win a lot of fights with his height alone if he boxed from the outside and didn't brawl, which he has a tendency to do, all offense and not enough defense.
Wladimir K. is the best heavy out there based on what? Sure he had a win over Chris Byrd but that was over three years ago and the times he has had to face adversity in the ring, against Ross Purirty earlier in his career, against Sanders last year, and recently against Brewster, he failed each time. You can't say Wladimir is the best because of his potential as he is no longer a young prospect. He is coming into what should be his prime and it is time to deliver on his potential, which he hasn't done.I would actually compare Wladimir to Duane Bobick. Remember Bobick did well beating up on fringe contenders such as Scott LeDoux and Chuck Wepner and often looking fantastic in doing so, sound familiar? But when Bobick tried to step up to the next level, he was exposed as having no defense and also having no chin by Ken Norton, John Tate, and others. People dismiss Bobick nowadays as being all hype and not enough skill but going into the Norton fight, he was 38-0 and this was after a great amateur career in which he beat Teofelio Stevenson and Larry Holmes. A lot of people were saying he was likely the next great heavyweight, again, sound familiar?Gerry, you often make informed statements on boxing but you missed the boat on this one buddy!

| 6/7/04 10:01:31 AM | Massimo "skyscraper" Cini | Roma, remember Enrico Fermi? | lakers 0 pistons 1 SOB! | 10|34/11.MDE. Was Wilt a professional? |
| 6/7/04 11:14:36 AM | Gerry Schultz | Cleveland, not Roma | same | 10|Sorry, it would seem I was referring to the wrong Klitschko, I thought you meant Vitali. I would take Chuvalo by devastating KO over the other one and his glass chin. Sorry, my bad! I just have to keep my Klitschkos straight. |
| 6/7/04 01:52:57 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | Funktron@yahoo.com | 10|Fran: Good point on the Phillies---they were a very talented team that couldn't move to the next level until Rose got there and showed them how to do it. Schmidt had a great relationship with Rose and to a large extent, I think Rose helped Schmidt to relax and not worry about carrying the team on his back. Rose also demonstrated a desire that the team didn't have before he got there---and the team stepped it up a notch to win a championship. Yes, Rose was the catalyst for the success. It didn't hurt to have Dallas Greene as the skipper either---another guy who knew how to get the job done without stressing out. | Kent: Good points on Bobick. I still think he was a decent heavyweight who got in over his head against Norton. He never got in the rhythm of the fight because he was hanging on for his life in the first half minute. He didn't put a glove on Norton and in this case, Norton's offense was his best defense. If Norton had been less aggressive and the first round was a feeling out process, like so many of these fights are, Bobick could have banged with him a little. Instead, he got his head taken off. I thought it was a fluke for Bobick, until Tate did the same thing to him. Hey, Norton vs. Tate might have been a good one! |
| 6/7/04 03:24:24 PM | Fran | Philly | Plc7755@aol.com | 10|I saw Bobick in the amateurs and he was fast and had some bounce in his feet. He was good but I never saw that same movement or hand eye co-ordination after Stevenson in the Olympics. He seemed ordinary and just plodding making money off of his amateur career. No zip and of course Philly gym wars didn't help. |
| 6/7/04 03:55:53 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | Kentallenent@aol.com | 10|I was just comparing Bobick and his rise up the ratings ladder to W. Klitschko. Both showed good offensive skills that were offset by poor chins. Bobick had poorer defensive skills than W.K. but W.K. has worse defense than a lot of people thought he had. Kent and Gerry, thanks for the info on the group,"Chicago".I love that song, but somehow got it confused with the Eagles and Beach Boys. I am, after all, a grandpop. Mike Weaver at his peak was better than Holmes was when he fought Spinks. Weaver gets out boxed for about three rounds, then TKO'S Spinks in the fourth round. I don't remember Chuvalo standing up well to anyone with a good, stiff jab and alot of power. Remember his fights with Forman and Frazier. I think Klitschko's power was at least pretty close to those guys. C'mon, guys, Chuvalo caught every punch ever thrown at him. Fifth round stoppage on Chuvalo's cut or closed eyes. |
| 6/7/04 04:48:06 PM | steve | NJ | drmrsrm@comcast.net | 10|In all fairness to George Chuvalo, I have heard him speak on the radio. He has a rapid fire, very articulate speech pattern. Not even one slurred word! He kind of reminds me of Bobby Chyze! I know that Bobby chyze has an I.Q. that is of the charts. Maybe Chavulo does too.

On Chuvalo—I have seen a synthesis of his first fight with an in prime Muhammed Ali and he gave him a very tough fight. Ali' won clearly on points but Chuvalo's were maybe the hardest punches.

He fought toe to toe with the likes of Bonavena, Terrell and Patterson and maybe got robbed in some of these fights. He beat somehow Jerry Quarry also. He knocked out Doug Jones. It's strange that a guy who fought so well against the best in the division had so many losses in his record. Asked who were the three hardest punchers he had ever fought in his career, he said: George Foreman, Mel Turnbow (a journeyman with a very dangerous punch) and Mike De John. He added: Mike De John was a real good banger.

He didn't mention neither Ali' and Frazier.

Klitschko over Chuvalo in 12. George knocks Vladdy down in the 8th round with a hook to the body and it looks like big "K" is through, but Klitschko comes back behind his jab in round 9 & 10. George continues to bang to the body but is missing wildly to the head. Klitschko hangs on with his jab to win a split decision. Both men are cut and look exhausted at the end. Spinks wins a decision over Weaver. Spinks at 203 out boxes Weaver at 208 to win 8 rounds to 4. neither man was in serious trouble during the bout, the plodding Weaver couldn't find a way to get past the Spinks jab to do any real damage.

Sorry, I will never admit Chuvalo beat Quarry, but I do still consider him one my favorite heavies. Chuvalo does have a website against drug use, which is worth a look. Against Ali, he notes he went dancing with his wife after the fight. Ali reportedly went to the hospital... Wilt was a professional athlete and businessman, is that the question? Kareem was 7'3" reportedly, Wilt said he was a shade shorter than Kareem, which most agree with. Shaq is listed at 7'1", but the truth about all three is anyone's guess. Three giant legends, anyway you measure them. The Lakers paid them all very handsomely for their time. You can add George Mikan to that list too.

I was only joking with the fact that Wilt looked an amateur in comparison with Shaq. Shaq has been really devastating in game 1, when he is motivated and focused, nobody can stop him. He can't win the games by himself, tough. He shook hands with Kareem before game 1 with the Pistons and didn't look shorter than him. I know people who would look short beside Jabbar.

I pick Klitschko to eek out a decision over Chuvalo after faltering..but hanging on in the last. I also pick Spinks over Weaver by 8-4 decision. Next two fights tomorrow.

Picking Spinks over Weaver by 8-4 decision. Next two fights tomorrow.

Is Oscar de la Hoya going to handle Bernard Hopkins, if they actually have the fight? I have my doubts. How many of you were glad to see Roy Jones, Jr. K.Oed? I don't like fighters who clown around, with the exception of Ali.

Where is schoolmarm or whatever her name is, the woman who liked Frazier as her all-time best?
those Russian heavyweights can fight his way out of a paper bag. You need to be desperate to become a fighter. It's not something you can learn in a nice, clean, well-lit gym.Great site. Who remembers Amos ("Big Train") Lincoln and King Fletcher?How's Little Red Lopez doing these days? Mando Ramos? Joey Orbillo? Great guys.I have never seen Wilt and Bill play. Amongthe pivots I have seen Shaq is second onlyto Warren!PS: it's not right that I have never seen Bill play. I have seen Bill play against Warren once.Angelo, Bill Russell made a guest appearance on the television show the White Shadow. One of the scenes shows Russell playing one on one against the actor who played Coolidge. Bill got humiliated by Warren in a episode of the White Shadow. Warren complained with Ken Reeves he was too tall and then Ken did organize a meeting with Bill Russell, to show him that there were humans taller than him. Watching Bill and Warren play one against the other everyone have thought: "God, Warren should have played against Chamberlain, not Bill !! ". Wilt has been lucky that Warren was too young at the time.Congratulations for your Italian ! You know Italian better than Giacomo Leopardi did. It's true: "massimo" means "greatest" in Italian !Instead "primo" means "the first ". Sometimes, when my friends want to make fun of me, they call me "Minimo", that means "the least". Hagler was one of the top middleweights of the era but was beaten by 2 Philly middleweights Boogaloo and the Worm and they were not as good as Bad Bennie and Cyclone (before he fell on his head in the Denny Moyer fight). Hagler vrs Jones would have been a good one. Jones did beat some great fighters but made it look too easy.

Angelo Washington, DC
funktron@yahoo.com

01:09:10 PM

Fran: What "great" fighters did Jones beat? I think he beat some good ones, but maybe not great ones.

Kent La Habra, Ca
kentallenent@aol.com

01:29:11 PM

Sorry Massimo, but the way I remember the White Shadow program that Bill Russell appeared on, Russell was having an easy time with Warren Coolidge. Basketball fans, remember the all time fifty greatest NBA players list from about five or six years ago? Bill Walton was on that list but he doesn't deserve to be one of the top fifty because he spent most of his professional career injured. Sure he could have been one of the greatest centers to ever play in the NBA, as he was one of the greatest to play college basketball but in the NBA, he only had about three good seasons. He had brittle bones in his feet and this kept him on the injured list for much of his career. We can't go by potential in naming one of the all time greats and three good seasons is not enough.

If I remember correctly, Artis Gilmore, who played for San Antonio and Chicago as well as having some great seasons in the ABA before this, was not on the top fifty list and he should have been in Walton's place. Gilmore played about eighteen seasons as a professional and he was just a slight step below in the skills level to the very best all time centers such as Wilt, Shaq, Kareem, Akeem, Bill R, etc.

Angelo Washington, DC
funktron@yahoo.com

01:45:49 PM

Kent: Was Dave Cowens on the list? Walton did have a resurgence later in his career, being a good sixth man in Boston and winning another title. He was one of the few who could match up decently against Jabbar.

Also, was Walter Davis of the Phoenix Suns on that list? The Suns never won the Championship, but Davis was a great player. Remember Alvin Adams and Garfield Heard? The Suns had some very good teams back in the 70's.

Gerry Cleveland

02:49:05 PM

I disagree regarding boxers or anyone else from different eras, they can be compared. The key is not to hold them up head-to-head, the newer guy who benefits from the advancements almost always wins. All a star athlete can do is dominate his era, so compare that. Someday, someone will bag on Shaq, saying he was just a fat guy who banged people, that he had few real skills and beat few real centers. Like Larry Holmes, you can't completely hold his era against him, he deserves his fair credit. He's still top 10 on my list... Kent, gotta disagree on Walton. The guy was healthy for five minutes and was MVP while winning the NBA title, he also had great stats. A healthy Walton would probably have won three titles, being MVP each time. Also, consider the words of those who saw him or played against him. If Jabbar and Russell consider him a peer, that's good enough for me. Not only is he top 50, he's top five among centers, maybe top 12 among all players. Thanks.

Steve NJ
drmsrm@comcast.net

02:52:55 PM

Fran, I think some of the all time great, strong, natural light heavies are being forgotten with all the praise for Roy Jones Jr. What's with all this pound-for-pound greatest crap. Is that to make up for the fact that there are 5 or 6 title holders in every weight division? I'd have liked to have seen Jones fight Hagler or Monzon as a middleweight. Matthew Saad Muhammed or Dwight [The Camden Buzzsaw] Braxton, as a lightheavy. Surely these guys from the past would have given him better fights than the thin talent he walked through most of his career. What about Bob Foster? Even though Bob Foster couldn't win at heavyweight, he did at least pick on Joe Frazeir, Ali, Ernie Terril, and Doug Jones. Not John Cruiz, whom I don't even consider a professional fighter! How do you think Roy would have done against Ali or Frazier?

Steve NJ
drmsrm@comcast.net

03:11:08 PM

If you want to name the all time greatest in a weight div., at least going back a reasonable amount of time. I mean, you know, while there at least viewable tape of them. I't Roberto Duran at lightweight.

| 6/9/04 03:18:15 PM | Evren | Turkey | []|10| So the results from the last round: -
| 6/9/04 04:57:30 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | []|10| Pinklon Thomas -

Wlad Klitschko goes through against Chuvalo - 5 votes to 3. The Spinks - Weaver match is a draw so they are back in the pot! Next two matches are -

Zora Folley vs Pinklon Thomas -

Rocky Marciano vs Tony Tubbs -

Marciano by decision in a rather uneventful fight. Folley would be physically overmatched.

Marciano by 7th round technical knockout over Tubbs. Marciano would be a human buzz saw, with a body attack that would cause Tubbs to lower his guard, exposing him to repeated blows to the head. Referee would stop it late in round 7.

| 6/9/04 05:51:33 PM | Abe McGruff | Pattaya Beach, Thailand | []|10| Cruising around the web and I read Ed being unkind to Roy Jones. Sports fans are hard to please, aren't we. We boo boring boxers, boo conservative boxers, boo boxers too cautious in selecting opponents, boo boxers who hide behind a jab, boo boxers who won't take chances, boo boxers who rape and do drugs, boo boxers who make excuses, boo, boo, boo, etc. Then along comes a guy with charisma, flamboyance, he isn't a rapist or drug taker, he entertains by clowning around, fights anyone, he's prepared to move up divisions to fight, and we boo boo boo him too. Why don't we just accept that Jones was probably the exceptional fighter of his time and stop booing him? He chased fights with big guys and small ones. Maybe he wouldn't have beat Foster or Monzon or Hagler or whoever. But no one can give a slam dunk case that he couldn't. Ed you're a swell guy, so give Roy his dues and respect him and don't boo him. Jones was a gracious loser, too. He didn't make excuses after he got knocked out. The 'tall poppy syndrome' is alive and kicking when we boo great fighters like Jones. Keep this great site going guys. Regards from Abe.

| 6/9/04 05:53:47 PM | Evren | Turkey | []|10| I agree - Jones was and is an amazing boxer who has it all. However..he did fail a steroids test once..so he is a drug taker of sorts.

| 6/9/04 06:52:23 PM | Abe McGruff | Pattaya Beach, Thailand | []|10| There you go, I learn something every day. Over here we don't get all the news, and I didn't know, or had forgotten, that Jones failed a steroid test. He's gone down a peg in my estimation. Calls into question lots about him. Was he juiced up in those other fights. I really hope not. Thanks for correcting me Evren. You seem to be the go to guy around here. Some of those names on Ed's list I know, some I don't. Can't recall anyone by the name of schoolmarm though, Ed, maybe he was a wrestler and that was his stage name. Marm sounds a bit girlie. Sounds like a wacko. Guessing from those other names, Ed, that you go back a long way. You've seen a bunch of fights and great fighters. Best wishes from Abe McGruff.

| 6/9/04 08:01:37 PM | Steve | N'J. | []|10| Fran, I remember the night Eugene cyclone Hart and Denny Moyer fell out of the ring together. What really happened was that Denny Moyer was a master boxer, mover. Hart always fought like a crazy man. He charged straight ahead, no side to side, no circling movements. He gave you no angles. Moyer could not get out of his way. He had amazing power, especially the hook. The night I moved into my house, this was Jan, 1977, we went up on the roof, and hooked up the antenna. We watched on a thirteen inch screen. We watched Vito Antufermo as he spun cyclone around, counterpunched him into a, I think it was a fifth round knockout.

| 6/9/04 08:05:49 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | []|10| Angelo, yes Dave Cowens was on the top fifty list. Angelo and Gerry, I will use the example of Vitali Klitschko in boxing and compare him to Walton's situation. Say that Vitali defends his title three times but is injured, a shoulder injury that forces him to retire after the third defense. He looks great in those defenses. Does Vitali deserve to be among the greatest heavyweights of all time based on those performances? I would say no he doesn't, even if those three fights unify the heavyweight title. Walton doesn't either in his sport as three good seasons just isn't enough. As I said before, he should have been if he hadn't been injured, as he did have the skills of an all time great during the times in between his many injuries. The fact is though, Walton was injured for most of his career and he never fulfilled his potential. | 6/9/04 08:18:40 PM| Kent
| La Habra, Ca| | kentallenent@aol.com| || 10 | Quick comment on Roy Jones Jr. Jones got caught with a good punch, from Tarver. This can happen to any fighter. Remember, Jones won the first fight, a close but to me clear cut decision. Tarver won some rounds by big margins but the truth is he gave away too many rounds by not letting his hands go.

The one loss to Tarver doesn't diminish his earlier acheivements and like Lennox Lewis among the heavyweights, who was knocked out twice in his career, Jones belongs somewhere in the top twenty of all time, minimum, among lt. heavys. | 6/9/04 08:57:25 PM| steve | NJ| | dmmsrm@comcast.net| || 10 | Hey Ed, no one is trying to demean Roy Jones. Fact is, on this site we try to look more at the historical point of view. A lot of guys on this site just don't think he really established himself by fighting any really great competition. I think the lady your referring to called herself Rhoadschollarate. I don't think her skin was thick enough to stick around here. She started drawing some pretty nasty attacks. | 6/9/04 09:22:53 PM| steve | NJ| | dmmsrm@comcast.net| || 10 | Kent, I don't understand your last post. Do you feel Jones's should be considered among the top twenty of lichteavy's, or heavyweights? Based on what previous accomplishments? Lennox Lewis got flattened, ko'd by two mediocre fighters. What other top twenty heavyweights has that happened to?| 6/9/04 10:06:26 PM| Gerry | Cleveland| | same| || 10 | Roy Jones get high marks in my book, roids or not. The guy has been a first-rate fighter. People have jumped him now that he is down, to me, it doesn't change what he has done or how good he has been. Monzon and Hagler are also among the best I've seen, but these all-time fights are good for discussion and not much more. At the end, it comes down to tastes... Kent you make some good points on Walton, but to me, there's not minimums, just what you can do. Walton led the NBA in rebounds, blocks and FG% all in the same season AND won a title. He beat Jabbar head-to-head in the playoffs. Who else has done that, even if they play 20 years? Very few, that's why he belongs. Ask John Wooden what he thinks. In his brief run, Walton showed me and others plenty... I agree with Angelo almost verbatim on Marciano and the Pink Man. No offense to Zora Folley, who was a top guy in the early 60's. Rocco would give Tubbs, a very good boxer, a gutcheck he'd never forget. Thanks. | 6/10/04 04:01:34 AM| Evren | Turkey| |@| || 10 | Marciano would be a good fight - Tubbs would hold his own for a while and do his best to win... however...the irrespressible Marciano would push and spit and snarl 'till Tubbs could take no more body shots and fall in round 10... the fight was close until then. Folley vs Thomas is one of the hardest fights that I could judge on - both were excellent boxers, both had a decent dig but I think the factor would come down to chin and Folley was lacking in that department (certainly less than Pink) Thomas by 8th round KO. | 6/10/04 04:29:49 AM| Kent| La Habra, Ca| | kentallenent@aol.com| || 10 | Steve, Jones would be on my top twenty list for Lt. heavyweights. It is not his fault that the division has been relatively weak in recent times. I rank him up there because he has excellent boxing skills and we can't take that away from him because he got caught with a good punch once. He has beaten everyone they put in front of him, including his first fight with Tarver. There was some talk that he was avoiding the German, Dariusz Michalchewski but I think this was politics among the promoters more than anything else why they never fought. Michalchewski has been a good fighter and in addition to holding the WBA and IBF belts, he defended the WBO belt many times. That said, Michalchewski would not have been able to cope with Jones' speed if the two of them fought. Lewis did avenge both of his losses in return bouts and although he never fought in prime versions of Tyson, Bowe, and Holyfield, I don't think I could come up with more than twenty heavies of all time who could beat him at his best. In reference to Jones, I was comparing that a lot of people rank Lewis high among heavies and that Jones, who has never been knocked out only once, should occupy a similar position among Lt. heavies. It would be hard to come up with more than twenty Lt. heavies of any era who could beat Jones at his best. So both Lewis and Jones deserve to be at least number twenty in their respective divisions.

Zora Folley has many old school tricks, moves and in tip top condition as he beats Thomas by decision.

Rocky Marciano b Pinklon Thomas on points, even if Tony Tubbs KO 4, even if Tony was a good fighter. It's not true that Shaq has few basketball skills. He can pass the ball VERY WELL, has a great hook and where in hell have you seen a 340 guy that quick? The only thing he can't do is free throws (neither Wilt could ) and shooting. Shooting is not that important in basketball. Yao Ming maybe will be one day better than Shaq. This guy is really tall! Warren ain't nothing in comparison...

Thomas over Folley in 8. Marciano in 10 over Tubbs.

Folley out hustles Thomas by getting inside Pinky's long left jab with his speed to gain a decision win. Tubbs does well for a few rounds but Marciano's body attack wears him out, setting Tubbs up for a knockout-Rocky by KO-8.

Massimo, I give Shaq his due. He clearly is one of the best centers ever. He simply is such an imposing athlete that he has not considered skill development necessary to his game, and who can blame him? It has carried him a very long way. Wilt, Alcindor and Walton all had very good coaching and came from an era that demanded skill development regardless of athletic talent. Russell was just plain blessed with Red Auerbach. I agree, Shaq is a good passer, and has some very good moves near the basket, a lot like Olajuwon used to have. Given how well he dominates today's centers, and his ring collection, it's hard to ask this guy to up his game, why should he? He clearly is an all-time great and has been amazing at times to watch. Thanks... and Go Pistons.
The Detroit Pistons are kicking our asses! Gary Payton has forgot how to play, Shaq is tired, Malone is injured and Kobe is in trouble with the law... What a team the Lakers are! But the ring will be ours eventually!

What do you think guys of Karl Mildenberger? He showed some decent skills against Bonavena and gave Ali' a good fight!

The Lakers can come back as a lot of teams have come back from being down 2 games to 1. The championship series is far from over.

Of course, I meant to say the Lakers played poorly, not purely. Must have still been in La La La land, not to be confused with LA land, which I live close to, when I posted. Mildenburger was a good fighter and yes he was one of Ali's toughest defenses. Ali seemed to bring the best out of a lot of fighters because if they fought their career best fight, they might have a chance at an upset, a big boost to anyone's career.

Marciano goes thru easily. I will draw 3 fights today to speed up the process. Buster Mathis vs Mac Foster. Frank Bruno vs Tommy Morrison. Michael Spinks vs Doug Jones.

Tough Fights to pick....

Michael Spinks b Doug Jones on points

Doug Jones decisions M.Spinks. Buster Mathis out speeds Foster also by decision. Tommy Morrison by upset 10-count 3rd round knockout! over Bruno who had a vast ticker problem. Take Care.

The one fighter on here that has never gotten hid due respect is Buster Mathis. He was very quick and talented in his short peak. I don't know what happened in the Quarry fight, but Buster was a high quality fighter. The Frazier-Mathis fight is kind of a lost classic. Buster gave Joe all he could handle before finally being worn down. Mathis Dec Foster Bruno KO 6 Morrison Spinks Dec Jones quite easily.

Couldn't agree more about Mathis - a really good fighter who lost but 4 times to the best - Ali, Frazier, Quarry and Lyle. I pick him to win a close decision over Mac Foster. Bruno would stop Morrison in a tough battle and Spink vs Jones is close for me but Spinks wouldn't be fighting a bigger man here - Spinks by decision.

Just to add may two cents again, Karl Mildenberger is a guy who may have gotten lost in all the talent of This era, a very good heavy in my opinion. Kent, you certainly put out some very good posts, I think you won me over on the retirement issue, but I'll stick with the pro-Walton camp for reasons given. His play versus Philly's stars was legendary. I consider him the top white center also, not that that was why he was good or was why he wasn't the best. He was very, very good for any center, as was Dave Cowens, though I do not consider him top Ten like Walton. Given Larry Bird's recent talk, I did have to clarify... Micheal Spinks by late KO over Doug Jones. Frank Bruno tries to get Tommy Morrison early, winning the early rounds, but Morrison, who beat better guys, takes the late end and pounds out a close decision. Thanks. |

|6/12/04 04:39:21 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same again||||10|Sorry, missed one. Mathis outboxes Mac Foster for eight rounds, then WHAM! Foster finds him and puts him down. Somehow, Mathis survives the round and Foster for a wobbly but clear decision. Thanks yet again.|

|6/12/04 07:59:26 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com||||10|Evren, I had to look back at your post to see what you were talking about, I think we were right on the money with our predictions! In the next three, Mathis wins an easy decision over Foster. Foster too hard for a KO, Big Buster avoids most of the hard leather with speedy counters. Spinks decisions Jones in a fight for pure boxing fans, even most of the way, the stronger Spinks pulls away in the scoring in the last two frames. Morrison wins a split decision over Bruno by virtue of a 11 round knockout, again another back and fourth battle that could have gone either way before the knockdown. |

|6/12/04 08:03:41 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com||||10|Hey guy's do the rules allow for split decissions or do we want to go for clear cut scores?|

|6/12/04 09:04:58 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Bob, in our last tourney we allowed split verdicts but if everyone wants to change it, I can change my vote to Mathis by close but unanimous decision. I feel split verdicts and draws for that matter, as sometimes we just can't decide who is better, are part of real boxing and should be part of our imaginary tournament as well. I will go by whatever the majority wants to do on this.|

|6/13/04 06:59:45 AM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|I catch a great show about Joe Louis on showtime. I'm showed his fight with Billy Conn. Suprisingly, Conn looked almost as big as Louis at the weigh in. Even in the ring, he looked almost as big. They only showed parts of few rounds, but Conn was beating Louis to the punch constantly, and actually staggered him at one point in the 12th round. He told his corner he thought he could knock Louis out! They begged him to just stay away and box, as they thought he was ahead on all cards. Instead, he went out and slammed toe to toe and suffered one of the most brutal knockouts I've ever seen. When asked after the fight why he changed strategy, He answered, "what's the sense of being Irish if you can't be stupid"? I thought that was one of the funniest lines I've ever heard from a fighter. Please don't anyone take offense. I'm only second generation Irish American myself. Spinks by decision in a pretty good fight where Jones knocks him down in the first and third round. I think Mac Foster would spear Mathis with that straight right and KO him with his best weapon, a left hook, in the tenth round. Mathis may have given Frazier a good fight, until he collapsed, but styles make fights. I have to admit I haven't seen Bruno in any fights, except for him getting clobbered by Tyson, so I'm picking Morrison by decision. |

|6/13/04 07:12:20 AM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|I agree that split decisions and draws are a very real part of real life boxing and should be included in the tournament. They could allways be brought back for a rematch. I leave it up to Evren to decide, since he's doing all the work.|
Kent, the question of twelve or fifteen rounds is a hard one to figure out. Since a lot of later era bouts might have gone differently with those three extra rounds. It really makes stamina much more of a factor in deciding matchups.

I do think that 15 rounds are too many in boxing! Twelve rounds are enough! Many tragedies in the ring would have been avoided simply by following this golden rule!

Massimo, congratulations! You're starting to acquire a Jersey accent! Have you been watching the Sopranos? I agree with you, fifteen rounds is pretty brutal.

Hey Massimo, congratulations! Your starting to acquire a Jersey accent! Have you been watching the Sopranos? I agree with you, fifteen rounds is pretty brutal.

Hey Massimo, my Italian wife wants to know who you think makes the best gravy, the calabrese or you guys up north. Be careful how you answer. My wife wears a size thirteen shoe.

What we decided on from the beginning was that we would move to 15 rounders from the quarter finals on. I am not sure what you guys mean by split decision — do you mean that if a fight is voted 4-4 then one of us decides who wins as a 'split decision' but based on what?

If a 36/20 Shaq is not enough, we have to buy Coolidge. He was born in 1956, so he ain't much older than Malone. What's Coolidge's shoe size? That's the million dollar question!

Spinks, Mathis and Morrison move on. Spinks by tough but clear decision, Mathis by decision and Morrison by TKO in the middle rounds.

Spinks by tough but clear decision, Mathis by decision and Morrison by TKO in the middle rounds.

Not really an important or relevant topic but it is a continuing topic here so why not ask the question?

Curious, my shoe size is size ten, rather average. What are everyone's here shoe sizes and what was JQ's shoe size?

Not really an important or relevant topic but it is a continuing topic here so why not ask the question?

If a 36/20 Shaq is not enough, we have to buy Coolidge. He was born in 1956, so he ain't much older than Malone. What's Coolidge's shoe size? That's the million dollar question!

If a 36/20 Shaq is not enough, we have to buy Coolidge. He was born in 1956, so he ain't much older than Malone. What's Coolidge's shoe size? That's the million dollar question!

These are Wilt Norman Chamberlain's numbers...

I'm between an 11 1/2 and 12, wide. My feet are flatter than Ohio. Didn't Bob Lanier have a huge foot? I've heard 22-23 was his size.

I'm between an 11 1/2 and 12, wide. My feet are flatter than Ohio. Didn't Bob Lanier have a huge foot? I've heard 22-23 was his size.

Lanier wears 22, like Shaq. They say that Andre' "The Midget" Rousimoff did wear 24, but this might be bulls--t.

Andre' "The Midget" Rousimoff did wear 24, but this might be bulls--t.

Spinks, Mathis and Morrison move on. Spinks by tough but clear decision, Mathis by decision and Morrison by TKO in the middle rounds.

Spinks by tough but clear decision, Mathis by decision and Morrison by TKO in the middle rounds.
I should weigh about 185. Ali has a big foot maybe 13 - 13 1/2? Jerry's shoe looked bigger than Frazier's, at least in photos. Don't know.

I'd take Morrison is that I think he could defend himself against Bruno's offensive, but I'm not sure Bruno could handle Morrison's best. I wouldn't see this going to a decision. For my money, both of these guys had more holes in their game than 200 pounds of swiss cheese, but if I had to pick one, I think Morrison would get it done.

Does Simpson hate Italian shoes? He is an asshole who almost certainly has killed his wife. If I met him, I'd kick his ass with my about 7 (40 in Italy) size feet! Life is strange. Tyson is still shorter than Andre' but wears 13 1/2! I remember that RS's shoe size is 6. She told me that once and these are unforgettable things!

I've just discovered that Muhammad Ali wears a size 13 shoe. That was my duty to inform all of you! Ian Thorpe wears 17, Tom Hanks 8 1/2, while Robin Williams wears 9.

I've done a little investigation Bruno-Morrison. I'm convinced Morrison beat better opposition. Although close. Tommy lands that big left hook, And Bruno won't have the stomach for it, like when he bailed out against "IRON MIKE"!

Hey Jimmy D, passed through Norco today on the way to my Mom's house. I had to stop to get gas for the car. The win had shifted and nearby Fontana, home to some cows, horses, etc, drifted its distinctive smell downwind to Norco. That part of Fontana, adjacent to the 15 freeway, might remind you somewhat of Oklahoma, be fore warned if you head out to that area.

So the results from the last match ups were: - Mathis goes through by unanimous decision - 7-2

Spinks over Jones by Unanimous decision - 8-1

Bruno wins by split verdict - 5-4

Okay the next two draws are: - Gerrie Coetzee vs Cleveland Williams

Riddick Bowe vs Eddie Machen

Coetzee over Williams by 9-3 decesion. Bowe over Machen 8 - 4.
In an action packed bout, Coetzee knocks out C. Williams in the eighth round. Bowe knocks out Machen in round number six. Massimo, I should not post without my glasses. When I do, I make more typing mistakes. I was just jokingly being a fair weather Laker fan because they face elimination from the playoffs. La Habra is in northern Orange County, California and is considered a slightly different area than Los Angeles. Anaheim is probably the largest city in Orange County. So I live closer to there than I do to L.A.

Cleveland Williams vs. Gerrie Coetzee is actually a very good match. Williams, a very good puncher and boxer would aggressively take the fight to the South African, but finds in Coetzee, who was briefly champ, a very good boxer also, a very accurate counterpuncher. Williams would clearly lead early, then the bigger Coetzee would get his opening. Coetzee by KO8. Bowe would struggle early with Machen, a very good courageous 200 pounder, before giving him the Sonny Liston treatment. Machen lasts long though, TKO 9 for the very talented Bowe.

"Dennis what the hell are you doing here?" Anyway I'll be in Las Vegas on June 29th, And be at one of their Libraries, looking up Microfilm of Jerry's 1965 and 1966 bouts. Hopefully this time I can get Even his pro debut, Should be able to get them all and then some. Its interesting to me. I should finally be able to get all the hard core stats score cards, time ko or tko, fighter's weights etc. I thought Morrison was going on in the tournament, Commission?? Like I said IF Tommy could get by Both Foreman, Ruddock. And show a lot of heart beating both Williams and Hipp. I thought Eddie Machen went the distance (12 rounds) with Liston. Basically Eddie fought a defensive fight but did get some good shots in. Liston won by points even though he got penalized for fouls. Yes, Machen went the distance (12 rounds) with Liston. Basically Eddie fought a defensive fight but did get some good shots in. Liston won by points even though he got penalized for fouls.
well be the Queen of England. Your story showed the side of JQ that we like so much—a regular guy you could sit down, have a drink with and talk to. |
When people ask me, "what is the big deal about Jerry Quarry?" I tell them that even Jerry was a world class athelete, he was a regular guy you could talk to. He never acted like he was above us, ever. I would like to make a comparison to a boxing announcer I met, the beautiful Amy Hayes, who introduces fighters on Fox Sports Network boxing shows and sometimes ESPN 2 cards as well and compare her to another, more famous announcer in Michael Buffer of "let's Get Ready to rumble" lucky fame. Buffer, who drives a car so expensive it looks more like a spaceship than a car, doesn't even look in your eyes when you speak to him. He seems to have a very standoffish attitude. While Amy will laugh and joke with you and she remembered the incident and me when I mentioned that I was singing to her and the ESPN 2 guys told me to shut up. Amy also has a better attitude than a couple of ring card girls that I have seen at several shows and have spoken to. When I said hello to them a second time, they gave me phony, plastic smiles and they looked past me as if I wasn't worthy enough to speak to them. They probably think they are going to famous actresses when in reality they are probably going to be nothing more than T and A symbols, carrying the ring round cards and nothing more, ever. |
When people ask me, "what is the big deal about Jerry Quarry?" I tell them that even Jerry was a world class athelete, he was a regular guy you could talk to. He never acted like he was above us, ever. I would like to make a comparison to a boxing announcer I met, the beautiful Amy Hayes, who introduces fighters on Fox Sports Network boxing shows and sometimes ESPN 2 cards as well and compare her to another, more famous announcer in Michael Buffer of "let's Get Ready to rumble" lucky fame. Buffer, who drives a car so expensive it looks more like a spaceship than a car, doesn't even look in your eyes when you speak to him. He seems to have a very standoffish attitude. While Amy will laugh and joke with you and she remembered the incident and me when I mentioned that I was singing to her and the ESPN 2 guys told me to shut up. Amy also has a better attitude than a couple of ring card girls that I have seen at several shows and have spoken to. When I said hello to them a second time, they gave me phony, plastic smiles and they looked past me as if I wasn't worthy enough to speak to them. They probably think they are going to famous actresses when in reality they are probably going to be nothing more than T and A symbols, carrying the ring round cards and nothing more, ever. |
Hulk Hogan is about as tall as the Rock. Let's say 6'4"!

Hulk Hogan is about as tall as the Rock. Let's say 6'4"!

Can't wait to get to that farm in South Jersey, Steve (SHEMP) Machen went the 12 round distance in an elimination bout vs Liston, and from what I've heard gave a good account of himself. Yes Hipp was Indian, I can remember he came to the Morrison fight wearing an INDIAN vest and a Billy Jack hat.

I didn't meet Andre the Midget. I was at a wrestling show circa 1970 and I was seated next to where the wrestlers came out for the matches. Andre came out accompanied by Fred Blassie, a good guy in the L.A. area and Blassie looked very short next to Andre. There was a wrestling feud going on between Andre and Blassie and John "The Golden Greek" Tolos and whoever his partner was. Andre also towered over the other wrestlers too.

I also went to some of the television tapings of wrestling at the KCOP studio, channel 13. Some of the wrestlers who used to perform at those shows and at the Olympic also included, Rocky "Soul Man" Johnson (the Rock's father), Earl Mr. Universe Maynard, Victor Rivera, Black Gordman and the Great Goliath, among many others. I remember one time they had a match billed as "bite verses bite" between Goliath, who loved to chew on his opponents' foreheads and Blassie, also famous for taking a chunk with his teeth out of people in the ring, WHAT FUN!!

Did you ever meet Muhammad Ali or Coolidge, Kent? And Lennox Lewis? Is the Carver High School close to the La Habra area where you live?

I have never met Ali. I have spoken on the phone with Lennox Lewis, Kirk Johnson, both Klitschko brothers, and John Ruiz. I have met James Toney, Vassily Jirov and Chris Byrd. I have spoken one on one to all of them in person as well as I asked questions live during a press conference with Evander Holyfield. There are others as well who I can't think of at the moment. Of course, I have also spoken to all four Quarry brothers. Can't forget the Quarrys can we?

The only boxer I ever met was Mike Tyson, and seeing him in action (at a party) was something I'll never forget. No, he wasn't friendly, he didn't care who I was, but wasn't rude either. After he entered the main room at the party, he really came out of that subdued person, amazing. I have met more than few pro athletes here in Cleveland. If I could have met some boxers, JQ, Frazier, Norton and Lewis would probably top the list... I like Dominick Guinn, a solid up and coming contender not yet ready for a title fight. He proves again talent and hard work are better than lazy size.
Hey Jimmy D, I wasn't talking about just one farm in south Jersey. There are still huge areas in southern Jersey that are strictly farm land. You can drive for miles and miles and see nothing but farms. Dairy farms, pig farms, and thousands of acres of corn, wheat, and no street lights for miles at a stretch. When I got out of the Army, I bought a 1970 red Mercury Cougar, with a big 351 v-8. I put in an 8-track stereo with four speakers! My best two friends and myself would cruise and drink all over these back roads all night long, stereo blasting Steppinwolf and Jimi Hendrix, and never even see another car!

I worked with a few guys who lived in Mike Rossman's neighborhood when he was growing up. I was at a party once where he showed up. I was pretty drunk, and we left soon after he arrived. I heard the party got kind of rough later. I'm glad we left early. At that time, I fancied myself as somewhat of a badass. I would probably have gotten myself beaten to death by Rossman.

Bowe would out hustle Machen and win a decision in a fight similar to his one with Herbie Hide withought the knockdowns. Cleveland Williams by virtue of a savage 5th round KO over Coetzee.

I heard the party got kind of rough later. I'm glad we left early. At that time, I fancied myself as somewhat of a badass. I would probably have gotten myself beaten to death by Rossman.

Bowe would out hustle Machen and win a decision in a fight similar to his one with Herbie Hide withought the knockdowns. Cleveland Williams by virtue of a savage 5th round KO over Coetzee.

So Coetzee and Bowe go through. Now, because I won't be near a computer for 9 days now I'll call three matches and then post again when I return. Leotis Martin vs David TuaRazor Ruddock vs Zora FolleyLennox Lewis vs John Ruiz Bowe has outshoed Machen, as predictable. Did anybody of you guys ever see Cleveland Williams when he was in his prime? I have only seen him in disappointing efforts against Sonny Liston (second time) and Ali'. Reading his record it doesn't seem to me he did beat rated fighters but Ernie Terrell and maybe Sonny Banks.

Lewis b Ruiz KO 1Ruddock b Folley KO 5. Folley was ahead on points when he got caught by a devastating left hook. In the interview after the fight Zora says: "I didn't believe that a human could hit that hard! Donovan hit me harder than anyone else, including Oscar Bonavena."

David Tua-Leotis Martin would be a slugfest! David Tua is the winner by KO 3.

Lewis wins easily over Ruiz in our tournament---probably a decision but not a close one, and as usual with these guys, a bit of a borefest. Tua wears down Leotis Martin to get the win. And I like Ruddock over Folley, by TKO.

Lewis vs. Ruiz would be very awkward for several rounds, with all the holding and leaning Ruiz does, but Lewis would lead start to finish, finally catching his man, KO8. Martin would clearly outbox Tua, but only delay the inevitable, Tua by KO7. Likewise, Folley would box circles around Ruddock before being bashed, Ruddock by KO6. Thanks.

In a bout that should have happened in real life, Lewis by decision over Ruiz. Tua by kayo over Martin and Ruddock by kayo over Folley.

In a bout that should have happened in real life, Lewis by decision over Ruiz. Tua by kayo over Martin and Ruddock by kayo over Folley.

Yes Angelo, Dominic Quinn is a good fighter and one loss is not going to ruin his career.

In a bout that should have happened in real life, Lewis by decision over Ruiz. Tua by kayo over Martin and Ruddock by kayo over Folley.

In a bout that should have happened in real life, Lewis by decision over Ruiz. Tua by kayo over Martin and Ruddock by kayo over Folley.
upset Guinn.

6/18/04 04:28:41 PM| Bob Bumbera| NC || renfbera@aol.com | 10 | Tua KO's Martin in 6, Lewis decisions Ruiz 119 to 109 and Ruddock overpowers Folley in 10.

6/18/04 09:27:35 PM| Steve| N.J. || dmmssrm@comcast.net | 10 | Tua ko's Martin in four rounds. Ruddock hits hard, but Folley is a tough, skilled boxer. He's just not strong enough to mount any kind of attack. When he finally tries to trade punches, he gets knocked out. Lennox Lewis gets disqualified for constantly hitting Ruiz with hard left jabs before Ruiz can get close enough to grab him and wrestle around the ring, throwing rabbit punches for a full three min. every round. Ruiz complains to referee Zak Clayton, that he's being thumbed in both eyes with every jab. So Clayton, being the careful guy he is, disqualifies Lewis in the third round.

6/19/04 03:39:55 AM| Massimo| Roma, remember Scipione l' Africano? || shaq LDE (Less Dominant Ever).com | 10 | That's the only way Ruiz could beat Lewis.I don't understand how it is possible that Has Been Rahman has lost to Ruiz! Primo Carnera, in his prime, would have beaten John Ruiz. In his fights against Sharkey (in particular the second), Loughran, Neusel, Godfrey, Shaaf, Campo (in particular the first) he showed good skills and even a decent chin! Erminio Spalla was better than him, though!

6/19/04 01:05:31 PM| Kent| La Habra, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Angelo, yes losing to a tough guy like Monte Barret is nothing to be ashamed of and Guinn looks like he has learned from the experience. I would bet on Guinn in a rematch because although Barret knows all of the tricks in the trade, he is at his very best a lower level contender, top ten to twenty guy, around twelve or so. It is just that Guinn probably has better natural talent than Barret does but as shown in his fight with Barret, just having the talent is not enough, a fighter has to use it or he could lose.David Tua is an example of someone with natural talent who doesn't always use it. A lot of the time he just throws one punch at a time and he comes in very overweight, thinking his power will bail him out every time. Not so, as witnessed in his inept title challenge against Lennox Lewis. I remember rooting for him again't Lewis, yelling at the television, come on, you stupid "pineapple head," throw punches! He had that crazy looking hair that made him look like a pineapple but it didn't help him as Lewis speared him with his long left jab from a distance all night long. I would still pick Tua to defeat Leotis Martin though.

6/19/04 11:07:29 AM| kookoo| ny || kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 | I can't believe you people are still talking dream fights! BORING!!! Turn down that boom box funktron eat some them Blackeyed peas get a life Kent, stop pandering to everyone, I've seen you on other websites, I never comment, you just make me laugh harderEach time. J)))))

6/20/04 04:27:14 AM| Looney Bin| South Africa || nmandela@aol | 10 | Koo Koo's back. Thank God. We were all getting worried that something had happened and you'd gone to hell. Can I ask you some questions, Koo Koo? Have you ever thought about getting a job as a contractor in Iraq? It means you won't be able to accept the vacant CIA director's gig you've probably applied for. Have you ever gone out with a Muslim or black woman? Really? How was it? When are you going to take the hand and leg restraints off and free them from your cellar? Have you ever been out of the US? Out of your state? Out of your home town? When is your parole up? Have you ever met the Muffin Man? Oh, and one for Massimo. What size feet do you have?

6/20/04 10:46:30 AM| kookoo| ny || kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 | yea, yea, right bootlip, riddle me this, what can't you give joe frazier: answer black eye & a fat lip. No, I don't date blacks they are not attractive to me, hell black guys don't even want them! Ever black guy I see at work is always eyeballing white women, I think that part of the problem is that black women have the most negative attitude in general I ever seen, Blacks are their own worst enemies. rap music, acting like animals, janet jackson superbowl. NO WONDER BIN LADEN WANTS
TO KILL US, LOOK HOW WE REPRESENT OURSELVES. BLUE BIRDS FLY W/ BLUE BIRDS, RED W/REDMUHAMMAD ALI SAIS THAT THE SMARTEST THING HE EVER SAID!!
[6/20/04 11:04:24 AM]Observer|My computer||kookooisan@ss.com|||5|Koo Koo's drunk again, got fired for failure to grasp the complexities of his latest janitor job, and angry at everyone who's smarter and more successful than he is, and that's a long line. |
[6/20/04 11:58:58 AM]Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia90101@aol.com|||10|HAPPY FATHER'S DAY DAD! WE SURE DO LOVE & MISS YOU VERY MUCH, UNCLE JERRY TOO! ALSO, HAPPY FATHER'S DAY TO ALL YOU DAD'S OUT THERE, ENJOY WHAT YOU HAVE AND DON'T TAKE IT FOR GRANTED. KEEP CHECKING OUT THIS SITE, ITS AWESOME!!
[6/20/04 12:41:39 PM]Massimo (but nothing to do with Marone...)|Roma, not ugly at all !|4|||10|Looney-I wear 40 in Italy. I think that I'd wear about 7 in the USA but I don't know exactly !Maybe I should take the first flight for the United States and buy there a pair of shoes, justto discover what's my shoe size and soon after come back to Rome. I'd have to spend some moneyfor the trip but learning my own shoe size would beworthy losing some money. It's so sad that I know the shoe sizes of Shaq, Thorpe, Ali', Lewis, RS, Kent, Bob Bumbera, Paul, Angelo etc. etc. and don't know my own shoe size. Whatthe thing is that Primo Carnera did wear 52 in Italy, while Shaquille Rashaun O'Neal would wear 59. I'm not that big, Looney! EvenAndre' the Midget Rousimoff was bigger than me... |
[6/20/04 09:36:47 PM]Gerry|Cleveland USA||Lakers fold the tent.com|||9|Nothing like a little race idiocy on Father's Day, I guess... I caught an episode of I,MAX at a friend's house this weekend, I heard the WBC is apparently about to go bankrupt? If this is true, can someone please tell me how this is possible? They should be swimming in cash, right? Also, an interview with the glib James Toney, during which he made the same claims of total greatness as usual, but then stated he could easily defeat Klitschko, because European fighters are dumb, yes, he said that. Why does a guy who boasts a little and charms people have to go stupid and insult people? I'd love to see Toney-Klitschko, is he just trying to hype a fight? Opinions anyone? Massimo, I'd take Carnera over Ruiz also. I'd put Carnera nearly on par with JQ, but he also seemed to have some real distractions that kept him from being possibly a much greater champion, just my opinion. Thanks again. |
[6/20/04 10:31:52 PM]Looney Bin|South Africa||nmandela@aol|||10|You're one cool dude Kooky, but you hate rap. Figure you to be a Village People type of guy. Can picture you as the construction worker. Bet the cowboy wears his chappies on backwards when standing in front of you. Don't try and repress it. We already guessed. Not that there's anything wrong with it.|
[6/21/04 05:05:35 AM]Kent|La Habra, Ca||La Habra, Ca|||10|Loony Bin, you are one funny guy! The Klockman probably thinks you, and the Muffinman for that matter, are my alter-egos but we know this isn't true and Carl, the webmaster, knows this also. I am not anyone else but myself and while I would not go out of my way to upset the Koo Koo one, I do get a chuckle out of you doing it.Gerry, I have spoken to Toney in person on at least a couple of occasions and it is my feeling that he is hyping a potential bout when he spouts off about this or that fighter. He seems to be a more relaxed individual when he is off of the interview stage.|
[6/21/04 10:47:55 AM]kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|SPEAKING OF CARL HE NEEDS TO DO SOME MAJOR UPDATING ON THIS SITE MORE PICTURES OF JERRY, EXCEPT FOR SOME OF THE VIDEO POSTS, CARL HAS BEEN AS SLEEP AT THE WHEEL A LONG TIME, WHATS HE GET PAID FOR? |
[6/21/04 04:50:39 PM]Jai|Queer Eye for Koo Koo||forukookoo@hotmail|||10|Queer Eye would like to do a show on you, Koo Koo. The Fab 5 would come down to your trailer for a makeover. We'd replace that white hood and cloak you've been wearing for 25 years. We'd pull down the Boy George posters, treat those fungal infections, and replace the torn fly screen. And then we'd delouse you so that you'll be nice and clean when your lover (cousin Jed) comes home from the Klan meeting. Boy oh boy, has cousin Jed got a surprise waiting for him!

6/21/04 05:42:25 PM|Fran|Philly|plc7755@aol.com|||10|Folley beats RuddockLewis Beats RuizMartin Takes Tua to school. Martin by Decision.| 6/21/04 06:44:29 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Hey funny guy(s), isn't the show called Queer Eye for the Straight Guy? I remember Koo Koo saying he was interested in Jerry's niece, Sonia but nothing came of it as Sonia is married. Koo Koo did try though so the Klockman and cousin Jed probably are not lovers. A makeover might be a good idea for some of us though. Can I get one?

6/22/04 01:10:21 AM|Jai|Queer Eye||4ukookoo@hotmail|||10|Koo Koo is just experimenting with cousin Jed. It's just a phase he's going through. Will you let us do a makeover on you, Koo Koo? We'll make you a sensitive new age guy. Don't ignore us.

6/22/04 09:12:44 AM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia90101@aol.com|||10|This site is way cool, you all keep coming back, and that's awesome. Dad & Uncle Jerry, would love that. Hey KooKoo what's up? Now be good all, and keep coming back and posting.

6/22/04 07:59:10 PM|Tom|Santa Clara||tedfish2@hotmail.com|||10|I was browsing the mag section of Long's drugs last night when I came across an article in Ring magazine written by Eddie Machen in 1962. Pictures of Eddie were in there too. I don't follow boxing much any more, but I knew Eddie personally. I was only 14 when Eddie moved into my neighborhood in the Berkeley hills back in the mid-sixties. He was easily the most friendly adult on my block. I remember him often standing in his front yard playing with his kids and chatting with neighbors that walked by. My sister was best friends with his daughter and I'd often go down (on my parent's instructions) to tell Nancy it was time to go home for dinner. His son was great too. I remember when I'd come over to the house his son would yell my name, then come running up to me and hug me. The Machens moved after a few years. The daughter who was my sister's best friend showed up at our door one day years later but Nancy wasn't home and the daughter didn't leave a phone# or address, so that was the last we saw of the Machen family. I've purposely left off Machen family names to protect their privacy.

6/22/04 09:14:37 PM|Mike|Philadelphia||yammagamma300@aol.com|||10|Greetings, I just came across this site and been doing a lot of reading. Looking forward to talking to you guys.

6/23/04 02:40:32 AM|Abe McGruff|Pattaya Beach, Thailand||sinnbarr@hotmail|||10|Welcome Mike. I don't post a lot as I'd much rather read and learn from the expertise of the other guys who come here. They are all long time students of boxing and there isn't too much they don't know, especially about Jerry Quarry. You've come to the right place if you want to learn. Who is your favorite fighter Mike? Mine is Khosai Galaxy (at least since I have been over here).

6/23/04 03:36:46 AM|Forest Ward|NYC||NYC.COM|||10|Hi folks, it was 35 years ago tonight that Frazier and Quarry fought in the Garden. I remember it like it was yesterday. One more note, to all the Gerry Cooney fans who think he is doing a wonderful job helping ex-boxers. Well I read on the Max Boxing site that Cooneys "Charity" only contributes 20% of the donation it receives to helping down and out boxers. The other 80% goes to "expenses." Normally for a charity to be considered legitimate, only 35% of the donations should go to expenses. Also, anytime Cooney is asked to attend a charity event he will not go unless he is paid. And this money goes to Gerry Cooney, and not his "charity." Just thought you might like to know.

6/23/04 09:46:45 AM|Massimo|Roma, remember Alberto Sordi ?||lakers, who?|||10|I was re-watching the Quarry-Shavers fight, and I have noticed that Ernie hit Jerry hard a couple of times. Well, Jerry didn't even blink!
guy could take a good punch, that's for sure! That was Jerry's greatest accomplishment in the ring. You guys were talking about American music just a bit ago. What do you think about Bruno Martelli (Lee Curreri) as a composer? And what about Shorofsky as a teacher? Did you ever sing Bruno Martelli's songs, Kent?

You guys were talking about American music just a bit ago. What do you think about Bruno Martelli (Lee Curreri) as a composer? And what about Shorofsky as a teacher? Did you ever sing Bruno Martelli’s songs, Kent?

other than a time many years ago when I took a vocal class and one of the requirements was we had to sing a couple of songs in another language, so I did one in Italian and one in German. I don't remember after all of this time who the composers or what the songs were. No, so except for one time, I have never sang anything by Italian performers. I don't know anything about Cooney’s organization or how they help fighters. But I do know Alex Ramos and about his Retired Boxers' Foundation. Alex "The Bomber," a former middleweight contender, has done a lot of good for fighters in need. His group, along with TJQF, has also helped pass legislation for the improvement of boxing.

I was referring to another TV show whose title was "Saranno famosi" in Italy and, I guess, they will be famous in the USA. In the TV show there was an American actor (Lee Curreri) who played Bruno Martelli (a composer of songs) and Shorofsky was his teacher. His songs were in English, not in Italian. This American TV show is very popular in Italy and so I thought it was very popular in USA too just like "The White Shadow". Nothing serious. I was only joking around, I need to joke once in a while, just can't be serious all the time! And this is a sad moment for we Italians. Italy has had it ass whipped in the European Tournament.

My favorite fighter is Smokin Joe - but i've always been a Jerry Q. fan!

At the height of its popularity, I was studying music at what is called a community college here in the U.S. so I could relate to the pretend students studying on the TV show. At the time, I was watching it years ago and yes it was popular in the U.S. relative to what is called a community college here in the U.S. so I could relate to the pretend students studying on the TV show.

Instead of challenging me to a duel, which is a Medieval concept, why don't you challenge me to a boxing fight? But I have to warn you of something first. First of all I'm way wilter than you (5'6''). Then, Ali couldn't dance in comparison to me, Foreman couldn't punch, Chuvalo couldn't take a punch and Jerry Quarry wasn't brave! I'll bring your wife back to Calabria, where she should be. She loves Italy in her own heart, she couldn't care less about Old Jersey! Your wife will be mine, Steve! Your marriage is over! ())).

Steve—Andrea Bocelli has a really great voice! He is a very good guy too. I'm very sorry for his blindness. Andrea Bocelli is the second best voice in the world. Kent Appel is the king, the best voice in the world. Joe Frazier is a savy choice as your favourite fighter. Joe's my third wife Linda's best as well. We were a little disappointed earlier this year when we read in the Bangkok Post that Joe had given his girlfriend a black eye and a fat lip, but, hey, we don't know the circumstances and he beat the wrap so he's innocent. She probably walked into a door or something like that. Talking of singers, listening to music over here is slim pickings. There's no Willy Nelson or Johnny Cash or that wop guy Andre that Mossima is talking about, if you know what I mean. The best Thailand's got is Samart Payakarun. He used to be the world bantamweight champion about 15 years ago until that little guy from down under, Jeff Fenneck, beat the bejesus outta him. Hell, I can't understand a damn thing that Samart sings, but Linda loves his stuff. I read somewheres that Oscar is going to fight Forest. Oscar's slowing down but Vernon is getting too old. Should be a good fight though and I'd bet on Oscar.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/23/04 08:05:52 PM</th>
<th>Tom</th>
<th>Santa Clara</th>
<th>tedfish2@hotmail.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hi Abe, sounds like fun over there, do you mind telling us how many times you been married.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/23/04 08:17:30 PM</th>
<th>Steve</th>
<th>N.J.</th>
<th>dmmrsm@comcast.net</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Massimo, since your obviously not in control of your emotions, and are now angry at me, I can only beg forgiveness. You may have my wife and all incurred expenses, including the Bocelli seats!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/23/04 08:33:09 PM</th>
<th>Steve</th>
<th>N.J.</th>
<th>dmmrsm@comcast.net</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>There are two badass little fighters in this century whom I don't feel got there due attention. Billy Conn and Stanley Ketchell. Both small guys, who fought and seriously challenged heavyweight champions. I can't find much info on Ketchell. I've read that he was a madman. I know he went toe-to-toe with Jack Johnson, and actually knocked him down. He was later shot dead after showing too much attention to a waitress, by the husband in a diner. Anyone have any info on this?</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/23/04 08:51:15 PM</th>
<th>Steve</th>
<th>N.J.</th>
<th>dmmrsm@comcast.net</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Massimo, what do you think about the chaos theory? What about fractals? I'm serious now.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/23/04 09:35:41 PM</th>
<th>Tom</th>
<th>Santa Clara</th>
<th>tedfish2@hotmail.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Some idiot filled out my name and email address (claiming to be me) and said (a few posts ago) &quot;Hi Abe, sounds like fun over there, do you mind telling us ....etc. I guess you really can't control what some people will do.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/23/04 10:08:30 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Massimo, thanks for the compliment but I don't have anywhere close to the best voice in the world. There are a lot of people better than me. I am somewhat limited in my sound to certain styles and certain keys. Careful song selection is a big part of me sounding good. In case anyone is wondering, I met Jerry Quarry many years ago and he and I spoke mainly about music as he was a good singer. Jimmy D, you are right about Jerry having a great memory for people (of course before his illness took this from him) as I ran into Jerry about a year after I talked with him and he said to me, &quot;hey my singing buddy, how's it going?&quot; So after all of these years, I still like to think of myself as Jerry's singing buddy. That is why I speak about music here as I think Jerry would want it that way.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/23/04 10:44:51 PM</th>
<th>Steve</th>
<th>N.J.</th>
<th>dmmrsm@comcast.net</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hey Tom from Santa Clara, that's a great story and an insight Eddie Machen. In this most brutal of sports, most top level Pro fighters are gentle, friendly men. Most strong people show their strength through email address, patience, and forbearance.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

| 6/24/04 06:43:40 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 |
|---------------------|----------|-------|----|
| Steve<You call it Chaos when small differences in the initial conditions of a physical system provokeHuge differences in the final system. The Chaos Theory is necessary when you have to handle such situations. The Chaos Theory is involved in many subjects such as turbulence in fluids, not linear electronic circuits, motion of objects in the solar system, weather forecasts. The problem is that in Physics there are just a few problems that (or which) are exactly solvable. The armonic oscillator is one. This doesn't mean that the physicists are dumb. The reality is that most of the classes of mathematical equations don't allow an exact analytical solution. That's the reason nobody ever will write the exact wave function of Kent Appel, because (or as, or since) Kent Appel is a very complex system. You have to make (or do) approximations. The smarter the approximations you do (or make) are, the better the results you obtain are, where better means closer to reality. And that is what the job of the theoretical physicists is often all about. The fact that we all live in this modern world is a wonderful proof that this kind of approach works very well. I'm sorry but I don't know fractals. I had a friend who wrote a thesis that was about fractals but he doesn't live in my quarter anymore, and I have no idea were his feet are in this moment.

I'm sorry but I don't know fractals. I had a friend who wrote a thesis that was about fractals but he doesn't live in my quarter anymore, and I have no idea where his feet are in this moment.

The fact that we all live in this modern world is a wonderful proof that this kind of approach works very well.

All you pc gutless wonders can't debunk what I've said, all you can do is talk about uncle jed or some other stupid crap. The klan's image has been tainted by the ones who committed crimes against blacks which I do not agree with. Whites need get out of those robes and attend some of these board meetings. It's ok to be pro black, everybody jumps on that bandwagon, be pro white and you got problems, blacks use slavery argument like a sword to get their way and nobody says nothing. whites are a bunch chickens.

Steve, thanks for your comment! Yeah, seeing Eddie's pictures in Ring magazine brought back memories. Eddie was certainly an easy going guy at home. Great with his kids. He was always ready to talk and was a good listener too. Unfortunately I think by the time he moved onto our block he was at the tail end of his career. The article in the Ring said Eddie was 30 in 1962. That would make him about 35-37 when he moved to my neighborhood. Of course I knew he died sometime in the 70's apparently from a tragic fall.

That was not Koo Koo making those posts. Someone posted in Koo Koo's name trying to make him look bad. Leave him alone! I think Tom has several names.

Steve, that is something Jerry Quarry and Eddie Machen had in common, two warriors in the ring going toe to toe with each other but decent people outside of it. I hesitate to comment on the race stuff but I will say this, Koo Koo it is not P.C. to be against the Klan as they were and always will be a terrorist organization who deep down want to keep the black man and other minorities in their place (in the Klan's mind) as second class citizens. I am also against them because they consider me to be some type of mongrel and probably inferior in nature (in their minds) because I am of mixed race, white and Native American. KKK= POMPUCKHA POMYU PILEK MOMCAT! Translation: KKK= they are big fat buheads! It is a shame that the only white people who advocate for the white race are nuts like the klan. It is time more reasonable white people not let their rights be stepped on but do so without stepping on the rights of other races. I live by the code of Dr. M.L. King who dreamed of a future where "people are judged not by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character." This means people should not be automatically thought of as being bad or inferior just because they belong to a certain ethnic group, they should also be held accountable for their actions if those actions are bad in nature. It is time that people, when they commit crimes, not hide behind the race card by yelling racist every time someone is critical of their actions.

To whoever said discussing the KKK pertains to Jerry Quarry, nothing could be further from the truth as Jerry had many fans and friends from all races.

Hey Kent, out here in Jersey we have a channel on cable tv called VH1. You guys probably get something similar out there. For the past two years they've had a 100 best male and female vocalists countdown. It's based on the quality and range of the voice. Who do you think won for best male vocalist two years in a row? Hint, he's been dead for thirteen years. Oh, this is best rock vocalist, no Country, no Rapp. I sometimes like to change the subject from boxing, since I usually don't get a response when I ask for information on a serious boxing question. It seems people are too busy responding to the nutbag posters. |

Kent, you must realize by now that we are dealing with a few, or maybe only one, punk-in-his-heart kid or an adult with the mentality of a slow twelve year old. He wants to get into the conversation with the adults, any way he can. Please don't take this as a racist remark, but the best American Indian rock group of all time is Redbone!

You had a great policy of ignoring that asshole for a long, long time. I know that was hard, as he threw some pretty serious insults at you.

Anyone with any intelligence only has to read the post alleged to be Koo Koo's to know that it was not him writing it. It is completely different in grammar and speech patterns. Someone is writing under several names trying to cause problems. Kent you're wrong if you think that was Koo Koo. I suspect that Peacemaker has made a comeback and is stirring again. Peacemaker = Mike = Tom = whoever. So leave Koo Koo alone.

every time they put a klansmen on tv, he's dumb and can't complete a sentence, kent i know your the red man, thats ok, but nobody will ever speak for whites, if you do you will be attacked by your OWN RACE MUCHLESS BLACKS, red pride, brown pride, yellow pride, but oh no not white pride, tell me who's the racist!

Jerry Quarry was certainly a good fighter. I remember him beating Ron Lyle. If I remember correctly that was Lyle's first loss. That's quite an accomplishment since Lyle's the only one who ever actually knocked Foreman down. (I don't count the Ali knock-down as a real knock-down; Foreman was just too exhausted to stand up, not to mention his frustration at not being able to put Ali away like Frazier and Norton.) I just looked at Jerry's record and I saw a whole slew of top ten fighters that he beat. Did he really beat Shavers in one round? I remember Shavers KO'ing Norton. Foreman was good at bludgeoning fighters but for one punch power Shavers might have actually been more powerful. Now and then I still follow boxing -- I'll show up at a friend's house for marquee fights (all I have to bring is a six-pack to watch it for free!) -- but I was more of an afficianado (is that spelled right?) in the early 70's. I guess boxing appeals to my base instinct or something. I wouldn't recommend it as an occupation for anyone though. I was never a very good fighter myself. I only got involved in street fights and I usually lost. I guess I was just no-good, or maybe it was that deep down I really didn't want to hurt anybody. I'm glad I grew out of that though. One fighter that stuck in my mind from the 70s was the middleweight Mike Nixon. I was surprised that he didn't go farther. I remember him being able to throw these flashy combinations that were so fast, his opponents just seemed completely outclassed. Well, I think I'm going to retire for a while as a boxing fan. Good luck to you all!

Massimo, have you read Frank Tippler's book, titled, "The Physics Of Immortality", he's the professor of physics at Tulane University, in Loisiana?

Who the hell wants to know how many times I been married? What's that got to do with anything. The only other person who ever asked that was my ex's lawyer trying to squeeze more out of me and I was in the witness box. The only good one I've had is Linda, although she's ugly and punches harder than a crapping mule.

No, I didn't read that book. The title sounds very strange, I mean, I can't figure its meaning! Nobody is immortal, not even Silvio Berlusconi. However he is a Professor, so he surely knows his stuff. I have met Prof. of Physics who couldn't teach well, but I have never meet a Prof. who didn't know the subject.
Can anyone verify when Mike Tyson is scheduled to fight again? How old is he now? Mike Gerald Tyson was born on 30 June 1966. His actual age is a direct consequence of that. I have read that he will probably fight on 20 July. I think this fight is a nonsense. I guess he has economic problem. And so what? He will have economic problems for the rest of his life. I have no doubt about it. It's just the way his brain works. I hope he is not planning of challenging (or to challenge) Vitali! My chances to beat or of beating) Gary Kasparov in a chess game would be better! Probably an in prime Tyson would have beaten Vitali, but not this version.

I have recently re-watched the Douglas-Tyson fight and I have to say that Tyson's loss wasn't a freak accident as many journalists (but I hope not my friend Kent Appel) described it. Tyson was in good shape (100 Kg), very young and had just destroyed Carl "The Lie" Williams. The problem for Mike that night was that Buster Douglas was in great shape too (probably in the best shape of his career). Mike Tyson didn't fight too badly that night. I think, not many fighters in the entire history of boxing would have beaten Douglas (on) that night: Carnera, Spalla and not many others...For only 1 night, Buster Douglas was in the same class with the all time greats: Spalla, Carnera, Damiani, Ali'.

Joe Louis, George Foreman etc.

Massimo, no I didn't think Douglas' win over Tyson was a fluke. I was in a bar the night of the fight and I went around to the whole bar before the fight started and I told everyone that Tyson was in for a tough fight (not that he would lose), one of the toughest of his career, as I had seen Douglas fight several times and if he gave his best effort, I figured Tyson would have some difficulty. Most of the guys at the bar laughed at me about Douglas and wanted to bet me. I wish I had bet now as the guys were not laughing at Douglas and me after the fight!

Massimo: I agree with you, it was no fluke the night Buster beat Mike. Douglas fought a nearly perfect tactical fight (save for one lapse where Tyson caught him good). Douglas was bigger, used his jab to perfection, boxed brilliantly and Tyson was NOT out of shape at all. That night, Douglas was the better man by a mile. If Douglas could only have had the same intensity for all his training and each fight, that he had for Tyson, he'd have been an all-time great.
throwing bombs, 99.9 percent of anyone would have quit just to keep there eye sight. And as WORLD FAMOUSLY tough as Canadian George Chuvalo was/is. He still turned away from Frazier under similiar circumstances. Yes I believe Jerry Quarry is an Hall Of Famer to say the least! take care.

In the case of Douglas beating Tyson, the better man did win as Douglas is most likely the better man morally. I have always hated the phrase that the better man is the one who won a fight, a physical confrontation. That one's manhood is measured by the ability to be physically stronger.

My example is what would happen if I fought Mike Tyson one hundred times? The better man would never win because even though I could never win a physical confrontation with Tyson, I am still a better man than he is. It is also safe to say that the men who visit this board, by and large, are better men than Tyson but none of us could ever beat Tyson. In the case of Tyson's career, most of the time the better man lost as Tyson's opponents are likely to be better men than Tyson, but not better fighters.

Massimo, Douglas fought very well against Tucker until he ran out of gas and he got knocked out in about the tenth round.

You can beat the crap out of Tyson whenever you want! And I'd bet that your Native Indian is better than his.

Okay - Lewis, Tua and Ruddock go through. I'll draw three matches again - Larry Holmes vs Floyd Patterson, Oscar Bonavena vs Greg Page, Renaldo Snipes vs Karl Mildenberger.

Larry Holmes vs Floyd Patterson KOT 6
Oscar Bonavena b Snipes KO 11
Karl Mildenberger b Page on points
Andre's fist was 16in. I do believe in this one.

Man, this site has gotten rough. What is with all the racial nonsense? Lighten up or post somewhere else, please ... Some good posts recently on JQ, I believe Shavers did KO Norton, Norton also was troubled by Jimmy Young. These and other reasons are why more than a few rate Quarry-Norton a very good match if it were fought earlier in Jerry's career...

On Douglas-Tyson, fight was not a fluke, Douglas decided to show up in shape, which for him was rare, Tyson was very distracted. Douglas was terrific, totally dominated a sub-par Tyson effort. BUT, the fight does not represent the two fighters at all, that's why it was such a huge upset. If Douglas had fought a focused Tyson, Mike KOs him, no question. I'm one of the few who has stood up for Mike a little, he is a victim in many senses of the word. But he is also responsible for his actions, which is where my defense for him ends. Douglas took a total dive for Holyfield, showing up fat for his only title defense. Douglas is hardly a saint either, and was a big underachiever before that match. Tyson has delivered far more terrific performances, I'll stick with him over Douglas even though Buster is from Ohio. Douglas was a flash, Tyson was the real thing. His loss to Douglas ultimately means little.
person is. Douglas seems quite content with his life today while Tyson lives in constant chaos. The Holmes-Patterson fight, Holmes KO's Floyd in 6 rounds. Greg Page out boxes Ringo to win in 12 and Snipes over Mildenberger, 9 th round TKO. Shavers KOed Norton in 58 seconds. |

[6/28/04 08:39:02 PM|Fran|philly||plc7755@aol.com||||10|Bonavena wears out Page for late round KOHolmes beats PattersonSnipes over Mildenberger]

[6/28/04 09:02:03 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Page, Holmes and Snipes move on. Holmes wins via 9th round TKO after delivering about 20 unanswered punches. Snipes wins a tough one, and Page eeks out a decision in a surprisingly tough fight. By the way, in response to Kent "the better man won" is only figurative, not a literal description. Just meaning that on a particular day/night, the better athlete wins----the guy who was better that particular moment. Also, yes, I have the video of Shavers over Norton. It was a weird thing to watch. Cosell comments that "whatever Norton is doing, it isn't working" as Norton is getting tagged with bombs. Then, Shavers steps it up even further, and blasts Norton out. I don't have the Young-Norton fight on video. My recollection is that I had Young winning narrowly---but I could see how the fight would be scored for Norton too. I thought that Young fought his fight and made Norton look awkward---Norton couldn't force Young to fight his fight. It was very similar to Young vs. Ali. Both times, the judges went for the better known name fighter and Young was ruled the loser. |

[6/29/04 02:41:12 AM|65|yg||y||||10|5|

[6/29/04 01:04:49 PM|Gerry|USA||jgschultz11@aol.com||||10|I agree with Bob B. where quality of life is concerned. Tyson wishes he had half the mellow Buster does... I guess I missed part of the tournament, but I have no real prob with the outcome of the last set of matches. Floyd could not reach Holmes, but would chase him anyway until he got KO'd, about round 7, Page would be bothered early with Oscar's Ruiz-type brawling tactics before pounding him in the late rounds on way to a lop-sided discision. Talk about wasted talent : Greg Page. Mildenberger may not have gotten enough credit from you guys. His fight with the inconsistent Snipes would likely be very close, he went a good full 15 with no less than Ali and always came ready. He would likely take rounds from Snipes before losing by late KO... I know it's not boxing, but I wanted to mention how impressed I am with baseball pitcher Randy Johnson right now, about as good a pitcher as I've ever seen. Thanks.]

[6/29/04 01:44:45 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Holmes over Patterson, KO 8Page over Bonevena by decisionSnipes over Mildenberger by decision|

[6/29/04 02:17:08 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Gerry--Don't exaggerate ! Ali' did beat Mildenberger bykot 12.|

[6/29/04 02:29:12 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com||||10|A couple of hours after I posted yesterday I realized why I was confused about Bigfoot vs. Douglas. Martin never fought Buster Douglas; Martin decked Michael Moorer in the first round and dropped a 10 round decision to Moorer. I guess I related Douglas with Moorer, one more guy whose inner demons overcame his incredible natural talent. Oh yeah, one of the announcers covering that fight said the nickname "Bigfoot" was given to Martin when he was a kid because he was always sticking his foot in his mouth during conversations. His actual shoe size was 9 1/2 to Moorer's 13.|

[6/30/04 07:34:56 AM|Evren|London||@||||10|Mildenberger would be too sharp and crafty for Snipes and win a decision. Patterson would be too quick against Holmes and capture a split decision in a shock. Greg Page cannot cope with Bonavena's bullish tactics and drops a decision or late round stoppage to the Argentine.|

[6/30/04 01:24:07 PM|Gerry|Cleveland USA||jgschultz@aol.com||||10|Massimo, I stand corrected on Karl Mildenberger's fight with Ali. But my point was, he was a lot better than some give him credit for. Snipes nearly beat Holmes, then lost to much less-talented guys. Mildenberger was very consistent by comparison, that was what I meant. Sorry, don't know Karl's shoe size.

| 6/30/04 04:48:56 PM | Massimo | Roma | ||||| 10 |

I have seen Mildenberger against Bonavena and that was a strange fight. Strange because there were several knockdowns (maybe five) all scored by Oscar but Mildenberger was counted I think only 2 times. In spite of all those knockdowns, I still have the fight close in my scorecards, I think Bonavena was ahead by (or of) 1 or 2 points at the end. Mildenberger showed good skills in that fight and even hurt Oscar Bonavena with a left hand once. I think he did much better against Muhammad Ali though. His boxing was based very much on the jab. He was a clever boxer, he fought with his brain. The best Bonavena I have ever seen was against Muhammad Ali. Boy, he hit Ali' many times for the entire (or the whole) fight and I am not sure that Ali was ahead when round 15 started!!!!!

Oscar Bonavena vs Vitali Klitschko would have been interesting.

| 7/1/04 07:01:54 AM | Evren | London | ||||| 10 |

I have a lot of footage of Mildenberger against Amos Lincoln, Billy Walker, Henry Cooper (remembering from an ailing memory) and he was impressive I thought. A precise boxer with a very disciplined style.

| 7/1/04 08:49:53 PM | Angelo | DC | || funktron@yahoo.com ||||| 10 |

Randy Johnson is indeed one of the best ever---you can make a case that he was the best of the 1990's into the 2000's. In my lifetime, I'd rate Bob Gibson as the best of the 60's (I was very young to remember this, but am basing it on footage and stats.). In my mind, Steve Carlton was the best of the 70's and Roger Clemens the best of the 80's---amazing since he's still mowing them down and it's 2004! Honorable mentions go to Tom Seaver, Nolan Ryan and maybe even put Tommy John in the group, for battling an injury that used to end most guys careers. Dwight Gooden could have been on the list and could have been first ballot hall of fame---but we all know about "could have beens."

| 7/1/04 10:46:36 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | || kentallenent@aol.com ||||| 10 |

Angelo, I remember Bob Gibson very well and he was indeed one of the best I have ever seen. Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale from his era, were also among the very best even if both of them ended their careers early due to arm injuries. Johnson, Clemons, Jack Morris, and Greg Maddox are the best of the recent crop of pitchers and they rank up there with the others I have mentioned. Of single seasons, Denny McClain's winning 31 games in the modern era is about the best I can remember but it was almost overshadowed by Gibson's incredible 1.12 ERA and Drysdale's 58 and 2/3 scoreless innings in a row that happened in the same season (broken by Orel Hershiser, another excellent recent pitcher). At his very best, I would go with Nolan Ryan as the one pitcher that at times was almost unhittable and he did it well into his forties, being measured at throwing almost 100 miles and hour even very late in his career, an amazing arm, but also the best and smoothest pitching mechanics I have ever seen. Johnson is a bigger man but Ryan knew how to put every once of his body into every pitch he ever threw. Pitchers before my time such as Bob Feller, Warren Spahn, Walter Johnson, and many others were I am sure also something special to see.

| 7/2/04 12:42:59 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | || kentallenent@aol.com ||||| 10 |

Angelo, how could I forget perhaps the greatest pitcher of them all, who even in his mid forties when he finally was allowed to pitch in the major leagues, was an effective relief pitcher, none other than Satchel Paige? It was a shame that he and many others were not seen by a large segment of the population due to the race barrier that didn't allow blacks in the mainstream leagues. But I have read about great pitching duels between Paige and pitchers such as Dizzy Dean, another great from before my time, during exhibition games that matched major leaguers verses Negro League players. I understand that Paige more than held his own.
Tyson didn't train for Buster Douglas. It's a damn shame he has to come back into the picture.

Tyson didn't train for Buster Douglas. It's a damn shame he has to come back into the picture.

Tyson didn't train for Buster Douglas. It's a damn shame he has to come back into the picture.

Tyson didn't train for Buster Douglas. It's a damn shame he has to come back into the picture.

Tyson didn't train for Buster Douglas. It's a damn shame he has to come back into the picture.

Hey Max, do you mean Tyson didn't train for his fight against Douglas and it is a damn shame he is still in the picture? Sorry, couldn't resist! You are very right though.

First of all I have just discovered on the web that I'd wear a 7 or 8 shoe size in Minneapolis. You Kent would wear 43-44 in Pisa. Tyson weighed in at 222 pounds for Douglas. He was slightly lighter than when he fought Trevor Berbick, so I guess he did train pretty hard for the Douglas fight. The problem for Mike was that James Buster did train too and was not afraid of him. Tyson is still fighting, I guess, because he needs money. I think this is not Kent's fault or Steve's fault or Oliver Norvel Hardy's fault! This is Michael Gerald Tyson's fault!

Larry Holmes, Greg Page and renaldo Snipes go through - next matchups are:

Muhammad Ali vs Oliver McCall
Ron Lyle vs Nino Valdes.

Muhammad Ali gives McCall a boxing lesson for eight rounds before McCall, very frustrated for not being able to catch Ali and hit him with many significant punches refuses to come out for round number nine. Poor Oliver just sits in his corner and cries his eyes out like a big giant baby and says no as he keeps pushing his cornermen away as they try to get him off of the stool to fight. Kind of mentally unstable McCall's answer to Roberto Duran's reaction to Sugar Ray Leonard. Ron Lyle wins by sixth round knockout over Nino. Lyle overpowers Valdez and gives him a fairly good beating while absorbing some hard shots by Valdez along the way.

Ali WD over Mcall
Lyle Ko Over Valdes

Sandy Koufax was the most dominant pitcher I have seen in my lifetime. There were other great ones but he was special. Carlton in the 70's.
(1) Gerry, you can be sure Mr. Paige's victories were real. By the time you saw him in the AL, he was in his 60s. Ask any major leaguer you know from '40 to '70. They'll know. (2) Everybody, will Oscar Bonavena be able to beat Bernard Hopkins? It's the first time in his career when Oscar is not the favorite. I think Bernard will stop him, maybe Rd 8 or 9. (3) You know, if it's valid to consider who's best "pound for pound", then it's valid to imagine all the fighters from all time in the same weight division and who would win. This game removes only the weight difference. Who do you think would win: Ali versus Sugar Ray Robinson, or Sugar Ray Leonard? Roberto Duran versus Rocky Marciano? Jerry Quarry versus Alexis Arguello? Nino Benvenuti versus Billy Conn? Hammerin' Henry Armstrong versus Tommy Hearns? Marvin Hagler versus Joe Frazier? Archie Moore versus Roy Jones, Jr? REMEMBER, THESE GUYS ARE ALL FIGHTING AT THE SAME WEIGHT. Would you pay to see any of these fights? (4) Sorry. I meant Oscar de la Hoya, not Oscar Bonavena. Welcome Ernie, interesting bouts in pound for pound match ups. They are very hard to pick winners. One thing for sure, Jerry Quarry fairs better than he did at heavyweight in that if I remember correctly, at least 47 or his 66 career pro fights, Jerry was outweighed by his opponents and even so, Jerry didn't do too badly. Jerry was also outweighed in seven out of his eight losses (not counting the loss at age 47 that should not have happened). It could be all of his losses but I don't know the weights of the Machen fight. Jimmy D, where are you? He knows this stuff. Ernie, you fall into the hype about Paige's age, he was probably around 45 when he started pitching for Cleveland and he lasted six years, which puts him at about 51 when he left. He did make one appearance for the Kansas City A's in his mid sixties and he went one inning and did not allow a run (just to qualify for a pension), so Paige must have been amazing in his younger days. Gerry, I was reading a book about Ted Williams discussing the twenty five best hitters of all time. Williams included Josh Gibson in this list based his talking to ex Negro league players who played with him and against him but also due to the fact that during a fifteen game exhibition tour against major league pitchers sometime during the 1930s, Gibson batted .415 with five home runs. Negro league statistics were at best unreliable and Gibson at times probably benefited from playing against lessor talent and Williams concedes this, but he also played against a lot of all time greats that were never recognized. Williams in his book felt although a lot of weight for picking the best hitters of all time was put on numbers, what kind of statistics a hitter put out, year in and year out, there was no way he could leave out Josh Gibson, considered the best hitter the Negro leagues ever had. I would include Paige in a list of pitchers for the same reasons Williams includes Gibson. wrong, I got a lotta stuff on JQ but some of it I already had. You had to buy a $5 dollar card, had to have another card made! Sheesh! it was ridiculous to say the least. I did get his hard stuff like TONY DOYLE I (1965) and JAMES J. WOODY ETC. There are a lot of discrepancies on Jerry's record at least 8 of the dates were wrong, And I should know, because I got them all off MICROFILM! TAKE CARE.

| 7/3/04 04:27:24 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | SPOKANE WASHINGTON | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10 |

And Kent, Massimo for once is right, Machen 193 to Jerry's 187. What a great picture. and write up the Times and LVRJ had on that fight. And Massimo my stooge buddy from Italy. I do not know the shoe size! take care.

| 7/3/04 04:50:40 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 |

Jimmy- You're a nice guy. What kind of fight was Machen-Quarry ? Close ? Exciting ? Jerry Quarry's fights were always or almost always exciting ! What were Jerry's weights for the two Ali' fights ? Thanks.

| 7/3/04 04:52:06 PM | Kent| La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

Jimmy D, I didn't know the weights on Quarry/Machen, so I was neither right or wrong. It does now show that Jerry only lost to fighters heavier than himself. Hey, I thought you were going to Vegas on July 28 and moving to Washington state after that. Too bad, I was planning to go to Vegas that weekend.Massimo, the pitcher is the player in baseball who throws the ball to the batters, who try to hit the ball. The pitcher tries to keep the batters from hitting the ball or at least to hitting it to one of the fielders who try to keep the batter from getting on the bases. After the ball is hit safely in fair territory, the batter becomes a runner who tries to advance around the bases back to home plate to score (the same place batters hit the ball from). It is a little more complicated than this but that is baseball for the most part.

| 7/3/04 05:35:46 PM | Massimo | Roma | maybe in baseball Italy would win.com | 10 |

Kent-Just thanks ! It's the first time in my life that I understand something about baseball. That's a dream that come true ! I'm writing and crying at the same time !

| 7/3/04 07:58:00 PM | Mike | Philadelphia | yammgammama300@aol.com | 10 |

fran- I think Carlton was the greatest pitcher.do you think pete rose should be in the hall of fame, i do.

| 7/3/04 08:43:07 PM | Angelo | DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 |

Josh Gibson was a superstar homerun hitter and would have been an alltime great in any era of the major leagues. Satch Paige was a brilliant pitcher and ditto for him---would be great yesterday, today or tomorrow. I'd have loved to see these guys play either in the Negro Leagues or better yet, in the majors. Yes, Pete Rose, baseballs all-time hits leader, should be in the Hall. The essence of baseball is the hit. This guy has the most...and he's not in the hall. Ridiculous. They don't have to let him manage again, but the rule should be changed so that players can still be voted in even if they're no longer affiliated with baseball. As for the fights: Ali hammers Oliver McCall and wins a lopsided decision or late round TKO and Ron Lyle pounds Valdez for a TKO in round 5.

| 7/3/04 09:46:55 PM | Greg Schasser | Canton, OH | comingsoon.com | 10 |

Hope this goes thru. I'm poking around the computer and was surprised to see such a good site for this fighter. Alot of guys I know don't like boxing but I do and Jerry Quarry was a guy I remember hearing about who contended in the 1970s. There sure were some very good guys back then! I didn't realize Quarry was so small for a heavyweight, I think he must have been very good to challenge Muhammed Ali and Joe Frazier. Now that I've seen this site, I'm going to have to read up on him a little. I did hear of his brother Mike too, that he was also very good, must be some family! How close did the Quarrys get to being champ? I guess I'll have to read up and find out. Thanks, nice site, I'll be back.

| 7/3/04 10:59:14 PM | Kent Appel | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

Welcome
Greg, Jerry Quarry advanced to the number one contender spot three times in his career, getting two title shots. After making it to the finals in the WBA tournament to name a new champion after Muhammad Ali was forced to retire due to his legal difficulties at the time, Jerry lost a fifteen round split decision to Jimmy Ellis. Jerry also lost on cuts in seven rounds to Joe Frazier for the title in a brutal fight in which both fighters went toe to toe in a real war. The first round of that fight was called one of the twelve best rounds in boxing history by The Ring Magazine. Oh by the way, Jerry got the better of Joe in that great round. Jerry's biggest wins were over Floyd Patterson, Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers, and Buster Mathis. Jerry also defeated rising young contenders such as Mac Foster and Thad Spencer. Foster going into his fight with Quarry, had a record of 24-0, 24 by Knockout, while Spencer had just upset the WBA number one contender Ernie Terrell. In addition to these fighters, Jerry had wins over contenders such as Jack Bodell, Larry Middleton, Lorenzo Zanon, Brian London, among others.
Jerry Quarry was called the best heavyweight to never win a title by former champion George Foreman.

Mike Quarry was a fine light heavyweight who got one title shot against legendary champion Bob Foster but lost by a fourth round knockout.
In a shameless plug, go to www.eastsideboxing.com and click on a link called "The Time Tunnel" for an article I wrote about Mike and his career entitled. "Mike Quarry, A Warrior in his Own Right." On the list of articles in the "Time Tunnel" section there is also an article I wrote about Jerry's fight with Ron Lyle and another about Jerry's career from another writer. I hope you check it out.
Newcomers, feel free to vote on our hypothetical heavyweight tournament featuring 64 of the best heavyweights since Rocky Marciano was champion (the 1950's). All you have to do is vote for who you think would win a particular bout.

Jerry's biggest win was against Lorenzo Zanon, by far. Nobody in the boxing world would remember Jerry Quarry without that win.
have given Lyle a competitive and interesting fight. I know Nino's record pretty well but I have never had the opportunity of watching him in the ring. What kind of fighter was? Did he punch hard? Could he take a good punch? Did he like spaghetti? Thanks.

| 7/5/04 01:56:49 AM | Greg Schasser | Canton, OH | stillcomingsoon.com | 10 |

Kent. I think it's cool you can chat here without registering like some other places. This site says Jerry Quarry won the National Golden Gloves, did he beat anyone who also was a contender? Sounds like he was a very good amateur, I don't think that is very common. In reading up, his fights with Patterson seem to have been very close. It doesn't sound like Quarry got much credit against him. Patterson was a former champ, how well did Quarry do against him? I've read Quarry was expected to beat Jimmy Ellis. I don't know much about Ellis. Quarry had title shots against Frazier and Ali and was very highly ranked, not too bad at all. I'll have to read up on his record. Thanks cool site.

| 7/5/04 10:31:56 AM | Fran | Philly | plc7755@aol.com | 10 |

MikeCarlton was a great pitcher and probably the best of all time definitely in a class by himself. It's hard to put anyone else on the same list with him. The thing is I think the same of Koufax who was great in a way but different in that he was so good then disappeared from the majors. So the pick for me is Carlton or Koufax and its something to think about.As far as Pete Rose in the Hall of Fame, it's a matter of them recognizing the greatest hitter that ever played the game or not. Its to their benefit to put him in because it makes the hall of Fame look stupid with out him. My opinion is they never should have kept him out. He should have been in as soon as he was eligible.

| 7/5/04 01:23:20 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

Greg, Jerry fought Ellis with a chipped vertabrae so he essentially fought with a broken back. He had been complaining of pain but it wasn't discovered until after the fight. I think Jerry would have likely one a rematch. As far as I know, Jerry didn't beat anyone famous in the golden gloves.I have never seen the first Patterson fight all of the way through but the in the second one, Jerry knocks down Patterson two times, once in the second round and once in the fourth round. The rest of the rounds were very competitive so I believe Jerry won the bout fairly. Patterson would have had to dominate Jerry in most of the rest of the rounds to gain a win and I just don't see it that way. A lot of the rounds could have gone either way so I guess a case could be made for Patterson if the judges had given most of the rest of the rounds to Patterson but they didn't.

| 7/5/04 07:23:45 PM | Mike | philly | yammagamma300@aol.com | 10 |

FranI agree with you about Pete Rose.Now Jerry was a great fighter and being Irish myself you gotta love him. But being from philly i always liked smoking Joe, all ways down to earth a real great fighter from Philly.

| 7/5/04 07:27:00 PM | Greg Schasser | Canton, OH | soon | 10 |

I did read that Quarry had a broken bone in his back for Ellis, which was a match for a belt. I'm surprised it wasn't postponed. I've read Quarry was rated as very tough, his record seems to prove that. I do know who Earnie Shavers was, he was a very big name here along with Micheal Dokes, who held a belt in the early 80s. Earnie was a huge puncher, and I've heard Ron Lyle also was a real contender, both met Ali and didn't do too bad. So those are real big wins along with his win over Patterson. Sorry, I'm still learning about some of the other guys he beat, it sounds like some of them were also ranked. If Quarry did not get much credit for beating Patterson, he may have won some of the other matches that were draws also? He did have several draws. I think Quarry is more known for fighting well but losing to big name guys who were just too big for him, is that fair? Ali, Frazier, Norton, Chuvalo all had to outweigh him by a lot. Quarry and Patterson probably should have been cruiserweights, even Sonny Liston was a big heavyweight back then. I did see the statement George Foreman made about Quarry, quite a compliment, Foreman was such a huge puncher. Quarry lost twice to both...
Ali and Frazier. I have read where he did well the first time he met both guys, maybe not quite as well the second time. Still, fighting those guys and being rated so high is pretty damn good. I don't know that much about light heavyweights. But it sounds like Mike Quarry made it just about as far as his brother. That's pretty rare for one family to have two top guys like that, I know the Spinks and the Klitschkos also have had two top boxers. Well thanks again. I'll be back.

I believe one of the Golden Glove guys JQ beat was Clay Hodges. Hodges lost to Frazier in the 1964 Olympic trials, but beat George Foreman at least twice, I believe. Hodges was the man to go to the Olympics in 1968, Foreman was the alternate. Again, this probably needs to be double checked... I think Pete Rose should be in the baseball Hall of Fame. But, that's up to baseball, not the fans. Pete pissed them off... Steve Carlton is one of my faves also, on the RJ topic. All the top strikeout guys were great, in my opinion... Good to see another Ohio guy here, I think few know how close Jerry came to beating Frazier or how well he fought Ali before the cut or that he had just two weeks to face Norton but still took it straight at him. Chuvalo was a plain robbery, Quarry had him. Spencer and Foster are very big wins, those guys were never the same after JQ, Mathis either.

Racism, both pro and con, played a role in Jerry's rise and in his being overlooked in 1973. He is considered among the top 30 heavyweights of all-time, that tells it was more than hype. He should have had a belt for beating Ellis, that was his real chance in my opinion. He was better than Ellis, but couldn't prove it that night. I consider both Quarrys as former champs by today's definition of multiple belts and a cruiserweight division. They were real boxing stars and that is why this site is here.

Kent, a chipped vertebra is in no way comparable to a broken back, which is a significant interruption to the spinal column and usually causes paralysis. It is painful as hell, but he may not have felt much while fighting for all the adrenaline he had going.

Gerry and others, why all the excuses made for Jerry Quarry? He was a fine heavyweight, lost several times in championship bouts and that was that. It's ridiculous to say he "almost" won this or that fight. Besides, to Ali? No. To Frazier? Hell no. Joe beat him soundly, hurt him badly. Judging the effects of even one fight is not easy. Some guys get knocked out for a few seconds, even standing up, then their head clears and they're OK. Others show no noticeable change but are subtly changed forever. Judging by what eventually happened with Jerry, I think he was hurt much worse than anyone thought and much earlier than anyone thought. Ali, too.

Also, it seems to me there are about 500 fighters, most heavyweights, you guys talk about here. I'm rusty, but how many possible bouts is that? The sum of 500 times 499, divided by 2? Wouldn't that be in the ballpark of 25,000 fights? What are we gonna do after we get those settled? Last, sorry to change sports, but is there any way to find out (or anybody you can pay) the lifetime BA and record of one baseball hitter against one pitcher? My hometown of Fullerton, CA -- right near you, Kent? -- had 2 Hall of Famers -- Steve Busby of Fullerton High, pitcher, and Gary Carter of Sunny Hills High, catcher. How'd they do against each other? Massimo, paisan, I got you #3 on my all-time greatest heavyweight list, right between #1 Marciano, #2 Carnera, and #4 Evangelista. Addio, paisan!
anyone can find statistics on how a certain batter does against a certain pitcher. I know they keep these stats for use by major league teams for coaching purposes but I have never seen them released to the public.

Yes, I have found memories of our La Habra High School teams playing against both Fullerton High and Sunny Hills High. I remember playing baseball against Fullerton on a field at Fullerton College next door and getting a long double and stealing third base (I was out by a mile but the third baseman dropped the ball). Wouldn't it be funny if the pitcher was Busby? I don't think so though as we were probably not in the same age range and he was probably well known in the area, even in high school, and I would have known if it was him I got the double off of. It was probably some unknown high school pitcher who either beat us or we beat him. I don't even remember who won the game, just my double.

| 7/6/04 05:27:31 AM | Paul | Sydney || same as before || 5 | Roadscholarette took all you guys for a long, long ride. Do a google search on the name 'roadscholarette' and you will see hundreds of posts she has done on all sorts of sites, holding herself out to be the exemplar of all knowledge, the font of all wisdom, Smokin' Joe's number one girl, etc.....but she is a bloody know-it-all. That woman is the biggest pest in the universe. Sheesh. Try page 2 of the google search on 'roadscholarette' and you will see that she writes racially prejudiced nonsense about being "raped by a nigger" - her words. (Actually she goes much worse than that, but it is too vulgar to repeat here.) Everything she wrote on this site she plagiarised from somewhere else. I haven't been here for a while, but you guys stick together, which is good, writing mostly on the same old topics, which is a little boring, but where is the Koo Koo Clock? He added a lot of harmless levity to this site and you guys need his wit and humour. You guys didn't appreciate the hidden meanings, and the other funny stuff like telling someone to "stay gone". Silly, but funny. You took him too seriously, interpreted his words too literally. He had even stopped annoying Kent, last time I checked in. He is Jerry Quarry's number 1 fan and you guys chased him away. Koo Koo come back! They need you.

I see that Massimo is still visiting here and his English has improved. So has his slang. And where is Evren B, or whatever his name was (Bearcave)?. Wasn't he going to visit Steve for a fight? Did it happen? Looking at the recent posts, everything appears too tame and polite. Not enough robust debate on interesting boxing topics, personalities, controversies, etc. You need a feud between a couple of posters to pep things up. I'd like to see Gerry and Fran get it on. Only kidding. Even, I see that you are arranging another tournament. I hope your life is fun and that you are well. Anyway, I had better go as I have probably worn out my welcome (again).

| 7/6/04 06:01:39 AM | Massimo | spaghetti, pizza e lasagne || chimezie kudu.com || Ernie-   As an heavyweight I would have been still smaller than Jerry Quarry. I'm about 134 lbs. Considering that Tommy Burns and Sam Langford were considered top heavyweights in their times, I guess I'd have been considered in the same way in Mozart's times! Of course they would call me Massimo "The Giant" Cini in the wrestling business! In wrestling all is possible, buried men win fights and midgets become giants! I see that Massimo is still visiting here and his English has improved. So has his slang. And where is Evren B, or whatever his name was (Bearcave)? Wasn't he going to visit Steve for a fight? Did it happen? Looking at the recent posts, everything appears too tame and polite. Not enough robust debate on interesting boxing topics, personalities, controversies, etc. You need a feud between a couple of posters to pep things up. I'd like to see Gerry and Fran get it on. Only kidding. Even, I see that you are arranging another tournament. I hope your life is fun and that you are well. Anyway, I had better go as I have probably worn out my welcome (again).

| 7/6/04 07:08:21 AM | Evren | London || @ || 10 | Lyle and Ali to go through! Paul I think you have mixed my name up with another poster: -   My name is Evren and there was an Evan B - we are two different people. Nice to hear from you anyway.   Ken Norton vs Ingemar Johansson  Pinklon Thomas vs Gerry Cooney  Good luck guys.. |

| 7/6/04 07:48:42 AM | Massimo | Roma || 4 || 10 | Hi Paul, welcome back! Thanks for the compliment! My Italian is way better than my English! But nowadays, English is somehow more important than even Italian! Roadscholarette ain't Pol Pot, Hitler, Saddam Hussein, or Jeffrey Dahmer! I think you two are both nice guys. It's time for peace among you two. There are already too many wars on this Norton over Johansson by KO in the middle rounds. Norton escapes early onslaught (something he's had trouble with against other fighters) and recovers to rally like he did against Holmes. Norton picks up steam and finishes with a KO around the 9th round. Cooney over Thomas by KO. Thomas starts off like Holmes vs. Cooney, outboxing Cooney smartly. But unlike Holmes, Thomas tires in the middle of the fight. Cooney lands the one big punch that he couldn't get off against Holmes. Thomas rises, but is unsteady. Cooney goes in like he did against Norton, with a barrage of unanswered punches. The referee stops it in round seven or eight. Cooney over Thomas by KO.

Cooney by decision over Thomas and Norton by decision over Johansson. Cooney keeps Thomas at a distance all night long with his reach advantage but doesn't knock him out because Thomas takes a good shot. Norton survives a few tense moments when his legs are buckled by "Da Toonder" but wins on his speed advantage and long left jab. Paul, we haven't chased Koo Koo away. He pops in here sometimes but it isn't much fun for him if he doesn't have someone to pick on or maybe the Klock has become much too serious. He will be back here I am sure. Evren, Paul got you and Evan B backwards. I am sure he knows you are different people.

It would be funny though if all of us were one deranged person who wrote in with different names, sometimes arguing with himself.

Sorry, I don't see it as excuses or whatever. Quarry did lead Frazier after three rounds, he did have Norton covering on the ropes, he was apparently injured for Ellis, he was robbed against Chuvalo. To say he nearly beat these guys, to me, is not an exaggeration. JQ was more than a contender who lost to the best, he came alot closer to the very top than many realize. That's my story and I'm sticking to it ...

Cooney outboxes Thomas, both survive hard shots to last the distance, Cooney by decision. Ingo surprises Norton with toughness and punch before Just Ken takes command, Norton by KO7. Massimo, I have to agree, the best Italian heavy was Marciano, an American. Carnera is second, I did like Damiani also. Did you mention Antufermo and Benvenuti, both were great, in my opinion... Jimmy D., glad to hear you are researching weights for Jerry's matches, would love to see them all on this site. Thanks.

"To chase someone away", I have learned another English verb today, thanks Paul.

Johansson knocked out Eddie Machen in 1 round by using "The Hammer of Thor". Guys, I think he would have knocked out Norton too ! As he showed in the Tyson fight, Thomas could take a good punch ! Thomas b Cooney on points.

Ken Norton vs. Ingo, round one Ingo lands a hard right to the temple at the one-minute mark and has Norton reeling all around the ring. Johansson is throwing a lot of punches some landing; most are off the mark as Norton covers up along the ropes. Ingo tries to end it in the corner, blasting away at the 212 pound Norton. Kenny hangs on until the bell. In the second round Norton comes out a bit shaky and the 199 pound Johanson is completely crapped out huffing and wheezing like an old freight train, neither man wants to take a chance. By the end of the round Norton is getting the better of Ingo. In the third Ingo goes down from a left hook, but tags Norton with a right to the body that slows Kenny down. The forth round, Norton drops a cut and bleeding Ingo twice Johansson’s corner throws in the towel at 1:26. Cooney vs. Thomas, an un-spectacular fight Thomas, 217 pounds wins a decision over the 224 pound Cooney. Both men landed good shots and they were both hurt, Cooney was a little quicker and Thomas landed more punches. Thomas came on in the last two rounds as Cooney slowed down. Thomas hurt Cooney a couple of times in both rounds to leave a lasting impression on the judges. Ernie Laxalt, I didn't see anyone answer your questions about the P4P thing. here's mine. Ali vs. Robinson, Robinson by KO.S.R. Leonard vs. Ali, Leonard by Decesion.Duran vs. Marciano, Duran by Decision.Quarry vs. Arquello, Arquello by KOBenvenuti vs. Conn, Conn by KOArmstrong vs. Hearns, Armstrong by KOHagler vs. Frazier, Hagler by KOMoore vs Jones Jr, Moore by Decesion.For the sake of argument, I've removed all the intangeables, height, weight, reach etc. In other words they are all the same size say 6' 180lbs with a 75" reach. Kind of an "average guy size">

| 7/6/04 03:15:43 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10|I almost forgot, they all wear size 12 shoes|
| 7/6/04 03:28:59 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|SPOKANE
WASHINGTON||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Kent you lunkhead, A double poke in they eye, and a pie in the face for you, not only do I have to tell you what arena your in, I specifically told you July 29th in LAS VEGAS. And I appreciate you maybe making it up to Vegas. And next time for sure. I found out Pullman (Couggers) have all L.A. Times Micro. And I'll give it another go. Gerry I would like to get everything I've researched on his record. I have the score cards 28 Of 34 DECISIONS on his record. He was an UNDERDOG IN AT LEAST 13 matches. And that goes for all 4 Draws. And Massimo YES THE QUARRY-MACHEN bout was a great match, which would slow down, but then heat up as both combatants would try to knock they other out, forgive me people if you ask a question and I do not respond immediately, for my internet time is very limited for now. And Kent, Jerry only lost 1 bout when he had the advantage in weight. Ron Cranmer, who no one even acknowledges, except maybe Cranmer's mommy.]

| 7/6/04 03:43:09 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|They finale tally on the Weigh in's are OPPONETS 41 QUARRY 23 One even, and one undeterrned. And that is if Leslie Borden was 196 as listed Ring Magazine. Or 186lbs Boxing Illustrated. They L.A. TIMES had Borden at 196 And thats heavy for him. MASSIMO ALI-QUARRY I ALI 213 1/2 QUARRY 197 1/2. JERRY 5-2 UNDERDOG. ALI-QUARRY II ALI 216 1/2 QUARRY 198 AND A 5-1 UNDERDOG.|
| 7/6/04 03:57:22 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Ernie: It's not about excuses for Quarry, but about giving him his due. Uninformed boxing fans seem dwell on the nature of the losses later in his career (especially Ali II, Frazier II and Norton---how he was cut up in these fights). In fact, Howard Cosell, who I respected for having some boxing knowledge, made some crass remark about Earnie Shavers as being "one of the few who can claim a loss to Quarry" which is patently ridiculous. For Cosell to say that, it amplified what less informed people thought about JQ's career. I think the fans on this site just want to set the record straight by recalling all the great fighters Quarry was in against, and competed well against---and the very good ones who he defeated impressively (Like Shavers and Lyle). Ali and possibly Frazier are all-time top ten fighters in any weight class---Norton is likely a top twenty all-time heavyweight. These guys represent five of Quarry's defeats. That's very impressive, and I don't go along with your post, which seems to dismiss JQ as merely "good." His record, his opponents, his big wins---the era he fought in-- --all add up to something far better than "good."Like I said, it's not excuses (Lord knows Quarry doesn't need any of us to make excuses about his career.), but it's really paying tribute to him on his own site. |
| 7/6/04 05:20:04 PM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||same|||10|Kent, how are you? Hope all is well. You are a good singer, huh. I am completely tone deaf. Can't sing, can't dance. Going back reading a few posts makes me think your suspicion about one writer with multiple names is correct.Evren (from London), sorry I inadvertently mixed your name up, but I was being sincere in wishing that life is now fun for you because I remember you were going through a hard time last
The other guy - Even B - wrote interesting posts. I enjoyed them (even though some of it was to see whether he got a reaction, like he did with Steve). Even B's posts were challenging, fun to read, and intelligent.

Massimo, your English is very good. So is your knowledge of boxing. You mention seeing these ancient fights, etc. Where do you get the videos from? How do you find the time (what with you being the new Galileo at work).

Alex P. Keaton, I assume that to write "to chase someone away" is grammatically incorrect by creating a new English verb (as you wrote). Sorry, but how is it incorrect? I write English by 'ear' (whether it sounds right) rather than through formal education on it. I left school 30 years ago and have forgotten all the grammar rules. Cheers.

I don't think anyone needs to make excuses for Jerry Quarry. If you look at the era he fought in - Ali, Frazier, Ellis, Patterson, etc - it was probably the most competitive ever. In my view, just being a contender in that era was more meritorious than holding some of the modern day championship belts. If Quarry arrived on the scene any time over the last 15 years, how many titles would he have won (especially since there is cruiserweight for him as well)? How many of today's guys would have done better than Jerry if you put them back in his era? Not many. Only Holyfield, Tyson and Lewis, in my opinion. It can never be doubted that Quarry always tried his hardest, although his tactics (for example, once against Frazier) let him down. I can't recall him ever dodging or dogging a fight. He never took a dive. Never made excuses for a loss. Never blamed the referee. Never bashed motorists or grocers, either. I think his reputation can rest on its laurels.

By the way, did you hear about the terrorist who hijacked a plane load of lawyers. He threatened to release one every hour unless paid a million bucks.

ESPN in Italy shows some of these fights, once in a while. I didn't mean that "to chase someone away" is grammatically incorrect! I just meant that that was the first time I met the verb "to chase". I had to open my dictionary to understand what you were saying.

Jimmy-Thanks for the informations.

Bob-Thanks for the informations.

This guy Undertaker is a nut *! He should be stopped as soon as possible! He just can't keep burying people alive! It ain't a polite behaviour! I hope he and his brother Kane are going to get along, how should be among (or between) brothers! Kane seems such a kind and reasonable guy! He is a nut is slang. It just means "he is crazy".

Mr. Jimmy is... very missed. He was our friend and he added a lot to our goings on around here. I can't believe it can possibly be two years he has been gone. Time flies, whether we like it or not.

|7/7/04 05:21:41 PM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia90101@aol.com|||10|Well, its been 2 yrs since Dad, died, and nothing has been the same. We've all been lost just doing what we have to do to get through life. I know I am not the same, its been a rough 2 yrs. I or I should say we(his family) all love & miss him so very much, it hurts. I am glad he was my Father, things were not always easy, but we all loved each other and got through the rough times. I LOVE YOU DAD! MISS YOU SO VERY MUCH! |

|7/7/04 10:34:55 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||jgschultz11@aol.com|||10|One thing I've found so far, it is ten times easier to find a video on Jerry than a simple picture / image. I've tried hard and have just a dozen that are any good. THIS SITE NEEDS A PHOTO GALLERY. Any of you regular posters please advise me on this subject. Thanks. |

|7/8/04 12:25:18 PM|Massimo|Italia, the boot ( don't know its shoe size)|||10|Da Preem has won the " Italians in the world" Award ". Primo Carnera's daughter Giovanna Maria Carnera will pick up the award. Nino Benvenuti called Primo "the greatest Italian fighter " of the 90s. I thinkthat Nino was a little out of his mind when he said that, probably drunk. I mean, the Carnera who knocked out cold Sharkey ( who doesn't believe that that knock out was for real should just look at Sharkey's eyes soon after the punch landed ) and easily outpointed a masterful boxer like Tommy Loughran or creamed a rising prospect like Walter Neusel (they called him the new Max Schmeling ) was a very good heavyweight but... No way Carnera was the greatest Italian fighter ! No way in hell (slang).Duilio Loi, Bruno Arcari, Nino Benvenuti himselfand probably even Erminio Spalla were better than him. On 18 July 2004 will be inaugurated in Seguals a Museum dedicated to the memory of the Italian midget. You are all invited in Seguals in Friuli Venezia Giulia, in North-East Italy.Today, in the bus, a child of about 1 years old of age, wanted to shake hands with me. Boy, his little hand just disappeared in my own hand !What a strange sensation ! What a strange emotion ! An emotion to share with you friends!|

|7/8/04 12:38:16 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Massimo: "Big Hands" Massimo! Well, you talk about shoe size, but what about hand size? Johnny Bench (famous hall of fame baseball catcher) has HUGE hands! I think he once held seven baseballs in his hand (no, not a balancing act---he just scooped them up and could hold them. I wonder if boxers' fist size (which is part of the tale of the tape) is an important factor? |

|7/8/04 12:43:03 PM|max hord|fernandina bch,fla||maxhord@adelphia.net|||10|Nino was a pretty good fighter in an era that was full of good middles.

|7/8/04 01:10:17 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|Pinklon would drop a decision to Cooney and Norton would stop Johansson in the 7th.Has anyone seen any footage on Curtis 'hatchetman' Sheppard?|

|7/8/04 04:49:11 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|SPOKANE WASHINGTON||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Kent I know we kid each other a lot, And even Mr. Jimmy himself, got a kick out of the Moe thing. He was one class act who will always be missed. The man always made time for you, whatever he was doing. Mike was that way, and Arwanda was also extremely pleasant, of Boxing Kent, They most worthless stat of JQ'S career is KO vs TKO. Its like 19-TKO TO 11-10 Count Ko for Quarry 2 undetermind. Zanon, Guerra, Borden, Manley, and they UNBEATEN NO.1 contender Mac Foster all would not have beaten the 10 count vs Jerry. And there was nothing technical about them. I think the statistic was made for Ali. Its also 66-7 Jerry's knockdown vs opponent so far. So at least Quarry averages scoring a knockdown in every bout he had. His decision scoring to me was interesting 10-point must, and 5 point must systems, one Engal... referee's decision vs Middleton. The peculiar California system (which I favor). And the Madison Square Garden scoring by Round only.

7/8/04 06:20:20 PM | Massimo | Lo stivale (the boot) || || || || |||| | 10 | Angelo (but not Dundee, I guess)I'd like to know exactly how big are Shaq's hands in inches. They keep saying that he ain't good in free throws because his hands are too big. Are they bigger than Carnera's? Bigger than Liston's? Bigger than Andre's? Bigger than Lane's? Bigger than Coolidge's?

7/8/04 08:56:22 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | || || || || || || || | 10 | Jimmy D, yes Mr. Jimmy AKA James Quarry to those who don't know, was a nice guy. I know I only got to know him because his brothers were professional fighters but I am glad I did as he would have been worth knowing even if his brothers were not boxers. One thing you forgot to mention about Jerry and knockdowns is that Jerry was 4-2-1 in the fights in which he was knocked down. Jerry usually got up and fought back harder. In the fights he didn't win, one was the draw against Patterson in their first fight, one was the freak loss to Chuvalo, and one was in the second Frazier fight. Jerry just as easily could have been 6-1 in fights he was knocked down. I don't think he could have won the second Frazier fight as Joe was very good that night and Jerry just didn't have it.

| 7/9/04 04:19:14 AM | Massimo | Roma | || || || || || || || | 10 | Wilt Chamberlain did wear a size 14 shoe.

7/9/04 02:55:04 PM | Mike | yammagamma || yammagamma3000 || || || || || || || | 10 | Massimo, who cares!!!!

7/9/04 03:46:35 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 || || || || || || || | 10 | Mike,Are you for real? You cannot be serious! Everybody cares about that in the bottom of the heart, but it needs courage to admit it!

7/9/04 04:04:25 PM | Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com || || || || || || || | 10 | Massimo, Massimo, it's kind of freakish when you consider Wilt at 7'1" had a size 14 and Tyson at 5'10" has a size 13.5 shoe. The great Jazz/Blues musician Jelly Roll Morton was over 200 pounds and had size a 15 shoe and his hand spread was enough to cover a quarter of the piano keys. Quite a ladies man I hear. I would think Shaq's hands are quite a bit bigger than Da' Preem's though...I don't know. I don't think a fighters hand size has anything to do with punching power, three of heavyweights hardest hitting champions had a smaller fist size, Dempsey and Louis had an 11.5 inch fist while Marciano's fist measured 10.5. Massimo, I guess it's not the size, it's how you use it. Although.....

7/9/04 04:51:02 PM | Evren | London | || || || || || || || | 10 | Cooney and Norton are through.Next two matches: --Leon Spinks vs Jimmy Ellis Buster Douglas vs Joe FrazierGreat matches I think. Ali wore a size 12 Massimo!

7/9/04 05:27:13 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 || || || || || || || | 10 | Evren,What a disappointment! I thought Ali's shoe size was 13! Muhammad Ali's legend is over in my book! Bob,I wonder whether Andre's hand was big enough to cover Serena Grandi's or Pamela Anderson's breast!

7/9/04 06:16:10 PM | Jimmy Dorsey | Spokane | WASHINGTON | ronnyrains@yahoo.com || || || || || || || | 10 | Kent: Jerry was knocked down vs Roy Crear, Al "MEMPHIS" Jones (twice) Floyd Patterson, George Chuvalo, Joe Alexander and Joe Frazier. so he was 3-2-1 3-knockouts. His knockdown vs Rufus Brassell was after the bell and did not count. (no pun intended!). In the Jones fight alone Jerry suffered a broken jaw and lost 4 teeth!! And still came back for the KO. Some of that Microfilm stuff will drive you crazy, if your not already there.

7/9/04 08:27:04 PM | Angelo | dc | funktron@yahoo.com || || || || || || || | 10 | Frazier out hustles Buster Douglas. After a slow start, Frazier finds his rhythm around the 3rd or 4th round. He begins to smoke heavily around the middle rounds, ending the fight with a 10 count knockout with a vintage power hook---Frazier by knockout, round nine, over a very tired Douglas.Jimmy Ellis wins a unanimous decision over Spinks. Spinks wins one or two early rounds, actually hurting Ellis in the second round. But Ellis settles in and picks Spinks apart, making him look very wild and amateurish at times. Ellis by decision, and it's not close.
In a wild affair in which there are no less than four knockdowns, Jimmy Ellis wins a split decision over Leon Spinks. Spinks puts Ellis down in the second and third rounds with wild overhand rights and Ellis returns the favor in rounds seven and nine with right hand leads that catch Spinks rushing in. Ellis outboxes Spinks in most of the other rounds but one judge votes for Spinks with the other two picking Ellis as the winner.

Douglas is ahead of Frazier after five rounds but Joe gets to smokin full steam ahead to pound out a close but unanimous decision over Douglas.

Massimo, I have never heard of Serena Grandi, what is her shoe size? I doubt whether Andre's hand would cover Pam Anderson's breast but maybe El Gigante's hand would or Shaq's? Ali wore a 13, same as Bill Clinton. Ellis avoids the Spinks Jinks to win an unanimous decision. Frazier pounds out an unanimous decesion over Douglas, who is in good shape for a change at 224. Joe knocks Buster down in the 10th round, Joe's right eye is closed by the Douglas jab.

Serena Grandi was a famous star in Italy back in the 80's and 90's. She has a huge breast ( much bigger than Pamela's ) and she gave me inspiration a couple of times ( if you understand what I mean...). She is about 5'7", but I don't know her shoe size.

You are asking me what would have happened between the Frazier who destroyed Jimmy Ellis on 16 February 1970 and the Douglas who gave Tyson a good whipping. Hell, hard to say! I go with Joe, by 11 round knockout, in one of the toughest fights of his career. Joe Frazier got way more guts than Mike Tyson and Buster Douglas ain't George Foreman after all!

Ellis b Leon Spinks on points
You are asking me what would have happened between the Frazier who destroyed Jimmy Ellis on 16 February 1970 and the Douglas who gave Tyson a good whipping. Hell, hard to say! I go with Joe, by 11 round knockout, in one of the toughest fights of his career. Joe Frazier got way more guts than Mike Tyson and Buster Douglas ain't George Foreman after all!

Ellis would beat Spinks in the middle rounds, Spinks would run out of gas.

I pick Ellis over Leon - better all round boxer. Frazier would outhustle Douglas but have some troubles along the way. Similar to Fraziers fight with Mathis I guess. Would be a great fight though...both of them.

Interesting pair of fights. Ellis vs. Spinks, which Leon shows up? Doesn't really matter. Spinks pressures early, using his angles. But Elliss jabs and controls the toothless wonder to a decision. Which Douglas shows up for Frazier? The one who was an underachiever much of his career, most likely. Douglas has jab and punch for Frazier early, and leads after four rounds. Frazier takes over from there, going hard to the body, hooking and uppercutting to the head. Frazier by TKO 10.

7/13/04 02:52:15 AM|Ernie Laxalt|Reno, NV||elax66@aol.com|||10|My thanks to Kent and Killer Massimo and all the rest. I'm impressed with the way you fielded my criticism without anger and explained your positions. You are right, too, and I was wrong. Yes, JQ did fight as tough opponents as anyone in any division I know of, including several immortals. His record is outstanding and great. If there were any way to measure ring courage, he might be the greatest of all time. Kent, as to Busby at FUHS, he graduated in '67. Was that your time? La Habra had rough, tough teams and when we went up for football games, there were always some fights, usually against Mexican-American guys. That's when it would have been handy to have the Quarry brothers with us. (Jeez, Jerry in a street fight -- OUCH!) I'm a little surprised some of you rate Buster Douglas so highly. Anyone mind explaining your reasoning? Just one note. The Lakers are now 1 average team. Even if Kobe returns, they'll be lucky to get to the playoffs. Owner Jerry Buss's original mistake was not keeping Jerry West happy enough to stay here. Speaking of basketball and for that matter, other sports, who do you all think were some of the best fighters? Gordie Howe was one tough dude. In basketball, Tommy Hawkins was, too. One of the most heart-stopping punches I ever saw was when Rudy Tomjanovich ran up behind Kermit Washington who was fighting someone else, and impure instinct or reaction, Kermit wheeled around and smashed his face. Well, we all would have. I never saw Chamberlain, Olajuwon, Ewing, Shaq or any other 7-footer in a good fight. Did you? One time Kent Benson, as a rookie, elbowed Kareem Abdul Jabbar hard in the gut with a cheap shot. A few minutes later, Kareem ran up beside Benson and broke his own hand flattening him. Benson needed facial reconstruction surgery. One time in the 60s there was a mediocre heavyweight about 6'8" fighting at the Olympic in LA. When interviewed, he said, "Basketball is way rougher and more dangerous because you never know when people are swinging on you." Hell, that's how I ALWAYS felt when I fought!!!

7/13/04 05:28:47 AM|q|q||q|||10|prove
7/13/04 05:47:28 AM|Deacon Sharpe|Roma, remember Albertone ?||4|||10|Ernie-I think that, when in good shape and motivated, Buster Douglas was an excellent heavyweight, brave, with a good reach, a decent punch and yeah, even a decent shoe size. In this tournament the fight are thought as, prime vs prime, so I think that Buster Douglas would have given Frazier a very hard time, before losing. I think Jerry Quarry is about as great as Patterson, Charles and Walcott, a top 30 heavyweight ever, even better than Spalla.I could have easily hit (or hiten ) Jabbar in the guts with my elbow, since (or as ) he is about half a meter taller than I am( or than me) ( 7'2, against 5'6). I have read somewhere that Paul Wight is 6'8 tall and wears a shoe size 19. 6'8 is a height of a midget in my book. I have read that Shaq will leave the Lakers. This is very sad. It ain't the same without O'Neal. Greetings.

7/13/04 06:19:09 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Ernie, I graduated high school in 1977 so Busby is just a wee bit older than me.La Habra is a cool town, kind of boring to some but peaceful most of the time. The whites and Mexicans have always lived in relative harmony and I have counted many from each group as friends down through the years. Sports had a lot to do with this, in particular Little League baseball, which brought, in my time, a lot of kids together. There have been gang problems from time to time but you find A-holes everywhere.As far as Jerry as a street fighter, we have discussed this before but anyway briefly, Mr. Jimmy, Jerry's brother, said he never remembered Jerry ever losing in a street fight. Jimmy D, the poster here who lived in Bakersfield for a time, said that supposedly some character named Porkchop took Jerry down in a streetfight. I talk to Bob Quarry, the youngest Quarry brother at times but I keep forgetting to ask him about this. He may not know though as he is quite a bit younger than Jerry and Mike. Maybe some of the other Quarry family members know something about this. Not that it is very important and that is probably why I don't make a point of asking Bob about this.

Next batch of fights:
- Ezzard Charles vs Mike Dokes
- Bonecrusher vs Thad Spencer
- A couple of Big Boys vs Little Boys matches

Dokes wins a split decision against Charles and Spencer wins a unanimous decision against Bonecrusher. Two tough fights---tough to figure out!

Tommy and Frazier go through.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ellis and Frazier go through.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Next batch of fights:
- Ezzard Charles vs Mike Dokes
- Bonecrusher vs Thad Spencer
- A couple of Big Boys vs Little Boys matches

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/13/04 11:48:30 AM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Dokes and Thad Spencer post wins. Dokes wins a split decision against Charles and Spencer wins a unanimous decision against Bonecrusher. Two tough fights---tough to figure out!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/13/04 02:40:17 PM</th>
<th>Forest Ward</th>
<th>New York City</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hi folks, just a word about Al Gavin, the well known cut man who passed away last Thursday. I first met Al 37 years ago when he was a boxing coach for the Police Athlete League (PAL). About 10 years ago we became good friends. Al was a true boxing historian. He had a lot of class. He never said a bad word about anyone. He did not like many people, but he kept it to himself. Al was a good man. He will be missed.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/13/04 03:16:09 PM</th>
<th>Jimmy Dorsey</th>
<th>Spokane Washington</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Kent if you remember right, that was supposed to be top secret info between us on porkchop and not be on the sight!! Well I do not see any harm in it now or whenever. Now that you mentioned it, it supposedly happened twice! And once in Oildale. I've heard a lot about Jerry's Street endeavors, And that they only one's I ever heard of him losing. Which by no means is no disgrace anyway. And that other party was &quot;One badd dude&quot; and big, which also does not mean a whole lot in Jerry's case. I guess I'd better watch what I say to people in the future. Unless I want it repeated, Nothing against Kent. For he has spent his time and money. For only good things here.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/13/04 04:55:17 PM</th>
<th>Bob Bumbera</th>
<th>NC</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Massimo, Serena Grandi!!!, very nice. Born in 1958, same year as me. A very good year indeed! Charles over Dokes. Both men had their moments, Charles at 188 was just more consistant than the 224 pound Dokes. Ezz gets the nod by one point on each judges scorecard. Bonecrusher Smith wins by 6 round KO over &quot;Bad Thad&quot;.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/13/04 05:16:07 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Sorry Jimmy D, I guess I let it slip because I don't think it is a very important or relevant issue and I honestly don't remember you saying that particular piece of info was confidential. It is just something that might have happened many years ago that means absolutely nothing in the long term scheme of things. Funny how I could never remember the name Porkchop until now. Oh by the way, you can still trust me to keep things in confidence. In the future, I will just keep everything we discuss off of the record.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/13/04 07:51:55 PM</th>
<th>Brenda</th>
<th>CA</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Sorry have been out with a broken foot, Anglo no one takes your comments behind what you said. We miss our brothers too, and yes it was Jim who worked so hard to start this foundation and Jerry who gave his all during his live and career, that keeps it going. Jim's two years gone just past. This web keeps both in the for front and the problems with boxing on our minds. Thanks!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/13/04 07:56:34 PM</th>
<th>Brenda</th>
<th>CA</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Jerry never lost a street fight, he and Mike Nixon both went to the hospital, after two-stepping one night.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/14/04 02:36:05 AM</th>
<th>Potsie Webber</th>
<th>Roma, the capital of Italy</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Charles b Dokes on points. Ezzard Charles' career was one of the most interesting careers ever! He beat Archie Moore 3 times, when Archie was still under 90 years old. Last night they showed the highlights of Charles vs Walcott II. What a fight! Charles knocked down Walcott in round 9 with a left hook harder than any left hook I have ever thrown! Great fighter!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Thad Spencer KO 2

Smith showed to be a chump against Mike Tyson! He was scared at death and refused to fight! But the man can punch, guys... The man can punch! Ask Tim Witherspoon and Frank Bruno!

| 7/14/04 04:53:23 AM | Richie Cunningham | La Habra, CA by way of Milwaukee || Sunday, Monday, Happy Days.com || 10 |

Bonecrusher Smith KO 6 over Thad Spencer, Ezzard Charles by decision over Mike Dokes.

Some of these guys were just flashes in the pan and had no longevity. They are up against solid seasoned pro's from another era.

| 7/14/04 01:14:21 PM | Richie Cunningham | La Habra, CA by way of Milwaukee |

Smith overpowers Spencer and Charles outspeeds Dokes.

| 7/14/04 01:14:19 PM | Fran | Philly || plc7755@aol.com || 10 |

Some of these guys were just flashes in the pan and had no longevity. They are up against solid seasoned pro's from another era.

| 7/14/04 01:17:18 PM | Fran | Philly || plc7755@aol.com || 10 |

Spencer over Smith

| 7/14/04 03:15:00 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | Spokane WA |

Charles over Dokes

| 7/14/04 03:40:04 PM | Max Hord | Fernandina Beach, FL || maxhord@adelphia.net || 10 |

A pretty good website to view boxers records is "boxing rec". Not completely accurate but close.

| 7/14/04 07:16:19 PM | Greg Schasser | Canton, OH || coming soon || 10 |

Gotta go with the local star, Michael Dokes over Charles. I think Charles would go about 190 pounds, Dokes would be too big for him. I'll take Bonecrusher in his match too, same reason. I did see that boxrec site to see Quarry's record, he beat a lot of guys with good records, even if some of those guys are not well known. Spencer and Foster were too very high ranked guys, nobody I know has ever heard of them, it's like they disappeared after Quarry beat them. Jerry had 15 or so more wins than Frazier had total fights when they met the first time, and Frazier started his career sooner! Maybe Quarry had too many before reaching the top? He was very close to being champ, but there were four big champions in his era it seems to me. Foreman's compliment of him is very good, but I think George would have been way too big and strong for him. Quarry did have his respect, which is not a small thing. Really interesting reading about Quarry's era. Thanks again.

| 7/14/04 07:46:01 PM | Gerry | Cleveland || jgschultz11@aol.com || 10 |

I rate Charles as clearly better than Dokes, and very tough. Charles was very, very close to beating Marciano, and was a great boxer. Dokes was vulnerable to accurate punchers like Coetzee, Charles would win a lopsided decision. Spencer-Smith is tough to call. Smith could punch, is a lot like today's guys in that he is a so-so boxer. Spencer could really box, he would really bother Smith, I think. Could go either way, I'll take Spencer by close decision, taking Smith's best punches. As far as Foreman-Quarry, not to beat an old horse, Foreman would have taken Quarry as a very serious opponent if they had met. Whatever their diff in size, that really says something more than the kind compliments. Thanks. |
Gerry, the thing about Dokes is he wasted his talent by using drugs. He admits to snorting Cocaine before the Coetzee fight. Coetzee was a bit of a plodder, with the upright, stiff European style of boxing, although he did have a good left jab to go with a hard right hand. Dokes was not at his best when they fought and maybe he could have outboxed Coetzee if he had been but who knows, Coetzee may have dropped the right hand bomb on him anyway. In any case, I tuned into the fight expecting a good fight only to see Coetzee dominate most of the rounds leading to a tenth round knockout. Dokes would have made the fight close, even if he lost if he had been at his best.

Jerry Quarry would have been clearly underdog against George Foreman, let's say 1-4 or 1-5. Jerry did beat Ron Lyle. Lyle was almost as wilt* as Foreman, could punch hard and, as far as skills go, ( eh, eh, I'm learning English) he was at least as good as Giorgio Eduardo. If Peralta could give George a pretty close fight, I think Jerry would have had a decent chance of doing the same. I think Peralta's chin was one of the sturdiest in boxing history, but Jerry's chin was very good too. And Jerry wouldn't have been intimidated by Foreman. Nobody could intimidate Jerry! Eeeeeeeeeeeeh gia', gia', gia', gia' !!!!!!!!!!!! Don't you agree Cunningham? I got it, I still got it! "wilt" it's slang! It means " tall ".

I see what you guys mean about Buster Douglas. Anyone who is his size with skills has to be respected. It interested me that he has diabetes. Any other outstanding fighters with diabetes?All I can say is this Porkchop character must have had a baseball bat or brass knuckles to down JQ, or maybe caught him after too many beers or something. Of course, it couldn't have been a bat or knucks, as Jerry's brothers would have retaliated massively. A lucky kick that caught JQ? I can't imagine anyone stupid enough to take JQ on, unless maybe the stupid guy's twin brother was King Kong. One of my good La Habra buds was Xavier Campos, known as X, Kent. He's an LA fire captain now, somewhere in East LA, unless he retired. Real big dude, maybe 6'1", 240. Good football center. I wear a size 13 but was not a good fighter. As the old saying goes, I enjoyed it until the other guy hit back! Anyone know is Joey Orbillo is still an LA cop? An outstanding guy, and brave against old pal JQ even though very much outclassed. I wonder what shoe size Gene (Big Daddy) Lipscomb or Rosey Grier wore. (They were huge American footballers, Massimo. Buon giorno, paisan!) Didn't basketball center Bob Lanier wear a 22 or so? Are any of the young Quarrys boxing now?

Ernie, Xavier Campos does not ring a bell although I remember Leo and Rene Campos who lived around the corner from me. Maybe he was related to them. They would have graduated between 77 to 79. Both of them were average size guys, around 5'10" or so, maybe 160 to 180 pounds or so. Massimo, isn't American television great? or at least it was great. Sincerely Richard J. Cunningham.

Morris Thorpe, who ? I'd trade Kobe Bryant for Warren Coolidge, that's for sure! Warren rappresents the biggest waste of talent in basketball history! He was potentially way better than Wilt. But you just can't achieve greatness with a coach like Ken Reeves and a team like the Carver! Come on! Warren was the only champion in that team !!!!! The other guys were only good players, nothing more !Richard J.-Yeah, the American TV is very funny and enjoable. I did enjoy very much TV shows like FAME, FAMILY TIES, THE WHITE SHADOW, HAPPY DAYS and I am a long time fan of the famous soap opera with Katherine Kelly Lang, Ronn Moss etc. I note an asymmetry in the USA-ITALY relationship. I mean, I know everything about USA, while you don't even know that Italy is in Europe. You don't know who Claudio Baglioni is, you don't know who Lucio Battisti is, you don't know who Erminio Spalla is, you don't know who Serena Grandi is, you don't know who Anna Falchi is, you don't know who Bruno Conti is. You don't know who Giuseppe Verdi is, you don't know who Giacomo Puccini is (che gelida manina, se la lasci riscaldar, cercar che giova ? Al buio non si trova ! Ma per fortuna e' una notte di luna e qui la luna l' abbiamo vicina ! Aspetti signorina, le diro' con due parole, chi son, chi son !!!!!!!! (dalla Boheme, one of the most beautiful operas ever written, GIACOMO PUCCINI). Greetings.See you soon guys !
No we have no young quarry's boxing anymore, yes it was Dianna who was the singer. When we were young my dad had all of us entertain him and my mom. Nixon was married to my younger sister, thirty years ago. He did like getting into fights who knows why. Jerry never lost a street fight believe me it did not happen, so who ever porkchop is he is putting out pork barrel.me |

You know where Wednesday, Thursday, Happy Days.com Talk about sticking out like a sore thumb? A jewesh kid on a Los Angeles inner city team, not likely.|

Chucky Arcola Milwaukee, as always arnolds.com My cousin Fonzie is always right! He was part of the Falcons, he is a tough guy! I remember when Coolidge played with the Arnold Globetrotters in un provino (sorry, I forgot English, I don't know "provino" in English), just like Wilt. They didn't accept him in the team. What a fool bunch of idiots !!!!!!!Too bad for them! To refuse Coolidge in a basketball team is like to refuse Pele' or Diego Maradona in a soccer team !!!!!!!!Or Bobby Fisher in a chess team !|

I hope people can forgive our silliness with the TV names. We are just having a little fun and even if someone doesn't think it is funny, cut us some slack. There have been a lot worse things written here at times. Life is too short to be serious all of the time anyway.|

I am attending the Kirk Johnson comeback fight versus a fighter named Gilbert Martinez on Sunday. I will be at the weigh in today and it will be interesting to see what weight Johnson comes in at. He came in at 260 pounds in his last fight against Vitali Klitschko and he got creamed in less than two rounds. Let's see if he has trained at all for this fight. His opponent is 18-7-1, 7 by KO not a big threat but you never know.|

Jerry Quarry vs Doug Jones around 1967 would have been a great fight !|

A guy with a standing reach of about 7'1" Roma in Europa (Kent knows that ) Jerry Quarry vs Doug Jones around 1967 would have been a great fight !| will have to work too hard to keep you balanced, and you'll be easier to knock down. I've always been a big dude, and Mother Nature is usually just right: size 10 or up for a 6-footer, but I can't say for the lighter classes. I used to know former middleweight #1 contender Mando Ramos, and he had what seemed to be small hands and feet. Of course, it really is to your advantage to have big hands.
That's a matter of physics in more weight (actually mass) times force (like speed) creating more power. But hands about the same size do not make any difference, compared to other factors. It matters most in a mismatch where a bigger man with big hands doesn't need to swing or connect as hard to land with and hurt a smaller man with smaller hands. As all of you know, Sonny Liston had huge hands. Primo Cernera probably did, too. I'm guessing Marciano had small hands for a heavyweight and had to work much harder to generate his power.
Damned if I don't sound just like Roadscharolarette giving you all a lecture in Boxing 101. I apologize. I don't know any more than any other slob.
Massimo, I'm very sorry to learn Laura Antonelli is ill. She is about 65 now, and I hope she recovers. Jimmy, was Irish Frankie Crawford a street brawler? He was great in the ring and looked like a kid who got into scuffles too. Oscar de la Hoya swears he never had a single street fight in his life.
Hard to imagine because he came up in East LA. |
[7/19/04 10:30:17 AM|Massimo|Roma ||4|||10|Ernie->I think that having big hands is way more important in a street brawl than in a boxing ring.
Fighters have gloves, after all ! Liston wore the biggest gloves in the boxing business at the time, though. Carnera had huge hands, 14.75 in ! 15 in for Liston, 11.5 Marciano. Shaq ? Lane ? Coolidge ? Wilt ?Andre's hands were 16in. That was the only big thing the midget had.
[7/19/04 12:13:08 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|SPOKANE
WASHINGTON||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|How about Jerry vs "TWO TON TONY GALENTO, or Lou Nova, And the Baer brothers. Those would have been naturals, Jerry used to use Ron Yary (Vikings HALL OF FAME lineman) for a punching bag in High School. The two ended up best friends forever though. |
[7/19/04 12:30:44 PM|brenda|ca||meme|||10|i thought we were raising subjects people wanted some answers to maybe not if people woun't believe what they are told by the family.don't you think we would tell the truth? If Jerry got beat up no shame, Jerry always had back up with him so others would know too not just the one telling the story.if you do want to talk about this let me know i will email you. want some more stories i will ask Bob to get on and answer questions.
me|
[7/19/04 12:47:29 PM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|I think JQ would have beaten Tony Galento handily. Galento was a very dangerous puncher, with an awkward ( spelling) and strange stile. JQ rarely had problems with sluggers, what he suffered the most were the good jabbers. JQ would have probably won a fight with Max Baer. Max Baer did punch like hell but couldn't box an egg ( slang, I guess).Buddy Baer was a very good fighter with an outstanding record 50-7 (45 kos) and great punching power. I would havebet on Buddy Baer against Jerry. Too much shoe size difference between the two men. But maybe I would have been a fool and I would have lost my money.|
[7/19/04 03:40:28 PM|Evren|London||8|||10|Smith and Charles go through... next batch..sorry for delay : - Vitali Klitschko vs Mike TysonEvander Holyfield vs Carl WilliamsSpeak soon... |
[7/19/04 09:22:09 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Sheesh, sounds like you guys never get it right ! It's not the size of the hand on the fighter, it's the size of the knuckle forming his fist. My favourites, Duran and Frazier, weren't big men and didn't have big hands, but their knuckles were big and calledous. Same with Clay.Vito Antuofermo used to soak his knuckles in brine to toughen them. Jack Dempsey even cultured the wart virus on his knuckles to harden the surface and increase the 'whack' on impact. Ernie. I'm not trying to lecture anyone. It's just that I read a lot and all I'm doing is trying to pass my expertise to guys like you. Borrow some books and read up on the sport, Ernie, and you'll do better.

Brenda and Jimmy D, I am sorry I blurted out the thing about Porkchop. I didn't think it was that big a deal. In fact, I forgot to ask about it every time I talked to Bob because it wasn't a big deal to me. Jimmy D, I should have just asked Bob about it and shared the answer between you and me. Anyway, Bob if you get on line, give me a call if you are working in my area or I will try to call over to the house, time permits, on a weekend.

As stated in my last post, I was at the Kirk Johnson fight and he ended up stopping Martinez by eighth round TKO due to a cut. Johnson looked better at 242 pounds, as compared to 260 when he got destroyed by Vitali Klitschko. One of the other reports on the internet said Johnson broke his hand in the fight but I am not sure the validity of this information so I will have to check on this. James Toney was at the card and he kind of messed with me a little bit by saying I stepped on his new shoes, which I didn't. I think he was testing me and I shouldn't have apologized, which I did when I thought I might have done it. My feet were at least two feet from his. Oh by the way, I would guess Toney's shoe size at no more than size 11.

Hi RS ! Welcome back ! I'm glad to see you on this site again ! I don't agree with you about Joe Frazier's hands ! His hands are same size as Mike Tyson ( 13 in ) and bigger than Ali's ( 12.5). They are very big !

Not "centers", I meant "pivots", Kent.

Tyson, at his best, chops down Vitali Klitschko for a fourth round knockout. Klitschko lands some bombs on Tyson early but Tyson weathered the storm and wins by his speed advantage. Klitschko just has no answer for Tyson's quick two handed combinations. Holyfield outhustles Williams to win by decision. Holyfield b " The lie" Williams KOT 8.

Yeah, a prime Tyson, 13" fist and size 13.5 shoe KO's Klitchko, 11.5" fist, size 12 shoe in 4 rounds. Like Kent said Vitali lands a few hard shots but Mikey is just too quick and powerful. Holyfield over Williams in 12. I can't see Evander knocking Williams out, but he does beat the hell out of him. Carl would have a few moments but nothing consistent. Holyfield wins 8 out of the 12 rounds.

Yes Bob B, but we are talking about Tyson at his very best, circa 1988, not the current or recent version who only loads up and throws one punch at a time. A combination throwing Tyson, using head movement and moving in behind the jab would be too much for Vitali. However, the other version of Tyson, the current one and the one who has the bad habits of standing up too straight and loading up one punch at at time likely loses to Vitali. For the tournament, the Tyson at his best prevails.

7/21/04 04:07:38 AM I rate the ninth round of the Douglas-Tyson fight as the most amazing round in heavyweight history. Tyson went out for the killing, but got his ass whipped. Good Andre' everyone!

7/21/04 07:20:39 AM I rate the ninth round of the Douglas-Tyson fight as the most amazing round in heavyweight history. Tyson went out for the killing, but got his ass whipped. Good Andre' everyone!

7/21/04 04:53:00 PM When measuring your fist, should it be done as a man naturally makes a fist? The thumb tucked tightly against the index finger, then the tape wrapped all the way around from the extending thumb knuckle and back to it? I had my wife measure my fist that way with a cloth tailor's tape. It measured twelve and one half inches. Does that sound correct? I'm only five ft. ten inches. I don't believe fist mass has any bearing on mass times velocity punching power. It only means you can punch harder with confidence of not breaking your hands. After all, both fighters are wearing boxing gloves with wrapped hands.

7/21/04 08:37:21 PM You fist is exactly the same size as Muhammad Ali'. Do you realize what that means? You should be proud! Your wife has big feet, while you have big hands... That's a good marriage, you two complete each other! 5'10" is same height as Andre' Rousimoff, not bad at all.

7/21/04 09:27:09 PM Tyson KO's Vitali Klitchko

7/21/04 11:24:53 AM The Rocky movies had the worst fight scenes I've ever seen, first one hits they other with 12 haymakers, than they other returns the favor on Que, then one heaves they other like picking them up and throwing them in the corner for more haymakers, which is very illegal, "RICH Boxing scenes were much better, and no one was bionic!! G.L.O.W. GIRLS in Vegas were more realistic, Sorry Stallone "MONEY FOR NOTHING, AND YOUR CHECKS FOR FREE" with the boxing people he was around Sly surprises me.

Hey Kent, I did pick Tyson to KO Vitali in 4 rounds, I guess the fist and shoe size thing threw you off. I believe Tyson, the "prime" Tyson could have KO'ed most of the past heavyweight champs without much of a problem. I'm not suggesting he was unbeatable of course but from 1985 to 1988, when he had good people around him and he was focused, he would have given any former champ a very hard night.

The fist size thing, if you look at "Tale of The Tape" measurements of past heavyweight champs, and you do have to take these with a grain of salt, Louis and Dempsey, two of the most savage punchers the division ever produced, had an 11.5 inch fist measurement. Liston had a 14 or 15 incher depending on the list, who hit harder Liston or Louis? I think the record speaks for it self, so I don't believe it matters how big your fist or knuckle size is as it relates to punching power. Hey, Vitali Klitschko is 6'7" with an 11.5 inch fist, he hits pretty hard. And as much as R.S. knows about Frazier I'm surprised she thinks his fist is small, I'm 5'11" and mine is a little over 11 inches Frazier is/was 5'11.5" and he has 13.5 inch ham hock... seems pretty big to me.

Rocky Balboa vs J.Q.? I don't know Kent, Balboa is a pretty tough cookie, the Clubber Lang rematch with Drago, he might be too much for Jerry, even in a street fight Ol' Rock is tough. Now Paulie, he might be a better matchup.

Even sillier question, the real Tommy Morrison verses Tommy "The Machine" Gunn. A great card? The battle of Philly, Joe Frazier verses Rocky Balboa, Supported by Jerry Quarry verses Union Kane, Big George Foreman verses Clubber Lang, and a special added attraction, Trevor Berbick verses Spider Rico. Rico gets both Mickey, Rocky's trainer, and Apollo Creed, to train him and be in his corner. Spider gets to prove he wasn't a bum to Mick because Mick called him and everybody else Rocky ever fought before Apollo a bum.

Jimmy D., you are quite the Quarryologist, thanks for the career breakdown. Between this and boxrec.com, a wealth of info on JQs matches. Between this and boxrec.com, a wealth of info on JQs matches.

Tommy "Machine" Gunn was unbeatable in the ring, but was a bum for the street fights. Even I would have beaten him in a dark alley! If Rocky had fought Mickey, Mickey would have easily outpointed him. He was a little over the hill (some kind of slang, why not over the mountain?) at the time of the Rocky fights, but stillistically was just perfect.

In Canastota, in the Boxing Hall of Fame, there are the fists of some of the great fighters from the past (not the real fists, of course, but just i calchi in gesso).
Andre'.

Do you imagine a street fight between Balboa and Andre'? Or Ali', Frazier, Foreman, Andre' all together against Calvin Lane? That would be like an earthquake !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! Nobody can whip Calvin Lane! He is the baddest ass (slang) in the world!

WASHINGTON|RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|10|Gerry: Yes I can remember Tom Brookshier, talking about how Ron Yary would visit Quarry in the off season in Cypress, Ca. When Yary was inducted in the HALL OF FAME, last year he looked like he could still play! Ironically another HALL OF FAMER, Deacon Jones and Quarry promoted bouts in L.A. Called "Salt and Pepper Enterprises" in the 1980's. I guess Jerry was friends with a lot of L.A. RAMS, I remember Mr. Jimmy telling me how Jerry told him he didn't think the Rams would ever win the SUPER BOWL after another playoff loss to Yary's Vikings! take care.

7/23/04 07:11:45 PM|Ernie Laxalt|Reno, NV|elax66@aol.com|10|Roadscholarette, you take the cake. Here you are with 20 or 30 guys who came up fighting and boxing in cities all over the world -- guys who have been close to the sport for 20, 30, 40, maybe 50 years, including good buddies of the Quarry family. And with what you read in books, you propose to tell us what's what. You're comical. Anyway, Lyle Alzado used to brag he was the toughest man in the world. He said if he and King Kong went into an alley together, he'd be the one to walk out. Granted he was a big, tough football player, and came up hard from mean streets. But Lyle is going to whip Larry Norton, Mike Tyson, Riddick Bowe, or George Foreman or Sonny Liston? Alex Karras really was a hard dude. I wonder if he could have taken Alzado. No, the key element of fighting ability is good elbows. Great elbows, great fighter. Look at Eddie Machen, the original elbow fighter. Nom, these kids in the ring today just don't have good enough elbows ..

7/23/04 07:29:44 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|SPOKANE WASHINGTON|RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|10|HI Ernie, Jerry Quarry would have whipped Alzado, at any phase of knuckle dustin, and Roddy Piper did as an amateur boxer. Maybe it was Ron Stander too.

7/23/04 08:44:52 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca|kentallenent@aol.com|10|I heard talk at one time about a proposed Lyle versus Lyle fight, Denver versus Denver, between Ron Lyle and Lyle Alzado. Sorry Alzado, you were not even the toughest guy in Denver, Ronnie L. would have kicked your ass, big time! Alzado did not do too badly in an exhibition between him and an out of shape Muhammed Ali and even though he was clearly outclassed, he did show he had some basic boxing skills. My money still would have been on Ron L. though. Funny how much disrespect our Jerry used to get. Most of my friends thought Lyle Alzado would have kicked his ass, even in boxing. But we here all know different. Jerry would have given him the beating of his life inside a boxing ring and maybe outside of it as well.

7/24/04 04:58:23 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago|same|10|Come on Ernie, calm down. I didn't set out to upset you. One of my husband's cousins, living downtown, is a janitor and knowing his hours, I just assumed that you wouldn't get much time to be reading about boxing. My point was that I'd share some of what I've learned with you, trying to be friendly, and you took it the wrong way. Even people like me who read a lot get it wrong. Joe Frazier has a 13.5" inch fist, and I said his fists were small. So what do I know? How ya doing Massimo? I am the real one.

7/24/04 05:27:09 AM|Massimo|Do you know il Colosseo?|ciao ciao.com|10|RS-Hi, I'm fine, but I don't think you are the real RS. The real RS told me that she didn't write the last post. The real RS would have never said Joe Frazier's hands are small, not even after an entire night spent drinking. I'm getting confused. RS is not RS, Shaq is gonna dunk right on Vlade's face, Kobe is gonna dunk right on Shaq's face, Andre' was a midget... This is a pretty strange world! Who am I? What's Italy? Who is Erminio Spalla? What's my shoe size ? | 7/24/04 05:41:42 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||same|||10|Ernie -Another vital area of boxing success is owning the judges. Take Foreman and Ali. Apart from the ignorant, naive, and black belt stupid, who can really believe that Ali beat Foreman? It was a fix, pure and simple. Likewise, the knowledgeable know that Frazier beat Ali all three fights. No question. It was a fix, big time. In that last fight, Ali was about to fall down and they had to hold him up. Joe was still ready to rumble. He would have cleaned Ali's clock had it continued. I've watched that fight hundred of times, slow motion, frame by frame. Ali did not win. The Thrilla in Manilla was a bigger fix than the Rumble in the Jungle. Same with Ali and Norton. Ali was never the greatest; but he was the greatest fraud. In the end he got what he deserved. Sad but true. I'll agree that Ali contributed to the golden era, but was he the main contributor? Come on. Take away the personality, and the pull with judges that Don King provided, and what was left? Just a flick of a jab, a deficient uppercut, a limp lead right, and a missing left hook. Granted, he could take a punch. But my husband says that you get no reaction when you punch an imbecile in the head, so what does that tell us? When Ali got through the draft dodging stage, the guy had a likeable personality. But he wasn't Mother Theresa and he left all his entourage crying poor. Didn't even provide for his own brother. Ali was the most over-rated bum in the history of sport. Anyone who says otherwise doesn't know what they're talking about. And without Ali, no one would ever have heard of Angelo Dundee. Go back to my posts months ago. Contact me at my e-mail address I always provided then, and you will see that it is really me. 100 percent genuine me. | 7/24/04 05:44:18 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||same|||10|Massimo -Go back to my posts months ago. Contact me at my e-mail address I always provided then, and you will see that it is really me. 100 percent genuine me. | 7/24/04 12:43:56 PM|Leather Tuscadero|Three Aces Leather Bar||mansruin.org|||10|Yo R.S., I watched Ali-Frazier 3 many times too, and I also saw the ref, the three judges, Don King and Ferdinand Marcos hold Ali up during the 10th round, King had a lot of money tied up in Ali. What happen to Smokin Joe in the 12th, 13th and 14th rounds? King spiked his water bottle with Jack Daniels and loads Ali's glove with the very bolt that Dempsey used to ko Willard, it was down hill for Joe after that. Besides, Marcos wanted Ali to win because Joe was shorter than the statue he was presenting to the winner. I also talked to the very boxing experts you did about Ali's career and they all agree that he was a fraud, and would have been better off had he gone into pro rasslin'. In fact your floor moppin cousin said he could just see Ali with tag team partners Johnny Valentine and Black Jack Mulligan vs Andre the Giant and Roddy Piper in the greatest cage match ever held, I had to sneak out of his trailer before he could give me his prediction on who would win because his ex-wife pulled up with the Po-Lice to have him evicted. As I crawled through the back window 'cuz was mumbling something about Elvis as special the special ref. | 7/24/04 03:30:08 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|Tyson and Holyfield thru - next two fights : - George Foreman vs Ray Mercer (Phew!!)Tony Tucker vs Hurricane JacksonIf anyone has any material/footage/newsclips of Curtis 'Hatchetman' Sheppard I would be very greatful if you could contact.JIMMY DORSEY - Did you know that the 1st fight between Jerry and Brian London exists on tape? | 7/24/04 04:23:37 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|SPOKANE WASHINGTON||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|EVREN hello, Yes i'd seen it advertised on boxing memorabilia. And I Think I remembered you had a copy, you also have Jack Bodell =vs QJ?? Where Bodell's no.8 world ranking sank faster then the titanic! There's no doubt in my mind Jerry'd thumped Alzado, his own teammates Stone Wall Jackson in DENVER. AND JERRY SHERK IN CLEVELAND(AT LEAST AS A PASS RUSHER)WOULD have my vote over ALZADO.and FORKCHOP AKA KING KONGS BROTHER.Although not to get that started again!! I REALLY DID HAVE IMMENSE RESPECT FOR LYLE ALZADO.BUT SAYING YOUR THE BADDEST GUY ON THE PLANET AND DOING IT IS TWO DIFFERANT THINGS,RIGHT MIKE TYSON??

Ray Mercer had a great chin, but he never met a guy that powerful! Foreman could lift one man up with one punch !!!!!!!! When he hits the heavy bag etc. etc... Down goes Mercer! Down goes George Edward is the winner. Tony Tucker (who was a bouncer in the same place as Ron Lyle) would have easily outshoed Jackson by KOT 6. He hold his own against an in prime Mike Tyson fighting with a broken hand for most of the fight! Tony Tucker has a 13 1/4 inches fist. Go Vlade go! Don't go, Shaq, don't go!!

Tony Tucker (who was a bouncer in the same place as Ron Lyle) would have easily outshoed Jackson by KOT 6. He hold his own against an in prime Mike Tyson fighting with a broken hand for most of the fight! Tony Tucker has a 13 1/4 inches fist. Go Vlade go! Don't go, Shaq, don't go!!

Ray Mercer had a great chin, but he never met a guy that powerful! Foreman could lift one man up with one punch !!!!!!!! When he hits the heavy bag etc. etc... Down goes Mercer! Down goes George Edward is the winner. Tony Tucker (who was a bouncer in the same place as Ron Lyle) would have easily outshoed Jackson by KOT 6. He hold his own against an in prime Mike Tyson fighting with a broken hand for most of the fight! Tony Tucker has a 13 1/4 inches fist. Go Vlade go! Don't go, Shaq, don't go!!

Foreman and Tucker get wins. Foreman beats a surprisingly game Mercer with a barrage in the 9th round. Foreman is ahead on points, but not by much, and spends the last of his energy in the 9th, but luckily catches Mercer with serious leather and puts Mercer out. Tucker wins impressively. RS doesn't seem to write like she used to. This could be an imposter.

Roadscholarette, you are one strange being. You tell me I was upset, that you were friendly, you imply I'm a janitor and impugn janitors. You call Muhammad Ali a fraud. Seriously, are you schizophrenic? Are you drunk when you write your posts? No one ever agrees with your board assertions. Anyone who thinks Ali was a complete fraud who lost to Foreman, every fight to Frazier, his fights with Norton, etc, please sign in and be counted. Anyone who thinks any Ali fight besides Liston II was fixed, please identify yourselves. Honestly, Roadscholarette, please tell us why you hate Ali. Is it because he's black? You seem to like some other blacks. Is it because he's Muslim? Is it because he refused to be inducted? Is it because he cheated on his wives? Is it because he called Frazier ugly? These things happened years ago. What is really eating you, Roadscholarette? You come off as patronizing, smug, school-marmish, sarcastic, bitchy, mean-spirited, and most of all, as a Know-It-All. My guess is that your family and everyone you know realizes all of this about you, and the JQ Foundation blog is the last refuge for you. Guys, how many of you would be able to tolerate Roadscholarette's physical presence for an 8-count? Now Massimo, regarding Johnson -- boxing fans today tend to underrate and even dismiss older fighters, and do it more the older a fighter is. Jerry Quarry versus Jack Dempsey would be a great match, because both were savage brawlers, good boxers, had killer instinct to spare, and gave 100% effort always. I would give Dempsey the edge. Billy Conn versus Quarry would be another good one. Remember, Conn had Joe Louis beat for 11 rounds.

Facts shoot to smitereens your argument. Not only did Ali get away with things no one else did then or since, but his aura was such that everyone who fought him had to overcome a three round deficit when they fought him. Refs and judges only 'saw' what they were told to see, not what was happening. Rounds went his way that wouldn't have with anyone else. Sure, he was athletic, had wiles in the ring, and he had an imbecile's tough jaw, but he is not much of a person. Have you been to his home page? It's like accessing Allah's site.

Finished reading, Ernie? So now you can go back to belting your wife and getting drunk.

Not to further fuel an argument that has already gotten very personal, I also am/was not an Ali fan for reasons long ago given. He did get away with much more than most, and did not exhibit himself to be much of a person. Frazier and Norton have commented on him, they have Ali correct. But Ali was a truly great talent in the 60's and a very striking figure for America's history, let alone boxing's. I also have to admit he's the best I've ever seen... Foreman-Mercer, another great matchup. I think Mercer would really surprise with his toughness and stick with George for 6-7 rounds before losing by TKO. I'm embarrassed to admit I know very little about Hurricane Jackson, but I always thought Tony Tucker was underrated, so I'll give Tucker the benefit of the doubt. My picks are Foreman and Tucker... Alzado, Rich Jackson, Jerry Sherk - all very tough guys. As for being the baddest or the greatest (Alzado, Ali), that kind of blather is in the eye of the beholder. | 7/25/04 01:27:09 AM|Ernie Laxalt|Reno, NV||elax66@aol.com||10|But your proof that his fights were fixed, Roadscho...
wannabe and maybe he/she/it will crawl back into the hole from which it came. Foreman vs Mercer. Very tough fight here, I think Mercer is the wrong style for Big George to look good against. Foreman starts out fast and lands hard to the body, Ray is avoiding most of the big bombs to the head and scoring with the jab. By the 6th both men have slowed down considerably, Mercer is the fresher of the two. George is almost knocked down by a Mercer one-two in the 10th but manages to hang on. Mercer has a cut over the right eye and lip, both of Foreman's eyes are puffy. The two men are exhausted. In the final two rounds Foreman presses the action as Mercer continues to slip and counter. George wins a majority decision, two judges giving the fight to George by 2 points the other calling it a draw. Tucker vs Jackson. Jackson tries hard to get inside Tucker's reach in the third, in the fourth a Tucker uppercut-hook combination puts Jackson on the floor for a second time. Tucker drops Jackson again with about 30 seconds left and the ref stops the fight. Tucker by TKO round 4. |7/25/04 07:23:30 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Both George Foreman and Tony TNT Tucker score six round KOs over Ray Mercer and Tommy Hurricane Jackson, respectively.|7/25/04 10:10:10 AM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|The original Rhodescholarette was opinionated, but intelligent. The new incarnation is a wannabee. It isn't the same author. People, we've got an imposter poster! How's that for wordplay, an "Imposter Poster." |7/25/04 12:13:13 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same|||10|Ernie, there's nothing wrong with a good discussion until it becomes namecalling, then it becomes something juvenile and stupid, I think you know that. What Frazier and Norton have said about Ali is pretty well documented, even on this site. In a nutshell, they felt they had to fight Ali AND Ali's popularity at the same time. Neither men got their fair due when they fought Ali in rematches. If you can watch these bouts again, you'd see these men are correct. Nothing wrong with disagreeing, Ernie, until it becomes unconstructive insults. Let's act like adults when disagreeing, that's all I ask.|7/25/04 12:51:05 PM|School-marm|Chicago||same|||1|You guys have just proven yourselves to be dunces. All the recent rantings for RS were taken from posts she wrote six months ago. Yes, they were all her quotes and opinions, lifted verbatim. But you,dullards didn't notice and instead accuse it all of being some evil fabrication. Dumb and dumber. Ernie is right. There is a dislike for Ali on this site, whether it be racially or religiously based. A black woman inferred some time ago that you were all closet white supremists and that this is why there is the Jerry Quarry attraction for you. I'm not sure whether she is right, it is food for thought. Hands up all the black guys on this site. Kent ? Angelo ? Steve ? Ernie ? Bob ? Gerry ? Not one. What does that tell us. When RS launches her trademark vitriolic attacks on Ali, only one person (in this case Ernie) came to his defence, even though RS was laughing at Ali's medical condition and the symptoms thereof. I think any reasonable, prudent person assessing what has been written on this site, including the limp wristed crap posted by the sleep inducing Gerry, whoever he thinks he is, insults boxing itself. Wannabees like Angelo, whose ignorance is gobsmacking, portrays himself as some know-it-all tart and gets away with it, and look what you have done to Massimo's fastly diminishing logic. Ad nauseum did RS launch vicious attacks on Ali, even ridiculing his medical symptoms, and where were you Gerry ? Angelo ? You let her get away with demeaningly personal attacks on a guy who has probably done more for boxing than anyone else. If not for Ali, boxing might not be alive today. Be ashamed, gentlemen. And now we have the situation where you guys deny that the rehashed RS quotes are really her. You guys thought you were so smart that you can’t be fooled. Well you were, big time. Wise-up.|7/25/04 05:21:31 PM|School-marm|Chicago||same||5|Bob,I just read your comment about the RS comments. You have risen in my esteem. You are wrong about the other guys, though. They never protested about ridiculing Ali's medical symptoms, either when those comments were recycled yesterday, or when RS wrote them six months ago.|7/25/04 08:21:53 PM|Kent |The Temecula Band of the Luiseno Mission Indians||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Schoolmarm, sometimes it is just best to ignore negative comments that someone like R.S. or by whoever else makes them. By answering them, we give them a certain credibility. Notice, I haven't commented on them.Oh by the way, I am not a white man. Actually I am but I am not, depending on the definition. I am of mixed race, white and Native American. I don't know if that makes my perspective different than others here but I am a member of a federally recognized Indian tribe. My point is, you can't just assume everyone here is white.As to your comment that we are a bunch of bigots and that is why we like Jerry Quarry, that comment is about as stupid as some of the stuff R.S. has been saying lately and there will be no further comment about this from me.|7/25/04 09:15:23 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com|10|Okay, since my name was brought into the discussion, let me clear a few things up: Yes, I'm white. Also, Muhammad Ali, not Jerry Quarry, is my all-time favorite fighter. This site is NOT a haven for white supremacists---I know that because I'm not one and I suspect most of the other regulars here aren't either. Some of us are huge Jerry Quarry fans, others (me included) might not categorize him as our favorite, but we just remember how many great and interesting bouts he was involved in, found our way to this forum and enjoyed it enough to keep coming back.I was very young when Jerry was in his prime (Born in 1963, I was about 7 or 8 when I believe he was at his best.). In the 1990's, I read an article in the Washington Times about Jerry's neurological decline, did some research and found this site. I respected the late James Quarry a bunch for his efforts, ordered a couple videos, and began to post because the other people here are great and knowledgeable boxing fans who I have learned a lot from. That's it. No "white power" hang ups. Ali was more than my favorite fighter---he was a hero for me and an idol. Also, it's my opinion that Ali has been an even greater role model since he's been diagnosed with Parkinsons Syndrome. He's shown courage and grace by continuing to appear in public with this affliction. The reason I didn't respond to the imposter RS post (Ali comments) was because I suspected it was written by a fake and it was too outrageous, warped and idiotic to even dignify with a response. The original RS, a staunch Joe Frazier fan, did make reference to not feeling so bad about Ali's condition, and that was poor judgement, but the fake RS posts lifted her comments out of context and also exaggerated them. For the record, let me just say that all this talk of Ali fight fixes is ridiculous. People, he beat Frazier and Norton twice each. Among those four wins, the only one that can possibly be questioned fairly is the Yankee Stadium Norton fight. Norton was more aggressive but he missed an awful lot. Look at the tape—I have. Ali was never hurt, though he did get tagged a few times. Ali managed to control the pace of a lot of the rounds, even though he never hurt Norton either. It was a pretty close fight and I could see how Norton fans or Ali haters could make a strong case that Norton won. Ali beat Frazier without too much sweat in their second fight and he beat Norton in their second (his best performance against Norton), though again, he had his hands full with Norton's awkward style. But I honestly can't see how anyone could say Norton was robbed in the second fight. As for Manilla, it's absolutely pathetic to hear Ali bashers argue that Frazier could have won this fight. People, he was unable to come out for the 15th. Had they let him answer the bell, Ali would have crucified him. Look at Frazier's face and head—a swollen mess. The guy couldn't see. Ali was battered and exhausted, but ready to fight and more importantly, able. Frazier was courageous and ready, but clearly not able. This could have been a tragic disaster had they let Frazier out for the 15th. And on the topic of judges loving Ali, while it's true that he was the most popular among many fans, he was also the most hated boxer of his era, maybe ever. So guys, it cuts both ways. People couldn't stand him. And how do all of you explain why Leon Spinks was able to get the judges to give him the win while Norton wasn't? Some questionable decisions maybe, but no fixes.

7/25/04 09:50:10 PM|School-marm|Chicago||same||||2|AngeloYou are wrong. The comments about Ali were verbatim lifts from prior RS comments. Go back and check. There was no exaggeration. Comments re janitors etc were put in by School-marm to see what would get a reaction. Everyone here ignored the awful RS comments about Ali (except Ernie), while blockheads like you picked up on the stupid janitor jibes. It was an experiment to see what would get a reaction—and only the trivial nonsense about janitors, and not the awfully cruel jibes at Ali's condition, attracted the attention of Angelo.As the experiment showed, people here don't ignore stupid comments. They just ignore the racist, cruel comments by RS, particularly when it relates to her despised Ali. RS intimidates most of you, obviously. Some creep on this site—I forget the fool's name—even had the hide to describe the prior posts of RS as intelligent. Say what? Belittling Ali by ridiculing his disease. Propagating smutty allegations about Emile Griffith's sexuality. alleging that fights were fixed without producing one shred of evidence. Intelligent? Come on.Most of you guys said nothing about that. You only care when there is a stupid little jibe at you. And what about Massimo. He should be ashamed. Just because RS teaches him some meaningless slang, everything else she did was alright? Sheesh, Massimo, get some integrity. I apologize for getting you going about Ali. You were the only person with enough integrity and courage to stick up for him when none of the others would.I repeat: the comments regarding Ali in the last couple of Ali posts were direct lifts of what RS had previously written.
Angelo and other buddies: I confess I feel a little vindicated. Several things occur to me. When I was in high school, the coach yelled at me once and said, "Laxalt, how come you turn your brain off out here?" It was true -- I was a goof-off in PE. That's a little similar to what we do here, when we sit down in enjoyment, maybe with a beer or a drink, to chat about boxing. We relax. That's why I don't blame anyone for not charging RS with cruel stupidity for maligning Ali about his illness. We're here for fun, not to analyze. Second, I'm Basque! Yeah, that's a form of Caucasian. My great-great grandparents owned a lot of land in La Habra and Fullerton, Kent. Sure wish I did, but it was all divvied out by the time I came along. Even though Fullerton where I grew up in the 1950s was lilywhite, I've had black friends ever since I started boxing and throughout life. Now regarding favoritism toward Ali. Yes, of course. Sometimes it even tipped fights his way, I think -- like Norton II at the Forum in about '75. Norton won by a hair, it looked to me like, in the stands. You could call it the home field, advantage, though, because of Ali's incredible fame -- and notoriety, as one friend pointed out here. He carried boxing on his back for many years. Anyway, a strong, popular champion often gets that edge. People used to say you had to beat a champion decisively to win his title. I'm not that expert a fan, but I'd guess Sugar Ray Robinson, Julio Caesar Chavez, Roberto Duran, Tommy Hearns and many champions have gotten those big breaks. The reason I responded in anger to Roadscholarette was that I was MAD AS HELL. Most of us are strangers here, but we are a community of friends, and it looked like she was trying to put me down, make me look bad. I offer to shake hands now, Roadscholarette. I apologize if I hurt your feelings or made you look bad. Let's both go with the flow here and we can all get along. Schoolmarm, thanks for what you did, and for summarizing what's been going on so beautifully. By the way, I know a janitor who put 6 kids through college, including one medical doctor. Janitors are at least as good as I am! Probably better. could be the reason you didn't anger up when RS laughed at Ali's condition. Similarly, bigotry might be in play for your failure to react when she started to call Griffith names. So no one call Gerry names. Ridicule Ali and Griffith, that's okay, but for chriisake leave Mister Gerry or he will order you out. Funny thing too, Mister Gerry, when RS was poking fun at the impaired and the faggots etc, I didn't hear you accuse her of not adding "substance" to this site. Yep, RS has Mister Gerry intimidated.
[7/26/04 03:10:17 AM|School-marm|Chicago||same|||2|Massimo|
I can be whoever you want me to be, but I don't hate your hero RS. Spend some time and go back through her past posts on Ali. She deliberately demeaned his medical condition and paid him no respect.
It's too late to complain about her making the rigged fight allegations. You should have said something when she did it. You never asked RS why she hated Ali so much that she took delight in his impairment.
You never asked her for proof about the corruption allegations. You never chided her for calling Griffith a faggot and spreading other smutty stories. So don't pretend that you have the right to criticize me. I've recently gone back and read those posts again. Only one or two of the guys here said something. The pity of it all is that someone was allowed to belittle Ali's medical condition on this site. After all, this site is supposedly dedicated to making boxing safer. Shameful. Massimo 'the mute' said nothing. So now I know who you really are Massimo, but you haven't a clue about me. |
[7/26/04 09:10:20 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Schoolmarm.| I agree with Ernie, we come here to relax and sometimes we let things get by that we should challenge. But do you expect us to ignore things that challenge our integrity when they are directed our way? Oh we only care about white fighters you imply? Well then why did I sent money to help Greg Page who is black, and to another family for flowers after a fighter died in the ring, a fighter I have never heard of and I don't even know what race he was?
You never even commented on my race. I told you I am not compeletly white and let me tell you, there have been times when I have experienced racism. As a kid, there were some kids in my neighborhood who used to get a kick out of calling me "beaner" or "spick," of part beaner or spick, racist terms for Mexicans, and the more I would say I am not Mexican, that I am Indian, the more they would call me the names. Like I said, don't assume, even if you saw me as I take after my German father quite a bit, that we are all lilly white here. | 7/26/04 09:21:37 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|One more thing, the reason I probably didn't respond to R.S's posts before and a reason I don't now, is they are rather long winded. I like it better when people get to the point and not post book loength posts. |
[7/26/04 09:47:04 AM|Massimo|Roma||mc enroe b connors 6-1/6-1/6-2.com|||10|School-marm|
RS never made fun of Ali's health problem. This ain't true, this is bulls--t. She even said once that both Ali' and Foreman are bright persons. RS doesn't have to be what you want her to be. She is free to be what she wants to be and to think what she wants to think. Thanks. |
[7/26/04 11:27:35 AM|Gerry|Cleveland||same|||9|Marm, you are a joke and a liar. Anyone can read previous postings here and see that I checked RS when she needed to be, if you haven't looked into those past postings, it proves again you don't know what you're talking about. Also, I don't recall RS ever rating this site a 2. You have, however. If the site is so bad, why are you still here? That's why I made the 'door' comment, and it still stands. When I'm some place I don't like, I leave. I suggest you do the same. |
[7/26/04 01:26:34 AM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com|||10|Confusing...I been working so much lately and haven't been on much......alot of talk about Rhoadscholarette. To be honest I thought she was a great writer and I enjoyed reading her posts. She should come back. I happen to agree with her that Ali was overrated but that's another story. As far as anyone knocking the people on this site, that's a cheap shot and doesn't deserve any comments. Don't get distracted by attacks from these people. This is the only site I have ever been on with a group of people who are friends and it is a good thing. I am proud to say that Irish Jerry Quarry is my favorite fighter and athlete of all time.

Tonight ESPN has shown the following fights: Carnera-Godfrey, Carnera-Sharkey 2 and Carnera-Impelletiere. Whoever thinks that Carnera was a freak and a bum should watch these fights! What a fighter he was! POWERFUL, VERY POWERFUL! Every time Carnera did hit well Sharkey, Jack did skid (dictionary!). How big Ray Impelletiere was! He was 6'7" 1/2, wilter than Carnera, with a 84 1/2 reach. Ray wasn't a great fighter, he lost 3 times against Tommy Loughran who was a half than him during his career, but was BIG. He would have been a great bouncer. Well, Primo Carnera destroyed him. After watching Primo Carnera in a few of his fights I got the opinion he was a great fighter. A top 50 heavyweight ever. And probably the best Italian heavyweight of all time. Greetings.

Kids at school are picked on because they are fat or thin, red haired or blond, white or black skinned. Every kid gets picked on for something. Most get over it, others are looking for excuses. Giving money to Greg Page was very kind, but I don't see the relevance. Yeah, you're right. Let's get back to talking about important things. What's size feet you got Massimo? Gerry? Anyone know what sized feet Fran has? Gerry<A joke and a liar? That's very strong. Pity you didn't say that when RS ridiculed Ali's medical condition, called Griffith a faggot, and alleged legendary fights were rigged. And you didn't answer my question, Gerry. Are you in charge here? I rated the site a 10. Is that okay boss? Making unsubstantiated allegations is entertaining and intelligent, right Fran? Come on back, RS, we need some more smutty gossip for Fran's entertainment.

I wear a size 40 in Italy, 7 or 8 in USA. I'm a pituitary giant: 5'6" tall, about 132 lbs. It didn't matter where I was or how old I was; I was always the biggest guy around!

It's getting better, don't you feel the same...

"I read that Oscar (Bonavena) was shot in that whorehouse parking lot because of an affair with the owner's wife, but I read one other place on the Net, and I don't remember where now, that it was an affair with a guy himself. Gay Oscar?"

The Bonavena gay thing was no big deal, though it did bring out the intellectual riff-raff. The article I read may have been a misprint, who knows? If I had to guess, I'd say no, but you never know about anyone else. It is interesting how people respond to the issue though, whether, OB, Griffith, Lewis, whoever."

I think the one thing that everyone forgets here is that we are all from the same race (humans) we might be different nationalities, but so what. Jerry had a lot of friends in different nationalities, but they were all one race (humans) he always loved everyone. Mr. Jimmy did this site for all of us, (humans) to enjoy boxing talk, and to have fun. not for these little silly comments about race. This site is for memories, and yes there are a lot of Jerry Quarry fans here. I would hope so, since it was made in his and Mr. Jimmy's memory. So let's get back to the boxing, and some good true stories about boxing. Ok Thank you!

Any word yet of a book or movie?

Ok School Marm what's your problem with this site? This is a good site, yes it has it ups and downs, but nothing life threatening. Everyone is entitled to their own opinion, it's some of what makes the world go round. Dad, and Uncle Jerry, we all sure do miss you. Hope you all keep... checking out the site, let's keep it going.
[7/27/04 01:50:52 AM] Someone who cares|California||DoesItReallyMatter@aol.com|||10|This site is really cool. But ya know the regulars are cool, and hav gotten through some squabbles, but this school marm rating this site a 2, if pretty wrong, what are you a Moron, or what? If you don't like the site stay the hell of the site, and hey don't bother coming back. You are off your noggin|
[7/27/04 06:02:02 AM] School-marm|Chicago|same||1|SoniaI visited this site because I admired Jerry Quarry and am a true fan of boxing and its participants. But I went back through this site and saw some disturbing posts. One particular person (RS) used this site to peddle smutty allegations against greats or near-greats like Emile Griffith, Lenox Lewis and Oscar Bonavena. To do that was very wrong. Put simply, they didn't deserve to be called faggots.RS also levelled allegations of fixed fights, corrupt fighters, and shonky referees and judges. No evidence was forthcoming, but the allegations were left to fester for time immemorial on this site. What was even worse was when I saw that two persons (RS and Forest Ward) used this site to demean the medical condition the great Muhammad Ali suffers. Given that Jerry sadly suffered a similar affliction (one of the truly saddest things I have ever seen), I thought it insensitive and repugnant - expecially since it was on his site.That others did not find such talk sufficiently offensive to speak up says more about them than it does of the dissenter/s. So, if the tenor of this site is to sit quietly while unfounded or repugnant allegations are freely uttered without sanction, then it is not surprising that from the entire boxing world you are regularly visited by six or seven fans.That in itself is an indictment that resonates much farther than the harshest criticism from the most vocal dissenter. |
[7/27/04 09:45:44 AM] Massimo|Roma||4||10|MarmIt's not true that when RS said those things nobody criticised her. For instance, I remember that Paul, KooKoo and others did. I didn't like that posts about Bonavena too, but she brought so much to my life (great words such as ain't, bum etc.) that I just couldn't forget. On the other hand, who in this site never wrote a NOT PERFECT post ?She wrote many clever and intelligent posts also.I consider her a friend and I am sorry she is not on this site anymore. She is definately better than Pol Pot, in my opinion.Also, I don't remember her saying that she recevied sexual enjoynement from Ali' to be (or from the fact that Ali is)ill. | 7/27/04 01:48:13 PM| Forest Ward| New York City||NY NY|||10|Attention School-marm, I never used this site to demean the medical condition of Muhammad Ali. Either, learn how to read and think correctly, or print my posts in full and let the reader decide! |
[7/27/04 03:07:41 PM] KENT|LA HABRA, CA||KENTALLENENT@AOL.COM|||10|I think what Schoolmarm doesn't understand is that sometimes when the topics get a little offensive, someone from the Quarry family, in this case Brandi, Mr. Jimmy's widow will ask us to tone it down out of respect for the memory of Jerry and her late husband. So sometimes personally I will not challenge someone offensive as they often just go away if the subject does not continue and by ignoring someone's illogic, the subject can't continue. So no more responses are coming from me to you and I encourage others to do the same even though you insult our integrity. BRANDI ASKED US TO KNOCK IT OFF BUT YOU JUST DON'T SEEM TO GET IT! Oh by the way, helping Greg Page, who is black, means I am not just sympathetic to white fighters like Jerry who get injured, it is relevant. I am concerned about all fighters who step into the ring. It is somewhat distasteful to me to toot my own horn about my charity activities but I did so to try and make a point.

[7/27/04 05:35:04 PM]Gerry|Cleveland||same||||9|I agree with Massimo, Road'ette was not worse than Pol Pot, not even close actually, and did have some very good posts. I don't see why her not-so-good posts are being presented again anyway... Jimmy D, the old AFL sure did have some tough guys, Tombstone Jackson and Lyle Alzado just two of them. The Raiders had Ike Lassiter and Ben Davidson, The Dolphins had Manny Fernandez, KC had Buck Buchanan and Willie Lanier, the Jets had Verlon Biggs and Gerry Philbin, and there certainly were others. The late 60's- early 70's was a huge era for all of sports, still my favorite... Congrats to Dennis Eckersley and Pat Molitor for making the Baseball Hall of Fame. Both played here in Cleveland for a while.

[7/27/04 09:14:42 PM]Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Hey you guys, lets talk about some relevant boxing history! How about Meldrick Taylor losing almost two pints of blood in his fight with Chavez, winning on all cards, and having the fight stopped with seconds to go by Richard Steele. He's got to be the most timid, lacking in commonsense ref. I've ever seen. This site is becoming the victim of crawlers. A crawler is someone who looks for chat site that he can disrupt. Kent, I'm not an endless source of money, you know. I would love to meet you and Jimmy D at the Eagle's N.F.C. championship game in whichever city it may occur. Like it won't be Philly, knuck, knuck. Sorry to to drag you guys away from more relevant questions like Ivan Drago or Rocky Balboa vs Jerry. I recently asked the correct way to measure a fist, but got no response. As we've all said before, there is no comparison to Professional sanctioned Boxing and stupid ass street fighting!! I'm not that hard to catch somebody off balance, throw them or trip them to the ground and then kick their head in. In the ring, there are rules that show a man's real courage. You can get up, and still come back and knock the other guys head off.

[7/28/04 03:49:32 AM]Jennie Piccalow|Roma, Italia, Europa, Terra, Via Lattea, Universo||Supermac.com||||10|SteveMeldrick Taylor was not very happy at the end of his fight with Chavez, I guess.

[7/28/04 05:31:16 AM]Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Charles, I haven't heard anything new about a book or movie. Evren, let's get back to our tournament. Don't let recent comments derail our tourney.

[7/28/04 08:55:40 AM]Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com||||10|Meldrick Tayor was never the same after that fight. Chavez was at his best. A great fighter. Taylor is not doing so good now its a shame he worked so hard to develop his talents only to end up broke. Saw Oleg Maskaev down the shore last Friday at one time he reminded me of Jerry powerful with some moves but not nearly as fast as Jerry. Undercard was Brian Minto in one of the best fights in a long time. Fran|

[7/28/04 10:11:12 AM]Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Hey Evren, I love so much Henry Purcell's music! What a genius he was! God save the Queen! We need other fights in our tournament! All those chumps are lucky that we are considering only fighters who fought after Marciano. If not, Primo would kick their asses!

[7/28/04 12:18:28 PM]Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com||||10|Fran, that was a gutty performance by Minto. I think he needs to get his body in a little better shape as his legs looked very tired, at least on TV, during some of the middle rounds. If he could have put on a more sustained attack the fight would not have gone as long as it did. I'm looking forward to see how he progresses. Taylor-Chavez, Steele said he did not know how much time was left in the bout when he stopped it, his only concern was protecting Taylor from more punishment. Taylor was without doubt in serious trouble and pouring blood when the fight was stopped. Had it not been stopped Taylor wins the title, if there had been 2 minutes left and not two or three seconds, Chavez would have probably finished him, Chavez was almost as good a finisher as Joe Louis. When he had a man hurt he was an absolute animal. Steele was always very protective of fighters when they were in serious trouble, and that’s a good thing, although in this case it would have helped had he been aware of the time left in the round.

| 7/28/04 01:40:00 PM | Fran | Philly | plc7755@aol.com | 10 |

Bob I agree on Brian Minto he was exhausted in the 8th round but showed alot of heart to come back like that. It seemed Vinnie was to strong for him and thats why he didn't set to punch with more power he was just punching and moving but he showed allot of talent. He is small though and should drop down to cruiserweight. He fought a great fight.  Chavez was a great fighter Taylor took too many hard shots in that fight Chavez was working the body the whole fight and just switched to the head at the right time........|

| 7/28/04 03:58:21 PM | Evren | London | @ | 10 |

Foreman and Tucker through. Next round : - Jerry Quarry vs Henry Cooper
Michael Moorer vs Mike Weaver (Great Match)

Kent - I'm sticking to the tournament - at the end of the day people have different views ' Different Strokes for Different Folks' as Sly Stone once wrote. Massimo who is Mr Purcell??

| 7/28/04 04:31:18 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 |

Mr. Henry Purcell is the greatest Britannic. composer ever. He wrote a lot of wonderful music. I have been listening to his music today for a couple of hours. His musical genius was really great. He was born in London in 1659 and died in the same town in 1695. A great guy. Unfortunately, nobody knows his shoe size.

Jerry Quarry KO in 2 over Henry Cooper

| 7/28/04 06:10:27 PM | Fran | Philly | plc7755@aol.com | 10 |

Jerry Quarry KO in 2 over Henry Cooper

| 7/28/04 11:08:59 PM | Gerry | Cleveland | same | 10 |

JQ vs. Cooper, a very good fight, Battle of the Bleeders? Cooper was very strong as he showed against Ali, this fight would go several good rounds. It might resemble Quarry's fight vs, Chuvalo in some ways, with Quarry winning nearly every round, before stopping Cooper on cuts. Moorer - Weaver might be a less interesting match as Moorer would probably control the first several rounds with his slow pace and boxing skills, he would lead and frustrate Weaver. But I give Weaver the win by virtue of power. Weaver by KO, middle rounds.

| 7/29/04 03:12:55 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | Kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

Jerry Quarry TKO 6 over Henry Cooper, Michael Moorer by decision over Mike Weaver.

| 7/29/04 05:41:48 AM | Mike | philly | yammagamma300 | 10 |

Jerry over Copper -TKO|

| 7/29/04 05:49:34 AM | MIKE | PHILLY | YAMMAGAMMA300 | 10 |

Fran- Have you seen Smoking Joe, I heard he's not to healthy, plus his eyes are real bad.

| 7/29/04 11:59:07 AM | Evren | London | @ | 10 |

Did anyone see 'The Ring' magazine this month? There was a great article on Eddie Machen - it was an excerpt from an article first published in 1962. I haven't been able to buy the magazine yet but looked through in the store. What a good fighter he was - another era and with different management he could have gone all the way - a superb fighter who was very underrated. I have seen quite alot of footage on him and he has always impressed me (except Johansson fight where he claims he came into the ring cold but admitted that he was hit with a 'hammer'). I wish I could find out more about him.

| 7/29/04 01:03:45 PM | Joe Krause | Chicago | sadmspats@yahoo.com | 10 |

Evren, I actually have the original article I believe. It talks about his family life and getting back into the top of the division after taking a short break I believe. You have Machen vs Harold Johnson? I always wanted to see that fight. In Machen-Frazier, Frazier is dominating then in like the 8th round Machen unleashes a huge left hook I believe and Frazier is stunned pretty good. I have Machen-Quarry footage, however not a lot can disemelanated from it other then they are both good fighters.

7/29/04 04:03:02 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|I dont have the Machen vs Johnson bout though I'm gonna work on getting it! I have Machen against : - Brian London, Doug Jones, Johnny Summerlin, Nino Valdes 2, Ingemar Johansson, Jerry Quarry, Joe Frazier and Sonny Liston. What a fighter!

7/29/04 04:57:00 PM|Dr.J|Roma||4|||10|Eddie Machen vs Cleveland Williams would be another interesting fight to watch. It ended in a draw though I have read that Eddie would have probably deserved the decision. "Small Dog" was still in his prime when fought Machen. He wasn't the washed up version who fought Ali'. However even the Williams who fought Ali' could hit hard and was a dangerous fighter. Cheers.

7/29/04 05:01:48 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbena@aol.com|||10|Quarry stops Cooper in the 8th round TKO on, of course cuts. Although I always thought Moorer could have done more with his talent, I'll have to give him a decision over Mike Weaver. Moorer was never known for speed of foot, Weaver was even slower. Moorer did have the hand speed though and, at his best threw good, hard combinations. This would be too much for Weaver overcome. UD 10 for Moorer.

7/29/04 07:36:24 PM|Keith White|Seattle, WA||QUARRYJKW74@AOL.COM|||10|Does anybody out there think that Jerry in his prime would have had a chance to beat Sonny Listen???? As we all know, Jerry was never knocked out cold (Chuvolo was a flook) in his career.

7/29/04 10:07:49 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|I Think the quality of referees in alot of important fights leaves alot to be desired.I watched a fight last weekend in which a fighter was penalized three points for holding the back of his opponents head.He wasn't pulling the other man's head down.He was fighting a southpaw, and simply had no other place to place his arm in a clinch. Why not penalize a man for holding an opponents elbos in a clinch?

7/30/04 02:33:50 AM|Massimo|Roma||Lendl b Mc Enroe 3-6/2-6/6-4/7-5/7-5SIGH.com|||10|KeithA top contender like Jerry Quarry would have had a chance to beat anybody but I think he would have been underdog ( or overcat) against Sonny Liston. I think Sonny Liston's long and powerful left jab would have been too much for Jerry to handle.

7/30/04 03:35:38 AM|Evren|London||@|||10|I personally think Quarry wouldn't have been able to cope with Liston or Foreman but I guess they said that with Shavers and Lyle!...you never know! But my money would be on Liston.

7/30/04 03:48:52 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Keith, prime verse prime, I would have to favor Liston over Jerry, however in a fight that could have happened, a circa 1969 Jerry verses a 1969 Liston, I would favor Jerry to out hustle Liston for a decision or maybe even a late round stoppage. This would have been a huge win for Jerry as Liston was always dangerous at any point in his career.

7/30/04 05:13:38 AM|Mike|Philly||Yammagamma300|||10|I would have to go with JQ over Liston, Jerry's left hook would take Liston out.

7/30/04 09:42:54 AM|Angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Gerry's analysis is right on. Quarry and Weaver advance. On the topic of Liston vs. JQ, I believe Liston would win on cuts. Both of these guys had good chin and heart---it wouldn't end in a KO, but could end in TKO with Liston victorious. Although, you look at Quarry-Lyle and are able to visualize Jerry winning a decision as well.

7/30/04 01:05:31 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbena@aol.com|||10|I don't believe JQ could have beaten Liston. He would have given Sonny a few hard rounds though before the Liston jab took over. Shavers was not in the same class as Liston. Liston was, for the most part fundamentally sound. He lacked some defensive skills but during his prime years much like Foreman, he really didn't need them! Shavers was a bomber pure and simple. At the time of the JQ fight Ernie had little or no defensive skill, and his chin and stamina were suspect. He did develop enough defensive polish to be competitive with Ali and Holmes two of the few men who could withstand his power and come back. Jerry was much too skilled for Shavers when they fought. The same would not be true vs. Liston. | 7/30/04 01:21:17 PM|Forest Ward|NYC||NYC.COM|||10|Liston would have stopped Jerry Quarry in the 3rd round. Quarry lacked the defensive skills to avoid Listons heavier punches, and Quarry was too stationary. It would be no contest. | 7/30/04 02:07:13 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|Liston would have TKO'd JQ inside of five rounds, prime vs. prime. Unlike lyle and Shavers Liston was a pretty good boxer with a hard and persistent left jab. And he could hit with both hands. And against a hitter like Cleve Williams, he proved he could take a punch (at least when he wanted to). Liston was much more skilled than Lyle or Shavers who were both very inexperienced when they fought JQ. | 7/30/04 03:19:32 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|I agree, and like I said, I see Liston beating JQ on cuts, probably around the sixth or seventh round. But the only reason I brought up the Lyle fight was that at his best, Quarry was a very focused counter puncher and good boxer. Don't sell Lyle short---he had plenty of real world fight experience when he stepped in against JQ, was the favorite, and Jerry gave him a boxing lesson. No, I don't think JQ could accomplish this against Liston, but I put it out there as at least a remote possibility. I have Liston-Wepner on tape (grainy and hard to watch, with no sound). Even at that advanced stage in his career, Liston could fight. In his prime, he was brutal. But believe me, Jerry wouldn't fold against Liston like Patterson did. JQ didn't seem intimidated by anyone---was courageous to a fault. I think this would rattle Liston for a while, before his ram-rod left opened the eye cuts that would end it. | 7/30/04 04:14:28 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Funny how every once in while someone pops in here and says the regulars here are biased in favor of Jerry, that we overrate him in the long term scheme of things. Not that anyone is doing it here but the next time someone accuses us of bias towards Jerry, I will point out that to a person, everyone who commented on a prime verses prime Sonny Liston verses Jerry Quarry fight, agreed that Jerry could not have beaten Liston. Some of us may think an in prime Jerry could have beaten an older version of Liston, late in Sonny's career, but that is not the same as the best Sonny verses the best Jerry. I think the Quarry fans can be quite objective in their assesment of Jerry's skills. | 7/30/04 04:33:43 PM|Mike|Philly||Yammagamma300|||10|I know i'm out numbered, But I still have to go with Jerry, Ali was not suppose to knock out liston, and I think Jerry would stop Liston.| 7/30/04 08:07:36 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same|||10| Good points by all on Quarry-Liston. Jerry's lack of movement cost him against Frazier, you can't stay in front of sluggers like these, Ali knew that. But JQ would confuse Sonny for a few rounds or so with his unearthly toughness and counterpunching. It would go 5-6 high-action rounds ( not lazy Ali rounds ) and end bloody for Quarry, no KO. But JQ would win Sonny's respect... Any thoughts on the upcoming Olympic boxers? | 7/30/04 08:17:23 PM|Greg Schasser|Canton, OH||saving up for it|||10|Just got to say again, this is a cool site. I don't know much about Henry Cooper, just that he was a good Brit heavyweight who got mangled by Ali. I guess he had to be good to get there. Also, I don't realize Eddie Machen had been so good, I guess he had a belt for awhile? Jerry Quarry was all heart and high skill, but too small for Sonny Liston. I do think Quarry was better than Patterson, who Liston smashed. Since Floyd was a champ, that's saying something. Thanks again, keep the site up. I've told some friends about it.

I am shocked to say the least that Danny Williams of England knocked out Mike Tyson in the fourth round. After hurting Williams in the first round, Tyson had an edge in each round until the fourth when he had virtually nothing left. Tyson seemed to be less and less effective as the fight went on that by the end he was back to his bad habit of loading up one punch at a time. At the same time, Williams got more effective as the fight went on. Williams stepped up the action in the fourth and hit Tyson, dazing him with a lot of unanswered punches causing Tyson to fall to the canvas and sit there with a dazed look on his face. Tyson then decided to try and get up but he didn't beat the count. Tyson was down for more than ten seconds but the referee held up the count because Williams didn't go to a neutral corner right away. Hopefully Iron Mike will call an end to his career. He really has nothing left.

Gerry, I'm cruising through some boxing sights and I've read your comments. I don't understand what you mean with your comments about Ali. You say something about being lazy and not standing in front of sluggers. Seems like you don't rate Ali and he makes all these mistakes. I now that you are some kind of expert so can you explain it to me please. Was Ali that bad that you criticize him twice in the space of a single comment?

I think we all can agree that Jerry Quarry had the skills and counter punching ability to confuse and hurt Liston. Liston did not have the work rate that Joe Frazier did. That's how Joe beat Jerry BOTH times. He took Jerry on a sprint and Jerry ran out of gas. In the first fight before Jerry got tired he was beatin the hell out Frazier. Jerry had the Power to knock Liston out look at Foster, Shavers etc. I agree that Liston would be the favorite in the fight but that would be to Jerry's advantage. Mentally Jerry was at his best in a fight like that. Liston like Tyson in his prime used to beat alot of guys before they got in the ring.....that would never happen with Jerry and that would be another advantage for Jerry. This would have been a great fight for him in the late 60's as Kent pointed out but I believe Jerry would have counterpunched him and stopped him late. Liston would have been runnin after an ass whuppin with Jerry letting him come to him and workin him body to the head....Quarry by K.O over Liston.

Dr. J, you mention the Machen-Cleveland Williams fight. The so-called washed-up Williams later was fighting with one kidney. He'd lost the other when shot by a policeman. Prior to that, he was a dangerous fighter, a Top Ten contender. Machen was the same, and a superior defensive fighter. If you ever saw the strange position of his elbows and forearms protecting his head, you won't forget it. Who taught him that, friends? Toward the end of his career, he'd base entire fights on strong defense and waiting for less experienced opponents to make mistakes, so he could counterpunch. I think Liston at his best would have beaten Jerry. But a big puncher like Jerry has a chance in every fight, even against a "Godzilla" Dorsey, who won two decisions against King Kong in Tokyo. By the end of the 60s, of course, Jerry would have knocked Liston out. At that time, one of the LA area TV sportscasters played a tape of Liston fighting a young heavyweight, and the guy said, "Here's the slow motion of the fight." Then he revealed it was NOT slow motion, but actually Sonny fighting his best at that time. A sad ending.

Eddie Machen never had a belt. He got one shot at the title against Ernie "What's my name guy" Terrell but lost on points. But he was one hell of a fighter! He fought among the others: Nino Valdes, Wayne Bethea, Mike "Hard punches" De John, Johnny Summerlin, Cleveland "Small Dog" Williams, Jerry Quarry, Joe Frazier, Doug Jones, Ingemar Johannson (spelling) and Floyd Patterson. Niente male! But I rate Charles Sonny Liston as a top 10 heavyweight ever. He was quick, could punch like hell with both hands, could take one hell of a punch and his jab was one of the best ever. I'm not sure about his heart and stamina, though! It surprises me a little bit that he had so much trouble against Marty "Who" Marshall at the beginning of his career.

But I rate Charles Sonny Liston as a top 10 heavyweight ever. He was quick, could punch like hell with both hands, could take one hell of a punch and his jab was one of the best ever. I'm not sure about his heart and stamina, though! It surprises me a little bit that he had so much trouble against Marty "Who" Marshall at the beginning of his career.

| 7/31/04 09:21:59 AM | maxhord | maxhord@adelphia.net | 10 | there ain't no quit in danny williams either. |
| 7/31/04 12:53:10 PM | Gerry | Cleveland | same | 10 | Godd points on Cleveland Williams and Eddie Machen, two very, very good 1960's heavies. Quarry matches with both, prime-prime, would be very good matches... I agree with Massimo, Liston is a Top Tenner. Ali rated him a better boxer than Foreman in "When they were Kings". Comments on that?... I would definitely NOT call myself an expert, far from it, just a fan who knows a little. Some guys on this site know tons more than me about boxing. But my opinion on Ali is that he loafed in many of his fights. He could jab a little on the ropes, and when the other guy came in, he would grab and clinch. Going 10 rounds with Ali and going 10 rounds with Frazier or Quarry were often not nearly the same thing. Going 10 rounds with Foreman was almost a miracle. Ali, to his credit, paced himself and managed fights about as well as anyone ever. Given that I don't like him, I have to give him a good jab once in a while... Tyson lost that fight because of a twisted knee, not because of Williams, who he clearly had. He will fight again, count on it. But mentally, that is another story for Tyson. He continues to slip, tough to watch. |
| 7/31/04 01:24:36 PM | Ernie Laxalt | Reno, NV | elax66@aol.com | 10 | I am still slightly surprised that so many people dislike Ali, so many years after he last fought. No other boxer seems to get that much attention, except maybe Foreman or Tyson. It must be because of the way Ali shot his mouth off, and his defiant attitude. I think to many people he's like the New York Yankees -- just too much of the top dog, too much success, too much attention all the time. Massimo, there have been long periods when the Yankees dominated baseball for years on end. They were much more rich and powerful than any other team. We all love an underdog, and that's part of why we love Jerry Quarry. In his prime, he was usually the underdog, usually matched against bigger men. Rooting for Ali was like rooting for General Motors. |
| 7/31/04 01:28:42 PM | Ernie Laxalt | Reno, NV | elax66@aol.com | 10 | One more thing. You know, Ernie Terrell was never a great fighter, but he was good, and one of the best heavies for a few years. He was widely respected, too. But Ali humiliated him in the "What's my name?" fight. Carried him for many rounds just to make him look bad, and take a beating. Since then, it seems like people consider Terrell a bum, a guy who was always a bum. But he wasn't. |
| 7/31/04 02:17:01 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Cleveland " T Rex " Williams was a very good fighter with a big punch, but who the hell he ever beat in his career? The only top contender he ever beat was Ernie " Tall and Lanky " Terrell. |

| 7/31/04 06:15:49 PM | Fran | Philly | plc7755@aol.com | 10 | Mike... That was Jerry's thing he would suprise anyone who took him for anything less than what he was a great heavyweight that was part of the brilliance of Ali and Frazier they both knew who they were fighting when they fought Jerry and were prepared for a great fight. Gerry from Cleveland I have read alot of your posts and you know a hell of alot about Boxing you just don't know nothing about Dubya..... Just jokin lets not go there again. Thome is having a great year thanks again. |
| 7/31/04 06:40:27 PM | Bill | London | billharmon@aol.com | 10 | Gerry, I appreize your frankness in admitting that you don't like Ali, but don't you think it would be better if you were a bit more balanced when you give him a 'good jab once in awhile'.

I think you are a lot older than me and I have to rely on books to visualize Ali's career. But the criticisms you make of Ali surely could not be relevant to his 'first' career between 1960 to 1967. Ali jabbed more than a little in that period, didn't he? He had 29 fights before exile and won them all. Only 6 of those fights went 10 rounds or more, so how is your comment relevant that 'going 10 rounds with Ali and going 10 rounds with Frazier or Quarry were often not really the same thing.'

Also you say that Ali 'paced himself and managed fights'. When exactly did he do this between 1960 and 1967. The record shows that he blew all his opponents out of the ring. Therefore, although your bias probably prevents you from admitting it, your criticisms of Ali must relate ONLY to his second career from 1970 onwards. To be fair, it must be noted that the second career began after 3 years of exile. No fights in that time. This seems to have escaped Gerrys memory. By the time he came back, how old was he? Over 30 - the age when most sportsmen retire.

I am going through his fight record. First fight back he blew Quarry away in 3. No loafing there. He then stopped Bonavena in the 15 and wasn't that the guy who caused Frazier heaps of trouble. He then lost in 15 rounds to Frazier but there was no loafing there either. My point is that prior to fight 32 Ali never did any of the things Gerry criticises him for.
32 fights is usually a full career for most boxers and Frazier only had 37 fights in his entire career.

And by fight 32 Ali had had wars against the very best....Liston, Patterson, Moore, Cooper, Quarry, and Frazier.

Your (biased) criticisms, Gerry, must therefore relate to after 1971. By this time Ali was aged 31 and had had 32 career fights....which is usually the career number for most fighters. So after fight 32, at age 31, he did have to pace himself. Who else wouldn't have. Ali wasn't the black superman man after all.

But even though he paced himself, at least he kept fighting regularly. After Frazier 1, Ali had another 29 fights, while Frazier only had another 10 fights. Ali fought the very, very best, one after the other and won most of them. Frazier avoided some fighters, took easy exhibitions against stars like Daniels and Stander, and only won 5 of his last 10 fights. And he was younger than Ali.

From age 31 onwards, Ali could still rise to the heights, like he did against Foreman, and like he did against Frazier in fights 2 and 3. Hell, he even whipped Quarry again. If Ali was like you say, Gerry, then that reflects badly on your hero Quarry, doesn't it. Ali whipped his arse.
So whose ya mamma now Gerry.

To me, Alis record speaks for itself. Knockers like Gerry can have there little jabs at him because they dont like him for whatever reason, but Alis history stands on its own. His record looks down on knockers like Gerry and hautfully laughs at them.

Whilst Gerry sat around in bars searching for things to criticize Ali about, Ali was out there being a champion many call the greatest of all time. Cheap shots from cheap critics cant change the legend that Ive been reeding about.

So thanks for reminding us Gerry that we arent all equal. Ive printed your post and Ill read it every time I need reminding.

Great in-depth comments about Jerry vs. Sonny Liston here guys! I agree that it would be tough to pick Jerry in his prime over Sonny Liston in his prime; however I would pick Jerry to beat Liston in a 1969 match. What an interesting fight that would have been! I not sure Sonny was interested in taking on a hot, up-and-coming talented fighter like Quarry in 1969....

Bill from London, you make some excellent points about Ali and how much he did in the first part of his career but then you get into a little mudslinging by saying to Gerry, "Ali whipped your hero Quarry again, who's your mamma Gerry?" Do you realize that you are visiting a site that is dedicated to the memory of Jerry Quarry and his run by family members who regularly visit here? Why the dig at Quarry? I happen to be a huge fan of Jerry's but I also have enormous respect for Ali and I don't agree with Gerry's asessment of Ali's career but my judgement of your post went from great, in your defense of Ali's skills, to low because of your cheap shot directed at Jerry Quarry on his own site! Gerry, yes Ali did a lot of holding in the latter stages of his career and coasting, but if you notice, he still had fast hands and would often score flurries in between him resting. Example, against Foreman, he spent a lot of time on the ropes avoiding Foreman's punches but he also would spring off the ropes and nail Foreman with good punches. In fact, I thought the fight was very close at the time of Ali's knockout win because Ali, in most of the rounds, was counterpunching brilliantly. Even in Ali's last fight, against Trevor Berbick, who was the first man to go the distance against Larry Holmes in a title defense and who later won a version of the heavyweight title, Ali still almost won the Berbick fight even though he had very little left and he was a shell of his former self. He still had enough left to almost beat a much younger legitimate contender. Ali was an incredible athlete, one we will never see again. |7/31/04 08:23:17 PM|Bill|billharmon@aol.com||London||||10|I did go overboard, Kent, in the criticism of Gerry, but in the context of what that man was saying it was sort of necessary. Just cause Gerry doesn't like someone, shouldn't mean that he can be unfair and get away with it. In reality he publishes to the world his views on a site like this, and an elder statesman like Gerry has responsibility to be fair when dealing with history, even when he dislikes someone and even if he feels the urge to give that person 'a good jab once in awhile.' On Alis behalf I was giving Gerry a little poke back. Given that Gerry distorted Alis career, by only mentioning habits Ali had after age 32 when he had already had up to 32 very, very good and hard fights, then it was more than a little dishonest on Gerrys part. Gerry tried to characterize Alis entire career on habits that only arose after fight 32. That Ali was able to fight at all after that time, having been through wars against the best in history, and to then go on and beat others of similar calibre at that advanced age, deserves recognition and not Gerrys cheap shots.By all means criticize. By all means like and dislike. But when personal bias and dislike verging on hatred steers the debate, then commentators like Gerry should only talk about something they can be fair and balanced about (just like the O'Reilly Factor and Fox News does). All my knowledge of that era is from books and a few videos. I think I am getting a more accurate view of history from those educational tools, than any of us can hope to get from Gerrys blinkered memory. I answered cheap shot with cheap shot with Gerry and you are write when you say I shouldn't have Kent. You have been fair and I know that.But for anyone to characterize Alis entire career as a 'loafer', someone who could only 'jab a little', someone who could only 'clinch on the ropes', a boxer who couldnt give others hard 10 rounds like Quarry and Frazier, well, you gotta ask the question: does that person know anything at all about boxing? |7/31/04 10:17:51 PM|Ernie Laxalt|Reno, NV|elax66@aol.com||9|God, Gerry, you are a rancorous old fart. How old are you, man? I'm 55. I saw all of Ali's fights. Very few of you guys are good historians. Sorry to say it. You forget too much, and exaggerate too much. Jerry Quarry was never in the same class as Ali, Frazier or Foreman, probably not Liston, either. Massimo, for shame, paisan! Even if I told you who Cleve Williams beat, you would not recognize one name. Hahahaha! But here you are whining and asking who he ever beat. I'll get a list of his opponents and put it up. Not sure if you ever saw the man fight at all, paisan. Che? Most of you write as if you think Jerry Quarry could have beaten any heavyweight who ever lived, and probably would have if a few circumstances were different. That's simply not true. It's kind of like saying George Brett was just as good as Ty Cobb, Rogers Hornsby, Babe Ruth, Joe DiMaggio (there you go, Massimo!) or Ted Williams. Not true. Jerry was a great fighter, but not that great. Let's be realistic here. Moving on to Frazier, his best shot was not his left hook. It was his head, and his second best shot was either of his elbows. You complain about Ali pulling necks, coasting until the ends of rounds -- what do you think this sport is, Tea Time with Eleanor Roosevelt? Ali was the fastest and quickest heavyweight of all time, and not by a small margin. He had a great punch. He was a master tactician. He was the best in history at the mental game. He could cut a slab of pig iron with his jabs. Until he got old, he was hard to hit. He was probably the best athlete ever to pull on gloves. Some of you guys write as if his only fight was the Thrilla in Manilla, or his swan song against Larry Norton. WAKE UP!

This is a good site until one or another of you mugs hauls out your hobby horse and starts with one of these old delusions. Got it? Jeez, Gerry, you know more than the dumb stuff that comes out of your mouth some times.

Williams began his career in 1951 and won his first 27 fights, 23 by knockout. In 1954, he suffered a knockout loss to Bob Satterfield. Cleveland did not box in 1955 because he was in the Army. When he resumed his career he ran off 12 straight wins leading him to a match with the feared Sonny Liston. The two traders bombs until Sonny put over the sleeper in round two. Eleven months later they met again in another war with Sonny winning in round three. In Cleveland's next 22 fights he went 20-1-1 with 13 kayos. He lost a decision to Terrell and he drew with Machen. He scored victories over Terrell, Wayne Bethea, Alex Miteff, Billy Daniels, and Tod Herring. This led to a title bout with Muhammad Ali in November of 1966. In 1965, Williams was badly injured when he was shot by a patrolman during a traffic stop argument. The bullet entered his stomach doing severe damage. That he was even able to fight again, is a testimony to his will and courage. The Williams that entered the ring against Ali was just a shell of his former self. In what many feel was Ali's best career performance, the champion dominated his aging rival. The bout was mercifully stopped in the third round. Cleveland would never again be a major factor in the division. He lost to Bob Cleroux and and Mac Foster and served as an opponent for upcoming fighters looking for a name on their record.

I had the opportunity to see Williams box a decent heavy weight named Ted Gullick at the old Cleveland Arena. Gullick would meet George Foreman, Earnie Shavers, and Duane Bobick during his career, but he was no match for Williams this night. Using a ramrod jab and a solid body attack, Cleveland outboxed his upstart foe to win a ten rounder. The consummate professional at work. That is how I'll remember Cleveland Williams.

When you mention Ron Lyle or these other recent 3rd or 4th level guys, the top contenders of the 50s and early 60s were better. I'm talking about Eddie Machen, Zora Folley, Cleve Williams, Ernie Terrell and others. They had very good records against the usual gamut of weak, fair, good, strong and very strong opponents. No, they were not as good as Joe Frazier or George Foreman, or Mike Tyson, but don't drop them from your sights. They were damned good fighters and you owe it to yourself as a boxing fan to know something about them. In 100 years, it's doubtful if more than a few boxing fans will remember Jerry Quarry. That will be a mistake, because we all know he was a great fighter. People then will only remember Ali, Frazier, Foreman, probably Tyson. That's a shame, because Jerry, Jimmy Ellis, Floyd Patterson, Ernie Terrell, Buster Mathis and other fighters deserve to be remembered, too. But that's what happens with history. Don't let it happen to you. Be more knowledgeable than that.

| 8/1/04 12:19:48 AM | Gerry| Cleveland|| same |||| 9 | WOW... give me a second to get back to my feet... Opinions are something I respect, some people don't really have one, so I appreciate yours. Let me clarify a few things while I put on some band-aids,... my comments on Ali's clinching were NOT meant to sum up this guy's entire career. Come on guys, read the posts. I have called Ali the best I ever saw numerous times. Man, you guys can fill up a screen! There has to be more to this than Ali, am I right? Bill, you must have forgotten what site you were on. Ernie, your comments go beyond boxing to personal way too easily. Did someone named Gerry hide your Exlax recently? I'm sorry to sound like an old fart - I'm far from it - and I do bathe regularly. Someone named RS used to complain, ad nauseum, that this site is filled with Ali worshippers, I never knew how right she was until this. If you guys want to hang Ali posters above your beds, go for it, ok? The man, to me, was a racist, was anti-christian, treated opponents terribly in the media, and got some very shady wins in the 70's, that's my take. As much as I don't like him, I will say AGAIN he is the best I ever saw, and, AGAIN, that he was not just a compelling figure for this sport, or all sports, but for America, a rare stature for any athlete to rise to. Given that I've said this many times, I deserve some credit for objectivity. I won't hold my breath for it ... Fran, you're grudgingly welcome for Thome, who I continue to watch. Actually, I've been a Phillies follower since the mid-70's, Mike Schmidt was my favorite player. I think I do know Dubya, but I'll let the Pennsylvania and Ohio voters do my talking in November ... I'm glad someone else stuck up for Cleveland Williams, I just wish he wasn't standing over me with a crowbar. Thanks again guys.

| 8/1/04 03:43:32 AM | Massimo| Roma|| Shaq, who ??? |||| 10 | Ernie-I have seen Big Cat only in two of his fights: Ali' and Liston 2. Williams lost in a poor way in both fights. I wish I can see Big Cat in some of his best fights. Me and you are maybe the only two persons alive on earth who have seen Ted Gullick fight. I have a tape of his fight with George Foreman. Ted fought a decent first round, but in the second George kicked the hell out of him ( Oregon slang).Billy Daniels was a good fighter. He was probably ahead on points against Cassio Marcello when the fight was stopped. Jerry Quarry destroyed him in 1. That was a good performance !PS: I have to correct you on the Liston-Williams fightsIn the first one, fought in 1959, Liston beat Williams in three, but Williams hit him with a very hard shot.In the second one, fought in 1960, Liston destroyed Williams in 2. It was as easy as a walk in the park for Sonny.

| 8/1/04 03:57:19 AM | Bill| London|| billharmon@aol.com |||| 10 | Gerry, are you suggesting that there was no racism towards blacks in America in the 1960s ? 40 years on and you're still hating a black man barely out of his teens who reacted to an environment not very hospitable to him.How long since Ali has uttered a racist or anti-christian word ? Four decades ? Truth be known, Gerry, you are more anti-christian than Ali. Christianity preaches forgiveness and you still keep on hating 40 years on.How come you only focus on the negatives. When discussing Ali's 20 year career, you only mentioned traits that developed in his 30s after he had already fought 32 fights. Yet you stigmatize his career by ignoring the great period (1960 - 1967) to selectively pick on the traits that came as he aged.You've done the same thing with him personally. You highlight the few bad things in his early 20s (did you ever sin, Gerry ?) when he reacted to the whirlwind of the times. But when have you ever mentioned the dignity he shows with his incredibly debilitating illness, the braveness of his not hiding away, the hope he gives to others with the same condition, and the joy he continues to give the world by getting out to meet and greet. (Not to mention the great joy that his long boxing career brought to tens of millions of fans throughout the world.)

But no, Gerry, you'd rather go back four decades and look for something to hate him for.

And when someone brings you to account for your biased and selective memory, what did you do? You make the allegation that we're all Ali worshippers with posters of the man above our beds. Pardon us for having an opinion different to yours, Gerry.

Personally, I just don't think you have the guts to come out and admit that you hate Ali. I suspect that your own abject failures in life make you hate those who are admired by the large majority. Unfortunately, Gerry, this leaves you with no credibility.

Anyway, Gerry, let's debate the facts, not your biases. You allege that Ali was a loafer, that he only jabbed a little on the ropes, that he grabbed and clinched, and that going 10 rounds with him was softer than it was with Quarry and Frazier.

When exactly did Ali show these traits during the first 32 fights of his career? When did he do these things before he was aged 32?

We are all waiting for your reply. Tick tock tick tock.

- 8/1/04 07:18:39 AM| Fran|Philly|| plc7755@aol.com ||| 10 | Ali had 2 careers this is true and it is not the fault of the fan to remember both. Ali of the 60's was a heavyweight with a lightweights reflexes and timing, The Ali of the 70's was a shell of the 60's version but he pulled in big bucks and his show was a circus built on the hype. He pulled in big money. He got away with holding, bad decisions, and boring fights that they would have to invent new rules about like "you have to knock out the champ to take the title". They milked Ali for the money he pulled down at the risk of him taking to much punishment in fights he should not have been in. Thats how it was. The second career was all about cashing in on the first. Just the fact that he could span 2 eras like he did made him great but if you look at him against Jimmy Young or Chuck Wepner or Lyle or Leon do you see a great fighter????

- 8/1/04 07:39:16 AM| Fran|Philly|| plc7755@aol.com ||| 10 | Hey Bill from wherever. Where do you get off throwing words like racism around on this great site. That does not exist on this site. You brought it here like every now and again some idiot does. We talk Boxing here not Political Correctness. This site is about a great fighter who never got any publicity during his career compared to Ali. Well he gets it here. If that bothers you then I am sure ("you gonna hate this site")but don't try and twist it. So As far as Ali goes you are obviously one guy who didn't turn the sound down during the Ali fights......thats the first thing we did. We didn't need to hear Cossells hype we just watched to see boxing.

- 8/1/04 09:06:24 AM| Evren|London|| @ ||| 10 |Massimo! Did you say the Williams fight was a walk in the park for Liston?? I disagree buddy. Williams was awesome and pounded Liston in both fights early on and breaking Liston's nose before Sonny out slugged him. Both fights are among the best slugfests I have ever seen!!

- 8/1/04 09:24:42 AM| Evren|London|| @ ||| 10 |Regarding Ali. I am the biggest fan of Ali both in his early career and his later career. I tend to think that Ali brought in something in his later fights that he didnt have to in his early career (partially because he was so damn good in his first career he didnt have to!) He gained an awesome wisdom and knowledge to the ring that reminded me of guys like Archie Moore, Ezzard Charles, Lloyd Marshall in their pure knowledge of the game. It was tactics that won him some fights where this was supplemented against his deterioration of skill. The thing that always comes back to me is : - take away his last two fights and Ali beat every opponent that he ever faced. Including other 'Greatest Fighters' evre : - Liston, Foreman, Frazier etc.

- 8/1/04 09:24:42 AM| Evren|London|| @ ||| 10 |I have always enjoyed watching Ali in and out of the ring. He used bring much joy to my father and I as we watched the old fights and old interviews. He really did make us laugh. But as I get older and I think of the things he used to say about his opponents and his views on seperatism etc I do think less of him as some of his comments were without consideration for others. What I can be happy about though is that Ali's views... have changed and he has matured as a human being and he values peace and equality to all. He was a representative of 'his people' when, I guess in 60's america there weren't too many people standing up for the African Americans. He almost made himself a deliberate target I guess for the angry racists and in that way promoted himself amongst his own 'people'. Ali did have a few off nights or lazy nights but who didn't? Evren

|8/1/04 11:05:24 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Ernie, as I noted in a recent post, the regulars here said, almost to a man that Jerry Quarry would have not beaten Sonny Liston, prime verses prime. You say that we think Jerry could beat any heavyweight who ever lived, given certain circumstances. You find Jerry's biggest fans at this site and not one of us has ever said that Jerry could ever hope to beat anyone who ever lived. Jerry was ranked number 27 all time by a Ring Magazine article from 1998 and that is a fair ranking. That means 26 heavyweights could have likely defeated Jerry and that is about right that on the other hand, Jerry could have beaten the countless thousands others who laced on gloves other than the 26 ahead of him on the list. I used the Liston example as showing we are not totally biased towards are assement of Jerry's skills and this point is shown by only one poster saying that Jerry could have beaten Liston, which I don't agree with.\<\br>Regarding Ali, while it is true Ali was shown favortism in judging later in his career, he still was a great fighter during this time as he went head to head with the greatest crop of fighters the division has ever seen and most of the time he legitimately came out on top. He was an amazing fighter throughout his career.\<\br>It is interesting how one poster can come out and say we are a bunch of Ali lovers, I think this statement is attributed to R.S., who pops in here every once in a while and stirs up trouble than disappears again, while someone else says we are against Ali. We must be doing something right if both extremes of opinion claim we are on the other side.|

|8/1/04 12:24:20 PM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com|||10|Speak for yourself Kent there are a few of us that think Jerry could have beaten Liston.|

|8/1/04 12:44:45 PM|Ernie Laxalt|Reno, NV||elax66@aol.com|||10|Let's look at Fran's comments as examples of gross misunderstanding and not having certain information. I'll comment in CAPS. Here we go: \<\br>"Ali had 2 careers this is true and it is not the fault of the fan to remember both. SURE IT IS, FRAN, IF YOU WANT TO TALK REASONABLY AND KNOWLEDGABLY ABOUT A MAN AS A FIGHTER. Ali of the 60's was a heavyweight with a lightweights reflexes and timing, The Ali of the 70's was a shell of the 60's version but he pulled in big bucks and his show was a circus built on the hype. FRAN, THIS SHELL BEAT QUARRY TWICE AND FOUGHT FRAZIER, NOT DOING TOO BADLY. He pulled in big money. He got away with holding, bad decisions, and boring fights -- NOT EVERY TIME, SON. EVERYONE USES TRICKS LIKE HOLDING, BUTTING, CUFFING OR WHAT HAVE YOU. WE EXPLAINED WHY CHAMPIONS GET THE EDGE IN JUDGING. that they would have to invent new rules about like "you have to knock out the champ to take the title". THAT'S NOT A NEW IDEA, AND NEVER WAS A RULE. THAT'S BEEN AROUND SINCE BOXING BEGAN. They milked Ali for the money he pulled down at the risk of him taking to much punishment in fights he should not have been in. FRAN, THAT IS THE TRAGIC STORY OF ALL BOXING, MORE OR LESS.
LOOK AT JERRY. LOOK AT JOE LOUIS OR ARCHIE MOORE. LOOK AT ALEJANDRO LAVORANTE.
Thats how it was. The second career was all about cashing in on the first.
WHAT'S WRONG WITH THAT? YOU DON'T LIKE CASHING IN? WE FOUGHT JERRY TWICE, FRAZIER, FOREMAN, ETC. Just the fact that he could span 2 eras like he did made him great but if you look at him against Jimmy Young or Chuck Wepner or Lyle or Leon do you see a great fighter???? YES, A GREAT FIGHTER GETTING OLD. MIKE TYSON WAS KNOCKED OUT THE OTHER NIGHT BUT HE'S STILL A GREAT FIGHTER. | theories about how Jerry could have beaten Liston, Foreman, Joe Louis, Rocky Marciano, etc. Jerry doesn't need far-fetched theories. He did incredibly well.

I couldn't see Dennis "the real Truth" Williams vs Mike Tyson. This is the first Mike Tyson's fight I miss. This is very sad. But yesterday I have seen Gene Fullmer vs Bennie "Kid" Paret (rounds 1, 2, 7, 10 honestly speaking). What a fight! Awesome! It was another Frazier-Quarry 1, but lasted almost ten round. I think Gene Fullmer is underrated. He was a great, great, great... Great champion! Spinto da curiosita', I have read his record: AWESOME! He beat Carmen Basilio twice and it seems to me that he fought Salt Ray Robinson 5 times: 2 wins, 1 draw and 1 loss. Who was better? Bennie "Kid" Paret was very good too, but not quite in Gene Fullmer's class.

I'm limping as fast as I can Bill, put the gun down... I think this says something that the people who post here are passionate fans of boxing, and of the era that Ali, Quarry et al performed in. That said, there is some responsibility here to read someone's post thoroughly before attempting to flog him with a 9-iron. I was talking to TWO GUYS when I made the 'poster' reference, not Kent or anyone else, and it's a joke anyway. "I, Gerry Schultz, being of sound mind and bruised body, do again state to the jury... ALI IS THE BEST (still with me?) I EVER SAW. Anyone lacking the eyesight to see that comment, please see a doctor immediately. What do I base that assessment on? AGAIN, IT IS HIS CAREER BEFORE BEING STRIPPED. I have shown more than a little respect for the man as a fighter. I don't appreciate Ali nearly as much as a man, who often used white media to confuse and insult BLACK opponents, who often held himself as Blacker Than Thou against very good black men. Is he responsible for his actions? Is anyone? I say yes, we are. Do I forgive him? For what? This is just my take on the man, my opinion causes him no injury, no matter how many share it. If you think My opinion of him is unfair, then You have just expressed your opinion. America still allows this for both of us, I swear. You two need to get a beer and a massage. I do hope this clarification does not again seriously injure or offend your delicate sensibilities.

Another thing: I have seen some video clips of Clay in Rome (1960) and he fought like a genius. He was really AWESOME. He was incredibly quick! I wonder if he ever fought in that way early in his professional fights.

... I meant early in his professional career.

We all have different views on JQ and Liston. I always bet on Jerry, but the one fight I was not sure on was Jerry and Shavers and look what happen. So since we will never know JQ vs Liston. I'm going with JQ.Ali was a great fighter, but he didn't have alot of people in his pocket the last few fights. He turned out to be a Elvis in the fight game just going thru the motions.

Fran, I wasn't speaking for everyone, just making a point that we are objective here. There is room for disagreement like I disagree that prime verses prime that Jerry could have survived not being cut by Liston's jab. I think most of the people who come here are in agreement with me on this but not everyone. What I like about this site is a lot of the time we can disagree about a topic but not make it personal.

Fran, are you saying that the racism was all a one way street and that Ali never got any back. Ever stopped to think that Ali was only responding to the racism he got. Are you saying that there was no racism towards the blacks in the 1960s. Or was it just Ali being racist towards the whites. By the way, Fran, Ali in his second career, after 1970, was 30 years of age. Like any guy getting older, he held, threw less punches, and slowed down. But he still kept winning. He beat Frazier and Foreman and other great fighters. What more did you want him to do. Sounds to me like Ali angered you with all those antics he used to swell the crowd. You kept paying big money to see someone shut his big mouth and it cost you heaps of time and money. Most of the time you walked away very disappointed. You sound to me, Fran, like an Al Gore supporter at the last election. You went along to all the rallies hoping to see Gore kick Bush's butt, but it never happened. And thus you became a Bush hater (just like you hate Ali). Come November you'll be out handing out Kerry how to vote cards. (It's just an analogy, settle down Fran.) Anyway, Fran, you might also like to explain, if Ali was so far gone, he was still able to beat Jerry Quarry easily. (Don't expect Gerry to help you here; he never debates the issues.) The truth is, Fran, as much as your dislike of Ali never allows you to admit it, he was still a magnificent fighter in his 30s and much too good for the ones you bet to beat him, especially your favourite Jerry Quarry. If Jerry was as good as you say (and I think he was fantastic), then Ali must have been the greatest.

It is pretty well established that the young Cassius Clay lived a fairly uneventful middle class life in a relatively tranquil city, until people in his community helped him get started in boxing. Quite the opposite of Joe Frazier's lot growing up dirt poor on a farm in the deep South. Yet Frazier did not find it necessary to join what was essentially a cult which espoused vehemently racist and extremist views. Check out any mainstream Moslem website and you will probably find a renunciation of, or at least a distancing from, the Black Muslim sect. To suggest that adopting their beliefs was some reasonable response to the "racism" suffered by Clay is preposterous. But you'd have to learn what their beliefs are to have a valid opinion in this regard. You might want to start with C. Eric Lincion's seminal "The Black Muslims in America". If you did, you would (or should) be astounded at some of the views that Ali apparently embraced, starting with their version of the world's creation. Can someone point me to his public renunciation of same? If so, I would amend my own opinion of him. (P.S. this was not limited to 40 years ago - i.e. the 60's - he routinely praised Elijah Muhhamed after his victories throughout his career.) Those who might suggest that anyone who bears some animosity toward Ali is patently wrong and probably racist need to look a bit deeper at Ali's life. Plenty of people have yet to forgive Jane Fonda, and she apologized. Love him, hate him, or in between, we're all entitled to our opinions, particularly when they are based upon facts. In closing, the recent personal attacks which typically follow any statement which ruffle some feathers are unproductive and, frankly, un-American, no? beliefs that are weird to persons of other nationalities or cultures. And last time I looked, Americans were free to hold those beliefs (at least after slavery was abolished, anyways). So please Forest, tell us all about Ali's weird religious beliefs. From a purely philosophical perspective, I am looking forward to reading what you write. Thanks.

| 8/1/04 11:54:02 PM | Gerry | Cleveland | same | 9 | Bill, I have answered all your questions, twice. Do your part and read them. I've done all I can for you, your whining is tiresome. I couldn't care less about your personal insults. I've read your posts and will chalk that up to the quality of the source. I've said all I can say on the Ali topic, let's move on to better discussion. |

| 8/1/04 11:59:12 PM | Observer | US | Irrelevant | 10 | Anyone interested in a valid discussion should first become informed regarding the subject matter. The suggestion that Judeo-Christian articles of faith are remotely analogous to the tenets of the Nation of Islam (Black Muslims) displays not a command, but rather a profound ignorance of the topic. While all major religions, including the one that Observer 2 mocks, do indeed require an acceptance of things not readily apparent to us (articles of faith), none dictate overt, abject hatred directed at other peoples based exclusively upon race. The Nation of Islam, which is not a major religion but rather a tiny sect renounced by mainstream Moslems, does. For starters, the Nation of Islam's members believe that "Original Man", the black man, is a race of gods. And that thousands of years ago, an evil scientist -"Yacub" (the name has various spellings) - betrayed "Original Man" by creating a mutant race, white men, who are devils bent on destroying "Original Man". A minimal amount of research will confirm the above report, and provide much, much more information for the inquisitive. The comparison, then, to Christianity, which espouses love, charity, and brotherhood, could hardly be less valid or offensive. In any event, this is a boxing site, and my first post was simply an invited response to others which oversimplified Ali as either a saint or alternatively a cartoonish loudmouth, then wondered aloud how anyone can possibly dislike him (usually including an implication that those who do must be racists). I don't intend to offend anyone, just offer some easily corroborated facts. Moreover, I have no intention of beating this to death. If anyone cares, do the research yourself (it only takes typing "Nation of Islam" in Google and reading), confirm for yourself what sort of people Ali threw in with, and decide for yourself whether it bears upon your opinion of him. Case closed. Best wishes to all. |

| 8/2/04 01:59:42 AM | Ernie Laxalt | Reno, NV | elax66@aol.com | 10 | We really ought to sign our names to our posts. Even more than that, our posts ought to have something to do with boxing, however tangential. Observer2, I don't need you to inform me about Black Muslims. What is your shoe size, anyway? Do you have a jab that sticks, or do you drop it when you get tired? What's the boxing scene like in London now? Do you have a lot of Jamaican fighters? I'm glad Cleveland ("Big Cat") Williams got his due here. He had a big enough punch -- like JQ -- that he might have won a championship with it. Zora Folley was another excellent heavyweight of the late 50s and 60s, but most of the top boxers -- including Ali -- ducked him, until late in Folley's career. Kent, what did you think of Amos (Big Train) Lincoln? He was one of the first in a new breed of really big heavyweights, at about 6'4" or 6'5", about 230, 235, and he could really slam. He was a Liston sparring partner for a while. He won quite a few fights, then a lesser-known West Coast heavy named King Fletcher KOed him decisively. Fletcher later died of ring injuries from another fight. Observer2, why do Black Muslims wear bow ties? |

| 8/2/04 05:09:16 AM | Observer 2 | Hell | same | 10 | Good question, Ernie. Why do Black Muslims wear black bow ties? Mmmm. Maybe its because non-Black Muslims don't wear black bow ties and they want to be different. Perhaps Malcolm X's father owned a bow tie factory, and his sister a black dieing business. |
It's possible that they were worried that long ties gave mean guys like Gerry and Observer (read Forest Ward) something to strangle them with. Maybe they didn't want to dress like Al Jolson, or the guys on Laugh In, or Glenn Campbell, or Richard Nixon, or those who attended tea parties with Eleanor Roosevelt. I haven't seen any bad guys in Iraq wearing black bow ties, so we know that they aren't Black Muslims. No black bow ties there, although it would improve on the towel look. I don't think OJ was wearing a black bow tie on the night in question, and I don't know what Marion Jones's druggist wears. When I was a stupid kid, I wasn't wearing a black bow tie every time I was naughty. Actually, that is a really good question. What IS the relevance of the Black Muslims wearing black bow ties (and short sleeved shirts) ?

Another question. Why do guys like Gerry and Observer (Forest) not wear black bow ties ? And that brings me to an important point. Forest - apart from having ideological and religious differences from you, what real harm did the Black Muslims do ? Were they terrorists, rapists, bank robbers ? Or were they just misguided guys who thought Fred Flinstone and Barney Rubble created mankind. But I'm sure you have comprehensive notes on all Black Muslim atrocities, including those by the baby burning arch devil Muhammad Ali, so please fill us in on them. Thanks.

| 8/2/04 09:30:24 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | ||| 10 |
| You mean Fred Flitstone and Barney Rubble didn't create mankind? Now what am I going to tell my kids if I ever have any? Ernie, Amos Lincoln was a good fighter who maybe stayed around too long. He had a good record but he ended up losing a lot of fights in a row to fighters like Sonny Liston, Karl Mildenberger, and Thad Spencer. He was just one of those guys who seemed to have a lot of talent who was mishandled by management. He never really fulfilled his potential. Early in his career he was already fighting eight rounders against more experienced fighters after less than ten fights. That can ruin a fighter later on, burn him out. I would really have to double check his record but I am pretty sure it was at least less than fifteen fights that he was in with some very tough guys.

I don't know anything about his management, either they didn't know what they were doing or they didn't care.

| 8/2/04 11:11:48 AM | Massimo | Roma | ciao yao, yao ciao.com | ||| 10 |
| Hey guys, let me teach you something: Fred and Burnie together couldn't create anything. Fred and Vilma did create mankind. And Burnie and Bettie also. At least, in Italy works in this way. Maybe in USA the things are different, I don't know. Ernie - Amos 'Small car' Lincoln wasn't 6'4 or 6'5 ! Boxing record archive says he is a 6'2 midget. And, truth for truth, Andre' wasn't 7'4, he was around 6'7. Lincoln wasn't even close to be 230 lbs. I don't know why they called him 'Big Train'. Maybe only because he did use a big train to go to the fights.

| 8/2/04 11:22:39 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | ||| 10 |
| What does everyone think of the Tyson fight? I must say, I was very surprised by this one. I guess I shouldn't be shocked because Tyson hasn't shown much for about 15 years, but still, I expected a walkover and Danny Williams (wasn't that Danno's name on Hawaii Five-O?) booked Tyson! Really, for everyone who puts Tyson (even in his prime) as an alltime great, this just deteriorates his legacy even more. He was an intimidating young knockout artist and beat up on a lot of tomato cans (and a couple decent fighters including the shell of Larry Holmes, who in his prime would have horsewhipped Tyson), then reached the pinnacle by flattening cruiserweight Michael Spinks because Spinks was afraid to mix it up. Guys, Tyson was a great and fast power puncher, but let's not talk about him in the same sentence (same paragraph maybe, but not same sentence) with Ali, Foreman, Marciano, Liston, Holmes, etc. He never ever showed the heart of a truly great champion. He never rallied when he was behind, or got up off the canvas to win a fight. He was a good heavyweight champ, but not a great one. He didn't dedicate himself the way a great champion does. And by the way, this isn't a matter of saying Tyson couldn't, for example, beat Joe Frazier. But it is saying that in context, Frazier was a great of his time and Tyson wasn't. Just because styles make fights, maybe Tyson could win a match with Frazier. But Frazier showed more over a longer period and in my opinion, won or was competitive in more great fights. Tyson might have just enough left to get another couple paydays, but wow, Danny Williams!

Whenever, I make a post on this site I always leave my name, Forest Ward. I don't have the need to write something under a different name.

Tyson was a great front-runner. The quality of his opposition was downright mediocre and it never allowed us to see if Tyson was more than just an offensive machine. The best fighter that Tyson ever faced when considering prime years etc? Tony Tucker. Tucker gave Tyson some problems, but Tyson was too ferocious at that time. Holmes wasn't even close to being prepared or in his prime, Spinks was already retired in his own mind before the Tyson fight and was just getting one more pay day. Look at the rest of the names. The first "real" test for Tyson was his 18th fight against Jesse Ferguson. A nice fighter, hardly a world-beater. A couple fights later he beats a past-prime James Tillis. Destroys a fragile Marvis Frazier a couple fights later. Title fights- Berbick, Smith, Pinklon Thomas. All credible guys, no great fighters. Then Tucker and Biggs, Holmes, Tubbs, Spinks. It isn't Tyson's fault that at his peak the fighters that were around were just fair. However it will never allow us to know exactly what his legacy was. At least Holmes had Norton, hell Cooney was even better than all of Tyson's foes save Tucker. Then Bruno and Carl The Truth. He NEVER fought a great fighter in his prime. He was always 2 clicks better than everyone he was fighting. Mike Tyson doesn't beat Joe Frazier, Mike Tyson doesn't beat George Foreman. Why? Because if the talents were close to equal Tyson would never be my pick. At that top crust of heavyweight history it takes a special thing to win fights against other great fighters. Tyson never showed that skill, and anyone who thinks he has is dealing in just pure conjecture.

Tyson was one hell of a fighter in his prime...his fights were always great to watch, over quick...but since he bit Holyfield he doesn't deserve a boxing license...fighters aren't supposed to bite people. I remember Uncle Jerry used to tell me he could whip Tyson with no problem....Tyson is a LOSER!!!!!

Let's give Mike Tyson what he deserves! He did beat a long list of decent fighters: Jesse Ferguson was good, James Tillis was good, Mitch "Blood" Green was good, Berbick, Smith, Tucker, Tubbs... Frank Bruno was a mountain of muscles and an excellent fighter with a devastating punch. Spinks destroyed Cooney,"The Lie" Williams was good. Alex Stewart was good, ask Holyfield and Foreman. When Mike fought Holmes, Holmes was still a very good heavyweight. After the Tyson fight, he went the distance with Holyfield and Mc Call and did beat Ray Mercer. He was only 38 when he fought Tyson. Pretty young for modern standards. Donovan "Razor" Ruddock was very good! The Danny Williams fight means nothing, Tyson was overweight and had fought only 49 rounds against Clifford in the last twenty years! It is not only a matter of who Tyson did beat but HOW he did beat these guys. Berbick was humiliated, Stewart was humiliated etc.In his prime he was probably a top ten, even if surely below Ali', Foreman, Frazier, Louis, Spalla and Liston. I used to think Tyson was alltime top ten, but I don't anymore. And by the way, let's stop with the violins about Tyson not having great fighters in his era to show his stuff. If he wasn't convicted of rape (and I'm not saying he was guilty in my opinion---but even if he didn't commit rape, he was carousing, manhandling women and putting himself in a vulnerable position legally)---anyway, if he wasn't convicted of rape, he could have tried his hand with Riddick Bowe and Lennox Lewis, who along with Holyfield were very, very talented heavyweights who overlapped with a close to in-prime Tyson. The fact remains that the greats get up---like Foreman did against Lyle and like Holmes did against Shavers---and they fight on. And even in losing to Frazier, Muhammad Ali got up from a vicious late fight knockdown and managed to fight back. In a weird way, I always wanted to see Tyson lose when he was the heavy favorite, and celebrated the fact that Buster Douglas beat him. But after his time in jail and losses, I was really pulling for him to make a comeback, turn his life around and live happy. I still would like to see him get a chance to make some money to pay his debt and recapture some glory---but that doesn't seem likely anymore. No excuses, but tearing up his knee in the first round spelled doom. If he couldn't end it right away, there was no way he could fight comfortably and get the leverage he needed.Kent, do you think he can get on track for a couple more wins and some sort of important fight again? |Another important thing about Mike Tyson's career: Frank Bruno wears a size 14 shoe, same size as Chamberlain and Iron Mike did beat him twice. That's say how great Tyson was better than 1 thousand words :-)|Yeah, we know that Forest, oops I mean Observer. We all know its you. The comments about Jane Fonda gave you away. Did Jane go to jail, Forest ?|You say that Jerry Quarry "is not in the same class" of fighter such as George Foreman, but I disagree. You should remember that big George Foreman promised a title shot to the winner of the Shavers-Quarry fight in MSG. Foreman backed out of a fight with Jerry after he disposed of Shavers in 1 round, and has said publicly that he dodged Jerry on more than one occasion.... Jerry Quarry was most likely the only fighter that Foreman has ever ducked in his entire career. As we know, Jerry NEVER ducked anybody in his career! |Ernie Laxalt..... You say that Jerry Quarry "is not in the same class" of fighter such as George Foreman, but I disagree. You should remember that big George Foreman promised a title shot to the winner of the Shavers-Quarry fight in MSG. Foreman backed out of a fight with Jerry after he disposed of Shavers in 1 round, and has said publicly that he dodged Jerry on more than one occasion.... Jerry Quarry was most likely the only fighter that Foreman has ever ducked in his entire career. As we know, Jerry NEVER ducked anybody in his career! |Angelo and Joe hit the nail on the head regarding Tyson. His career defining moment, Buster Douglas, when he needed to call on some inner strength and heart. There was none to be had. It happend over and over again. To be a truly great fighter, to get off the floor when all hope is lost and turn sure defeat in to victory, Tyson had/has none of what it takes. I've never seen him get up and win after being knocked down. That's not to say I don't believe he would give any past champ a run for his money. He had real heavyweight KO power and was very quick with his feet and hands, and I don't agree he had a record built up of just "fair" opponents. He did fight two wars with Razor Ruddock that were very impressive, the best fights of his career, in my opinion. Frazier had trouble with Manny Ramos, Bob Foster and Ron Stander clocked Joe several times. Buster Mathis,Dave Zygiewicz and Terry Daniels were they any better than Tony Tubbs, Pinklon Thomas or Tyrell Biggs, I don't think so. Sure Joe had Bonavena, Ellis?,Jerry Quarry and of course Ali. Fighters that were or thought to be near Frazier's equal at least for a time. Joe had what it took to beat these guys. Tyson dosen't. Foreman was also mentioned, Greg Peralta, Boone Kirkman, Ted Gullick, Stanford Harris and let's not forget the great Joe "King" Roman. But when Ron Lyle came to call Big George dug way deep and found a way to win. Tyson never could. The fighters that Tyson beat were no worse and in most cases better than alot of former champs can claim on their records. Do I think he could have beaten Ali...Dempsey...Louis...Foreman...Holmes...Marciano,not a chance. I would give slightly less than even money against Bowe and Lewis prime vs prime and we all know what happened against Holyfield, I can't think of a scenario where that would change. Tyson didn't have an equal challange in the ring? Sure he did and he lost almost every time. | 8/2/04 08:05:15 PM|Angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Bob: Good points. And add to it---Tyson never came back all the way from the Douglas fight. Why? Because he was never as good as we all thought. Once his cover was blown (i.e. the intimidation factor was eroded because he was exposed by Douglas as someone who could be handled), the gig was over. Let me put it this way: You know those wars with Razor Ruddock---well if Tyson had taken Douglas out in short order, Ruddock would have never stood up to Tyson and given him a go the way he did. He saw Tyson scrambling around on the canvas after being dropped by Douglas, looking for his mouthpiece and getting counted out, and thought to himself, "If Douglas can do it, why not me?" Of course, Tyson did prevail, but the point is that the good fighters now knew he was no unbeatable force anymore and probably just as important (if not more important), Tyson knew he wasn't an unbeatable force anymore either. Tyson was a great knockout artist in a class with Earnie Shavers, accomplished a huge amount at a very young age (like Floyd Patterson), defended his title like Superman against Spinks (like Foreman did against Norton). All true---but at the end of the day, Tyson came crashing back to earth, and now the Danny Williams of the world might start to clean his clock on a regular basis if people pay to see it. | 8/2/04 08:56:41 PM|Yacub|Nation of Islam||evilscientist@aol.com|||10|Thanks, Observer, for your introduction of me to those on this site. To repeat, I am Yacub, evil scientist from the Nation of Islam, and you are all descendants from the mutant race of white people I created thousands of years ago. By now you have guessed that I am black, just like Mike Tyson and Muhammad Ali. Jane Fonda was supposed to be black, too, but I ran out of dark paint after already making trillions of very bad black people.Observer ridicules his version of the purported beliefs of the Nation of Islam. Maybe he's right and we should be digging all that proven Christian stuff, like the resurrection, miracles, 30 loaves of bread, the virgin mother, etc. All that stuff is more believable than what other religions preach, right ?Obviously black people are very bad. Jesus was white, and all 12 disciples were white. All the saints are white and there's never been a black pope (maybe the christian god doesn't promote coloureds).All the feel good stories have white characters. Santa, Alice in Wonderland, Seven Dwarfs, Superman, George Jetson, Barney Rubble, Wilma and Betty, the gorgeous Barbie doll...... not one nigger in the wood pile ! Oh shucks.Observer says that the Nation of Islam believes that the "black man is the race of gods." Wow. The white establishment obviously believes the exact opposite, so the black guys are plainly wrong. Sorry masser.Until the Nation of Islam can get some bearded brother who can rise from the dead, feed thousands with a few crusts before sacrificing himself on a cross, us blacks ain't got no hope of having a believable creed. Thanks for educating us, Observer. You get five gold stars on your bleached white hood. | 8/3/04 01:49:56 AM|Buddha|Nirvana||fatguy@aol.com|||10|Yacub is the Nation of Islam devil yet the Observer ridicules the notion Yacub exists and views true believers as stupid. Yet the Christians have their own Yacub......the devil - Satan, waiting at the gates of hell (for all those Christians having pre-marital sex, a cardinal sin !) Why is it more believable that there is a Christian devil but not a Nation of Islam one ? Is it because whitey is telling the story ? Please explain, Observer, because some of us cannot see the Forest for the trees. Thanks.| 8/3/04 04:06:58 AM|Ernie Laxalt|Reno, NV||elax66@aol.com|||10|Observer2, you ask, "But I'm sure you have comprehensive notes on all Black Muslim atrocities, including those by the baby burning arch devil Muhammad Ali, so please fill us in on them. Thanks."That's too easy. The Black Muslims were a hate group. They intimidated and threatened. They denounced, libeled and slandered people. They promulgated violence and taught it to children. Of course, they are not alone in American groups in doing that. The Black Muslims also fed tens of thousands of hungry people, often poor people, and taught them self-respect, discipline and pride. They taught them skills and put them to work. They patrolled their neighborhoods and drove out pimps, whores, loan sharks, dope pushers, robbers, thieves and other trash. BUT LET'S GET BACK TO BOXING, DAMN IT!Mr. White, if you choose to think Jerry Quarry is in the same class as George Foreman, I do not stand in your way. One thing you have to say about this site is that we do not leave any topic undigested. Massimo, don't believe everything you read. Take it from me: Big Train was 6'4" or 6'5". Don't be a kvetch, paisan. No one here really stands up for Jack Johnson. I bet Jimmy Jacobs would. Hey, where is Jimmy (Mighty Joe Young) Dorsey, the man who punished Godzilla for 6 rounds before the ref mercifully stopped it?What does it mean kvetch? What's the paisano for that? If it means that I am great, well, that's how I am! I'm gonna walk in the street and I'm gonna ask anybody I meet "What's a kvetch?". People will respond "Ti fico un braccio in gola e ti rivolto come un calzino!" :-) Well, Big Train was 6'4 or 6'5. That's the first time that somebody's height is underrated.... Andre'. ....The issue was never which "religion" was more believable. As I said, all religions require faith in something we can't see. The point is that the Nation of Islam never was a religion in the first place, and is not considered one by mainstream Islam today. It is a cult which espouses hate. Do some reading. Christianity, and all other religions, have good and bad members, but Christ never taught hate, nor does his church. Quite the contrary. You ask what bad things the Nation has done? As another poster observed, the Nation has done plenty. Ask the surviving family of their other shining star, Malcolm X (he is unavailable for comment - I am sure you know why), then go to the NYPD for their history with the Nation, or maybe get an update on their philosophy from "Minister" Louis Farrakhan (just be careful if you happen to be Jewish). Or, if you prefer to put your head in the sand re: Ali's membership in this organization, that is your perogative. However, I doubt Observer 2 would be quite as tolerant with respect to a prominent white athlete who was a Klansmen or a member of the Aryan Nation. Am I correct?Back to boxing, and Jerry Quarry, indeed. Don't even get me started on muslims, the the scum of the earth, which Ali is a part of. What do people mean Jerry's not in Foreman's class? What do they mean he didn't have a chance against Liston, did everybody forget the Ron Lyle fight, Lyle is a carbon copy of Liston, only a little bigger. Jerry took his best punches. Jerry's no cake walk for anybody. Provided Jerry was in the condition of the Lyle fight, he's got a good chance. KENT WHAT A TRAITER YOU ARE!!!!
Islam is an organization with racist views not unlike the KKK but minus, for the most part, the violence of the Klan has shown in the past. But funny thing, as long as groups like these two remain non violent and the KKK seems to be going that route these days, they have a right to exist in this great country. Koo Koo, traitor to what? Because I said Jerry would lose to Liston or Ali was a great fighter for most of his career. That is an opinion about boxing, nothing else. I am a traitor to no one as I am only true to myself and it is an honor to be called a traitor by you, an extremist who admires the KKK. Now back to the Nation of Islam, not to be confused with more moderate Muslims who do not share the view that white people are evil. NOI, I believe, had a hand in killing Malcolm X when he came back from the middle east after praying with people of all colors, including whites, and he said that all men are his brothers and that white people are not inherently evil. NOI back then tried to silence the truth but it is true, all men are brothers and we will all be better off when we come to recognize this. SORRY BRANDI, I WILL DO MY PART TO LIMIT THIS TALK OF RACE AND GET BACK TO BOXING. THERE WAS JUST SOME THINGS I FELT I HAD TO SAY.

Your are a minority loving sellout Kent. I will admit the KKK ruined their image long ago, we need to get out of those sheets and have a pro white group that does not seek violence and works in a positive way for whites, oh I forgot, that makes you Racist if your pro white!! This country is in big trouble , seal those borders, kick out the mexicans and the terrorists that are sneaking in. THE WHITE MALE THE MOST HATED PERSON IN THE WORLD, WHO'S REALLY THE RACIST KENT!!

I forgot to add moderate muslim, that means those muslims that don't believe in killing us, but hate us just the same. GET WHITE KENT!!!

I think JQ and Al "Blue" Lewis would have been a good match up. Lewis fought Bonavena in Argentina and knocked him down twice before the Argentine ref "disqualified" him to save Bonavena.

All the religions have one thing in common: THEY ARE FALSE. End of the story. Just my opinion. I mean no offence to the believers.

Hey, did anyone see the Mike Tyson fight? I read that Tyson hurt his knee in the first round, and that he just had surgery to repair it. If that's true, then he was pretty brave to keep fighting till he got knocked out. One idiot sports writer said Tyson hurt his knee by throwing a punch. That's ridiculous! He must have gotten his knee entangled in Williams' legs or the rope or something. The only person I know of that could break his leg by throwing a punch would be Homer Simpson. When you're 38 and haven't been active it doesn't take much to hurt yourself. Tyson pivots alot when he throws hooks. That was a pretty intense first round and thats when it happened. He did show alot of heart by sticking it out until he was too tired to go on. Gotta give the other guy credit for not laying down in the first round after getting hit with Tyson's best. Good fight!!

Last three bouts of round 1 : -

Jimmy Young vs John Tate

Tim
Witherspoon vs Chris ByrdErnie Terrell vs Earnie ShaversDanny 'The Muslim' Williams vs Mike 'the Muslim' Tyson was a great fight. I have known Danny since he was an amateur and have attended many of his fights including the fight he had against Mark Potter where he dislocated his shoulder only to come back and score a one punch (one armed) knockout when the fight was on the verge of being stopped. An incredible fight!

This used to be a boxing site.

Ernie you spent alot of effort trying to erase the fact that if you saw the Ali fights you saw a guy holding and getting the benefits of bad decisions. No amount of your bullshit can change that. If we were face to face you would not refer to me as "son" without having to look for your teeth afterwards. Bill not much to say about you .........that was pretty funny I am a beeeeg Dubya fan | Observer. So anything ludicrously unbelievable in the Christian religion like Noah's Ark is credible and merely requires faith, while anything to do with Nation of Islam has no credibility and sucks morally. As I said to you before, Satan is no more credible a proposition than Yacub. It is all nonsense, depending on what colour and perspective you place on it. Despite your bigotry, not all members of the Nation of Islam are bad people. We don't accuse all Christians of being murderers just because the Christian Molosevic killed tens of thousands of Muslims. Don't let the darkness of bigotry close your eyes forever Observer. Try and realise that all people are equal, and that your ideas are not necessarily superior just because they're yours. Peace to you, too. |

Top 10 fights from 1965-1980 heavyweight scene. For the boxing fans we still have. Based on significance and quality put together. Of course this is only based on the fights I have seen. Which is pretty much every important fight from the era.

10. Muhammad Ali vs Cleveland Williams– The absolute pinnacle for the best heavyweight ever. Really it was a no-contest against an unfortunate Williams who was shot the year before. The majesty of Ali in his prime comes shining through in this masterpiece.

9. Muhammad Ali Vs Ken Norton II– The best fight of their trilogy. The most confused and dominated Muhammad Ali was ever close to his prime was the middle rounds of this fight. Norton at his peak as well in this fight while still being trained by Eddie Futch. A wonderful battle.

8. Joe Frazier-Jerry Quarry I– Prime vs Prime slugfest between two great action fighters for the title. Watch Frazier's head snap back in the first round as Quarry whistles his own left hook. Quarry takes some terrible punishment before being stopped by a cut.

7. Ron Lyle vs Earnie Shavers– Must see TV. Two bombers letting it all go the whole way. This was the Shavers that still had hair and thought defense was for someone else to worry about. The amount of punishment dished out was monumental. If it was a title fight it would be higher on my list.

6. Muhammad Ali vs George Foreman– In reality the crowning achievement of Ali's career was using everything to win this fight. He didn't fight with his body, he fought with his mind. Obviously not as much action as some of the other fights, but the sweetest of sweet sciences on display.

5. Ken Norton vs Larry Holmes– An absolute classic. Perfect stylistic showcase for Larry Holmes to show himself as a great fighter against the most determined Ken Norton of his career. The 15th round leaves you breathless as two all time greats let it all go. Show a kid this fight and create a boxing fan for life.

4. George Foreman vs Ron Lyle– Absolutely one of the best high level action fights of all-time. Not for a title which places it lower than it's actual replay value. There are certain point of this fight that still make cringe even after seeing it 40 times. Love Ken Norton's commentary- "Lyle's getting sleepy."

3. Muhammad Ali vs Joe Frazier III– There are many that will wonder what the hell are numbers one and two if this three. I love the fight and the sheer wills of a battle that had raged for years in both of these fighters. The ebb and flow is what makes this such a great fight. Even though both of their skills had eroded, the determination is what makes this one special.

George Foreman Vs Joe Frazier I- This is Joe Frazier, he beat Muhammad Ali. He's undefeated, unstoppable, unbelievable. "Down Goes Frazier, Down Goes Frazier!" A force of nature Frazier was that night. It was short but as dominant a performance as was ever seen against a top 10 heavyweight of all-time. This was Joe Frazier, he didn't lose, he did that night. Joe Frazier vs Muhammad Ali I- THE BEST FIGHT EVER. The best fight ever. It showed two of the best heavyweights of all-time. Frazier was at his absolute pinnacle while Ali was very close.

Watch those first 3 rounds and you would wonder how Frazier could possibly win.
Then the force of nature that Joe was emerged. Madison Square Garden deserved the best event in the history of sport, this was and will always be The Fight. For the real boxing fans that still come here, remember you Jerry.}

[8/3/04 06:28:56 PM Massimo Roma | 4 | 10] Jimmy Old b John Tate on points

Witherspoon b Byrd by KO b Shavers b Terrell by KO without asking him b "WHAT'S MY NAME, SUCKER? WHAT'S MY NAME?". |

[8/3/04 06:53:55 PM Bob Bumbera NC | renfbera@aol.com | 10] Young over Tate 8 to 4 decesion. Byrd over Witherspoon 8 to 4 decesion and Shavers KO's Terrell in
5. Other wise...no comment. |

[8/3/04 08:51:57 PM Fran Philly | plc7755@aol.com | 10] Young Over
Tate b Witherspoon b Byrd b Shavers wins by kayo Williams Those are great fights and I saw them all Live but none of those fights had the Drama of the Quarry vrs...Mac Foster, Earnie Shavers and Ron Lyle. Being at the Garden for the first time and seeing Jerry in a street fight with Shavers and Knockin him out was the most exciting. |

[8/3/04 10:22:41 PM Kent La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10] Young runs and hits and he piles up enough points to eck out a close but unanimous decision over Tate. Witherspoon breaks down Byrd and comes from behind to stop Byrd in the tenth round. Shavers kayos Terrell in the fifth round. |

[8/4/04 03:21:30 AM Massimo Roma | 4 | 10] Italia b Usa 95-78 in Colonia. We are the real DREAM TEAM, you are the NIGHTMARE team. :-)

We Italians can't play soccer, but can play basketball! Cheers. | would have to agree with all of those maybe a few changes in positions. Ali Foreman I would rate higher but otherwise excellent. Ali vs Shavers was another good fight though had quite a lull in the middle. Shavers vs Mercado and Cobb were great fights also but I would stick with your top ten. Well done.

[8/4/04 08:26:50 AM Angelo Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10] Fran's tournament picks are right on. Jimmy Young would confuse Tate and manage to win a close decision. Witherspoon would win a unanimous decision over Byrd. Shavers would get hit a lot, but manage to land leather that would take Terrel out in the middle rounds. If Terrel could somehow survive to the later rounds, he could turn the tables, but my guess is that he'd be taken out in 5 or 6. |

[8/4/04 08:57:46 AM Kent La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10] Fran, you are correct that Ali benefitted from his fame on the scorecards in fights but consider this, even in the second phase of his career, he was an amazing fighter because he was fighting a very good crop of fighters, the division had never seen this wealth of talent ever and he was still very competitive. Say he should have lost to Jimmy Young, Ken Norton in at least the third bout, or to Earnie Shavers, or maybe even to Joe Frazier in their second fight, but in each of these fights the fights were close where the switch of one or two rounds often could spell a different outcome, so the decisions were not total robbery in each of the fights in question, a legitimate case could be made for Ali victories. The third Norton fight in particular, I have watched this fight several times recently and it was much closer than I remembered. I had thought Norton was completely dominate but now I see it as Norton should have won a close decision, about 8-6-1. Yes Ali is holding and talking a lot of the time but he is still landing a lot of punches in between, probably more total than Norton landed. The harder punches, more effective punches were landed by Norton so it is a case of what the judges liked more, Ali's quantity or Norton's quality and this is a subjective opinion./br>

Ali was an amazing fighter in his entire career because how many fighter could still dominate 99 percent of the fighters out there for so long? The only ones that come to mind are Joe Louis and maybe Larry Holmes. Ali could have been even better if he hadn't missed over three years of his prime and he likely would have maintained the excellence Bill from London pointed out even longer, remember in the first phase of his career, he wasn't using the tricks he used later on.

When ever you fight the champ of a weight class you must beat or knock-out tha champion, you can not have a close fight or even a draw you must beat them to take his or her title.

Kent you said it very well when you said it depended what the judges liked. I say the judges liked getting paid and voted so they would keep getting paid the big Ali dollars. Of all of the great fighters from that era Ali who was the oldest hung on way past, the others, way past his prime, for the money and the fans and judges all bought into the hype. In the end it robbed us of having him around for the past 25 years. Going to training camp all of those fights and taking the shots after he was worn out didn't do him any good. If those close fights were called the right way he would have been penalized for holding and would have had about 8 more losses maybe he would have quit sooner. The hype and the mindless idiots who bought into it made him stay tooo long and take away his best years after boxing. After Frazier 3 that should have been it.

As an Ali fan, I often wonder at what point he could have walked away and not developed the severe Parkinsons that has taken such a toll on him. If he retired after Manilla, 1975, would he have been spared? Probably the hardest punches after that were landed by Shavers, Spinks and Holmes. Did these three fights put him over? Was it the Manilla fight itself that started the downfall? I wonder if he could have stopped sometime in the mid-70's, or if the damage had already been done. And what about for Jerry? If he quit (for good) after the second Frazier loss, he would have avoided the Norton punches and the damage inflicted by that tomato can he fought when he was 47. Of course, a couple of Jerry's best fights led up to the 1974 Frazier fight----so he didn't have any intention of quitting at that point.

I think Jerry fighting in 1993 caused problems for him. I don't know why he fought Norton I never saw that one and never will watch it. As for Ali he may have been ok after Frazier 3 but all those fights and the training camps to prepare for it had to have hurt him.

Biggest stinker fights 1965-1980. These fights involved contenders, but truly stunk.Holmes vs Shavers I- Fell asleep twice watching it.Ali vs Lyle- Ali had his most boring. Well maybe not most boring.Ali vs Folley- Like Steel Magnolia's.Ali vs Patterson II- Paint drying has nothing on this.Terrell vs Chuvalo- Jab, Clutch, Jab, Clutch.Ali vs Bugner II- A stinker, THROW A PUNCH JOE!!Ali vs Young- A strategic fight. If watching televised scrabble excites you, get this one.For the boxing fans.

Yes, but the eight round of Ali'-Lyle was very good. I really don't know what Ali' was thinking during that fight. He fought like a nut (good slang or not?!)

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | Judges vote for who they want and the fighter can't control that. The old boxing maxim applied...if you want to beat the champion, then you have to knock him out. For time immemorial, challengers rarely won titles on points, but people only complain when this maxim advantaged Ali.

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | People don't give Ali credit for being so busy in the ring. After Frazier 1, Ali didn't hide. He kept fighting the best, one after the other. And if that guy gave him trouble, like Norton, then he wasn't scared to come back and fight him again and again. Ali avoided no one.

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | Ali knew that fans love controversy and he gave it to them in spades, whether it be his outrageous behaviour, his predictions, mocking opponents, or his self-aggrandizement. This attracted fans, non-fans, and enemies. Many paid their money to see him lose, but Ali usually finished on top. Ali made fools of his enemies and many are yet to forgive him, not having the good sense to realize that it was all a well rehearsed game to swell the gate.

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | A lot of you on this site are into comparisons, yet while the careers of Ali and Frazier were so intertwined, none of you appear to have compared Ali to Frazier AFTER fight one.

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | While Ali kept fighting regularly, Frazier went missing. He didn't fight for a year, then fought two exhibitions against nobodies, avoided fighting Norton, and then got his ass whooped by the emerging George Foreman.

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | Even though Frazier was two years younger than Ali - and far younger in boxing years given he had had fewer fights - he really had nothing left. Sure, he could bring himself up for the biggest occasions (v Ali 2 and 3), but apart from adrenaline and hatred, he had never else to fight on.

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | The pity of Frazier was that instead of fighting the next best and then the next best as Ali did time and time again, Frazier recycled his opponents. He fought the ones he had already beaten, like Bonavena and Ellis, rather than try to climb new mountains in Shavers and Lyle. Frazier wasn't a risk taker and the only reason he fought Foreman the first time was because he was convinced he'd win easily.

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | I look at Frazier's career before Ali 1 and there is something missing. He didn't fight Henry Cooper. There's no Sonny Liston on his resume. And there's no Patterson, Terrell or Folley (although I am sure his fans will find excuses). And I wonder how he would have gone in the first fight against Ali had the older Ali not had the three years inactivity.

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | Many in boxing have been all too eager to overlook these deficiencies in Frazier's career. Those who dislike Ali more than just a little, needed someone to take up their fight against the braggart, and Frazier was it. If not for Ali's unpopularity, Frazier's surly manner and unattractive personality would have left him bereft of fans.

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | The more unpopular Ali became, the more popular Frazier became. It was a perfect counterweight. Nowadays, well into his disease, Ali still retains his fans. The non-fans from his fighting days now have an affection for Ali, attracted to the dignity and courage he has shown in the twilight of his life. But the sworn enemies remain. Ali could find the cure for cancer and bring peace to the Middle East, but his enemies - the ones who paid good money but didn't get to see the braggart's big mouth shut - will hate him forever and then some.

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | I know that I am repeating the words of many others who usually don't find their way to this site, but to me Frazier's legend is underpinned only by his fights against Ali. Take Ali out of that equation and there would have been no Frazier legend (or at least a very diminished one). Take the three years inactivity out of Ali's resume, and it is probable that Frazier would not have won the first fight. In that case, he would never have had a victory over Ali and history would have consigned him to the same waste basket as Jimmy Ellis.

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | On the other hand, Ali's career stood alone; having Frazier around was good for him but, ultimately, his legend was there anyway, right from the moment he beat Liston.

| 8/4/04 05:29:47 PM | Frank | Ireland | irrelevant | 10 | And that brings me to this: Joe Krause - the Ali v Liston first fight should have made your list, in my opinion. Also, given the moment of the Holmes v Spinks (first fight - when Holmes was fighting to equal Rocky's 49 nil record) thought should be given to including that one as well.

With regards to Mike Tyson, some of the recent criticisms here have a familiar ring to them. There are those who think Tyson didn't beat anyone during his reign or that Douglas was his defining fight or that he failed to seriously contend after. Very unfair and inaccurate, guys. Tyson's first few years were epic, but he couldn't fight everyone. He went to jail for a crime he did not commit, he lost valuable years. His fights with Holyfield, a virtual "good vs. evil" were rigged, even allowing Holyfield headbutting. He was stripped of his license for a while, remember? He is the most used, exploited athlete I've ever heard of. You know, this site is dedicated to a guy who had some of the same criticisms. After he beat them, how good were Thad Spencer, Buster Mathis, Ron Lyle and Earnie Shavers? Suddenly, not very. By your estimation, JQs "defining" moments were his first two losses to Ali and Frazier, also not a fair statement. People want to pile on Tyson when he's down. He twisted his knee, guys. He was clearly winning before it happened. Let's drain off some of the venom and call it a little more fairly for Tyson and others. If I can, you can too.

Also, Joe Krause, a very good "best of" list for fights, tough to improve upon, thanks. I feel good looking at that list and knowing I've seen most of those matches, all worth seeing again. I very much also like Quarry-Lyle, Quarry-Patterson 2, as both are clinics, Bonavena-Frazier 1 also. I'll try to think of some more... Frank, very insightful piece on Ali, very thought provoking. I find no fault with Ali the boxer and the renegade. I'm not a sworn enemy, that is too much work, just a guy with an opinion on this very famous man. Still, you make some great points, very good read... I'll take Young, Witherspoon, and Shavers in the matchups, thanks.

I agree with Gerry on Tyson he was a victim of the hype like Ali benefited from it. Regarding the most exciting fights the only way I can see how you could leave off Quarry Foster or Quarry Shavers is that you didn't see it. Those were the 2 most exciting fights to see live during that whole era. As far as the boring fights look how many were of the Ali clinch n hold era.

Remember - Curtis Hatchetman Sheppard! What a fighter - what a story. He once kayoed Joey Maxim - steel chin in one round, Beat Gus Dorazio, beat Charley 'Doc' Williams in 1 round. Read his story!

Gerry, how were Tyson's fights with Holyfield "rigged"? Do you know someone who was involved? Were they the same people who rigged the Ali-Foreman fight? I've had the same opinion of Tyson for a long time now. After he lost to Douglas, I just passed it off and figured he would regain the title. He went to jail instead, and he did lose his peak years. However he never had "it" after that, whatever the excuse might be he was not as focused in the ring as he was before prison, and when there came time for a gut check he bailed. To me he has always been a serious contender and as long as he continues to fight he will be. There are very few heavyweights who have the kind of power and speed he has. There are very few past champions who prime vs. prime could stand up to him. There is no doubt in my mind when Tyson returns; in a re-match with Danny Williams he will KO him. And you are right about the knee. You can fight with one hand but not one leg. If he can get the right situation he can be champion again. But when he faces someone who gets him in trouble...watch what happens. Thats my point. Joe, again excellent fights. I remember the Lyle-Shavers fight, and I don't know how Lyle survived. Another great Shavers fight was the second bout against Larry Holmes. How did Larry get up, and survive that? Maybe he has something Tyson doesn’t.Tyson bashing? There is a lot of Ali bashing going on as well. Ali was the greatest heavyweight champion of all time (so far). Look at his record vs. any past champion. There is no comparison. No one fought and beat the caliber of fighters Ali did for as long as he did. Between the first and second Frazier fights he was undefeated, in what, 9 bouts all against top or near top contenders, Frazier fought three times and lost once. Some of Ali’s later bouts, as Kent pointed out were controversial. Young, I’ve said before that Young came in to survive against Ali not beat him. That’s why he lost the fight, he deserved to lose. Frazier 2 I think Ali won that one, maybe not as one sided as the judges had it but he won. The Norton fights, a case could be made for Norton 2 & 3. I’ll go along with the judging in the second fight but Norton won the third, pretty much the way Kent said 8-6-1 or 8-7. Kind of like the Leonard-Hagler fight, it’s all what the judges want to see. Of Ali’s holding, cuffing, thumbing someone even mentioned head butting, I never saw Ali try to head butt anyone. Every fighter has his bag of tricks and dirty tricks. Holyfield is a notorious head-butter, Marciano and Tyson have their elbows and forearms and heads. Frazier had his low hooks to the side and shoulders. Liston and Lewis held and hit. The list goes on and on. Ali held behind the head his whole career, it’s just something he did. It’s nothing new in boxing. |8/5/04 03:54:27 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Bob---good points. And Larry Holmes (all time top 5 Heavyweight Champ) reportedly had the worlds strongest thumbs. I asked why Leroy Jones never fought after losing to Holmes (Jones entered the fight undefeated) and someone said Holmes’ thumb did a number on Jones’ vision. I agree with the assessment of Ali as the best ever, in terms of who he fought and how long he was on top. Let’s not forget—he was inactive during a time when he should have been at his athletic peak—his three best years as a fighter. God only knows what he could have accomplished without the layoff. I believe he would have taken Frazier without the layoff—a unanimous and not so close decision. But who really knows? Frazier was certainly driven. Also, to respond to a previous post, I thought Shavers-Holmes I. was a decent fight—Larry Holmes boxed beautifully and gave a clinic on how to neutralize the most dangerous power puncher at that time, Shavers. Shavers finally caught up with him in that second fight, but yes, Holmes did climb up off the canvas to defend his title, something Iron Mike couldn't accomplish. |8/5/04 06:07:32 PM|Mike|Philly||yammagamma300|||10|Fran - I agree with you on Ali, he had so many people in his pocket getting paid, if that was any other fighter his career would have been over alot sooner. He was a great fighter but should have retired after JF 3rd fight|8/5/04 06:54:33 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago||same|||10|Other great fights. Some are a little less known, but still offer great action. Patterson vs Chuvalo-Barn Burner Shavers vs Roy Williams- Most incredible round I have ever seen is round 10 of this fight!! Frazier vs Bonavena I- Great spirited match. Wish their second fight was available in full. Quarry vs Patterson I and II- Both very interesting fights. I like I
Norton vs Jose Luis Garcia II - Great action match as Norton avenges previous loss.

Frazier vs Chuvalo - This fight is a classic for as long as it lasted, almost made my top 10.

Frazier vs Mathis - Mathis holds his own quite well here.

Ali vs Shavers - Shavers lands some BOMBS.

Frazier vs Ellis I - Frazier sizzles.

Ali vs Norton I and III - Both good tactical matches.

Foreman vs Frazier II - Very good action.

Foreman vs Norton - Foreman at his best.

Shavers vs Norton - Destructive Shavers.

More later.

8/5/04 08:30:15 PM|Fran|Philly||PLC7755@aol.com|||10|Out of Curiosity how many of you saw the Quarry Foster fight live? Or the Quarry Lyle fight live? How about the Quarry Shavers fight live. I am starting to think that noone on this site saw these fights live.

8/5/04 08:38:38 PM|Kent|LH Ca||kentallenetc||||10|My all time ranking of Mike Tyson has changed as he never has won a battle of attrition, where the going gets tough.

Yes the twisted knee contributed to him not moving as good as he could have but it still wasn't immobile. Once Williams survived being badly hurt in round one and he began fighting back hard, Tyson fell into his bad habits of not moving in behind the jab and throwing combinations with both hands. Tyson began loading up with one punch at a time, expecting his power to bail him out and it didn't.

I would say Tyson is similar after all to Shavers in that he often has used limited skills, in Tyson's case it is because of his bad habits of not using the skills he has, combined with one of the hardest punches of all time.

I used to think there was no way Jerry Quarry could beat an in prime Tyson, as Tyson's accurate punching would slice up Jerry's tender skin but now I think that Jerry may very well have been able to survive the early Tyson onslaught and then come back to knock Tyson out. Tyson has almost never beaten someone who stood up to him who is not afraid and Jerry would not have been afraid of him. James Quick Tillis was the exception, who lost by decision to Tyson before Tyson won the title and if Tillis could almost beat Tyson, then Jerry would have a good chance of beating Tyson.

8/5/04 09:36:40 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Kent: All good points. Tyson won by intimidation, and the tactic wouldn't have worked against Quarry. Look, this isn't about liking Quarry or disliking Tyson---Tyson's gig is over. It ended the night Douglas whipped him. Tyson was a great young heavyweight with speed and power. He accomplished amazing feats by age 20. But that doesn't make a career. He showed flaws, even in some of his big wins (I'm thinking about the Holmes fight.). After Buster beat him, Tyson unraveled. He's now been exposed several times as someone who has to win early against a good fighter, or he'll lose. I'm with you---I would have never considered JQ having a chance against an in-prime Tyson, but suddenly, I'm wondering if an in-prime Tyson was ever really tested. Quarry fought well against the great fighters and fought brilliantly against some very good ones.

8/5/04 10:16:30 PM|Ernie Laxalt|Reno, NV||elax66@aol.com|||10|Massimo, the verb kvetch means per gemere, protestare, gemere, comportarsi come un bambino crying. Veda che cosa significo? It's Yiddish. Someone who keeps saying Cleve Williams might have been champ, as I did, is a kvetch.

8/5/04 10:16:30 PM|Ernie Laxalt|Reno, NV||elax66@aol.com|||10|Kent, your comments are always well-reasoned and well-out. Keep up the good work.

Fran, you are one hell of a gal. I'm sorry I called you son and yes, you probably could beat on me now.

Listen is somewhat underrated on this site, probably because we all see his losses to Ali and not too many of his earlier fights. But he had the same mystique and legend of being a Monster Bad Boy that Tyson or Foreman did. He had a gimmick in training of skipping rope and working the speed bag to the song "Night Train" (is that the right one, Kent?) that scared sportswriters and opponents alike. He had good size for his era (1955-1965), devastating power in both hands, good fundamentals and reasonable speed. He used to hurt opponents good and bad something fierce. After all, he destroyed Floyd Patterson, who despite what you younger writers think, was a good champion. He fought often with a bad back, just as Cleve Williams had a kidney missing, Ali had chronically sore and brittle fingers/knuckles, and Liston eventually had a heroin addiction. There is a legend that Sonny sat in a Vegas casino once, and a white hick came up behind him and put a ‘45 to the back of Sonny's skull or ear. "You're gonna die, nigger," he said, or something very close to that. Sonny had to sweat it out for a minute, then the guy laughed and got away. After that, Sonny's will to live and win began to deteriorate. (Yes, I know, Jerry would have taken the gun from the guy and made him eat it.) From the beginning of his career, Sonny was owned many times over by the St. Louis rackets.

It seems to me there are 10 or so basic patterns (or arcs) a good heavyweight's career can take, based on recent history. #1 is the sensational slugger who finally meets his match: Liston, Foreman, Tyson. #2 is the fantastic underdog who wins fight after fight but never make it to the top: Jerry Quarry, Zora Folley, Eddie Machen, and others. #3 would be the consummate champion who rarely if ever fights a top foe: Larry Holmes, Rocky Marciano, etc. #4 is the indestructable opponent, like George Chuvalo, Earnie Shavers, etc. #5 is of course the Great White Hope who's a sensation for maybe 15 or fewer fights before getting creamed: Tommy Morrison, Gerry Cooney, presently these Russian brothers, Alfredo Evangelista, others. #6 is the not-quite-good-enough journeyman, like maybe Cleveland Williams, Ernie Terrell, Jerry's old buddy, Joey Orbillo; maybe David Tua and guys like that. #7 is draws who really can't fight much with contenders, like Tex Cobb. It's almost as if you could draw a graph of their fights, Time on the Y axis and Success on the X axis, and recognize some without seeing their names. Maybe a Bill James (baseball super-expert) of boxing has already done this. Another would be #8, heavyweights who were just a little too small, like Jerry, Billy Conn, Bob Foster when he fought as a hvyweight, Patterson, and more. We could actually say, "He had a Tyson career", or "He had a George Chuvalo graph." What's the Irish heavyweight scene like these days, Evren? Any good kids coming up?

Pattern #9 would be a colossal fighter like Jimmy (Mighty Joe Young) Dorsey able to kick King Kong's or Superman's ass and have enough left to knock Godzilla cold, too -- on one night. Jimmy's uppercuts could lift an opponent so far off the ground that his final opponents in the early '70s are still believed to be orbiting Earth. Holyfield-Tyson was rigged first in the media before the fight. Holyfield, glowing christian good guy ( later a much different story emerged ), Tyson, stupid, vicious bad guy. Tyson was bi-polar and on medication. When on his pills, he could be lucid, even almost passive. Off the dope, he was reckless, erratic, vicious, especially if he drank. This is how he was so widely exploited. To train him, they would take away his pills. Pretty sick, huh? Mike Tyson is the most manipulated athlete ever, in my opinion. Then in the fight, the steriod-aided Holyfield was allowed to clinch and headbutt without penalty. Tyson waited for the ref to intervene for him. When he saw there was no one to defend him , he enraged and bit the guy. I don't condone that, but I understand why he did it... I don't believe Ali-Foreman was rigged. Foreman simply allowed Ali to seize control of the event. Foreman was off his center before he got off the plane. Ali seized the public in Kinshasa, was treated like the champ, and beat a confused fighter. He used similar tactics against Liston, who I rate highly. I do not rate Larry Holmes top Ten. Thanks. and 50% a slip. I think that Holyfield did beat Tyson fair and square in the first fight. He gave him a good whipping. I don't know who would have won a Tyson-Holyfield in 1991. The Mac Foster knockdown was similar to the Shavers knockdown. JQ could hit guys with wonderful flurries of punches. Maybe he wasn't a one punch knockout artist, but his killer instinct was awesome.

I think that now Laila Ali' vs Mike Tyson would be a good matchup. Tyson's career is over. He should have retired after the first fight with Holyfield. He doesn't need money. If even Bill Gates gave him all his property, after a week Mike Tyson would already be full of debits. He would buy 51 tigers, 43 Ferrari etc. I am afraid about his health. He should quit his ring career. I don't want him to become an invalid.

The Mac Foster knockdown was similar to the Shavers knockdown. JQ could hit guys with wonderful flurries of punches. Maybe he wasn't a one punch knockout artist, but his killer instinct was awesome.

Fran - What's your point?

Seeing boxing live is not better than watching it on television. It is just different. But I prefer live as there is no way a television can convey the atmosphere surrounding a fight card. This is an experience that all fight fans should experience.

Massimo, I've wondered about "the in's and out's" (that is, the whole subject, including nuances) of scoring, too. When we were kids in California in the 50s and 60s, they always announced they were using the California Simplified Scoring System. I don't know if it was designed this way, but in practice, it always meant 10 for a winner of a round, 9 for the loser. If you got your man in real trouble or knocked him down, you'd win 10-8. I suppose if you really messed him up, knocked him down a couple of times, maybe until the bell saved him, then you might get an 10-7 round. At the end, the 2 judges and the referee counted the totals.

As to HOW you scored, I always did it in a mostly intuitive way, looking for who dominated the round, who landed more effected punches, whose plan seemed to be working better -- including who pressed the action. I know this is vague, but my scores were usually the same as the judges. I've always believed the MOST PUNCHES THROWN system is weak and almost meaningless. Obviously, some punches that land are devastating -- like a JQ left hook -- and at the other extreme, some are pawing or stroking the air. The absolute bitch to score is an even fight between two mediocre guys -- and when you begin to get bored. People, what are some different systems? I also agree with all that Kent said. Massimo, do you have an expression meaning "to feel out" or "feeling out"? In boxing it means testing an opponent, seeing what he's got -- usually in the first 1, 2 or 3 rounds. "Norton is feeling Big George out." Evren, very sorry to hear Irish boxing is in the pits. Don't want to start a controversy here, but maybe that's for the best. Those people have often problems as it is without kids boxing and risking injury. By the way, somebody asked how early Ali or JQ might have started getting brain damage from fighting. Not all of you agree, but I'd say maybe from their very first amateur fight, or definitely from their pro starts. The damage occurs little by little and adds up. The connections between brain cells and brain structures begin to die and be gone from blows, directly and indirectly. Pretty soon, areas of connection are gone. For example, a boxer may realize he remembers almost nothing about the 6 years he was in the army, or the friends he made when he lived in Italy. Eventually, he may forget all names. When I studied neurology in about 1977-1978, scientists believed there were 14 billion brain cells in a human being. Now they believe there are many times that. The problem is that brain cells do not and cannot be regenered or regrown. They are lost forever, almost all scientists agree. Maybe with technology derived from stem cell research, we will learn ways to reverse that. So please forgive me, everybody, but I think when you weigh the greatness of boxing versus the damage it inflicts on boxers (and there families), it would be better to stop the sport -- as much as we'd all miss it. One more thing: when I said indirect damage from a blow, I meant the way a brain can be shaken or momentarily pushed against the skull. Direct damage is simply being hit straight on. Both kinds of damage are serious. Most boxing deaths occur from guys knocked down and their heads hitting hard against the turnbuckle or ropes. They have cerebral hematomas (building collections of blood under the skull, putting serious pressure on the brain itself) and can't survive. Sometimes a fighter -- like Alejandro Lavorante in the early 60s -- gets his brain badly hurt in one fight (against Cassius Clay) and then weeks or months later, dies in a second fight from the old damage with new damage added. Johnny Logan was the last man Lavorante fought, I think. Again, I apologize for bumming you out. My opinion only.

I'm not a fan of the 10-point system, it should be five at most. As has been said, very few 10-7s are ever given. Like Jimmy D, I prefer the California system much maligned by Howard Cosell. 0-0 for a tie round, 1-0 for a slight edge, 2-0 if one guy really gets it. Five points is the hypothetical ceiling, though, again, a 5-0 round id as unimaginable as a 10-5. I do like the idea of separating jabs and power punches for scoring. Pursuit should be given credit for also, in my opinion. I'd like to see more penalties to discourage some of the grabbing, shoving and other nonsense. But boxing is nowhere near unified enough to enforce any kind of uniform standards for judging a fight... Laila vs. Tyson? Massimo, I think you should fight him, since he seems to now be so easy. What a joke. Me against Mike Tyson? It would be a good matchup, I would not be intimidated by him. He is faster, but I punch harder. Ernie Alejandro Lavorante began his professional career in impressive fashion, scoring many knockouts. His best win was a 7 round KO over Zora Folley. Lavorante lost the last 3 fights of his career in 1962: a 10 round KO against Archie Moore, a 5 round KO against Cassius Clay and then the tragedy against Johnny Riggins. I agree with you, boxing is my favourite sport, but I'd abolish it for moral reasons. Anyway there are tons of fights already fought to watch. Many thousands, maybe millions of fights. Regarding your question, we use to say "i due pugili si stanno studiando ". That's the paisan way to say "feel out". | 8/7/04 05:10:41 AM| Kent| La Habra, Ca| kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Massimo, judging is subjective at best, prone to human error and that is why there are three judges.Judging is based on who lands the most effective punches and while who lands the most punches carries a lot of weight in the scoring, if the punches are not effective and the opponent lands harder punches that hurt the opposition, he can win a round even if he lands less punches.Vague terms like effective aggressiveness and ring-generalship also are taken into account. An example of the first term is if a fighter is pursuing his opponent aggressively and doesn't land a lot of clean punches but is forcing the opponent to run and also not land good punches, the aggressive fighter will win a round. Ring generalship, being in control of the ring and the opponent, also carries a lot of weight in scoring. This second term, while hard to define, I have never really heard a good definition for this, can be seen as sticking to one's plan and not fighting the other fighters fight, therefore not falling into the trap of letting the other fighter effectively use his strengths.I do like the ten point must system where the winner gets ten points and loser gets nine or less points in a round. a knockdown will usually give a fighter a ten to eight round and a second knockdown can make it ten to seven but to me, only if the fighter knocked down is badly hurt. I would not give Bonevena any more than a ten to eight advantage in round number two of his first fight with Joe Frazier as Frazier was not badly hurt.While not meaning to start some people picking on Ali again, in about the fifth round of his fight with Chuck Wepner, Ali does nothing for the entire round but run around and clown and while Wepner does little more, the fact that he is chasing Ali and he does land a few body punches would make me score the round for Wepner, one of the very few he deserved to win in the fight. I was shocked to hear the announcer say, "I would have to score that round as being even as Ali did nothing in the round." How could this be when Wepner was aggressively pursuing Ali and Wepner did land at least some body shots? While not much, it was more than Ali did in the round. | 8/7/04 05:34:27 AM| Kent| same as yesterday | same@ | 10 | While on the subject of judging, it is easier to show examples of what ring-generalship, being in control of the ring, is. The two Ray Leonard verses Roberto Duran are good examples. In their first fight, for whatever reason, Leonard fought Duran's fight and even though Leonard fought well, Duran landed the harder and more effective punches because Leonard stood right in front of Duran and plunged it out with him. Duran won a decision and a lot of had to do with him being in control of the ring. In their second fight, the opposite occurred because Leonard fought his fight by boxing from the outside and making Duran pay by hitting him with punches and making Duran miss when Duran rushed in and tried to make the fight more of a brawl. Leonard was in such control of the ring in that second fight that a lot of people think Duran quit in frustration even though to this day he claims he had bad stomach cramps, only he knows for sure what the truth is.| 8/7/04 10:07:11 AM| Joe Krause| Chicago | sadmbspats@yahoo.com | 10 | Analysis of Frazier-Boanvena I has just went up on my website. I didn't do the scoring, but a regular contributor did. classicboxing.tk is the website. Fight recaps, career recaps, ring rankings for 1960-1980 and much more. Take a look we just went over 20,000 visitors.| 8/7/04 11:01:26 AM| max hord| fernandina bch, fla | maxhord@adelphia.net | 10 | Ernie you're pretty much right on the causes of brain damage in fighters. One thing you have to consider as a contributor is the amount of sparring done in the gym. Day in/day out with 16 to 18 oz gloves is where a lot of it occurs. Football players, if you know any, show signs of the same trauma. That helmet just like headgear does not protect the brain. In fact you tend to get more careless when you have head protection. The punches don't feel the same and it's easy to just take shots instead of slipping etc... You are right about the time involved. It comes on you gradually and gets worse as you get older.

Bob Bumbera (NC) renfbera@aol.com
No offense intended Gerry, I just get kind of short when I hear people mention Fixed or Rigged fights or any athletic event for that matter. And I do know about Tyson's bi-polar depression issues and the fact he is sometimes on medication and sometimes off it. And your right about the biting incident, he shouldn't have done it. He should have hit Holyfield low or jammed a thumb his eye, gave him a knee or some other "Duran-esque" tactic to keep Holyfield honest. However in the state of mind Tyson was in, without the medication he just went off. And don't forget Tyson was giving Evander the elbow, Ali held Frazier behind the head-Frazier hit Ali on the hips. Tit-for-tat, Holyfield showed Tyson he would not be bullied in the first fight and Tyson, couldn't deal with it. Same for Bout #2. I mentioned the Foreman fight as several people who have posted here in the past said it was fixed. Nonsense. I do disagree with you about Holmes though.

I agree that power punches should count more than jabs---it's part of the whole scoring package, including the aforementioned ring generalship. One reason I hate Olympic boxing scoring is this nonsense about a jab counting as much as a knockdown. As long as you make contact with the white part of the glove, you get points and if you land a jab it counts the same as if you tag someone good and drop them. Ridiculous. It's often easier to land a lighter punch, so why should that count for as much as a heavy punch? By the way, to the people who think that Teo Stevenson would have been a great pro, I can guarantee you that winning all those three round fights against amateurs does not indicate that he belonged in a ring with Ali, Foreman, Frazier, Holmes, etc. In fact, based on style, someone like Mike Tyson would cut him down like a tree. Teo was a guy who dominated the amateur ranks because he stuck around long enough to gain the experience to take inexperienced men with some ease. But you put a 1972 or 1976 Stevenson in with Foreman from the same era, and it would have been ugly. I would think Foreman could cut him in under two minutes, much less two rounds.

For any one who thinks the Ali/Foreman fight was fixed, consider this, Ali showed Foreman early in the fight that he was in for a real fight by landing some hard right hand leads that got George's respect. This was a key mental strategy to let George know he wasn't in for a walk over, that he would have to pay if George got too reckless in his pursuit of Ali. Ron Lyle also showed that George could not just punch him with impunity and although George ended up winning in the end against Lyle, anyone who has seen this fight knows it was hardly easy, and this is an understatement! In order to have a chance of defeating Foreman in the first phase of his career, a fighter would have to hit George hard, early or somehow survive George's early onslaught in order to mount an offense later on in the fight and this is something neither Joe Frazier, in their first fight, or Ken Norton did and they got knocked out early, never having a chance to mount an offense. Frazier did land one token left hook but it was hardly the kind of hook that destroyed Jimmy Ellis or knocked down Ali. Would Frazier had won? Who knows? But it likely would not have been so one sided, maybe it would have a been a brawl like Foreman/Lyle, where both fighters went down, if Frazier had landed his best shots. My point is, if Ali could hurt Foreman and he clearly did in their fight, than Frazier or Norton, who hit harder than Ali could surely could hurt him.

Another point is Ali somehow knew that George could not stand up to the heat well, that he would have stamina problems as the fight wore on and the temp is very hot in Zaire at that time of the year. That George could wilt if fighting in a hot environment is shown later on in his loss to Jimmy Young in which George collapsed more from the heat in Puerto Rico than he did from Young's punches. To this day, I have never heard anyone claim that the Foreman/Young fight was not fixed because everyone knows Young won fair and square. There, I have layed out some evidence as to why the Ali/Foreman fight was not fixed and now I welcome anyone to challenge my opinion with some cold hard facts to counterdict what I have said.

There's no reason in hell to think (or of thinking, or to thinking) that Ali'-Foreman was fixed. The fight was hardly fought and pretty close until the knockout. Just look at George's face soon after the fight! He took a good whipping, that's for sure. Gregorio Peralta gave Foreman a good fight in 1970 (even if Foreman clearly won) after all! George Foreman was a great champion, but not unbeatable. Spalla would have lasted at least 4 minutes against him! The legendary Cuban heavyweight Nino Valdes (a former bouncer) once said: "Put me and Stevenson in the same ring and I will beat him, he is only an amateur". I don't think this was bragging.

Who can forget the 2 legendary fights between Luis Angel Firpo and Erminio Spalla fought in Buenos Aires, Argentina? The first one was fought in 1924 and Firpo won by KOT 14. The second was fought in 1926 and Firpo won on points in 10 rounds. They should show these fights on TV at least once a week!!!!

On Foreman-Ali being fixed: I am a firm believer in the "amazing claims require amazing evidence" school of thought. If anyone has any evidence to prove the fight was indeed fixed let them present it. So far in more than two decades no takers.

Again, I don't believe Foreman-Ali was rigged either. "When They Were Kings" shows clearly just how much Ali overshadowed Foreman, who was the champ, even before the fight. I've read George's bio, he claims he was drugged, I don't buy it. It was a masterful win for Ali, got to give him credit... I'm no defender of Mike Tyson. The guy has done a lot and has to be responsible for it. But in a properly refereed fight, Holyfield would not have gotten away with so much of what he did. A lot of people did not want Tyson to be champ, soon he wasn't. Some people thought he should be in jail, soon he was. Douglas fought a great fight, not to take anything away there. I still consider Tyson an all-time Top Ten heavyweight, probably always will, he was a great puncher in his prime, I'm probably one of the few who will remember him that way... I agree on Stevenson, Castro's favorite Cuban citizen during his Olympic days. While he was not as good as some thought, I still give him credit for his training to beat Bobick, who was very cocky before their rematch. Thanks again.

If anybody has seen a "fixed" fight then you should know well that ALI/FOREMAN wasn't one of them. Nobody in their right mind could stand there for eight rounds and take shots like either one of them did and have a predetermined ending. Marlon Brando couldn't even act that well.

My point exactly John, if there is concrete evidence to show Ali/Foreman was fixed, then it would have been presented by now.

All we get is people implying that the fix was in but they never show proof. Some shadowy figure saying, "If you only knew the truth about what went on, then you would know the real facts." But they never show those so called facts. My conclusion, the fix was not on. the March 79' issue of "Big Book of Boxing", titled "Suppose there was never a Muhammad Ali". It starts with Liston's second defense of the title 2/25/64 in Miami Beach vs. Doug Jones, of course Liston KO's Jones in the sixth round. Liston then defends the title against Folly, Cooper, Machen, Corletti a tough decision over Chuvalo and another tough 14 round KO of Buster Mathis before getting chopped down and quitting on his stool vs. Joe Frazier in March of 68'. It also mentioned some guy from Bellflower Ca. winning a 10 rounder vs. Oscar Bonavena. Frazier defends against the usual suspects including Mac Foster KO 4 and Urtain no less, then gets blasted by Foreman in 73'. Foreman goes on war path beating "The King" Jose Roman, Lubbers, KO's Jerry in 6, annihilates Norton, Lyle, Shavers and in 79' stops Holmes. I didn't know I had these things. Funny what you find when the wife tells you to get that crap out of the house!

| 8/10/04 06:03:38 PM| Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Once again, we are just about down the line in agreement that the fix wasn't in on Ali/Foreman.To those who claim that the majority at this site have it in for Ali and are against him, than why aren't most of us for the fix theory? Being for the fix theory would make Ali look bad, right?I am just making an observation that we can be objective.I am just sick of hearing how biased we are about Jerry. That we don't recognize any other fighters except him. I have been hearing that for over four years now.I've found it almost impossible to explain. During Jerry's career, I never thought he'd become champion. He was an excellent fighter, even a great fighter, but I gave him only the chance any great fighter gets. Never thought he would defeat Ali, Frazier, or Norton. That is not an insult at all. They were great fighters, too. Maybe a comparison would be Don Drysdale. True, he was a great pitcher, but I never thought he was as good as Sandy Koufax, Bob Gibson, Whitey Ford or Camilo Pascual. Does that make any sense, Kent? Having said that, when I read someone talking about Jerry in a way I find extravagant or grandiose, I disagree. Maybe I'm wrong, but that's how I see it.

| 8/10/04 10:49:08 PM| Ernie Laxalt|Reno, NV||elax66@aol.com||10|Kent, you write, "I am just sick of hearing how biased we are about Jerry. That we don't recognize any other fighters except him. I have been hearing that for over four years now." I am guilty of some of those arguments. I think there is a general and slight bias here, because this is his site drawing so many people who liked him or even knew him. Blind loyalty against evidence, though? No. None of that.I've found it almost impossible to explain. During Jerry's career, I never thought he'd become champion. He was an excellent fighter, even a great fighter, but I gave him only the chance any great fighter gets. I never thought he would defeat Ali, Frazier, or Norton. That is not an insult at all. They were great fighters, too. Maybe a comparison would be Don Drysdale. True, he was a great pitcher, but I never thought he was as good as Sandy Koufax, Bob Gibson, Whitey Ford or Camilo Pascual. Does that make any sense, Kent? Having said that, when I read someone talking about Jerry in a way I find extravagant or grandiose, I disagree. Maybe I'm wrong, but that's how I see it. |

| 8/10/04 10:54:00 PM| Ernie Laxalt|Reno, NV||elax66@aol.com||10|Regarding fixed or tanked fights: maybe it would help us if some modern examples of fixed fights were identified. We know about Jack Johnson-Jess Willard fight, and maybe some Jake LaMotta fixes. But how about since 1980, say? Tommy Hearns? Roberto Duran? Marvin Hagler? Hector Camacho? Julio Caesar Chavez? Ray Leonard? Any fixed fights?

| 8/10/04 11:21:38 PM| JohnnyQ|New York||johnq@yahoo.com||10|Lamotta publicly confessed to throwing one fight early in his career. Jack Sharkey is widely believed to have thrown the title fight against Carnera. He had beaten the great Primo in 1931. However, the Willard-Johnson knockout was not fixed, as the films, rediscovered in the 1960s proved once and for all. |

| 8/11/04 01:41:09 AM| Kent|L.H. Ca||kentallenetc.@||10|Ernie, I will give you that Jerry likely could not have beaten Ali, Foreman, or Frazier, prime versus prime. However, I would give him a good chance to beat Ken Norton, prime versus prime. As it was, a Jerry Quarry who had nothing left compared to his best days in the ring and who trained less than three weeks for the fight, gave a close to in prime Norton a very tough fight for a few rounds only to suffer a huge cut and run out of steam by the fifth round. The third round of Norton/Quarry is a must see round as the two fighters stood toe to toe and pounded each other for almost three straight minutes, a round by the way, Jerry won on the scorecardsThe analogy of comparing Jerry to Drysdale is a good one but Drysdale not being better than Pascual? Maybe Big D wasn't better than say, Warren Spahn, but Camilio has nothing on him.

I think that many of Carnera's first round knockouts, at the beginning of his remarkable career, were fixed. Maybe even his legendary win against George Godfrey (a very strong guy) was fixed; the fight looked regular, but at the beginning of the fifth round, abruptly and without a reason, Godfrey hit Carnera under the belt and was disqualified. I think George Godfrey was slightly ahead on points at the time of the stoppage but Primo was holding his own. And, believe me, George Godfrey was every bit as strong as Mike Tyson and even stronger than Laila Ali'. He was included by RING among the 100 hardest punchers in boxing history. He would be the heavyweight champion nowadays.

But many (if not most) of Carnera's fights were not fixed, in my opinion. After his defeat with Larry Gaines, in 1932, he sent away his manager Leon See (a fight fixer) and "bought" other managers, who were, I think, honest guys. I have seen Carnera-Sharkey 2 and I don't think it was fixed. Primo just overpowered Sharkey. That uppercut in the sixth round was terrible, look at Sharkey's glance soon after the uppercut landed! He looks like someone who says "what the hell did hit me?". Yes, Sharkey beat Carnera in 1931, but, just a few hours before the fight, Primo had had a serious car accident, in which he did faint. During his career Primo did beat some decent fighter: Paulino Uzcudun twice (former European champion and beat Max Baer), Tommy Loughran (beat Max Baer and many other top contenders), Pierre Charles (former European champion), King Levinsky, Jack Sharkey, Earnie Schiff (unfortunately) and Walter Neusel. Yes, he never was as good as the best Muhammad Ali', but was no freak either (I have learnt "either" eh, eh).

My mom Anna wears a size 5 shoe (35 in Italy).

I know the jeremy Williams vs Brian Neilson fight was fixed. It has been rumoured for a while and I had it confirmed to me.

The place where people drive in the WORST way in the world is Neaples. Nobody cares about the rules in Neaples. They drive like nuts. Everytime you decide to cross the street in Neaples your life is on the line! What did Ali use to say? "If you want to fight me,...". Well, the situation is the same. By the way, is Shaq 7'1" with shoes off or not? I'd like to know whether he is taller than Wilt.

Do you still remember who Shaquille Rashaun O'Neal is? Now he lives in Miami, a beautiful town in Florida where Bud Spencer and Terence Hill played some movies.

I am NOT saying that either one of these fights were fixed (since Tyson lost both of them) BUT the referees in his fights against Lewis and Williams certainly looked like they wanted Tyson to win. Emmanuual Stewart said it best when he said "Lennox was fighting two men that night, Tyson and the ref".

Quarry would have beaten Norton in Prime vrs Prime, Lyle would have probably beaten him to. It would have been a tough fight for Jerry but he did beat better fighters than Norton.

In April, 2004, boxing promoter Robert Mittleman pled guilty in federal court to felony bribery charges for arranging for Thomas "Top Dog" Williams to take dives against Brian Nielsen in Denmark and Richie Melito in Vegas. Both fixed fights were held in 2000.

Sure, that scary talent, Tom Williams, was indicted for throwing a fight—and though he's such a high profile, respected and well known fighter, I've got to believe in my heart of hearts that maybe, just maybe, George Foreman would be a little harder to get to. Somehow, I just think that as a young, undefeated champion, Foreman was too busy trying to take Ali's head off to worry about taking a dive for a few bucks. No disrespect to the Mr. "Top Dog" Williams, but I think it might be a little easier to fix a fight with him participating. | 8/11/04 04:02:52 PM| Angelo| Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10

I agree with you that Quarry and Lyle could take Norton, prime vs. prime, but I think Jerry would have more trouble with Norton than you would think at first glance. Norton seemed to perform extremely well against guys he could trade punches with. If you couldn't blow him out in one or two rounds, he would get courage and use his crab style to score points and keep good fighters off balance. I used to think Norton made a career out of upsetting Ali once and giving him trouble two more times, in losses. But the more I view Norton and look back, the more credit I give him for being a tough contender. His loss to Holmes made me a believer that he had guts and talent to be a top thirty all time heavy, and that's pretty good. I do think a younger Quarry would have a good chance against Norton, provided he didn't get butted or cut early. He did beat better fighters than Norton. As for Lyle, he had too much power for Norton to handle, and was too willing to trade bombs. He would have beaten Norton in five rounds or less, by KO. Styles make fights—Quarry could, and did beat Lyle by giving him a boxing clinic. Lyle, in my opinion, would take out Norton. But I still think Quarry and Norton would be super competitive.

How is the Eagles camp shaping up? My brother and niece (she's a big teen Eagles fan) went to see them practice at Lehigh last Saturday. So far, I understand T. Owens is looking sharp.

Angelo, someone asked what the source of a report of a fixed fight was, someone else questioned if any fights had really been fixed since LaMotta or Jack Johnson's day. The answer is yes. I thought I'd offer something novel—some facts. Less than an indictment (an accusation) the promoter who arranged the fix has admitted it under oath, pleading guilty to several felonies. The facts go beyond an indictment (an accusation) the promoter who arranged the fix has admitted it under oath, pleading guilty to several felonies.

I would agree that this has little bearing on whether Foreman or anyone else would take a dive.

As Angelo said so well, there was no dive (a new word for me) in Ali'-Foreman. Guys, you have to realize that, against Muhammad Ali'George Foreman had the Chance to be called THE GREATEST HEAVYWEIGHT of all time. Imagine if, after having destroyed Frazier and Norton in that way he avesse distrutto even Muhammad Ali'...Imagine DOWN GOES ALI'! DOWN GOES ALI'!!

How would you call Foreman after 2 (DOWN GOES ALI')s? You would call him the greatest fighter of all time. George is not an idiot, he knew that and, for no amount of money he would have lost that honour! | 8/11/04 05:22:41 PM| Fran| philly | plc7755@aol.com | 10

I agree that Norton was a tough fight for anyone if they didn't have the power to take him out. Jerry did have the power to take him out and the counter punching skills to beat Norton. I have no doubts Quarry could have won. The Eagles are going to be very competitive.
This year with Owens and Westbrook back. But you never know. They couldn't have gotten Foreman to throw the Ali fight but ....... did you ever see the ropes that loose in a fight so Ali could lean way back in the 3rd row ans safely watch Foreman shoot his bolt as Ali covered up what little of him was still in the ring. They gave Foreman a magic grapefruit before the fight and he said he was groggy during the fight. Dick Sadler and Foreman never worked together after that fight. Who knows. After Norton beat him in the first fight Ali was protected after that. He was a great fighter but not that great. Did Sadler give Foreman a grapefruit? And why? For money? Anyway, the ropes were loose, that's for sure! Who is to blame for that? Kent? Bill Walton?

One thing about who beats who is when they fight, because a lot of guys are not that far apart. The matchup/style also has a lot to do with it. If Jerry doesn't get cut versus Ali the first time, maybe he goes 8-9 rounds, but no way does he ever beat him. Ever, and that's no insult. After all I've heard, there's no way he beats Foreman either, though he probably does last much longer than Frazier or Norton. He never beats Foreman, again no insult. After that, though, it gets a lot closer. Jerry had a lot more fights than Frazier when they met. He still outboxes and out punches Joe early, but is not mobile enough to dodge Joe after the first few rounds. Still, on a given night, Quarry could beat Frazier. If he fights Norton in 71 or 72, he probably has enough in the tank to beat Norton. Quarry was a shot fighter going to his own execution when he met Norton on short notice in 1974. All this would make Quarry more than just a top contender like Bonavena or Young. He was better than Jimmy Ellis, he should have held a belt then. He was better than Floyd Patterson, a former champ. Sorry, Jerry was more than just a contender. He was a real threat for the title. That's not bias, it's fact ...

Ron Lyle was a real contender also, we will never know what he lost in prison. But I believe Norton was better than Lyle in the mid-70's. I also had Norton beating Holmes, but few wanted Norton champ. Ali and Holmes were holy champs, it was nearly impossible to get a decision against them, no matter how much someone outpunched them. That's showbiz I guess, which again explains Holyfield and Tyson. Tell me again why Lewis never met either of those guys in the early 90's?

Yes, but Holmes had a damaged right hand in his fight with Kenny. What about a Norton-Patterson or a Norton-Whatsmyname?

I believe Norton would have easily handled Patterson and Terrell.

Gerry are you implying that Lennox Lewis ducked Tyson and Holyfield in the early 90's? That is simply not true - Lennox never ducked anyone...he is a great role model and was a great champion..just because he wasn't from America people make excuses for him not being good! That really annoys me! In his 15th fight he took on Gary Mason who was 35-0 at the time and stopped him in 7. This was for the European and British Title. As a contender he beat Mike Weaver, tyrrell Biggs and Derek Williams. He then anihilated Razor Ruddock in 2! Tyson couldn't manage this! He then went on to defeat Tony Tucker - easy on points (good fight) and stop Frank Bruno in 8. After being stopped by McCall which I agree damaged his reputation he came back to stop Tommy Morrison in 8, outpost Ray Mercer and then gain revenge on McCall. He then took out Golota in 1 round where Bowe failed miserably twice, kayoed Shannon Briggs - beat Holyfield twice (only received one decision) then kayoed the much feared Michael Grant, outpost easy the menacing David Tua. After getting blasted he came back to Kayo Rahman with one of the hardest punches I ever saw, kayoed Tyson and smashed up Vitali Klitschko. What a champion and what a fighter! Now Danny Williams a man I have know for so long is taking over - todays Amewrican Heavies are very poor. |

| 8/12/04 11:11:09 AM| Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | | 10 |
| 8/12/04 12:05:07 PM| Gerry | Cleveland | jgschultz11@aol.com | | 10 |

Evren---You are correct in your appraisal of Lewis' career. You are also correct that a lot of people (me included) might sometimes shortchange Lewis, because he was a GOOD champion. I don't think Lewis ducked Bowie or Tyson (early 90's) but it's a shame these fights weren't made. To me, the fact that Bowie and Lewis never met in that era diminishes BOTH guys careers. Also, it's a microcosm and commentary on what's wrong with the sport. That fight was a natural and it should have been made. It would be like Ali and Frazier never fighting eachother. With that said, my only real criticism of Lewis is that he was KOed dramatically and early TWICE, by two questionable talents. Rahman marches on, and if he comes back to be a champion, it's sort of a wash for me---because in my mind, a GREAT champion doesn't lose to Oliver McCall. Not that way. Lewis did meet most challengers head on and he kept the belt for a long time. Also, outside the ring, he represented the sport very well. I think even most of us American fight fans have to admit that Lewis brought class to the Championship at a time when it was badly needed. Tyson ended up being a smear on the sport, first for being a loser outside the ring, and now for being an embarassment inside the ring. Holyfield showed a lot of promise as an ambassador for boxing, but then had personal issues and has hung around so long, he's becoming a bit of a laughing stock. Bowie had all this personal drama and got hammered by Golata (not in that order) and as you pointed out, Lewis manhandled Golata. So yes, Lewis was a very good, top notch fighter of his era and stablished the heavyweight division for a good number of years---a dignified guy who contrary to what you might think, has a lot of American fans who cheered him on when he pummeled Iron Mike. |

| 8/12/04 12:05:07 PM| Gerry | Cleveland | jgschultz11@aol.com | | 10 |

Evren, I do not think Lewis dodged anyone. But I do think he was held out. Tyson, Holyfield and Bowie were the top guys in the early 90's, where was the 1988 Olympic Gold Medalist? Lewis could have contended immediately, but I feel some simply did not want him there, that's my point. I'm a big Lewis fan, the division misses him, even with the Klitschkos there now. I put Lewis on par with Larry Holmes... John, you may be right about Frazier-Quarry. Joe was very strong. But Jerry's performance says to me it was possible. The two fights did prove Frazier was clearly better, I don't dispute that. But on a given night, Jerry could beat him, they were not so far apart that it could not happen, that was my point there. Again I also agree prime JQ does not beat prime Liston, in fact it gets ugly before it ends, though it still would be a very good fight... Evren you are right, American heavies seem to be on hiatus at the moment. There's a real turnover taking place right now. Thanks again. |

| 8/12/04 12:05:46 PM| Gerry | Cleveland | jgschultz11@aol.com | | 10 |

Evren, I do not think Lewis dodged anyone. But I do think he was held out. Tyson, Holyfield and Bowie were the top guys in the early 90's, where was the 1988 Olympic Gold Medalist? Lewis could have contended immediately, but I feel some simply did not want him there, that's my point. I'm a big Lewis fan, the division misses him, even with the Klitschkos there now. I put Lewis on par with Larry Holmes... John, you may be right about Frazier-Quarry. Joe was very strong. But Jerry's performance says to me it was possible. The two fights did prove Frazier was clearly better, I don't dispute that. But on a given night, Jerry could beat him, they were not so far apart that it could not happen, that was my point there. Again I also agree prime JQ does not beat prime Liston, in fact it gets ugly before it ends, though it still would be a very good fight... Evren you are right, American heavies seem to be on hiatus at the moment. There's a real turnover taking place right now. Thanks again. |

| 8/12/04 12:36:48 PM | Massimo | Roma || 4 || 10 | O. Mc Call is underrated. His chin is one of the best of the last 20 years in the heavyweight division. It's just chuvalian. Nobody knocked this guy down, let alone out. He can punch hard and mostly he is the only man who clearly beat Francesco Damiani (Ray Mercer was very lucky in 1991). He destroyed Oleg Maskaev in just 1 round. |

| 8/12/04 06:50:27 PM | Angelo | DC || funktron@yahoo.com || 10 | Massimo: I don't know if I agree that Oliver McCall is that underrated. I mean, this guy was never the second coming of Sonny Liston. What exactly did he accomplish to distinguish himself so much in your eyes? He could take a punch, but so could Butterbean! He'll be remembered for two things: The upset of Lewis and having a nervous breakdown in the ring. So much for a memorable career. |

| 8/13/04 01:04:23 AM | Massimo | Roma || 4 || 10 | AngeloI agree that Mc Call lacks the skill of Sugar Ray Leonard but he is a very tough guy, a dangerous opponent for anyone. He showed against Lewis, Damiani, Akinwande and Maskaev that he can punch. When he had (or suffered) that breakdown against Lewis, Lewis was still afraid of him and wasn't able to even knock him down. I see him as a bigger version of Bonavena. He would have lasted the distance against Ali', Frazier and maybe even George Foreman. |

| 8/13/04 03:47:09 AM | Ernie Laxalt | Reno, NV || elax66@aol.com || 10 | Just a reminder, guys: COULDA, SHOULDA, WOULDA don't mean jack. A champion finds a way to win. When you say JQ coulda beat Foreman, JQ coulda beat Ali, JQ coulda beat Frazier, you are unraveling the strings of reality. He did not, and that's no insult or slight to him or his fans. If you insist that he COULDA, SHOULDA, WOULDA, then everything begins turning into mush: Foreman coulda beaten Ali, Norton coulda beaten Liston, Liston coulda beaten Frazier, Liston coulda beaten Foreman, or vice versa, JQ coulda beaten anybody, Ron Lyle coulda beaten anybody, Frazier coulda beaten anybody, on a given night, a Chuvalo in his prime coulda beat anyone on their way out, if Foreman han't surprised him, Frazier coulda beat him, ad nauseam. That's boxing as seen by 11 year-old boys. Cut it out. |

| 8/13/04 05:00:28 AM | Timana | Auckland || kiwi@hotmail.com || 10 | The greatest fix of all time was Spinks decisioning Holmes in 1985. That stank! Holmes annoyed the establishment with his silly 'jock strap' comment about Marciano and he paid the price by being cheated from equalling the Rock's 49 blot record. &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;The Ali v Foreman fight wasn't fixed. Foreman made excuses about being drugged, but more recently he admits that didn't happen. Foreman also had some sort of apparition seeing Angels and Gods and all kind of whacko things during his fight with Young, so it's more convincing to say that Foreman was substance abusing rather than taking dives. &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Truth is, Ali manipulated the conditions to suit himself (like all smart guys do), but that don't make it a fix. Foreman was only ever used to fighting a couple of rounds and knocking the guy out. But he was like a sprinter being asked to run a marathon in the fight against Ali, and his managers were stupid for taking the fight under the conditions Ali's promoters set. Foreman should have fought Ali state side. To go to Zaire was dumb. &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Think about it. Ali made the venue in oven weather and Foreman was never gonna last the distance. Combine that with Ali's superior boxing skills, his better 'ring smarts', the loose ropes, Ali's 'knockout proof chin', the partisan crowd, Foreman's lack of stamina, etc, and, in hindsight, Ali was always gonna win. We're all dumb for being so shocked at such a predictable outcome. &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I don't accept that Tyson and Holyfield fights were rigged either. History shows that Tyson struggled when opponents weren't intimidated. Think about it. When Douglas fought him, Douglas was coming off the worst period in his life. His mother died etc, and he went in there fearing nothing. A 'who gives a stuff' attitude with a very, very good jab, an ability to throw some fluent combinations without having to stop and load up to summon power, and Tyson had a fight on his hands. The other determining fact was that Douglas was much taller and heavier, and he was not afraid of death on that particular night.

However, when Douglas did give a stuff in his next fight, unable to find motivation from personal turmoil, had a dollar in his pocket that had fed his huge appetite, lard all around his gut, and it's hardly surprising that he didn't put up much of a fight against Holyfield.

I always thought Holyfield won the fight at the weigh in against Tyson. He looked at Tyson and said, 'You don't bother me one bit'. Tyson didn't like that. Most bullies don't.

Someone said something about La Motto throwing fights. May be that was just the period. Fact is you didn't get title fights in that era unless you were a bit compliant. Remember this: there was only one world title in each weight division then. I am relying on memory here, but I think there was only seven weight divisions. Even to get a title fight, without winning, was a huge honour then. There was only seven world titles then; now there's 45 plus. Lots more promoters too. Not just Don King arranging things. Getting a title fight wasn't easy.

I'm talking too much, but I think Tyson will come back and beat that Williams guy. Tyson did have a knee injury. He needed an operation. That type of injury would have hindered him terribly. Old and worn as he is, a Tyson with two working legs would beat Williams, no worries. The story of Mike Tyson isn't over yet. He has the greatest motivation known to mankind to keep fighting....he's flat broke. So what else is he gonna do. Host a radio talk show ? Get a job at NASA ? Thanks for listening guys.

---

Timana: Not a bad post, very good reading. Except, Holmes "jock strap" statement had nothing to do with the outcome of the first fight. Now, my history is a little sketchy here---but was 1985 (the year you refer to) their first fight or the rematch? If it was the first fight (I think it was,) the comment had nothing to do with the outcome, because Holmes made the statement at the POST FIGHT press conference. In other words, Spinks already got the decision, THEN Holmes made the comment, in anger, because Peter Marciano was at the press conference, had made no secret of the fact that he was pulling for Holmes to lose, and was gleeful that Spinks won the decision. As for the rematch, I doubt that the comment alone had anything to do with Holmes losing another decision. I have a couple more things to say on the matter: One, I watched both of those fights, and Spinks didn't impress me much either time. Yes, I am one of those fans who believe that to wrest the title from a Champion, you must take the fight to the champion, assert dominance and TAKE the belt---not have it handed to them. Spinks didn't do enough to take the belt from a guy who had it seven years. And interestingly, in the rematch, I think Larry Holmes clearly did enough to win his title back. He outpunched Spinks---landed the harder punches and more power punches. The other thing I want to say is that Holmes almost immediately regretted that comment. He was very frustrated, and Marciano's brother was smirking proudly because the Rock's legacy was protected. It would be like Babe Ruth's relatives attending the Atlanta Braves games when Hank Aaron was chasing his record, and cheering if Aaron got injured and couldn't break the record. Annoying. Holmes overreacted---and admitted this---and always had a large portrait of Marciano (Rocky, not Peter!) at his training camps for inspiration. It was an unfortunate and dumb thing for Holmes to say, but I don't think it was in his heart---it was to get a reaction.
who cares about the Eagles!!!

I thought Holmes won both fights, especially the second one. If Holmes won the decision in the first fight, and matched Marciano at 49-0, and then in the next defense, against whoever challenged, won and broke Marciano's record at 50-0, do you think he would have retired for good with an unblemished record?

Angelo---if Holmes won the decision in the first fight, and matched Marciano at 49-0, and then in the next defense, against whoever challenged, won and broke Marciano's record at 50-0, do you think he would have retired for good with an unblemished record?

who cares about the Eagles!!!

I thought Holmes won both fights, especially the second one. If Holmes won the decision in the first fight, and matched Marciano at 49-0, and then in the next defense, against whoever challenged, won and broke Marciano's record at 50-0, do you think he would have retired for good with an unblemished record?
is the greatest fighter ever, but we've pointed out that sometimes, circumstances got in the way of JQ performing at his best. These aren't excuses, they're just observations. James Quarry wrote on this forum that Ali had too much for Jerry---a little too big and a little too fast. But there's nothing wrong with us speculating on how the outcome of the fights might have been different if Quarry didn't get a gash near his eye. Why does this bug people so much? Look, I'll go along with the people who think Tyson would have prevailed against Danny Williams if he didn't injure his knee. Does this take anything away from Williams? No, he won the fight fairly and impressively. Is it making excuses for Tyson? No, it's simply saying that the outcome might have been different if Tyson's knee didn't tear up in the first round. |8/13/04 03:12:17 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||10|TO ANGELO: No, Holmes likes money too much and would have fought on and on even after breaking Rocky's record. He just can't turn down a paycheck.|8/13/04 03:14:58 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Both Larry Holmes verses Michael Spinks fights were close. I thought Spinks had a slight edge in the first fight based on him landing more punches but again it all boils down to what the judges liked and in this case they agree with me that Spinks output was better than Holmes' harder punches. However, the reverse was the case in the second fight, that Holmes did enough to win back his crown. But it was still close enough so that a vote for Spinks' case could be made. I had Holmes winning by two points, which means a switch of two rounds on any of the close rounds would at least be a draw.Again, people saying the fix was in is pure speculation with no concrete facts to back it up. The jockstrap comment was made by Holmes right after the fight, in the heat of anger and frustration because he thought he won the fight. He later apologized to Maricano's family and fans but nobody ever brings that up. I don't believe the comment had anything to do with the decision in the second fight. Of course it had nothing to do with the outcome of the first fight as the comment happened after the fight!|8/13/04 04:11:40 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|Michele Spinks once said:" I have never seen myself as the winner of those two fights ". I have read that somewhere.I have never seen those fights, but what a honest person Michele is !!!!|8/13/04 04:54:41 PM|Timana|Auckland||kiwi@hotmail.com||10|My memory has a defect and thanks to Angelo and Kent for pointing it out. For all these years I thought Holmes made the 'jockstrap' comment before the fight, but he didn't, and that puts a different complexion on it. I still thought Holmes did enough to win that first fight and that Spinks as challenger didn't do enough to take the title. I agree with Gerry that even if Holmes had won and been 49 blot, he would have continued on. He still wants to fight today.I've only heard of one other person called Kent before. I think his name was Kent Clarke. Unusual. Any connection ?|8/13/04 08:03:46 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago||sadmspats@yahoo.com||10|Jerry Quarry and Ken Norton flip a coin.|8/13/04 09:09:16 PM|angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com||10|Holmes, had he gone 50-0, would have good reason to retire unblemished. Once he lost to Spinks, and the record was not to be, he probably figured why not come back and make as much money as possible? He gave an in-prime Tyson a couple tough rounds and was winding up an uppercut to ambush Tyson---the last moments of the fight---Holmes uppercut punch was thrown with his back to the ropes, his arm got tangled on the ropes, and Tyson clocked him. It was Holmes trying to end the fight like he did against Mike Weaver, with an uppercut practically thrown from his ankles, out of nowhere. But the older Holmes, without a lot of time to train for the fight, was rusty and miscalculated. To this day, I feel that Holmes would have really given Tyson fits if he trained harder/longer and had something to really fight for other than a payday. Holmes, a few years later, gave Holyfield a good fight after beating Mercer, who was favored. I thought Holmes "senior" career was almost as impressive as Foreman's. |

As the Athens Games open today, an old question reoccurred to me. Was Jerry approached, after winning the National Golden Gloves in '65, about remaining an amateur for the '67 Pan American Games or the '68 Mexico City Olympics? Jerry would only have been 23 for Mexico City, and better than 18-year old George Foreman then. I doubt it did or that Jerry would have, just wondering... Ernie, you're a jackass. Who made Ernie the guardian of opinion on this site? People have the right to their opinions as long as they are presented respectfully. Read the archives, Ernie. People have taken these fights and matchups apart for years now, and it clearly makes for good conversation. What kind of guy wants to censor Quarry comments on THE Quarry site? Get a clue, Ernie ... Timana makes some very good points regarding Ali-Foreman and Tyson-Holyfield. Buster Douglas, who boarded the plane practically alone from Columbus, Ohio for Japan, was clearly motivated by the memory of his mother. Tyson, though, had not yet had a chance to recover from the death of his mother and his manager Cus D'Amato. The two men were in different stages of mourning, one recovering, the other still very affected, big difference. For that and other reasons, that great fight is not a real representation of either man or their matchup... Thanks for the clip, Massimo. Are you rooting for Italy in the Olympic boxing, track and basketball competitions? |

I never held Larry Holmes's "jockstrap" comment against him. He was caught up in more than a little racism in the late 70's, and did not react well to it. To me, he came across as very likable, down to earth, a good blue collar guy. He had Rocky Balboa and Rocky Marciano, as well as Joe Frazier and Muhammed Ali, hanging over him the whole time. I give him some slack for that and other comments. |

Yes, I think I'm gonna root for Italy in the Olympics. It's my favourite country. In the European Tournament, it's true, we played like st but they didn't want us to win. 2-2 ?!? Sheeesh ( it's slang ) ! Where is loyalty ? Where the hell is loyalty ? I don't know, maybe they don't like spaghetti, caffe' and pizza !

Damiani won a silver medal in Los Angeles in 1984. He was beaten in final by Tyrell Biggs. But Francesco soundly beat Biggs in five rounds a few years later. There was a time in which he was going to fight Holyfield. Probably he would have lost, but I think he would have given Evander a competitive fight. Giorgio Brambini won a bronze medal in 1968. During the tournament he was beaten by George "Who" Foreman. After getting hit a couple of times by Foreman he refused to fight any longer ! Franco De Piccoli won a gold medal in 1960 ( superheavyweights). He could punch like hell, but his chin wasn't mccallian, and got knocked out by Wayne Bethea and Joe Bygraves as a professional. Nino Benvenuti won a gold medal in the middleweight division only to become one of the best middleweights of his generation. Memories.

Wilt has been rated THE BEST CENTER IN NBA history by BBC. Shaq N.3 , Jabbar N.4,Olajuwon N.5. |

Gerry, not nice to call people jackasses. I criticize endless, repetitive speculation because it's not intelligent, not informative, leads nowhere, and wastes time. Most of it here is focused on Quarry. What if we shifted it to Ali? We could make excuses and hypothesize about ever fight he had, including his losses. If he'd paced himself differently against Frazier, he would have won when he lost. If he'd jabbed more, kept Joe away. If he'd moved to the left a little more, or thrown more left feints and fouled Joe more to the top of his head and throat. Or if he'd fought Norton earlier. Or if he'd insisted on fighting Frazier in Yankee Stadium in Harlem, or in Detroit. If he'd fought the Spinks fight two months earlier and hooked more in the first and second rounds. Getting tired yet, Gerry? This is exactly what some of you do. How about Foreman? What if he'd refused the Ali fight in Zaire, or postponed it much longer until his cut healed. Or brought in different judges and made sure the ropes were tighter. What if Joe Frazier had shaved his head so the growing bristles would scrape the face, shoulders, chest and arms of opponents more? What if Joe had learned to take it easy for short periods and conserve more energy? What if he’d run from Foreman in Kingston and taken the fight into the middle rounds? Gerry, this is nonsense. This is kid stuff. Angelo, you wrote: "Also, there's nothing wrong with the speculation of "ifs and buts". I just explained what's wrong with it. I assumed you came onto this site because you wanted to learn and compare ideas and opinions. But sometimes all you seem to want to do is explore an alternate universe where it's still 1969 or so and Jerry is still fighting. Some of you write things like, "Jerry takes the second round with left hooks and hurts a prime Tyson. Tyson charges back in the third round and decks Jerry with a right uppercut. Jerry is up at the count of 5 and they flurry " That is Fantasyland. Look, if Kent, Evren, Massimo or anyone else who writes sensible comments objects to what I write, I'm gone. In the meantime, I suggest you bring a little reason and discipline into what you write. Otherwise, you're like a drunk at the end of the bar mumbling. |

| 8/14/04 03:55:12 AM | Ernie Laxalt | Reno, NV | elax66@aol.com ||||10 | Let me put it this way, Gerry and Angelo. Suppose we're talking about 20th Century history. Suppose someone says, "I see the Germans repulsing the invasion at Normandy and following up with an invasion of England. A year later, they're ready to mount an attack on US soil at three entry points, from Boston south to Miami. Casualties are very heavy. FDR is probably assassinated by commandoes." Then Angelo writes, "No, they would drive deep into the Appalachian range with tanks so as to tie up the industrial corridor of the eastern Midwest, approaching by the south." Then someone says, "Now if the Russian army of 1937 were able to occupy Ohio, they could flank the approaching Panzer divisions at Wheeling, West Virginia." Then maybe Massimo writes, "What if Hannibal lead a phalanx of elephants through occupied Baltimore to disrupt Gestapo operations?" This is exactly the same as speculating about what did not happen, never could, never will, with regard to fighters of the 1960s, 1970s, 1980s and with reference to the 1950s, including what they did or did not do in training, with attention to their emotional readiness for fights and the ability of their cutmen and whisper men and whether they responded well to Endswell or felt comfortable fighting in the sunlight. You guys are masturbating here. Talk about history. Disclose what you actually know and can verify. Tell us about bouts or sparring sessions you actually saw, or what boxers you knew told you. Stay earthbound and do not fly into the stratosphere of meaninglessness. I shouldn't have to tell you this. |

| 8/14/04 04:04:14 AM | Ernesto Laxalt | Il Reno | elax66@aol.com ||||10 | Massimo, Kareem Abdul Jabbar era molto, molto più di un vincitore che Jabbar, ma non e quella è la conclusione della storia. Potenziale è il merde del cane, non è quello il fratello allineare e piccolo? Nei olympics, le ragazze italiane sembrano essere quasi graziose quanto le ragazze spagnole. Dovremo attendere per vedere loro alcune nei loro vestiti bagnantesi bagnati per essere sicure. Sradicherò per gli italiani ed i jamaicans, come I possiedono una sede sull'isola. Amo guardare gli sprinters americani femminili neri. Che coscie, il mio amico! Intraprendendo una di loro sarebbe come esaurendo come andare 12 tondi con Joe Frazier, ma molto soddisfacendo. Siete conforme? I combattenti migliori nel mondo sono mexicans che vengano alla California vivere. Sono campionato-livello dall'età 19. Avete tutti i combattenti nella vostra famiglia. Fratelli? Zii? Cugini? Va nella pace e mantiene il vostro jab in su, il mio fratello.  don't hold Holmes's 'jock strap' comment against him either. It was something said in the heat of the moment and I think he regretted it. Looking at his career, Holmes was a credit to boxing with no atrocities in or out of the ring. A few words shouldn't condemn him. You sound like you'd be a fun guy to have a drink with, but my 'gut' tells me that you've had a head start on the rest of us. I might go open the fridge and gulp down a few 'Jacks and ice doubles' and when I catch up I might know what the hell you are going on about. Jeepers, we've gone from Jerry Quarry to wars and invasions and military training and then masturbation to gibbering in Latin in just a few sentences and I'm scratching my head. Although I'm dizzy, I enjoyed trying to understand what you meant.

Ernie

You sound like you'd be a fun guy to have a drink with, but my 'gut' tells me that you've had a head start on the rest of us. I might go open the fridge and gulp down a few 'Jacks and ice doubles' and when I catch up I might know what the hell you are going on about. The biggest shoe size you can find in my home is 8. I think that Francesca Piccinini is probably the cutest Italian girl in the Olympics.

Ernie

I'd have to agree somewhat with Fran. Quarry was not one of the all time greats in terms of pure ability, but his bravery and will-to-win was as strong as anyone in history and that is what made him dangerous to all — including Ali.
The irony is that it is Ali who taught us that even the greats are beatable on any given night, and I'll try and explain it this way. Tell me this: who would have won out of Henry Cooper and Jerry Quarry? Be fair now. Jerry would have been too strong and too busy (although both he and Cooper would have cut up badly in a frantic fight). Now go back in time and remember the Clay v Cooper fight. Cooper put Clay down almost for the count. The difference between a loss and a win for Clay was probably Angelo Dundee's probing thumb and a glove tear. So I ask you this: if Cooper all but beat Clay, then why is it so unbelievable that Jerry could have done the same thing? Lightning does strike, you know. Ask Joe Louis. I'd like to add something else. Many people accuse Ali of getting favouritism from judges etc, in his second career. Perhaps that was the case, as there were questionable decisions (even though close title fights traditionally go to champs). But people forget that Ali in his first career - as Clay - was hated by the establishment, including the judges, and the influential media. It is a credit to Clay that he never allowed his fights to be dictated by shonky judges. He took the result out of their hands by winning easily. And it wasn't like he was fighting bums. Whether critics like or admire Ali or not, the undeniable truth is that he had probably the most remarkable career in boxing history. It had everything. Controversy in and out of the ring. Politics and defiance of authorities. Charges and court hearings. Show downs in exotic places all round the world. His fights became world events. Boxing today still has wind in its sails from the Ali era.

Hahaha, you guys crack me up, and I mean that in a nice way. No, I gave up drinking back in '82. Jimmy, yes, any really good heavyweight boxer -- and JQ was a great one, no doubt about it -- could conceivably beat any other on a given night. The proof of that is that every once in a while there's a huge upset, like Buster Douglas beating Tyson or Leon Spinks beating Ali. But that's only one one hundredth of one percent of the time. 98% of the time, there is a pretty consistent order to things in boxing, and we can usually tell what fights will be close, which ones someone is pretty sure to win, etc. Now Jerry had how many title fights? 4? 5? He didn't win. That means something serious, friends. We cannot truly call him a champion. In some ways he was great, like a champ -- in his heart, his punch, his killer instinct, his will to win, his left hook. But I argue that's really all we can say. Now there are certain matchups where Jerry was probably closer to winning, even against guys he did not beat. Norton and Holmes were good opportunities for him -- these were guys he could knock out. I don't think so about Liston, Ali, Frazier and Foreman. Yes, it's possible, but not very likely. Now my real point is that by indulging all our speculations as far as we want, with no discipline, we are not learning anything, we are not exchanging real information, we are not exploring facts or real hypotheses or theories. All we're doing is pushing peas around on the plate, as they say down South. I compared it to masturbation. As far as my World War Two analogy, I wanted to give you an example that was absurd and similar. It's not history to investigate what would have happened if the Germans had repelled the Allied invasion of Normandy, and it's not history to investigate whether Quarry would have beaten Ali if Quarry did not get cut. I don't man to be rude, but it seems like a waste of time, and doubly so, because it's been said here so many times. There are so many other things about heavyweight boxing from the days of Jim Jeffreys on that we could talk about. I suggest we move onto new ground. For example, I'd be interested in what happened to guys Jerry beat. Specifically, I'd like to figure out if the experience of being KOed or soundly beaten by Jerry got many guys out of boxing, either right away or after just a few more fights. It seems to me that it would, but I don't know. Does anyone? My brothers were all brawlers, Massimo, and I was the fast one, the one with footwork. They are all fat couch potatoes now. (Meaning: mostly what they do is sit around drinking beer and... watching pro football on TV.) God bless 'em. |

8/14/04 09:59:58 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same|||1|Massimo, glad to hear Italy is your favorite country. Damiani and, of course, Benvenuti were fighters I like very much. Italy did beat the U.S. in hoops recently, should be a wide open tournament. Cleveland has at least two boxers at the Olympics... Ernie, if we don't take apart history and challenge it, how do we learn from it? Thanks for proving my point. Incidentally, JQ had just two title shots, something seriously wrong with that, Ellis and Frazier. His first fight against Ali may have seemed like one, it wasn't. Circumstances in two of those fights are open to conjecture, his performance against Frazier made a second fight necessary, and that ended weird. No, Ernie, I'm not tired. Take Jimmy D's view of it if you don't like mine... Massimo, I rate Wilt and Kareem #1 and #2, the BBC is pretty close. Their playoff matchup in '72 is a must-see if you can find it. Jerry West and Oscar Robertson also matched up, great series. Thanks again. |

8/14/04 11:49:05 PM|Ernie Laxalt|Reno, NV||elax66@aol.com|||10|Gerry says: "Ernie, if we don't take apart history and challenge it, how do we learn from it? Thanks for proving my point." There is no speculation of "what if" in analyzing history, Gerry. There is investigation, interview, further study, examination of sources, new hypotheses, discussion but not speculation. History is a view, or probably many views, and you challenge one view or another. For example:1. Someone could study a proposed list of the 30 greatest heavyweight boxers between 1960 and 2000. Identify all the judges and referees in all their fights, and compare judging and referee performance and ruling. From this analysis, attempt to suggest conclusions. Most obviously, which judges seemed contrarian? Which judges seemed to favor sluggers most, or boxers most, or champions most? With home computers, database programs and the Net, this would be a great project for someone to undertake. I'd love to read the conclusions and discuss them. I know that in earlier times -- say the 1950s -- the East Coast was the heavyweight boxing capital and the same pool of referees there was drawn from time and again. I wonder how that influenced decisions and careers. 2. Study the careers of 10 top boxers from this era. Figure out ways to compare processes in their careers: first fight, second fight, third fight; or fights at age 20, age 21, age 22, etc; or other "looks". Then you could construct models of their momentum, and possibly who peaked too early, too late, and so on. From what you find out, describe an ideal way to bring a heavyweight along. 3. Take a specific claim, and investigate it. A popular claim here seems to be, "Jerry Quarry, when compared to heavyweight boxing peers, had unusual circumstances in his career that prevented him from winning a championship." How would you study that? You'd begin by naming these possible circumstances and investigating each one, including analysis of what other boxers also underwent them. One circumstance is heavy bleeding. All right, others with that problem are Henry Cooper, Chuck Wepner, etc. Maybe a hypotheses is that this problem handicaps white boxers. But counterevidence suggests Jack Dempsey, Rocky Marciano and others did not have that problem. These are formal examples, Gerry, for the really serious boxing fan to pursue. But I propose we try to move in this direction: posing questions that can be responded to with reference to known facts and information, avoiding speculation and other undeterminable propositions. See what I mean?What did it mean that Jerry was a West Coast boxer? Was it a disadvantage or an advantage? Would judging and scoring have been significantly different in his fights if he'd been from Boston, New York or Chicago?|

8/15/04 05:13:44 AM|Timana|Auckland||kiwi@hotmail.com|||10|I am happy I visited this site because it seems you can have different points of view without resorting to insults. ErnieYou're correct in saying that there is no 'what ifs' in analyzing history, but this is only so when taken from a purely historian's perspective. However, when looking back in time, trying to predict the present or the future, 'what ifs' are the most effective tools in a scientist's arsenal. Historians are boring; scientists are invigorating and exciting. Scientists change the future; an historian's only obligation is to the past.

An historian would say that we can't shrink Muhammad Ali so why bother imagining how he'd go against Sugar Ray Robinson. A scientist would say 'what if' we could shrink him, what would be the most likely outcome. Why should it be any different for a scientist of boxing? Asking 'what if' stimulates our knowledge of the sport and makes it more enjoyable when debating imaginary fights.

So, if we shrank Ali, how would he go against Ray Robinson? I'd pick Robinson. Welterweight champion between 1946 to 1951 and the middleweight champ from 1951 to 1960. In that era, against a whirlwind of great opposition, it's hard to imagine just how good Ray Robinson really was.

I don't think Ali would have the power to knock Robinson out and I don't think Robinson could have knocked Ali out. But what a great imaginary fight this is if we think to ourselves 'what if'. Robinson would win, in my opinion, because he would be busier and throw more punches.

I don't think Ali would have the power to knock Robinson out and I don't think Robinson could have knocked Ali out. But what a great imaginary fight this is if we think to ourselves 'what if'. Robinson would win, in my opinion, because he would be busier and throw more punches.

So, Ernie, is it so wrong for us to fanatize about such a fight?

Supposition is part of appreciating and understanding events. I approach history journalistically, who, what where, why, how. Then I add "so what?" and tinker with the components of the event, the "what if". Doing this allows us to better understand history, and it is very common. You cannot watch a documentary without someone rearranging events to suggest that, with a few changes, things could have been much different. This is how history become a valuable learning tool. That's my opinion, anyway. Thanks |

You're welcome, Steve. Gerry, I disagree completely. Science is studying the known facts, dreaming up ideas, creating a hypothesis, designing an experiment to test it, performing the experiment, analyzing the results, and explaining how they combine (or do not) with known facts. In leaving you, I'll observe that some of you are unusually touchy and hostile. Good luck and Massimo, addio, paisan! |
Wilton Norman is unusual as a name. I have never met a Wilton Normain in my entire life. Shaquille Rashaun is unusual too. On the other hand, Massimo is very common.

Massimo, found my reading glasses. I can see without them to walk around or drive my car, but I can't read very well without them.

Evren, how about the next fights in the tournament?

Here are some facts for Laxalt. Jerry Destroyed a very dangerous Ernie Shavers. Shavers destroyed Norton. Norton beat Ali 3 times only got 1 decision. Jerry completely outboxed Lyle and Lyle fights Foreman in one of the most exciting fights of all time. Knocking Foreman down a few times. Foreman Destroys Norton and Frazier.

No shouldla woulda couldla. No Fiction just facts. You may not like to hear it but he beat the best who beat the best. With his brilliant career there is no need to wouldla couldla shouldla, he did it I saw him do it and the drama that went with it. I liked all the fighters of that era including Ali they were all great atheletes. Some of them got the publicity and some did not. Jerry did not and he was in my humble opinion the most exciting fighter of the ERA. I didn't say he was the best of the ERA no one did. Smokin Joe probably was.

FRAN: Foreman easily pulverized Frazier twice, how can you say Frazier was the best of that era? I always believed that if A beats B, than A is the better guy. Especially if it happens twice.

I thought Fran was doing okay until he said that Frazier was probably the best of that era. There are so many unanswered questions with Frazier that Fran's statement is absurd.

Frazier avoided fighting many of the best of that era. Rather than fight some of the best, he fought others he had already beaten convincingly.

And, of course, after the first Ali fight (in which he fought brilliantly), he hardly fought at all.

Frankly, I thought Frazier found his level in history in the two fights with Foreman. He was so badly beaten that he has to be below Foreman. Of course, Foreman has to be below Ali.

To me, Frazier should merely be a footnote in history. Sure, he was able to lift against a ring rusty Ali, but there are too many holes in his resume, too many exhibitions, too many recycled fights, and then there was that embarrassing thrashing against Foreman - TWICE.

I threw that out there because even though its true I can't argue with what you are saying about Foreman beating Joe 2x like he did, but from 68 til the after first Ali fight in 71 Joe was unbeatable. After the first Ali fight he ate good and took off to long and lost the sharpness to slip n slide like he did during the years before George. Foreman had his number, styles make fights and Foreman had all the tools to beat Joe. But Before George, Joe was the man.

Sorry, but I don't agree with you. Yes, it's true, Joe Frazier didn't fight a lot of guys, but how many of these fighters would have really had a decent chance at winning against him? Maybe only Lyle and Shavers. On the other hand, Frazier beat a long list of excellent fighters: Machen-Jones-Chuvalo-Bonavena-Mathis-Quarry-Ellis-Ali'-Foster. The first and the third fight with Ali' would already be enough to show Joe Frazier's greatness.

How many times a fighter has to show how good he is? Ali''s career was just exaggerated! Almost every fight was against a top contender... Too much! I rate Ali' above Frazier because( or as, or since) he beat Foreman while Frazier almost died against Small George, but Joe Frazier was a real champion!
you will about the Ali-Norton trilogy. Norton won the first one, and you could make a case that he should have gotten the nod in the third (I don't agree with that—thought Ali did enough to defend his title, but would entertain an argument.) but Ali won the second fight and I don't understand why that point is really up for debate. He outboxed Norton and seemed to score more points—controlled the tempo and Norton never hurt him in the second fight—didn't come close. Of all the close decisions Ali won in his career, why to people debate Norton #2? Just because Norton fought well in the other two fights? On the topic of Jerry, he did indeed beat Shavers, who took out Norton in one and who gave Ali all he could handle. He beat Lyle, who KOed Shavers and also fought well against Ali and Foreman (and was ducked by Frazier and Norton). JQ was in the thick of the title picture for a good many years and should have gotten a shot against Foreman. He earned it. Earnie: Will you at least agree that Quarry's impressive win over Shavers in 1973 should have put him in line for a title shot? The reason we're even talking about what MIGHT have happened in a Foreman-Quarry fight is that the fight, unjustly never took place.As for Frazier, he was impressive in taking out Jerry twice and fighting Ali closely three times, winning one. He beat a string of good fighters in the 60's. But no one here should dispute the fact that Foreman made Frazier look ridiculous in the first fight and soundly beat him in the second (though Joe actually won a round). Also, Frazier was lucky to avoid Shavers and Lyle and never fought his friend Norton. That's three top contenders of the 1970's—very natural face-offs for Frazier that curiously, never happened. It seems to me that if anything, it's possible that Norton avoided Frazier, but seems clear that Frazier had little to gain and a lot to lose by facing power punchers like Shavers and Lyle, especially after Foreman clubbed him and made it look easy.8/16/04 11:37:00 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same|||10|I guess I'm in the pro-Frazier group here. In the space between Ali's suspension and the emergence of Foreman, he was the best guy out there. He didn't fight alot, but beat some great fighters as has been listed. Was he better than Ali or Foreman? No. I still give the guy his due, very courageous man, very successful fighter for being so one-sided. Would Rocky Marciano have been so successful if he had to fight an Ali? Frazier may have proved that answer, not likely. | 8/16/04 11:37:00 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same|||10|I guess I'm in the pro-Frazier group here. In the space between Ali's suspension and the emergence of Foreman, he was the best guy out there. He didn't fight alot, but beat some great fighters as has been listed. Was he better than Ali or Foreman? No. I still give the guy his due, very courageous man, very successful fighter for being so one-sided. Would Rocky Marciano have been so successful if he had to fight an Ali? Frazier may have proved that answer, not likely. | 8/16/04 11:37:00 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same|||10|In his book, Frazier didn't cite friendship with Norton for not fighting him. Frazier said that the fight never happened because the big money was not there for it. I find that hard to accept. If lack of money was the problem, why did he fight Daniels and Stander? Wouldn't have been much loot in that. And then he fought Joe Bugner....is anyone telling me that there was more money in fighting Bugner than Norton? Come on. Frazier then fought two guys he had already beaten - Quarry and Ellis - rather than seeking a risky fight with Norton. Once again, logic would say that there was more money in the Norton fight. He was ducking Norton, just like he ducked Lyle and Shavers. Joe was very damaged property after that first Ali fight. Truth is, he came out of it worse than Ali and spent more time in hospital and recovering. Personally, I don't think he ever recovered and that is why he started ducking guys. Remember too, Frazier thought Foreman would be easy. That was the only reason he took that fight. The second Foreman fight he had to take if he was ever gonna have credibility again. After the first Ali fight, Joe fought 10 more times. He lost four of those, being stopped in three. Even before the Ali fight, Frazier was choosy. He didn't fight Liston, Patterson, Cooper, or even Ernie Terrell who went 15 rounds with Clay in 1967. Was he buddies with all these guys too? Ali fought plenty of friends. Ellis was in his stable and Dundee was in Ellis's corner the night they fought. In my opinion, Frazier has been dragged along on the shirt tails of Ali's legend. Question: If you take Ali out of Frazier's resume, who is the next best that he beat? Ellis? Quarry? Both are very good heavyweights, but neither are realistically up there as all time greats. Nup. For mine, Frazier ducked fighting too many fighters of his era to be considered a truly great legend. If you guys want to put Frazier right up there, then how good does that make Foreman? And then how good does that make Ali? I believe that Frazier benefitted from the hatred towards Ali. There were so many boxing fans that wanted Ali's butt kicked, that Frazier became idolised because he was seen as the most likely to do it. But be fair......why does Joe's resume have so many holes in it?

| 8/17/04 06:24:51 AM| Eugene|Roma, but born in Pisa|| Ray Impelletiere is the greatest.com |||||10|Yes, I have to admit there is something true in what you are saying. But Frazier was part of 3 of the best heavyweight fights I have ever seen (8 March, Manilla, Quarry 1) and to me it is already enough to rate him among the champions. Whatever namesucker-Frazier would have been an interesting fight. Terrell's shoe size against Frazier's stubborn aggression and punching power.I think that Joe Frazier's chin was very good, not quite in the same class (or even league) with McCall, Chuvalo, Peralta and Ali', but very good.

| 8/17/04 06:59:49 AM| Fran| philly|| plc7755@ao1.com |||||10|After the first Ali fight Joe's career changed he had climbed the mountain and he was done. He did choose his opponents. His size and style didn't make for a long career. Ali's did. No matter how you look back on it if you were watching back then you remember he was the man during the time of Ali's exile. Why he fought Foreman I'll never know. He didn't need Foreman he was champ. He could have let Ali or Quarry fight him and take the winner just like he did with Mac Foster who was the #1 contender in 70 he let Jerry fight him. Frazier was from 68 to 71 the best out there. So you guys make good points, my only point is that time and the longevity factor and fighting Foreman have diminished Fraziers place in history. He was great with that head movement and Philadelphia left hook and always in top shape. |

| 8/17/04 07:27:25 AM| John Gerard| NYC|| rock289z@yahoo.com |||||10|I think Ali and Foreman were head and shoulders above the rest of their period. Frazier was very, very good, but Foreman revealed him. Plus he ducked Liston early in his career, and Lyle, Norton, and Shavers later on. He was in terrible shape against Foreman, Stanader, and Daniels. Mike Tyson does not have 10% of Joe's gameness or will to win. Frazier was also one of the greatest (if not the greatest) in-fighters of all time. I respect him very much.

| 8/17/04 11:36:20 AM| Massimo| Roma |||4|||10|Maybe Jimmy Old is the greatest heavyweight of all time ! Who knows ? He even gave Norton one hell of a fight ! I have never seen Jimmy in the ring.

| 8/17/04 11:45:20 AM| Angelo| Washington, DC|| funktron@yahoo.com |||||10|Timana makes very good points about Frazier---I've always put Joe in the company of the alltime greats, Ali and Foreman, but I'm the first to admit that I don't have a reasonable response to debate what Timana has stated. This isn't the first time that someone on this board has challenged Frazier's legacy---and made some very valid points. The theme is that Frazier's opponents after 1970 weren't the top of the division, except for Ali and Foreman, and his combined record against those guys is 1-4 (including a decision win and three KO losses). And yes, the truth of the matter is that fighting Ellis and Quarry, who he already defeated, seemed to be the path of least resistance considering that Lyle, Norton and Shavers were on the scene, fighting Foreman, Ali and eachother.
Where was Joe? The world wasn't clamouring for rematches with Quarry and Ellis. Norton and Frazier fought well against Ali, but both of them had real trouble with other talented heavies. Frazier's stature, in my mind, has been diminished at least a little by his lack of going after and/or beating the strongest competition after 1970. Where was the challenge in taking on Quarry and especially Ellis a second time? Quarry was at least coming off an impressive KO of Shavers (and should have avoided Frazier and targeted Foreman instead). But Frazier-Ellis II. offered nothing to fans---no intrigue at all. Bugner? Stander? What about Shavers, Lyle and Norton? Again, where was Joe? | 8/17/04 12:43:40 PM|Forest Ward|NYC||NYC.com|||10|Strange enough, I remember Joe Frazier's career a little differently from the way it has been described on this board recently.Regarding Lyle and Shavers, they were both highly rated when they were beaten convincingly by Jerry Quarry. Quarry was then elevated to number 2 ranking, just behind Ali. At one point Quarry and Gil Clancy claimed that Foreman and Ali were afraid to fight Quarry. When Joe fought Quarry the 2nd time, Quarry was favored in that fight. Joe beat him easier the 2nd time than he did the first time. So much for Joe ducking Shavers and LyleThere were two fighter Jim Wicks would not allow Henry Cooper to fight: Sonny Liston, and Joe Frazier. Patterson was repeatedly offered fights with Frazier in the late 60's and early 70's but he turned them down. Ernie Terrell could not draw flies at the box office. Who would pay to see Terrell fight Frazier, no one. Besides, Terrell retired for a few years after he was defeated by Manuel Ramos. Who Frazier then knocked out in 2 rounds. As far as ducking Liston in the late 60's, Frazier had a lot of company. Liston was clamoring for a fight with any top contender, no one would fight him, until his old sparring partner Leotis Martin took him on and knocked him out.Regarding the fights with Stander and Daniels, it is an unwritten rule in boxing that after a hard defense a champ is allowed a few easy ones. Look at the guys Ali defended against: Coopman, London,Blin...| 8/17/04 01:55:15 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|But Lyle and Shavers both recovered after the losses to JQ and put together very decent careers.Lyle beat Shavers, looked good in losing to Ali and had the epic slugfest with Foreman. Shavers won a lot more than he lost, was always considered a dangerous KO artist, got his title shot against Ali, had two battles with Holmes and took out Norton in a round. Norton had the bouts with Ali, the KO win over Bobick, the decision over Young, the defense against Holmes---an active boxer through the 70's. Again, I ask, with Shavers, Lyle and Norton this active, and Frazier fighting steadily through 1976, and still on record (albeit against Jumbo Cummings) in 1981, why didn't he face any of the divisions best talent? I understand the Quarry rematch, but why an Ellis rematch? Why Terry Daniels?Where was Joe? | 8/17/04 02:06:02 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|FOREST: Jim Wick would also never let Henry Cooper fight George Chuvalo. Chuvalo was the number one contender for the British Commonwealth title for more than a decade. Chuvalo even offered to fight Cooper in London. But no go.| 8/17/04 04:05:37 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Both Ron Lyle and Earnie Shavers were still working their way up the ladder to top contender status before 1975, which was Joe Frazier's last year as a serious contender. They both likely could have fought Frazier if they had beaten Quarry, which they didn't. Frazier didn't duck them, he was already almost finished with his career by the time they were emerging as top contenders and he never should have taken the second fight with Foreman let alone the fight with Cummings about five years later.Frazier took the second Quarry fight to earn another title shot and he took the second Ellis fight as a tune up for his third fight with Ali because of Ellis' similar style to Ali. Remember once again that at the time of Frazier/Quarry 2 both Lyle and Shavers had not earned the right to fight in a title elimination bout, which is what Frazier/Quarry 2 was.| Add on to my last post: I realize Ron Lyle had a high ranking when Jerry beat him but he fell back in the rankings and he had to work his way back up, which he did when Frazier was just about gone from the scene. Joe Frazier realized he only had so many fights left in him and once Ali had won the title again, Frazier's goal was to get a shot at Ali and to do that he would have to beat the highest ranked available contender, which was Jerry. I also agree with Frazier's and Norton's contention that they wouldn't fight because of their friendship, so Frazier didn't duck Norton either.

Ring Magazine whom are usually regarded as they only real rankings for fighter's mainly because there so unbiased, and do not accept kickbacks etc. like when the WBA kicked Joe Frazier to the back of the bus, due to him not accepting an invitation into there tournament. Ranked these heavyweights before JQ fought them. 6/9/67 Floyd Patterson #3. 10/28/67 Floyd Patterson #5. 2/3/68 Thad Spencer #2. 4/27/68 Jimmy Ellis #3. 3/24/69 Buster Mathis #6. 6/23/69 Joe Frazier #1. 6/17/70 MacArthur Foster #1. 11/16/71 Jack Bodell #8. 5/9/72 Larry Middleton #7. 6/27/72 Muhammad Ali #1. 2/9/73 Ron Lyle #3. 12/14/73 Earnie Shavers #6. 6/17/74 Joe Frazier #2. and 3/24/75 Ken Norton #4. Jerry's 8-5-1 with 4 knockouts vs these guy's. Ali (exiled and no top ten rating) and I believe George Chuvalo DEC.69 should also have been included in this group. take care!

Frazier doesn't contend that it was friendship that stopped him fighting Norton. In his book he says that there was no money to make that fight. I can quote it in full if you want. Just seems to me that there is a myriad of excuses for the plethora of contenders that Frazier missed in his era. Friendships, no money, fighting him won't get me a title fight, and the list goes on and on. Imagine if Ali had the same attitude. How come Ali fought them all, but Frazier didn't? You either want to fight guys or you don't. I never heard of Ali ducking anyone because he might be a dangerous fight, etc. Another thing. If Ali was not in forced exile for the three years, what would have happened if Ali and Frazier fought? Ali, in my view, would have taken him easily, and Frazier would then have been just another heavyweight. The (false) legend of Frazier would never have begun and Ken Norton probably would be remembered as Ali's arch rival as Frazier is today. All the excuses in the world can't avoid the big holes in Frazier's resume. All never bothered fooling the public and having meaningless fights like Frazier did against Daniels and Stander. Before then, Frazier had exhibitions against Williams and Helwig. Just seems to me that Joe didn't have too much confidence in himself to beat the next best and then the next best like Ali did.

What do the following men have in common: Jimmy Young, Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers, Ken Norton? All of them were heavyweight contenders in the early to mid-1970s and Frazier didn't fight any of them. These guys were active to 1976 and beyond, and maybe you're right Kent---Frazier knew he didn't have a lot of fights left in him, so as I said, he took the path of least resistance. It's also likely that after getting trounced by the power punching Foreman, he avoided the similar sized Lyle and more powerful Shavers and focused on Ellis, essentially a washed up version of the newer model Young.

While I said that the information regarding Frazier not fighting Norton was in Frazier's book, it was actually in a publication called 'Boxers' published by Warrender Grant Publications in London. It reads: "Yet although Norton was an exact contemporary of Frazier's he never fought him. Many said it was because they were on too good terms with each other to fight. Frazier confirms the friendship but denies this was the reason. 'Nobody put up good money,' he says. 'So why fight Kenny? You fight for money, right?" Wrong! Money was not the motivating factor for legitimate legends like Ali, Louis, Marciano, et al. They fought to test themselves against the very best. They were prepared to take risks to etch their names among the immortals. Money was secondary; challenge was the motivator. By the way, thanks for all those who reply to my posts. It's fun to debate issues like this, with sensible opinions flying back and forth, courteously.

Joe Frazier ruled from 68 to 71 and peaked by beating Ali in what still is the fight of the century. After Ali he was not the same. He proved everything and could have retired. In 71 Ron Lyle had just been out of jail about a year. Shavers was unheard of still, Norton and Young were Joe's sparring partners. Joe had some big paydays left with Ali so he hung around but he was done his climb. So when Joe was coming up Norton, Young, Lyle, Shavers were not around. As far as Norton and Frazier goes I saw them go to war before Frazier fought Foreman and it was all out war they were rockin each other. So for 3 years Joe was the absolute best. No holes in Frazier's resume. He was still around in the early to mid 70's only for Ali because no one could generate the money that those 2 did. Could it have been that Shavers, Lyle, and Young had not earned a chance to fight Frazier to determine who would fight Ali? I think this is the case. Again, none of these guys had established themselves as top contenders. Path of least resistance? Frazier fought Jerry Quarry for his title shot, a man who we have pointed out many times, handily beat both Ron Lyle and Earnie Shavers. Again, if either of them had beaten Quarry, it would have been one of them instead of Quarry fighting for the right to challenge for the title and even though a lot of people thought Jerry had earned his shot by beating Lyle and Shavers, he lost the right by losing to Frazier. How come people think Lyle, Shavers, and Young were contenders in the early seventies? Yes by about 1975 or 1976, depending on who we are talking about, they had started to emerge as such but in the early 70s they were not considered proven commodities. Yes by 1975 Jimmy Ellis was on the down side but at the risk of repeating myself again, Frazier earned his right to go to the Thrilla in Manila by beating Quarry and he didn't have to take the Ellis fight, it was to keep his skills sharp in preparation for Ali. I would have to find his book, I have it but I am not sure where it is at right now, but I believe it was Norton who said he would not fight Frazier because of their friendship.

When Frazier fought in the gym or in a fight it was war, he took no prisoners, he dodged no one. After his peak (Ali one) he picked his fights and made some money, After Marciano's peak he retired, after Louis and Ali peaked they hung around way too long. Joe has been sharp looks good even now and looks like he could still give today's contenders a run.

But Kent, how could you say that these guys were merely "starting to emerge" as contenders by 75 or 76? Lyle fought Ali for the title in 1975, I think Young did in 1976 and Shavers did in 1977. They weren't just "starting to emerge" but in fact had done enough by 1973/74 to be considered as legitimate heavyweights worthy of a chance to prove themselves against a FORMER champion like Frazier. In fact, what exactly did Ken Norton do to "deserve" a fight against former Champion Ali in 1973? Who did he beat? What did Ron Lyle, Jimmy Young or Earnie Shavers do to deserve title shots against Ali? Who did they beat? It seems to me that the pattern here is that Ali took all comers, including the same guys Frazier did (Quarry, Ellis, Bugner, etc.) as well as the guys Frazier wouldn't fight—the aforementioned Norton, Young, Shavers, Lyle and others. For common opponents, Ali KOed Foreman, while Foreman decimated Frazier twice. Norton of course, wasn't a common opponent because Frazier didn't fight him (or Norton didn't fight Frazier as the case may be). Fact is, after "Superfight 1" Ali remained extremely busy, even after winning the title, and fought the tough guys like Norton and Frazier and also took on everyone else I mentioned, along with the Evangelistas and Richard Dunns of the world—the Chuck Wepner and Pierre-Coopmans too. Meanwhile, Frazier seemingly avoided confrontations with the guys Ali was giving title shots to. And as for Ken Norton, he didn't fight Frazier, he was pummeled by Foreman, didn't fight Lyle, managed a decision against Young and was taken out in two minutes by Shavers later on. But it's curious to me that Norton didn't ever fight Lyle and fought Young and Shavers AFTER he had the chance against Ali in 1976. Also, Norton was pitted against Lorenzo Zanon before the Jimmy Young fight. Not Lyle or Shavers, but Lorenzo Zanon. Frazier and Norton discovered that they had the chin and stamina to avoid being KOed by Ali, and the styles to push Ali to the limit, so they apparently were very cautious with regard to mixing it up with up and coming heavyweights, instead deciding to bide their time waiting for rematches with Ali (and in the ultimate cooperation, wouldn't even fight eachother). Well, Norton did take on undefeated Duane Bobick and at that point, no one knew how good or bad Bobick was, so Norton was gambling a little there. But Frazier? One more time, in the mid-70's while Ali was taking on everyone, including Antonio Inoki, where was Joe?

8/17/04 11:33:27 PM | Timana | Auckland | kiwi@hotmail.com | | | | | | Fran, you're kidding about Frazier looking "sharp", right? The guy is in very poor health. He is an alcoholic and a diabetic. Last photograph I saw he looked terrible. Last time I heard him speak he was hard to understand. Sad, and I truly wish it weren't so, but it is.  You seem to be agreeing that Frazier picked his fights after the first Ali bout in 1971.  In 1971, when he fought Ali, Frazier was only 27. Apart from two exhibitions in 1971, he didn't fight again that year. Yet Ali had three more fights in 1971 (Ellis, Mathis, and Blin).And look at 1972, Frazier only fought Daniels and Stander. Talk about taking the soft options, because that same year Ali fought Foster, Chuvalo, Quarry, Lewis, Patterson, and Foster. No rest for the brave.In 1973 Frazier fought Foreman and Bugner. Ali fought Bugner, Norton, Norton, and Lubbers.Ali was two years older than Frazier, had spent three years out of the ring, but he ducked no one. Yet Frazier hardly fought at all.Great fighters don't pick and chose. They back their ability and fight the best and then the next best. Just like Ali did.  Fran, you say that Frazier was the best 1968 to 1971. That was only because Ali was in exile. Do you really think that Frazier in that period would have beaten Ali? In your heart of hearts? Frazier was very particular about who he fought. During Ali's absence, the WBA came up with an eliminator to decide Ali's successor. There were eight fighters on the list - Frazier, Patterson, Thad Spencer, Ellis, Bonavena, Ernie Terrell, Mildenberger, and Quarry.But this wasn't good enough for Joe. He wouldn't go in it. He wouldn't fight eliminators. Everyone else was game to do it, but not Joe. As it was, Frazier eventually (after the tournament was over) only fought 3 of the 7 fighters on that list. Ali came back in 1971. Of the 8 people on the list, Ali fought 7 of them. The only one he missed was Thad Spencer. No picking and choosing for him.Frazier's record does not substantiate what many of you guys are saying about him. Sue he was great in his fights against Ali, but take those out and there's not much else there. No one ever saw Ali or Marciano manhandled in a fight the way Joe was against Foreman. Louis was never humiliated in his prime like Foreman did to Frazier. The Foreman thrashings put Frazier's historical ranking in perspective, while his failure to fight the best of his era only serves to raise questions about him generally.
because they didn't. Again, Joe was not ducking them, because he would have gone through one of them to get to Ali again. Angelo, wouldn't you agree Lyle and Shavers can be considered fighters of the mid to late 70's while Frazier and Quarry were fighters of the late 60's to early 70's? The eras crossed over but not exactly. Ali did take on all comers but that is one of the things that makes him a cut above the rest.

Angelo, wouldn't you agree Lyle and Shavers can be considered fighters of the mid to late 70's while Frazier and Quarry were fighters of the late 60's to early 70's? The eras crossed over but not exactly. Ali did take on all comers but that is one of the things that makes him a cut above the rest.

I wonder, if Frazier was ducking people (around), why did he fight Foreman a second time? After Manilla, another fight with Ali for the title was not likely. I think he fought Small George again to revenge his "close" loss in 1973. He knew how strong Giorgio Eduardo was, he knew Giorgio Eduardo could lift one man up with one punch and make holes as big as melons in the heavybags. I think if you have guts enough to fight Giorgio Eduardo, you have guts enough to fight anyone else... Including Primo Carnera.

My own personal opinion is, that after the Foreman thrashings, Frazier wisely avoided heavy hitters like Shavers and Lyle. And I think he was smart in doing so. Joe was never the same after the first Foreman fight. Ron Stander staggered him in round one of their bout in Omaha. So Joe picked and chose one of his opponents. In boxing like any business you reduce risk and maximize income. Joe was a real game warrior, a near great. Very near.

Kent, yes I do agree with you that Lyle, Shavers and Young were really fighters of the middle and later 70's, not the late 60's and early 70's. I'll grant you that. But my point is that promising fighters don't become contenders without testing themselves against the elite---or even the former elite who are still hanging around. And to take it a step further, the truly elite test themselves against everybody within reason. Some of these promising fighters who were dispatched one at a time by Jerry Quarry (I'm thinking of Shavers and Lyle) picked themselves up, dusted themselves off and got back on track. They found Ali standing there with a title belt, waiting for them, but Frazier was nowhere in sight. And I understand your point that Quarry beat these guys and was matched against Frazier---but that's exactly what my problem with the scenario is: Instead of being part of the "elimination" process, Frazier seemingly stayed out of it until the only one standing was a guy who he had already beaten (Quarry). As pointed out in a recent post, he did this in the series to find a successor to the exiled Ali, and in a smaller sense, he did it again in the early 70's after he lost the title to Foreman and conveniently, a guy he had beaten in 1971 took the belt from Foreman. So now he waited for a chance at Ali, in 1975. I'd have to check the record, but aside from Quarry (who again, Frazier had already beaten) and Ali II. (another guy he had already beaten) who were the dangerous guys he fought between 1972 and 1975 to earn the third shot at Ali? Avoiding landmines for 2-3 years while waiting for everyone else to knock each other off doesn't make him courageous. Yes, it does make him smart, because I feel that if he had mixed it up with some of these guys (especially the power punchers), he would have lost and never caught up with Ali in Manilla. So being careful was smart, but in my book, it cost him some credibility and the right to be called one of the best ever. Yes, if you go back through the last 2 years of posts, you'll see that my opinion has changed on this, because a lot of people have made some very good, eye opening arguments to change my mind. Joe Frazier was still a great champion and a warrior---but aside from having the style to push Ali, he falls short of being an all-time great. Massimo---that's a good question about why Frazier took on Foreman in their second fight. I don't know what he had to gain. Based on his history, you would think he'd be looking for Wepner or a rematch with Terry Daniels.

How did it happen that Joe Frazier was allowed to not fight in the elimination tournament for the WBA title? I'm curious. Have Joe Frazier already beaten Buster Mathis (1968) when the tournament started? Anyway, I think he would have very likely won the tournament since he was better than the other guys. He was better than Quarry (sorry, but the truth is the truth), Spencer, Whatchsmyname, Mildenberger, Bonavena, Leotis Martin and Jimmy Ellis.

Some further thoughts on Joe Frazier. I saw a recent picture of Joe Frazier, sadly, I thought he looked in poor health. I was aware he had diabetes. I did not know he is an alcoholic. Although, I am curious about the medical qualifications of the person that labeled Joe an alcoholic. Was Joe interviewed, was he examined? Or is this just an armchair diagnosis.

Regarding Joe's speech patterns, I would have to agree that in recent years it has declined somewhat. Although, on Joe's worst days he never sounded as bad as Muhammad Ali has for the last 15 years. Sadly, Ali can barely talk. Also, Joe's motor skills, and his cognitive skills are certainly far superior to those of Jerry Quarry in the last years of his life. A boxer normally has 2 goals when starting his career, become a champion, and become wealthy. Sadly, in most cases these goals are not met. A young fighter does not worry about his health, physically or mentally. He thinks he will be young forever. The fighters manager is supposed to look after his health needs and his financial needs. Well, in Joe Frazier's case I think his handlers did a good job. He became a champion, and became wealthy. In the late 60's he defeated everyone in his path and made good purses. He culminates his career beating Ali in 1971, for a record purse 2.5 million dollars. Joe, probably lost some of the hunger in his belly after he beat Ali in 1971. He beats a few chumps for pocket money, and then loses to Foreman. His handlers skillfully maneuver him to big money purses and another shot at the title. His handlers did not throw him to the wolves as so many handlers in boxing do to their fighters.

Let's take a look at some of Joes contemporaries from that period:

Jerry Quarry, died prematurely as result of taking to many punches to the head. Obvious and severe brain damage. Handlers would put him in the ring against anyone at anytime. Life after boxing, drug and alcohol problems, spent time in jail, needed supervision and care constantly. No savings or wealth.

Muhammad Ali, obviously brain damaged as a result of boxing. Handlers would let him fight anyone anytime. Cheated out of most of the money he earned as a fighter. Cannot speak, sometimes uses a wheelchair. Wife must cut his food for him.

I could go on and on. The point is Joe Frazier did what he had to do to become champion. And, as an exchampion trying to regain the championship, he was skillfully handled. Looking at the the quality of the post boxing life of Frazier, Quarry, Ali. There is no question because Frazier was handle so well as a fighter, he did not end up tragically like Ali and Quarry. It seems to me that everyone is blaming brain damage on the boxers life style and not the boxing both jerry and ali had a lot of fights even as young men this and all the sparring and then the big fight had a 90% effect on these fighters studies show that the sparring is the worse because there is more of it than the fights them self, studies now show a gene could predispose a fighter to brain damage. The booze and drugs are also a part of the cause after the fact. Look around you at all the people who drink and do drugs that are still around with out brain damage yes physical damage and later on brain damage but these fighters took to many blows to the head and had to many fights. For people to blame others for the careers these fights choose seems we do not hold them accountable for their own choses in life.
don't do. Frazier in fighting Quarry a second time, the last one standing after the elimination process, Frazier was following tradition.

Also, most fighters don't pick their opponents, their management picks them. Joe could have been saying he wanted to fight this or that guy but his management didn't want him to, for whatever reason. No, Frazier defeated Mathis after the eight man WBA tournament was over. As far as Frazier staying out of the tournament, his management likely thought that since he was already the number one contender, that he had earned a title shot. I still don't know how the WBA can rationalize dropping Frazier to the number nine contender after not losing a fight just for staying out of the tournament.

Perhaps you are correct about the 'alcoholic' comment concerning Frazier. I was not trying to be unfair. I do know that he had a battle with the bottle. With the recent problem about (allegedly) bashing a girlfriend, I think I must have read between the lines to draw a ('armchair') conclusion that he was back on the bottle. If I'm wrong, I'm sorry. However, I still believe that Joe has had a problem with alcohol, although it might not be current. However, our debate seems to have reached a majority conclusion: that Frazier was choosy about the fights he took. It seems that some of us agree that he avoided some fights. In my opinion, this is not a trait that gives anyone eligibility to be considered 'one of the all time greats'. Joe was not a risk taker. Ali had been out of action for 3 years and 5 months leading up to his first fight against Frazier. So Frazier was entitled to be confident. And Frazier only took the Foreman fight because he was very confident - as were the pundits - that he would win easily. Comparatively, Frazier had few fights. Frazier fought 37 times, Ali 66 times, Holmes 72, Marciano 49, Foreman 81, Louis 66, Liston 54, Norton 50, Patterson 64, Douglas 44, Dempsey 64, Johnson 105, and the list goes on.

There were so many fights he could have had but he never took. Putting aside the elimination tournament he refused to go in (and he was the only contender to refuse to participate), men of his era who he never faced included London, Patterson, Cooper, Mildenburger and Norton. We can speculate about Shavers and Lyle, but we can't get away from the fact that he recycled opponents rather than take on new challengers. It seems to me that he was the type of fighter who needed an extraordinary amount of recovery time to then save up all his energies (and hate) for the next big occasion.

You comment that Frazier was following the tradition of taking an easy fight after winning the title. His records showes that he milked that tradition for all its worth. For two years after the first Ali fight, this is who he fought: exhibition exhibitions James Helwig Terry Daniels Ron Stander He'd just beaten Ali and was considered the best in the world and he's fighting exhibitions and taking on nobodies like Daniels and Stander for the next two years! Frazier says he didn't fight Norton because there was not enough money for it. Was there more money in fighting comparative stiffs like Stander and Daniels?

Where were Joe's competitive juices? Norton was out there ready to fight. Norton found time to fight Ali twice in 1973. But Frazier never fought Norton. It wasn't a big money fight? They were buddies, and buddies don't fight? Yeah, sure, gimme a break, goddammit. didn't have anyone comment on Joe's management picking his opponents. Fighters seldom have the last word in this manner.

Fran [philly] [plc7755@aol.com]

Joe Frazier was feared........ no one really wanted to fight him until after the the dust settled after the first Ali fight. Every fight Joe was in was a war. Fighters with that style do not fight long careers. Its not his fault that he didn't last longer. Talking Boxing is one thing watching it another. Watch some of Fraziers fights and see how great he was. He was an all time great. During that time he was the best. Ali in Exile or not, Joe would have still beaten him in the fight of the century when it counted. Joe Frazier was the most dominating heavyweight of the late 60's and very early 70's.

Timana [Auckland] [kiwi@hotmail.com]

I appreciate your comments, but cannot agree with you. Frazier's fights were wars because the level of his ability allowed them to be. There were so many he didn't fight that the conclusion must be that he ducked them. Ultimately, a fighter is in charge of his agenda and he makes the decisions as to who he fights. Ali fought all takers, one after the other. Frazier didn't. In fact, in comparison with others of that era, Frazier hardly fought at all. The conclusion must be that he was either fragile from the beginning, or he became fragile after the first Ali fight (or a little bit of both).

Fran [plc7755@aol.com]

I'm still scratching my head here. I was thinking maybe I was wrong when I said that Frazier ducked Lyle, Shavers and perhaps even Young, so I looked up there records. Lyle was born in 1942 and was a pro fighter 1971 onwards. He fought Mathis in 1972, Quarry in 1973, Bonavena and Ellis in 1974, and Ali and Young and Shavers in 1975. Yet Frazier never fought him. Let's look at Shavers. Born 1945 and turned pro in 1969. He fought Young, Ellis and Quarry in 1974, Young in 1974, Lyle in 1975, Ali in 1977, and Holmes in 1978. If Frazier I wanted, I bet Shavers would even had fought him, too. Young was born in 1949 His best years were 1974 to 1977. He was top 10 between 1975 and 1977. He fought Ali in 1976, Norton in 1977 and also Foreman. It should have been an easy fight for Frazier, but he never took it.

Massimo [Roma] [Henry Purcell.com]

I think we can debate whether Frazier was a top tenner or not, but he was without a doubt a great champion. He was involved in some of the best fights of all time and this makes him a boxing immortal. I think even in 2119 boxing fans will be watching (or will watch) on tapes Frazier-Ali 1-3 and Frazier-Quarry 1 ( what a fight !). Even Muhammad Ali' has a good opinion of Joe Frazier as a fighter. Even an in prime Ali' couldn't stop Chuvalo, while Frazier beat him in four rounds !

Steve [NJ] [dmnsrm@comcast.net]

I agree that Ali was possibly the best heavyweight all time. However, even though we've dispensed with the what ifs, now that were using empericle scientific methods, I still think Frazier kicked his ass in thier first fight. I also think Norton kicked his ass in their first fight. Does anyone believe the fighters Frazier ducked, Lyle, Shavers, could have taken Ali to the extremes of punishment of the "Thrilla In Manalli"?

| 8/19/04 10:08:27 AM | Forest Ward | New York City | NYC.com | 10 |
|----------------------|-------------|---------------|---------|

This is getting ridiculous regarding Joe Frazier. When he was champ, he fought the best contenders available. Such as Bonevona, Quarry, Ellis, Ali. Granted he did not fight Liston. Liston did not have a license in New York City, and if I was handling Frazier, a promoter is going to have to pay me a lot of money to fight Liston. So now you have to find a promoter who is willing to take a huge financial risk backing Liston. I doubt you could find one. Does anyone believe for a second that Joe Frazier ducked Jimmy Young, Frazier's former sparring partner? Jimmy Young who was beaten by Randy Neuman, and Ossie Ocasio among other. Does anyone believe Frazier ducked Earnie Shavers who was knocked out by Ron Stander, Jerry Quarry, and beaten by Bob Stallings. Does anyone really believe Frazier ducked Ron Lyle, who was beaten by Quarry, and twice by Jimmy Young. Does anyone really believe Frazier ducked Ernie Terrell (I can't believe I have to ask this question). Terrell was poison at the box office. The obvious reason why Frazier did not fight any of the above is because it served no purpose for him. He was a challenger interested in fighting for the title again. His goals were to regain the championship and make as much money as possible in the meantime. As a challenger it was not Frazier's duty to fight every challenger, that was the championship's responsibility. It is a credit to Frazier's management that they matched him carefully throughout his career, other wise he may have ended up like Jerry Quarry, and Muhammad Ali. These 2 poor souls fought everyone put in front of them and look how they fared in their life after boxing. They both became poster children for the abolishment of boxing crusaders.

| 8/19/04 10:39:03 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock2892@yahoo.com | 10 |

HI FOREST: I agree with every single thing you wrote, except one aspect: I do think Joe ducked Lyle. And I think he or his management was smart to do so. It was not a good match up for Joe regarding size, style or power. Joe didn't have to fight Lyle to get another title shot -- so he wisely didn't. No shame in that.

| 8/19/04 01:29:45 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

Forrest, sometimes I think people just don't take the time to look up fighters' records. If they did, then they would see that Lyle, Shavers, and Young were not considered high status contenders until from about 1975 to 1977 and by that point, Frazier, besides his epic battle with Ali in Manila, one last grasp at greatness, was finished as a serious contender. Now if during this period Frazier was still an active viable contender for the title, and he had avoided, fighting the above named fighters, then we can say he was ducking them.

| 8/19/04 01:35:34 PM | Fran | Philly | Plc7755@aol.com | 10 |

Forrest, sometimes I think people just don't take the time to look up fighters' records. If they did, then they would see that Lyle, Shavers, and Young were not considered high status contenders until from about 1975 to 1977 and by that point, Frazier, besides his epic battle with Ali in Manila, one last grasp at greatness, was finished as a serious contender. Now if during this period Frazier was still an active viable contender for the title, and he had avoided, fighting the above named fighters, then we can say he was ducking them.

| 8/19/04 01:35:34 PM | Fran | Philly | Plc7755@aol.com | 10 |

John why should Joe have fought Lyle. In 73 Joe got blown out by Foreman and needed to re-group in 74 he fought Ali for the big money then Jerry in the summer. In 75 he fights Ali again
Joe fought for money. Jerry knocked off all of those guys for him and he fought Jerry instead. None of those guys were ever mentioned to fight Frazier. | 8/19/04 04:24:19 PM | Timana | Auckland | kiwi@hotmail.com | 10 |

What have Louis, Armstrong, Ali, Monzon, Leonard, Hagler, Duran, and all the other all time greats got in common? The answer is that there was not even a hint that they ducked anyone in their careers.First of all some of you guys said Joe didn't fight Norton because of friendship. Then we find out that it was money. Now some of you are conceding that, "yeah, well, he didn't fight Liston or Lyle, but he woulda kicked their butts anyway." Or some will make the excuse that Joe was just being "carefully matched." (I agree, Forest, some of this is getting ridiculous.)The reasons managers "carefully match" a fighter are because he is vulnerable and beatable against the guy they are trying to avoid. Look, Joe fought some great fights and will always be highly regarded by the true boxing fan. But that doesn't put him up there with the very, very best. He was not truly a great on one or two performances against Ali. Those performances are forever shadowed by the thrashings Foreman gave him and the fighters he ducked.It's one thing to be a fan of someone; it's quite another to ignore the reality of their shortcomings.And Kent, you said that Lyle and Shavers were mid to late 1970s fighters. By 1975 Lyle was 33 and Shavers was 30 and Frazier was only 31. There was only three years difference in age. Thanks, any way, because I have enjoyed the debate.Well then, it seems as though Joe was just very fortunate because everything timed out perfectly for him. He never had to face the power punchers (who might have lifted him off the floor like Foreman did) on his way to the Manila title shot.Lucky Joe. Lucky too because he's being lauded as an alltime great and he had just 37 professional fights. As well, when you start to look at his opponents' records (I did), you realize that they might just have the worst winning percentage of any group of opponents that heavyweight champions have faced, both on the way to the title and while defending it. Guys, he fought infrequently and he fought more than a few stiffs. Go to any search engine and look up "heavyweight boxer terry daniels." Look at his won-loss record. This is who Frazier and/or his management settled on for a title defense? Give me a break. If you're going to put this all on his management, he could have fired them. Frankly, if everyone here feels Frazier's management did the right thing by avoiding real challenges and instead hand picking tomato cans and recycled opponents for Frazier to pound on and look good against---then let's never write another negative word about how Bobick or Cooney were "protected" as they climbed the ladder to title shots. Maybe the only thing worse than a less than world class fighter avoiding live opponents on their way to the title shot is a seemingly world class champion avoiding live opponents and instead facing off against Ron Stander. I will never accuse Frazier of being a coward---he fought Ali with a courageous streak and got up off the canvas countless times against Foreman, but his management acted cowardly in shielding him from live fighters. The upside is that he won the title and defended it a couple times---and got another shot at it. The downside, or I should say "consequences" of this tactic is that we must not put him in the company of Ali, Louis, Liston, Holmes or other champions who took all comers.Some of your comments, Forest, beggar belief, and I'm worrying about the sanity of these guys who think you nailed it one hundred percent. You rhetorically ask whether "anyone believes for a second that Frazier ducked Young" and you then added that Young was beaten by Neuman and Ocasio. The inference, of course, is that Frazier would have been the surest of sure things, given that Young was beaten by comparative bums. But Forest, Young beat Foreman and Foreman thrashed Frazier......TWICE ! Your own logic defeats your own argument. the same rhetorical questions about Frazier facing Lyle and Terrell. How can you assume anything in boxing Forest? Lyle could knock anyone out. There are no sure things. Just ask Tyson about Douglas and Williams. Ask Foreman about Young. Ask Ali about Spinks. And if Frazier was a risk taker we might well have been asking him about Young, Norton, Lyle, Shavers, Patterson, Liston, and the rest of the guys of his era he didn't fight.If Frazier was such a sure thing against all those guys, then why didn't he fight them? It would have been easy money, right? A no sweat pay day. Money in the bank.Fran asks why would Frazier waste time fighting Lyle. Why did EVERYONE else waste their time fighting Lyle, Fran? Crank yourself up a notch, Fran, and get with the programme. The truth is that after Ali 1 Frazier, at the ripe old age of 27, was a shot fighter. There is no other interpretation possible when you look at his career record.|8/19/04 05:27:42 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago||sadmspats@yahoo.com||10|Angelo, I couldn't disagree with you more. Frazier's list of fighters that he fought is like a who's who of late 60's contenders. Save Stander and Terry Daniels who were obvious soft touches after the first Ali fight let's look at the fighters Joe fought. In his 12th fight he was fighting Oscar Bonavena. Look at Jerry's record and check who he fought in his 12th fight. Then he fought Doug Jones and Eddie Machen in the next 2 bouts, both still contenders on the fringe of the top ten. Eddie was NOT finished, I have the tape of the fight and he was still willing and able. A couple fights later he beat top contender George Chuvalo. This was in his first 20 fights! A couple fights later he beats the very respectable Buster Mathis. Then Bonavena again and then he beat our Jerry. Then he beats #1 rated Jimmy Ellis and light-heavy king Bob Foster. Then he beats Ali. Loses to Foreman Beats Quarry again, Ellis again and top 10 Joe Bugner. Joe Frazier was protected? From whom? Who did he not fight that was a viable option from 1967-1974? Shavers and Lyle were just emerging at Joe was winding down. Shavers management wanted no part of Joe, that I can tell you. So Joe fought Bonavena 2X, Ellis 2X, Ali 3X, Foreman 2X, Quarry 2X, Machen, Jones, Mathis, Bugner, Chuvalo- That's 16 fights against top 10 or nearly top 10 contenders out of 37 fights. Joe was one of the LEAST protected fighters of all-time.||8/19/04 05:30:44 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|By the way, Holmes was a former Ali sparring partner and defeated the aging Ali. As for Jimmy Young being a former Frazier sparring partner---by 1976, he would have boxed circles around Frazier. Frazier would have been counter punched like never before, probably for 10 or 12 rounds. Frazier would be moving forward, bobbing and weaving, while eating leather and having his head snapped back repeatedly. By the mid-70's, Young had developed into cagy and tricky boxer with defense and intelligence. Frazier had nothing left for anyone except Ali (and also for a couple good fighters who he had beaten already in the 60's) after Foreman dumped him in '72. I honestly could see Young winning a 10 round fight by about 98-92 (on a 10 point must), in other words, a very clean and easy win against Frazier.||8/19/04 05:34:04 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|Joe---how could you "save for" Daniels and Stander? These were his title defenses for crying out loud. And he took on Foreman thinking that it would be relatively easy---a hulking and awkward power puncher who was seen as being amateurish by some insiders. No Norton.||8/19/04 05:40:53 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago||sadmspats@yahoo.com||10|Ali fought Brian London and a 100 year old Cleveland Williams for the title. Frazier was allowed a couple easy fights after the Ali fight. Holmes fought Scott Frank and Lucien Rodriguez, get my drift. Frazier NEVER thought Foreman would be easy. Yank Durham begged Joe not to fight Foreman, but Frazier thought he had to because he hadn't fought anyone real since Ali and Foreman was #1 contender. Norton wanted nothing to do with Joe for obvious reasons. He knew it would be a terrible match-up. Norton was the protected fighter, not Frazier. Norton always said they wouldn't fight because they were friends, that was his thing, not Joe's.

To say that after 8 March 1971 Frazier was a shot fighter is exaggerated in my opinion. A shot fighter doesn't fight a Thrilla and doesn't beat Jerry Quarry in the way Joe did. He just did need time to recover. Put Mike Tyson in Manilla and after 6 rounds he would be already crying "Mummy, mummy, sigh!". But I agree that Joe Frazier's chin was not as good as Ali's and powerful guys like Lyle, Shavers and Mac Foster might have given him some trouble. On the other hand, Jimmy Old and Whatsmayname were just not powerful enough to stop Frazier's stubborn aggression and pressure and would have lost. Frazier fought good punchers in the names of Chuvalo, Quarry, Bonavena and even Ali! but the only 1 punch knockout artist he ever fought (Giorgio) kicked his ass. And Bonavena knocked him down one and a half times.

I agree that Norton probably ducked Joe Frazier more than Frazier dodged Norton. Still, it irks me that we never got to see either one of these guys stand in with Shavers and Lyle. As I said before, it seems as though both of them, especially Norton, built their careers squarely around Ali. Did Norton ever fight Mike Weaver? That seems like a natural matchup in the middle to late 70's.

Angelo, of course Jimmy Young would have boxed circles around Frazier in 1976. Joe was already gone from the scene by that time, only fighting his rematch with Foreman, a fight he never should have taken. There is no way Young would have boxed circles around Frazier in 1973 or 1974. Joe would have destroyed him.

Timana, you are speaking of chronological age and Frazier was much older in age ringwise, due to the wars he had been in, and used up compared to Lyle and Shavers. Lyle especially as he got a late start in the boxing game because he was in jail through much of his twenties. Perhaps funny how nobody ever says Jerry ducked Lyle and Shavers for rematches. The reason no one can say he ducked them is he was already a used up fighter by 1974 or 1975 and he was not the same fighter he was in 1973, just one year before his ill fated second fight with Frazier. The reason Jerry didn't duck Lyle or Shavers is he shouldn't have been fighting after the beating he took from Frazier and the Norton fight hurt him even that much further. was a non-entity in the division between the years 1974-1975. He wasn't ranked and was figured to be a one hit wonder. It wasn't until 1976 that he became a contender again. By this time Joe was on his way out. Joe Frazier didn't duck ANYBODY his whole career. |

If Joe Frazier retires after beating Muhammad Ali he is ranked #1 heavyweight of all-time right now by many experts. Yank knew that and tried to get Joe to quit to protect him and his legacy. |

Joe Frazier number 1 of all time if he retired after his first fight with Ali ? Are you serious ?

Bonavena knocked him down twice and almost a third time, if my memory serves me correctly. It was the three knock down rule and Frazier was almost gone. Some all time great. Plus, Joe, what you are saying conflicts with Fran and Forest Ward and all the other Frazier apologists. They've already admitted he ducked people. Some are saying that he wouldn't fight his buddies. Others are saying he wouldn't waste his time fighting guys like Lyle. Others are saying that his managers picked who he wouldn't fight. Someone else said it was the money. And someone else is saying avoiding all those guys was smart matchmaking.

That was Frazier's problem. Too many excuses. Guys like Ali and Louis and Duran and Monzon fought the next best and the next best. They had confidence in their own ability to fight anyone, anywhere. Frazier had to save himself up for fights. He didn't fight regularly. He'd have to save up all his hate and motivation.

Joe is saying that after the first Ali fight Frazier was number 1. Nonsense. I say that if Joe had never fought Ali then only pure boxing fans would ever have heard of him. Without Ali, Joe's greatest victory would have been Jimmy Ellis. Wow. With no Ali around, he would have fought a few stiffs and then got thrashed twice by Foreman. Joe would have been a footprint on the canvass of boxing history.

His only two 'great' fights were against Ali....number 1 and number 3. What else is he remembered for ?

Those humiliating losses to Foreman, that's what. Picture Frazier in your mind getting knocked down again and again and again by Foreman. Foreman went into that fight at long odds. All the pundits picked Frazier. And then Frazier ends up looking like a drunken sailor.

The two embarrassing losses to Foreman showed exactly where Frazier should be in rankings. Below Foreman. And Ali's win over Foreman shows us where he ranks. And that's way above Frazier.

Joe was not even the greatest of all time, so where does that leave Smokin' Joe ? Frazier has every right to be proud of his career. His fans have every right to admire him. But one of the all time greats, etc, etc, baloney. Not even close.

How did it happen that Ron Lyle was knocked out in 2 in 1979 by a journeyman named Lynn Ball ? I'm upset ! Did anybody see that fight ? Thanks.

TIMANA: out of fairness to Frazier, let's remember that no other all time great candidate such as Louis, Marciano, Dempsey, or whomever, ever had to cope with a a hitter of Foreman's power. Frankly, with the possible exception of Louis, I don't see anyone of those guys ending up any different than Joe did against Frazier. Joe did look bad against Foreman, but George's punching power has not been seen before or since and getting kayoed by him probably would have happened to the vast majority of men who held the world championship had they fought the Foreman that Frazier faced in Jamaica. I personally cannot think of any man alive who would or could have gotten up six times after taking a pounding like that.

That's where we differ John. In my opinion, Frazier fans try to make themselves feel better about the Foreman humiliation by pretending that Foreman was somehow superhuman on that night, and that no one in history could have done better than Joe did against him. The 'superhuman' theory is hard to accept when we remember that Foreman did it twice to him. Lightning didn't strike twice; it was just a vastly superior fighter exerting his dominance. You put Foreman in with Louis 10 times and Louis would win 8 or 9 times. Put Frazier in with Foreman 10 times and Foreman wins 10. Frazier was in his prime when he fought Foreman. He was only 29 or 30. Frazier only ever fought two of the legitimate greats – Foreman and Ali. He lost twice against Foreman and two out of three against Ali. We can't pick and choose and say, "oh well that really wasn't our Joe on that particular night, and Foreman was a superhuman freak for that night only." It doesn't work like that. Foreman fought Frazier twice, and he humiliated him twice. Enough said. And hence Joe's management ducked big hitters and even a few guys who weren't big hitters. Think about Joe's greatest performances. They were all against Ali. He needed the hate he had for Ali to really perform. I have to say that Joe lacked smarts too. Ali could adapt to different fighters and environments. But Joe only knew one way, and that made him vulnerable to monsters like Foreman. I can't help but think that a lot of Frazier's popularity is because of Ali's unpopularity with the exact same people. I've never met a Frazier fan yet who likes Ali. It's like it's mutually exclusive. But most Ali fans are ambivalent towards Frazier, or at least are in my experience. Winners are grinners I suppose, although for heart and courage Joe was right up there with the greats. I only question his ability.

Frazier retired 27-0 beats a long list of quality fighters and retires undefeated after beating Ali. A lot of people would rank him the best heavyweight ever. Some people say Marciano was the best, Joe's resume at 27-0 was much stronger than Rock's 49-0. Ali was a better fighter than Frazier, however to say Frazier isn't an all-time great is absurd. I already ran down a list of the guys he beat. A more impressive resume than Holmes, Tyson, Bowe, Holyfield, Marciano, Patterson, Dempsey. We agree to disagree, at least we are talking about boxing again.

If Foreman fights Louis 10 times then he would have knocked him out 10 times. Ali beat him by outsmarting him as only Ali could do. The arguments being bought up against Frazier make very good logical sense and if you look back on the records it's easy to say that when all is said and done Joe's legacy took a hit because he stuck around and cashed in on his hard work to the top. But if you saw him do his thing when he had the reflexes to Bob n weave under punches and double that left hook from the body to the head like choppin down a tree, and if you saw the rythmm and determination that he fought with then you to would remember him as an all time great. He could have avoided Foreman but he didn't. The debates will never end because the 3 greatest heavyweights crossed paths with each other. Along with these 3 were Jerry Quarry who made a career knocking off #1 contenders. So if you read the records then you have the opinions that are expressed against Joe being as high as some of us hold him but if you were there and saw him or if you watch the films then you will know why we hold him as one of the top 2 or 33 of all time.

If you read the records then you have the opinions that are expressed against Joe being as high as some of us hold him but if you were there and saw him or if you watch the films then you will know why we hold him as one of the top 2 or 33 of all time.

Frazier's performance against Foreman the second time was dignified. I think that the second and the fourth round were even. George won the first and the third round and destroyed him in the fifth. Foreman is without a doubt a top 5 ever, probably a top 2... And he might be even the greatest.

Personally, I think Foreman would have knocked Louis out. I am not sure if I would have bet on Louis over Liston either. Liston was at his peak in about 1958. But he had to wait more than two years as #1 challenger to get a title shot and by the time he fought Ali, he was six years past his prime. This is not to say he would have beaten Ali even if he was in his prime.

I would say that Clay's wins over Liston - even though Liston was past prime - were sufficiently dominant that Clay had his measure pretty much all the time. Same as Foreman with Frazier. Joe might have had a couple of good rounds, but fact is he got knocked out. The margin for Foreman was so overwhelming (ie. knock out, knock out) that they'd put you in a looney bin if you bet your house on Joe. After all, Foreman turned him from Smokin Joe to Snoozin Joe. I can't take Foreman to beat Louis most times. Louis would box him for the first part of the fight, Foreman would tire. With lots more power than Ali, Louis won't have any trouble finishing Foreman. So safely assume Louis does much worse to Joe. He might end up Coma Joe.

No getting away from the fact that Joe caught our imaginations, especially in those who wanted Ali's big mouth shut for good. However, no sense in letting that interfere with perceptions of him. Some of you thought of him as Hero Joe but against Ali he was mostly Slow Joe. Only joking. You got to see Joe fight in person? You are a very lucky man. That sure would have been something sitting there watching history take its place. I bet you didn't realise that at the time. Down here we watch nobodies fight nobodies. Never get to see a real live contender least of all a champion in the flesh.
with his fingers and saying it will never happen to him. I remember Ali ridiculing Joe Louis, and saying he will never end up like Joe Louis. Ali was probably the most articulate heavyweight champion who ever lived, and one of the most "prettiest". And now Ali can't talk, he has trouble walking (sometimes he is pushed in a wheelchair), and his wife has to cut his food for him. And his handsome face is frozen like a mask. It saddens me at times.I remember Ali calling Joe Frazier a gorilla, and saying Frazier was too ugly to be champion. Well, apparently Frazier remembers it to. Because Frazier is known to do imitations of Ali, where Joe is violently shaking like Ali and not able to speak like Ali, and pretends his face is frozen like Ali's, and then Joe Frazier asks, "now you tell me who won those fights." Well, if Frazier is really doing impersonations of the Parkinson's stricken Ali specifically, I feel sorry for him. After all these years, and considering the fact that Ali made Frazier far wealthier and more noted than he would have been if not for Ali, it's sad if he can't let the hatred go already. Ali called Liston The Bear, Shavers the Acorn, Spinks the Duck---someone else (Holmes?) he called the Beaver. Ali disrespected the legend Archie Moore, claiming "Moore will fall in 4" then knocking him out in the 4th round. We all know the story of "what's my name?" And after knocking down Richard Dunn a few times, an aging Ali started mocking Dunn in the neutral corner by circling his arm doing the bolo punch while Dunn was down. The list goes on and on and on. He was a showman in the ring (acting like he wasn't phased after Earnie Shavers nearly cold-cocked him). And prior to fights, he was a bold, loud mouthed promoter. It did go over the line with Frazier, but that was 33 years ago and as stated, Frazier got rich from the Ali fights and it's probably the most notable reason why we even talk about Frazier. Time for Joe to let it go already. And as far as the comment "Who really won those fights?" I have this to say to Frazier: The only fight he won, 1971, basically retired him. He was in the hospital while Ali was back home. And after that fight, he wasn't man enough to defend against anyone ranked higher than Daniels or Stander, until he stupidly took on Foreman and nearly had his head taken off. Ali got the better of him two more times, especially in Manilla, where Frazier's head seemed to be a different shape at the end of the fight than at the beginning---and finally, a year later, Foreman manhandled him again. So Joe, I'd say to answer that question, Ali won two of three---and while you got the decision in 1971, Ali managed to have a whole career after that, while your only real wins were against Quarry and Ellis. Oh, and let's not forget the final fight against one of the alltime greats, Jumbo Cummings.
because he showed heart in overcoming them. And Corrie is twice bigger than Joe Frazier.

The story you tell is very sick. It's seems that you are congratulating Frazier for rejoicing in Ali's woes.

I don't agree with any of the antics you say that Ali pulled regarding punch drunk fighters. That was definitely wrong. But two wrongs don't make a right. Since he stopped fighting, Ali has repeatedly offered the olive branch to Frazier. However, Frazier wants to keep hating.

What Frazier is doing now is cruel and actually a bit sick. If you posted that story as some sort of good story for Frazier then that says something about you.

I know that you are a Frazier supporter, and good on you for that. But poking faces at people with disabilities? You think that's good? I did not like Ali's politics or his religion or some of the things he did or said. I thought he was one of the top 5 fighters of all time, but not the best. I was ambivalent about him personally.

However, my regard for Ali has grown enormously because of the strength and dignity he shows in dealing with his disease.

It seems to me that some people are sitting back sniggering and getting off on his misery. How sad.

I hope Joe Frazier never gets really sick and people poke fun at him.

You said that Frazier mimicks Ali's face frozen in the depths of the terrible Parkinsons disease and then says, "Who won the fight now?"

Well, Forest, Ali not only won 2 out of 3 against Frazier, but he also won the fight outside the ring with Frazier carrying on like that. While Ali shows dignity, Frazier is apparently carrying on like an idiot (if we are to believe the story you are telling).

Frazier never said that he admires Joe Frazier for that! He just told us something he heard.

Forrest never said that he admires Joe Frazier for that! He just told us something he heard.

I've never said that Joe Frazier is not rated an all time great fighter. Joe Frazier was a top ten heavyweight in all weight divisions. He was a great fighter period. Did he duck top rated fighters...I don't see any one he ducked. Shavers was mentioned. He wasn't a top contender from 1970 through 1975. When it was time to step up Shavers failed every time. He didn't start fighting full time fighters until '72, was clocked by Quarry, beaten soundly by journeyman Bob Stallings and had a draw with Jimmy Young. Although Lyle started fighting real fighters from the beginning he was not a contender fot the title until late '74 three years into his career. He was however a feared man. At 6'4" 220 he was as big Foreman and seamed, at the time, to have better skills than George. Frazier never fought Norton...ask Norton why. Frazier would have killed him, Norton's people were protecting their investment. Jimmy Young the same as above, not ready to fight Frazier. Young was not even a full time fighter until 1974 and had he fought Frazier from '73-75, he would have spent more time ducking through the ropes than scoring points. I don't know why I'm going on, Kent and Forrest have already gone over all this. Was Frazier beatable, of course, every fighter is beatable in one way or another. Was Frazier a great heavyweight, from '67 through '71 no heavyweight was better than Joe.
or #3, I saw one on the web rating him as the best, this is pure nonsense. I think people rate him high based on how they think he would do not on what he actually did. However he did win the title at age 45 he has to receive some extra points for that!

How many fighters in boxing history would beat a 1973 George Foreman more than 2 out of 10 times without going down, going down?

Maybe a 1921 Jack Dempsey, a 1940 Joe Louis, a 1928 Gene Tunney, a 1934 Primo Carnera? Who knows, what I'm saying is he does not deserve to be rated among the top 5 or 6 all time heavyweight champions based on his record as champion. Now in fantasy land a prime George may well have beaten them all. However, he crushed Frazier to win the title, beat down "The King" then destroyed Kenny Norton. That's it. Then he lost to Ali - of course losing to Ali is no shame. Had he beaten Ali, fought the amazing battle with Lyle then destroyed Frazier again with a couple of other contenders thrown in the mix, as champion, you could argue Foremans place at the top. I don't think I could rate a guy who held the title for a year and half and defended the title twice at or near the top of an all time list, I don't care how awesome he appears.

Sense some people are being critical of Frazier's all time standing, then why not check out some of Foreman's flaws as well. Like a lot of big bangers, in the first phase of his career he had a tendency to punch himself out early by throwing too many punches early in the fight expecting to score an early knockout and when this didn't happen, he was exhausted by the sixth round (amazing that in the second phase of his career, at older age and a higher weight, he knew how to pace himself better and had good stamina). George was also very hittable if an opponent survived the early onslaught at the start of a fight. George also couldn't stand the heat, no pun intended about his courage as what I mean is in hot climates he would almost be falling from exhaustion (Zaire and Puerto Rico).

The psychological aspects of hitting George early, as in the case of the Ali and Lyle fights, was a key to having a chance at beating Foreman, some knee bulkeling right hands by Lyle in the first round are examples of this and they made Foreman realize he wasn't in for an easy time so although he still pursued his opponents aggressively, he didn't charge in with wild abandon as Foreman knew there would be payback if he didn't show some caution. By not charging in as much, Foreman was extended to the later rounds where his lack of stamina could be used against him, which he still didn't have because he didn't box patiently behind his jab like he did in his comeback at an older age. My point is that although the young Foreman was an incredible fighting machine, he wasn't unbeatable and this along with Bob B pointing out Foreman didn't hold the title for very long, shows that his all time ranking deserves to be in the top ten, as not many people could beat him at his best, he does not deserve to be at the top of the list. I would put him at six or seven or so, always ahead of Frazier as he did beat him in the ring, twice, who I would put at about number nine.

Now if we could somehow combine the young Foreman with his physical strength with the wiser, more patient fighter at an older age into one fighter, what an amazing fighter that would be! Remember, Foreman had good boxing skills and he always poccessed a fine jab, due to his extensive amateur background, but he didn't always use these skills in the first phase of his career as he preferred to rely on his power to get the job done early most of the time.

Foreman was awesome even in the Chuvalo fight! George ( but not Edward ) was a very tough fight and George Edward humiliated him. As an amateur he won a gold medal as easily as ( or with the same ease ) I eat spaghetti. Italia b Cina 89-52 !!!!! Yao Ming, who ? Giacomo Galanda is the Italian Wilt !
Forest was just being sneaky. Rather than have the courage of making the point of his little story himself, he has it coming from the lips of Frazier. Forest was giving endorsement to the message conveyed in that cruel story. Had he disagreed with it, he would have said so by criticising Frazier for saying it. He could have told that same story about Jerry Quarry, given his injuries. Imagine the uproar. The truth is, Forest is a gutless moron. A couple of days ago he attempted to argue logic about Frazier's career and that was fine. His logic was flawed, however, and I pointed that out to him. For instance, Forest said that can anyone imagine for a second that Young would beat Frazier. I pointed out that I could imagine this as Young beat Foreman and Foreman twice stopped Frazier. My point was that nothing can be taken for granted. But Forest doesn't come back with sensible debate. He couldn't admit he was wrong and he couldn't persist with such a ridiculous argument. So he instead comes back with a childish and cruel anecdote about how Frazier demeans a parkinson disease sufferer by imitating symptoms and facial expression. The heart warming pitch of the story was that Frazier was delightedly taking responsibility for turning Ali into the ill shell of a person he sadly is today. Imagine the hilarity, Masimmo. Frazier shaking his hands and fingers imitating the tremor that the sufferer can't control. Frazier's face contorts into an expressionless blob doing his best to look like Ali when the disease has him fully in its clutches. Hilarious, don't you all think? So, if Forest thought this was wrong, he wouldn't have told the story or at the least he would have told it and then criticised Frazier for doing it. But that's not Forest's style. He sneakily puts it in there so that the ridicule comes from someone else and not him. Masimmo, you don't have to clap and cheer something to give it your support. Just tell the story and don't criticise it.

Forest never quite came to terms with the fact that Ali is admired by much of the world, both professionally and personally. But if he wants to understand why Frazier never reached those same heights, he need only keep repeating the cruel story of Frazier poking fun at a parkinson disease sufferer. It was wrong of Ali when he was a young man to imitate punch drunk fighters. I won't argue otherwise. But it is quite a different thing for a 60 years old man like Frazier to be doing the same thing today. The hatred Frazier demonstrably has for Ali can only mean one thing: he knows that Ali really gave him a whupping and he'll never forgive him for it. Frazier apologists like Forest have the same motivation.

Rather than criticize Forrest, who is a solid contributor to the board, I'd rather stick to saying that if his report is true, Frazier is a sad person, and it's Frazier who is the moron. I'm sure Frazier and his remaining hangers on (all two of them) get a good laugh from impersonating the suffering Ali, except for the fact that 30 years after their fights, Ali is still very relavant—lighting Olympic torches, being featured in multi-million dollar corporate commercials during the Super Bowl, having stars in Hollywood make movies about his life, and the list goes on. Meanwhile, Frazier makes news by being accused of battering a woman. Well folks, that about sums it all up. I guess the bitch wasn't listening.

Also, on the topic of Foreman's career being a waste of talent---I don't agree. Foreman, in his first incarnation, was a hulking power puncher, and he used this ability to its maximum, working his way to the title shot, then humiliating Frazier. He defended against Norton, who was considered a strong challenger because he had beaten Ali, and of course he defended against Ali, who beat him. But Foreman continued to stay busy and tried to get back to a title shot. He tested himself by taking on Ron Lyle, the big hitter, and overcame knockdowns to win. Then, he takes on a guy, Jimmy Young, who clearly had a style that could give Foreman trouble. In fact, I picked Young to win that fight. Though the win over Foreman was an upset, Young's win over Ron Lyle (leading up to the Foreman fight) impressed me enough to see that Young's boxing skills could cause fits for Foreman. Foreman's 90's comeback was exciting and valid. His overall career record and important wins put him right up there with other greats. He didn't have a draw against Jumbo Cummings during his comeback, either.

What was the best left hook Frazier ever threw? Last week when Vivian was late with dinner.

What was the best left hook Frazier ever threw? Last week when Vivian was late with dinner.

If the story of Frazier enjoying from Ali's medical condition is true, Joe Frazier is a very cruel person and I'm not going to shake hands with him.

How good do you think will be Ali's health conditions in, say, 2014? I don't know that much about Parkinson disease. I imagine they are going to get worse, but my question is, how much worse and how quickly? I wish he will be as fine as possible. Ali is, and has ever been, after all, a decent person. Apart from the 2 wives stuff in Zaire, he doesn't sound like a cruel person; even if, I have to admit, I have never met him. I know who Muhammad Ali is, but he doesn't know who Massimo Cini is. He is a little more popular than me. Good luck, Muhammad Ali!

I have a relative with a similar disease to Parkinson's and it is a degenerative illness that only gets worse and never improves.

There is no cure. They shake with uncontrollable tremors, and just sit in a chair and twitch. Smooth control of movement is lost because brain cells controlling it have degenerated. Eventually the sufferer becomes a total invalid.

In the early stages, intelligence and mental powers are unaffected. This causes a lot of frustration, especially because their speech is usually impaired.

They become depressed, anxious, and emotionally disturbed (especially when people mock and ridicule them).

The disease progresses over years, rarely causing death, but rendering the sufferer eventually totally dependent on others for every day tasks. Drugs today can control the symptoms early on.

It is different to alzheimers which President Reagen had. With alzheimers they lose their memory and in the end can't even recognize family.

People can get Parkinsons naturally. It doesn't have to be through getting punched to the head, although in Ali's case it most certainly was caused that way, if we believe what we've all read in papers and elsewhere.

It's not a funny disease, either to the sufferer and especially to the family.

I mean to imply in my post that Foreman wasted his talent, I don't believe that at all. However, if you put both of his careers together, he still doesn't rate a top 5 or 6.

His second career was one of the most amazing athletic feats in history. If fact I think it far exceeds the first incarnation of "Big George". I'm 45 years old and I can barely walk up two flights of stairs, in my twenties I ran 5 miles a day and could squat over 450 pounds. He did an incredible thing. Other former champs fought exhibitions in their 40's and some later in life but they didn't make a career out of it, let alone challenge a man in his mid 20's for the heavyweight championship of the world. As far as Frazier being cruel and mocking Ali's condition, I'm not a "boxing insider" but I did have friends who boxed, both amateur and pro, and they all mocked guy's who took one too many. Cruel yes, Ali did it many times himself. He took great pleasure in humiliating sparring partners in front of crowds and reporters in training camp. He often rambled on and on about how sparring partners were the "lowest form of life". You have to have a serious mean streak in you to be able to climb in to a ring and punch a hole in another human being. Both Frazier and Ali had it in spades.

Yes, boxers do mimick others who become punch drunk (although if you read Forest you'd think it was only Clay doing that). However, boxers do it as competitors when they are young and motivated above all else to win. They are a bit reckless and say and do things they regret - just like most other young people. They have competitive reasons for it. The case with Frazier is much different because he is no longer a boxer. We have a 60 years old fully grown man ridiculing another for being sick and impaired. Frazier has no competitive reason for doing it. His motivation is cruelty. What we have in Frazier is a 60 years old man boasting that he made another human being ill and impaired. He wants to take credit for the suffering. Views about Frazier as a boxer vary on this site from being a very good heavyweight to a legend. But after hearing Forest's story about what Frazier is like today and the way he gets his kicks, we all now know in our heart of hearts that he is a 2 grade human being; a cruel, bitter, twisted type that sits around being a bad sport against someone who beat him. In hindsight, we should all be grateful to Forest Ward for relating the anecdote that revealed Frazier's true colours.

It's true---if Frazier at 60 is mimicking Ali and "taking credit" for Ali's Parkinson's suffering, I suspect that Frazier might be senile, or in the early stages. It's such a bizarre and twisted action on his part, I'm concerned that his mental state is in fact much worse than Ali's, which is more of a physical ailment (Ali still has cognitive ability, but severe physical ailments.). Meanwhile, it seems to me as though Frazier's psychological or emotional well being are sadly impaired, both due to the story from Forest and also reports that Frazier is slapping women around. It's sad if it's true. Yes, Foreman's second career gives hope to all over 40 that they can still turn back the clock if they put their mind to it. I was with some older people (married couples) who watched the night that he challenged Holyfield. Even though Foreman lost, all the party goers suddenly felt like they could do anything they wanted, because Foreman just gave Holyfield a hell of a fight.

I do not doubt that both Ali and Frazier, in private moments, have made fun of each other, even recently. The diff is Ali did it publicly, a clear lack of class he should be held accountable for. Ali is bulletproof here for some, so I'll leave it at that... As far as Foreman, to clarify, I do believe he clearly wasted huge potential, and has been said, should be judged on what he did,not what he had. He should get points for Cooney and Moorer, though he was hardly THE champ at 45. He still rates as a legend based on his performances. I don't consider him top Ten but many do, a good case can be made for George and his awesome power. Thanks again.
go by the old "Could Foreman beat such and such fighter on a given night?" and use that as the basis for where he's ranked, he'd be top five. But I think you're evaluating his career, and as you said, what he actually accomplished, not what could have been. In that context, I still think he deserves to be top ten. He had a good won-loss record and beat a number of good fighters both in his first and second careers. When you combine the two, you get a very nice won-loss record and some good opponents as well. I'm a big Ali fan, but I'll be the first to admit that Ali lucked out when Jimmy Young took Foreman out. That did away with any notion of an Ali-Foreman rematch and I have to say, by '77, after a lot of fights, including the Manilla match with Frazier, I don't think Ali had enough left to defend against the younger Foreman. Ali was able to hold off Norton and Shavers, but I think a focused Foreman, in top condition, would have had too much for Ali. If Foreman had gotten past Young, or not taken the fight, history would have been very different. I think he, not Norton, would have been in line for Ali. Interestingly, in an interview with Bob Costas a few years ago, Foreman said he's not so sure he would have won a rematch back then. He said he was stubborn and stupid and would have made the same mistakes he did in Zaire, trying to kill Ali and punching himself out. Somehow, I think he was being too hard on himself. I think he would have sat back, watched Ali do the rope-a-dope, and motioned for Ali to come to the center of the ring and fight.

You wrote that you "have no doubt" that Ali mocks Frazier in "private moments." How can you possibly be privy to such information? What evidence do you have that Ali is mocking Frazier in private? Answer: you have none; you are guessing. The fact is that since 1975 when they last fought, all Ali's public comments about Frazier have been dignified and graceful. If my memory serves me right, he even praised Joe to Frazier's son Marvin immediately after fight 3. Ali has not said one bad comment about Frazier since 1975. The problem is that Frazier apologists like you don't have the guts to admit that Frazier acts without grace or dignity. Instead of criticising Frazier for his disgraceful actions, you instead turn it around and say that Ali is doing the same thing. Ali's not my favourite fighter, but since 1975 he has always praised Frazier. There's more bs from you and Forest than there is in a convey of cattle trucks. So tell us, Gerry, what has Ali been saying about Frazier in private? Visitors to this site must wonder what type of creeps are regulars here. They read about Gerry and Forest defending the 60 years old Frazier childishly and cruelly ridiculing a person with brain disease. How do you guys get your kicks? Going down to the local spastic centre and throwing rocks at the patients? Frazier's and his apologists are just poor losers. Get over it guys; it's over 30 years since Ali stopped him in Manilla! Show some class.

What are the sources of Joe making fun of Ali's condition? How do people here know what Joe says in private moments with his friends? Was there any press coverage of this or are some of you just going by someone told someone, who told someone, who then told someone? If the source is, I know someone who knows someone who knows Joe, then I discount that information as not being very reliable. Has Joe said anything in public interviews that he is glad Ali is damaged? I don't remember any such statement. Come on folks, show some proof. Too many times people make statements without any kind of proof behind the statement. Forest quoted Frazier poking fun at Ali's medical condition a day or so ago. Sounds like something Frazier would do, given his well documented hatred of Ali. I'll give you a few quotes from Frazier's book soon, too. Gerry says that he has "no doubt" that Ali mocks Frazier behind closed doors. Seems a bit strange because Gerry doesn't sound like he is some fly on the wall. For 20 years Ali's not had a bad word to say about Frazier, so what Gerry says is bs.At page 197 of his book, Frazier mocks Ali's condition: "Well, all that talk of his don't amount to much anymore. He's a ghost, and I'm still here. Now let's talk about who really won those three fights...."

At page 196, "And that sleepy scamboogah Clay - well, everybody knows the troubles he's seen."

At page 197, "Gettin' hit in the head. Now look at Clay. He can hardly talk and he's still out there trying to make noise."Yeah, guys, Frazier a real good person. He's so bitter about losing to Ali that he revels in the pain and suffering that Ali and his family are now going through.And now for a quote from Frazier's own book that gives the lie to what Gerry said. At page 166 in his book, Frazier comments on his son Marvin speaking to Ali immediately after the third fight in Manilla,"When Clay saw Marvis, he struggled to sit up and shake his hand. Then he said, "Tell your father all the stuff I said about him - I didn't meant it. Your father's a helluva man. I couldn't have taken the punches he took tonight."Ali was all class and graciousness in victory. Pity some of it didn't rub off onto Frazier, beaten by Ali in and out of the ring.
Not being a saint myself, nor do I have much hope of becoming one, I ask this question: if Frazier does hate Ali (and I am not sure if he does or not), can anyone really blame him? If I were in his shoes and took the years of abuse he did, I probably would too.

Actually, Forest, I was very patient with you. Go back through the posts and you will see that we were debating the facts. Your logic was flawed and I pointed that out to you. And then, rather than correct your logic or move onto sensible argument, you came up with that disgusting and cruel little anecdote about Frazier. So I called you a gutless moron which, under the circumstances of your cruel jibe, was entirely appropriate. I say it again; you are a gutless moron.

Gutless because rather than have yourself saying such a cruel thing about Ali you put the jibe in the mouth of Frazier. And a moron because anyone who thought that anecdote was clever (as you obviously did) is plainly a very big MORON. Since then, Kent has asked you to source your anecdote about Frazier. You haven't done so. It is becoming clear to someone like me, who only just began visiting here, that you are the king of gibberish. Every site has one. Usually they are not as ridiculous as you, though.

So, John, hatred is good. Ali said some things 30 years ago, obviously to promote the fight and put bums on seats in arenas, and we should hate him for it three decades on. Hate him so much that we poke fun at a medical condition that makes him shake uncontrollably, etc. That is SERIOUS hatred. Has to be much more to it that calling Joe an Uncle Tom. Seems to me that poor sportsmanship is more likely the case. Joe and his apologists never forgave Ali for winning. Never forgave Ali for the way he won, either. Stopped Joe in their last fight. Ouch! And since then the world has loved Ali and Frazier has got no recognition.

The result: the Frazier apologists blame Ali and hate him for it.

No, hatred is NOT good. And I NEVER SAID IT WAS. It is however, a human emotion, in some cases an understandable one. In my opinion Frazier is one of those cases. My experience with that emotion has taught me that it usually does more damage to the person doing the hating rather than the recipient of it.

Timana, since you ducked the question, I will ask you again. When someone disagrees with you, you attack them personally. Who gave you the right to call me names? Also you read into things that exist only in your head. John Gerard, never said or inferred that, "hatred is good." You are not a polite or reasonable person. Believe me that is not inferred from your posts, but rather very apparent.

Forrest has always taken the high road in the debates on the board---and I think we all should. It's okay to think someone's opinion is wrong, and make some strong statements to that affect---but let's not get personal with people posting here unless it's very deserved. I think the real fun of the board is the fact that we disagree on a lot and express it all in a healthy way.

Forrest has always taken the high road in the debates on the board---and I think we all should. It's okay to think someone's opinion is wrong, and make some strong statements to that affect---but let's not get personal with people posting here unless it's very deserved. I think the real fun of the board is the fact that we disagree on a lot and express it all in a healthy way.
I am still hoping to find the articles that stated Joe and Ali had made up but I just have time to pop in during the next couple of days.

There was a short, special series of shows on greatest fights. I think it was called 'When Kings where Kings'. One of these was on the Ali, Frazier trilogy. Bert Sugar was the background commentator. Now, I actually heard Frazier apologize to the Ali family for any hurtful remarks he made regarding Ali's present condition, and any other mean and spiteful remarks he may have made over the years. He said, and these are his words, "To bury the hatchet". I'm sitting here telling you I heard Joe Frazier say this on tv. It's easy enough to check. Call HBO! If this doesn't let Joe Frazier off the hook for his anger, then maybe you guys should find another reason to hate him. I can't but find a sad irony in Joe's apology. I wonder if Ali feels the same way, after all the destruction they wreaked on each other?

Ali has made public comments regarding the feud between them—-and I admit that the comments I've heard from him are less of an apology to Frazier and more a rationalization that he was just hyping the fights and Frazier should have understood that. It's Ali's way of coming clean on what happened all those years ago. And if Steve's account of the HBO show is accurate, and Frazier apologized, that's as much as we should expect. The hurt was deep I guess—within the black community, at the time, Ali was playing on Frazier's "dark" skin and also the fact that he was a favorite of white fans. As an Ali fan, I admit that painting Frazier as an "Uncle Tom" to sell tickets was way over the line. As an Ali fan, I admit that painting Frazier as an "Uncle Tom" to sell tickets was way over the line. But calling him a gorilla (and hitting a hand-held rubber gorilla in the head over and over) was Ali playing around and having fun, like when he called Shavers and acorn and rubbed Shaver's head for luck as the referee was giving instructions. It was vintage Ali promoting the fight and getting attention, and Frazier should chill out about that stuff. I've got to say, just thinking about those fights, and recalling Foreman-Lyle, Young-Foreman, Holmes-Norton—-it makes me sad thinking that not only is the heavyweight division lacking in talent now, but also in charisma and drama. Love him or hate him, Ali gave us the greatest show on Earth for a few years. Holmes did an admirable job of filling Ali's big shoes, and stabilizing the title picture for 6-7 years (We knew he was the real champion.). Now, it's more alphabet soup than ever before, not so much quality and not nearly enough rivalry and conflict in the heavyweight division.

Ali made public comments regarding the feud between them—-and I admit that the comments I've heard from him are less of an apology to Frazier and more a rationalization that he was just hyping the fights and Frazier should have understood that. It's Ali's way of coming clean on what happened all those years ago. And if Steve's account of the HBO show is accurate, and Frazier apologized, that's as much as we should expect. The hurt was deep I guess—within the black community, at the time, Ali was playing on Frazier's "dark" skin and also the fact that he was a favorite of white fans. As an Ali fan, I admit that painting Frazier as an "Uncle Tom" to sell tickets was way over the line. But calling him a gorilla (and hitting a hand-held rubber gorilla in the head over and over) was Ali playing around and having fun, like when he called Shavers and acorn and rubbed Shaver's head for luck as the referee was giving instructions. It was vintage Ali promoting the fight and getting attention, and Frazier should chill out about that stuff. I've got to say, just thinking about those fights, and recalling Foreman-Lyle, Young-Foreman, Holmes-Norton—-it makes me sad thinking that not only is the heavyweight division lacking in talent now, but also in charisma and drama. Love him or hate him, Ali gave us the greatest show on Earth for a few years. Holmes did an admirable job of filling Ali's big shoes, and stabilizing the title picture for 6-7 years (We knew he was the real champion.). Now, it's more alphabet soup than ever before, not so much quality and not nearly enough rivalry and conflict in the heavyweight division.

I've got to say, just thinking about those fights, and recalling Foreman-Lyle, Young-Foreman, Holmes-Norton—-it makes me sad thinking that not only is the heavyweight division lacking in talent now, but also in charisma and drama. Love him or hate him, Ali gave us the greatest show on Earth for a few years. Holmes did an admirable job of filling Ali's big shoes, and stabilizing the title picture for 6-7 years (We knew he was the real champion.). Now, it's more alphabet soup than ever before, not so much quality and not nearly enough rivalry and conflict in the heavyweight division.
these two men did has impressed so many. Ali and Frazier are both human beings. The klieglights of the media can take acts into so many directions. Why was there such a feud? Frazier was deeply offended by Ali to such a degree that his dignity as a man, a black man, was under attack. It is easy to say "Joe, I know what he did to you was classless and beyond cruel, but it's time to move on". We all have hurts we still reconsider. Frazier has the right to regard what Ali did as he sees fit. It wasn't a private insult, it was a campaign to confuse his opponent, sell tickets, and to advance Ali's racial/political agenda. I'm glad it backfired and that Ali still lives under the shadow of what he did... Angelo, you make good points on Foreman. Certainly a case could be made that Foreman is top Ten or better all-time. I just don't happen to agree with them for reasons given. He certainly was a rarely gifted heavyweight who could have ruled the 70's. He fell far short of that, though. But there are several former heavyweight champions in history who did truly dominate their eras. I put them ahead of Foreman, and that's no insult.

Two things I'd like to add, about Ali-Frazier I and about Larry Holmes. I think the correct score was 8-7 for Frazier but apparently a significant minority of people at ringside scored the fight for Ali. I learnt of this from an old boxing mag of my Dad's that was distributed when he attended the closed circuit showing of the Thrilla in Manilla. In an article by Lou Erskin, a judge who would later referee the Ali-Lewis fight in Dublin, he claimed that he had scored the fight 8-7 for Ali as had many of his colleagues. He then obtained the three score cards and came to some interesting results. The scores were 9-6, 8-6-1, 11-4. Had Ali won the last round, he would have got a draw on the referee's scorecard. Though Ali won no more than six rounds on any card, he won ten DIFFERENT rounds on all the cards when looked at together. Hope that makes sense. It doesn't shock me that some judges should have thought that Ali won more rounds, though the overall impression is definitely that Frazier won THE FIGHT. On Joe Krause's old website, he scored the fight even in rounds: 7-7-1. As for Holmes, he was an excellent fighter and would have given any heavyweight boxer a hard time. However, the knock against him is that he doesn't appear to have pushed to unify the WBA and WBC titles. The implication of that is that he never fought Tubbs, Thomas, Page, Dokes, Coetzee and a few other able fighters. In the 70s, Ali fought everyone, often twice. I think that maybe Holmes ranks a bit lower than Ali because of that.

Peace.

I found my thrill on Blueberry Hills...

I apologize if the comments offended you. I wasn't questioning your honesty, just whether the account was accurate (meaning you saw this recently and it was pretty clear what Frazier was saying). I have misinterpreted stuff like this myself and if I saw a documentary a long time ago, might have things out of context. I take you at your word and believe that Frazier tried to put the feud to rest. On a new topic, what does everyone here think would have happened with a Jerry Quarry vs. Gerrie Coetzee fight? I'd have to go with JQ in this one. I'm not sure if he'd win a decision or end it with a KO though.

I would have to vote for Jerry over Coetzee, likely by decision. I believe Jerry's hand speed and counterpunching ability would be the difference in this one. Coetzee had a very good hard right hand and a good left jab but he was not very mobile and even though he too had fairly fast hands, he couldn't match Jerry in that regard. Good fight though, about 8 to 4 in favor of Jerry in a twelve rounder. Coetzee would land some hard shots but if Jerry could take punches from Frazier, Lyle, Shavers, and M. Foster and not go down (except for a knockdown from a body shot in Frazier 2), Jerry could take all Coetzee could offer too. Like I said, Coetzee did have a good accurate left jab and you never know when the cut
I suppose being an inmate and a retired police officer are not mutually exclusive, but it is kind of odd. Then again I suppose you can try and be anyone you want to be.

Unfortunately, what you can't be is someone capable of sensible and logical debate. You've already proved that. You've also proved that you have more bs than a convoy of cattle trucks. That cruel anecdote you told about Frazier and Ali is unsourced by you. You don't say where you heard it or prove that it is true.

Even Kent was asking whether it was true. But you ducked the question. Typical.

Do you think Coetzee was underrated? I think his biggest weakness was fragile bones in his hands, and apparently, he broke his hands many times during fights. I was stunned when he KOed Stan Ward, who I thought was a heavyweight who could really go places in the late 70's. Of course, that didn't happen. I do think Quarry would take Coetzee by out-thinking him. It might be a better fight than many people think. Hey, I wonder when we will resume the tournament?

Quarry vs. Coetzee, interesting matchup. Coetzee was very fundamentally sound, not blistering or gifted but very effective, a thinking puncher. He was very accurate and smart in the ring, his wins against Ward and Dokes did not surprise me. The talent of Greg Page brought him back to earth. He was also tough enough to stick around and get some of those wins, he would probably bother JQ alot. The quicker, tougher Quarry probably does win a decision because Coetzee would not recklessly pursue Quarry, a good way to get a wicked counterpunch in your head. Quarry might be more inclined to be the pursuer, but would find a smart boxer in the bigger Coetzee. Very good match... The personal attacks here are weird and difficult to understand. Also, it is frustrating to be drawn into it. We need to be bigger than this. Timana seems now to be the latest guy to want a piece of everyone. Hopefully, he will settle down after having his fill or will soon make a bitter exit. Either is fine with me... Have we scared off Evren? Massimo, Shannon Briggs was a big guy with cool hair. Micheal Grant with a personality. Never a serious contender. Thanks again.

Coetzee was a good fighter who was on the bad end of at least a couple of decisions. One, a horrible decision loss to Renaldo Snipes, a fight which saw Coetzee knock down Snipes twice in the fight and win a majority of the other rounds only to have the judges give the fight to Snipes. Another one was a draw with Pinklon Thomas. Coetzee built an early lead, I thought he was well ahead after six rounds, only to have Thomas make a late charge to pull even on the scorecards. I felt that Thomas' effort was too little, too late, that Coetzee deserved to win.

Another poor decision was his knockout loss to Page in which the 8th round lasted about four minutes, the KO occurred after the bell to end the round should have sounded. The officials reasoned that both fighters continued fighting, so KO counted.

Besides having good boxing skills, Coetzee also took a good punch as he was only really blown out by Frank Bruno, late in his career.

Was he underrated? I don't know as he looked good in the early going against both Tate and Weaver only to tire and fold in the later rounds to both. He looked very good in his biggest win over Michael Dokes but Dokes was not anywhere near his best for reasons already discussed here.

Coetzee also looked very good in his first round dismantling of Leon Spinks in Spinks' first outing after losing the title back to Ali. Neon Leon came charging hard out of the shoot only to be met by some jarring right hands that put Leon on the deck no less than three times in the opening round.

When you see people like Shannon Briggs or Michael Grant it seems they can whip the wordl at first, but it ain't so. Jerry's career was 100 times better than Briggs' or Grant's. Put these two guys against Mac Foster, Shavers or Lyle and they would be carried out on a stretcher! Boxing is not only a shoe size question! I would prefer Briggs and Grant rather than (or to) Jerry as bouncers though.

Well, Gerry, it doesn't seem to take long for visitors to have their fill of this site. There's only a handful of people who are welcome here. Let's see. There's Kent, Masimmo, Jerry, John, Forest, Angelo, Fran, Steve and a couple of others. So, in the entire boxing world, about ten regulars are here. You all share the same views, almost entirely from the same country, probably from similar backgrounds, and I am guessing that none of you are black (hence your mutual antipathy towards Ali and probably also Johnson).

It's a pity that although this is such a well designed site with the very best of intentions, you guys treat it like a closed club making newcomers feel unwelcome. As soon as one of you disagrees with a newcomer, the remainder run to his aid, either covering over his mistake, or trying to put him in the best possible light. And then Gerry comes in and more or less says 'get lost'. It is therefore little wonder that you guys have such closed minds.

That guy Eric (or was it Ernie?) Laxult commented as he left that you guys are unusually touchy. I'd have to agree. Guys like Gerry don't have many social skills. Also, I'd make the observation that this is more of a fan site for Frazier than it is for Jerry Quarry. You guys hardly ever mention Quarry and instead spend most of your time lauding Joe Frazier or apologising for his mess ups. Further, the only area of boxing you ever discuss is heavyweight. There's a lot of other divisions and boxers out there. Yet, away from Frazier and co., greats like Robinson, Ross, et al never get a mention.

Remembering Jerry Quarry is way down the list. You talk more about the size of feet and baseball, etc, than you ever do about him. Still, if that's how you get your kicks......

Masimmo ? What's my name ? What's my name ?

My name is Massimo ! Or better, Massimo Giulio Leonardo Cini. It's an Italian name.

I was very sorry when Ernie Laxalt went out of the site, as well as when RS and Paul did the same. I'd like to have PEACE on this site but there are too many verbal brawls. This site is worthy of 10, but without the brawls it would be worthy of 15.

Didn't Coetzie have the same operation in his right hand that Arquello had of fusing a bone together with metal. I remember at the time they said he had the bionic right hand. It didn't help him with Tate and Weaver though. He was a good fighter and if I remember right missed the 76 Olympic games due to South Africa not being allowed to participate due to apartheid. He was a good amateur and a solid pro. I thought Holmes avoided him and Coetzie (can't spell his name) was only able to compete for the WBA titles. Thanks Timana for including me in with this great group of sports fans. You are welcome also but you have to leave the nasty attacks I have heard you give on those of us whom you disagree with home. Its easy to badmouth some one from virtual land its harder to make a good point that you base on knowledge........Take care

TIMANA: READ MY POSTS BEFORE YOU MISQUOTE ME!!! Just last week I wrote that I think Ali is the greatest of all time, followed closely by Foreman. So HOW, I ask you HOW am I not giving black fighters credit??? I have for years written that I think JQ was a very good fighter but not a great one. I have give no one credit they don't deserve, nor have I taken anything away from anyone because of their race. I even wrote that I think Liston would have easily handled JQ (and Forest agreed). You put words in people's mouths then build a case against them built on your whacko imagery quotes. You are the classic internet "pen warrior" -|

Jerry Quarry was a great fighter and a very exciting fighter. A fight with Liston would have been a war and who really knows the outcome. That may not be popular with the Ali crowd but its an honest opinion that I have for one of the most exciting athletes I have ever seen.

FRAN: I can understand your point of view. JQ could really pull surprises out, ala Mac Foster and Lyle. But the Sonny Liston of 1959 was not the same man Ali and later Leotis Martin beat. I just think he would have cut JQ up with that awesome jab and reach. Maybe yes, maybe no. I agree 100% that JQ was a very exciting fighter. He is one of my all time favorites.

ANGELO: I was born in 1963, so my exposure to Liston is old tapes—and let's face it, the Liston fights most often seen are the two losses to Ali/Clay. But a 1959 Liston must have been a very formidable fighter. I say this because I have the last Liston fight on tape, versus Wepner. Liston still looked good, and this was 1969 or 1970. He had decent conditioning and could still get the jab moving better than guys much younger. I'm too young to remember, but what happened to Liston after his losses to Ali? Why wouldn't he still be a force for a few years after that? It seems as though you don't hear much about his career from 1965-1970, but he was active, wasn't he? I got to say, I think he would have given Frazier trouble around '68.

ANGELO: Like I said, Liston reached his peak BEFORE he became champion. He was the number 1 contender for more than two years before Patterson was finally humiliated by the press into giving him a title shot. Look at his early record. For example in 1960 alone, he beat Eddie Machen, Zora Folley, Roy Harris, and Cleveland Williams (for the second time). For a very brief period he really was the baddest man on the planet. Unlike Lyle and Shavers, Liston had good technical skills and was a combination puncher with a great left jab. He was the prototype for today's large yet talented heavyweight. Prior to him the division was made up of smaller men, under 200 lbs like Patterson, Johanson, etc.

Massimo: I haven't seen much of Liston too and this is a disgrace as it has to be worth watching. I have seen Liston vs Harris (1960) and Charles Sonny looked awesome and destroyed Roy in less than 1 round. I have seen Liston-Williams 2 and Sonny was great, the 2 Patterson fights, of course the two Ali fights, a synthesis of the Wepner fight and another synthesis of the Machen fight. Anybody of you has seen Liston-Valdes, Liston-De John, Liston-Besmanoff or some other fight? I have read somewhere that Liston gave Mike De John the worst beating of his career. And Mike was a dangerous contender, one of the hardest punchers of the time (Chuvalo said this).

Massimo: Between 1966 and 1970 Sonny fought about 13 fighters. These guys were good and expert fighters such as Big Train Lincoln or raising stars such as Henry Clark but weren't championship stuff. But close to the end of his career, just before the Martin fight, Liston was back in the top ten.

Joe Krause: Sonny Liston circa 1958-1960 was an absolute beast. Sonny Liston vs Muhammad Ali was not the real Sonny Liston. All the respect in the world for Muhammad Ali he was the greatest, but that wasn't Sonny Liston in either fight. It was the Sonny that sold out to the almighty dollar. I don't say these things lightly and I am not prone to hyperbole, but the fix was in.

No way any fix was in on Clay-Liston I. Liston took a beating, plain and simple. He was outclassed and battered by a younger, faster, more determined boxer. Liston's face told the story—you don't take a beating like that to throw a fight. I'll admit that the "phantom punch" in the second fight was more than a little suspicious though. You can offer an opinion that a 1958-60 Liston would have done better against Clay—but without any shred of evidence I think it's crazy to say that their first fight was fixed in any way, shape or form.
Angelo, that is a fair assessment from you. Most people don't think the first fight was fixed. If you do enough research however it becomes more and more clear about how exactly Sonny decided to give up his title. There might be other people on here that know what I am talking about. I should have never posted it in the first place, I don't mean to ruffle any feathers.

Joe hit da nail on da head. Liston took a dive in both fights because da mob told him to. Most of Clay's fights were rigged. Clay never had a victory under his own steam. He was a bum. Joe, to get it so right, you must be a made guy. Krause is sicialan, yeah ? Tell the guys what you're research showed about Liston taking da dive.

I don't think that Clay-Liston 1 was fixed. If it was fixed, why Liston did try to blind Clay ? And why did try to kill Clay in the fifth round ? The second fight was PROBABLY fixed. Even if I am Italian, I have nothing to do with fixed fights ! I don't fix fights.

Joe you have always been one of the more rational posters here and we go back for a few years now, but saying you have evidense that really can't be presented here and saying others know this also(this unknown evidense) does nothing to convince me the fix was in. I also have my doubts about the second fight being fixed also. Ali did hit Liston with a short punch that Liston didn't see while lunging in and while I think Liston could have gotten up before the count of ten and that he wasn't hurt very badly, Ali would not go to the neutral corner and referee Walcott didn't have control of the situation and Liston stayed down because of this. If Walcott had control and Ali had went to the corner like he was supposed to, Liston would have beaten the count. The only evidense I can go by is what I have and I can't go by some shadowy underground characters saying with a wink, "if you only knew what I know!" Since I don't know what they supposedly know, then I have no information to change my opinion. The only credible evidense for a fix being in in either fight is if Liston in 1964 and 1965 was really this unbeatable monster and Ali in the very first round of the first fight showed Liston was hardly that. Heck, Eddie Machen, about three years earlier, showed that a fighter with good skills could at least stay close to Liston, who I might add, was very near his prime. The only fighter among the upper elite of the division Liston was unbeatable to was Floyd Patterson, who didn't match up well with Liston and who would have been beaten most of the time the two of them fought, if not every time.

That a fighter can be hurt badly by a short punch that didn't look like much can be seen in the Foreman/Moorer fight. The punch didn't look very devastating to me but the look in Moorer's eyes as he layed on the canvas and tried to lift his head to attempt to get up, showed that Moorer's lights were out, that he had no control over the muscles that respond to make him get up before the count. I think Liston in the second fight with Ali was stunned in this same way but not as bad as Moorer was against Foreman and Liston could have, as I said in my last post, beaten the count if he had tried. Another tragic example of an incident not looking bad but being much worse than it seemed, in this case fatal, was the crash of race car driver Dale Earnhardt. I was watching that race on T.V. when the crash happened and I had no idea until later that Earnhardt had died, let alone was badly injured. I have seen through the years a lot of race car crashes that looked a lot worse than Earnhardt's fatal crash and often times the driver gets out of the car and walks away, relatively unharmed. The analogy holds true to boxing too as punches may not look that strong but we, the audience are not the people being hit with the punches.

The fact that Walcott totally lost control of the second Ali-Liston fight made it that much worse. Liston was on his feet when the fight was stopped because that idiot Nat Fleischer was yelling at Walcott to stop it because Liston was down for 10 seconds. Fleischer had no authority whatsoever to do that and was there in a reporting capacity only. Walcott never should have listen to him. This is the same Fleischer who said that Max Schemeling would have beaten Ali and Frazier and that either Corbet or Fitzgibbons (I forgot which one) was the second greatest heavy of all time.

I will state openly and honestly one of the reasons I enjoy this site. It's because there are only about twelve to fifteen solid, sincere, Quarry and other "golden era heavyweights." I think it's great when we can freely ramble off on tangents. Like Massimo's shoe size, his theories on physics. Kent's unreasonable, pathetic hatred for the Eagles. I don't even like bascketball, but I still read the posts without comment. To the web crawlers who come here and test the waters. Their trying to see how much control and manipulation they can exercise. Once in a while we'll get some guy on here who you can tell could be a for real contributor. These guys we should encourage to stay. Instead of watching guys like Forrest Ward get so insulted by some double talking nonsense from a crawler like Timina that he feels he has to explain his credentials to him.

I will state openly and honestly one of the reasons I enjoy this site. It's because there are only about twelve to fifteen solid, sincere, Quarry and other "golden era heavyweights." I think it's great when we can freely ramble off on tangents. Like Massimo's shoe size, his theories on physics. Kent's unreasonable, pathetic hatred for the Eagles. I don't even like bascketball, but I still read the posts without comment. To the web crawlers who come here and test the waters. Their trying to see how much control and manipulation they can exercise. Once in a while we'll get some guy on here who you can tell could be a for real contributor. These guys we should encourage to stay. Instead of watching guys like Forrest Ward get so insulted by some double talking nonsense from a crawler like Timina that he feels he has to explain his credentials to him.

It seems pretty hard to make an argument that Liston wasn't mob controlled. Still, even if he wasn't, he was an old, dissipated fighter by the time he fought Ali. I base my description of his condition on two facts. He didn't even know how old he was, he could easily have been forty!!! Second, if he was using Herion at any time in his career, then he was dissipated beyond any hope of being a great fighter. One more comment, and I'll give you guys an eye break. I think this group we have here was exceedingly lucky and privileged to have lived through the Ali vs Frazier-1, and the "THRILLA-IN- MANILLA!!"

Agreed, poor officiating by the referee. It reminds me of Quarry-Frazier II. when Joe Louis was in way over his head and seemed to have no idea what he was doing. Kent, your analogy of short punches compared to Earnhardt's crash makes sense to me. I remember seeing the wreck (which looked more like a bump) while watching the race at a friend's house. It was at the end of the race, so we changed the channel. Driving home, I heard the report on the radio that Earnhardt was dead and I couldn't believe what I was hearing---it was like a dream sequence. As for Foreman-Moorer, that was a short punch but when you watch the replay, it's very clear that the punch lands flush and crisply, right on the button. Watch Moorer's legs when the punch makes impact---they start to collapse as his head jerks. It's a perfect short punch thrown by one of the best hitters in boxing history. As a big Muhammad Ali fan, even I have to admit that Clay-Liston II isn't nearly as convincing to me. I don't see power at the point of impact, and the punch looks more glancing than flush. Angelo Dundee says that where the punch landed is what's important---again, right on the button to put Liston out. My guess is that technically, the fight wasn't fixed, but maybe Liston didn't feel like getting stung over and over for the entire night and took it as an opportunity to take a pay day the easy way. I honestly don't know. I hate to accuse Liston of taking a dive in this manner and I'm not big on conspiracy theories that the fight was fixed by the mob or by radical Islamic groups, as has been hypothesized. It's a mystery to me why the fight ended that way, when both fighters were fresh and a quick "phantom" punch managed to KO a guy who had taken what appears to be far worse during his career. What about Leonard-Duran II? Duran wasn't getting bombed when he quit, he was just getting peppered real good and probably embarassed by a much quicker and better prepared fighter. Why did he quit?

No one really knew how old Liston was -- including Sonny. His mother was no help either. First she said he was born on a "freezing cold morning" then she said he was born on one of the hottest days of the year -- and she was not exactly certain what that year was. Ironically, no one knows the exact date of his death either. Liston was dead for at least ten days when his wife found the body. She claimed she was visiting her mother. When asked by Vegas police why she did not worry when she had not heard from Sonny or tried to call him for ten days she said that no, in her mind that was nothing unusual. Go figure.

On the Liston Ali 2 fight the most logical explanation I remember over the years was that Sonny was panicked about the death threats that were made on Ali and thought if they took a shot at Ali during the fight and missed they might get him so he hit the deck ASAP. It made sense because there was no need to fix the fight Ali was too quick for him and those were the days he could punch on the move something the world hadn't seen in a heavyweight up to that time. Ali would have beaten him easy again.

I have read three different hyphotesis (what's the plural form for hiphotesis, hiphotesies? Does it exist? Boh!) on (or about) Liston's real age. The first one, the most famous, says that he was born on 8 May 1932. The second one, says he was born around 1927, let's say 1926, 1927 or 1928. The third one (I have read this on Internet) says that he was born in 1917 and that he was already fighting in the 30s !!!!!!! I think that this third hyphotesis is hard to believe and probably b=====s??t. Does anyone believe that Carlo Liston was already 47 when he lost the title to Cassio Marcello ?

Regarding the Liston-Clay fights I never thought either one of them were fixed. Which, does not prevent me from thinking that Liston did not give a 100% in the first fight, and maybe not in the second fight too. There is no question about it, the Sonny Liston of the late 50's and up until 63 was a great fighter almost unbeatable. Even the Liston who was fighting in the late 60's was still dangerous. In the first fight Liston was not in shape and overconfident. I forget which round it was. Either the 4th or the 5th when Clay was blinded and could not see. Liston tried his hardest to knock Clay out. He failed and shortly thereafter he quit in his corner. It is very possible Liston's mob managers knew he was not in shape, and that Clay could take him. And as a result made a calculated bet on him with those unbelievable odds of 7to 1. There is no question Liston was controlled and owned by the mob.

The second Liston-Ali fight I felt was legitimate. I always felt there was great similarity with the punches Ali dropped Liston with, and the punches Ali dropped Zoro Folley with. View the tapes of both fights and one can see the similarity, overhand rights. Also, when Liston was dropped he fell face first just like Folley later did. Usually, if a guy is taking a dive he will fall ass first. Also when Liston got up he resumed mixing it up Ali, while Walcott was talking with Fleischer. A guy taking a dive does not get up and start fighting again.

The Liston of the late 50's up until 1963 was a great fighter, almost unbeatable. The Liston who was well past his prime in the late 60's was still dangerous and formidable.

I totally agree that walcott and louis were wayin over their heads in referreeing two bouts of such magnitude.(pitiful)

Personally I think Liston was near 40 when he fought Ali. Wepner said when he first saw Liston in the ring when they fought, he thought to himself "Wow, this guy really looks old"

I find that both the knockdowns in the Ali'-Folley fight were a little mysterious and strange, I can't see them clearly. But from the way Zora reacted to the punches and fell down there's no doubt that they landed and landed hard. Sometimes, when the young Ali' fought a blinking could be enough to miss his punches. He was so fast！

I find that both the knockdowns in the Ali'-Folley fight were a little mysterious and strange, I can't see them clearly. But from the way Zora reacted to the punches and fell down there's no doubt that they landed and landed hard. Sometimes, when the young Ali' fought a blinking could be enough to miss his punches. He was so fast！

Tony- No way Ali fights were rigged, He was a great fighter, his early years he was great, as he got older than yea his fights maybe were rigged. It sounds like you need an English class.

Tony - nothing personal just busting your stones. I was reading some of the comments, And i think JQ could have easily beat Liston, getting cut is always a issue. But i think if there's anybody out there who could beat Liston it would be JQ & Ali. Smoking Joe it would be another war, the outcome ???

Read an interesting article on Tommy Morrison as he is today. He admits that during his prime he used to shoot up on Steroids because all his contemporaries were (this isn't verified). He said that he had to to keep up! I find this most upsetting indeed. He said boxers knew exactly when to take drugs as to not get caught during comission tests! I know that Roy Jones failed a drug test once (nothing was done). What a sad state of affairs. Anyone keeping up with the Olympics - the Americans have only one finalist which is at Light-Heavy. Very disappointing. Cubans have seven finalists. Massimo - watching your Super Heavy representative I was watching the reincarnation of 'Da Preem'. He got a well deserved bronze.

Fran, my heartbreakers for Jerry Quarry are, the Ellis fight, in which during the 13th round Jerry had Ellis hurt from a great left hook and a couple of follow ups and he could have finished him if he had just jumped on Ellis like he did to M. Foster, Spencer, and later to Shavers. It is a heartbreaker because Jerry would have been a world champion even if only briefly.

The second one is the Chuvalo fight in which Jerry is knocked down but not badly hurt. He should have beaten the count and lasted the round and he likely would have stopped Chuvalo in the next two rounds as Chuvalo had taken a lot of punishment. There is no way Chuvalo should have won that fight.

The third heartbreaker is the second Ali fight in which for much of the fight, Jerry plods after Ali throwing one punch at a time meanwhile absorbing Ali's arsenal. This is a tactic that could never hope to work against Ali and at least in the first Ali fight, Jerry was agressive and pressing the action and it is a shame that he got cut. Still, I don't feel the frustration as a Quarry fan that Jerry hadn't done his best that I feel in the second Ali fight. I know a lot of people say Jerry wasn't mentally in the fight because of his concern for his brother Mike, who was brutally knocked out by Bob Foster in the CO feature bout, but this just gives fuel to Jerry's critics who say Jerry's fans are just making excuses for Jerry losing to Ali. Even if it is true that Jerry didn't seem like the real Jerry until Ali stepped up the action in round six in an effort to get Jerry out of there and Jerry, fighting on instinct, fought back hard and tagged Ali with several hard shots only to be stopped while out on his feet at the beginning of the next round. I mean if Jurgin Blin, in a fight that ESPN Classic seems to show over and over again, fought hard against Ali, then Jerry, even if he lost the second fight, could have let Ali know he was in a real fight. The frustration I feel as a Quarry fan about the second Ali fight, I believe the worse fight of Jerry's career, is amplified by ESPN only showing this fight and a lot of the fans who are not very knowledgable about Jerry as a fighter judge him by this performance.

8/27/04 07:37:10 PM|watcher|la||there|2|stevereading you're last couple of posts reminds people just only only handful of people come here. 'cause of fools like steve, thats why. steve loiters around crawling to others like forrest. getta job steve and quit annoying decent folk/|

8/27/04 08:47:51 PM|Angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com||10|"Watcher" I don't agree with everyone's opinions either, but on the other hand, as long as people sign real names and e-mail addresses, they have more credibility than those who don't.|

8/27/04 11:19:24 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||oh, argentina.com||10|Was Wilt a bum? Big Tony will have to pay you a visit ... Sonny Liston is a pretty bleak yet remarkable story. I rate him top Ten all-time. Ali called him a better boxer than Foreman. He ranks with Tyson on the all-time Most Used list. I don't blame Patterson for dodging him or Ali for using his Frazier-style psych tactics on him. He was that dangerous ... Quarry heartbreakers have been very well-noted: Ellis of course, Chuvalo, those are the big two. I'd also include Ali 1, Quarry could have gone 8-9 good rounds with Ali, made a very good showing, and ESPN would not have a second fight to show. Frazier 2 also, it too should have gone longer. I'd also include the Norton fight. Frazier 2 and Norton were both funny choices for a guy coming off a huge 1973. Quarry could have slipped around those two and positioned for a title shot ... Team USA was a poorly selected team, their three losses were very predictable. What happened to USA baseball also? The world has caught up, that's what. The USA cannot swagger into Olympic medals anymore. Thanks. |

8/27/04 05:06:02 AM|Massimo|Italia||4|From what I understand, many of us never had the opportunity of watching some of Sonny Liston's most important fights ( Zora, Nino etc.). This is too bad because Carlo Figliolo was, in his prime, one of the greatest heavyweight the wordl has ever seen. I rate him above Primo Carnera ! He had a great amateur career also. He won the Golden Gloves title in the heavyweight division in 1953. It would be cool watching (or to watch) some of his amateur fights, for instance his fight against Ed Sanders.| 8/28/04 08:43:47 AM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com||10|Kent, I never saw the Ellis fight I hope one day I will. I was 12 when he fought him and although I had heard of Jerry was not bit by the boxing bug yet. I wasn't even aware that they fought when they did. The Chuvalo fight may have been the first fight I saw live of Jerry and to me anyone who saw the fight knows he was robbed. The first Ali fight however was Jerry's to win it was his fight and by this time I was a fanatical Jerry Quarry fan. So for me this was the biggest heartbreaker. The second Ali fight I always threw out the window as a bad move for the Quarry Bros. to fight the "Soul Bros" as it was advertised. Me my bros and father went to the Philly Spectrum that night to see it on Closed Circuit TV and it was a bad night for Quarry fans, Jerry was not on but Mike looked real good until he got hit then the night was over for both Quarry bros they were close and probably didn't anticipate the effect of Mike getting hurt on Jerry. I know when Mike was on the canvas and all of the Ali/Foster fans jumping around the night was over for me too. I can understand Jerry not being focused.  8/28/04 02:49:21 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|I won't use Mike Quarry's devastating loss to Foster as an excuse for why Jerry lost Ali II., but I will say that type of thing can have a positive or negative impact on a fight. Does anyone remember the night Leon Spinks beat Ali? On the card, Michael Spinks was fighting in a preliminary. Leon Spinks watched Michael live, hooping and hollering for Michael, using energy like any rabid fan would—and commentators said that Leon shouldn't be watching because he was getting emotional and spending energy. Michael won, and Leon was energized by the atmosphere. He of course went on to decision Ali in the fight of his life.

Does anyone remember the night Leon Spinks beat Ali? On the card, Michael Spinks was fighting in a preliminary. Leon Spinks watched Michael live, hooping and hollering for Michael, using energy like any rabid fan would—and commentators said that Leon shouldn't be watching because he was getting emotional and spending energy. Michael won, and Leon was energized by the atmosphere. He of course went on to decision Ali in the fight of his life.

It wasn't the fact that Jerry lost to Ali in the second fight that frustrates me, it is the fact that for much of the fight he wasn't doing anything, the fire in his belly just wasn't there. Maybe it was because Mike took such a devastating loss but for whatever reason, he just wasn't our Jerry that night, he seemed to be just going through the motions.

I do think that Jerry likely would have lost to Ali anyway, as he didn't match up well as far as styles go with Ali, but at least he would have let Ali know he was in a real fight. I just hate to hear those British announcers on the tape saying, "it is just like Ali is in with a junior sparring partner," or it looks like Ali is toying with a small boy," or "Quarry is nothing more than a punch bag now." I was quite young also when Jerry fought Ellis but I had a friend who was a little older than me who was a huge Quarry fan and I found out about Jerry because of him and my dad also who took me to the fights. In fact, my dad and I were at the Quarry/Corletti fight in which Jerry knocked out Corletti in the first round.

I have the tape of the Ellis-Quarry fight and Jerry wasn't brillant. Apart from that great left hook in round 13 he didn't manage to do that much. Jerry wasn't aggressive in that fight. I think that Ellis's win was well deserved. Fran, you as a top 3 JQ's fan, wouldn't enjoy that performance. Fran, you as a top 3 JQ's fan, wouldn't enjoy that performance. Yes, in a street fight, I'd go with Duran against just about anyone of his size and weight. But as they say, boxing is the sweet science and that night, Leonard was making Duran look ridiculous in a boxing ring. Both of Jerry Quarry's Ali fights and both Frazier fights were strictly a matter of JQ being in against stronger fighters---I could live with being 0-4 against two of the best heavies of their era (Ali, maybe the best ever). But the loss to Ellis and the loss to Norton, for different reasons, bother me a lot. Jerry should have been able to take Ellis in my opinion. He didn't have it that day and sure, Ellis won fair and square (Though by no means did Ellis dominate the fight---in fact, Jerry was more aggressive and tried to force the action. Ellis landed lighter punches, but more of them and managed to force Jerry to fight his style instead of getting into a slugfest with JQ.). If JQ had a bad back, he should have postponed an important title fight. As for Norton, I think earlier in his career, even two years earlier, Quarry would have done to Norton the same thing he did to Foster, Lyle, Shavers---notch a win. At times, Norton "didn't have the stomach to take a lot of hard punches to the face and head", and that's exactly what he'd have been met with by a 1971-73 Quarry. Instead, we have a clearly used up and out of shape Quarry taking the fight on a couple weeks notice. What annoyed me more than anything is the fact that Norton crowed about the win "I always wanted to fight Jerry Quarry." Norton, you didn't fight Jerry Quarry the fighter. You fought the name, but not the fighter. This would be the same as Holmes saying he always wanted to fight Ali after beating the old Ali. Of course, Holmes never said anything like this. Likewise, if Marciano had the audacity to say he always wanted to fight Joe Louis after beating an old Louis. Norton was so proud of that win. And of course, before his fight with Earnie Shavers, Norton said that he would beat Shavers, who "quit against Quarry." We all know that Norton got taken out in about two minutes in that one!

The first time I saw Ellis-Quarry I got the impression that Jimmy Ellis did dominate the fight. But after having rewatched it a couple of times, now I realize that Jerry held his own pretty well. I think that Ellis won by ( or with )a margin of 3 or maybe 4 points. Jerry Quarry hit him with many body shots which are not that impressive, but are shots after all. But that wasn't the true Jerry. The best Jerry would have beaten Ellis IMO*IMO means "in my opinion".I just got through reading a fantastic boxing novel, "Every time I talk to Liston" by Brian DeVeido a former West Virginia Golden Gloves heavyweight champion. It's a great read!|
| 8/30/04 06:04:37 PM|Bob Cousy|Roma||4||||10|24/3/1969 (3 BME)Jerry Quarry              vs    Buster Mathish: 1.80 h: 1.90
w: 88.9                         w: 106.4THE WINNER: "Irish Jerry Quarry"
THE SCORES: 9-2-1/10-1-1/0-1-1Buster Mathis knocked down in the second round.This is a fight I'd like to watch. Too bad itdoesn't exist anymore !Good night, I have to go to my huge bed. I do think he would not have been as damaged if he had taken an easier route.| 9/1/04 07:40:17 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Taking an easier route wouldn't have prepared him for Lyle, Foster, Shavers, etc. But you're right, it would have spared him from some of the severe physical damage. Also, fans tend to look at a won-loss record more than quality of competition. Often, title fights are made by popular demand. If you're 50-1, the perception is that you are entitled to a title shot, even if the loss is against the only top ten fighter you've faced. I like Sean O'Grady a lot, but didn't he build an enormous winning record fighting stiffs?| 9/1/04 11:29:42 AM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com||||10|I'll add that much of Jerry's physical damage probably occurred later in his career.| I was rewatching the Primo Carnera-Ray Impelletiere fight and I did notice that Primo threw many incorrect punches in that fight. Maybe he should have been disqualified. Jack Dempsey was the referee and he not even gave him a warning !
Why former champs are not good in refereing fights ? Walcott did a disaster in the second Ali'-Liston fight ! Ex champions should not be allowed to referee a fight ! Ray Impelletiere was the greatest.| 9/1/04 10:16:30 AM|Charles Anderson|ark.|ctjjandfam@aol.com||||10|kent, in the second frazier fight joe threw more right hands than he did in his whole career andconnected most of them. don't you think this baffled jerry?| was managed by his father who was a promoter and I think he had Sean turn pro at 15 or 16 I forget but instead of amateur experience he had him fight some stiffs to learn the trade. He moved him along all the while padding his record but Sean was learning and working hard by the time he fought a very seasoned champ in Hilmer Kenty he was ready and had gained what he needed as a pro he fought a great fight and peaked during that fight. Later he proved to lose his ability to take a punch but he was legit 100%....but you are right he had an unbelievable record built up by his father's careful handling of him.....He lost to Danny Lopez by K.O. when they stepped him up before he was ready. Frazier was up for the 2nd Quarry fight he had everything to gain and nothing to lose. For Jerry it was the opposite. Frazier was from a gym where the trainers are scientists when it comes to boxing strategy. | 9/1/04 03:16:53 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Yes Charles, I too think Jerry was surprised by Frazier's increased use of the right hand in their second fight. Frazier's trainer, Eddie Futch, even said it was their plan as Quarry would be looking to avoid the left hook, Frazier's trademark punch, thus setting him up for the right hand. On top of this, when Jerry was trying to figure out how to avoid the right, Frazier would then hit him with left hooks. Ironic in than even though Jerry probably won the first two rounds, I know he won the first but I have never seen the scoring of the fight, Jerry's margin of a lead in those rounds was not very much as even though Joe wasn't landing as much as he did in those rounds as he did in the rest of the fight, I could see the flow of the fight shifting to Frazier as if I could sense that Frazier was going to land punches more often and that Jerry would be less likely to hold Frazier off as the fight went on.The same pattern happened in the first Frazier/Ellis fight too as Ellis looked good for two rounds but by the third, Frazier was in command of the fight on way to a fifth round stoppage.This also happened in the first Frazier/Quarry fight but the change was less dramatic as the shift took a few more rounds to take place but even in that first fight, the scorecards may have been close after five rounds, but Frazier was in complete control by that time.Jerry fought his heart out in both Frazier fights but he just didn't have an answer for Frazier's constant pressure. | 9/1/04 03:41:32 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||same as last time|10|I have met Sean O'Grady and I have spoken to him a couple of times as he is at some of the fight cards I attend.He still appears to be in excellent shape and well spoken so maybe his early padded record saved him from suffering the damage that he may have suffered if he had taken the rougher route. Taking tougher opponents earlier may have made him an even better fighter than he was, but he would not enjoy his post fight life like he does now. | 9/1/04 05:30:29 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|10|Kent: I enjoy hearing Sean O'Grady commentary during fights and I liked watching him back in the day. I think it's a very positive thing that he still has good physical and mental ability. What about Ray Mancini? I haven't seen him lately. How is he doing? I read that Aaron Pryor isn't in good condition. Of course, with Pryor, drug use might have been a bigger factor than head trauma in his downfall. I've also read that Jimmy Young isn't doing well and again, it's also been alleged that he abused drugs. That's really a shame. Young was a guy who after retirement, could have easily become like Archie Moore---a wise boxing elder statesman capable of training up and coming fighters or appearing at fight cards, signing autographs, speaking, etc. Young always struck me as an intelligent guy with a lot to offer. | 9/1/04 05:39:02 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago||sadmspats@yahoo.com|10|I interviewed James Quarry about 5 years ago for this article. It is an oldie, but a goodie. Miss you James.......Mac Foster Vs Jerry Quarry- June 17th 1970by Joe Krause, interviewing the Man in the Corner, James Quarry"I worked Jerry's corner that night by being in the right place in the right time. I was driving a truck and had been in Montreal, Canada. We deadheaded to New York to see if we could just get there to see the fight. It turned out I got my license and worked out that I was able to get in free and work the corner. I was the water person and make sure his mouthpiece was rinsed." James Quarry, Jerry's brother who worked in Jerry's corner that night.As Mac Foster walked to the ring that night there was a hush in the Madison Square Garden. This would be the first New York appearance for Mac, and his reputation preceded him. Twenty-four fights, twenty-four knockouts. He had beaten everyone in his path with a swiftness that could only be called shocking. He had knocked out Cleveland Williams twice in a home-and-home series in Fresno and Houston. Williams was past his prime, but he was still a big notch on the belt for Foster. Foster had also beaten Thad Spencer and Jack O'Halloran in one-round demolitions. While none of the names on his resume were top five contenders, the swiftness with which they were dispatched was very impressive. It had taken even George Foreman five rounds to dispatch of O'Halloran, where it took Foster less than three minutes. His opponent this night would be Jerry Quarry. Quarry was younger than Foster by two years, but experience-wise there was no contest. Quarry had been in with Ali and Frazier and had already fought for some version of the heavyweight title two times. Quarry was said to be nearly washed up at the ripe age of 25. He had lost to George Chuvalo by knockout just three fights ago, and most people didn't like his chances after defeating George (Scrapiron) Johnson by decision. Foster was a 6-1 favorite, and Sonny Liston was so sure that Mac was going to win that he bet his whole purse of his victory over Chuck Wepner. Foster was a wrecking ball, and nobody said Quarry didn't get hit. Sure, Quarry had a good chin, but there was no way he would last with a destroyer like Foster - that was the common thought by those in the know.James Quarry, had this to say regarding Jerry's feelings on Mac before the fight and the fight itself. "Jerry had a lot of respect for Mac Foster. Anyone who can get to 24 wins with no losses with 24 knockouts, deserves respect. What we did know about Mac Foster was he was a mechanical fighter. Technically he was perfect. All combinations came off the left jab. His hands were always up to protect his head. Mac Foster never intimidated Jerry. Jerry knew he had more experience than Mac."This was my first time in Madison Square Garden. I was very excited. After the fighters were introduced and the bell rang, I knew Jerry was in trouble. He had just got tagged with a right hand that rocked him real good. Foster's punches were short, straight and to the point, Jerry's chin. His reach was tremendous. Jerry could not seem to open up in the first three rounds. He tried everything. I remember Jerry walking back to his corner after the bell rang; he had a puzzled look on his face. I asked 'What's wrong?' He said, 'I just can't get to this guy.' This made me mad. I jumped all over Jerry. I said, 'Jerry, remember what we talked about before the fight, about Foster being very mechanical?' Jerry said yes. I said, 'If you don't keep you f---in hands up and start punching to the body, I'm going to kick your F---in ass.' I screamed this in his ear as loud as I could. Jerry turned the fight around going into the fourth round. By the end of the fourth and especially the fifth Jerry was landing that big left hook to the body along with some strong right had shots. Foster's guard began to drop. He had never felt a body attack like that. The rest is history. As it turned out Jerry was the most dangerous of the heavies for Foster that night. Reason being, Jerry was rated number five in the world at that time. Jerry was considered to be on the way out. He had lost to Frazier and Chuvalo. Foster was number one and was favored. This only inspired Jerry more. He wanted to prove they were all wrong, that he was not washed up. Jerry was for the most part at his best when no one thought he had a chance. Just look back on his career. That is what made him so great with the fans-his heart. 'There ain't no Quit in a Quarry,' he would always say after Jerry retired from boxing and the dementia was setting in."We founded "The Jerry Quarry Foundation" for Dementia Pugilistica. Please visit Jerry's web page on the web, www.jerryquarry.com you can view some of Jerry's fights and see what TJQF is all about. Tell us what you think on the letter page. We are making contact sports safer!!! Simply by making the world more aware!!! There was no quit in Quarry that night or any night. Some of the punches Foster landed would have had almost any man looking up from the canvas. This was clearly the best Foster was in his career. The fighter that faced Ali was not the same one who began this fight. With Gil Clancy in his corner that night, he started the fight a world beater, but after throwing his best shots and seeing the other man still standing, Mac Foster became confused and was never the same fighter again. A truly memorable night, a truly memorable fight.

| 9/1/04 06:23:48 PM | max hord | fernandina bch, fla | maxhord@adelphia.net | 10 | Fran, Sean is a friend of mine. So is Tony Gardner who I fought 2 or 3 times. Sure Sean was protected as was Gardner. If you knew anything about boxing you wouldn't think anything about it. That's the way it is. Always has been and always will be. |
| 9/2/04 05:24:37 AM | Fran | philly | plc7755@aol.com | 10 | Max, Someone made a comment about Sean's record and I was trying to explain how he learned his trade in the pro's and that's why he had a lot of fights. I understand that and have always had nothing but respect for Sean O'Grady he was at the time the best lightweight out there. The guys I fought in my first 2 fights my sister could have beaten. I understand how it works sorry if it didn't sound right. |
| 9/2/04 11:29:44 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | I too have nothing but respect for Sean O'Grady. He was a fine fighter, a legitimate world champion who earned the title of "The Champ" that he is introduced as in the Fox Sports broadcasts and he seems like a decent fellow outside of the ring as well. But who knows if Sean's early record actually did save him from being injured in the ring as he may not be inclined by his family heredity to suffering long term damage. |
| 9/2/04 02:42:50 PM | charles anderson | ark. | ctjjandfam@aol.com | 10 | was jerry ranked, when he fought norton? I thought he fought on pure guts, because he looked like he was really out of shape. |
| 9/2/04 02:45:54 PM | J. Krause | chicago | sa... | 10 | Jerry was #5, Norton was #4 |
| 9/2/04 07:27:08 PM | Gerry | Cleveland | jgschultz11@aol.com | 10 | I also have a lot of respect for Sean O'Grady. He does a fine job with the TV fights, I think. I remember him as very, very game as a fighter. There was one match, against someone named Rodriguez I think. O'Grady won at least five of the seven or so rounds it went before it was stopped. The other guy was winded and had clearly taken some shots. O'Grady, a real bleeder, was just gushing blood around his eyes. Some fans thought from the scene that the wrong guy got stopped. But O'Grady really had him that fight... |
| 9/2/04 02:53:04 AM | Massimo | Roma | $$$Alex P. Keaton $$$Richard Nixon n.1 |
Mac Arthur Foster reportedly flattened Sonny Liston in a sparring session in the late 60's. This is probably one of the reasons for which Liston bet on Mac Foster in the Quarry fight. I would have bet on Mac Foster too. He looked much bigger and stronger. But I would have been a fool, and I would have lost my money!

I would have been a fool too, betting on Foster, probably Spencer and definitely Lyle and Shavers against JQ, and I would have ended up with no money! Quarry came up big in a lot of these fights he wasn't expected to win. That's one reason I'd give him at least an outside chance against a 1974 Foreman. Foreman was devastating as his walkover of Norton showed---but JQ might have had a few surprises for him, including hanging around into the later rounds when GF might have punched himself out like he did against Ali. Wow, imagine that---if JQ got the title shot he deserved against Foreman, circa 1974 (and pulled off the upset), maybe he'd have been DEFENDING a title against Ali in late '74 or early '75! Frazier II. was a mistake for JQ! Couldn't he have taken on Bugner or something?

Leotis Martin also flattened "THE BIG UGLY BEAR" ending his aspiration to fight either Jerry or Joe, both of whom he felt he could beat. Frazier had a way of wearing down his opponent with his relentless method of attack. Jerry's first fight with him was actually a good fight for Jerry and it's unfortunate that the fight was stopped on a cut. I think that a Quarry/Liston meeting would have been an interesting one, with Jerry on the way up and Sonny on the way down. I don't, however, feel that Jerry would have done very well against "THE MUMMY" as he probably would have stood toe to toe with him and been taken out early in the fight.

Hi Charles, Ring Magazine had Jerry ranked #3 and "smokin Joe" #2. Jerry was also a 6-5 favorite. There were reports that he was actually ranked second at the time, but all the major listings had Champ Foreman 1-Ali 2- Frazier 3-Quarry. WBA and Ring magazine etc. I have all Jerry's monthly top ten rankings from Ring Magazine. To where from Sep 67 to May 75. Jerry was never ranked under #8 (#1 to #8 respectively). And they only time he was out of top ten was after his second Ali bout. where he actually called a press conference to announce his retirement( 6-months) and thus eliminated himself from the rankings, he could have pulled an Oscar Bonavena and stayed inactive, and his name would have still been in that top ten. Take care?

It is really funny how styles make a fight. Jerry handled Foster, lyle, shavers with relative ease while Ali had trouble with all three. But Ali had very little trouble with Jerry. I think Foreman/Quarry would have been a war as long as it would have lasted. Sorry it never happened. Happy Labor Day and continue to remember my son and other soldiers in Iraq.

Charles: Let's not only remember your son and the other men and women fighting for us, but let's honor them and pay tribute - let's say thank you to them. They've answered the call and are bravely putting it on the line for all of us back home. You have a lot to be proud of.

Charles, my heart and prayers are with your son in Iraq and also with all of the others who are serving in our armed forces. May they come home safely with Godspeed as soon as possible. Special thanks to those who are serving or have served as they are doing something I have never done and they are greatly appreciated!

Gerry, do you really believe that this was the appropriate moment to interject with your own personal slant on the Iraq war? The best wishes of everyone was offered free of political agendas and biases, but you had to go and breach that goodwill. For your information, our soldiers believe that they are in Iraq for an honorable cause. They have removed a tyrant who slaughtered, raped and tortured hundreds of thousands of innocent civilians. He wiped out entire Kurdish villages with chemical weapons, slaughtered the Marsh Arabs and ruined the surrounding environment, fired chemical weapons on neighbours Iran, and invaded Kuwait. Saddam plotted to kill President George Bush, he paid $25,000.00 to the families of suicide bombers slaughtering innocent Jews, and he was happy that 9/11 happened. So, Gerry, pay our gallant soldiers the respect of keeping your political beliefs out of the sincere best wishes that everyone is wishing them. You could have just wished them the best, but, no, you had to come in with your political agenda. Isn't it enough that unemployed social welfare lunatics with the same beliefs as you protest every other day throwing marbles under the hoofs of police horses and disrupting workers going to and from work. Come on Gerry, you are undoubtedly the most ignorant person visiting this site. Go hug a tree or something.

I agree with Jerry. Our soldiers shouldn't be over there. Saddam wasn't a danger to us whether or not he was killing and torturing his own people and neighbours. The hell do we care. Let's look after our own and stuff everybody else. It was only about oil anyway. Don't let 'em silence you Jerry. God bless our soldiers but stuff the politicians who sent 'em there. Come on John Kerry, win, win, win! One, two, three, four, stop the bloody Iraq War.
Alex P. Keaton is right, Richard Nixon was the greatest!! Vote Republican! On the other hand, Steven and Elise Keaton were wrong :-)!

What a shock. I thought this was a boxing site but Gerry has us talking politics and Kent says that it okay. Yes Massimo, Richard Nixon was a republican. And JFK wasn't. JFK was the guy who got us into the Vietnam War. He was also the guy responsible for the Bay of Pigs fiasco. He had more stuff-ups than Nixon. But he made good speeches, pretended to be kind to the blacks, and in Gerry's world that makes him okay. Instead of actually doing something, like George W. is doing to save the masses in Iraq, we should just utter kind words like JFK, Clinton, and now Kerry. And most importantly be against anything the other side wants to do. George W. says white, so Herman Munster says black. That's good policy, democrat style. Fire cruise missiles into sand dunes like Clinton did. Good policy. But save the masses, and try and do something, like in Iraq, and Gerry gets so shook up that his rug lopsides on his dumb looking head. Way to go Gerry.

Richard, we sometimes get off on a tangent and that is OK. Remember I am not saying I agree or disagree with what Gerry said, just that he has a right to say it as you have a right to say what you said. We have always had freedom of expression hear and I don't want to see that stop. Of course there are times when we try to steer the conversation back to boxing if it is getting too personal or lasting too long but this topic hasn't reached that point yet.

I guess some opinions are ok and some are not, even though they are all opinions. What kind of thinking is that again? Not American thinking. I didn't even mention the coming election. I didn't even mention the candidates. What I did mention is the FACT that this country is very divided on the purpose of this war. There are some who cannot deal maturely with that reality. There are some that cannot even discuss the current state of politics without reducing themselves to playground children hurling baseless accusations and insults. Richard and Angelo show again their 7th grade view of America, and prove me right. Again. I have the right to rebut those who submit comments on our American fighting men currently abroad, and I've done that. If you want to stick to boxing, the original purpose here, I'll do that too. And, unlike some, I can do it without resorting to childish insults that would bring more insult to me than my intended target. Best Wishes for a happy Democratic Labor Day to all of you.

I have checked in here a few times recently, and am surprised to see some of the bashing personal stuff being put in here. The internet is a drag that way I guess. I like the Quarrys and have learned some cool things about their time, the men they boxed against. Opinions are good, but insults are stupid, guys. I'll check back again. But if this is what you guys want to do here, make stupid insults against people you don't really know, then I can read about Jerry Quarry and his opponents somewhere else. I hope that doesn't sound mean, thanks.

Gerry, it seems that I must explain to you why you upset some of us. People expressed non-partisan sentiments wishing our soldiers their heartfelt thanks and prayers. And then you wrote, "What those soldiers are doing over there is a matter of opinion. As a vet, my heart goes out to them. There have been 843 dead since "Mission Accomplished." I'll tell you how people interpret what you wrote, Gerry. You imply that there are no good reasons why our soldiers are in Iraq and that they are not fighting for a good and legitimate cause. Gerry, but why express it to a man whose son is fighting over there? You were telling that man that his son is risking his life for a nothing cause. As a vet, Gerry, you must realise how insulting that is. It is the same sentiment that had such a detrimental effect on our vets from Vietnam. It is an ignorant and totally insensitive thing to write to a soldier's father, whether or not you believe it. Further, you said that "there have been 843 dead since "Mission Accomplished." Once again, what an insensitive thing to say. Someone whose son or daughter are one of those 843 read you making political mileage out of their deaths to have a whack at President Bush.

People were sympathizing with Charles and offering their support. They weren't trying to engage him in a political debate. It is not an issue of whether or not you are entitled to have an opinion, Gerry. It is an issue as to it being an inappropriate and insensitive moment to express it to a man worried silly about the safety of his soldier son. Also, some Italian named Massimo entered the debate criticizing Richard Nixon. Yes, Massimo, you are right in (sarcastically) noting that President Nixon was a republican. But Benito Mussolini wasn't a republican and I think we can safely say that President Nixon was much better for humanity than Italy's fascist dictator who invaded Ethiopia, Spain, and Albania before fighting with Hitler in WW2. Trust me Massimo, Nixon was a much better guy than Mussolini!

Personally, I don't know why Nixon is so widely demonised. Sure, he told lies and there was Watergate. But fibbing wasn't patented by the republicans. After all, Clinton the democrat was a proven liar, wasn't he? You anti-war guys like Gerry should remember something else. JFK got us into the Vietnam War. But it was Nixon who started getting us out of the mess JFK created. It seems to me that guys like Gerry don't understand who the real enemies are. The enemy, Gerry, are the guys trying to kill you and that isn't the republicans.

I'll tell you something else Gerry. We tried to stay out of WW2 and got criticized for it before we got bombed in Pearl Harbour. We tried to stay out of a war on terrorism too, while Clinton and others appeased those who repeatedly attacked us. The result of that weakness and appeasement was 9/11. And when someone like President George W. finally has the guts to say enough is enough, guys like Gerry criticize him. Attacked if you do and attacked if you don't.

| 9/6/04 03:59:11 AM| Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Angelo, I agree. Richard is way off base comparing Kerry to Herman Munster. Kerry is much more like Lurch. YOU RANG? URRRRRRRRRR! Kevin "McFrankenstein" McCale is much more like Herman M. Any Boston Celtic fans out there?|
| 9/6/04 04:50:58 AM| Noam|Miami||noamc@aol.com||||10|Wow! Can I score this site a 20? Here I am preparing an assignment for college on the evolution of commercialism in sport after the second world war, checking up on the histories of Ali and his opponents etc, and I chance upon this full-blown debate republican v democrat. Can I add my dime's worth? It's always struck me that democrats portray themselves as educated achievers whilst lambasting republicans as dumb ass warmongerers. I checked history post WW2 to test whether this is true...JFK (democrat). Born rich. Best known for his links to the mob and his affair with Marilyn Monroe and anyone else with nice hooters. Responsible for the Bay of Pigs disaster. Wonderful speechmaker who promised plenty but delivered little. His assassination, more than anything else, made him a legend.Johnson (democrat) The master brain who escalated American involvement in the Vietnam War after the Tonkin Gulf incident.Nixon (republican) Responsible for withdrawal of US troops from Vietnam. Forged new links with China. Got caught doing what every politician did since Christ wore shorts......telling lies and covering-up.Ford (republican) Gave amnesty to those who resisted draft in Vietnam War.Carter (democrat) Weakness and indecisiveness led to Iranian seizure of US Embassy and the taking of hostages in Iran. Ordered failed rescue attempt. Underachiever of gobsmacking proportions. Reagan (republican) Released US Embassy hostages in Iran. Brought to an end the Cold War by defeating communism freeing millions in Eastern Europe. Forged enduring alliance with Russia's Gorbachov. Bush (republican) Deposed the murderous tyrant General Noriega in Panama. Masterminded allied success in the first Gulf War. Clinton (democrat) Indecisiveness and weak responses on terrorism exposed US to repeated attacks. Vanguard of his presidency involved fights against impeachment and perjury charges instead of concentrating on terrorism. Molested interns more than he did Usama. Most enduring legacy is a seminal stain on a dress. George W. Bush (republican) Restored dignity and discipline to White House after Clinton sexual debacle. Defeated oppression in Afghanistan. Ousted one of histories most violent mass murderers in Saddam Insane. Directed terrorism away from US mainland by fighting it in Iraq. Has taken affirmative action to spread freedom throughout the world. By the way, it was Lincoln (republican) who ended slavery and Truman (democrat) who dropped the Big Ones on Japan. Democrats escalated wars, used weapons of mass destruction, forged links with the mob, and spent more time fighting impeachment and molestation charges than they ever did against the world's baddies. Democrats like to pretend that they are peacemakers, but the facts show otherwise. And it was Theodore Roosevelt (our youngest president) who got the Nobel Peace Price for ending the Russo-Japanese War. It was republicans who ended the Vietnam War and gave amnesty to draft dodgers. Republicans ended the Cold War and defeated Communism freeing millions in Eastern Europe. Republicans freed the Iran hostages. Republicans freed Kuwait and then the Afghans under the Taliban. Republicans freed the Kurds and Iraq from Saddam. If we score it as a fight, gentlemen, it is the republicans by knockout round 2. Yet guys like Gerry vote democrat. Go figure. For what it's worth, maybe Gerry prefers Kerry because he is for homosexual marriages.

Democrats escalated wars, used weapons of mass destruction, forged links with the mob, and spent more time fighting impeachment and molestation charges than they ever did against the world's baddies. Democrats like to pretend that they are peacemakers, but the facts show otherwise. Also, if Clinton did not go after Osama Bin Laden as much as he could have, historically, 911 had not happened, which changed everything. Before this, our government did not have a policy of dealing with non state sponsored terrorists. If you don't believe me, do some research and you will find that Ronald Reagan, the so called tough guy who everyone thinks knew how to deal with terrorists, did nothing when non state sponsored terrorists sent in a suicide bomber into the marines barracks at the Beruit, Lebanon airport, killing about 240 U.S. marines as they slept. Reagan, who dealt correctly later on when terrorists linked to Libya, blew up a nightclub in Germany, killing Americans among others, by staging bombing raids against the Libyan capital, did nothing, I REPEAT DID ABSOLUTELY NOTHING!! to deal with the groups Hamas or Hezzbollah or whoever claimed responsibility for the act, which was about the third such attack in Lebanon against American targets or targets of our allies around that time 1983. No one not even Reagan's biggest supporters can answer the question that Reagan let terrorism get away with murdering our servicemen and his response was to pull the troops out of Lebanon, in effect Reagan turned tail and ran! If Carter or Clinton had done this, they would have been roasted alive by the very conservatives who say nothing about Reagan's biggest foreign policy failure, the marines' deaths in Lebanon. Most people seem to remember Reagan as a very effective president when it comes to foreign policy and there are other examples where this is true but not in the Lebanon case. I would also say that both republicans and democrats share in the blame for the bombings that happened on Sept 11, 2001 as even though a lot of the policies in place were carry overs from the Clinton years, it happened under W. Bush's watch. But in fairness to both parties, I doubt anyone ever thought that hijackers would use planes as weapons of mass destruction. This is something that had no historical background to foresee it happening. By the way folks, I am a lifelong democrat who has not voted for my party's nominee since 1992 and I am not voting for Kerry this year for reasons I don't want to go into. I will likely vote third party as I did in both 1996 and 2000.

Have been sleeping off and on tonight, a little restless but I am up again for a little while. I would like to add one more example of a failure that the republicans don't like to talk about when it comes to Reagan. My point in doing so is you can't just point out democratic failures while ignoring republican failures as if republicans are always the knights in shining armor while the democrats are always screwing things up as this is not true as both groups can at times screw things up. Again if Carter had done this, the conservatives would have never let anyone forget it but they are largely silent about Reagan doing it. Under Reagan's watch, nine people were held hostage in the middle east for over three years, longer than the sixty or so that were held in Iran under Carter. Reagan's response to get some of them out was to funnel weapons sales to Iran through Israel with some of the funds illegally going to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua. Carter's arms exchange with a country hostile to the United States was a deal that was in fact an arms for hostages exchange with a country hostile to the United States. True as I said in my last post, Reagan can take credit for foreign policy successes but not everything he did worked. Things like telling Gorbachev to tear down the Berlin wall, which actually happened a few years later under H.W. Bush. Reagan can also take credit for outspending the Soviet Union in an out of control arms race, a questionable tactic that ran up huge budget shortfalls but was effective in contributing to the fall of the Soviet empire because the Soviets couldn't keep up and it ended up destroying the Soviet economy but very well could have destroyed ours as well.

In closing, I would like to remind people again that while the failed mission to rescue the Iranian hostages ordered by President Jimmy Carter killed nine U.S. servicemen was a fiasco that everyone remembers, about 240 servicemen died in Reagan's failed mission in Lebanon from a suicide bomber. A mission I might add was under the direction of the U.N and was for the purpose of escorting the PLO out of Lebanon after repeated skirmishes with Israel, something a lot of republicans complain about, following the orders of the U.N., yet Reagan did exactly that and no one seems to remember it happened. But everyone remembers Carter's failed rescue attempt just like it was yesterday. Last I heard, 240 troops being killed was more than 9 being killed.
anything but since 9-11. Going back to what we DO need: A strong leader who understands that we were the victims when the twin towers fell, and regardless of the political climate leading up to the terrorist act, 3000 people (INNOCENT AMERICANS) died at the hands of people who now must pay the price. You can't reason with groups/nations who cooperated for that terrorism and continue to associate for more of these acts. There's no negotiating or reasoning with any of them---it's time to exterminate the people responsible and destroy the places they train and the nations who harbour them. It's now about survival. Domestically, I think President Bush inherited a recession and has taken steps to slowly get us out of that. Also, he was met with 9-11 and in my view, acted appropriately to try to disrupt the terrorists' plans for more attacks. There were compelling reasons to remove Saddam from power and I think it was justified, though I agree that the post victory occupation has been more difficult than the administration thought it would be---however, Kerry seems to be the quintessential Monday morning QB on every damn issue he talks about. He reminds me of the Brett Favre commercial when (AFTER THE FACT) he talks about how he would have done things differently. Now of course, BEFORE the fact, you didn't hear from him and in fact he voted with the President---but afterwards, he's identified where things could have gone better and NOW claims how he would have done it differently. Not only is this annoying, but it's also dangerous in a leader. You need someone who is clear about where he stands, his plans and his vision. Someone who is stable and sincere. For the most part, I think we have that in Bush, and clearly we would NOT have that with his main opponent. But to get back to what started this all, and turned JQ's site into a political show, the men and women serving deserve our deepest gratitude, and by all means, they have mine. Yes, we can all be patriotic and disagree on whether to go to war or not---but to the man on this board who has a son over there now, I say that he IS fighting for something important. Your son is part of an effort that if it goes well, will change the balance in the Middle-East---will give democracy to millions of people who have suffered---will end up, in the very long run, giving us a better world. None of this could ever be accomplished without your son and his units laying it on the line. With our prayers, please let him return safely. Know that he IS there for a noble reason. These people are the best our country has, and he's one of them. | 9/6/04 11:03:54 AM| Kent| same as last || same as last@ || || 10 Angelo, I agree that Bush and Cheney show better leadership qualities than either Kerry or Edwards but although I will not be voting democratic this time, I will not vote republican either for reasons I have that I don't want to clutter up this page too much with. Kerry and Edwards show poor leadership qualities by voting yes to give authority for Bush to go to war with Iraq when it appeared it was the popular thing to do but then saying they would not have voted that way when the public is getting a little uneasy with how the war effort is going. It is as if they are playing politics with national security and it is too important an issue for anyone to do so. I agree with Senator Miller, who spoke at the republican convention that our party's leadership has lost touch with what is important. I am still going to remain a democrat but I am still waiting for a strong democrat like Truman or F. Roosevelt, or even JFK but Kerry and Edwards aint it. One thing we agree on is we want our troops to get home safely and while initially I was against our going into Iraq once the decision was made to do so, the debate was over and we needed to and still need to get behind our troops and our president regardless of what party he is from.  GOD BLESS OUR MILITARY PEOPLE WHEREVER THEY MAY BE SERVING! | 9/6/04 11:55:02 AM| Massimo| Roma, Italia| fratelli d' Italia.com | || || 10 | Richard 1- When the hell did I criticize Nixon ? I was only joking around on the fact that I liked very much a TV series named "family ties" in which there was Michael J. Fox who played a Republican named Alex P. Keaton. I don't know very well what Nixon did. I'm Italian and I was really very young when Nixon was around (I was born in 1972). I agree that Benito Mussolini was a piece of crap and that we Italians acted like shit in WW2, but Italy is still a great country. We are a small country but we have produced a good part of the civilization. Galilei was Italian, Fermi was Italian, Michelangelo Buonarroti was Italian, Cristoforo Colombo was Italian, Leonardo Da Vinci was Italian, Dante Alighieri was Italian, Giacomo Leopardi was Italian, Erminio Spallia was Italian, Giuseppe Verdi was Italian, Primo Carnera was Italian, Giacomo Puccini was Italian ... How much time I have (or got)? VIVA L'ITALIA, for God's sake!

Another thing: Antonio Meucci was the real inventor of the telephon, Graham Bell was only a bum who stole the invention. Antonio Meucci was Italian. Anyway, USA is a great country that I sincerely love.

Reagan's time was marked by far more globally important issues such as ending the Cold War, defeating communism, forging a great alliance with Gorbachov. The failures you mention are relevant and terrible, but in the context of the times, not quite as significant. With guys like Carter we have to speak of their failures because they didn't have more relevant successes. It is the losses that stand out, not the wins. Democrats have lost their way. They are reactive, not proactive. They look for ways to appease voters with gimmicks and stunts that will do no good, rather than showing the courage to suggest unpopular policies capable of solving the problem. Look at Clinton. He had the perfect opportunity to achieve and solve. The Cold War was over. Communism was defeated. There was no arms race. But like JFK he couldn't keep Charlie in his pants and his whole presidency is characterized by scandals and seminal stains. Clinton took his eye off the ball and rubbish like Usama and radical Islam flourished enough to eventually challenge us.

George W. has had to play catch-up during his first term, fixing the problems others left him, yet we are in a pretty good position. We have lost nearly 900 brave soldiers in Iraq and it is terrible and they can never be replaced. But it is wrong to say that we have another Vietnam where we lost 56,000. George W. has shown leadership. He is prepared to make electorally unpopular decisions because he thinks it is the right thing to do. He has had the courage to take the fight to our enemies in their homelands. And he has not been frightened to confront our traditional allies to compel them to pull their weight in helping us after decades of not doing so. He also exposed the United Nations for the elitist club that it really is. Our country more than any other supports the UN but, until recent years, no one had the guts to challenge it to do its job (as George W. now has done). To the weak like France and Spain, we now know that they cannot be relied on. George W. has made the world much more truthful because we all know where everyone stands on foreign policy and terrorism.

Kerry stands for flip flopping. One minute he was for the Iraq War, the next minute against it. Last year he said there were weapons of mass destruction, but this year he accuses George W of telling lies for also saying that there was. Kerry agreed with the Vietnam War, and then he was protesting with Jane Fonda against it. It makes me dizzy. Of course, dunces like Kerry attract other dunces and November will be a litmus test as to our nation's intelligence. We will know how many stupid people we have by counting the Kerry votes.
more famous hostages under Carter. Even if there were less of them under Reagan.

Also, if Clinton wasn't aggressive enough in pursuit of non-state sponsored terrorists, those such as Al Qaida, who could not be linked completely with one country or another, he was following the tradition set by Reagan in not pursuing the terrorists who killed our marines in Lebanon.

As you can see, I am not a big Reagan fan and the main reason is I have never forgotten those marines and by blood boils when people start talking about how tough Reagan was on issues like terrorism.

Come on Reagan fans, give me a reason to think that when he said, "we don't negotiate with terrorists," he was really saying, "no, we run from them instead!

I do hope we can get back to boxing though as I don't want us to scare off the newcomers with all of this political talk.

By the way, where is Evren? I hope he returns so we can resume our tournament.

Every fighter has a best performance of their career. A fight where they beat the odds, or fight at a real high level. The following is what I would think is the best performance of the fighters career. Based on opponent and quality of level.

Muhammad Ali-George Foreman
Joe Frazier-Muhammad Ali I
George Foreman-Joe Frazier I
Ken Norton-Muhammad Ali II
( I know he lost)A little reasoning on this one. Norton peaked for this fight. Ali gave no credit to Norton for the first fight, and was in tip-top prime shape for this one. He was still close to his peak and Norton was at his best this night.

Jerry Quarry- Ron Lyle Earnie Shavers- Muhammad Ali
Larry Holmes- Ken Norton
Ron Lyle-Earnie Shavers
Jimmy Ellis-Oscar Bonavena
Jimmy Young-George Foreman
George Chuvalo-Jerry Quarry
Oscar Bonavena-Joe Frazier II
Floyd Patterson-Ingo II

Which ones aren't Italian, Massimo?

I admit that we Italians have some little flaws such as Mafia, Camorra, 'Ndrangheta etc, but we are among the best on Earth (not the best) for culture, beauty and food. Visit Venice and you will understand what I mean. I'm sorry, but when you are so great it's hard to be humble! I don't know some of the guys you mentioned: Fratiano, who? Gallegos, who?

Who is Tony Dago? A sculptor? Even Alfred Delvecchio was from Italy, at least in "Happy Days". Eeeeh gia', gia', gia', gia'!

George Chuvalo-Jerry Quarry
As much as I admire "THE WASHERWOMAN", I believe Jerry's problem was well underway at that time. It was a great fight for George, as he had not taken out any top contenders, with the possible exception of Manuel Ramos. (A lot of fans felt that he defeated Ernie Terrel, but I guess the fix was in on that one.)

Ali/Foreman was a great moment and would have been that much greater if Ali had permanently retired after that fight.

Say what you want about Rock Marciano, but the Brockton Block Buster, was the only one smart enough to know when to quit. (I might include Lewis if he STAYS retired.)

What's the latest story on Joe Mesi?

Richard, I didn't say anything to Charles except I hope his kid makes it back and that I root for all the soldiers over there to do the same. If you could read, you'd know that. I did address the next guy who said what he thought they were over there fighting for, and that clearly is a matter of opinion. If you don't want that discussed, don't post it. Your ridiculous rant after that, and your thin grip on history, show you lack the reason for intelligent political discussion. JFK and his brother were shot... trying to end the Cold War which Vietnam was a part of. Did they start Vietnam, yes. Were they also trying to end it, yes again. Nixon, on the other hand, escalated Vietnam and had more Americans killed on his watch than any other Vietnam president by far. If he was trying to end Vietnam, why did it take six years for him to do it? Because, as the Pentagon Papers clearly showed, he wasn't trying to end it. But don't let those facts stop your infantile insults. While facts here are few and far between, except for boxing in some cases, the lot of you do seem to have a lock on bigotry. What's next, Rich, blacks? Will the next black guy who disagrees with you get the Klan card? You guys stain the spirit of this site a great deal. Must be a conservative California thing. I'll wait for recess to end, then maybe we'll get back to boxing. Go ahead, call Kerry, a decorated vet and a 20 year U.S. Senator some more stupid names, since that is a smart as you guys can get. After all, with all your collective successes, you certainly have the right to disparage and lie about a lowly Senator. Morons.

9/7/04 04:37:44 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Gerry,
Bigots and racists and morons? Just for disagreeing with you. Oh pleeeasse.
What makes you think that you and your opinions are above others here, Gerry? I have read the posts and you were then one who introduced political comment on others offering non-partisan best wishes to a man whose brave son is fighting overseas.You tree hugging democrats are so full of hate and self-righteousness that you can't even let that moment go without expressing your political biases. Your grasp on history I must add, is as twisted as your political thoughts and beliefs.You know as much about history as those dirty, smelly protesters throwing marbles under the hooves of police horses and pouring urine over police officers. Those protesters have more in common with the political beliefs of guys like you Gerry, than they ever have had with republicans.Others here are laughing out loud at you for your attempts at portraying others as infantile name callers. After all, you are the one using the words bigot and moron, just for people expressing an opinion after you expressed yours. But that's a mortal sin because, when it's all said and done, only democrats have the right to think. I also worry about your sense of humour. Kerry does look like Herman Munster. Fact. It's funny, Gerry, have a laugh, and may be you'll feel better about yourself. With self-esteem you might even become employable.

9/7/04 05:40:44 PM|Michael Moore|Reiters||idiot@reiters|||10|i agree with gerry, it is childish to say that kerry looks like herman munster. only democrats are allowed to poke fun at the neo cons, not the other way around. he might look like herman but you are not allowed to say it, however it is ok for us to parody neo cons as idiots with eyes rolling round the back of their stupid heads.

9/7/04 05:49:00 PM|mark sargeant|uk||mark_sargeant2003@yahoo.co.uk|||10|Just one comment on sensitive political issues. Although no way inclined towards Bush and Kerry, I find it extraordinary that the republicans could gain benefit from the vietnam issue. Although veterans will be angry at Kerry's late changes in opinion of the war, the fact remains that he served his term in war when he could easily have skipped it and fought very bravely where as Bush took the easy option of staying at home and didn't even bother completing his term of service. When America needed them Kerry stood up and Bush hid. I am no lefty liberal and am centre right and I realise that the election will be fought on several fronts. Anyway, the slow heavyweight race stumbles even more. Quite why Brewster was fighting, and luckily beating a guy called Kail Meehan is a mystery. The Australasian heavyweight had been knocked out by Tyson's conqueror Danny Williams in 1 round 18 months before and almost scrapped a win. No one of note is fighting regularly which makes Klitishko's criticisms of Lewis for doing the same a bit thin. Hoping for Toney, Tua and all three champions to fight before Xmas but there's appears to be little chance.
I will say this to everyone here, I am ready for the war to end and all of our soldiers to come home to their loved ones safely. I do not agree with every thing that has happened in Iraq since the war has started, but one thing has clearly stuck in my feeble brain from my son: the president is my commander-chief, I will try my best to fulfill the task that is at hand. So guys no matter what we think we need to let these soldiers (young and old) that we care for them very much. Vote your convictions and God bless America!

Yes, we are just joking when we call Kerry Herman Munster but if you read my post, I said he looked more like Lurch from the Addams family and it is funny. Just like it is funny to say George W. Bush looks like Howdy Doody, if only he had red hair! What does that make Dick Cheney, Clairibel the Clown?

I actually agree with some of what Gerry says but in times of war, most of the time and this is in the majority of times, we should stand behind our president and be less critical than normal of his military policies until the war is over and then in hindsight, we can be more critical. Of course, we should always stand behind our troops.

What a collection of idiots you guys are. Who gives a cat's ass about Bush and his little scheme to dominate the middle east. Obviously the crew of you know next to nothing about boxing, which is unfortunate for Jerry and his fans. I'm going to visit the "PEANUT". At least he'll talk boxing. You goofs are punch drunk.

Come on Pete, show us how much you know about boxing by posting about boxing. We may surprise you by showing that we do know something about it after all. By putting us down for our little side topic, you don't show your own knowledge about the sport.

Hey Pete, was it Kerry's proposal to legalize gay marriages that made you (join his) camp? You and Gerry have to get together some time soon, as it's likely that there'd be more than just a meeting of minds! Gerry needs someone to settle him down. Keep laughing.

My understanding is that Bush joined the National Guard and Kerry joined the Naval RESERVE (not active Navy) and his unit was (unexpectedly) called up. I don't know if this is true, but it was reported on a somewhat neutral radio show I was listening to (not a right biased show). Basically, the assertion was that both of them thought they could avoid action in the war by not enlisting active military, but Kerry's reserve unit got called up and he had to go. By the way, I'm planning to vote for Bush, but regardless of Kerry's record in Vietnam, the fact is, he served and that's good enough for me. But that brings me to point # 2: Kerry's camp is responsible for all the Vietnam/Veteran talk. Bush's campaign didn't make this issue so big—-Kerry is the one who travels with the "band of brothers" and his supporters are the ones who lampooned Bush for being in the Guard (By the way, what's wrong with the Guard?) and pointed to Kerry's "heroic" Vietnam service. So they put it out there, then when some aspects have been challenged, they accuse Republicans of "making it an issue." Sorry guys, most people are smart enough to figure this out (I hope).

I think Manilla might be Ali's crowning moment because the fight was toe-to-toe slugging and action, and he managed to end it without going to a decision, against his old nemesis. Norton's moment was probably Ali III and Holmes, both losses. But in both cases, Norton stepped up to the plate and showed he belonged in the class with all-time greats.
against Giorgio Eduardo Foreman! It was a masterpiece, he fought toe to toe with one of the greatest heavyweights of all time and knocked him out eventually. Foreman could lift one man off the floor with one punch. I have seen many fighters in the ring who could stun you or knock you out but George was the first one I have ever seen who could kill you. One thing I was thinking right now: in his greatest fight Foreman was 1.93/98.7 Kg. This says a lot about how overweight the modern fighters are! For instance: Jameel "the Bouncer" Mc Cline 1.98/124, Mike Tyson 1.51/101Botha 1.88/107, Lewis 1.94/112, Rahman
1.89/111.Let alone the wrestlers, for instance Andre' was1.73/245 !!!!!!

I agree in terms of 'big heavies'.
A lot of them are overweight I feel. The division is quite boring at the moment because the fighters are just too big and slow and lumbering. A lot of fighters, like Rahman are two stone overweight. I think the most exciting era's are when the guys were around the 15st-16stone mark - where size was equalled by skill.
The balance now has gone in the favour of size. Best fighters in the last 30 years : - larry Holmes - 210lbsMuhammad Ali - 210-225lbsKen Norton - 210-220lbsGeorge Foreman - 217-235 (prime)Joe Frazier - 210lbsMike Tyson - 215-222lbs (prime)Evander Holyfield - 205-220lbsThe exceptions - Lennox Lewis - 227lbs - 256lbs (last fight)Riddick Bowe - 235lbs - 252lbs (last but one fight)Most of the heavy fights now have very little punching and plenty of mauling - very tedious
- the recent Klitschko-Sanders bout reminded me of the Jess Willard - Jack Johnson bout in terms of skill - it was poor, very poor - exciting but poor.

I think that Ali's greatest fight was against Giorgio Eduardo Foreman! It was a masterpiece, he fought toe to toe with one of the greatest heavyweights of all time and knocked him out eventually."I agree; that translates to "THE MUMMY" in Italian, right?
One of Ali's greatest assets was his ability to take a punch. He didn't slip everything that FOREMAN threw at him and he did do a magnificent job. It's just unfortunate that he didn't retire then and there.Many fighters are bigger today than they were back in the 60's/70's. A lot of fighters weight train today, which adds considerable bulk, whereas back then it wasn't that common for a fighter to weight train. They are also growing taller, but not necessarily tougher. NOAM it's always hairdressers like yourself who run around making insinuations etc. Get a life you little PUSSY and join the MARINES.

Interesting that Wladimir Klitschko's comeback fight is going to be against DaVarryl Williamson, a small heavyweight in the 210 pound range but one who can punch.
We could be saying "timber" all over again if Wlad gets tagged but then again, Williamson is also known for not taking a good punch. Got to give W.K. credit for this one though as he selected a dangerous opponent who could hurt him, which shows he is trying to head off his problem by not taking the easy way out by taking on a softy.By the way, Williamson holds a knockout win over 300 pound Correy Sanders (American, not South African). A fight in which he was badly hurt or knocked down, I don't remember which, but he came back to score a KO in about round six over Sanders.I don't know what to think about W.K.
He can look like the best in the world one minute then the next he can be stumbling around like a bum after he gets hit hard.I know that for whatever reason, he has stamina problems but even if has solved those problems, he still gets rubbery legged every time he is hit hard and I don't think the ability to take a punch can be taught. A fighter either has this ability or he doesn't have it.

How could Chuvalo vrs Quarry be a great fight for Chuvalo, he got his ass kicked. I guess it looks good on paper but believe me Chuvallo got his ass kicked........

I don't know much about boxing, although it seems to me that Ali's best performance was probably that loss against Norton when he fought the entire fight with a broken jaw. Was that the first or the second fight? Imagine the pain fighting one of the toughest men in history with an injury like that. If Ali wasn't the greatest, then he was certainly the toughest. Pete, even if we were both hairdressers, poor old Gerry still wouldn't have a chance. When he gets shook up, as he has been lately, his rug gets lopsided making him look like Mel Brooks. He hasn't got Mel's sense of humour though. Maybe you can answer me something, Pete. When Michael Moore demonises and ridicules George W. and the republicans, there is shrill laughter from guys like Gerry. But if someone dares to say that Kerry looks like Herman Munster (and he does), guys like Gerry start throwing handbags and tantrums. Go figure.

Quarry was Chuvalo's best night. He was losing the fight and was getting his butt kicked. However he turned it around with a left hook to knock out Jerry Quarry. I have watched the fight 10 times and have 25 or so of George's fights on tape. The only other fights that could come close are his KO of ranked Doug Jones or Beating Bob Cleroux for the Canadian Title. Manuel Ramos was already on the slippery slope when they fought.

What about the 2 Ali-Chuvalo fights? I have seen a synthesis of the first fight and it was pretty close, George held his own very well. Thank you.

I actually know the perfect way that George Foreman could have beaten Ali the night he lost. This is of course after seeing every Ali fight numerous times and seeing the holes in his defense. I'll share that sometime.

Joe, I only saw the Quarry Chuvalo fight once that was on TV when it happened and my memory was of Jerry in total control and that left hook was a straight jab that caught Jerry off balance...one day I'll see it again. I don't know how you guys get to see these great fights.

Joe, I think Foreman could have beaten Ali that night if he had tried to slow down the pace and had not fallen into the trap set by Ali of Ali fighting off of the ropes if Foreman had adopted the strategy that Ron Lyle tried. By backing off and using his very underrated jab and not moving in as aggressively, Foreman could have saved his energy for a hard charge in the later rounds. Foreman would try to keep the fight in the middle of the ring, just the opposite of what a big slugger is supposed to do. Lyle tried this and was quite successful, leading on the judges cards after ten rounds only to be stopped while out on his feet in round eleven. It led to a not very exciting fight but it was a brilliant strategy that not many people would have thought of. Lyle's trainers deserve a lot of credit for the plan. The strategy for Foreman, surprisingly, would be to win on points. By not falling into Ali's trap by rushing in, Foreman throws and lands enough punches to keep him slightly ahead through the early and middle rounds and then he could have thrown caution to the wind in the later rounds and tried for the knockout then, but still settled for a decision. But like Frazier charging straight ahead against Foreman in the fight when Foreman won the title, Frazier's strategy had worked against everyone else, so why would Frazier try anything different? Foreman or his trainers also would not have had a reason to try something different as their methods had also worked against everyone else, including two fighters who had beaten Ali, Frazier and Ken Norton.

In Kinshasa Foreman fought very well in attack and did hit Ali! with many hard punches (mostly to the body but a few landed in (or to) the face and landed very hard), but fought very poorly in defence. Ali! was able to hit (or of hitting) Giorgio every time he wanted to throughout the entire fight. Giorgio's performance in attack would have been good enough to beat almost every heavyweight in history, including Carnera, but Ali! could take one hell of a punch. Foreman got abruptly tired after round 5, but still managed to throw a terrible uppercut in round 7, but Ali! was able to take it.

| 9/9/04 10:51:02 AM | Skippy Andelman | Roma, Lazio, Italia, Europa |

Kinshasa Foreman fought very well in attack and did hit Ali! with many hard punches (mostly to the body but a few landed in (or to) the face and landed very hard), but fought very poorly in defence. Ali! was able to hit (or of hitting) Giorgio every time he wanted to throughout the entire fight. Giorgio's performance in attack would have been good enough to beat almost every heavyweight in history, including Carnera, but Ali! could take one hell of a punch. Foreman got abruptly tired after round 5, but still managed to throw a terrible uppercut in round 7, but Ali! was able to take it.

| 9/9/04 11:33:33 AM | Evren | London |

| 9/9/04 03:18:36 PM | Jimmy Dorsey | Ventura California |

| 9/9/04 07:01:24 PM | Nick (The Bum) Bonatelli | Keatonville, USA |

The fight with Zanon was one of Jerry's best fights. Lorenzo, that (or who) almost everyone called Renzo (from I Promessi Sposi by Alessandro Manzoni) was very strong, as he showed against Norton and Holmes. I told you all that I am the greatest of all time! Don't make me the underdog until I'm fifty years old. Muhammad Ali!, 30 Ottobre 1974, Zaire, Africa.
have won against Ali that day under almost any circumstances. It was fate for Ali to regain the title and pull the upset. Foreman was a co-star in the movie, but Ali was the star. If there had been a rematch, I think Foreman MIGHT have taken Ali. He could have gone to the body more to take Ali's legs away. He could have punched more selectively to avoid fatigue. But you know, Ali withstood Shavers best and it makes me wonder if Foreman could have KOed Ali, even if he connected. It would be tough for Foreman to go the then 15 round distance. "Ali's Alley" was rounds 10-15 and who's to say that Foreman would have enough gas in the tank that late in the fight? Foreman made his name by taking guys out in 2 or 3 rounds, not outboxing them over 15. It's why I respect the new Foreman so much---he learned to pace himself and stay competitive over the whole fight. |
Standards and beliefs in Muslim countries? You wish. The people there are told what to believe at the point of a knife. They have standards beaten into them. They don't have a choice. That's why, when given the choice, Muslims prefer to live in the west where they are allowed to have their own standards and beliefs. Yet they criticize and whine and generally show no appreciation. They always criticize, rather than praise. At least with what George W. has done, Iraq now has a chance at freedom. It may not work, but what was the choice under Saddam? It's easy to criticize the west, but at least our standards and beliefs allow its citizens to chose their own standards and beliefs. Go try that in the Muslim world and if you're lucky they'll only cut your right hand off. | 9/10/04 06:02:08 PM|Angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com||10

Noam: This might be my shortest post ever---I have nothing to add to what you said other than "here, here." | 9/10/04 06:06:44 PM|A.P.K.|Roma||I bet will be together for a million years.| 9/10/04 07:00:25 PM|Evren|London||10

Noam I do not disagree with you. But do you think what you write shows that America and the UK shouldnt have got involved as they are in a 'no-win' situation? Damned if they do damned if they dont. |

9/11/04 03:12:59 AM|Massimo|Roma||10|The Italians and the allied nations are doing a good job in Iraq ! |

9/11/04 06:05:09 AM|Brandi Quarry|Indiana||brandiquarry3@msn.com||10|Would you please tell me what's going on here, this is a boxing site, and I for one am really getting tired of all the politics, let's get back to boxing, if you want to talk about all this other stuff, write your Sen. let them know how you feel, I really don't care here about it, God Bless our families that are there for us. |

9/11/04 02:03:57 PM|VIDEO POST #11|The Jerry Quarry Foundation||TJQF||10|The Chuvalo discussion was a little while back, but I wanted to mention the excellent documentary on the first Ali Chuvalo fight. On DVD, it's called The Last Round - Chuvalo vs Ali. I can't recommend it enough. If you think you know Chuvalo now, you don't until you see this film. It profiles him from childhood until the first Ali fight. Chuvalo comes across as intelligent, proud, funny and respectful of Ali. I came away with great appreciation for him. Check out this preview clip. | 9/11/04 02:57:50 PM|Massimo|Roma||10|Great VIDEO POST thanks ! The fight was like I remembered it: pretty close ! Chuvalo held his own pretty well. What did Chuvalo say? If I got it right he said that Ali' was the quickest guy he ever met. Am I right? Ali was not fooling around, Angelo Dundee ! I have read somewhere that after the fight Ali' said he was not in top shape and Dundee said the same. You can't step into the ring in bad shape against a guy like Chuvalo! Chuvalo did beat Dante Calc' once or maybe even twice ( I don't remember well ), so he was very strong ! |

9/11/04 04:54:51 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|I for one am going to knock it off regarding the political talk per our host Brandi's wishes. I hope everyone else does the same. | 9/11/04 05:05:45 PM|Silvio Berlusconi|Roma from Arcore|| I remember Richard Nixon, the n. 1 ||| talk about political stuff. Let's talk about the Chuck Wepner- Andre' Rousimoff fight in 1976. That was boxing, at least at 50 % !

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/11/04 09:31:15 PM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I understand Riddick Bowe has cleared physicals and is serious about returning to the ring. I don't think it's a great idea. If he has money left from his substantial ring earnings, he ought to enjoy his life and not risk permanent injury.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/12/04 11:39:27 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I wonder if Bowe has passed an MRI scan as he had apparent damage from before. In fact, a judge reduced his sentence when he kidnapped his wife and kids because his behavior was attributed to ring damage. I have a bad feeling about this one as if something terrible is about to happen. Allowing Bowe to fight does no one good, Bowe or boxing in general.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/12/04 03:44:44 PM</th>
<th>Joe Krause</th>
<th>Chicago</th>
<th>sadmspants</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hey Brandi, thank you. My subtle hints weren't working.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/12/04 05:23:02 PM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>dc</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Kent: I think about Greg Page and worry about Bowe. It's hard to stay away. I think he did pass an MRI and got clearance to fight. Based on the Golata fights, I don't think Bowe will win a title or for that matter, even perform very well in this comeback. I think the years of inactivity might make him even slower, with deteriorated reflexes. Maybe I'm wrong—but Bowe was starting to look like he was in decline and I have no reason to believe the layoff has strengthened him.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/12/04 06:01:47 PM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>It was really impressive how quickly Bowe career deteriorated. In 1995 he fought one of his best fights and did beat a great champion (Evandro) but, just a few months later he was already a bum. I think something happened that we don't know. I think this comeback is a bad idea; Vitali is gonna kick the ass out of him (Wisconsin slang)!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/13/04 11:58:51 AM</th>
<th>Charles Anderson</th>
<th>ark</th>
<th>cttjandfam@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>has anyone heard anything about foreman fighting joe bugner?</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/13/04 12:35:45 PM</th>
<th>John Gerard</th>
<th>NYC</th>
<th>rock289z@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I always wondered why JQ never became a referee. I think he would have been a good one. Does anyone know if he ever considered it?</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/14/04 01:55:47 AM</th>
<th></th>
<th>a</th>
<th>a</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>9/14/04 02:40:34 AM</td>
<td>b</td>
<td>c</td>
<td>d</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>hope gerry got the message bout no political talk as well. hope he stops with his smart ass cheap shots.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/14/04 03:49:07 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Charles, Foreman verses Bugner now? That is crazy. Why don't these guys leave well enough alone. What is next, Schmeling verses Patterson?</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/14/04 06:17:57 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Wilt was taller than A.P.K.</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Schmeling vs Patterson ? Ah! Ah! Ah! That's funny, Ralph! I think that Schmeling would need a couple of easy fights to get back in good shape before stepping into the ring against a fighter like Patterson, as (or since) Max's last fight was 56 years ago! By reading Max Schmeling's record anyone realizes that he had only 1 great win against Joe Louis! He did beat a bunch of good fighters like Uzcudun, Steve Hamas, Neusel and Risko but these guys weren't real champions! He got his ass badly beaten by Max Baer in 1933. Who knows how he would perform against the modern heavyweights?</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/14/04 09:14:26 AM</th>
<th>Charles Anderson</th>
<th>ark</th>
<th>cttjandfam@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Kent i was looking at a bugner site and joe talked about a possible fight w/george, there was an article about bugner being the best white heavy since johnsson, since he did so well against ali and frazier, i guess bugner forgot he got killed by lyle and shavers, who jerry beat pretty good. bugner had a lot of talent, but i don't think he could beat jerry.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/14/04 09:55:52 AM</th>
<th>John Gerard</th>
<th>NYC</th>
<th>rock289z@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I think both JQ and Tommy Morrison could have beaten Bugner.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/14/04 11:22:30 AM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>And for that matter, Cooney too.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/14/04 11:23:07 AM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| To clarify-
Cooney could have beaten Bugner.

If Morrison had Jerry's chin he could have whipped all of them. With the right people handling him of course. If Jerry had not cut easily Jerry would have been even greater because he would not have to fight out of desperation (Ali, Norton, Frazier).

Bugner being stronger and quicker than Jerry.

Bobick never recovered from 72 Olympic loss to Stevenson. I wonder what ever happened to him?

Jerry did not last more rounds against Ali and Frazier as Bugner, for he was trying to win, Bugner was unaggressive in an aggressive sport, he even lost to Larry Middleton if we are talking common opponents, no I think Quarry would have got inside Bugner and do a number on him, and Bugner being stronger and quicker than Jerry.

I've seen them both dozens of times. To me its exactly they opposite, Bugner's big height and reach helped him, not his laziness in big bouts.

Iron Mike Tyson should never again be mentioned in that category.

Joe Bugner was a good fighter who never had the drive or determination to beat an Ali or Frazier. He however would be only a slight underdog against Jerry Quarry. Quarry would probably win, but it would hardly be easy.

Bugner had the perfect style to frustrate Jerry.

Joe Bugner was a good fighter who never had the drive or determination to beat an Ali or Frazier. He however would be only a slight underdog against Jerry Quarry. Quarry would probably win, but it would hardly be easy. Bugner had the perfect style to frustrate Jerry.

Bugner never beat anyone as good as Quarry though, so I doubt he wins here.

Tommy Morrison had a problem taking a punch and had some devastating KO losses in his time he was blown out by his peers. He wasn't in the same class as Jerry Quarry he never came close. Too Musclebound to Holywood. He was stronger than Cooney or Bobick but I think Cooney could stop him and Bobick was ordinary after Stevenson.

Holyfield is seeking to fight the British and Commonwealth champion Matt Skelton (37 years old).

Did I ever tell you of Rosa Coletti?

I have heard Rosa Coletti was a tiny girl. Is that true Alfredo?

I too was sad to hear about Morrison's steroid use, but let's be honest, do you think he is the only one who used (or is using them)? Once the genie is out the bottle as it is with steroids, it becomes a dislikable but accepted fact. What are we supposed to do, close the record books or stop all comparisons now that boxers use steroids? I don't have the answer, would welcome opinions.

It would be useful to have an idea of which is the percentage of the boxers who (or that) make use of steroids. Severity is the only solution to this problem. If I discover you, you are not going to fight anymore and you have to pay a big amount of money for robbery, for fooling people around, and for infangare l' immagine of your sport.
I have no idea how widespread steroid use is in boxing. Morrison said it was common, but he may be justifying his own usage—or he may be telling the truth. I guess only strict testing will weed it out.

Morrison said that 'all the top heavyweights' were using it. He said that they knew exactly when to use it to avoid being caught. What a sad state of affairs. Boxers have to cheat to be better?(stronger, bigger) boxers. I recall quite a few olympic boxers who were around 205lbs then you saw them a few years later as pro's at 250lb's and huge with huge jaws! What do they do go to bed with their feet in a grow bag????!!!!!?

One fight of Morrison's that stands out in my mind is his bout with Joe Hipp. Hipp, a chubby looking southpaw who was considered a class below Morrison's level and who was supposed to be a tune up for Morrison gave Tommy one of the fights of his life, breaking Morrison's jaw in the process. Morrison ended up pulling it out with a late round knockout.I remember the announcer saying, "just on the basis of superior stanima, Hipp has a real chance of winning this fight." But then Morrison did his late round dramas, I believe it was the ninth, to pull out a knockout win.What did Morrison's steroid use do, if he was using them at the time, other than give him a more sculpted look? Morrison always had the knockout punch that could bail him out of trouble and he would have had that regardless of steroids. In fact, as the announcer pointed out, it was the unadonis looking Hipp who was the better conditioned fighter. So the drug use did nothing to help Morrison in that regard.

Perhaps steroid use helped Morrison pull it out of the bag, Kent! I remember when Tommy was coming up on ESPN every couple of weeks along with Ray Mercer and Bowe..he was like a 206lbs kinda unmuscled looking guy - but boy could he bang!! By the time of his fight with Ruddock he was built like a giant Vinny Paz!!

Tommy Morrison was a good but never a great heavyweight; Michael "Who" Bennt knocked him out in the first round and Lennox Lewis completely dominated him. His best wins were against Pinklon Thomas, Donovan Ruddock and his second round knockout of Union Kane but all these guys were over the mountain at the time of their fight with the "Machine". He was a disaster in the street, also !

Yeah, I saw video of Sly Stallone taking on Morrison in the streets of Philadelphia and Stallone kicked his ass. Kept calling him "Tommy Gunn".

I'm no expert, but logic probably dictates that steroids might not be all that useful in boxing. I don't think Tyson could have been any more 'muscled up' than he was in his hey day. Any extra bulk would have slowed him down. Same with Foreman. Neither would have been any better (presuming Iron Mike wasn't already on the stuff !)

Ali didn't rely on muscle or strength, so steroids wouldn't have helped him. You could have given Morrison and his ilk plane loads of steroids, but Ali, Frazier, Louis and the rest still would have brained 'em. Would Foster - the svelte fighter who replied on speed, sheer ability, and agility to win fights - have been any more dominant in the light heavies than he already was had he been on steroids ? The emphatic answer is 'no'. Foster on steroids would not have been a light heavy. He would have been a good heavyweight - but certainly not a great one.

We all remember the little kid with boxing ability in the school playground outclassing the muscled bully with strength but no boxing nose. I think a good boxer without steroids would ALWAYS beat a bad boxer whacked out on plane loads of steroids.

Down through the ages of boxing the only thing that really improved skills was better knowledge, better training, better attitude, and better diet. And then every so often the next
A genetic model of human came along. Someone like Louis or Clay or Tyson.Steroids do not make you more intelligent, more skillful, or more courageous. And steroids probably make athletes lazier. The steroid user took the biggest shortcut there is — pushing a needle in their arms rather than pushing more weights in training — so they say to themselves, "What the heck, I'll eat that jam doughnut instead of that raw carrot." Steroid cheaters take more and more shortcuts and train less and less and in the end the steroids are only making up for the shortfall in training that ultimately develops (if you get my drift).More than anything else, steroids are a psychological downfall. The steroided athlete in his heart-of-hearts knows that he is a cheat. He has problems looking the other guy in the eye. Heck, he can't even be truthful with himself because he's out telling so many lies covering up.So when the going gets really tough, the steroid cheater won't go that extra inch of exertion needed to win. He'll give up.In my mind, steroids are over stated. Taking steroids is an admission that you aren't as good as the others and that you need to cheat to catch up to them.Breathing in the atmosphere of a big fight crowd was the only 'steroid' that the greats wanted!By the way, if we want to beat steroid use, then we have to pick on the guys who arrange and supply the stuff. What's the penalty for supplying a steroid to an athlete? I don't think there is a penalty.By the way, if we want to beat steroid use, then we have to pick on the guys who arrange and supply the stuff. What's the penalty for supplying a steroid to an athlete? I don't think there is a penalty. |
| 9/16/04 06:08:52 PM | Bob Bumbera| NC || renfbera@aol.com | ||||10|| Noam, steroids are a controlled substance and if you are caught using or distributing them you will be fined heavily or if your an unknown gym rat you may even spend time in jail. As for helping athletic performance, more records in track and field, weight lifting and many other sports have been set while athletes were on steroids. Not all, but a high percentage of NFL players use drugs to enhance their productivity on the field. It has spread to other sports as well. Of course athletes in most major sports are training year round with much better nutrition than just 20 years ago, so you would expect their bodies to look better, more chiseled, less smooth than in the past. I am quite there are a number of prizefighters that are using performance enhancing drugs, Roy Jones Jr. failed a drug test once, and I believe Shane Mosley is another. I do agree that in boxing, steroids may help a few fighters but for the most part, not the majority. Boxing is not a true strength sport and you don't need to run the 100 meters in 9.45 seconds, although it might help if Mike Tyson was after you. You can't make some punch harder than they can, if you can't punch no drug in the world will increase your power. You'll be looking good in your trunks though. Hey Massimo...quit talking to yourself already! |
| 9/17/04 08:41:47 AM | Evren| London | ||@ || |||10|| This is a very interesting debate. If the steroids do not help then why are these top athletes/boxers taking them? I know that they help increase size and muscle. Increasing your size could be argued as a cheating advantage, bigger muscles usually mean more strength. If they didn't make a difference why would knowledgeable fighters take them — why would they run the risk if it wasn't helping. Could it be that the steroids help speed up injury repair? From Jerry's era I remember Jack O'Halloran as one of the guys who took them...agreed..it didnt help him! He lost both of his legs if I remember correctly. |
| 9/17/04 12:03:29 PM | Massimo| Roma | ||4 || |||10|| What kind of correlation there is between muscular size and punching power is not that obvious. I mean, A.Schwartznegger's biceps are twice bigger than M. Tyson's, but I'd bet that Tyson can punch at least twice harder than Schwartzy. Primo Carnera had probably the biggest biceps of all the heavyweight champions in history and his power was good, but Louis, Foreman, Tyson, Marciano, Godfrey, Baer and many others could punch harder. There is surely a positive correlation, I am unmuscled and I can't break an egg (slang), but I think that even the quality of the muscular cells plays an important roll (ruolo). |
Thomas Hearns was tall and skinny like Jimmie Walker (Massimo, that's Kid Dyn-o-mite!). But damned, Hearns punches slammed home like a sledgehammer.

Yeah, Jimmy Wilde weighted not more than an Idrogen atom and was shorter than Andre' but could punch like hell. His professional record was 131-3-2 ! Could Andre' punch? Who knows? Could Alex P.Keaton punch? Could Ralph Malph punch? Could Alfred Del Vecchio punch? Could Fonzie punch? I just wonder...

Richie C. but not Massimo, there are two of us. | Yeah, Jimmy Wilde weighted not more than an Idrogen atom and was shorter than Andre' but could punch like hell. His professional record was 131-3-2 ! Could Andre' punch? Who knows? Could Alex P.Keaton punch? Could Ralph Malph punch? Could Alfred Del Vecchio punch? Could Fonzie punch? I just wonder...

Kent, even Ralph Malph fought a bout against a guy that (or who, i haven't understood well yet) was twice his size! Ralph showed a big heart but was beaten unfortunately. Well, Fonzie knocked out that big guy with one punch! If Potsie had fought George Chuvalo, he would have likely lost, but Fonzie would have knocked George Chuvalo out with one punch! |

I take your point, but even though steroids are a controlled substance, the punishment is light. Has anyone ever gone to jail for it? My view is taking steroids helps some sports and not others. I say again that a good boxer without steroids will always beat a bad boxer with steroids. But that is not the case in other sports. Sprinters seem to get a lot of benefit from steroids, as in Ben Johnson's case. Steroids seem to give explosive off-the-mark power that benefits sprinters a lot. Maybe the benefit of steroids is more in the legs than the arms. Obviously the power sports like weightlifting and throwing the steel ball (shotput?) would benefit greatly from steroids, too.

Bob

You could make a fighters punches faster with the right training and drugs. You can do it with sprinters right? A guy like Chris Byrd who was a middleweight then three years later 210 pounds, a pretty good size 210 pounds too. Did he benefit from...
drug use to get bigger? Evander Holyfield, who has always been accused of some kind of drug use, could barely keep 190 on his body then he’s fighting at 212 looking like Kenny Norton. You can name several others also. The muscle recovery thing Evren mentioned maybe the biggest reason for drug use by fighters. A big money fight coming up, you pull or tear a muscle in training, the right steroid will heal the injury faster and get you back in training. I’m not saying Chris Byrd or Evander Holyfield have used drugs either. When I was in my early twenties I went from 185 to a rock solid 215 just from weight training and good nutrition, so I can understand how an elite athlete can get bigger and stronger without drug use. Also, there is so much money in boxing these days, I think some fighters will resort to drug use to try and get an edge on the competition. I think the odd part is, in boxing it rarely works. | 9/18/04 04:04:07 AM|Evren|London||8||10|I would thing that it would also give fighters more energy for training also. I remember when I used to go to my local gym there would be guys in the tolets injecting themselves. A while later they would be working out like some beast - really sad. These guys were so agressive.  | 9/18/04 11:29:50 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|But the one thing steroids couldn't do is help the mental aspect of the game. The drug would put the fighter into an aggresive rage and this is the sort of thing that would play into the hands of a thinking fighter like Muhammed Ali.One of the reasons Ali would make fun of opponents, make up silly names for them, and to make round predictions for the knockout, was to get the fighters angry so that he would have better control of them in the ring! | 9/18/04 05:55:16 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|I honestly think that Ali' would have had some problem against Wilt. Why ? Because he couldn't have jabbed Wilt and he couldn't have punched Wilt directly to the face. He should have gone to the body first but Ali' wasn't a body puncher ! I'm not saying that Ali' would have lost, I think he would have found a way to win, I'm just saying that it wouldn't have been an easy fight. On the other hand, since styles make fights, i think that Giorgio Eduardo would have beaten Wilt very quickly because he was a great body puncher. Too bad that Ali' and Wilt didn't fight ! That one would have been really a cool, unforgettable fight ! A fight for the ages !PS; probably Wilt couldn't take a punch.| 9/19/04 02:59:42 AM|a|b||c||10|Wilt v Ali ? TIIIIIMMMBEEEEEEEER !!!!!!! | 9/19/04 07:06:31 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|Why did De la Hoya go to the canvas in the ninth round of his fight with Hopkins? That wasn't an hard punch, it was only a body punch that (or which) I would have taken without blinking. Hopkins was clearly ahead atthe time of the knockout.| 9/19/04 09:57:10 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Massimo, body punches can be very devastating if they are in the right spot. It was a punch to the liver and apparently at the right angle.J. Quarry was knocked down by a left hook to the body by Frazier in their second fight and it is one of the only times he didn't get up and win the fight. He beat the count but he was stopped on his feet in the next round. Believe me, if Jerry was around today, I am sure he would tell you it was a legitimate knockdown.Soon after being knocked out by Hopkins, Oscar said a word of 4 letters. I swear !| 9/19/04 02:50:23 PM|Margo Dydek|Roma||4||10|If you think that the Frazier II knockdown was not an anomaly, and featured anything close to Jerry in his prime, go ask those who know better. In '69 he would have laughed that off body shot. Maybe a valid general point about body punching - but a really bad, and (considering the site where you have tried to make your bones) a wholly inappropriate example in support thereof. | 9/20/04 12:42:17 AM|Kent Appel|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Fan, I was not attempting to judge how much Jerry had left at the time of Frazier 2 as compared to his skills in his prime. I was just using it as an example of a good, well placed body shot, which it was and I am sure Jerry would have noted this also. There was no bad intentions towards Jerry Quarry because if you knew me, you would know nothing could be further from the truth. I am a friend of the Quarries and they know I have always been a strong supporter of Jerry and one of his biggest fans and the regulars here, who are his biggest fans, know the same. I carry their opinions much higher than some newcomer who won't sign his real name and who knows nothing about me. I am also a part time boxing journalist and if you want to know my take on the Quarries, I suggest you go to www.eastsideboxing.com and look up the following articles, "Mike Quarry, a Warrior in his Own Right," "Quarry defeats Streaking Lyle," about the 1973 Jerry Quarry vs. Ron Lyle fight, and "An Interview with James Quarry, President of the Jerry Quarry Foundation." If you put those titles in a Google search, they should come up on the list of items about the Quarries. The Lyle article comes up on some other websites also. James (Mr. Jimmy) was a personal friend of mine as is Bob Quarry and I have also had several long talks with Mike Quarry as well. In fact, I sat next to Bob and sister Brenda at the Quarry table during Mike's induction into the California Boxing Hall of Fame banquet and ceremony. In fact the article, "A Warrior in his Own Right" is about Mike getting named to the California Hall of Fame. I am also very proud that Bob gave a copy of my article to his mother, Arwanda Quarry, and she read it and enjoyed it. I don't usually like to toot my own horn about getting to know some of the Quarry family but this "so called Fan" ticked me off, one of Jerry's biggest fans, and I saw no other way to get my point across.

James (Mr. Jimmy) was a personal friend of mine as is Bob Quarry and I have also had several long talks with Mike Quarry as well. In fact, I sat next to Bob and sister Brenda at the Quarry table during Mike's induction into the California Boxing Hall of Fame banquet and ceremony. In fact the article, "A Warrior in his Own Right" is about Mike getting named to the California Hall of Fame. I am also very proud that Bob gave a copy of my article to his mother, Arwanda Quarry, and she read it and enjoyed it. I don't usually like to toot my own horn about getting to know some of the Quarry family but this "so called Fan" ticked me off, one of Jerry's biggest fans, and I saw no other way to get my point across.

9/20/04 01:05:40 AM|toot, toot, toot, toot, toot, and TOOOOOOOOOOT!!
9/20/04 08:44:46 AM|He can toot his own horn any time as what he says is probably true.
9/20/04 09:15:48 AM|Kent: I agree with you---and whether or not JQ was in his prime is besides the point. Honestly, we'll never know if a 1969 Quarry would have gone down from the Frazier body shot, but I seriously doubt he'd "laugh" it off. And while knockdowns from body blows aren't common, I've seen them enough to know that it happens. Also, sometimes a fierce body punch is followed by a head shot and results in a knockdown---and the body shot is responsible for half the damage.
9/20/04 10:58:53 AM|Charles: Agreed---and I also think it's a shame that JQ took the second Frazier fight. After 1973, he had earned the right to fight for the title without taking on any more top contenders. If Foreman couldn't, or wouldn't, give Quarry an immediate title fight, Quarry should have been allowed to take a tune-up against a trial horse, then get a title shot later. As it turns out, the title shot would have been at Ali, not Foreman. | Kent 'the Tooter' Appel |
The thing is this person who won't identify himself who suggests I am taking a cheap shot at Jerry has a lot of nerve and you and I go a ways back now, about four years worth, and you of all people know I would not do such a thing. If anything, I have been accused of being biased towards the Quarrys, which I don't think is true either but at least that would make some sense as I am a strong supporter of them. On the other hand, saying I am putting down Jerry when all I said was the body shot in Frazier 2 was a good one makes no sense.

Oh by the way, the title of my 2002 Quarry vs. Lyle article is actually, "Quarry upsets Streaking Lyle." If anyone is interested, they can put this title and the other titles I mentioned in a Google search and the article link(s) will come up.

As another astute poster said, Jerry should not even have taken Frazier II. Look at the videos of Quarry-Frazier I vs. Quarry-Frazier II. Jerry looks like a physically smaller person in the latter. He didn't just run out of gas in that fight, he had almost nothing left at that point in his career. Before the fight, the press felt that Joe was the one who was shot, and favored Quarry to retire him, but it was Jerry who was further along than they realized. I was there (and, BTW, at Lyle as well, and several others). As a Quarry fan, it was a terrible night. We all thought, boy, Jerry's really on his way to the title this time. What a blow.

(P.S. I was at the Hopkins fight, which prompted our present discussion, the other night. I am sure that our resident journalist was also in attendance, presumably in the VIP section.)

Over the years, I also had conversations with James, and Mike, and Jerry for that matter, and I have been a longtime fan (blah blah blah - want my entire resume?) The point is, the image of Jerry on his knee while poor Joe Louis founders - particularly as Frazier mercifully implores him to stop the fight - is one that I as a Quarry fan would rather forget. Kind of like the Norton or Zanon debacles (two guys Jerry would have taken apart, with ease, in his prime).

That's why the reference to that body shot seemed tantamount (to me) to an Ali fan using the Larry Holmes fight as a paradigm of some sort.

On the other hand, we're all fans, so why don't we try to become a bit less pedantic and just enjoy the site.

Fan, again I didn't say anything about the state of Jerry's skills in Frazier 2 just that the body shot was a very good punch. I am just surprised that you took such offense to it because no malice was intended. I don't think anyone else took it as such and while I agree, it was something a Quarry fan didn't like to see, all I said was it was a good example of a hard body shot.

It is like when talking to Mike if someone mentioned the left hook by Foster that knocked him out, Mike would agree that it was one helluva a punch and he wouldn't be offended by the comment because it was one helluva a punch!

No, I wasn't at Hopkins/De La Hoya as I am house sitting for a relative who is out of town, planned well in advance and even if I had gone, I likely would have been in the back of press row, about six rows back, hardly the VIP section. As I said, I am part time in my journalism efforts, hardly well known enough to get many perks. I will be at James Toney's comeback fight against a guy named Rydell Booker this week. It should be fun as Toney events are usually entertaining.

If you wonder why I was taken aback by your comments, please understand I had no intention of putting Jerry Quarry down, a fine brave fighter who I admired a lot and continue to admire. I was surprised you responded the way you did. I hope you can see now that as I said, no malice was intended.

I have read a recent interview in which Toney said that all the other fighters are bums and that it will be LIGHTS OUT for them. Cassius Clay from Liousville, Kentucky was humble in comparison! But he is really a great champion, and I think the only real threat to Vitali's title. I think he would take Vitali best shots and would likely beat him on points. It would be a great fight. As far as I am concerned (good English), Kent Appel is easily top five in the list of the Quarry fans, a fine gentleman, a guy with good sense of humour and a very good singer! And he stood next to Wilt Chamberlain and saw Andre' in person...

I wonder what weight Toney will come in at? I saw him about a little over a month ago and he appeared a little too heavy. Not surprising as he has had a long layoff.

I am going to try and ask him how his weight is before he weighs in and knowing Toney, he will likely snap at me as I am overweight. But I am not the one going into the ring.

Funny how about a year ago, I had asked him before the Holyfield fight how his weight was coming and he didn't take offense and he agreed with me that as a smaller heavyweight he should weigh in around 210 to 215 pounds, he was 217 for Holyfield, close to the ideal range for him at heavyweight. I think he may say something to me about questioning his weight as I am guessing he will likely weigh over 220, maybe 225 for Booker. I don't think Toney will be any stronger at 220 to 225 than he would be at 210 to 215 but he would lose that important speed ingredient, something that he likely will be able to get away with against inexperienced Booker, although undefeated, he hasn't fought anybody near the level of Toney.

I think Jimmy Young illustrates your point. Late in his career, when he came in heavy and tried to be more of a power puncher, he was mostly ineffective, losing to Ocasio twice. When he was lean, his reflexes and speed easily overcame a weight disadvantage.

My point exactly and other examples are a lot of the crusierweights who try and step up to heavyweight. For instance, Vassiliy Jirov weighed in at 211 pounds for his fight with Joe Mesi. I thought he was about ten pounds too heavy as he looked quite sluggish at times and this was what lost him the fight. I don't think he was any stronger at 211 than he would have been at 205 or even 200 but the speed element was missing. As it was, he almost pulled it out by knocking down the 235 pound Mesi no less than three times in the last two rounds only to come up barely short on the scorecards after being out hustled by Mesi during most of the early rounds. Jirov still would have had the power at the lower weight, maybe he wouldn't have as much power if he had to make weight down to 190 but at about 200 to 205 the power would have been there plus the speed and he likely could have knocked down and hurt Mesi earlier in the fight or at least one more rounds to get the decision. A lot of the argument about today's bigger heavyweights being better than their smaller counterparts from the past is the inability of most crusierweights today to be successful in the heavyweight division. But I don't think the crusierweights give themselves their best chance because most of them are fighting in the 220+ pound range.
They couldn't be in their best shape if they suddenly go from 190 pounds or so to 220 even with today's improved weight training and nutrition. The only exception to the rule in recent history was Evander Holyfield who was somewhere between 205 to 215 in his prime and he was very successful. Holyfield did not start weighing at 220+ until later in his career and he has a lot of losses to show for it. Much of blame for the losses have to do with him sticking around too long and Father Time catching up to him but the extra weight didn't help him. Can you imagine John Ruiz at any stage of his career keeping up with the "Real" in prime Real Deal at say 209 pounds? No way! James Toney has the next chance of being the next lighter fighter to be a real threat to the heavyweight title if he keeps his weight down. Of course Roy Jones Jr. did defeat Ruiz to win a heavyweight title belt, WBA, but that was likely just a one shot deal. But still Jones did show that a good 190 pound fighter can beat a 225+ heavyweight by the lighter fighter using his speed advantage.

In the best fight of his career against Schmeling Joe Louis weighted in at 89.9 Kg. He would have killed Mc Cline, Hoffman, Whitaker, Corey Sanders etc. When he beat the great Carnera he wighted in at 194 lbs. These boxers-bouncers of today are too heavy! When he beat the great Carnera he wighted in at 194 lbs. These boxers-bouncers of today are too heavy!

Even at the press conference about a little over a month ago to announce the fight he was touchy. A reporter I know asked Toney about his leg injury, a legitimate question about how it had healed, and Toney told him, "bend over and you will find out!" When the reporter gave him a puzzled look, Toney added, "I'll give you a kick in your ass and you will know how much it has healed!"
commented, "this will only last fifteen seconds before something breaks out," as the fighters were doing the posed stare down for the cameras and he was right. But good thing both fighters teams kept them seperated as some innocent people could have gotten hurt if a brawl had happened.Toney, in my opinion is too heavy but he looked sculpted and in good shape, he is carrying the weight well but will it help him in the ring?You say that security was light at the press conference but I think it's not the number but the quality of the bouncers that is important... I mean, with Calvin Lane nothing would have happened. Don't you think so ?There was plenty of security on hand for the fight. In fact Rydell Booker could have used their help in fighting off Toney!!Put an ass kicking on Booker... I guess it's American slang and I guess it means that Giacomo beat the st out of Booker ( someone who writes books). Ah Kent, parla Romano, aooooh :-) ! Giacomo is a great fighter! Now, I want Vitale Klitschko vs Giacomo Toney !!!!!!! The other guys outta there are chumps !I still think he needs to lose about ten more pounds before he fights someone of note. Someone said he was about 250 before he started training so he is headed in the right direction.I finally received some L.A. Times microfilm from Pullman Washington, mostly Quarry's bout with Machen, and I must say the L.A. sportswriters were down right viscious to Jerry. when is the last time they had a young undefeated heavyweight like Quarry? or ever! the way they talked you'd have thought the poor guy was 0-20. Said Machen had better watch it or bumbling clumsy Jerry might knock him into retirement. Said after Machen decisioned him, "See, told you Quarry cannot fight and never could." He was only 21!!! I guess he could not fight in the Nationals either.(record 5 kayoes 5 bouts) I lived that entire mess, growing up I was appalled then as a kid the way they treated Jerry Quarry, and I'd really forgotten how bad it really was.Referred to his family as the "Beverly Hillbillies" I GUESS THAT WOULD MAKE JERRY JETHRO!No wonder Jerry wanted to move to New York OR London or anywhere! They said teaching Jerry footwork was like teaching a Polar Bear to play the piano, you don't have much to work with to start with-Jim Murray.Those L.A. Writers had no class, Including JIM Murray. They were not watching the same fighter I did for 60 some odd bouts! And of course they made the big bucks, Las Vegas paper said Machen-Quarry was up for the California fight of the year, and Jerry himself was nothing but classy saying.he just was beat by a better fighter, and had went ten rounds with a punctured ear drum, courtesy of a Machen right hand, bellies the Jetro tag! I've researched Jerry's whole career from every town he'd ever fought in, and believe it, Miami, Kansas City, Seattle, Las Vegas, St. Paul, San Antonio, Phoenix, San Francisco, New York, Atlanta, and all the rest, would not even dream of writing and belittling Quarry like that L.A. bunch! They should have been happy to make a living off of him, and wrote something "positive".

| 9/26/04 03:42:06 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA |
| 9/26/04 03:44:40 PM | Noam | same |

Don't know about the best pound-for-pound, but inch-for-inch Roy Jones Jnr has spent more time on his back this year than a Vegas show girl!

| 9/26/04 05:08:31 PM | Kent | La Habra, CA |

You are right, Jimmy D, the writers here were terrible to Jerry and a lot of them were a bunch of elitist snob *heads who wouldn't know a boxing ring from a circus round or their a*s from a hole in the ground! I would never trash a fighter, any fighter who puts his safety on the line every time he enters the ring as it takes a certain amount of guts to fight anyway. Win, lose, or draw, they all deserve respect.

| 9/26/04 07:16:27 PM | Angelo | DC |

Roy Jones Jr. certainly has nothing to be ashamed of—he was indeed a fine fighter for many years, but I don't think he was ever as great as the press made him out to be, or as he made himself out to be. He was in the right place at the right time, won a lot of fights, did so impressively, but never won a fight where he was tested and pushed hard. It's similar to Pipino Cuevas—everyone talked about how great he was pound for pound, how he was the next Duran, etc., until Thomas Hearns destroyed him fast. |

I haven't seen Rodolfo Jones in the ring that much but the few times I did he looked great! He did float like a butterfly and did sting like a bee, just like Erminio Spalla! He gave Giacomo Toney a boxing lesson!|

Roy Jones's chin deteriorated that quickly I'm left wondering whether it had anything to do with the rapid weight gain he had when he jumped up for the Ruiz fight. Did he take steroids to put the weight on? Is that somehow the cause of the rapid deterioration in his skills and the stubborness of his jaw?

Pipino Cuevas and Jones are two different type of fighters. Jones, at his best was a brilliant counter puncher who used his great defensive skills to make fighters miss and he would make them pay with fast punches of his own. The comarison does make sense if you consider that apparently both fighters have the same problem, a weak chin.

Cuevas was a slugger with otherwise limited skills and if someone found a way to avoid his power, he was very beatable. In Hearns' case he stayed on the outside and he used his long reach to hurt Cuevas before Cuevas could get close enough to do damage of his own. I think Cuevas' people avoided Sugar Ray Leonard because Leonard would have boxed circles around Cuevas from the outside and would have either won a lopsided decision or stopped Cuevas in the mid rounds. Cuevas was very effective when he could get inside of a fighter and brawl but even then his chin would sometimes let him down. I remember a brawl with Duran in which Cuevas lost by about a fifth or sixth round knockout.

Was the Machen-Quarry fight one-sided or did Jerry hold his own?

Kent: True enough, all comments. But while Jones and Cuevas are different fighters, and Jones accomplished a lot more holding the title, I do believe his mystique has tarnished horribly. He was a top notch fighter and as I said, accomplished a lot, but his last few fights have relugated him to "very, very good" instead of all-time great, in my opinion. And I guess one of my issues is that in my mind, I feel he really started to believe his own hype, which was soundly thrashed.

Glen Johnson surprised everyone by defending his title---it just goes to show that on a given night, anything can happen. I think Johnson figured that he'd force the action and make Jones go on the defensive from the beginning. Johnson probably thought "Who is this guy to take my belt and mess with my family's future!!" I'm impressed that Jones hung in and fought back, but at this point, Jones should consider hanging it up. He's done all he could do and has a lot of money. Time to move on. The type of one punch KO's he's endured are scary--- he's a fine champion who dominated the sport for a couple years---there's no reason to get hurt. Ditto for Riddick Big Daddy Bowe. He won his first comeback fight, but he's been smart with his money (supposedly has many millions) so why come back? He says he misses the lights, attention and glory.
32-5 WITH 20 KNOCKOUTS IS AMAZING, IF HE IS THE "GREATEST" this is a good argument, his whole career was top ten fighters and 24-0 17 knockouts vs the rest. One other thing Kent, that microfilm makes JQ'S bouts seem "live" i was mad at those writers all day yesterday! HA!!

9/27/04 05:20:42 PM|Ralph Sampson (not Malph)|Roma, remember Nerone ?|||there was a kangaroo in my living room.|I guess that Machen dominated the fight, but Jerry was still a great fighter!|Evandro " Fauls deal " Holyfield will return to the ring against that wimp Larry Donald on 13 November. Maybe he will stop fighting only when he'll be seriously injured with a record of 37-38-1 !

9/27/04 11:44:56 PM|kookoo|ny|||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||I see that DKS is still here, always was a detractor. I heard once that he was real smart, college and all, going to be a counseler, YEA RIGHT, I'M SURE :)))

9/28/04 12:58:45 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca|||kentallenent@aol.com|||Koo Koo, looks like you were right about James Toney. That guy, Rydell Booker insulted him at the weigh in so he punished the guy for twelve rounds. He didn't put him away as Toney appears to have a real mean streak. I think Toney could have knocked the guy out at some point but he didn't. Was it on purpose? Quite possible.

9/28/04 01:05:52 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||Ah KooKoo, te infilo un braccio in gola e te rivorto come un carzino ! Te pio pe l'orecchie e te scarto come 'na caramella ! Che cazzo vuol di' DKS ? Anvedi questo ! (Roman slang).|

9/28/04 08:10:40 AM|Charles Anderson|ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com|||roy jones,jr. is a shot fighter. age has nothing to do with it.(hopkins). tommy morrison never recovered his being ko'd by mercer, prime example. bowe is through too. but he will hang around too long too, if thse commisions continue to grant him a liscence.

9/28/04 09:46:54 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC|||funktron@yahoo.com|||Charles: I agree, but I have to admit, I didn't see it coming. At what point should I (and a lot of others) have clued in that Jones was shot? I mean, he really doesn't seem to have anything left. He went from the top to being an also-ran faster than I could ever imagine. What signs did we miss on this? He beats Ruiz and people are talking about Tyson and other nonsense, now he gets KOed twice by two punches---and Glen Johnson????.

9/28/04 05:28:06 PM|Massimo|Roma||4|||ESPN showed Leonard-Hearns tonight! What a fight! Hearns fought very well the first 5 rounds but Salt Ray had him in trouble in round 6 and 7. Tommaso came back well in rounds 9-10 and 12 just to have his ass whipped in the followings two rounds. Both fighters moved very well but Salt Ray could take a punch better than Tommaso. The quality of the fight was excellent, even better than Carnera-Impelletiere. It is incredible that Hearns weighted only about 65 Kg, wilt and muscular as he was. There were Cassio Marcello, Larry (sorry, but Larry is hard to translate) and the legendary Giovanni Patrizio Mc Enroe at ringside.PS: this ain't Roman slang.

9/29/04 11:37:14 AM|Koo koo|ny|||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||your right kent, toney is a symptom of todays screwed up youth, which he should be smarter because he's getting on the old side for boxing.he'll get his, they all do, they just have to keep boxing.

9/29/04 01:29:17 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca|||kentallenent@aol.com|||Koo Koo, it isn't that Toney isn't smart as he is an intelligent man, he may not be educated but he is smart. I can tell he is smart by the way he uses strategies in the ring. I can also tell he is smart from talking to him.
is mean, punishing Booker more than was needed shows this. Someone can be mean and smart at the same time. |
| 9/29/04 03:45:31 PM | Sister ELT[a]|b|||10|Where have you been Ko Koo ? On an overseas holiday ? In the slammer ? Straight jacket ? Fighting fatwahs ? Working for the Kerry campaign ? I'M GLAD YOU'RE BAAAAAAAAACCCCCKK!! | |
| 9/30/04 03:52:35 AM | Giant Baba|Roma||4|||10|Cassius Clay soon after beating Sonny Liston:I'M THE CHAMPION OF THE WORDL, I'M THE KING OF THE WORDL !!!!! EAT YOUR WORDS ! EAT YOUR WORDS ! I DON'T HAVE A MARK ON MY FACE AND I HAVE UPSET SONNY LISTON...I MUST BE THE GREATEST !! I PRAY GOD EVERY DAY !! I'M THE KING ! I'M PRETTY ! I SHOOK UP THE WORDL !! I SHOOK UP THE WORDL !! I'M THE REAL GOD !!!!!!!!!!!!!If this is not legend, what is legend all about ?| |
| 9/30/04 09:44:31 AM | Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Yes, Ali was the greatest but he was no God, just a man like anybody else with human frailties that he is living with now.I am not starting a religious debate but no man is equal to or above God, not even the great Muhammad Ali.| |
| 9/30/04 09:46:15 AM | Kent|same||arootytoottooty@|||10|I can't find my glasses damn typos!| |
| 9/30/04 10:59:24 AM | Massimo|Roma||4|||10|Kent, my friend, I don't agree with you this time. I feel I am not below God by any means.At least I am real and I can write here. The only place where God exists is in the minds of people.| |
| 9/30/04 12:53:02 PM | Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Massimo, we can agree to disagree on this one and I will not go out of my way to push my beliefs on people so no more talk about religion here as it is a touchy subject, even worse than politics so sorry folks, no more responses from me and sorry for mentioning it.| |
| 9/30/04 02:17:10 PM | Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Didn't Kirk and Spock go looking for God in Star Trek V., and didn't they not find God, but determine that God lives in all of us? That's good enough for me---Kirk and Spock were very bright. I will say this Massimo, man can build a robot or vehicle that can outperform man, but by no means are these creations greater than we are. Likewise, God might have created us and just because we don't see him/her in our presence, it doesn't mean we're greater. | |
| 9/30/04 02:32:55 PM | Massimo|Roma||4|||10|I imagine God with Silvio Berlusconi's face that smiles to you with 40 teeth and says:" Mi consenta, I want to ask you some question. During your mortal life did you root for Milan ? If not, you are a pirla ( milanese slang for bum somehow, hard to translate) and you have to go to hell ! Or I can imagine a God with Steven Keaton's face ! Sorry for talking about religion. What's religion ?| |
| 9/30/04 06:08:51 PM | Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Actually Angelo, Kirk and Spock and the crew of the Enterprise were hijacked by Spock's long lost brother and his followers who thought God was at the center of the galaxy.Kirk and Spock also committed sacrilege when they tried to get into the oracle on the asteroid spaceship and they were zapped by electricity by the oracle, which turned out to be a computer.They also destroyed computers that controlled whole populations of people on the planets such as the one where people walked around in a hypnotic computer induced bliss and on the planet where the people had to feed explosive rocks inside a large lizard like head to a computer that controlled them but gave them virtual immortality and an Eden like paradise to live. | |
| 10/1/04 11:14:06 AM | Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Kent: Piccard might have been a more realistic Captain, but I still say Kirk was more exciting! Really, Shatner and Nimoy ought to do one more movie for old time's sake! I'm not a big sci-fi fan, but how could you not like the Enterprise?| |
| 10/1/04 12:44:55 PM | charles anderson|ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|did jerry always cut easily in his fights or was the Frazier fight really the beginning?

| 10/1/04 12:50:30 PM | Brandon Walsh | Roma | 4 ||| 10 | How wilt is Kerry? If he is going to be president it would be important to know it! I'm not very wilt but it doesn't matter because I don't think I'll never be president of the United States of America. I think it's not very likely. Maybe I might be elected president of Little Italy. |

| 10/1/04 02:10:35 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 4 ||| 10 | Charles: I'm 41 years old---so I was about 7 or 8 when I started following boxing. By that time (1970) I remember that Jerry already had a reputation for being a bleeder. I don't know if it was deserved or not, but I remember other fans and also commentators saying that cuts were his big problem. |

| 10/2/04 10:44:21 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | John Kerry is about 6'3" tall. It is just a guess but he is about four inches taller than George W. Bush. George H.W. Bush, the president's father is about 6'3" also. |

| 10/3/04 01:19:56 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 ||| 10 | Kent: Thanks! This means that he can be a good president! The president of USA, the most powerful man in the world, has to be wilt! The only problem with Kerry is that he ain't Republican and so Alex P. Keaton would never vote him! Shaq, for president! |

| 10/3/04 06:40:02 AM | Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com | 10 | Does anyone know if ESPN has taken Friday Night Fights off the air for good? I know this was going to happen eventually because the money wasn't there...I didn't remember them announcing it was the last show during the 9/3 broadcast. As for the Kerry-Bush fight, I am still undecided, even though Kerry is indeed more "Wilt" than King George. Kerry seems to have a little more flash and might steal some rounds by working the last 20 or 30 seconds, ala Ali and SR Leonard, but Bush seems to have a gut pounding body attack, and I've always liked body punchers, that may leave Kerry a wasted heap in the end... |

| 10/3/04 02:15:09 PM | Angelo | DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Actually, I read that no U.S. President has been under six feet tall. Bush must be at least an even six feet. |

| 10/3/04 02:41:03 PM | Adriana Balboa | Roma | 4 ||| 10 | Diavolo: You disappoint me! I have read somewhere about a president that (or who) was about 5'4". I'm not sure about his name, maybe Madigan. I don't know what he did as a president, but I bet he was a bum. PS: 5'4" is exactly as wilt as Alex. P. Keaton while Steven Keaton is 6'4" and could have been a good democratic president! |

| 10/3/04 03:51:46 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | James Monroe was 5'4" tall, not very Wilt, but he did give us the Monroe Doctrine which states any interference from foreign powers in the Western Hemisphere will be met with force by the United States. So if France came over and was trying to take over say, Argentina, than the U.S. would come to the aid of Argentina. Funny how in 1982 when Britain went to war with Argentina, technically they were in violation of the Monroe Doctrine, which has never been repealed but the U.S. did nothing to help Argentina and in fact, gave their allies, the British logistical support. I know it was a different world situation when this war happened but the Monroe Doctrine was still on the books. |

| 10/3/04 04:02:05 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 ||| 10 | Yeah, Byron Stewart would be the greatest president of all time! |

| 10/3/04 07:40:21 PM | Gerry | Cleveland | same | 6 | The 5'4 president was James Madison, the fourth US President overall. He was such a bum he wrote the Constitution of the United States almost single-handedly and presided over the War of 1812, which forced other nations to take America seriously. Illness as a child made him short, but his brain was large indeed... The Monroe Doctrine was actually written by Monroe's Secretary of State, John Quincy Adams, another very intelligent man who would follow Monroe to become the #6 U.S. President. The Monroe Doctrine was never taken very seriously by Europe but was also never seriously challenged... Kerry is said to be about 6'3, Bush is about 5'10. The United States has had several presidents under six feet tall. Eisenhower, Truman and Carter were all under six feet tall. Lyndon Johnson and George Bush Sr. are the two tallest U.S. Presidents ever, both about 6'5. As Madison proved, it's the size of your ability that matters most, a fact not lost on the star of this site. Thanks.

You are right, Gerry, it was Madison, not Monroe who was short. I always get the two of them mixed up.

It was to honour president Madison that was builded the Madison Square Garden, I guess.

Saw an interview recently with Larry Holmes and he was asked 'What is the hardest punch you have ever been hit with?'. Earnie Shavers was the answer! He said that Earnie made a mistake and him too hard! If he hadn't hit him so hard he wouldn't have bounced on the canvas and woke himself up! He also thinks very little about todays heavies and little of Lennox Lewis (who I think Larry would have beaten). The fight I would have most like to have seen would be Larry vs a prime Joe Frazier. I once heard that Joe broke Larry's rib in sparring.

Evren--

Lennox Lewis was a fine champion in my opinion! With 15.5 second only to Carrera for shoe size among the heavyweight champs, 'wilt, andre', powerful, his reach was almost as long as Ray Impelletiere's, great jab, skillfull, great hand speed. His two flaws were a not quite chivalian chin and the fact that he was sometimes a little too shy in the ring. When he lost against Has Been Rahman he was out of shape and not focused. His only real loss was against Oliver Mc Call. He is the best heavyweight Great Britain has ever had, better than Bruno, Cooper and London. God save the Queen! I once read an interview with Larry Holmes and he was asked 'What is the hardest punch you have ever been hit with?'. Earnie Shavers was the answer! He said that Earnie made a mistake and him too hard! If he hadn't hit him so hard he wouldn't have bounced on the canvas and woke himself up! He also thinks very little about todays heavies and little of Lennox Lewis (who I think Larry would have beaten). The fight I would have most like to have seen would be Larry vs a prime Joe Frazier. I once heard that Joe broke Larry's rib in sparring. I

But you make my point in your post---Ali underestimated Norton, had his jaw broken (many say in the first round) but still gave Norton a great fight. He didn't get cold-cocked like Lewis did on two occasions. Most of the time, the greats don't come into a fight unprepared. When they do, they usually still win or give it a great effort like Ali did in Norton I., even though he lost. For that matter, Ali-Spinks I. was similar---Ali was out of shape and unprepared, but slugged it out for 15 rounds against a guy almost young enough to be his son. Lewis might have the capability of hitting harder than Holmes, but he never put combinations together like Holmes. He never set up his KO punches like Frazier. He won a lot of fights by being big and plodding and using his height and reach to avoid getting into an exchange he wouldn't survive. Again, that was a good strategy for a guy who was knocked out cold by Oliver McCall and Hasim Rahman.

By the way, I've said it before---Lewis was still a very good Champion who proved himself by holding the title for so long. Also, outside the ring, he brought class to the sport by being articulate and apparently he was a good guy. I just think he barely misses the "great" category.

Leon Spinks completely dominated the first Ali' fight! He outpunched Ali' 10-1. Apart 2 or 3 rounds (for instance, round 15 was one of the greatest rounds I ever saw, and a hard one to score) Ali slept for almost all the fight. He did almost nothing. I suspect that the first Lewis-Mc Call fight was stopped too soon. Lennox was up on his big feet and I am not sure he was gone.

Lennox was up on his big feet and I am not sure he was gone.

And as a person Lewis is very Albert, one of the most intelligent heavyweight champs ever.

Ulysses Grant was also "spud" (as in Spud Webb, that's Atlanta for short) president, around 5'4" or so, Lincoln at 6'4" towered over him. Massimo I think your right about Lewis' KO loss to Mc Call and also Rahman, he did get up and beat the count both times. In the 70's and early 80's he would have been allowed to continue and who knows what would have happened. If the second Holmes-Shavers fight had been held this past Saturday, Shavers would be champion today.

Lewis got caught and KO'd twice but he avenged both of these losses. By KO over Rahman and also by TKO over McCall in the infamous "Crybaby" fight in which an unstable McCall quits and cries in the ring, refusing to fight. I am not sure why people are critical of Lewis for fighting from the outside as he was very hard to beat doing that. What is wrong with doing what wins fights? Ali did the same thing in the first part of his career and he was hardly touched. Roy Jones was also brilliant from the outside but he has probably lost that ability to not be hit and he has been knocked out twice recently.

Rahman was in top condition when he lost with (or to) Lennox, while Lewis was in bad shape when he lost with (or to) Hasim.

Bob B, although Grant was "spud" I don't think he was as short as Madison was. Of course Lincoln made Grant look short as he towered over just about everyone from his era. I am not a figment of the human imagination. If you keep speaking about me like that, you will never get to meet me. Change your ways or you'll need some fireproof clothing. John Kerry might be 6'3" tall, but those who know him call him 'teeny weeny' for other reasons. He's got a small heart. I tipped Ali to beat Foreman. I got together with Alah before the fight and it was us who slackened the ropes. Alah akbah.

I also knew that Roy Jones Jnr's time had come. I made it happen. He's got a small heart. I tipped Ali to beat Foreman. I got together with Alah before the fight and it was us who slackened the ropes. Alah akbah.

I also knew that Roy Jones Jnr's time had come. I made it happen. He stopped being kind to his Mom and wasn't eating his vegetables. By the way, Kerry hasn't got a snowball's chance in hell. Gerry didn't pray hard enough!

I never hurt anybody and I never stole a cent in my entire (or whole) life. The baddest action I did in my life was at age 5 (or so) when I kicked my grandmother's ass because she didn't want to play with me. I think I deserve at least the Purgatory and I don't think this is bragging. I'm a good guy. If God needs that someone believes in him (or if God needs someone to believe in him) to send him in Paradise, He (or She, or It, or Gay, or Lesbo) is not worthy of respect.

You're gonna have to suck up better than that if you hope to get through the pearly gates.

As you'd expect, there's lots of Italians with big fat guts up here, because we've got the best spaghetti you can get. But atheists aren't welcome. You are probably the only Italian atheist in Italy, if not the entire universe.

Have you met my good friend, the Pope? He doesn't look too healthy and I might replace him soon, if you know what I mean.

No, I never met the Pope and I never saw him in person. I respect him and I hope his health is gonna improve (or get better) but I can live without meeting him.

I am considering replacing the Pope with George Foreman. George and I often have chats and he recently told me that he wants to fight again. George's tired of giving people heart disease with his grillers! His next fight won't be the Rumble In The Jungle. Who will George fight? We talked about Dean Martin, and, yes, we know he's dead, but that doesn't matter in modern boxing. Coming up with a gimmicky name for the fight isn't a problem. It won't be Rumble In The Jungle. Maybe Stumbling In The Nursing Home. Anyway, after he wins that fight (I already know the result, and I'm not even Don King), I'm gonna make him Pope.......Pope George.

I just heard that Jimmy Ellis is suffering from Dementia Puglistica, of course the same affliction that took our own Jerry Quarry. What a shame and although I have never met Ellis, he seems like a fine gentleman. My heart and prayers go out to him and his family, a fine fighter and like I said, a fine gentleman. We must never forget our fallen and afflicted warriors.

I'm very sorry to hear that, Kent! When did the disease start?

According to a report I read, Jimmy started showing signs two years ago. Jimmy, like JQ, had a lot of tough fights early in his career and he probably stayed around too long too as without looking up his record, I remember him having a string of losses at the end of his career. But who knows? I don't think anybody really knows yet when damage such as this occurs.

I remember meeting him when I was 13 years old in 1967, he was getting Ali ready for the Folley fight in MSG. It's ironic, at the Trinidad fight last week, I bumped into Don Brophy from the Boxing Hall of Fame in Canastota. I asked him about Mando Ramos, Carmen Basilio, and Jimmy Ellis. Don told me that Carmen was slowing down. Which is understandable he is in his seventies. And in fairness to Carmen the last time I saw him 10 years ago he was in good shape. Don told me that Mando Ramos had to search for words when speaking. And finally, that the spark was no longer in Jimmy Ellis. The description about Ellis surprised me at the time. But you are right he had a lot of fights against tough fighters. I understand that by the time he retired he was blind in one eye.
Anybody remember trainer Al Silvanni (cut man for Rocky I, AND CLUBBER LANG'S Manager Rocky III). He was the guy who lifted Jerry Q. up after he ko'd Foster and worked his corner, also worked Machen's corner vs Jerry in 1966, the April 10, 1972 at the Fabulous Forum film they showed on this website. Foreman vs Gullick, where they introduced JERRY, HIM and Silvanni looked like they were really reminacing good times and cutting up, Ironically they were advertising next weeks war with Quarry-Corletti. Where I had to tell Kent which arena he was in! Boy did that Quarry look stocky in street clothes, he also did not shake hands with Foreman, for they might be having an upcoming bout. Jimmy Ellis was one of my favorite fighter's. and more importantly one of my favorite people, he actually has been suffering for a time now, and even showing a little decline at the end of his great career, all the best JIMBO!!

Funny, at a fight card last week I met Lou Filipo, the ref in all of the Rocky movies. We were standing in front of some slot machines at the Trump 29 casion in Coachella, Ca that had the likeness of Rocky B on them. I started doing my imitation of Rock and Mickey. Mick: "you fight last night?" Rock: "Yeah." Mick: "did ya win?" Rock: "I won by second round knockout!" Mick: "Who'd ya fight?" Rock: "Spider Rico" Mick: "he's a bum!" Rock: "you say everyone I fight is a bum!" Mick: "well, aint they?" I had recognized Filipo before as being an official but I didn't realize who he was by name until he introduced himself after my little interlude. Filipo said at first he thought Rocky I was going to be a bad movie—while it was being filmed, but he agreed with me that it turned out great.

I'm also sorry to hear about Jimmy Ellis, who proved to be a top guy and briefly a beltholder during the Golden Age, 1966-1975. Ellis proves again the screaming need for reform in the sport of boxing just as so many others have before him. Best wishes to Ellis and so many others in the same boat.

Lou Filipo is the worst referee in boxing history. All the Rocky's fights should have been stopped earlier (or sooner, or before), especially the fourth. He is nuts! You say that you were in Coachella, Ca last week. Does legendary California exist for real or is it a figment (God taught me this word) of the MEDIA? I note that Rocky Balboa spoke in standard English, while Micky spoke in SUPERSLANG with all those ya etc. That's amazing! I would have expected the contrary was true. Kent, do you think that Spider Rico was a bum? I miss Steve "Big Hands" the Calabrese from New Jersey. Where is he? Is he visiting Calabria?

Lou Filipo is the worst referee in boxing history. All the Rocky's fights should have been stopped earlier (or sooner, or before), especially the fourth. He is nuts! You say that you were in Coachella, Ca last week. Does legendary California exist for real or is it a figment (God taught me this word) of the MEDIA? I note that Rocky Balboa spoke in standard English, while Micky spoke in SUPERSLANG with all those ya etc. That's amazing! I would have expected the contrary was true. Kent, do you think that Spider Rico was a bum? I miss Steve "Big Hands" the Calabrese from New Jersey. Where is he? Is he visiting Calabria?

Lou Filipo is the worst referee in boxing history. All the Rocky's fights should have been stopped earlier (or sooner, or before), especially the fourth. He is nuts! You say that you were in Coachella, Ca last week. Does legendary California exist for real or is it a figment (God taught me this word) of the MEDIA? I note that Rocky Balboa spoke in standard English, while Micky spoke in SUPERSLANG with all those ya etc. That's amazing! I would have expected the contrary was true. Kent, do you think that Spider Rico was a bum? I miss Steve "Big Hands" the Calabrese from New Jersey. Where is he? Is he visiting Calabria?

Lou Filipo is the worst referee in boxing history. All the Rocky's fights should have been stopped earlier (or sooner, or before), especially the fourth. He is nuts! You say that you were in Coachella, Ca last week. Does legendary California exist for real or is it a figment (God taught me this word) of the MEDIA? I note that Rocky Balboa spoke in standard English, while Micky spoke in SUPERSLANG with all those ya etc. That's amazing! I would have expected the contrary was true. Kent, do you think that Spider Rico was a bum? I miss Steve "Big Hands" the Calabrese from New Jersey. Where is he? Is he visiting Calabria?
in California. Beverly Hills is in California. Hollywood is in California also. You have lost a couple of points since Shaq has gone away but you are still at the top of the list. Everyone who really counts something in this world has at least an apartment there. :-) We have Caianiello but Caianiello ain't Los Angeles by any means in my book.GREAT FIGHT. LET'S GET READY TO RUMBLE!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!Paolo Vidoz vs Nicolai Valuevh: 1.90 m  h: 2.11 mw: about 107 Kg  w: about 147 Kgshoe size: ?  shoe size: ?Nicolai Valuev is much wilter and andrer, but I still think Paolo is gonna win ! We'll see !EVREN: How are you? I'VE recently moved where they actually have a few city libraries, although its like living in an insane asylum!!! New York of the NORTHWEST for real!! Anyway, I've really upped my research on Jerry and a few other fighter's. ive found out so much about Jerr's career, i'd like to be the official bearer of Jerry's record, its amazing,ive even typed out where he was in the rankings for every fight, and his opponents, I have a lot on the London bout, and if you will pay postage would be glad to send copies your way. Its great reading, but the dadgumed L.A. press where viscious to Quarry, I spent a day in Vegas and microfilmed for 12 hours on Quarry's career, there are also discrepancies, on Quarry's internet record, Such as dates and weights etc. Example: Ring mag. had Charley Reno's weight at 221, when actually the Seattle paper had Reno at more accurate 251, and for that bout they had Jerry at 212, which would have been his heaviest weight ever, when actually he was 201 1/4 his heavy was 209 3/4 vs "SCRAP IRON" IN 1975, AND HIS LOWEST WAS 183 LBS, In his pro debut, take care!!Nicolay Valuev is the new WBA International middleweight....No, heavyweight champion !He beat Paolo Vidoz by KOT 9. His legend started living. Now Vitali has got a fight in his hands again. This guy who is wilter and andrer than even him. Anybody saw the Vidoz-Valuev fight ? I didn't. |I fought in the very night in which Firpo threw Dempsey out of the ring !If I remember correctly, Dempsey landed on your head. That explains everything. Moron. |God shouldn't use words like MORON !God deserves to go to hell ! Go hell God, I have a confession to make. You are right. Please forgive me. I'll say ten Hail Mary's. What happened was this. I read your message and saw the number (4). I wrongly believed that you were rating this site a 4. I was insulted. So I called you a moron. I should have turned the other cheek. I am a hypocrite. I apologise. Hail Mary full of grace, ........., etc, etc, 10 times. I've since seen that you rated that site a 10 and that the number (4) was after your name. It was then I realized that I was wrong. Take it easy God, no problem. It's all right ! I grew up in the streets of Philadelphia and I have seen much worse things than the word MORON. Then I met Rocky and he gave me another chance. Making him the world champion became my goal and he made my dream come true by knocking out Apollo Creed in that unforgettable last round. I agree with you, this is a great site and it deserves a 10. Rocky enjoys this site very much too. PS: I think that Rocky Balboa style is very similar to Oscar Bonavena's. Balboa and Bonavena were both great fighters who likely would be undoubted heavyweight champions today. |
i just wanted the Jerry Quarry fan's to know that my mother Brenda Quarry, Jerry and Jimmy's sister, passed away sometime yesterday. for those of you who knew her thanks for your support.

I am very sorry to hear that bad news. Very upsetting. I wish you all the best at this terrible time. I wrote to Brenda a few times I remember and she was really nice. God Bless.

She was always nice to me, even went out of her way to make a library trip for me and some old boxing illustrated magazines, she sure conducted herself with class on PHIL DONAHUE, on the site, and everywhere else, the LADY will be very much missed, but not in our hearts.

JIMMY DORSEY

BRENDA AND JAMES WILL ALWAYS BE IN MY HEART, For their class and dignity, Evren's right. Its so hard to come up with the right words, I can remember how telling her a high school story, where you got $20 for an "A" $10 FOR a "B" Come grade time, I told Brenda after my senior year. I ACTUALLY OWED MONEY!! She really laughed and got a kick out of that.

Sheri, I am saddened to her that your mother Brenda has passed away. I met her a couple of times but I could tell by talking to her, however briefly, and by her posts here that she was a fine person and the world is less without her.

Brenda took up some of the slack when the "natives" got out of line here after Jimmy passed away and her wisdom will be greatly missed.

Evren: someone on the internet has at least highlights of QUARRY-LONDON I do not know whom, but I have seen it advertised. If not the whole battle, Jerry won every round, But the L.A. press would never forgive Quarry for his amazing counterpunching style, and hit and not get hit, (which I thought was boxing). Muhammad Ali could get away with it, Dodge duck run and hold, But not our Jerry, what bugs me is Jerry was still ever the gentleman to those birds, and especially as a young man after the Machen bout, THEY EVEN ASKED HIM IF HE WAS GOING TO RETIRE!! with a 17-1 record! I'd have told those mugs to SCRAM and don't let the door hit you on the way out!

QUARRY-DOYLE 1973 was on closed circuit, undercard at the Fabulous forum. For Ali-Norton II. Jerry reportedly got in Foreman's face for a bout, out in the crowd. I seen Quarry dismantle James J. WOODY 10 days earlier in Vegas. and 12 days earlier he married Charlie (ARELENE CHARLES). Woody 207 1/2 and Doyle a svelte 202 1/2 both trained hard to pull an upset on Quarry, which is the name of the game. The way people end up. Many times I'd wished boxing and never been in invented. Very definitly should have been more controlled, when a fighter's had his day. Not to mention any names lightweight Johnny Copeland gets ko'd by a top ten fighter then a week later in another state gets knocked out by another top ten fighter, something is definitly WRONG!!

Sorry to hear about brenda. i never got to see the donahue show. who all was on the program and what was it about? i also read somewhere where a movie on jerry is being done and it will be titled 'hard luck' anything to this?

10/14/04 01:43:15 PM|9|9|9|9|||10|u|
10/15/04 03:25:44 AM|2|2|2|2|||10|2|
10/15/04 10:23:39 AM|g|g|g|||10|q|
10/17/04 01:11:25 PM|8|g|g|||10|q|
10/17/04 11:31:36 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|sseeing if I could get on the board here yet.

10/18/04 01:36:05 PM|charles anderson|ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|what happened

10/19/04 12:22:04 PM|Carl Weingarten|The Jerry Quarry Foundation|||10|Hello,

The Letters page went offline due to a memory limitation in the software. Sorry for the inconvenience. We made the fix, but at some point soon we're going to pull this data and start over, or delete the letters going back more than two years. Thanks, --Carl

10/19/04 02:57:24 PM|Primo Carnera|Roma||4|||10|I'm happy the site is back. Adriano wears a size 45.5 shoe ( about 11.5 in Oregon ) and is the best soccer player in the wordl. But back to boxing and have fun !

10/20/04 03:25:36 AM|Evren|London||8|||10|jimmy dorsey - I have the complete first fight that went points - 10 rounds but it is the second fight that I have seen on a TV station archive!

10/20/04 07:43:05 AM|Evren|London||8|||10|Dear Joe, I Haven't seen it but know where it is and don't think I can get it. Can you e-mail me on air.crayford@firstchoiceretail.co.uk and we can discuss further.

10/20/04 01:42:04 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Evren: how was that bout? I never seen it, but it had to be better than the L.A. experts wrote in the Times. Carl is there anyway you can keep a record of the old letters some where for prosperity? You know like especially Mr.JIMMY'S POSTS. like on a disk or something, please email me Carl I have something I want to send to you.

10/20/04 07:43:05 AM|Evren|London||8|||10|Dear Joe, I Haven't seen it but know where it is and don't think I can get it. Can you e-mail me on air.crayford@firstchoiceretail.co.uk and we can discuss further.

10/22/04 03:29:19 AM|Noam|same||same|||10|Not being an expert, I don't know what Jerry's height and weight were. Having seen extracts from some of his fights, he appeared to me to be around average height and of chunky build, but certainly much smaller than heavy-heavyweights like Lewis, Foreman, et al. If Jerry had more inches in height, and more poundage in weight, it seems to me that he would have been a more effective fighter and probably a champion. More height and weight would have changed the way he approached many of the fights he had. Extra dimensions might have been enough to change results, such as the Frazier fight. Alternatively, could Jerry have lost weight to become a light-heavy? Imagine him in that division. His style would have made for great fights and there would not have been too many able to beat him. Looking back on the light-heavyweights, Jerry might have been pushing it against the taller and wonderfully skilled Foster. But there are not many other light-heavyweight champions I would bet on against Jerry, even though I'm no expert. Maybe Jerry never winning the title means that he was an unlucky man between sizes. Too small but too big, if you get my drift. In stature and dimensions, I mean, not in heart and courage. Jerry Quarry was about as wilt as Kent Appel and weighted around 195 lbs. Jerry was listed at 6'0 1/2" tall and in his prime he weighed between 195 to 202 pounds. He was outweighed in about 66% of his professional fights, so yes he was at that in between size as it is doubtful he could have made the light heavyweight limit of 175 pounds. Now if there had been a crusierweight division during his career of a weight limit of 190 or 195, that weight would have been very reachable and Jerry likely would have been a great crusierweight. There wasn't so many titles on offer either when Jerry fought. There was probably only the WBA and WBC, but none of the other pretenders. So even qualifying to fight for the title was probably a greater achievement than winning the modern version, given that there are so many of them. Iran Barkley wants to come back at 44 years of age and officially blind in one eye. He should not be allowed to fight again. I was watching a synthesis of the Holyfield-Holmes fight fought in 1992 and Holmes held his own pretty well. It's almost unbelievable that 4 years later Holyfield stopped Mike Tyson in 11. A younger Holyfield couldn't stop a 43 years old Holmes but could stop a 30 years old Tyson!

Iran Barkley fighting with only one eye!!! Imagine two one armed guys fighting. That would answer the age old question once and for all whether a good jab would beat a great right cross. It would be entertaining, for certain.
have divisions and rules. It would be unfair to have a two armed guy with only one leg fighting a one armed guy with two legs. It would have to be identical disability versus identical disability. Problem is that say someone like John Kerry wants to fight, you'd have to find someone with a quarter brain or less to oppose him. We'd have to go trawling the whacko houses to find him a suitable opponent. Perhaps Kerry already found his equal opponent. I see in the news today that he's been out hunting and shot himself a goose. I'd say that's an equal contest.

I think that a guy with only one leg couldn't last the distance.

Perhaps Kerry already found his equal opponent. I see in the news today that he's been out hunting and shot himself a goose. I'd say that's an equal contest.

I think that a guy with only one leg couldn't last the distance.

CALIFORNIA| |RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM| | |10|Thanks Gerry for the kind words, i'll send you an update everytime I do one, what I wanted and did achieve was how Jerry was ranked going into the bout, and if his opponent was ranked (Ring magazine) the weights, dates, scores of decisions, Tko vs K0 (which did not mean much with Jerry for about a dozen of his TKO'S WERE kayo's. Foster, Zanon, Borden etc. In other words I wanted to make it where you just did not look at a record like just wins and losses. but rather READ his record with the hard core stats, I wished I could make it a full time job on the internet, with as many fighter's as I could do, Also I would have my money on Jerry vs Bob Foster, was like 0-8 vs the heavys and 1-1 vs Bob Hazleton, whom by the way lost his legs due to steroid use and not Jack "the Giant" O'HALLORAN THAT SOME ONE HAD MENTIONED.

Jerry was around 6'0" as I met him and I seemed to be about as tall as him and I am about 5'11", so I was in the ballpark. Mike Quarry seems slightly taller than me as does Bob Quarry, who along with Mr. Jimmy is about 6'1." One thing about the Quarry brothers is they seem to with the exception of Jerry, stand straight up all of the time, they have good posture. Mike is probably the same height as me but he stands straight and I don't. Jerry likely could have been the one who was slightly taller than me but like me, he didn't stand up straight, or so it seemed to me.

Jerry was not like Joe Frazier or Mike Tyson who while listed at 5'11 1/2" are actually shorter. Jerry was close to what he was listed at, like I said, about 6'0"

I have good memory and I remembered that you met JQ several times and all the rest, I was only joking around. JQ was slightly wilter than Joe Frazier so I think somewhere between 5'11" and 6'. I have seen yesterday on ESPN Classic a special about (or on) Shaq's life and Shaq has to dip to get through a door. The guy is no bluff, the guy is really wilt. Shaquille " The Big Dipper" O'Neal.

Shaq's life and Shaq has to dip to get through a door. The guy is no bluff, the guy is really wilt. Shaquille " The Big Dipper" O'Neal.

From reading recent postings to this Website, it would appear that even the "regulars" are unaware that Jerry Quarry's beautiful sister Brenda died of a sudden and unexpected heart attack about one week ago. She was a beautiful person in every way--always very proud of and supportive of her fighting brothers. I do believe that expressions of condolence to the Quarry family should be the "order of the day" on this Website at this most stressful time.

Brenda's passing is a loss that cannot be replaced. The Quarry family, her friends, this site, and the world itself is less without her.

Bill is right, hopefully everyone who visits this place will recognize how many tragedies the Quarry family has experienced in such rapid succession.
keep on keepin on. | 10/25/04 07:51:13 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|I've only been visiting this site for a short time, but when my comments went a bit far Brenda pulled me up politely about it and, of course, she was right. That was only a few weeks ago. My sincere condolences to the Quarry family. We all know what a decent and tough family the Quarrys are, but it seems that fate is intent on making them prove it over and over again. Let's pray that the run of bad luck they've had is now at an end, and that life now begins treating them better. | 10/25/04 08:19:57 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Just watched again the first Ali/Liston fight on ESPN Classic. The fight was much closer than I had previously thought. In fact I scored it again and I had the fight even at the time of the stoppage. Round one saw Ali control the what little action there was by making Liston miss and at the same time Ali was effective with his left jab. These reasons and a hard two handed combiantion at round's end were the difference. Round two and three showed that although Ali was making Liston miss a lot of punches, Ali spent a lot of time just dancing and not throwing a lot of punches, mostly jabs that were not as accurate as in round one. Liston landed some hard body shots and some left hooks to the head while he contiuoulsy pressed the action during the entire rounds. Ali was more accurate in round four so I gave him the round on this basis as he outlanded Liston. Round five saw Ali run the entire round to clear his eyes that were stinging from some substance and while Liston was missing a lot, he still landed some hard body shots and left hooks to the head. Round six saw Ali accurate again with the left jab and also with hard combintions to Liston's head. Even so, Liston did land some body shots and a couple of hard hooks. Hence, my score of 57-57. That being said, I could tell the momentum in round six was going Ali's way. This trend could even be felt in round five as Liston could not badly hurt a half blinded Ali. It was still a very close fight, which I could see by turning off the favorable commentary towards Ali by announcer Don Dunphy. Ali very well could have dominated the second half of the fight but we will never know this as Liston quit after six rounds claiming a torn shoulder. I think that the third round was the best of the fight. Cassius stunned Liston with good punches early in the round, gonfiando Liston's face, but Sonny came back at the end of the round and hurt Clay with an uppercut. I think that the round was even or slightly for Clay, as Liston took a worse beating than Clay did. The first round was for Clay, the second was probably for Liston and the fourth was even. But Liston purposely blinded Clay. The simple fact that Clay survived the fifth round, it's almost a miracle and shows that he was a great fighter. After the fifth round Liston wasn't in the fight anymore and Cassio easily won the sixth round. After 6 rounds the fight was even or maybe Clay was 1 point ahead, but anyway the fight was very close. I think that Liston was a top tenner in the heavyweight history. He didn't train for the first Clay fight and was over the hill. Who knows who would have won an immaginary Liston-Clay with both fighters at their best? The second fight was likely a farse. Ali' hit Liston with a decent punch, but although (spelling) that punch was good enough to knock down a guy like me, it wasn't good enough to knock down a guy like Sonny Liston. The first loss for Liston was again against Marty "Who" Marshall at a time when he had very few professonal fights and when he lost against Lectis Martin he was old. Sonny Liston was a champion. Tonight on ESPN Classic Primo Carnera steps into the ring and I can't wait! Go Primo go, go Italian midget! | 10/25/04 12:19:26 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Massimo, yes Ali did land some good hard punches in round three of the first Liston fight but he didn't throw a lot of punches for the entire round and Liston did throw a lot of punches. Liston came on strong in the second half of the round. Like I said, there were times in the round when Ali danced and made Liston miss but Ali wasn't throwing punches during some of that time and Liston was. I judge a round by how much someone does for the whole round, not just part of it.

Of course there are times when a fighter can be winning a round by outlanding his opponent for most of the round and his opponent can land some hard punches near the end of the round that hurt the fighter that was winning the rest of the round significantly. So even if the second fighter landed less punches, if he was close to scoring a knockdown, he would win that round on my scorecard.

Momentum has a lot to do with how a fight is going so even if I switched a round for Ali from Liston, though the score would be four rounds to two for Ali after six, not that big of a margin, Ali was clearly the stronger fighter after six rounds even if Liston doesn't quit.

What impressed me the most about the first Ali-Liston fight was the fact that Liston was NOT slow as often reported. He moved well against the fastest heavy of all time.

Giorgio Eduardo Foreman is in Milan (Milano) to promote his GIORGIO EDUARDO's GRILLS. I have just read an interview in which he spoke about his ring career and his life in general. He said that Ali' was the strongest guy he ever fought but that his toughest fight was against Ron Howard, no sorry, was against Ron Lyle. Nobody ever hit me as hard as Ron Lyle did ". He also said that he might come back in the ring the very day of his 56th birthday. But he wants to lose weight before as his weight in this moment is about the same of Shaq, who got a big advantage in willtess though ( Giorgio Eduardo ain't a big dipper). He doesn't put himself among the greatest heavyweights of all time because "all I could do was punching (or to punch) hard". I think he is too humble and too severe to himself. He is definetely one of the greatest.

Yes John, Liston was moving well and throwing fast punches. But I think a lot of people were shocked that Ali wasn't anniallated in one or two rounds and this took away from their perception of Liston's performance. After watching the first fight again, Liston did much better than I had thought before. Liston threw a lot of punches in this fight and he was missing a lot of them so maybe he did injure his shoulder like he said he did. Again, any question about a fix being in for this particular fight can be answered simply by pointing out that no fighter would work as hard as Liston did if he was throwing a fight.

On the subject of judging, I count hard body shots as much as good head punches so even if Liston was missing a lot to the head, he did land to the body of Ali and in some of the rounds, particularly in rounds two and three, Ali wasn't throwing punches at times when he was dancing away. A fighter can't score points if he is not showing offense even if his opponent is missing, but throwing a lot of punches.

To this day, Ron Lyle, who lost two decisions to Jimmy Young, believes he won both fights. It has been a long time since I have seen those fights but Lyle may not have a bad argument as what should count more? Three hard body shots and one hard punch to the head by Lyle or five or six light head punches from Young? As I remember them, in both fights, Lyle was pursuing Young and landing hard body shots throughout both fights along with some punches to the head. Young did land more punches but they were light flurries compared to Lyle's harder shots. It all depends on what the judges are impressed by. Quantity of punches or quality of punches and in the case of the Lyle/Young fights, the judges thought Young's punch output was enough to win both fights. Both Lyle/Young fights reminded me of Ali/Liston 1 as Lyle was missing a lot of punches he was throwing at Young's head, but like Liston, some of them did land. By the way, after one of the Lyle/Young fights, Young left the ring with huge red welts on his sides from Lyle's body attack.
he ever won a fight with the help of the mob. It doesn't seem likely to me but the doubt is legitimate.

By saying Liston fought better than I had thought in his first fight with Ali takes nothing away from Ali's performance. The fact that Liston still had a lot of skills makes Ali's performance remarkable as most people at that time thought Ali would fall early in the fight like Floyd Patterson did, who was knocked out in the first round twice by Liston prior to Ali's fight with Liston.

I saw the clay/liston 1 and i thought liston was very lethargic. no snap to his punches. pattronn would have beat him that night.

Liston could beat Patterson tomorrow afternoon.

I think that Patterson was litterally terrified by Liston, the most intimidating fighter of all time. Sometimes it is hard to understand how a fighter's mind works. Against Liston, Patterson did seem like a chump, but he was no chump when he fought and beat tough and hard punching fighters such as Bonavena and Cooper. Henry Cooper's left hook was like dynamite....BIIIIIIIIIII....BAAAAAAAAM ! It achieved what Liston's left hook couldn't achieve...It did put Cassio Marcello on the canvas. But Patterson had no fear when he fought Henry Cooper. In modern times everyone was terrified by Mike Tyson. Micheal Spinks was almost crying before his fight with Tyson but was happy and calm before his fight with Cooney. Was Cooney's left hook a caress ? I don't think so. All the top heavyweights can punch like hell, Bruno, Maskaev, Ruddock, Mc Call, Lewis, not only Mike Tyson ! Why the only guy everyone feared in the 80's was Mike Tyson ?

you are 100% right!

Patterson totally fought the wrong fights against Liston. He bobbed and weaved and tried to get inside of Liston when he should have been sticking and moving, giving angles to Liston. Then at least he would have given himself a better chance. Liston likely would have caught up to him and knocked him out anyway but not in the first round.

Remember that Patterson had been brutally knocked out by Ingemar Johannson and he came back to knock out Johansson twice. The key to Johannson's win in the first fight was he used his left jab a lot and even though he was not known as having a good jab, he kept putting it out there and it upset Patterson's timing and this set up Ingo's big right hand. Patterson pressed the action in their second and third fights and he got inside of Ingo's reach and it worked. Maybe Patterson thought he could do the same to Liston the second time out but obviously it didn't work.

Patterson was completly psyched by Liston. Floyd was told by everyone,D'Amato the press even President Kennedy that he shouldn't fight Liston. He would be killed by him. Patterson had such a self-doubting and fragile personality I think he really believed what he read and heard. I don't think he had such fear against Johannson or Cooper. Ingo and Cooper were not as physical as Liston, Sonny would grab, hit and hold, push and shove etc. Besides, Liston knew he had Patterson from the beginning, like Kent said maybe Floyd could have lasted a few rounds with Sonny as he did have the speed and footwork to do it, though maybe not the chin, but Liston would have KO'ed him. Cooper's left hook was a potent weapon as was Ingo's right hand but Liston was a more complete fighter than either Ingo or Cooper. To Floyd's credit he did get up and tried to fight on, and did earn Sonny's respect, however he was simply a beaten man before he entered the ring.

I would compare patterson/liston to norton/foreman, they were both scared stiff, and as we all know patterson and norton were great fighters. jerry was not scared of anyone. |
|10/29/04 12:47:47 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Charles---don't forget to include in your comparison the ultimate intimidation victory: Mike Tyson had Michael Spinks petrified during the instructions. Spinks literally lost that fight before the bell sounded to start the fight. I've never seen a legitimate professional boxer that afraid. Don't misunderstand: M. Spinks was a very, very good fighter who amazed me by moving up in weight to win the Heavyweight title. But against Tyson, he was terrified to the point of not even trying to fight. Also, regarding Clay-Liston I.: Kent, maybe it was closer than I recall, but look at the fighters after the fight---look at their faces and their mobility. Liston is slumped on a stool, his face swollen and eyes closed, with a welt the size of Montana near his eye. Clay is unmarked, and jumping around the ring like a mad-man. The fact that Clay had so much energy and didn't look like he had been in a fight makes me think this thing wasn't as close as you saw it. |
|10/29/04 12:51:10 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Charles: Ditto---I never saw JQ intimidated by anyone. He was beaten by some of the best, but was never afraid to stand and trade. It's why I'd give him a chance against some of the big hitters like Tyson and Foreman. They would walk over guys like M. Spinks and Norton, who were so afraid of them. But you take a guy like Quarry, who could take a wallop and stand there and hit you back---and suddenly, the big hitters lose a huge part of their edge. This is how Buster Douglas penetrated Tyson and it's how Ali upset Foreman.|
|10/29/04 03:48:13 PM|An European citizen|Roma||4||||10|Angelo is right, Clay-Liston 1 was very close ( Clay was probably 1 point ahead ) but Liston's face was very puffy ( or puffed up, or swollen, I mean gonfia) and in worse conditions than Cassius'. But when, at the end of the fight Cassius said: " I DON'T HAVE A MARK ON MY FACE, I AM ONLY 22 AND I HAVE JUST UPSET SONNY LISTON" this wasn't totally true. If you look at his face after the fight there was 1 mark. I just watched on ESPN Classic Ali'-Norton 2 and Ali'-Frazier 2. Very honestly I have to say that I think Norton won that fight. I have seen the fight only once but I had Norton 2 points ahead at the end . Norton had Ali' in big trouble in round 7 and 8 ( mostly in round 7). The judge that scored it 7-5 for Ali' obviously saw another fight. The first half of the fight was only decent, but the second was fantastic. Ali' dance throughout the entire fight. I have Ali'-Frazier a draw or maybe Ali' won narrowly ( 1 point ), but Ali' held Frazier throughout the entire fight. Frazier was hurt for a fraction of second in the second round but soon recovered and was fine when the referee separated the two fighters. Unfortunately I couldn't register (or record) these 2 fights as my register (or recorder) is momentarily out of order ( SNORT ).|
went into that fight... Three alleged title fights coming up, John Ruiz vs. Andrew Golota, Chris Byrd vs. Jameel McCline, and Vitali Klitschko vs. Danny Williams. Any thoughts? |

Massimo | Roma | 10/30/04 01:36:48 AM | Gerry-Lou Savarese was terrified against Mike Tyson but was whistling against George Foreman. I think that's unreasonable! Wasn't George Foreman dangerous? Chris Byrd is a very good and alert fighter and I think he is gonna beat "The bouncer". I have never seen Danny fight but I bet that Vitali is gonna whip him. I think Golota is too strong for Ruiz. |

Evren | London | 10/30/04 04:13:55 AM | Gerry - I am coming over to New York to see those fights. The Byrd vs McCLine would be the most interesting I think. I pick McLine. Golota vs Ruiz will either be the dirtiest fight of all time or the most boring - more likely the latter as Ruiz is involved! I so hope Williams wins against Klitscko - nothing against Vitali at all he is a decent role model. I know Danny - have been going to his fights since he turned pro - he is a real gentleman and modest. When required he can really perform - when demotivated he can be not so great! I think Danny can do it. |

Bob Bumbera | NC | 10/30/04 06:46:41 AM | I'll pick Byrd over McCline by decesion. Byrd may find himself in trouble at times but is slick enough to get out. McCline will have to work very hard to find Byrd. Everytime I pick Golota I lose. I think he has as much, if not more, talent as any heavyweight out there but in big fights he shrivels up and dies. A low blow here a punch after the bell there and Ruiz wins another one by DQ. Klitscko-Williams, two real big guys who can hit, what more can you ask for. I think Klitscko has a champions mind set now that Lewis is gone. Williams has had some so-so performances in the past where Klitscko, for the most part, has been dominant. He also has an excellent jab. I'll take Klitscko by a late stoppage. |

Charles | Ark. | 10/30/04 10:49:31 PM | Jerry didn't tell Lyle that he was so ugly that he should knock him out now at a news conference before their bout? that tells you Jerry wasn't afraid of anyone. |

Fight fan | US | 10/31/04 12:09:21 AM | Just watched a "Classic" Sports Network/ESPN show featuring a lame pair of nerdly hosts mercilessly mocking Joe Frazier via a rebroadcast of the 1973 Superstars show. The network owes Joe, and all fans of boxing, an apology. The two imbecils in question have, given their apparent (in)abilities, no doubt (somehow...nepotism...bribery...extortion?) exceeded all "journalistic" ambitions - if they ever had any - while the great Smokin' Joe long ago achieved immortality. True fistic fans should stand up and protest this cheap brand of alleged satire, rendered at the expense of champions like Frazier, who happens to be a decent person and deserving of much better. |

King Kong | LA Zoo | 10/31/04 07:21:31 PM | Yep, frazier is innocent until proven guilty for allegedly assaulting his girlfriend. She told police Frazier punched her and she had marks on her face consistent with the allegation and investigating police believed her. The girlfriend later withdrew the complaint, apparently after Joe assured her he'd behave and wouldn't slap her around again, etc. Yep, Joe's completely innocent (just like OJ), and the girlfriend really punched herself. kent, please pass me some more of your home brewed 100 percent proof cool aid, or have you already guzzled the lot?

[11/1/04 04:07:58 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same|||9|I know I'm going to regret this... Kong, give us a break. Frazier compared to OJ? It's a much, much smaller thing. Whatever did happen, it's a done deal. Frazier and girlfriend are cool, you should be too. Joe's a good guy and deserves a pass. Lighten up.]

[11/2/04 02:08:53 AM|King Kong|LA Zoo||=|||10|thanks, gerry. I don't hold grudges against women bashers like joe either. amongst apes, it's common behaviour. sounds like you'd also make a good chump. by your standards, tyson must also be a good guy. had the rape victim withdrawn her complaint, i guess that would've made it okay, too. anytime i need to learn some more about morality, i'll rush back here to ask you gerry. you seem to know everything.]

[11/2/04 04:31:35 AM|Noam|same||noamc@aol.com|||10|Frazier's innocence is a presumption, whereas OJ had his innocence determined and gazetted by a lawful jury trial of his peers. Therefore, comparing Frazier to OJ, as a matter of law, is unfair and defamatory of the latter, not the former. [br]I guess that was the point Gerry was making. Go figure.]

[11/2/04 10:44:08 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Wow, if Rhodescholarette were checking in, I'm sure she'd be jumping to Smokin' Joe's defense. Of course, if she were the one on the receiving end of his left hook, she might not be so quick to defend him. I wonder if the complaint was true in the first place? If he did in fact hit her, then she withdrew the complaint when things settled down, it still makes him a coward in my book. If he didn't hit her and the story was blown out of proportion---I feel bad for him.]

[11/2/04 11:29:13 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|I think that beating a woman is a horrible action, raping her is one of the most cruel and disgusting actions an human being can do, but killing a woman is still much worse in my book.

Angelo-- I remember that my former English teacher RS once said that "if Frazier really beat his girlfriend he is not such a good guy, huh " (huh is Oklahoma slang) or something di simile. RS doesn't like violent people! I see that she is still in the legend of this site, like Paul from Australia etc. The legend is forever like when Wilt scored 100 points or when Warren Coolidge played against Bill Russell and scored 110 points!]

[11/2/04 12:02:31 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Ironic in that I know nothing about the O.J. case and I have no opinion if he killed his wife or not as I paid no attention to the trial when it happened and I have read nothing about it since then. There is something sick in itself for the media to get high ratings for all of their overcoverage and for advertisers to make a lot of money almost at the expense of someone dying, in this case Mrs. Simpson and I take no part in the media circus involving such cases.I wasn't there when the alleged incident involving Joe Frazier and his girlfriend took place so if I didn't see anything happen, and he wasn't convicted of a crime, then I don't know if a crime occurred or not.]

[11/2/04 12:52:57 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Kent: I agree that we shouldn't jump to conclusions. At the same time, I don't have to be beat over the head with evidence to surmise that something is true. If a crime is reported, investigated and authorities press charges---then the victim decides to withdraw the charge---that doesn't mean nothing ever happened. I will admit though, that without a conviction, you can't assume the person is guilty either. I think you take it case-by-case to develop your opinion. I agree with you also, that the media frenzy on these high profile cases is annoying. We should be hearing real news that matters and affects our lives and instead, we're fed hour after hour of every single detail of how Scott Peterson or O.J. might have killed their spouses. I don't know if the media piles it on because that's what everyone wants---or if it's what everyone wants because the media piles it on! This could be a case of the public wanting what they get instead of getting what they want. |

People are rarely caught the first time they do something wrong. For example, if a guy is a thief he might have stolen 15 times before the cops finally catch up with him. And then they probably get off at court 40% of the times they are charged, so, in the end, one conviction for stealing probably occurs every 30 to 40 times the thief has stolen something. Same for using or selling narcotics, rapes, drunk driving, frauds, ....... and hitting your girlfriend. I think the only way of being sure at 100% would be that God Himself tell us "HE IS GUILTY, I KNOW IT AS I KNOW EVERYTHING", but I think this is not very likely to happen. | was ridiculous and so is Michael Moore's vendetta against Bush & Co. That movie of his was vexatious crap. I was brought up to respect the views of others and basically to keep my own political ideas to myself. But when you see and hear the divisive and confrontational rubbish that the lefties are using as propaganda, it's hard to keep quiet. I'll be glad when it's all over and both sides of politics can stop having cheap snipes at each other. By the way, I am reading General Tommy Franks's book at the moment and it is a very good read. When you realize the selfless discipline and sacrifices that these guys and their families make for the rest of us, it brings tears to my eyes with respect, admiration, and appreciation for them.

| 11/3/04 02:25:50 AM | Scrutineer | DC | reelected | || | 10 |
Oh say can you see.....FOUR MORE YEARS, FOUR MORE YEARS. Suck eggs, Usama. Times up. |
| 11/3/04 03:24:24 AM | Gore More years | Tennessee | Gore.com | || | 10 |
The election hasn't been decided yet as all of the votes in Ohio have not been counted and may not be counted for days yet. Sound familiar? |
| 11/3/04 04:31:25 AM | Evren | London | || | 10 |
Angelo - What you say is right. Every country and I mean every country has it's problems one way or another! No one is perfect - and when you hear or read about other countries you only generally hear about their best or worst never the 'average joe'. |
George Bush is still the President of the United States of America ( also known as USA). Kerry telephoned him and did admit the defeat. The less wilt guy won. Alex P. Keaton is happy, while Steven and Elyse Keaton are sad. |
| 11/3/04 02:36:26 PM | Scrutineer | || | 10 |
Gore More Years - what say you now ? FOUR MORE YEARS. FOUR MORE YEARS (not Gore, Moore, Rears - loser). |
| 11/3/04 04:10:14 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | || | 10 |
Hey Noam, I agree with every word of your post on Election Day, 11-2-04. God Bless America ! There are some interesting heavyweight fights coming in Nov. |
| 11/3/04 05:08:48 PM | Massimo | Roma | || | 10 |
Yoo Steve-Welcome back, we really missed you !My best greetings to your Calabrese " big feeted"wife ! Can she cook good spaghetti alla carbonara ? I like spaghetti alla carbonara very much ! They are very easy to prepare but very good to eat ! |
| 11/3/04 06:30:52 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | | kentallenent@aol.com | || | 10 |
When I was voting, people had left their voting instructions in the voting booth and when those papers started to fall to the ground, a young man came over to pick them up. The results of my votes were on the screen, we had electronic voting machines, and when I covered up my choices with my hand, he said, "it doesn't matter." I told him right away, "yes it does matter that I have privacy in the voting booth." People have died to preserve our right to vote and I am in my own way fighting for freedom every time I step into the voting booth to vote. |
| 11/3/04 07:49:51 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | | Sonia90101@aol.com | || | 10 |
Hi All, its been awhile since I've been able to be on computer was down. Now I am back, I'm sure I've missed alot. Hope all are doing ok. We sure love & miss you Dad, Uncle Jerry, and Aunt Brenda. |
| 11/4/04 12:25:14 AM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | || | 10 |
I'd like to offer my heart,felt sympathy to the Quarry family on the sudden and tragic death of yet another family member. I myself have recently lost two loved ones in a fatal car accident.Our faith in A God is what will keep us going on. Hey Massimo,you Italian womenizing devil,I would never allow you to get withen ten feet of my Calibreesian wife.You are too wilt and probably have huge feet!! You will never know the joys of a true Italian-American gravy.Unless you come to visit me. |
| 11/4/04 12:33:47 AM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | || | 10 |
Hey Kent,Yes, you are doing your part and Civic duty every time you vote.Don't you guys in Cal.have a privacy curtain across your voting booth??Sounds to Me like your right to privacy was invaded!! That should at least warrent a official complaint from you.I'm not kidding!!
GERRY SCHULTZ: I just got the Bakersfield bout with Jerry Quarry and James Williams, very interesting, the scores were 97-96 Gwen Farrell (female judge) 96-95 and referee Larry Rosadilla 96-96, Gwen had to re-add her score card, or it would have been a draw. They say Williams was robbed, they had a faulty scale, and Jerry actually had to lose 6 pounds the day of the bout, Quarry also had at least 60 stitches over his eyes and had both eyes closed, Jerry had a big 6th round and that was about it, I've now have all of Jerry's bouts from microfilm, including the golden gloves, they only big bout of his great career I do not have is 1965 L.A. GOLDEN GLOVES WITH Clay Hodges, were Jerry hit the deck twice but rallied to win. My condolences to Brenda AND THE QUARRY FAMILY, she actually helped me research, bless her heart.

Jimmy D, I didn't know Jerry took such a beating against Williams. I guess with his several draws and fights like this, this is why more than a few doubted Jerry's talent early on. His early career is certainly very interesting stuff, thanks again Jim... I certainly did mean to favorably compare Joe Frazier to O.J. Simpson, trial or not. Joe's offense, if any, is obviously much less severe. I would not call Mike Tyson a nice guy either. Mike has some serious issues, which have been used against him, he has my sympathy as previously stated. Comparing Frazier to these two is pretty thin thinking, in my opinion. Not even in the same league. Let's move on. Thanks. | pleasant debates about sports and everyone laughed and poked good natured fun at each other. All the recent debate is about politics and wars and religion, and there is nothing good natured about it and we don't poke fun anymore, we poke ridicule. Every time I read or watched the news there was some idiot - usually the whining left wingers in my case (or the red necked neocons in Gerry's world) - annoying the crap out of me (and Gerry). I couldn't read a paper or watch tv without getting annoyed. I just want to go back to reading the sports pages first and then having good natured fun and enjoyable debates. Surely by now we're all out of insults. Now for more important things. If Evander Holyfield gets badly hurt in fights ahead, the governing body that lets him keep fighting should be charged with reckless endangerment. I love Evander, but enough is enough. It's time for him to retire and enjoy his wealth in relative good health (and with the parts of his ears that he still has left).
results. Looks like my new number one will have to be the New England Patriots. Funny, my friend in Boston, who is in hog heaven because the Red Sox broke the curse of the Bambino by winning the baseball world series, didn't like it that I didn't have the Patriots number one all season but I couldn't because until their loss to Pitt. I thought the Eagles were playing better and I had the Pats. number two behind them until this week. See, what I tried to explain to my Boston friend, winning the super bowl last year means nothing to my ranking system this year as that was last year.

| 11/8/04 06:25:43 AM | El pibe de oro | Roma, outside California || yao wilter than wilt.com | ||| | 10 | Kent from California (. . . Mieli coglioni, California . . . ) ||| |  | A friend in Boston . . . I don't have any friend in Boston, all the friends I have live in Roma. How is people in Boston. Do they have two arms and two legs like the mortal ones in Caianiello? :-)|

| 11/8/04 02:46:21 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | ||| | 10 | My friend in Boston is more Wilt than I am. He is 6'9" tall and yes he has two arms and two legs.  He has a size 13 shoe size.  Steve, I forgot that New England's only loss was to Pittsburg. So they are my new number one for this week after handing the Eagles their only loss also.  I didn't do my rankings last week otherwise Pitt. would have been at least number two last week. |

| 11/8/04 03:45:46 PM | Ted "The million dollar man" Di Biase | Roma, remember P.R. Falcao, its eight king? I do! ||| | 10 | Kent from California |  |  | Shoe size 13 is a little disappointing for a guy that wilt; I wonder what's Warren Coolidge's shoe size! All the great guys live in USA! We have the 5'7" Silvio Berlusconi in Italy, surely a smart guy, but not very wilt. Did you ever meet Kelly Taylor, Dylan McKay, Brandon Walsh, Donna Martin etc.?  I have just seen Valuev-Vidoz and I was stunned how easily the 6'11" Russian beat Paolo Vidoz (silver medal, beaten by Audley Harrison). Nicolay is really strong and I think we are going to hear his name in the future. Vitali-Nicolay would be a good fight. |

| 11/9/04 12:29:29 AM | Sheri | Paso Robles | lizrdluver@yahoo.com | ||| | 10 | i would like to know if anyone would do something in the memory of my mom, brenda quarry. when shopping this holiday season pick a name off one of those trees for needy children. my mom and i did this every year. she would always pick a teenager or older child because she said they got over looked. if you do this put in the memory of brenda quarry. i know she would just love that you opened your hearts to a child in need. then try to make it a triditional thing in your own lives every day or if not at least at the holidays. thank you sheri |

| 11/9/04 03:35:55 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | ||| | 10 | Sheri, i would be happy to make a donation in memory of your mother. Is there a specific charity that does this that you and her donate to every year? Please post the information. |

| 11/9/04 04:56:27 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | ||| | 10 | SPORTSBOOK: That newspaper microfilm is something else, having sent and researched microfilm for 17 cities on Jerry, Quarry fought in 17 states and 30 arena's including England as a pro, but what I got last night kind of captivated me, Jerry was favored 53 times in 66 bouts, and he won 53 times in 66 bouts, Funny thou, it seemed whom ever was favored in JERRY'S big bouts usually lost, case in point, LYLE, MATHIS, SPENCER, FOSTER, PATTERSON, And all 4 of his draws were favored to beat Quarry, And Jerry was favored in the MACHEN, ELLIS, CHUVALO, And a slight 6-5 favorite vs "SMOKIN JOE" FRAZIER in 1974-go figure. And a slight underdog vs Norton in 1975, odds of me never meeting Quarry were great, since we were in the same vicenctty all the time, and I knew Mike and MR. JIMMY. Mike would have introduced me sometime if I'd had pushed the issue in 1980. Hindesight you know, And a 20 year old thinks totally dfferant opposed to a 44 year old. Brenda loved my parents peculiar scoring system for my last high school years were as, i was to receive $20 for every A and $10 for every B. And wound up oweing money after my senior year!||
Jimmy Ellis's lightest weight in his pro career was only 155 1/4, James Toney's 157, Sammy Langford's 155, but all these guys became top rated fighters in the heavyweight division. Billy Conn almost whipped Joe Louis's a-s and Joe Louis is ranked as one of the greatest champions of all times! It is a little disappointing to me that a blown up heavyweight can whip a natural one. I think this debunks (thanks dictionary!) a little the heavyweight division. It makes me think that if I went in the gym for a month I'd can whip Vitali. Could Marvin Hagler or Bennie Briscoe with a little train whip George Foreman, Joe Frazier, Oscar Bonavena, George Chuvalo, Ray Impelletiere and Mike Tyson, all natural heavyweights? Opinions from California or other states?

PS: Ray Impelletiere, before becoming a boxer, fought as a wrestler.

PS2: just before the Frazier-Ellis fight, in 1970, which fighter was rated (as) the N.1 heavyweight in the world? I know that Joe held the WBC belt, while Jimmy held the WBA one. Who was the favourite to win? Thanks.

Roberto Duran moved up lots of divisions and fought with distinction. He wasn't afraid to explore the horizon. How come you remember Benny Briscoe? You ARE a serious student of boxing. Briscoe, if my memory serves me correctly, was a middleweight, bald head, from Philli, and in the same era as Carlos Monzon, Jean Claude Boutier, Tony Mundine, et al. Benny was a real tough guy. No one ever had an easy victory over him.

Do you remember Monzon, Massimo? He was something. Definitely an elite boxer and in the best pound-for-pound of all time.

Did you see Kostya Tzsyu win against Sharmba Mitchell? He walked straight through him. Tzsyu was returning from a two year lay-off and it was an awesome display. I think it moves him up to the top two or three pound-for-pound, even at 35 years of age.

He is apparently considering moving up a division to fight Corey Spinks, who has three title belts. Kostya would destroy Spinks. If my understanding is correct that Spinks is a south paw, Kostya does very well against lefties and would easily take those belts.

I think the heavyweight division is overrated. If you think about it, the average sized man is about middleweight size. That means there are a lot more guys competing in that division.

Fewer men are heavyweights so, statistically, the competition is not there. This weekend there are four heavyweight fights, among them being Evander Holyfield. He is becoming sad.

Thad Spencer, Jimmy Ellis, Manuel Ramos, Jerry Quarry.
The weights in yesterday:

Evander "The real nuts" Holyfield 215 1/2 Rahman 232Byrd 214Ruiz 231Golota 238"The Bouncer" 270Meehan 237Donald 226 1/2Don King weighted in at 278 1/2. How andre' he is !!!!!!!!!!!!

Don King weighted in at 278 1/2. How andre' he is !!!!!!!!!!!!

Massimo, King is a little bit Wilt in that he is about 6'3" For those who don't know, the bouncer Massimo referred to who weighed in at 270 pounds is Jameel McCline. Should be a good card. I like all heavyweights' cards.

Kent from California-Yeah man, he is andre' and wilt at the same time ! I have seen Jameel only once against Boswell and he didn't impress me at all. He is in all a good fighter, but I think him to be (or that he is) better as a bouncer than as a boxer.

That's what I call a real heavyweight weigh in.It's also a sorry bunch of boxers compared to yesteryear--a group of has beens, never weres and also in-betweens like Ruiz. But I have to admit---I like the idea of putting them all together and finding the best of the lot. |

Now that Our Dear Leader Michael Moore has decreed the mourning period officially over, I thought you'd be interested in a special deal being offered on a new site called HELP THEM LEAVE.Send an email to reservations@helpthemleave.com and you can reserve space on special charter flights leaving daily. You can choose a country carefully matched to your political leanings, i.e.,Leftists: France, Germany, SpainSocialists: Canada, NorwayCommunists: Cuba, North KoreaAnarchists: AntarcticaThe deal is this - in return for your irrevocable renunciation of your United States citizenship, and a sworn statement that you will never return, HELP THEM LEAVE will provide free one-way transportation to a country politically matched to your leanings on a jet chartered to provide that service. This relocation assistance for 'disenfranchised' citizens is privately funded.The alternative is.....FOUR MORE YEARS ! Can it some serious thought.

Evandro is gonna fight a guy who is wilter, andrer and younger than him. Larry Donald is gonna beat the hell out of his face ! Larry is a very humble guy also, as his nickname is " The legend ". Who is humbler between Evandro Camposanto (Holyfield in Italian) and Larry Donald ?|
Hasim Rahman looked very good in dismantling a game but over matched Kali Meehan in four rounds. Meehan's corner didn't allow their fighter out of the corner at the time of the stoppage to save him from further harm.Evander Holyfield got his ass kicked again in losing every round to Larry Donald. He reasoned in logic only he can understand that since he had done better than he had against James Toney, he took a worse beating from Toney as Donald is not a big puncher, that he should continue his career because of this. COME ON EVANDER IT IS OVER!! WAKE UP AND REALIZE THIS OR GET SEVERLY HURT!!

Do you think Byrd's win over "The Bouncer" was deserved or not ? I was a little bit surprised as I thought it would have been an easier fight for Byrd than it has been in reality. I have seen Byrd against Tua and Chris is a very albert and quick fighter, while "The Bouncer" is pretty slow.

McCline was very determined and he came in and tried to take Byrd's belt and his weight advantage, 270 pounds to 214 for Byrd, made a difference when he did land his punches as they were harder than Byrd's punches. There were times in the fight that if he could have just landed a few more punches, McCline could have knocked Byrd out. But Byrd, as always, found a way to avoid further punishment from McCline, particularly in the latter rounds, by making McCline miss and countering with while not devastating punches, flurries of punches hard enough to slow McCline's forward movement and to score points to pull out the win.Again, as far as Holyfield goes, I would rather have seen the Davarryl Williamson verses Oliver McCall fight, won by decision by Williamson that was not on the broadcast, I was not at the fights, as from what little footage they showed, it looked like a good fight, certainly better than Donald/Holyfield and even better than the supposed headliner, "The Stinker at the Garden." Ruiz verses Golota.

Is John Ruiz the most plodding, boring fighter in history?

Andrew Golota was robbed. Crybaby Ruiz got lucky and Golota will beat him if Ruiz has the guts to fight him again. Andrew Golota represents a waste of talent! I compare him to Antonio Cassano, for his lack of mental stability.

While John Ruiz is a step below Joe Louis Barrow,

I need to take a book in my bookcase right now, but I am having a little trouble in reaching it. I was thinking that Wilt, with his 9'6" standing reach would have taken it with no need of ladders or chairs. But I am having some trouble, since ( or as, or because) my standing reach is only about 7'. I wonder how Andre' would have taken that book !

Dating back to his fights with Big Daddy Bowe, Golata has shown flashes of ability. He's also shown erratic performances (i.e. the blowout loss to Lewis) and the inability to hold his composure, even while winning. If he could stay cool, stay focused and motivated---he'd be a possibility to take any of today's horrible heavies.

The heavyweight division is about as thrilling as a hog calling contest in Alaska.

As boring as they are and as poorly as they perform compared to the class of the 70's, I'll still watch a top ten heavyweight bout over any similar bout of a lighter weight class, especially anything below middleweights. I like the big guys who wind up and throw bombs. When a 220 pound guy hits someone, or something, flush, the impact is the essence of "KNOCKOUT." Conversely, when two talented bantamweights are going at it, it seems like bunches of pitter-pat, lots of dancing and not a lot of knockout power. I know that the heavies tend to hold and wrestle, which is also clumsy. And if you can't sleep, put in the "Best of John Ruiz" video and snore away. But by and large, I still like the heavier weight action.

Do you think the 217 Giacomo Toney who beat Holyfield could hit harder than the 157 Giacomo Toney who beat Michele Nunn in 1991? Or was he only more slow and more wealthy? Could Muhammed Ali hit harder than Tommaso Hearns, Marvin Hagler, Zucchero Ray Robinson or Roberto Duran? Does the n.100 heavyweight in the world hit harder than the n.1 middleweight?

I am donating some money to Children's Hospital Los Angeles in memory of your mother Brenda. I figure helping sick children get well is a good holiday gift. Was she also from Paso Robles, Ca?

Sheri, I agree with you. We likely never see the likes of Quarry, Frazier, Ali, Norton, Shavers, Lyle, Foreman, etc. again in the division as a group.

The latest issue of Boxing Digest Magazine has a big article on Jerry Quarry and his family. It goes into a lot of things we talked about here.

After watching Frazier-Ellis four times, I have to say that I have a lot of respect for Jimmy Ellis' skills as a fighter. He was one of the most skillful fighters of his generation, quick moves, good left jab and sneaky right hand. The fight was really excellent, one of the best I have seen in the last 10 years. And this was merito of BOTH fighters! Joe Frazier was just as unstoppable as Shaq, not including Giorgio Eduardo, of course.

Chris Byrd is a very good late round fighter. He proves that skill and conditioning defeat size and raw power. His wins are not close to dominating, but he does win. Golota probably got ripped again. Ruiz is not a champion, I don't care what his belt says. Holyfield is baffling. I guess the roar of the crowd means a lot. It did to Ali and others also, even JQ... Jimmy Ellis was a top guy definitely, up there with Quarry and Bonavena in the late 60's, even after that. He got to Frazier early very well, almost as well as JQ did... the middleweights have long been the top division, especially with lower guys who move up later in their careers. Some more hardcore boxing fans laugh at the heavies, and have for years, except for Tyson and Lewis during their reigns. Maybe Klitschko will elevate the division some, the division needs one guy with all or most of the belts, I think he's the guy for that... it's funny, I think I remember Max K saying JQ should be remembered as a top cruiserweight. As our society gets a little heavier, maybe some of the attention will begin to drift toward the 175 and cruiserweight divisions. Their should be more well-conditioned, skilled guys in these divisions. It's there for the taking. Again, if JQ were around now at cruiserweight, you'd have to open the vault. He'd probably be the biggest star out there... Good to hear an article on the Quarry family was done again. They were and are a remarkable bunch. I remain very much a fan of them. Thanks.

Carnera-Baer was a very interesting fight. Primo had a terrible start and was floored two and a half times in the first round. But then he recovered very well and won many rounds. It is not true that Baer knocked him down 11 times! He knocked him down only 7 or 8 times throughout the fight (and in the second round both fighters went down 3 times, like in a wrestling match). Primo got injured (caviglia slogata, SNORT) raising himself from the stool between the first and the second round. The last knockdowns in rounds 10 and 11 were caused by the injury. Maybe, without the injury, Primo would have won on points. I'm not sure that Max Baer was better than Carnera; he was more powerful than Primo, but couldn't box an egg.

The legendary Joe Kilrick, (who doesn't remember him, who?), a former Wilt's teammate in the Philadelfia 76's said that Wilton Norman Chamberlain stood exactly 7'1" 1/8 (without that 1/8, he would have been a wimp).
Players went into the stands and fought with fans.

| 11/23/04 01:36:44 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | I have seen only about 1 second of that brawl and this means only one punch which landed very hard right on a fan's chin. This guy obviously couldn't take a punch as well as Chuvalo and went down. I think that I would have had a little trouble at dividing the brawlers, with my about 5'4" wingspan. It would have needed at least Warren Coolidge. I wonder how it has to be having a brawl with Shaquille Rashaun O'Neal (who, obviously, wasn't involved... ). |

| 11/23/04 02:12:18 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | Well, I told my wife that if I were sitting in the stands, I wouldn't throw anything at the players. But, if Ron Artest came after me and my family because he made a mistake and THOUGHT I was the one who threw the cup---and it wasn't me---I would take several hard punches to the head from Artest, but I would also throw my 190 pounds, rolled up in a ball, as hard as I could, right at his knee. Hopefully that act would end his career while my black eye and broken nose would heal in a few weeks. Of course, my wife corrected me and said rather than end his career, she'd want me to end my own career by taking his punch without retaliating, then suing him for a couple million dollars. |

| 11/23/04 04:18:26 PM | Massimo Cini | Italia | Tim Duncan is a midget.com | I have read on the Internet that Ron Artest is as wilt as Warren Coolidge, at 6'7" and that weights 246 lbs. I guess that the fan who took his punch was less wilt and less andre' than him. |

| 11/23/04 05:48:10 PM | Massimo Cini da Pisa | Roma | Coolidge was the best American president ever.com | And, of course, Ron Artest is only 2 inches less wilt than Kent's friend in Boston (Kent has a friend in Boston). |

| 11/24/04 03:10:30 PM | Howard C. | cossellinheaven@aol.com | same | Personally, I think a bit of audience participation is a good thing. Pretty soon we'll have spectators on big money being managed by Don King. Spectators baiting the players will be part of the sport, and what's wrong with that, especially if you have guys like Iron Mike and Mitch Green in the crowd.  I'd take it a step further. How about each side be given dispensation for, say, five elbows to the head each game and maybe a couple of knees and punches, too. If they don't use 'em all in one game, then they can transfer them to the next game.   Crowds love that stuff and it would take the violence off of the streets and back into the stadiums where it should be. Every event would be a super bowl. Every contest an Ali v Frazier 'fight-to-the-death' spectacle.   We have to make our sports more gladiatorial and encourage spectator involvement. It would certainly liven boring sports like tennis. Players should be permitted to hit more than just the ball with their rackets. If they get sledged by someone in the crowd, players should be encouraged to react with uncontrollable violence. Imagine how good tennis could have been if McEnroe was sanctioned to attack people. Let him loose on the referees and the ratings would have gone through the roof.   In case you didn't already know it - Ali was the greatest ! |

| 11/24/04 03:38:36 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | The brawl at the basketball game is the fault of the players and the fans and both should be penalized, especially whoever started it. The fan should be charged with inciting to riot. Criminal charges should also be filed against the players who attacked fans. |

| 11/24/04 04:25:06 PM | Alfredo Delvecchio | Roma | chachi, chachi, chachi, chachi, chachi.com | What I really don't understand is: why the players care so much about what the fans are saying? They gain millions of dollars a year, the fans don't. In the after brawl interview Ron Artest initially apologized for his behaviour and two minutes later he spoke about his new CD. What an idiot he is! He has less brain than a crawfish (dictionary)! I hope that Wilt never got himself involved in brawls during a basketball game! Was Andre' ever involved in brawls? |
What are you guys on about? The brawl was fantastic. It warms the coldest of hearts. Lighten up and get your kids ready for the next game and enjoy it while it lasts because the sourpuss whimpish officials will overreact and wipe it out. Why wipe out the best thing that ever happened in sport? Fans are queueing up for more.

Ah, the now-famous NBA brawl, which, not surprisingly, involved Detroit. The fan behavior was just moronic, when it's all done maybe two dozen of them should be in jail. Buying a ticket does not entitle you to be an asshole, this is now, amazingly, a very important message for today's sports fans. I blame Ron Artest and the other players who went into the stands, but only to a point. We know where these guys come from and what they are about. Only a total moron would try to assault one of these guys, just as in the case of JQs bar fights. Ben Wallace should have received a much larger fine and suspension, his reaction to the foul was way out of order. It's actually good strategy to foul him rather than let him shoot, and Artest had to be sure he would not make the shot after the foul. Artest was flat out lynched over this, his suspension time is a joke. The NBA needs to take responsibility for the ghetto atmosphere it has deliberately created for its players and fans, it is the reason that league has fallen so far in the last 10-12 years...

Howard C., I agree with your 'elbow rule', but only as long as it's your head that is elbowed in each event. Entertainment as a whole is at an all-time low, with this brawl, the Super Bowl nonsense, reality television, and a long list of other pathetic events, which certainly has included boxing. Jokes aside, it's tough to watch all this and see where it is continuing to go. What can I take my kids to see anymore in sports or other entertainment? As a long time fan of sports in particular, it's very difficult to continually observe.

Also, Massimo, Wilt Chamberlain was usually listed as 7'2 because he was clearly over seven feet tall, as to his exact height, no one knows for sure. 7'1 1/8 was used when he was in college. As he said himself, it's pointless to pin down anyway, his height was only part of the reason he was so great an athlete and player, like Shaq today... Wilt was involved in a slew of fights in college and in his early pro career. Slugging him was the only way to slow him down, and there was a lot of racism then, just as there is today, only today it is a different brand of racism. Still, with so many forces against him, Wilt never fouled out. Going after Wilt in the late 60s and after was considered near-suicide because of all the weightlifting he did, so few even considered it. Thanks.

Even if I don't think this is very important, I think Shaq would have beaten Wilt in a brawl! "Andre', as short as he was, would have probably beaten both Wilt and Shaq. Kareem Abdul Jabbar would have beaten Wilt, Shaq and Andre' as well, as he studied martial arts with Bruce Lee. But Calvin Lane, at 7'5" 1/2, 389 lbs, 25 EEE shoe size and a black belt in karate would have crushed Wilt, Shaq, Andre', Jabbar and Bruce Lee to a pulp! Yes, you read that right. Bruce Lee to a pulp!"

Even if I don't think this is very important, I think Shaq would have beaten Wilt in a brawl! "André' as short as he was, would have probably beaten both Wilt and Shaq. Kareem Abdul Jabbar would have beaten Wilt, Shaq and André' as well, as he studied martial arts with Bruce Lee. But Calvin Lane, at 7'5" 1/2, 389 lbs, 25 EEE shoe size and a black belt in karate would have crushed Wilt, Shaq, André', Jabbar and Bruce Lee to a pulp!"

Hi All! Just wanted to wish you all a very "Happy Thanksgiving" We sure miss you Dad, Uncle Jerry, Mom, Aunt Brenda.
After the predictable shambles of last weekend's heavyweight fights, perhaps with the exception of Byrd and McCline, I am glad that John Ruiz of all people has had the sense to speak up for what would be best in the division and that is each champion facing off with one another before finding one undisputed winner. It would give some credibility to the division I suppose. The Klitiscko-Williams fight should go the way of the Ukrainian but the latter did absorb a hell of a lot of punches to finally get through to Tyson. Williams was always regarded as very talented but mentally fragile which explained a couple of his losses but if his mind is there then there could be an upset which would probably undermine the division further. If you go by records than at the age of 33 Klitishko's record is worse than Byrd's. He's only beaten Larry Donald, Herbie Hide and a game but limited Corrie Sanders, as well as Kirk Johnson. I know he took Lewis close but the latter was at the end of his career and that cut was pretty horrific. The fight had to be stopped. It will take him another 6-8 fights to create some sort of legacy.

The Klitiscko-Williams fight should go the way of the Ukrainian but the latter did absorb a hell of a lot of punches to finally get through to Tyson. Williams was always regarded as very talented but mentally fragile which explained a couple of his losses but if his mind is there then there could be an upset which would probably undermine the division further. If you go by records then at the age of 33 Klitishko's record is worse than Byrd's. He's only beaten Larry Donald, Herbie Hide and a game but limited Corrie Sanders, as well as Kirk Johnson. I know he took Lewis close but the latter was at the end of his career and that cut was pretty horrific. The fight had to be stopped. It will take him another 6-8 fights to create some sort of legacy.

Why didn't Mike Tyson fight Frank Bruno in Wembley back in 1989? They offered him a lot of money to fight the British slugger in England! Why did they fight in Las Vegas? Anyone knows? I think today Frank Bruno would hold his own pretty well against the modern heavyweights, likely even better than he did in the 80's. And it is a real shame that John "Boredom" Ruiz holds a title belt, while Donovan Razor Ruddock never held one. Cheers and thanks.

Just found something interesting on Microfilm, When Floyd Patterson decisioned Eddie Machen to win W.B.A.'s "FIGHTER OF THE MONTH" for July 1964. Tony Alongi was ranked as the World Boxing Association's Number #10 Contender effective August 4th 1964, I always thought Alongi made at least one of the governing bodies elite World top ten lists, although probably not Ring Magazine (the best!). So this puts an interesting swing on Quarry's career, for he is now 15-8-4 10-knockouts against past-present-future World top ten heavyweights, and 38-1 22 knockouts vs everyone else, actually undefeated (who counts Cranmer?!). I finally found something to back me on Alongi who had a great record not withstanding. It also had a very interesting article on how Billy Daniels upset No. 1 CONTENDER DOUG JONES on 24 hours notice substituting for none other than Tony Alongi who had to pull out for bone chips in his right elbow.

It is interesting that Mel Counts checked in here. I met him in person and he looked to me, a ten year old boy, as Wilt as Wilt was. I am guessing that Big Mel, who was listed at 7'0" tall, was close to Wilt in height. Mel could have been a half inch taller than seven feet if Wilt was 1 and 1/8 inches above seven feet.

Mel played for both the Boston Celtics for about four years and for the L.A. Lakers for about four or five years and he backed up both Russell and Chamberlain at center.

It isn't a big deal now but back in the sixties, Counts would come in and play forward alongside Wilt and it was a big deal to have two seven footers on the court at the same time. It might have been the first time it had ever happened.

I have a secret to share with all of you: there is a picture available somewhere on the Internet with Wilt and Andre' together. Hell, I would renounce to 10 spaghetti to watch that picture just to know how much Wilt was wilter than the Midget. There is another picture in a book that (or which) I don't have (me tapino) with Jabbar, Shaq, Wilt and Russell (who is clearly wilter than Coolidge... My God, than Coolidge !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!) in the same room !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! And Jabbar looked clearly wilter than Wilt Stuff to faint for........ And there is a picture with Calvin Lane and Shaq on the Internet and Lane is much wilter and andre'er than Shaq !!!!!!!! They should sell a book with all these legends pictured together !

I remember Mel Counts as a Laker and with Phoenix. A very servicable backup center, may have been 7'1. I think Kent is right about the two seven-footers thing. Andre was about as tall as Jabbar, 7'3. These are a lot of photos of Wilt, Jabbar and Russell, three of the very best ever. Another guy seen with them a few times was Bill Walton, who was probably 7'1 also, but like Counts, did not advertise it. Shaq is probably as tall as both Counts and Walton ... On a much more serious note, Riddick Bowe was to fight again recently. It's said he has showed signs of brain damage, which is predictable from his lifestyle as well as his career. He got ok'd to fight in Kentucky, the same state Greg Page got plastered in a few years ago at age 42. Holyfield and Tyson seem headed down the same path also. On this, of all sites, this is a serious issue. When will boxing be taken seriously enough for legislation be set up to stop this? In Republican America, money comes first and people come second, so someone will always wave some greenbacks to set up these stupid events. Holyfield's suspension is a sign of encouragement. But we need more: a mandatory retirement age, and HEADGEAR. Football and hockey have it, boxing should too. The sport will not improve it's public image until it does make these necessary changes... Thanks, Happy Holidays.

Notice how Gerry keeps getting his petty little political jibes in. Gerry wrote, "In Republican America, money comes first....." Gerry blames George W. and the Republicans for everything. Holyfield has brain damage ? Blame George W. Riddick Bowe given a license to box. Dubbya's fault. Greg Page ? Yeah, blame Dubbya for that, too.Gerry wants this site to be a political debate forum. Is that appropriate ?

Comrade Gerry is correct that in Republican America the filthy capitalist pigs led by the arch criminal George W. Bush make money come first and people come second. Under Comrade John Kerry things would have been different. Comrade Kerry would have spent the billions of dollars of his wife Heinz to the last bean to make boxing safer. Comrade Clinton did a lot in his eight years as president to make boxing safer too. So did Comrades Carter and Johnson and Kennedy. I just can't remember what it was that they actually did. Enlighten us Gerry, what did these Democrat presidents do to make boxing safer that the filthy capitalist pigs trailer trash greedy stupid Republican presidents haven't done ? How was Comrade Kerry going to save Holyfield and Tyson, and what did Clinton do to save Page ? (Does anyone else think that Gerry is an incurable, insufferable, communist moron, or am I the only one here thinking rationally ?)

Andre' was about as wilt as Jabbar at 5 years of age. Andre' was actually about as wilt as me :-)There are all versions available from 5'7" to 8'... We'll never know, not even Andre' knew how wilt he was. :-)He used to wear special lifts in his ( big ?) shoes to look wilter.
here in the U.S. if a fighter has been suspended for medical reasons but I don't think Bowe has been suspended (though he should be). He could still go to another country if he wanted to and fight even if so. Maybe some day everyone will honor suspensions.

Kent, sorry it has taken me so long to answer your question. yes my mom was from Paso Robles also. also what every your heart tells you to do this christmas is great. thank you all for you support. sheri

11/29/04 06:04:16 PM|Sheri|Paso Robles||lizrdluver@yahoo.com|||10|Kent, sorry it has taken me so long to answer your question. yes my mom was from Paso Robles also. also what every your heart tells you to do this christmas is great. thank you all for you support. sheri

11/29/04 09:02:45 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same|||8|Noam, you hypocrite. You rant for paragraphs like a closet Nazi and then object to something I use in half a sentence. How typically two-faced ... you call Kerry comrade, but he was the only candidate to actually fight communists. Again, typically two-faced or just plain inaccurate. I blame businessmen who lack ethics for promoting these stupid fights. Strange that Republicans do continually defend this kind of business attitude, thanks for proving my point... Post Election trauma, yes. 60 million Americans have it. You outspent Kerry 3-1 and won by 75,000 Ohio votes, some mandate... At least Kent was able to see beyond something I wrote in half a sentence. Do any of you tards care about boxing? ... Howard C., the all-time king of insufferable morons, dares to complain about someone else? That's beyond two-faced. Go back to fawning over Ali, you blowhard. It's a wonder you two didn't date. Say, you don't think ... |

11/30/04 03:38:46 AM|Noam|same||same|||10|Thanks for proving my point Gerry. You really have lost it. Name calling. Cheap political shots. Throwing your handbag hysterically around. Inferring that others are fags. All this hate and throwing tantrums because you didn't get the result you wanted in the election. Get over it. Put it behind you. Try and get a life. Stop blaming President Bush and the Republicans for all your problems. Dry the tears running down your face. Grow up. It's not the end of the earth, Gerry, just because you didn't get your own way. The silent majority prevailed over the noisy minority. You lost. Democracy worked. Hundreds of thousands of brave Americans have lost their lives fighting to maintain democracy, so learn to respect it. If you refuse to respect democracy, try Canada or Somalia or Syria or somewhere else where they wanted Kerry before President Bush. In the meantime, do everyone a favour and SHUT UP. Besides, you're making me too happy throwing tantrums like your last post. Hugs and kisses.My enduring memory of John Kerry and the Vietnam War is of him sitting beside Hanoi Jane Fonda at demonstrations, giving solace to the communist enemy, whilst insulting and distressing our soldiers.Flip flopping is the one constant throughout Kerry's life. He flip flopped on Vietnam, and he also flip flopped on the most recent war. That is why he lost the election.Muhammad Ali, on the other hand, rightly or wrongly, was always consistent in his opposition to the Vietnam War. You might not like his complexion, Gerry, but at least respect him for not being a flip flopper.There are reports that Kerry fought bravely in the Vietnam War. There are also contradictory reports that he didn't. Those reports came from soldiers who were there. I am undecided on the issue.Gerry you call some of us 'tards' and I assume you meant retard. My dictionary defines retard as someone unfortunate enough through no fault of their own to be "backward in mental or physical development". By all means Gerry disagree with the silent majority who voted for President Bush to have four more years, but please refrain from demeaning those with disabilities, no matter how deep your anger is at losing.Finally, you continually accuse republicans of hurting boxing and boxers. Please name them or we will be forced to the conclusion that this is just a continuation of your 'jihad' against republicans. Thanks for your time.

11/30/04 08:00:43 AM|Publio Virgilio Marone|Roma|.com|||10|Just to learn something about American history, was Coolidge a Repubblican or a Democratic President ? God bless America, mostly California
Not to get too political here, but where did this data come from that Bush outspent Kerry 3-1? I don't believe it and I think it's a hollow excuse for a somewhat embarassing loss. There were hundreds of rich Hollywood elite and wealthy eccentrics who gave millions of dollars to Kerry and other Democratic candidates---and websites like "Move On" collecting millions more from younger and some older radical voters to unseat Bush. Movies made about how terrible Bush is and how dumb he is----comics embracing Kerry and dumping on Bush. In the end, don't try to tell me that Bush spent more money and that's why he won. The truth is, people looked at the candidates and evaluated their stands on the issues and their credibility. Voters all across the country felt that Bush was the better man to lead. Don't try to tell me a handful in Ohio decided the election. Look at the map---you'll find that concentrated clusters in urban areas on the coasts voted for Kerry and pretty much the rest of America voted for Bush. That's not the "rich elite" deciding, that's most of America. Finally, I'm not even a big fan of Bush but what I saw in Kerry was a B.S. artist and the quintessential Monday morning quarterback who thinks he knows what's best for everyone. When the Democrats settle on a middle of the road, moderate, measured, rational nominee, they'll win a national election. When they turn the party back over to guys like Scoop Jackson, Morris Udall and Sam Nunn, they'll get Democratic and Republican votes. Until then, they'll continue to lose every time.

One thing Bush will not be able to do is pass the buck if things don't improve. His party controls both the house and the senate and they control the White House and the "Buck" stops at his desk. What is Bush going to do when he can't blame Clinton for everything? The big spending Republicans, they have controlled the House, who allocates the money, for the last four years, as well as the presidency. Yet even after they took office with a budget surplus in 2001, they have spent us into record breaking debt. Some of the blame for all of the spending is because of 9/11 and because we went to war but it is possible to fight a war, in this case Vietnam, and still spend within our limits, the last time the U.S. government had a budget surplus before 2001 was in 1969 when Democrat Lyndon Johnson left the presidency. I am not making a comment about either war being good or bad as I am just talking about government spending as even though the democrats are labeled as being big spenders of our tax dollars, the republicans are often the ones who do the spending. The facts bare it out, look them up. By the way, I am a democrat but I didn't vote for Kerry.

President Bush had 9/11, and then the Afghan war, and then the Iraq war. Given that the war on terror only began six months into his presidency, it is surprising that the deficit is not far worse. Gerry accuses republicans he does not identify of being responsible for safety breaches in boxing. Who are these dreadful men and did they do it because they are republicans ? What has the alleged complexion of their politics got to do with boxing ? Charles Manson is a democrat, and so are all those guys on Queer Eye (Gerry's favourite show) but has that got anything to do with Kerry or the democrats ? Same thing with Don King. So what that he is smart and voted for Bush because he knew he was better. That's got nothing to do with boxing. Kent - you say that the buck stops with Bush. Correct. However, it seems that you are pre-empting failure trying to appease Comrade Gerry, rather than sticking to events thus far. Judge him on the past, not a predicted dreadful future that types like Gerry hopes for simply to justify his political stance and say "I told you so". Also, is big business only with Bush ? Kerry is filthy rich as well, given his marriage to Mrs Baked Beans. And what about Edwards ? He made squillions chasing ambulances as a personal injury lawyer. I guess that only discredits the politician when he is a republican.12/1/04 01:28:37 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 Noam, I am not assuming everything is going to be bad in the next four years but if it is bad, who is Bush going to blame? Blaming Clinton for everything is tiresome and not more than a few people think they had it better when "Big Bubba" Clinton was in office.12/1/04 01:28:37 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 As far as big spending government goes, Johnson left office with a surplus and Nixon and Ford put the country in the red. Jimmy Carter also was in the red but Ronald Reagan tripled the debt when he was president. H.W. Bush continued this trend and Clinton left office with a surplus. I am not making these numbers up. I have done the research. The point is, republicans always point to the democrats as the big spenders but the real answer is both major parties can be blamed for this but sometimes republicans more than democrats. Pretty surprising, isn't it?12/1/04 01:28:37 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 Ironically, Lyndon Johnson presided over most of the Vietnam War, had programs like Medicare and Medicaid and he increased welfare spending while also presiding over most of the Space Race to the moon (a very expensive program). Yet he still balanced the budget. Yes the Vietnam War was a thorn in his side but Johnson had his good points.12/1/04 01:28:37 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 Remember again, I didn't vote for Kerry but I am still a democrat. I also have not voted for my party's presidential nominee since 1992. So nobody can use the simplistic us verses them fallacies that hardcore party advocates of either party often use. Example, that drug fiend Rush Limbaugh needs to keep his fat "yap" shut! Actually both major parties are not being tough enough on controlling our national borders. It is too easy to get into this country and this is where the danger is. I know that most people who come here illegally are just looking for work to support their families but if they can get in, then so can terrorists. So we need to enforce our immigration laws more strongly and if less workers get here, so be it as our safety is too important.12/1/04 01:28:37 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 Kent, perhaps you should go back and read the posts because I have never mentioned anything about spending by either side. It has never been an issue with me, so all you are doing is debating yourself on it.12/1/04 01:28:37 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 'Hanoi' Gerry inferred that the only reason the Republicans were re-elected was because they outspent the Democrats by 3/1. As Angelo pointed out, that's nonsense.12/1/04 01:28:37 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 The truth is all these tree hugging liberals shot every round in the breach and they still missed the mark. Walk around any bookshop and look at all the Bush-hating books that came out just before the election. We had movie stars (who don't have a brain between them) holding fundraisers, dopes like Alec Baldwin threatening to move overseas (hurry up and go for christ's sake), that idiot Springstein doing a real poor impersonation of Bob Dylan, and that fat ugly propagandist Michael Moore writing books and making movies telling lies. And with all of this propaganda and baloney from the selfish elites and greedy intelligentsia, they still couldn't beat the silent majority. They are as bitter as hell and hate life simply because democracy worked.12/1/04 01:28:37 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 As far as blaming Clinton goes, that man was a disgrace. He made a world-wide mockery of the presidency. That business with Lewinsky, cheating on his family, and telling lies on oath, leaves the man with no credibility. He's charming and likeable but nothing else and while he was predisposed with all that bs and impeachment, the environment was put in place for 9/11 to happen. Yet liberals hold him up as some sort of poster boy and that tells you a lot about morals and principles and integrity. That's why they've run our of credibility. Thanks for directing the topic back to politics, 'Hanoi'.12/1/04 01:28:37 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 Before you start the bandwagon to re-elect Jimmy Carter, go back and do more homework. I'm not sure about the deficit, but if you say he had a surplus, I'll believe you. He probably accomplished this by slashing military spending to nothing, which is why a few radical students in Iran were able to humiliate us, a country of 200 million people, with an impotent military thanks to President Carter's neglect. Also, he left office with double digit inflation, double digit interest rates and extremely high unemployment---double the rate President Bush is often criticized for. He was a nice man, but in way over his head. Republican Reagan got us into a huge deficit by rebuilding our military into the strongest and best in world history, which ended the cold war and restored our stature. By cutting taxes, he also rebuilt our economy into a model for the rest of the world to strive for. Bill Clinton was a very likable man and still is. His personal baggage, disloyalty to his marriage and lies under oath tarnish his legacy. Also, he too neglected and seemed to hate the military---the men and women who risk their lives to protect us. But to his credit, he did get the budget under control and presided over a huge economic expansion. Granted, guys like Bill Gates did more than the President to stimulate and grow the economy, but Clinton's policies didn't hurt. He had his good and bad points. Right now, after the joke campaigns by Gore and especially Kerry, and the lopsided losses by guys like Mondale and Dukakis, the Democrats can use a centerist candidate again. Face it---as popular as Clinton was and with his high approval rating, even though he had scandal, his VP, Gore, should have easily defeated Bush in 2000. Instead, he barely won the popular vote and lost the electoral vote, because he's basically a germ.

| 12/1/04 10:34:35 AM | Kent | L.H. Ca | kentallenetc.com | | | | | 10 | Yes, things were relatively good under Reagan but personally, it was a hard time for me, so everyone didn't prosper at that time.Actually, the military budgets started to increase in the last two years of Carter's term as we had emergencies in both Iran and a potential conflict with the Soviets, who had invaded Afghanistan and it was Carter who brought back draft registration of our young men after Ford had cancelled the process after the end of Vietnam. Carter had economic problems, such as high inflation as well as the hostage crisis that led to his defeat for re-election.Carter had allowed the Shah of Iran to come to the U.S. for cancer treatment, a humanitarian effort to help a long time U.S. friend and this is what triggered the hostage takeover and although he was ineffective in getting their release, under Reagan, we had hostages also taken by forces friendly to Iran but only nine of them instead of sixty or so under Carter and these nine were held for a longer period than those under Carter. Reagan got their release by selling military arms to Iran, an enemy of the U.S, with some of the money being funneled to the Contra rebels of Nicaragua, who had their funding cutoff by congress. Remember Iran-Contra? If Carter had done this, he would have been run out of Washington D.C. on a rail.Reagan seemed like a pleasant likeable person and he, like Clinton, could get away with certain things because of this. Face it, most of the time the people will not be too concerned about scandal if the economy seems to be going well.

| 12/1/04 10:35:46 AM | Massimo da Pisa | Roma | | | | | | 10 | You guys are just missing the point! Bill Clinton is as wilt as Muhammad Ali'... What else to say? Who cares about everything else?

| 12/1/04 10:38:56 AM | Massimo da Pisa | Roma | | | | | | 10 | I meant who cares about anything else, not everything else!

| 12/1/04 10:43:30 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | | | | | 10 | Any thoughts on Jirov versus Moorer? They are two former world champions. Jirov, a champ at cruiserweight, virtually retired hot prospect Joe Mesi and gave James Toney the fight of his life in one of the best fights of 2003. Jirov is a tough southpaw who always comes to fight. Moorer, who got kayoed in one round by David Tua and I think, without looking up his record, also has another recent loss, once beat a near in prime Evander Holyfield for the heavyweight title, not the Holyfield who lost again recently to Larry Donald. Moorer is trying to make a comeback. |
Hugs and kisses, Noam? Maybe I should call you Naomi. Not that there's anything wrong with that ... All of this started because of a couple of words. I use a couple of words to make a point, and three guys start dumping paragraphs. Who's casting aspersions? You call me 'comrade', 'Hanoi', at least you spell them correctly. I'm a veteran of the U.S. Army, are any of you tough talkers also vets? I doubt it. Bush has flip-flopped on several issues. But your double-standard, typically, doesn't hold him accountable for it... I got guys on this site telling me to move to another country and then you jump me for a couple words. Again, how typically two-faced... I never even mentioned the election in my original post. I did mention a lot on boxing. I guess the Hitler Youth missed that... If some guy is going to hide behind a fake name and call himself Howard Cosell, then I'm going to treat him like Howard Cosell. The Ali-Cosell thing was a joke, which, typically again, some have to lie about while trying to dump juvenile insults on me. I guess only Noam and his klan are allowed to go political on this site. Well, too bad. I'm going to have my say here also when the topic comes up. The Republicans did buy this election like a pizza. All you have to do is compare budgets, the info for which is all over the internet. Bush nearly doubled the previous presidential budget record. I'll let the stupid war topic go by for now ... Jirov-Moorer could be a mismatch, with Jirov collecting a name for his record sheet by KO. Moorer could make it interesting for 5-7 rounds. Jirov is very tough, very savvy, about as good a cruiserweight as I've seen recently, has clearly shown the talent to move up. Joe Mesi may not be the same again. Thanks, whoever, for bringing up boxing again. Angelo and Kent also had some very good political posts. Thanks. |

Hi Gerry, you've got into the habit of making an accusation, failing to substantiate it, and then moving onto another unsubstantiated allegation when challenged. As I said before, you're too funny and you've given us a big laugh. The hissy fits you're throwing because you didn't get your own way in the election makes it all the more worthwhile. The thing is, Gerry, no one was talking politics until you entered with your cheap political shots. One or two words here and there designed to stir the pot. I bet you sit around 24/7 hating Bush and his re-election. And the product of all that brooding is the silly crap you've posted here recently. Is that the best you got? I see that you still haven't addressed your silly allegation that republicans have ruined boxing, or something to that effect. Gerry, the election is in the past and you've got four more years to get over it. Ha, ha, ha..........(Alternatively, go to www.helpthemleave.com). |

Lghten up Gerry. (I always thought 'Jerry' was the masculine version of the name, and 'Gerry' the feminine one. You sound a bit feminine anyways, what with all your whining and crying, like Gerry from the Spice Girls.) You come across as a know it all, someone who doesn't have fun and relax, who wouldn't laugh at the funniest joke, thinking you are better than everyone else, never wrong and never admitting you're wrong, can't have a difference of opinion without hating someone, born with a silver spoon in your mouth......yep, a real live stuck up snobby holier than thou signed up for life democrat. Now Gerry, what is it about Ali you hate (hard bitten Democrats like Gerry always hate, never merely dislike)? |

Kent: Your grasp on recent history is very good, as you recall key foreign policy decisions and actions. I will say, the Congressional ban on funding the Contras was questionable, given the fact that Daniel Ortega and the Sandonistas offered nothing better for their people and were far worse for the U.S. interests. I always go back to recalling eras by thinking back to boxing at the time. Was this a period when Carlos Palimino was active and successful?
Palamino best years were a little before 1979, when the Sandinistas took power. Yes, the Sandinistas were for the most part nothing better than a collection of thugs themselves, which is what the Contras were and the Sandinistas were not above taking money from the Soviet Union, making them a thorn in the U.S. policy at the time. The problem with the cold war was the Soviets had their thugs and the U.S. had our thugs all accross the world and that era is still haunting us today. Consider that Osama Bin Laden was on the U.S. side in Afghanistan's war with the Soviets and he and his group of thugs got aid from the U.S. in their fight. Saddam Hueissen also received aid from the U.S. in the war against Iran during the 1980s. Ironic in that U.S. aid went to both sides in that war as well as, it would not surprise me in the least, Soviet aid. Iraq had Soviet weapons systems but I don't know if Iran got anything from the Soviets. The problem we are facing today is thugs often turn on their benefactors and this is huge contributer to 911 happening. Both major parties have plenty of shared blame for the death of our people in 2001 not just Clinton.

12/1/04 10:06:14 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same||8|Howard C., Gerry is short for Gerald, Jerry is short for Jerome, not that you are educated enough to know that. More seventh-grade rantings from Republican supporters, typical ... Kent is on the money regarding Iran, likely the next pointless death toll Bush will drag us into. Republicans backed the Shah of Iran and his thugs for years. The third world played both the U.S. and the Soviets against each other in many cases, and ended up with weapons and money from both. Of course, we played them too, and that's why 911 happened, it was inevitable and very predictable. That point is still lost on many.

12/2/04 12:37:04 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||mooseygoop@aol.com||10|KentI kind of favor Jirov in fight. Moorer is a lefty though so u never know how it will effect fight. Moorer also has edge in power too but Jirov has more skills and a never quit attitude.I think ur right about Moorer maybe losing a comeback fight or at least getting hurt. I remember a fighter hooking behind his gloves when he had his guard up and Moorer couldn't seem to adjust to it. It seemed kinda of weird for a pro to get tagged like that and not adjust.

12/2/04 12:56:33 AM|Massimo|it doesn't matter, not California||4||10|His name should not be Osama Bin Laden. His name should be Osodia Bin Laden. I hope him to go to "Allah" as soon as possible. Michele Moorer got the heart of a lion and a devastating punch. He is a very good even if not great fighter. I would have loved to see Moorer-Tyson a few years ago ( it would have been a slugfest) but they prefered to show us Tyson-Clifford. Tonight ESPN Classic ( the greatest Channel of all times) will show the 1992 fight between Giorgio Eduardo Foreman and Alessandro Stewart. Gotta see it ( sorry for the slang). Stay with us ! This is Jerry Quarry Foundation !!

12/2/04 01:04:32 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Ed, Jirov has not lost his power in his move up to heavyweight. Even if it went into the record books as a loss, Jirov knocked down three times and ruined Mesi late in the fight. He gave away too many early rounds to Mesi but who really won in the end? Most would say Jirov as Mesi likely suffered permanent damage.I am thinking Moorer could likely be a big name stepping stone for Jirov but you never know, Jerry Q was supposed to be a big name stepping stone for Ron Lyle and we all know that Jerry boxed circles around Lyle.Gerry, although I am a democrat, it was both republicans and democrats alike who backed up dictators such as the Shah of Iran for years. Simply because if they didn't, he may have gone to the Soviets for support. Carter payed for it by trying to help him one last time, by letting him get treatment for his cancer in the U.S. any president would have done the same thing rather than turn him over to some blood thirsty mob. As far as 911 goes, yes Clinton could have done more to go after Bin Laden after Bin Laden was implicated in attacks on U.S. interests but W. Bush cannot deny the fact that it happened under his watch and in hindsight there was more he could have done also. Like I said, there is plenty of room to go around on both sides of the political isle and the more we all realize this and start to truly work together, despite our differences, the better off we will all be.

That reminds me...The Moorer vs Bert Cooper was a classic. Bert wasn't suppose to have a chance against Moorer but almost ko'ed him. I got to dig it out and see it again. Thats the one fault Moorer had is he couldn't stand up to a heavyweights punch.

That reminds me...The Moorer vs Bert Cooper was a classic. Bert wasn't suppose to have a chance against Moorer but almost ko'ed him. I got to dig it out and see it again. Thats the one fault Moorer had is he couldn't stand up to a heavyweights punch.

That reminds me...The Moorer vs Bert Cooper was a classic. Bert wasn't suppose to have a chance against Moorer but almost ko'ed him. I got to dig it out and see it again. Thats the one fault Moorer had is he couldn't stand up to a heavyweights punch.

That reminds me...The Moorer vs Bert Cooper was a classic. Bert wasn't suppose to have a chance against Moorer but almost ko'ed him. I got to dig it out and see it again. Thats the one fault Moorer had is he couldn't stand up to a heavyweights punch.

That reminds me...The Moorer vs Bert Cooper was a classic. Bert wasn't suppose to have a chance against Moorer but almost ko'ed him. I got to dig it out and see it again. Thats the one fault Moorer had is he couldn't stand up to a heavyweights punch.

That reminds me...The Moorer vs Bert Cooper was a classic. Bert wasn't suppose to have a chance against Moorer but almost ko'ed him. I got to dig it out and see it again. Thats the one fault Moorer had is he couldn't stand up to a heavyweights punch.

That reminds me...The Moorer vs Bert Cooper was a classic. Bert wasn't suppose to have a chance against Moorer but almost ko'ed him. I got to dig it out and see it again. Thats the one fault Moorer had is he couldn't stand up to a heavyweights punch.
1970s would have never let Stewart back into the fight. He would have destroyed Stewart early without a second thought. |

As I recall Mercer-Morrison, I remember it was Morrison who had Mercer covering up, until Mercer came off the ropes and turned the tables on him. He caught Morrison coming in and hit him about twenty times before Morrison fell, I don't think it was one punch. Both Mercer and Morrison were underrated, in my opinion. Ellis-Bonavena in the 1967 tourney went a similar way. How about Marciano - Walcott, Foreman-Norton or Tyson-Berbick? Thanks Kent and Angelo, for bringing it back to boxing.|

Kent-I have Foreman at least 1 point ahead at the end of the fight. The two knockdowns were in the second round. Foreman had a great 8 round in which he hit Alessandro with two devastating uppercuts in a row. Giorgio won the second round by 3 points, the eighth and probably even the first, the third and the seventh round. But it's true that Foreman looked in worse shape than Alessandro at the end of the fight, all swollen up and bleeding from the nose. The fact that Alessandro fought so well against Giorgio, while fought like a bum against Michele Geraldo in 1990, is a good example of the importance of intimidation in boxing.|
Morrison had a very good pro record with some very good wins. He gave Lennox Lewis a better fight than a lot of guys. But I agree, he never got back on the horse the same way after that loss. He was in Mercer's class, it was a very good match and a key win for Mercer. Yes, without AIDS, Morrison might still be a factor in today's division ... I think about the troops abroad almost everyday. My birthday is November 11th, so it hits me close to home each year. I know several guys over there now from when I served myself. Best Wishes to all the troops for a safe mission served and a swift return home. Thanks.

Tommy Morrison verses Razor Ruddock was an exciting brawl which was won by Morrison. Both fighters went down in this one and it ranks up there with the great brawls of the division.

Tommy Morrison, a 24 year old up and coming heavyweight from Nigeria, knocked out veteran heavyweight fringe contender Jeremy Williams with one left hook. Williams was on the canvas, out cold from the punch, for at least a minute but he was able to leave the ring on his own power. Peter mostly followed Williams around the ring, taking some good punches from Williams before unloading the knockout punch, which Williams never saw coming. Peter's record is 21-0 18 by KO and he is someone to watch as a likely contender in the near future.

One more thing, I forgot to point out that Peter's knockout of Williams came in the second round, which Peter had predicted before the fight began. Sound familiar?

Samuele Pietro is the new Cassio Marcello. Who is gonna be the new Carlo Liston?

Physics is doing very well, but a lot of work still needs to be done. There is a microscope (its name is STM SCANNING TUNNEL MICROSCOPE) which allows you to see (or of seeing) the single atom! THE SINGLE ATOM! IT SEEMS STAR TREK, BUT IT'S JUST REALITY. The guys who invented it won the Nobel Prize some years ago (a WELL DESERVED one). It is based on the TUNNEL EFFECT (a QUANTUM effect). I have used it a few years ago while I was still a student. Today Physics is full of Star Trek stuff like that.
punching power has always been one of Williams strong points.Pity, I had a chance to interview Peter this week for the other site I write for but I turned down the assignment as I have been ill for the last few days, cold bug has me down. I didn't have the energy to call the guy's management on the phone to set up an interview time or to do the research as I had never heard of the guy until now. Too bad as I had first crack at talking to the guy.He was on the undercard of Castillo verses Casamayor, for the lightweight title that was on Showtime.Sorry to hear that Kent! I hope your health is gonna be all right as soon as possible.The problem with President Clinton is that he was incapable of trust. He cheated on his wife, lied to his family, lied under oath, and obstructed justice. He has no credibility.I still say he created the environment for 9/11. Only a month after he became president, a truck bomb exploded in the garage of the World Trade Centre killing six and wounding hundreds. There was no military response. Iraq tried to assassinate former President George Bush and Clinton's only reply was a solitary cruise missile attack on Iraq's intelligence headquarters.In October 1993 we had 18 brave soldiers killed in Somalia and 50 were wounded. So Clinton recalled all the troops from there by March 1994. The military greatly resented him for it and still do. They thought it was the easy way out.In 1998 US embassies in Kenya and Tanzania were blown up by car bombs, killing several hundred. Clinton's response? A couple of cruise missiles into Afghanistan and Sudan. And it just went on and on. Instead of taking robust action, he fired missiles into sand dunes. The terrorists weren't worried and they thought that they could continue to do it because of the weak responses. Little wonder Clinton had plenty of money to balance the budget because he certainly didn't spend much of the green stuff on the military or much warranted military responses.By the way, the military really did resent Clinton because of his failure to strongly respond to threats. They saw it as an extension of President Carter being weak in foreign affairs. You spoke of republicans being big spenders. At least they spent on important things, such as President Reagan strengthening the military after the neglects of President Carter. You might also like to reflect that under Carter the Consumer Price Index jumped to over 13 percent in 1979, the highest jump in inflation since 1946. Oil prices went up 14 percent. He made President Reagan's economic job almost impossible. Gerri - most decent people believe that attacking someone's education is low class. You just proved it. Most people also criticize 'cradle to grave' democrats as being elitists and snobs. You proved that, too. But keep your funny posts coming because they reassure republicans that we are right and that you have no idea what you are talking about.You never mention 242 brave marines dying in Lebanon as a result of a terrorist suicide bombing in 1983 under Ronald Reagan? Reagan pulled the troops out and never vigorously pursued those who were responsible. I could literally substitute the name Clinton for Reagan, as you have conviently done for me to show that there is blame on both sides of the political isle for what led up to the attacks against us on 9/11/01. You sound a lot like that "fathead" Rush Limbaugh, who is nothing more than a propagandist for the far right of the republican party. But you can't play that partisan game with me as I take aim at my own party, the democrats, when they screw up. All that is left is the truth and we can't blame all of the countries failings on Clinton or even Carter.
According to the emeritus professor of history (Gerry the know-it-all), only the republicans supported the Shah and his thugs. The reality is that the US occupied Iran during WW11 under President Truman (a democrat). In 1953, again under democrat Truman, the elected Iran prime minister Dr Mossades, was deposed by the Shah in a US-backed coup. After being installed in power through President Truman's connivance, the Shah remained in charge of Iran from 1953 to 1979. Democrat Presidents Kennedy and Johnson dealt with him respectively from 1961 to 1969, propping up his regime. President Carter (democrat) dealt with the Shah from 1977 until 1979 when he fled Iran. For 10 of the Shah's 26 years in power, democrats helped him survive. In fact, democrats put him in power and were desperately trying to prop up his regime when he fled Iran in 1979. Shortly afterwards, the militant Iranian students took 70 Americans captive from the Tehran embassy (on the democrat watch of Carter) and they were not released until the day of President Reagan's (republican) inauguration.

So Gerry's accusation that (only) the "republicans backed the Shah of Iran and his thugs for years" is historically wrong, unfair, and untrue. The Shah of Iran was a creation of the democrats. I'm not trying to be unkind, but Gerry gets so many things wrong, it's impossible to take him seriously.

Comparing President Reagan to President Clinton? Kent you gotta get a brain. Clinton was the guy who said that he smoked marijuana, but never inhaled it. He was the guy who denied the allegations of Paula Jones, but then gave her $850,000.00 to keep quiet about it. He was held in contempt of court for falsely testifying during that lawsuit deposition. Clinton also denied the Lewinsky affair, but later confessed to lying people about it. He also denied that he had sex with her by ridiculously claiming that he didn't consider oral sex was really sex, etc.

Clinton is a self-admitted serial liar and he has nothing in common with President Reagan. Kent is a "fathead" and a leftie stooge for suggesting otherwise. I bet Kent even looks like Michael Moore.Kent will now put some more propaganda out telling us all how he gives to charity, and what a good guy he is, and he's a famous reporter, and name dropping, etc. We can't wait (yawn).

| 12/6/04 09:41:01 AM | Kent | same | same | same | 10 |

Here we go back into politics again, but anyway. Howard C. yes congress did threaten to use the war powers act, threatened only, to have Reagan be forced to pull the troops out, a mistake on their part. He could have forced their hand and made them invoke it, then he would have done more to see the marines did not die in vain. The fact is that he as Commander in Chief did pull them out and he shares the blame with the congress of the time. My point entirely, that both parties have had their failures as far as terrorism goes.Did we at that time do enough with our intelligence network once the marines were home to track down and find and punish those responsible? Reagan could have bombed their camps or wherever they held out but I never heard of anything being done about it.Noam, I was not comparing Reagan to Clinton. I was comparing his failure in the situation involving the marines in Lebanon with the failures you mentioned about Clinton involving terrorism, which I agree with.Oh by the way, Limbaugh is a drug addict fathead, while I am a drug free fathead and Michael Moore is just a fathead period. I don't know why you imply I support a propagandist like Moore because I don't.

| 12/6/04 10:33:43 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

Add on to my last post. While I am a democrat, I will repeat here that I haven't voted for my party's nominee for president since 1992 because we haven't had a candidate I have liked (although I did vote for Clinton in 92), so the arguing solely along party lines will not work with me.I also agree that all of those lunkhead actors and other liberals who say they want to leave the country can leave if they want and don't let the door hit them on the way out.That being said, I will continue to be critical of either party when and where it is needed.I will also say, Reagan had his success against terrorism when he ordered the bombing of Libya after an attack in Germany against U.S. interests and Clinton had his success in dealing with the situation in the Yugoslavian region, of course not terrorism proper but a military success nonetheless.I am hoping that W. Bush is succesful in dealing with terrorism but I still think the answer lies in protecting our own borders more, no guest worker program or very limited numbers allowed in. So I am hoping the intelligence bill isn't too watered down.Of course Naom will ignore the fact that I gave Reagan credit for anything and I anticipated him linking me to the actors and liberals who I don't agree with most of the time.Yeah, when I am wearing my reading glasses and my baseball hat, I kind of do look like Moore but that doesn't mean I support him, again Noam will ignore this fact.

| 12/6/04 12:00:10 PM | Noam | --- | --- | --- | 10 |

You began the name calling by calling me a "fathead", so perhaps you shouldn't try to pre-empt what I might call you in return. To boxing fan - Gerri keeps throwing political cheap shots in his boxing posts and he wrote recently where he plans to continue to do...
Political comment here is what arises after Gerri fires off his cheap shots. Given the inaccuracy and untruthfulness of his views, others here have the right to hold him to account. My guess is that it will continue until Gerri finally comes to terms with the fact that democracy worked and President Bush was elected by the silent majority. The noisy, elitist, intelligentsia, such as Gerri, think that their opinions are worth more than the rest of us.

Given the inaccuracy and untruthfulness of his views, others here have the right to hold him to account. My guess is that it will continue until Gerri finally comes to terms with the fact that democracy worked and President Bush was elected by the silent majority. The noisy, elitist, intelligentsia, such as Gerri, think that their opinions are worth more than the rest of us.

The noisy, elitist, intelligentsia, such as Gerri, think that their opinions are worth more than the rest of us. www.helpthemleave.com

Noam, sorry about the fathead comment but I didn't directly say you are a fathead, I said you sound like that fathead Rush Limbaugh. I actually have respect for what you say while I have no respect for that paid propagandist Limbaugh. Remember, I called myself a fathead also. After all, I am 300 pounds and when I look in the mirror, I see that my head is fatter than it should be. Boxing fan, please post about boxing and we will respond accordingly. Can't wait until this Thursday, the Jirov verses Moorer fight. I haven't paid for live boxing in over three years due to very my limited fame of being a journalist. I decided to forego the press pass and maybe drink a couple of beers and cheer for the fighters, something we are not supposed to do at press row and to laugh at those reporters that I know that they are working and I am not. I am sitting right behind them, so they will know I am there. My buddy James Toney will likely be there. I wonder if he is still mad at me? He wasn't too happy with me the last time I saw him as I asked a question he didn't like. I had to get in the name drop, don't want to disappoint Noam. But in reality, Toney doesn't know my name, at least I don't think he does, he does recognize my face though and some people were amazed I still had one after Toney yelled at me. | Noam, I'd rather not be posting on politics, but I don't think that Gerri should be given free reign with the nonsense he spruiks (ie alleging that greedy Republicans have made boxing unsafe, etc). I'm still waiting for Gerri to name names on that. Anyways, after all the pages written on it, I think the new poster, Koo Klock, summed it up best of all in the briefest possible way. Thanks to him/her.

Koo Koo has been gone too long if people think he is new. So you think the Koo Koo Klock is a new poster. He is hardly new. Koo Koo has been gone too long if people think he is new.

Bob, I am picking Jirov. Moorer likely doesn't have it anymore. You never know, Moorer may have one more good fight in him so it could be an interesting fight. Jirov by 9th round knockout.

Do you think Moorer is just looking at it as a payday, or do you think he feels he will win? I think back to Young-Cooney and Norton-Cooney and the veterans, whose best days were behind them, took payday fights. Young fought an inspired fight, but I don't think he went into it expecting to rejuvenate his career. Norton took the cash, plain and simple.

Moorer never seemed to have that much enthusiasm anyway so yes Angelo, the idea of a payday makes sense. We really won't know until the fight happens and if Moorer just plods around the ring, looking just to survive, losing every round, this will be our answer that the payday is what he wants. But if he comes in and really fights Jirov, tooth and nail, then Moorer has some life left in his career. Jirov is just 30 years old or maybe 31, without looking up his age. He still has some years left but he is the kind of fighter who will age fast when he does start to age as he has had some tough fights, versus Toney and verses Mesi, to name a couple. Jirov won't be aging in this one though.

An ace in Moorer's cap is Jirov does tend to cut. I am not sure if it is because he is a white fighter, but he does seem to bust up. Do white fighters tend to have softer skin, I don't know but I think this is Moorer's best chance at winning. Jirov normally throws a lot of punches per round and he takes a hell of a shot, so I don't see Mirror winning by decision or even by knockout. | 12/8/04 12:38:15 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Guys around the gym, white and black, seem to think the white fighters cuts are worse. They might cut more easily, but the gym rats seem to think it's not so much that the initial cut opens faster, but instead, that once a cut is started, it gets worse a lot faster on some of the white fighters. Who knows, my comments are by no means based on anything scientific. I've seen horrendous cuts on black, white Asian and Hispanic fighters. Maybe the blood just shows up better against white skin! |

White people probably have softer skin. We sun burn more easily etc, so it probably makes sense that we whities cut more easily as well. Remember the middleweight Vito Antuofermo ? From memory, he used to soak his skin in brine to toughen it up. Also, someone once told me that black guys have more rounded features, like Ali, Foreman, et al, that is less likely to cut because punches slide off of them. I'm wondering whether whites have more protruding cheeks and eye brow bones that makes us more cutable. We get black eyes more easily, too. On the other hand, and I'm not trying to be funny, I think blacks cut more around the mouth, especially the bottom lip. | 12/8/04 01:44:59 AM|Noam|same|same||10|Moorer probably thought that Foreman was just fighting him for a pay check too, but he soon found out otherwise. But Moorer hasn't got Big George's pride, so I suspect he is in it for the money and I pick the other guy. White people probably have softer skin. We sun burn more easily etc, so it probably makes sense that we whites cut more easily as well. Remember the middleweight Vito Antuofermo ? From memory, he used to soak his skin in brine to toughen it up. Also, someone once told me that black guys have more rounded features, like Ali, Foreman, et al, that is less likely to cut because punches slide off of them. I'm wondering whether whites have more protruding cheeks and eye brow bones that makes us more cutable. We get black eyes more easily, too. On the other hand, and I'm not trying to be funny, I think blacks cut more around the mouth, especially the bottom lip. | 12/8/04 02:26:54 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Angelo, I think you are right in that it seems cuts are worse on white fighters because red blood is more noticed on lighter skin. Once a fighter is cut, it has always seemed to me that cuts are just as bad regardless of the skin color. Jerry Q sure had trouble with cuts and Joe Frazier didn't. Interesting what if, if Jerry would have been hit with the same shots he hit Smoking Joe with in their first fight, would Jerry had been cut? Jerry hit Joe with some tremendous shots. We can't therefore say that if the answer is yes, then it applies to an entire race of fighters as we are just comparing two fighters here. But I do think Jerry likely would have been cut by the shots he hit Joe with. Vassiliy Jirov does get cut in a lot of his fights but he never has been stopped on cuts and he has stopped black fighters on cuts himself. I was just giving my opinion on Michael Moorer's best chance of winning. Because even if Jirov hasn't lost by cuts before, this is something that doesn't get better with time and it could at some point start effecting his career. I have never noticed one race of figthers having more of or worse cuts to their lips. I think this is just a perception of the poster's, not something factual. | 12/8/04 03:34:25 AM|Massimo Cini da Pisa|Roma||andre' the midget.com|||10|I'm going to go to a Moorer fight Thursday night. This fight won't be fought in the USA, it will be fought in my home, in Roma. ESPN Classic is gonna ( gonna and not pantaloni) show FOREMAN-MOORER and I'm looking forward to it. My prediction ? I see Michele winning the early rounds, but I think Giorgio's big punch will decide the fight in the later ones. I think the Moorer-Jirov fight is a nonsense. Does Moorer still need a payday with all the money he got ? He is not going to whip Vitali. He could win one of the 43 belts around, maybe the WMS belt but how much glory there is in this ? Lamon Brewster and and John " Not too exciting" Ruiz have belts but this doesn't make them better than Jerry Quarry by any means. Michele's career is already over. He should dedicate his life to something else and enjoy his money and his health. It sounds like the more people is wealthy the more they chase (for) money. This is so stupid !

Massimo makes a strong point---with all the titles going around, guys who now call themselves champions can't hold a candle to the likes of Jerry Quarry, Earnie Shavers, Ron Lyle, Jimmy Young or even the block of decent 80's fighters who didn't get a belt. It's a crock that John Ruiz is in the boxing record books as a Champion, while Jerry Quarry is "that contender who never won the title." Guess what? It's because it was pretty much "THE title" rather than "one of the belts." I'd even go along with WBA/WBC having two champions at the same time, with the possibility of a collision course that would unify the title. Even though I think the title should only change hands in the ring, it was interesting to me when Ali was stripped for giving Spinks a rematch instead of fighting #1 contender Norton. That made two Champions for the first time in a long time---and what was the eventual outcome? Did Larry Holmes beat Mike Weaver to unify the title? I'm getting old and forgetful maybe???? Anyway, like I said, two can be interesting, but more than that becomes ridiculous and diluted.

Yes, calling John Ruiz a champion is hard to do but the guy still seems to find a way to win no matter how ugly those wins are. But if I didn't know it was a title fight, I would have wondered what all of the fuss was over the fight with Golota. Both fighters stunk up the joint and it seemed ludicrous that their fans were brawling in the stands. For what? To claim one of those guys? Ruiz just stunk slightly less than Golota, who had looked good in a close fight with Chris Byrd a few months ago. I guess Golota figured he had to go back to what he knows best, fighting dirty. Jerry Quarry would have boxed circles around those two fatheads. Hey Noam, is it all right to call those guys fatheads?

Andrea Golota would have all the tools to be a champion but he just has the heart of a bum. How can anyone be afraid of Giovanni Ruiz? Andrea is witter, andreer and more powerful than him, he should have eaten him alive. JQ was not afraid of Ron Lyle, Mac Foster, Ernesto Shaver and Joe Frazier, really very dangerous people, while Andrea Golota is scared of Giovanni Ruiz! There was a time (a golden time) when there were 8 weight divisions and 8 champions. And there were many fights that (or which) were not title fights but were still GREAT FIGHTS among (or between, too tired to pick the best of the two) GREAT FIGHTERS. Now, we have a title fight a week (taking in account all the weight divisions) but most of the fights are boring.

I realize that my American Slang is not perfect yet but, if fathead is such an offence, I guess that thinhead is a big compliment! You guys are all thinheads!
know who's behind that. Mr. Hugs and Kisses just won't let it go. Move on with your life, asshole. Spare us your next sixteen-paragraph diatribe. | | 12/9/04 01:58:48 PM|Noam|same|same|same|10|Gerri the spice girl has come out of hiding! Name calling and nastiness. The winners wanted four more years of Bush, but the icing on the cake is the satisfaction we'll get listening to cry baby lefty losers like Gerri whining and squirming because democracy beat them. Democracy worked and Gerri hates it. Get over it Gerri. There's only 1,460 more days of George W. to go. Alternatively, go to www.helpthemleave.com. Ha ha ha! And get a sense of humour! :) :) :) :) :) :) :) :) :)

| 12/9/04 03:27:01 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|Moorer was fighting really a good fight against Foreman. Then he got hit. Michele was really unlucky in that fight. Giorgio Eduardo could punch, no heavy beg lasted too much against him. | 12/9/04 04:10:01 PM|Howard C. |&^%()||(&^%)||10|Gerry reminds me of the 2 - 45 journeyman who thinks too much punishment is never enough. The type who looks like he's been chasing parked cars because catching incoming jabs and hooks on the nose is his idea of good defense. It never occurred to Gerry to slip a punch or take a standing eight. We ought to be thankful for Gerry. Whackos like him are society's alarm bell that there are dozens more Jonestowns looming unless we immediately regulate the sale of Coolaid. Gerri blames rotten republicans for trying to wreak ruin on boxing, but ask him to name names and you get a conspiratorial nod and a wink with a "you all know who they are" whispered out the corner of his mouth behind cupped hand. Yeah, Gerri, we know. They're the same guys who faked the moon landing. The same full mooners who planted that Martian fig tree growing out of your left ear. Broken records are Gerry's speciality with "rotten republicans" the recurring theme. Gerry blames republicans for his never landing a job. If the republicans hadn't been intercepting his mail, Gerry thinks his job application to replace Monica as President Clinton's intern would have been successful. (Oh well, look on the bright side of it, Gerry. Think of all the loot you saved on dry cleaning.) We all love Gerry because he makes us feel better. When Gerry posts, we all thank our lucky stars that "it could have been me". Yeah, Gerri, we know. They're the same guys who faked the moon landing. The same full mooners who planted that Martian fig tree growing out of your left ear. Broken records are Gerry's speciality with "rotten republicans" the recurring theme. Gerry blames republicans for his never landing a job. If the republicans hadn't been intercepting his mail, Gerry thinks his job application to replace Monica as President Clinton's intern would have been successful. (Oh well, look on the bright side of it, Gerry. Think of all the loot you saved on dry cleaning.) Gerri likes to dish it out, but can't take it. He's even called for the referee (Carl) to intervene. We'll take that as a TKO, you big sissy. Look, Gerri, you were the one who kept making bitchy political cheap shots. The rest of us only replied. If you can't take it - and obviously you can't - go find some nancy boys as soft as you to play with. In the meantime, get back in your corner, dunce (or I'll give you a whupping with both hands tied behind my back). | 12/9/04 11:18:45 PM|Gerry|Cleveland|jgschultz11@aol.com|10|Look Bitches, enough's enough. I don't care if you disagree with my opinion, which is only shared by millions of Americans. You hide behind your monitors and keep dredging this crap up over and over, or hide behind fag fake names while you slander someone you don't agree with. Well, let's end it. You tell me where to meet you. I'll spend the gas and make the trip. Then, we'll see how tough you are away from the keyboard. That's my email to the upper left. Put your money where your mouth is, girls. Either that, or grow and learn some damn manners. Carl, help me out with this. We don't need this kind of garbage stinking a sight for the Quarrrys. | 12/9/04 11:33:41 PM|Howard C. |&(^&||)($#||10|Oh, dear. Poor Gerry. Looks like I hit the mark. Got his knickers in a knot. Throwing his handbag and hissy fits. Gerry likes to dish it out, but can't take it. He's even called for the referee (Carl) to intervene. We'll take that as a TKO, you big sissy. Look, Gerri, you were the one who kept making bitchy political cheap shots. The rest of us only replied. If you can't take it - and obviously you can't - go find some nancy boys as soft as you to play with. In the meantime, get back in your corner, dunce (or I'll give you a whupping with both hands tied behind my back). | 12/10/04 02:52:40 AM|Massimo|Italia||.com|10|These are the results from the
Vitale-Daniele weight-in:

So Daniele is the andreer of the two. The combined weight of the two men is 520, exactly the weight of Andre' the Midget at his peak (or, at least, what they said it was). This exceeds the former record held by the Lewis-Klitschko fight, where the combined weight was 504.5. We may call the Vitale-Daniele fight "THE ANDRE' FIGHT". Kent, my friend from California, what happened in the Jirov-Moorer fight? In the Foreman-Moorer fight I saw yesterday night, Moorer was probably winning every round, but eventually "Grosso Giorgio" knocked him out with a big punch. Greetings.

What's gotten into you Gerri? I'm guessing you've had a bad day. Watching Moore's Fahrenheit movie again might cheer you up. That was below the belt saying I've got a fag name. My grandfather was Noam also and so was his grandfather and his grandfather. I was given it out of respect for them. Now I'll have to change it after what you said.

Gerri isn't a real macho name either but I get the feeling it wasn't meant to be, what with you being a mummy's boy and all.

Anyway, get back in the corner. Howard C. hasn't said that you can come out yet.

Gerri, I just noticed that your last name is Shultz? That's German isn't it? Weren't you that sergeant on Hogan's Heroes who says "I see nuthink"?

Shocked, Jirov was well ahead on points when he ran into a left hand from Moorer and, Timber! down and out he went in the ninth round! The opposite of what happened when Moorer had fought Foreman.

Jirov was cut again, from accidental headbutts but he was not in danger of losing by cuts.

In your prediction a few days ago, you got the right round but the wrong man!

When Don Re proposed around 1990 Tyson to fight Foreman, Mike said: "I ain't fighting that fuckin' animal". The truth is that Tyson was scared shitless of Giorgio. Sorry for my French.

Lighten up on Gerry a bit. Cut him some slack. Okay Gerry. You can come back out from standing in the corner. Out you come. As long as you don't go annoying the crap outta everyone here with that "evil criminal republican" rubbish, you won't have to go back to the corner again. Behave.

So let's go back to what we were talking about before Gerry injected politics into the debate.....boxing.

Vitali Klitschko versus Danny Williams. I think Klitschko will destroy him. Williams's win over Tyson was not so much a showcase of how good Williams is, it was more an exhibition of how much Tyson has slipped. In that fight Williams beat a carcass. He won't beat a guy with a 15cm height advantage. Who do you pick, Gerry?

I was shocked too Kent, I didn't see the fight but I read Jirov was in complete control when he got KO'ed. Maybe now Moorer can sign to fight Ruiz and win a boring slice of someone's title. Klitchko will destroy Williams inside 6 rounds.

Bob, Jirov was not in complete control but he had a big early lead and while Moorer started to trim the lead somewhere around round six or seven, it was a twelve round fight for some NABF title or something like that, and all Jirov likely would have had to do was win one of the last three rounds to get a decision from the judges. I don't know what their scorecards were, but that is how I saw it. I have it on tape and I have looked at the tape but I don't remember them giving the judges scores out. I am sure it is on the Net somewhere.

I am not sure what Jirov's corner told him but maybe because he was cut, even if it was by accidental head butts, that they told him he had to knock Moorer out when in reality, if he had stayed away and boxed behind his jab the rest of the way, he would have won the fight.

I've give credit to Moorer, he got a big win that puts him back in reach of some big fights. He was a bit sluggish early but he seemed to get his bearings more as the fight went on. Like I said, he surprised the hell out of me. We can't say, "stick a fork in him, he's done" yet.

Daniele Williams is so heavy? He is even shorter than Andre'. Has he swallowed a whale? Primo was exactly the same weight when he fought Loughran (270 lbs), but he was way wilter!

Vitali K. looked good but he carried his left hand too low. It is a bad habit someone will exploit and don't be surprised that he doesn't get knocked out himself sometime.

If I was in Williams corner, I would have told him to bob and weave and keep throwing the left jab as he moved in. Most of the time have him throw left hooks to the body and the head but every once in while throw a hard right hand over Klitschko's low left hand. Try to get K concentrating on the left so the right will suprise him.

If I was in Williams corner, I would have told him to bob and weave and keep throwing the left jab as he moved in. Most of the time have him throw left hooks to the body and the head but every once in while throw a hard right hand over Klitschko's low left hand. Try to get K concentrating on the left so the right will suprise him.

I know this is hard to do when a fighter like Williams is being hit by a lot of hard punches before he can move in but I think someone like Williams would have to charge in to throw his punches before K can get set. This is taking a chance on getting nailed as he moves in but he was getting hit anyway, so he had nothing to lose by using this strategy.

I haven't seen the Klitschko sparring session yesterday but I have seen a young prospect, the 21 years old George Edward Foreman destroying Boone Kirkman. This Foreman is really scaring, he destroyed Kirkman in less than 2 rounds knocking him down 3 times. He threw an incredible uppercut in round 2 and lift Kirkman off his feet !!!! With only one punch !!!! And Kirkman was a good fighter who had (or held) victories over the likes of Doug Jones, Eddie Machen and Amos "Small Car" Lincoln. George just destroyed him! This George Foreman is a brute and I'm sure is gonna be heavyweight champion of the wordl very soon. This if Joe Frazier will be crazy enough to give him a chance for the title !

Angelo, that is not Massimo, that is "Zeke from Cabin Creek," "Mr. Clutch" none other than my partner at guard for the L.A. Lakers, Mr. Jerry West.

I know I am not very Wilt but I was a good shooting guard. G.G., Gail Goodrich.

Funny how when you ask a lot of people who the best guard in Laker history was, a lot of people will say Magic Johnson and Johnson was great, but they forget how great Jerry West really was. West was a bigger, stronger version of John Stockton, just as tough, and that is saying a lot, and more of a scorer than Stockton. Maybe West didn't have the assortment of passes Stockton had but he still could find the open man when he needed to, he was a fine assist man in his own right.

I'm the one and only Jerry West, the 1969 NBA Finals MVP, a living legend, in one word. I'm in Rome (but the guys here say Roma) just to have fun. I love the city, is very beautiful, the food, the people... I have learnt a bit of Italian also: uno, due, tre, quattro, bello, spaghetti, buon giorno, quanti anni hai? But I miss California, I just can't stay away from California for too long! been fought under today's rules, than most of the knockdowns would not have happened because today, the referees check the fighters to see if they are alright before they let the fight continue. When Baer and Carnera fought, Baer would come back in the moment the referee finished counting and he would start hitting Carnera again, knocking him down again. Also, in the rounds that Carnera was not knocked down, at least four of them, Carnera landed more punches, jabs and follow up right hands and uppercuts than Baer landed, winning the rounds by my scoring. It is quite possible that without the multiple knockdowns, that if Carnera had been knocked down three times in the entire fight by todays rules instead of eleven times, he might have even had a chance of winning the fight. I always knew that Da Preem had a lot of courage for getting up so many times but he actually fought much better against Bear than he has ever been given credit for.

Carnera himself said that he injured his ankle between the first and the second round by getting up from the stool. The knockdowns in the eleventh round were not caused by punches (Baer's punches probably didn't even land) but by the injury. Most people thinks (or think) that Baer was better than Carnera stastically while Primo punched harder. I think the contrary is true. Max Baer couldn't fight, did not have a jab, did not move the head correctly, was awkward and easy to hit, Joe Louis couldn't miss him with his jab. The only thing Max Baer could do was hitting (or hit, or to hit) guys with his right and knocking (or knock, or to knock) them out. Primo Carnera did better than him against Joe Louis. In his prime, Primo Carnera wasn't probably any worse than Max Baer. Max Bar was outboxed by Tommy Loughran, while Primo clearly outpointed him. Da Preem was never a champion, but in his prime, he really was one of the best heavyweights in the world, a legitimate top contender. In the years between 1930 and 1935 he was an outstanding fighter. After 1935, he was never the same fighter.
team was winning the championship, was at the peak of its shape, had great players such as Bruno Conti, Paulo Roberto Falcao, Roberto Pruzzo and Toninho Cerezo and lost to Lecce that was the worst team in the league at the time.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>12/15/04 05:28:27 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, CA</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Ed, I think the win over Sharkey was legitimate as far as Sharkey not taking a dive. If you look at the knockout punch, it looks for like a right uppercut that is more of a forearm than a punch but the referee didn't call an illegal punch so Carnera wins. The flow of the Sharkey two fight as I remember it, I have it on tape but I have to hunt down the tape, is that Sharkey did have a lead at the time of a knockout but it was competitive. Sharkey seemed to be fighting hard and as in Ali/Liston one, why would a fighter who was going to take a dive, fight hard?

I have never seen Carnera versus Sharkey one that Sharkey won by decision and I have heard it described as being one sided but maybe it wasn't because Baer/Carnera is described as being one sided and except for the rounds when Carnera was knocked down, the first, the, second and of course the last 11th round, the fight was close with Carnera actually winning at least four of the other rounds.

I agree with Massimo's assesement of Baer and Carnera that Baer had little skills just power and that Carnera had better boxing skills, a good left jab and the ability to throw accurate cominations. Also as Massimo points out, Carnera did better against Joe Louis than Baer did. Carnera did get knocked out in the sixth round by Louis but there were some rounds that he was competitive in and a fighter would have to have decent skills to give at least some trouble to Louis.

I think history is revisiting Carnera's career and he will be recognized for being a good fighter but not a great one below the level of Baer, Sharkey, and Schmeling on the all time list but still deserving to be called a champion.

By the way, Baer's power was so dominant when he could land cleanly that he has to ranked fairly high, higher than the other three of his era that I mentioned.

I think Carnera won by decision and I have heard it described as being one sided but maybe it wasn't because Baer/Carnera is described as being one sided and except for the rounds when Carnera was knocked down, the first, the, second and of course the last 11th round, the fight was close with Carnera actually winning at least four of the other rounds.

I have a beautiful book about(or on) Carnera written by his two sons: Umberto and Giovanna Maria Carnera. Its title is: "My father, Primo Carnera". In this book there is written that the first Sharkey-Carnera fight in 1931 was pretty one-sided, as Carnera was knocked down twice in the fourth round and managed to win only a couple of rounds but you have to know that Primo had had a serious car accident just a few hours before the fight in which he fainted. Now it's obvious that when he did step into the ring he wasn't in brillant shape ! It is also a false legend that Carnera couldn't take a punch ! When he fought George Godfrey, in 1930, George hit him with several hard rights to the head and Carnera didn't go down. And George Godfrey was one of the hardest punchers of the 30's. Just before the knockout punch in round 6, Sharkey hit Carnera with a hard right, Primo was probably stunned, but didn't go down. Joe Louis hit Carnera with terrible shots for five rounds but Primo didn't go down.

Joe Louis said that up until he met Marciano, Max Bear hit him the hardest shot he ever took -- but I believe it came after the bell. Louis said his fight against Bear was his best performance ever. I think I read he threw something like 258 punches and 255 landed.

The best fighter ever to not win the title was Jerry Quarry. I remmber him beating up on the likes of Ronny Lyle and Ernie Shavers back in the 70's. If he would have beaten Jimmy Ellis then he would be remembered better. Jimmy was a good fighter, but not in Jerry's class. My favorite fighter ever was either Jerry or Marvin Hagler. Both those could whip some you know what. Hagler destroyed Worm Monroe I remember that knockout still.

We remember those Quarry wins well, and I'll agree with Mr. George Foreman when he says that Quarry was the best heavy to never win the title. I think JQ's win over Shavers was the most dramatic, but the win over Lyle was technically more impressive. Jimmy Ellis was in the same class as JQ, but I think Quarry would have beaten him on most nights----Ellis caught Quarry at the right time and everything fell into place, and still, Quarry should have followed up on his late round power punch and he didn't. But Ellis was very sneaky and very, very good.

Jim Ellis seemed to have a good right hand from when I saw him years ago. I remember him betaing Joe Frazier for a couple rounds then Joe just wore him down. Jerry and Joe sure had a nice battle. I remember the Garden was electric that night. Jerry looked like the best fighter in the world for a couple of rounds, but Joe wore him down too. It seems like that happened alot in Joe's fights. I hope Jerry's family is doing well, I know Jerry passed on a couple years back. Mike was good too, if he had more of a punch he could have been champ as well.

Mike also came around at a time with some great fighters in his division. His only title shot was against one of the greatest light heavyweights of all time, Bob Foster. Mike had a win over Mike Rossman who later became a champion. He also came close to winning in a rematch with Rosaman and got the short end of the verdicts in close fights with Pierre FOURIE, Yaqi Lopez, Chris Finnegar as well. If he could have gotten the verdict in any of those fights, and a lot of people thought Mike won most of them, he could have secured another title shot after Foster had retired and he had enough boxing skill, despite not being a big puncher to still come away with a title.

I think that Carnera was slightly ahead in the second fight with Sharkey at the time of the knockout. Primo Carnera wore a size 17 shoe. It's the same size as (or of) Shawn Bradley, a guy who (or that) is twice as wilt. As even the stones know, Shaq wears a size 22. Kent/MassYou both make good cases for Carnera/Sharkey fight. I have seen it (second one) but it was awhile ago. I'll have to check it out again. I was going mostly by newspaper accounts of the fight and maybe they were prejudice. You have to remember back in those days the mob was VERY heavily involved in fights esp. when it involved a vulnerable Italian immigrant fighter. A side note, did you know Jack Dempsey was good friends with Al Capone? He wanted to be Dempsey's manager in fact but it never happened.

No, I didn't know that Dempsey was good friends with Al Capone. Sad thing ! I don't know that much about Al Capone also. I know he was a mafioso and his surname sounds Italian so probably his relatives were from Italy. He was not a good spot for Italy, that's for sure !

Like everything else, movies have glorified Capone and made him larger than life---and even a sympathetic character to some. I will say, as an American of Italian orgin, I'm not "proud" of the image of mafia, gangsters, etc., but I love watching The Sopranos or the Godfather movies as much as anyone else. Terrific writing and acting win out over worrying about the "image" of my ancestry being tarnished by showing Italians as criminals. I think most educated people and people whose opinions matter have figured out that not ALL Italians are in the mob!! And I'll take that image over the other Italian stereotype, which is the fat jolly guy who cries at the drop of a hat (i.e. Al from Happy Days). |
|12/16/04 01:42:48 PM|Alfredo Delvecchio|Milwaukee||green-white-red.com|||10|Angelo, Angelo, Angelo, Angelo, Angelo, Angelo, &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;"A fat jolly guy who cries at the drop of a hat".&lt;br&gt;I guess this is slang! What a strange way to say "immediately". Eeeeeeeeh gia', gia', gia', gia', gia'! I have to thank my dictionary!&lt;br&gt;Where is Chachi? Chachi, Chachi, Chachi, Chachi, Chachi!&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Have I ever told you of Rosa Coletti? &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;She left me for a seller of ties! |
|12/16/04 09:08:44 PM|Chuck Cunningham|Nome, Alaska||forgottenrichiesbrother.com|||10|I heard a rumor that Rosa Colletti really wasn't a tiny girl. She just seemed that way because Alfredo is a big man.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Chachi got married to Joanie and Alfredo married Chachi's mother.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Hey Alfredo, who is better Da Preem, Lorenzo Zanon, or Alfio Righetti? |
|12/17/04 02:28:53 AM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Chuck-&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Yes, Rosa is a pretty andre' woman, but I make her look Manute Bol.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Da Preem was the greatest. Primo from Sequals, Friuli Venezia Giulia.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I'm very old, I was born in 1919. Very old... Eeeeeeeeh gia', gia', gia', gia', gia'!!!! |
|12/17/04 02:36:13 AM|Alfredo Delvecchio|Wisconsin||.com|||10|Ah, of course the last message was written by me, not by Massimo. Massimo is a good friend of mine who I met in Italy and I was just thinking of him. Italy, Italy, Italy, Italy, Italy! |
|12/17/04 02:37:26 AM|Ed|Cicero NY||mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|http://www.chicagohs.org/history/capone.html http://www.crimelibrary.com/gangsters_outlaws/mob_bosses/capone/era_15.html?sect=15&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Mass... guess what I bought yesterday at store? OLIVE OIL direct from Italy 100% pure extra virgin...delicious| |
|12/17/04 12:26:08 PM|Vizzini|somewhere in Sicilia||The Princess Bride.com|||10|Ed-&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Thanks! I use to eat very often Italian food. In Roma there is plenty of Italian food.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;PS: I have just seen Foreman-Schultz and I think Schultz was robbed.| |
|12/17/04 01:29:42 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Angelo, anyone who thinks that a person is more likely to be involved in crime because his ancestry is Italian is ignorant and while it is true certain areas of certain cities have been controlled by the mafia, who have often been Italian immigrants or descendents of Italian immigrants, most of the people in those areas were not involved in the mafia.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;It is a good thing the mafia's hold on boxing is no longer a real issue but we now have other kind of gangsters running things. Don King is a prime example of a criminal with a gangster background, he once served time in prison for manslaughter for beating a man to death while trying to collect a load shark loan, is in control of a lot of the promotions here in the U.S. Just because King is not an Italian but is black instead doesn't make boxing any better because a crook is still a crook no matter what his racial or ethnic background is.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;|
|12/18/04 06:15:38 AM|George Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com|||10|In following up on the progress of Senate Bill 275, I have learned that Congress, and thus the President, did not pass and approve it during the 108th Congress. While all parties involved in writing and commenting upon it want a national boxing commission established, the bill did not secure approval. Mostly because of a lack of consensus, Congress did not make it one of its priorities in this last session. As I have indicated in previous posts, TJQF and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) do not approve of this bill in its present form. The reason for that is that this legislation does not clearly define all of the financial players who arrange the fights (e.g. advertisers, promoters, cable TV firms, casinos, hotels, and sanctioning bodies, etc.) as "promoters." The position of TJQF and the AAIB has always been that the national boxing commission must have the ability to control all of the parties who may gain from it financially in order to effectively monitor it and to remove the unfairness of boxing that has produced many of its problems, especially for the fighters and the fans. While our position is extremely unpopular with many people (especially the cable companies, the sanctioning bodies, the casinos, hotels, their employees, and U.S. Senator John McCain), it still stands. TJQF and the AAIB were set up to protect the fighters and improve the sport, and that more than explains why we have taken this very unpopular stance. For those of you who have followed this legislative issue, thank you. Also, this bill will be re-introduced by Senator McCain for further consideration by Congress next January.

| 12/18/04 08:35:33 AM|Kent Appel|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Thank you Mr. Otto for the update on the legislation. For those of you who don't know, Mr. George Otto does a lot of work for the Jerry Quarry Foundation to get laws passed to improve boxing.Mr. Otto, does that mean that Senator McCain does not go far enough in the area you are stressing, about indentifying all of the people involved in putting boxing promotions on? I always thought Senator McCain was our friend in the senate on such matters. Anyway, please let us know if we can do anything anytime soon to help get this important law passed, ie writing letters, etc.| |

| 12/19/04 10:31:50 AM|George Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com|||10|Mr. Appel, thank you for your comments and your kind words. Regarding Senator John McCain, both the AAIB and TJQF believe that he has done the most to try to resolve boxing's problems than any other political leader who has ever addressed this issue. However, you are correct in stating that his bill (S. 275) does not identify enough persons and organizations as "promoters". For too long boxing, the boxers, and the fans have suffered from the secrecy, incompleteness, duplicity, unfairness, and one-sidedness of the promotional agreements. Thus all promotional parties, their roles, and their responsibilites need to be clearly expressed in written agreements. Without this being included in the bill, the national boxing commission will have little jurisdiction and power to ensure the safety of the fighters, the establishment of pensions, the fairness in carrying out the rules of engagement, the proper qualifications of the people working the bouts, the fitness of the fighters going into, during, and after the fights, and the elevation of the sport to a level of decency and respect. Without the bill including this level of inclusiveness, boxing will continue as a niche sport, never attaining the overall interest and respect secured by major league baseball, football, basketball, or hockey. To do this, all of the principle players (including the fighters) must be held to a high level of accountability and responsibility. Otherwise boxing will continue as "the red light district of sports." All of you can help by writing letters to Senator McCain, your Senators, your Representative, and President Bush asking them to support the change in this bill on behalf of the AAIB, TJQF, and yourselves. Thank you. |

| 12/19/04 11:20:48 AM|George Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com|||10|In addition to all that I have written below regarding boxing reform, let me also state that enacting and implementing S. 275 as the AAIB and TJQF have suggested is not enough to dramatically change the sport. As has been true in ML Baseball, Basketball, Baseball, Football, and Hockey, the fighters must join, support, and participate in a union. Without that solidarity, their needs can not be adequately addressed—even if a national boxing commission exists. Eddie Mustafa Muhammed, under the auspices of JAB, is trying to do that, but much work needs to be done. I say this in realizing that all unions are not perfect, and that, other than the AAIB and TJQF, no other boxing organization has made this suggestion. Nevertheless, both the AAIB and TJQF have always been on the front lines of reform and change (many times by themselves) to include this issue which is most difficult and frightening to all those involved in this
The readers of this site may also want to support this issue by again writing to the political leaders that I have listed in my previous post. Thank you.

Thanks again Mr. Otto. I for one will be writing letters to President Bush, Senator McCain, and my U.S. senators here in California, as well as my rep. in the House of Reps.

Getting a bill such as this passed is the reason we even have The Jerry Quarry Foundation (TJQF), to make boxing better. It is the least we can do to honor our favorite fighter Jerry's memory.

Just saw replay of Klitschko/Williams fight and it seems Klitschko is type of fighter that looks terrible but is very hard to beat... kinda reminds me of Carlos Monzon the middleweight champ who looked kinda stiff and awkward but always won. I also noticed Klitschko (from his Sanders fight) takes a pretty good punch. I think his downfall will be his own huge size working against him.. injuries to his joints, ligaments etc. as leverage works both ways.

I think the only guy who, in this moment, would have a decent chance at beating Vitali is Giacomo Toney, as Giacomo is not scared of anybody but God, can take any punch and is way more skilled than Vitali. This wouldn't be an easy fight to predict but I would put my money on Toney to outpoint him.

O K Mass   We got a bet!   NO euros though   strictly U S $.

Ed-I don't have any dollar(s) and I have never seen a dollar in person and not even a cent. In this moment I have EUROS in my pocket but I keep thinking in LIRE. I have been using lire for most of my life.

Massimo - how tall is Toney ? I think he is too short and wouldn't have the style to beat the champ. It would be the same result to what happened to Williams. Tall man beats up shorter man. Not even Toney's usually overwhelming aggression would overcome that advantage. Toney would have more chance against Kent. As I type this a big spider has walked across my desk, onto my keyboard, and is sitting looking at me. Do I squash it ? zhjxz,mzazas p9389upn 3mnhj. Yep !

Noam-Yes Noam, kill the spider ! Why ? Because (the) spiders suck (it's Oregon slang) !

Giacomo Toney is exactly 1.76 wilt. I'm sure Giacomo would last the distance even against Vitali because he can take one hell of a punch ! Of course I'm not sure he would be able to handle the difference in wiltness and andreness but I know he is very quick and very good at slipping punches.I think he is right now the only real challenge for Vitali.Giacomo Toney would never beat Kent " The hitting singer " Appel, not even in his dreams. Kent is wilter than Giacomo and is from California. Kent, I know you met Toney. You are wilter than Toney, ain't you ? If Toney really thinks he can whip Kent, he has to wake up and apologize !

Hey Ed, I watched the replay of the Klitschko-Williams fight this weekend also. I remember thinking to myself that Klitschko looked like a heavyweight Monzon.....then I said na... Monzon had endurance, he could go 15 hard rounds and not look like he's about to pass out from exhaustion. Of course Vitali is twice Monzon's size. As for the feature fight, Johnson-Tarver it was close but I had Tarver 115 to 114.
power wise. Another win or 2 against a top fighter will show a lot about what he's got. Mass Are Euros available in both paper and coin?

| 12/21/04 01:50:33 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Massimo, it is hard to tell how tall Toney is because I think he wears fancy expensive shoes that add an inch to his height and while I have stood right next to him several times, he has always been in street clothes. I am guessing he is about 5'10" about one inch less Wilt than me. As for him beating me, the man has been ducking me for too long now. "Come on James, sign on the dotted line and show what you got!" Wouldn't it be funny if he actually read this post? I might have to hide for at least a year!

| 12/21/04 03:01:50 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|Ed-

Yes, euros are available in both paper and coin. In coin you have 1-2-5-10-20-50 cents up to 2 euros, the big stuff. The nasty thing is that you have to count coins very often. Anyway, I think that EU is a really great thing. We'll see.

| 12/21/04 04:27:11 AM|Noam|same||jhghy|||10|Massimo

The spider is no longer with us. In mafia talk, "it sleeps with the fishes". To me, Toney looks taller lying down than he does standing up. He seems fat and chubby and I can't imagine him beating the other guy whose name I can't spell.

| 12/21/04 08:55:15 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|I have just seen on the Internet the white leather Everlast shoes Muhammad Ali wore in his fight against Ron Lyle! It was quite an emotion for me! They were size 13.

| 12/21/04 09:15:29 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||Funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Noam: A few years ago, I really felt that if Tyson trained hard and stayed focused, he still had the talent to run the table. In fact, in the year or so before he fought Lewis, he should have taken a few fights as tune-ups. If he stayed in BOXING shape and as I said, focused, with boxing once again his top priority, he could have taken Lewis in my opinion. I think he still had some skills at that point, but the skills were rusted and he couldn't call on them when he needed to (lack of activity). If he has eroded even further, which apparently he has, it might be too late for him to bounce back. If you've reached 40, you know that you have to work that much harder to do the things you took for granted when you were 30 or even 35. I don't think Tyson has put in the work to stay sharp and now the question is, if he goes full bore, can he regain the power and reflexes that once made him a great heavyweight? My guess is that he still has plenty of power if he can manage to land. I don't think he can stay out of the way of punches anymore and I don't suppose he could regain that ability---as reflexes are a big part of that and when they're gone, they're (usually) gone for good.

I've never been a big fan of his, even when he was the young Champion. I always thought that there were holes in his game (proven right when Douglas exposed him) and I think he developed an arrogance that was annoying and disturbing. But in a weird way, I'm almost pulling for him now. It's like the old "Mighty Have Fallen" story and based on everything he's been through (most his own doing but sometimes a victim) I feel like it would be interesting to see him turn back the clock and be competitive again.

I have nothing against Michele Geraldo Tyson and, anzi, I'm grateful to him for the joy he gave me by fighting in the ring but... Gotta be realistic! Just a few days ago he jumped with his 13.5 feet over a car. He had just uscito from a bar, probably drunk, maybe even something worse. I just don't see him focused enough on boxing.

I wonder whether Tyson has one 'last hurrah' left in him. Most elite champions (and whether we like Tyson or not, he was elite and in the top 10 heavies of all time) usually have one last great moment left in them. Ali had his win over Foreman. And Foreman, I suppose, had his moment when he beat Moore. It is sort of like the candle flickers before it goes out. Tyson has not had that moment. Maybe he missed it because of all the idiotic things he did in his life and fate deprived him of it. Or maybe, with a strong knee that allows him to get leverage for his punches, and with a will-to-win honed by all his financial woes, Tyson has that one magic moment left in him. Personally, I don't think Tyson is now capable of grinding out a great victory over many rounds like Ali did in Frazier 3. He just doesn't have that sort of battle-ready fitness or the hard minded mentality to do it. So I think the magic one last moment Tyson has left in what we must admit was a magical and compelling career is a flash knockout. He'll go in against someone expected to beat him, someone who wants a victory over Tyson on his resume, and BANG - Tyson connects and that's it folks.

I don't think that the sorry figure we saw after the Williams fight will be the last image we have of Tyson in the ring. With the money he owes, there has to be more to come.

I have just heard that Tyson is having cocaine problems just like Maradona. This is serious stuff, cocaine is not Coca Cola.

Mike Tyson these days is nothing more than a sideshow attraction, a big name that can draw crowds. He has developed bad habits over the years of not moving his head as he moved in and loading up and throwing one punch at a time. At one time he had sound fundamentals but as time went by, he relied too much on his power, a problem a lot of big punchers have, and it will not work at the upper levels of the sport. Also, his reflexes are gone and approaching forty, as someone here pointed out, he is not going to get them back. Personally, I have mixed feelings about a Tyson/Toney fight. I have the selfish feeling of wanting to see this fight take place as I would likely get to get a press pass to see it and I have always wanted to see Tyson fight in person but I never have. But since I do care about the safety of the fighters, even Tyson, regardless of his sometimes crazy antics in the ring, I also have the conflicting feeling of (with wanting to see him fight) that for his own good and personal safety he should never fight again as of late especially, he has begun to take a lot of punishment. Noam, I am assuming you are talking about Vitali Klitschko as the fighter you don't see being defeated by Tyson at this point. An in prime Tyson I would favor Tyson in this one but those days are long gone. Remember folks, I haven't heard anything official about Tyson/Toney, just a feeling when I saw Tyson sitting next to Goossen. I am sure they had a lot to discuss.

Since I didn't give my email, this probably won't go through. But on the chance it does, I wanted to tell you I found your site after I did a search on 'pugilistica dementia'. It is a huge irony, boxing fans, that a boxer had put up a site hoping to prevent this self-inflicted illness. I treat head trauma cases all the time, there are WAY too many of them, car accidents, work injuries, fights. So, boxing fans, you might have an idea about what a doctor might think of your sport. There is only ONE WAY to prevent this disease in boxing: BAN BOXING TODAY. It is, by far, the stupidest, most destructive sport out there today. As I recall, even Howard Cosell called for the ban of boxing. Let me ask, how many beatings will you pay to see this year? There is something very wrong with those who promote this dispicable sport. The fact you are fans of a guy destroyed by it seems lost on you. Have you got it yet? If you really care about Mr. Quarry, or Muhammed Ali, or countless others, you will push for the ban of boxing TODAY. Thank You.

Imagine the conversation between Tyson and Goosen. They wouldn't be talking about rocket science, or poetry, or philosophy. Also, I was saying that I can't see Toney beating Vitali whatshisname; I wasn't talking about Tyson. After we ban boxing, let's also ban motor racing, bike riding, walking across the road, flying planes, parachuting, football, and every other dangerous activity. Surgery is dangerous, too. In a perfect world no one would get hurt. Unfortunately, the world is not perfect. I know many have been injured and killed by boxing, but boxing also has given many others a chance to make something of themselves that they otherwise would not have got. All the boxers are in the ring voluntarily, fully aware of the potential dangers. They accepted the risk and not one of the injured or killed were conscripts. No one forced them to do it. I suppose if someone gave them the choice of being a boxer or a doctor, they'd be a doctor, but they rarely get that choice because they don't have the brains or the opportunity. Truth is, vehicular accidents have caused more head traumas than boxing. And alcohol has killed more brain cells. I'm sure you will have an answer to counter me, but this is just my opinion and I mean no disrespect in expressing it.

Welcome Dr. Patterson, yes the only way to stop Dementia Puglistica is for boxing to not exist however, if boxing is outlawed, it would still exist, then boxing would go underground and I much prefer at least some regulation and rules to the underground sport it would become. Some of the things that can be done to help us achieve our goals of at least reducing the chances of a fighter developing the affliction, that by the way claimed the life of the founder of this site, Mr. Jerry Quarry in 1999, is for laws to be passed such as making mandatory MRI scans each year before a fighter can obtain a license and if any brain damage is detected, regardless of if there are any outward signs of damage, then that fighter would not be allowed to box anymore. Mr. James Quarry, the brother of Jerry and Co Founder of this site, TJQF, also pointed out other reforms, some of which have passed into law here in the U.S. If you go to a site called Eastside Boxing at www.eastsideboxing.com and click on a link called interviews, I believe it is in the all interviews section, you will find an interview I did with Mr. James Quarry in 2001 that mentions a lot of the goals and acheivements of TJQF. It is an ongoing process and if you notice on the home page, there is a bill that TJQF supports in the U.S Senate that didn't pass in 2003 but we would like it to be reintroduced with some improvements that are outlined by Mr. George Otto, in a recent post here in the letters section of the TJQF site. Finally Dr. Patterson, rather than condemn boxing as something to be outlawed, I hope you can join us in finding solutions to making the sport as safe as possible because a ban is not likely to take place anytime soon and is unrealistic. Your input is most welcome on any and all issues regarding boxing, especially if you know of ways because of your medical background to make it safer.

| 12/22/04 04:14:49 AM | Noam | same | hfgety ||||| 10 |
|----------------------|-------|-----|--------|
| Just as a matter of interest, Dr Patterson, you say that you treat head trauma cases all the time. Given it is the end of the year, perhaps you could give us an idea of the cases you've treated since January. For example, how many head traumas from boxing have you treated over the past year as compared to, say, vehicular and pedestrian accidents, other sporting injuries, domestic violence, alcohol or drug abuse, falls from ladders, slips in showers, etc. I would be very surprised if boxing is not at the complete bottom of your list. I think you would have treated more golfers hit in the head by golf balls than boxers hurt in the ring. In fact, I'd be surprised if most doctors in hospital emergencies would see a head trauma case from organized boxing in any given year. Once again, these are just my thoughts and I am not attacking your credentials, Dr Patterson. I am just trying to explore and clarify the topic you brought up. Thanks for your thoughts and, if need be, setting me straight. |

| 12/22/04 04:51:42 AM | Massimo | Roma ||| 4 ||||| 10 |
|----------------------|---------|-----|--------|
| When did you ever talk about boxing, Caco? The only things you ever did in this site have been saying that Mike Tyson was the greatest and offending Kent. I don't remember you for anything else. |

| 12/22/04 09:20:50 AM | Charles | ark. ||ctjjandfam@aol.com ||||| 10 |
|----------------------|---------|-----|--------|
| Dr. Patterson:Do the MCATS have a spelling section? I believe it's destructive, not destructive. |

| 12/22/04 01:21:19 PM | Noam | same ||gfgetr ||||| 10 |
|----------------------|-------|-----|--------|
| I agree entirely. If the short and fat Toney ever fought Vitali K. or Byrd, are the current lot of heavies the worst bunch in history? |

| 12/22/04 01:27:27 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com ||||| 10 |
|----------------------|---------|-----|--------|
| Adjusted for inherent growth of the human race, modern nutrition and modern training techniques, today's heavies are the worst ever and it's not even close. To expound, it's possible that some of today's bunch could take guys from the 60's and 70's because they're bigger and stronger---but you've got to work under the assumption that if Ali, Frazier, Quarry, Foreman, Holmes, etc., came up today, they'd be bigger and stronger too, plus they had the hearts of lions and a will to win that no one has had since an in-prime Holyfield. Similarly, if Jim Brown came up today, he'd be bigger, stronger and faster and would still be the best back in the NFL. Like I said, adjusted for the modern world, today's heavies suck. |

| 12/22/04 01:38:15 PM | Massimo | Roma ||| 4 ||||| 10 |
|----------------------|---------|-----|--------|
| If Toney cannot whip Vitali, nobody can; Carnera is dead and I'm busy. He is the king of the world. |

| 12/22/04 01:43:15 PM | Massimo | Roma ||| 4 ||||| 10 |
|----------------------|---------|-----|--------|
| You are talking about... |
James Brown (chi cazzo e') but what would happen if Wilt came up today?

James Toney has the heart of a lion. He is definitly old school in that regard and that makes up for his lack of size. Never mind he shoots his big mouth off because he delivers what he says. He tore his right bicep muscle in the first round of his fight with Rydell Booker, a painful injury, and he gave Booker an essentially one armed beating for twelve rounds. Also, years ago when he was still a middleweight, he was suffering leg cramps throughout the whole fight against a fighter named Dave Tiberi. It was a very close fight that a lot of people thought Tiberi had won but the decision went to Toney. I have that fight on tape and I thought it was very close but Toney had pulled out the decision because he was sliding with and blocking a lot of Tiberi's punches and he was landing enough punches of his own to hang on to the title. The point is, a lot of fighters, especially today, would have quit from the pain but Toney didn't quit.

A few years ago Vitali Klitschko was ahead on all of the scorecards against Chris Byrd after nine rounds of a twelve round when he suffered a painful shoulder injury and didn't come out for the tenth round, giving the fight to Byrd by TKO.

Do you think our own Jerry Quarry would have quit in the same situation? Hell no! Jerry would have fought one armed the rest of the way! Vitali did redeem himself when he fought Lennox Lewis so he does have a fair amount if heart. My question about him is maybe the cut didn't hurt too much, even if it was bad and if he had suffered the shoulder injury instead, would he have quit again?

Hi All. Hope you all have a good and safe Holiday. Dad, and Uncle Jerry, you are surely missed, and you can really tell it on the site as well as in our hearts. I love & miss you Dad, and Uncle Jerry. Lets get back to boxing. Hope you all keep visiting this site.

I agree that Toney has a lot of mongrel and heart, but to be frank he is only a blown-up short heavyweight who wouldn't have lasted more than a few seconds with guys like Foreman, Holmes, Ali, Frazier, Jack Johnson, et al. I just don't think he has the skills to overcome his physical limitations against Vitali K. However, because Toney does get in the ring to really fight, I'd much rather watch him than any of the other heavies. Besides, watching Toney makes me feel Hollywood handsome and gorgeous. What happened to his face, Kent? Did you see him playing Frazier in that silly Ali movie? SCAAAARY!

Angelo is absolutely right about the current lot of heavyweights. They are big with all the nutritional advances etc, but where have the skills and toughness gone? Muscle Marys?. Are there any heavies today who even come close to a Frazier left hook, Louis's power, Liston's intimidation, Holmes's jab, Ali's ring craft, Quarry's never quit, Foreman's awesomeness, and Baer's showmanship (and Primo's gigantism and clumsy awkwardness and those ridiculous socks and boots - are they Italian national dress?).

The current lot are the most disappointing in history. I can't get excited about any of them. There'd be more action if Massimo fought this new guy Koo (is that the name? what does it mean?) or perhaps Howard C. v Gerry. Toney might have that madman appeal, but to get pumped about watching fights you have to go to the lower weights. I really enjoyed watching that Russian Kosta Zoo beating Mitchell. De La Hoya is always fun to watch (Zoo v De La Hoya might happen, too). But the current heavies are no hopers (in my opinion). Whatever happened to the era when we'd be so excited counting the days down to an anticipated fight. The adrenaline hasn't pumped for ages for a heavyweight fight. Probably the last time was Holyfield v Tyson half a decade ago.

If KooKoo is new, Wilt was short and Albert was dumb!
That rush of counting down the days until a fight took place—-until you mentioned it, I almost forgot about it. Part of the problem is that the fights are now all pay per view and they sometimes start close to midnight eastern time. That's ridiculous. I remember the Muhammad Ali and Larry Holmes title defenses that were on network television in prime time. There was so much buzz about these fights---in school, we'd all be talking about the fights for at least a week leading up to the night and a couple days after too! The undercards were good, and the network would show at least one or two of these undercard bouts, mixed in with career profiles of the title participants, building drama for the title fight.

If I recall, ABC/Cosell did quite a few of the Holmes fights, NBC had Ali-Shavers and I believe CBS had Ali losing to Spinks. These were classic broadcasts---much better than pay per view crap. The production quality was better, although the commercials sucked---but I'd rather have Gillete pay for the rights for me to watch than shelling out $49.99 and staying up till after midnight.

On Ebay there is a Poster of the Quarry-Spencer fight for sale. I remember that fight. Spencer was supposed to be the contender, however it never was him. Spencer was hyped up well on the west coast, ring magazine etc. Quarry took him apart literally. Spencer did nothing ever again because of the wipping Quarry put on him. Hey Jerry Quarry was top shelf all the way.

It's funny how many times Jerry Quarry was the underdog against up and coming contenders, and he either took their head off or gave them a boxing clinic.

I hope Dr. Patterson didn't just drop in here to make some challenging comments and then just walk away without responding to our responses.

SO DOCTOR, THIS IS A PLACE FOR AN OPEN DISCUSSION OF DIFFERING IDEAS. WHERE ARE YOU? IF YOU BELIEVE WHAT YOU SAID ABOUT BANNING BOXING, THEN WHY DON'T YOU RESPOND TO OUR COMMENTS? WE'RE WAITING!

Jerry would whip any of these guys today, especially big mouth toney! Yes wilt would rule the lanes today just as he did some 40 yrs. ago. merry CHRISTMAS to the Quarry family and we do miss you Jerry and Jim. peace to all!!!

Merry Christmas to all and a happy new year !!!!!

Buon Natale to all and a happy new year !!!!!

A great 1775 to all !

Saint Claus is in town !!!!

How wilt is he ? Can you immagine a 7'1" Saint Claus ? A Shaq Saint Claus ? It would be as cool as hell ! Don't miss Kobe vs Shaq on December 25th, it's gonna be as great as Wilt vs Bill.

MOZART WAS THE GREATEST.

Happy Holidays to Quarry Family and Fans!!!

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL AND A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

WE MISS JERRY, MR. JIMMY, AND ALSO BRENDI QUARRY, WHO'S CONTRIBUTIONS TO THIS LETTER SECTION AND TO KEEPING HER BROTHERS' HOPES ALIVE WERE MANY!

May all the best shine on the Quarry family and their fans in the coming new year.

Well Hello All! You all have a Merry Christmas! Dad, Uncle Jerry, Mom, and Aunt Brenda, and yes Grandma we sure do miss you all, you are always in our hearts and thoughts.
I think this mister Liston is Doctor in the same way of Dr. J.

I hope that all of you had a very merry and happy Christmas, and that the new year ahead sees you all healthy and prosperous. Let's all look forward to some tremendous fights, and that all the participants return to their corners with all their faculties intact.

For Christmas I got a terrific biography on Rocky Marciano. It is very interesting reading, and I am learning some very practical Italian phrases from it that I will later bounce off Massimo.

Does anyone remember Jerry from High School days? Was he a popular kid?

What's bounc off? Has it to do with the bouncers? Is it slang? To bounce without off would be different? And what about off without bounc? I guess you meant ask!

regarding Marciano:

I have seen him in his two fights against Walcott and in the Archie Moore fight. He had really no idea about how to fight, he fought like a bar brawl but still was one of the greatest champions of all times. I think he would have beaten Vitali.

To bounce off' is slang. By that I mean I send an idea or thought to you, and you 'bounce' back your own thought in reply.

As regards to Marciano, it is amazing he had the success that he had with so little formal boxing training. By age 23 he had not received proper boxing instruction and was fighting on instinct and raw power. He was clumsy and awkward but had such a powerful right punch that he easily knocked out more skilfull opponents.

When he was a young teenager, he used to beat up kids three years older and bigger than himself. His two close school friends (who remained close friends all his life) picked fights and then stood behind Rocky for protection. Rocky then finished the job.

However, it doesn't seem like he was a vicious, spiteful or nasty person. He didn't get in fights because he enjoyed them or liked inflicting pain; it was because someone wanted to hurt his friends.

Later, as a boxer, he fought because he needed the income, not to ram someone's nose up into his brain (the reason Tyson gave for fighting). Marciano was also very relaxed before fights. His friends couldn't believe that he could lay down and sleep for two hours just before a fight. He had no nerves.

Generally, Marciano was respectful to his opponents, especially to legends like Joe Louis. When he fought Louis many believed that he would lose. One of Rocky's friends was going bad for money and was uncertain whether he should bet on him. Rocky assured him that he wouldn't lose and his friend bet his only asset (his car) on the fight and won.

Anyway, Massimo, I now know more about Rocky by reading this book.

I have just seen a very exciting heavyweight fight: LUAN KRASNIQI against TIMO HOFFMAN for the European heavyweight title. It was a very tough fight for both fighters and ended in a draw. I had Krasniqi about 3 points ahead at the end of the fight. They are both good heavyweights.

Norm, i was reading your comments to the Dr. regauding the head injuries. you made a comment that boxers know the risks. well my uncles did not. they did not know they by getting in a ring and getting hit in the head repeatedly they would have brain damage. i have heard my uncle mike say several times if he had known he would not have become a fighter. just thought you would like to know that little bit of information.

Thanks Sheri. With all due respect, anyone who gets into a boxing ring, knowing that the opponent is focused on punching him to the head and body with the intention of knocking him unconscious or forcing surrender, must know that injury or death might result. They might not THINK it will happen to them (like young people think they'll never be killed driving cars too fast or taking drugs, etc), but no one and nothing could guarantee that it wouldn't. Even by the 1970s, there was knowledge of the particular dementia caused from boxing. Ali used to (cruely) poke fun at punch drunk fighters saying it would never happen to him. Before the 1970s boxers had died fighting. So, with all due respect, I still say that boxers getting into the ring knew that boxing carried risks of injury or death. The risks were never a secret. Young boxers might have felt bullet proof and thought it would never happen to them, but it was certainly happening to other fighters.

Sheri, yes your uncles didn't know the extent of the injuries they could receive but I do think they knew there was some danger involved. Your right about your Uncle Mike making that statement as I heard him say the same thing in a couple of conversations I have had with him. Sadly, in 1983 Jerry was told he had suffered some damage when he took a test, even if it wasn't readily apparent, and he still had some more fights. It is just hard to take the warrior out of the warrior.

That is why I support what your Uncle Jim supported, not letting any fighter fight again who shows any damage in a test, regardless if there are no symptoms apparent. If this regulation had been in place, than Jerry would have three less fights. Dr. Patterson makes a point about him being a doctor so that is why he wants to ban boxing. Not all doctors agree with him. There are some fine doctors who donate time to the Retired Boxers Foundation, which is headed by Alex Ramos, a former boxer who a lot of you might remember as a fine middleweight in the 1980s. Mr. Ramos' group is at the forefront of helping fighters after they leave the ring, some of whom are suffering the same afflictions that Jerry and Mike have endured.

The fine doctors who help out Mr. Ramos' foundation are not among those doctors calling for a ban on boxing.

All my prayers and hopes go out to the disaster strucken areas recently hit by the earthquake and tidal waves. Normally the scariest place to be during an earthquake is in a tall building but after this week's disaster in Asia, that may be the best place to be, to get away from the high water as most of the people killed were killed by the huge tidal waves that followed the quake.

I know that here in California, if there is a big earthquake, the last place I am going is to the beach!

Cleveland Williams
Eddie Machen
Zora Folley

The public doesn't remember you, I do. I know all three of you deserved a title shot in the late 50's early 60's. Floyd wouldn't let you have it and you faded into obscurity of time. Rest well men.

I visited Phuket a few years ago and it is a beautiful place and the Thais are a terrific people. They are a very gracious and humble race and it is sad that the poor who service the tourist economy in Phuket (which is all there really is in that place) are going to be so badly affected by what has happened for generations to come. If I recall rightly, Phuket also had a terrible 747 plane crash at the airport a few years back. Nature can turn paradise into a nightmare with consumate ease. It makes you wonder what else it has in store. Anyway, bless all the victims of what has happened. The death toll is so bad it is too horrible to be real.

Noam, the irony of the disaster in Asia is I am sure a lot of the tourists who were killed by the waves were outside because they were afraid to be in the buildings. As I said, it is a scary experience to be in a tall building during an earthquake but to those who survived the waves that followed, how can they ever go to a beach again after this?The economy of that region is hit hard twice by the fact that in addition to tourism being destroyed, whole fishing villages were wiped out. It will take generations for those countries effected to recover.The devastation is so much that it is like an atomic bomb was dropped on the region. Not so much in how the region looks becasue there is a lot of water everywhere, but in the tremendous loss of life and property.We all remember those three fighters you mentioned. Patterson did beat Eddie Machen on points in 1964. The legendary Cus D'Amato didn't want Patterson to fight Williams and Folley. I'd like to see (or but probably not seeing) the two fights between Cleveland "Small dog" Williams and Ernie "Uncle Tom" Terrell.Bring Bernie Taylor on, I will whup him inside of two rounds! Or if I can't, I will get my friend Massimo from Roma to knock him out for me.Sorry Charles, but you guys do have Bill Clinton from your state, but some people would say that is a good thing. Actually, Bill aint so bad! Is there such a place as Hackenstack, Arkansas?Who is Bernie Taylor ? A singer ? Kent I can whip him, if you want, if he is under 7 feet tall. It's a sort of natural limit for me. Every time I tried to whip guys wilter than that, I got my ass kicked.Sorry, of course I meant mignotta, not migliotta.Everyone has to be from somewhere, and we got stuck with bill. hackenstack is about 5 miles north of toadsuck, the way the crow flies. happy new year!!!!!
Steve from New Jersey taught me that one. Yo is a walk in the park! Is there somebody outta there who can speak some other slang? There are still so many states missing: Alabama, Texas, Colorado, Connecticut, Virginia... Come on people, come on!!

|12/31/04 03:03:09 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Massimo, you mean you is or you are or you guys. It would probably be better spelled yooes. Some people (but not all) from Philly, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York say this, so Rocky would talk that way and so would Mick. People in different parts of states like New Youk, New Jersey, and Penn. don't speak the same way. Example, a person from upstate New York does not use the slang and pronunciations of people from New York City and even parts of New York City talk differently. California people, for the most part, speak the same way and most nationwide news broadcasters sound like Californians. People from Oregon, Nevada, Arizona, and Washington state, are all similar in speaking. Other regions speak differently also but most of the time we can all understand each other without much difficulty.|

|12/31/04 04:10:02 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|In Italy we have plenty of dialects but everyone (or almost everyone) can speak and understand the Standard Italian. This wasn't true in the 40s, but with the diffusion of RADIO and TELEVISION, this problem has been overcome. Even if I can understand almost every Italian dialect, I speak only and always the Standard Italian. I think the Standard Language is way more beautiful, expressive and cultural than any dialect. You can write a masterpiece of literature in Italian while you can't write a masterpiece in Milanese or in Romano. I'm Italian first, Pisan second and Roman third. Anyway, if you walk in Rome you meet a lot of foreigners. Probably there are more foreigners than Italians in Italy. I'm quite happy of my English. I'm still far from being fluent, but a little bit is much better than nothing. SORRY FOR NOT TALKING OF BOXING. I'M JUST HAVING A GOOD TIME WITH MY FRIEND KENT.|

|1/1/05 03:54:44 AM|Massimo "smaller than life" Cini|Roma||4|||10|A happy 2005 to Artis Gilmore, all the Quarry family and all the Quarry fans!|

|1/1/05 06:45:55 PM|Noam|same||hjuysy|||10|Reading a biography on Rocky Marciano has given me new respect for him. I don't think there is any doubt that he is in the top 3 heavyweights of all time, if not the absolute greatest. His statistics are remarkable, even if you forget his 49 - 0 record and the fact that he is the only underfeated heavyweight champion of all time. The first time Rocky got knocked off his feet in a professional fight was when he challenged Walcott for the title. From memory, Louis was knocked down many times early in his career in non-title fights, and Clay was put on his backside by Cooper (also non-title bout). Another statistic about Rocky that impresses me is the effect he had on his vanquished opponents. It is well documented that guys were never the same in rematches against Rocky (Walcott, Charles), but what I didn't realize is what he did to up-and-comers. Rocky fought many promising young guys who were not only confident of beating him but when they entered the ring they thought Rocky was just a stepping stone to the title. All those dreams ended when Rocky unleashed that overhand right. Marciano so badly flogged them that many fled the ring, discarding all boxing ambitions, and never fought again. I can't recall either Louis or Ali ever doing that to a young fighter with ambition. Likewise, Tyson intimidated many, however they came back to fight another day. Rocky, on the other hand, haunted them so bad that they decided instead to become bankers and barman. Also, a guy who trained with both Louis and Marciano said that while Louis punched extremely hard, it took four Louis punches to match the hurt from just one from Rocky. Though true that this comparison came towards the end of Louis's career, it is still relevant given that punching power is usually the last tool of a champion to desert him. It seems to me from reading of Rocky's heroics that, despite his clumsiness and awkwardness and lack of boxing skills, nature assigned him an all-conquering right hand complimented by a willingness to use it as viciously as need be to win no matter what. He not only had the best weapon, but he also had the strength of mind to show no sympathy with it. I am left wondering whether a young Clay could have endured Rocky's overhand right. After all, Cooper put him down with that left hook and Clay needed Dundee to broaden the cut in his glove to give him the time to recover. Rocky punched harder than Cooper. (But, then again, Clay was only vulnerable to left hands and he might never have been caught by Rocky's right.)

Massimo – forget Don Corleone and Luca Brassi and all those other truly great Italians, because Rocky Marciano was the very, very best to come from your country!

I used to think Marciano only beat a bunch of has beens but consider that Charles and Walcott were close to the top of their games and Moore was still a very dangerous opponent. Only Joe Louis was over the hill, though Louis did have some of his skills intact. I do think Louis would have beaten Marciano prime verses prime as he did show a good left jab in their fight to win a couple of rounds.

The thing about Marciano is although he was small, even among heavyweights of his time, he had the punching power of a much larger man. What can't also be discounted is he trained harder than anyone else, one of the reasons he left relatively early from the sport is he had started to lose his desire to train hard and he knew it was time to get out. That is fine as he earned every one of his victories.

I know Marciano looked up to Louis as a hero and some people contend that he took it easy on Louis, but consider that Louis was standing in his way at getting a title shot and Louis was actually favored in the odds leading up to the fight and no fighter with the fire to be the best would let his personal feelings get in his way. I think Louis still had some boxing skills at that point and Marciano had to fight hard to get the win.

You are entirely correct in writing that Marciano trained very hard. When training for a fight, Rocky's discipline was second to none. The guy was completely focused on winning the title, unashameably because of all the trappings that would come with it, and nothing and no one was going to get in his way. He was desperate to elevate his family out of its humble surroundings. The first thing he did when he started getting good purses was to make his father quit the shoe factory where he worked and he subsequently supported his parents (and even some of his friends). His remarkable will-to-win was why he came from behind to knock-out his opponent so many times. Rocky ALWAYS won a battle of wills.

The other great thing he had was power. He was small but he fought from a crouch and used his powerful legs to spring upwards and forwards with his body when punching. The result was tremendous momentum and leverage, even though he was clumsy and awkward. Another reason for Rocky's great power was that he punched through the other guy. His punch didn't stop when the knuckle connected; his fist just kept going and going until the end of the arc. Study the photos of Rocky fighting and you will notice this. Walcott said that although Rocky was easy to hit generally, he was hard to hit with good hard punches. Opponents would get the pitter-pat scoring punches in, but the money ones didn't land too often. A month ago I would have picked Louis over Marciano, however I'd go for Rocky now. I don't consider Marciano that much Italian. He was born in USA, spent there all of his life playing baseball all the time and used to say yoos. I think if somebody have asked Marciano: which(or what) is your home, he would have said: USA, man. When the Frenchs wanted Primo Carnera to join the French army he said: NO WAY, I AM ITALIAN ! That's a real green-white and red Italian !!!!When Marciano fought the legendary Rex Layne, Rex was an up and coming heavyweight and was given 9-5 against the Rock. He fought well in the first 5 rounds but in the sixth Rocky hit him with a devastating right hand and Rex went down and out. Rex was 6'1" tall, wilter than Kent. He would have made me look andre'.

Who were Don Corleone and Luca Brasi?

I always have this discussion with my friend of Italian ancestry. I, like Massimo, call him American not Italian as he speaks no Italian and he has never been to Italy. He still has a strong indentification with his Italian roots and this is fine but in the end he concedes he really is an American first. It is not surprising that Massimo would not know much about Americans of Italian ancestry such as Corleone as they are not in Italy. They have a connection with Italy and likely had relatives there but they are famous or infamous here in the U.S. Italians from Italy, while they can appreciate a fighter like Marciano as a great fighter don't claim him as one of their own. Just as Mexicans don't claim Oscar De La Hoya as a Mexican as he was born in the United States. He is an American of Mexican ancestry. Non Mexican Americans think that the Mexican fans would root for De La Hoya but the Mexican fans don't always root for him as he was born here in the U.S.

Glad to hear some folks are giving credit to Marciano. As I have always said Marciano was truly a GREAT fighter. 49-0. Truly great fighters don't get beat much less knocked out. Great fighters beat whoever is there at the time and don't stay in the game too long. Larry Holmes was almost a great fighter. I said ALMOST. I was born in 1963, well after Rocky Marciano was out of the game. I grew up idolizing Muhammad Ali, and I still do. I used to think the smaller, "outdated" Marciano couldn't match up well against guys from my era, like Ali, Foreman, Frazier, etc. But after watching films of his fights, hearing the comments of his contemporaries and also boxing historians—and even hearing what Mike Tyson had to say about Marciano's greatness—I've changed my view. He clearly was the best of his era and punched extremely hard. He was also determined to win at any cost. This guy would make up for a smaller size with punches that would break the ribs of modern fighters and take their will.

I disagree that Larry Holmes was not a great fighter. Yes he did not equal Rocky's record of 49-0 and he didn't leave the game undefeated but just because we call Rocky great doesn't mean Larry wasn't great also. He beat almost everyone from his history that was of note and there was a period of time, 1978 to 1982 when he could have beaten almost all fighters from any era. Yes, there were some close calls when in a close fight he got the decisions but most of them occurred after his period of greatness and I don't see why him staying around too long, which he did, causes his best years to be tarnished as he was the dominate heavyweight of his era. Muhammad Ali also stayed around too long but he was also a great fighter who had his period of greatness regardless of the later stage of his career. It is not a contradiction to say that Rocky Marciano, Larry Holmes, and Muhammad Ali were all great fighters. I would rank them in the top five of all time in the heavyweight division. As far as smaller heavyweights such as Louis and Marciano having no chance against a giant like Vitali Klitschko, consider that Louis at 200 pounds defeated fighters almost as tall and sometimes heavier than Klitschko and who were not far behind Klitschko in the skill level. Anybody who doesn't believe me, watch the films of Louis versus Abe Simon, 6'5" 250 pounds, Buddy Baer 6'6," 250 pounds, or even Primo Carnera, 6'6" 265 pounds. These guys were good fighters with good skills but Louis was clearly superior to them. Carnera in particular, after watching I watched his fight with Max Baer, Buddy's brother, recently, I saw that although Carnera was knocked down a lot of times, in the rounds when he wasn't knocked down, he showed good use of his left jab and the ability to throw left/right combinations and uppercuts. Carnera actually won a lot of the rounds in his fight with Max Baer. The one thing that made Carnera a good if not great fighter was his tremendous courage. To get off of the canvas time and time again and fight back hard shows a championship heart, something that I still doubt about Vitali Klitschko. Carnera would have never quit on his stool regardless of an arm injury, as Klitschko did against Chris Byrd. Carnera would have fought the three more rounds one handed, regardless of the pain. Max, Joe Louis also stayed around too long but he should also be called a great fighter regardless of this fact. He was also the dominant heavyweight of his era and a top five of all time.

Don Corleone was a Sicilian migrant who came to New York a century ago. Through astute business deals that nobody could refuse (aided by the timely but unfortunate demise of competitors), he became extraordinarily wealthy. His subsequent philanthropic habits bought him great influence with politicians and the Roman Catholic church, and in his twilight years he received a papal knighthood. The Don was an ardent boxing fan who bet successfully on the result of every fight he ever bet on. And he named his first boy Sonny, in celebration of the life and times of one Charles 'Sonny' Liston. Corleone was also a committed anti-drugs campaigner, whose most persuasive counsellor and 'go to' man was Luca Brasi. When Brasi came a knocking with his therapy, people usually volunteered to reform their ways very quickly. However, he proudly identified himself as an Italian/American and his parents and immediate family were very Italian in speech, habit, and tradition.

Going back through the posts here I discovered that you, Kent, consider yourself of Indian heritage. You don't sleep in teepees, you don't have an Indian name ('Two Dogs' Kent?), you don't threaten to scalp people in debates, and your self-described rotund physique doesn't give rise to suspicions that you do much rain dancing. Well, Rocky didn't paint the Mona Lisa, but he still considered himself Italian (and American). Anyway, I don't think Rocky gets the praise he deserves from modern boxing enthusiasts. Max Hord is absolutely correct.
giving) Marciano a hard time than big ones like Vitali. I think Vitali would have likely fallen in 1 against Marciano. | |1/2/05 04:06:19 PM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|Ezzard Charles also gave Marciano two of his toughest battles (especially in their first fight). Well, Ezzard Charles weighted about 185 lbs as well. | |1/2/05 04:33:23 PM|Noam|same||ghytsey|||10|MassimoRocky must get the recognition for NEVER losing. Sure, many of the guys he fought were smallish (for example, Charles was previously a middleweight) but Rocky still beat them all. But how would Rocky have gone if his fights were 12 rounds instead of that era's 15? There were many times he was behind on points at the 12 round mark, so does that mean he would be less effective today? In my opinion, he would have stepped the pace up earlier and would win anyway. In regards to Larry Holmes, many of us forget that Larry was only two months short of his 36th birthday when he suffered his first (controversial) loss of his professional career to Spinks. Before then he had beaten 48 in a row. Wow! Fans regard him as a boxer primarily, but we forget that he stopped 34 opponents within the distance. Larry has to be in the top 10 heavies of all time and I'd have him high on that list. | |1/2/05 05:58:03 PM|max hord|fernandinabch,fla||maxhord@adelphia.net|||10|Kent.Point well taken. My vote on the greatest of all time has to be Marciano until somebody else proves that in ability and reasonable longevity in the heavyweight picture. | |1/2/05 11:12:06 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Noam, my ancestry is mixed, white and Native American Indian. I am a descendant of a German Jew, from Northern Germany (Prussia) and also a descendant of a Luiseño Mission Indian (native Californian) and of an Apache from Arizona. Although I am a member of a prominent California tribe, I was raised white in the suburbs and there are probably some Indians who would not see me as a true Indian as I have never lived on a reservation nor have I absorbed the Indian culture. In fact, the last direct relative that lived on a reservation was my great-grandmother, although I do have cousins who have since returned to the reservation and who have lived there in recent years. I have been studying the native language for the past two years in an effort to help revitalize the language (an original California dialect) and I have learned some things about the culture but there is much to learn. | |1/3/05 02:09:42 PM|Noam|same||uguthg|||10|KentYou have an interesting pedegree. | |1/3/05 02:13:46 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|I agree with the favorable comments about Larry Holmes. He was certainly the best heavyweight of the late 70's and early 80's and it isn't even close. He dominated the division for several years and took all comers. He won impressively and efficiently and on top of it all, represented the sport very well. While he was on top of the world, there was no nonsense from Holmes—he seemed genuinely grateful for the wealth his skills brought to him and treated fans very well. He even staged a title fight in Scranton, PA to give back to that community--because he had fought there on his way up. In fact, the fight was at the Scranton Catholic Youth Center, the same venue as when he was an up and coming kid. I think that shows that Holmes was not spoiled by the fame. Sure he enjoys a great lifestyle and all the goodies that come with being rich--but as Heavyweight Champion, he didn't lose sight of what (and who) got him to the top. I think that Scranton defense was against Lucien Rodriguez. | |1/3/05 02:18:42 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Hey Massimo, Here's some New Jersey slang for you. The correct way to get a group of people to pay attention is, "hey yoose guys"! When asking someone if they would care for something to eat, you would say, "didjaeat", that's spoken as one word. Or, "Jaeat", also spoken as one word. The adj. or pronoun (these), is pronounced "dees". As in, "dees guys over here". In the Godfather movies, Vito Corleone was not actually his real name. He took that name from the village he was born in. He did this to escape a vendetta against his family. I would love to have seen a fight between Rocky Marciano and Mike Tyson.

Oh by the way, I have the Eagles rated number three in the NFL going into the playoffs behind Pittsburg and New England. Noam, as far as my pedigree goes, I look in the mirror and sometimes I see a white man and sometimes an Indian. The same with photographs, I guess depending on the lighting, I look like either in different pictures. Among my siblings, one brother looks a little more Indian than me and my sister looks more Indian than him and people speak Spanish to her, thinking she is Mexican. We also have another brother who looks nothing like an Indian, heredity can be strange. Anyway, back to boxing, my top five heavyweights of all time: Muhammed Ali, Joe Louis, Larry Holmes, George Foreman, Rocky Marciano; in that order. I will say why in a coming post.

I was wondering about the correct pronunciation of the word "yoose" : the double "o" is like in "blood" or like in "foot"? You can never be sure about the correct pronunciation in English, "read" is different from "sweat", who knows why ...

Probably Ali' was the greatest but I'm not sure... Ken Norton could beat him whenever he wanted to. I have Sonny Liston in my top 5. He wasn't in good shape when he fought Clay and was over the hill and arrugginato. Put a young and in top shape Liston against Clay and Clay would have not shocked the world a bit.

I remember the nights when the fights mattered. Really mattered. Nights spent waiting, discussing what would happen. The sport is in the toilet. Remember Ali, top of the world. People in the streets before a big fight, talking, listening on the radio. Nobody will be talking about today in thirty years. The sport will be dead and buried, along with the memories of what was. Jerry, thanks for the memories.

I think Marciano would have beat Ali, Holmes and Foreman. He may have gotten stopped by Louis. Louis could punch and REALLY punch. Holmes and Ali probably wouldn't have hurt Rocky unless he was cut. Foreman could punch but would have gotten hit too often too early, easy to hit like Liston. Whatcha think about that??

Max, I can see Louis beating Marciano to the punch and taking a tough decision over Rocky. At his best, Louis was deadly accurate with his quick powerful combinations. I can also see Ali and Holmes outpointing Rocky by outlanding him and keeping him outside on the end of the jab enough to pile up the points with quick combos, but also far from easy. Holmes and Ali had similar styles and it depends on what the judges liked, Rocky's pressing the action and strong body attack and landing the harder punches or Ali or Holmes outlanding Rocky in more of the rounds. I could see Foreman getting Rocky out of there early like he did to Frazier but if Rocky hurt him first or if Rocky lasted past the early onslaught, then Big George would likely be in a lot of trouble. One thing for sure, Rocky would never quit and George would have to get to him first and make sure he didn't let him off of the hook if Rocky was hurt early. Can't see many more fighters having a chance at beating Rocky, except for maybe Lennox Lewis, that is if Lewis could, like Ali and Holmes keep outside of Rocky's power, but I see Rocky finding a way to land that big right hand and if McCall and Rahman could knock out Lewis with right hands, then Rocky could do the same and it wouldn't be a lucky shot like Rahman's and McCall's punches were. Tyson and Liston at their best depended on intimidation and were not as effective against fighters who were not afraid of them. I give Rocky the edge in these fights, no fear in the Rock. Rocky verses Jack Dempsey would be a shootout but I think Rocky would wear him down for a late round stoppage or decision. Jack Johnson would not be used to the work rate Rocky would bring. Johnson's era saw a slower pace, they had to fight sometimes unheard of number of rounds, so Rocky would outwork him in a fifteen round contest. Vitali Klitschko would hit Rocky a lot but Rocky would take his punches and wear him down with punches of his own, leading to a late round stoppage win for the Rock. Vitali is very strong but except for his two round destruction of Kirk Johnson, he tends to take a few rounds to get his knockouts. Vitali K, has as habit of carrying his left hand very low and someone is going to exploit this like Rocky likely would have done. You heard it from me first, Vitali is a sucker for a right hand. When all is equal a bigger fighter would beat a smaller fighter except in the case of the smaller fighter having superior skills and in the case of Rocky verse Klischko, Rocky has the edge in skills.

Your sister sounds a real honey. Does she want my telephone number?

My top five heavies of all time: Ali and Marciano (I can't split them). Louis. Holmes. Johnson. Ali had the jab, indestructible chin, and was the smartest guy ever in the ring. Rocky was an animal, had pulverizing power in his overhand right (and sometimes his left hook), and would not accept defeat no matter what. I was surprised to read that Rocky didn't have a will when he died and little if any of his millions could be found by his family. Rocky hoarded money in cash (he didn't trust banks and the tax man) and nobody could find the hiding places when he died. Also, he lent pals hundreds of thousands of dollars without signed contracts or written records. When he died these great pals all claimed they returned the loans the previous week. Rocky also had very close connections with the mob. In early 1969 Rocky visited the dying Mafia don Vito Genovese (Don Corleone was him in the Godfather film) in a prison hospital in Springfield, Missouri. He seemed to get a bit of a thrill hanging with those guys. The night before Rocky went to the White House to meet President Kennedy, he stayed overnight at the home of Mafia guy Frankie 'One-Ear' Fratto. Rocky was so naive that he even asked Fratto whether he wanted to go to the White House with him. Rocky apparently knocked back a million dollars not to throw a fight he had with Don Cockell (which would have been a major upset had he lost). The mafia respected Rocky because they couldn't corrupt him. I respect him because he was a great, great fighter.

I don't agree about Liston in his prime being ( or that Liston in his prime was) easy to hit. If you watch his second Cleveland Williams fight, he could move the head very well. He had the best left jab ever tied with Joe Louis, a hell of a left hook, a hell of a right hand, a great uppercut and could take a paradise and a hell of a punch. He wasn't scared of anybody but God. He was really a very very good fighter. I doubt a little about his heart and stamina though. He would be easily the undisputed heavyweight champ. Unfortunately his fights are rarely shown on television. I'd love to see his fights with Zora Folley, Nino Valdes, Wayne Bethea etc. Jack Johnson was great but a little boring to watch. He had some trouble against the little Stanley Ketchel. Liston's jab would have given Marciano fits. Liston's weight advantage would also come into play. This would have been a war. Marciano didn't retire undefeated because he avoided anyone---he retired undefeated because he was that damn good. I could see him being stopped by Liston or Ali on cuts. He wouldn't back down to Foreman---but we saw where that got Frazier. I put Marciano in the top 5, with Ali, Holmes, Louis---and I'll keep a fifth position open to think about it!

| 1/5/05 10:03:56 AM | charles |ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|liston/marciano- if liston comes to fight and not quit on his stool, he would stop the rock on cuts midway in the fight. it would be a war!! |
| 1/5/05 02:20:49 PM | John Gerard | NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|Charles: I agree with you. Liston in his prime really was a good fighter. The only thing I would have to question about him is his heart. Marciano never would have quit in his corner. Never. I don’t know what happened to Liston in the Ali fights. When you don’t count them, the guys record is amazing. I think Liston reached his prime before he became champion. Patterson made him wait something like two years before giving him a title shot. He was busy playing tag with Ingo while Liston was mopping up the division. Patterson would not even discuss defending against Cleveland Williams. |
| 1/5/05 05:05:02 PM | Massimo | Roma (means Rome)||T-Mac is a bum.com|||10|I wish to say a couple of things about Patterson.In his career he fought some of the best fighters of his generations: Machen, Chuvalo, Ali', Cooper, Ellis, Liston, Moore, Quarry and Bonavena. Archie Moore had still some fights left in him (or in himself) when Floyd did beat him in 1956. For him not fighting top contenders between 1956 and 1958 ( Ingo really was a top contender) that wasn't his fault. That was Cus d' Amato's fault! Cus used to say "The fear is like the fire" but he was the first to be afraid of everything (God included). I don't think that Floyd deserved to be (or of being) called the rabbit! The real rabbit was his manager! Regarding his power, his left hook was so hard that when he knocked out Ingo in 1960, it took four minutes for (or to) Ingo to recover his senses. Ali' once said that Patterson and Cooper could both punch harder than him. Anyway, I agree that Cleveland Williams would have been dangerous for Patterson. But I wonder whether Williams could boxe. He surely could punch! |
| 1/5/05 06:36:06 PM | Sonny Fan | Vegas||SonnyKnows@abc.com|||9|Sonny Liston did we had to do throughout his career. Sonny was the best heavyweight that ever lived. Nearly 42 years old when fighting Clay the first time he did what he had to do. It's a shame that his place in history is tainted by those choices he made. |
| 1/6/05 03:35:20 AM | Noam | same||fafrugh|||10|Frazier was over-confident and didn't think George Foreman really posed a risk. That's why Frazier took the fight. Frazier's camp were really choosy with his opponents and they tried to always avoid risks (Norton, Shavers, et al), apart from Ali
Big George was worried about taking the fight and he was a big underdog. Foreman said that before the fight he stood in the ring and Frazier was glaring at him. He hoped that Frazier kept glaring at him in the eyes so that his gaze didn't drift down to his knees which were shaking.

Foreman winning was a major upset. Fans thought that Frazier was indestructible because he'd beaten Ali. People never envisaged that Foreman would win. It was a huge shock for everyone, including Frazier. One of the biggest upsets of all time, especially the scale of the loss with Frazier being knocked down so many times.

The scale of the loss scared the heck out of Joe. When they fought the second time years later, Frazier looked frightened out of his skin. But, then again, who could blame him.

As I have said before regarding Foreman verses Frazier, it makes sense that a big puncher like Foreman should jump on Frazier and try to hurt him early in the fight as Frazier was always a slow starter. It took Frazier often three rounds to be truly warmed up, in fact Frazier lost the first round and often the first two rounds in all of his major fights against Ellis, both fights, against Ali all three fights, against Quarry, both fights, and against Mathis, as well as suffering two knockdowns verses Bonevena in the second round. However, no one expected that if Joe was hurt or even knocked down that he would not get back up and put the hurt on Foreman. Who would have believed going into the Foreman fight that Frazier aggressively moving into would not work as it had worked against everyone else up to that point?

I just watched Frazier's first fight with Bonevena and Bonevena had Joe badly hurt, especially after the second knockdown. There was over a minute left in the second round and for some reason, Bonevena didn't press the action enough after this second knockdown, otherwise Frazier would have been a knockout victim. Bonevena let Frazier off of the hook, maybe Bonevena tired and couldn't muster another knockdown, which with the three knockdown rule in effect it would have given Bonevena the win. After this, Frazier aggressively won enough rounds to pull out a split decision win.

That Frazier was badly hurt against Bonevena after the second knockdown can be seen by the post fight interview in which Frazier said he didn't even remember the second knockdown. There was no way Foreman, a big finisher, would have let Frazier back into the fight like Bonevena did, as seen by Foreman's knockouts over Frazier.

Foreman is the exception in my top five rankings in that at any time, especially early in the fight he had the power to get anyone out of there. I rank him number four because the styles of the fighters ahead of him could enable those fighters, Ali, Louis, and Holmes to get out of the early rounds to be able to defeat Foreman. Some may say that it makes sense that Ali and Holmes at their best could stay outside and avoid Foreman's power but not Joe Louis as he would stand right in front of Foreman, thereby being a prime target for Foreman's power. However, I see Louis beating Foreman to the punch with his very quick and powerful, extremely accurate combinations to take the play away from Foreman. Some may also say that Ali didn't stay away from Foreman's power because he used the "rope a dope" but in effect he did stay away from Foreman's power because he even though he was in close with Foreman, he was giving Foreman angles to make Foreman miss or at least take some of the power away from the punches that did land. Ali was also counter punching to keep Foreman honest. When I say Ali could have stayed away outside of Foreman's power, I am talking about an in prime Ali.

Of course, the fear worked like a fire for Foreman in Kingstone!
you Liston fans. I know Sonny was a bad dude but how many times did you see him come back after losing the edge in a fight? Think about Ali and even Leotis Martin.

Patterson couldn't find time to fight Cleve Willilams, Eddie Machen, Zora Folley, etc. but amazedly his schedule was clear to fight Pete Rademacher -- WHO NEVER HAD ONE PRO FIGHT.
I find that amazing. Nice guy or no, Patterson was a coward when it came to defending his title.

Sonny Liston was dominating against Leotis Martin until he got hit. Sonny even scored a knocked down in the fourth round with a left hook. Anyway, it's true, Sonny was never involved in a long battle or in a legendary fight, apart the SHOOK UP THE WORLD FIGHT. That's why I too doubt about his heart and stamina. We'll never know whether he was a ture warrior or not.

sonny was more a warrior than patterson, who i really thought was a blown up light heavyweight at the best. he gave jerry trouble because of his experience. had jerry fought him at his peak he would have destroyed floyd.

One of the recent posts here put it best---when you depend on intimidation to win half the battle, you're in trouble when you face off against someone who isn't easily intimidated. It's why someone like Tyson was dismantled by Douglas and Holyfield. Also, although Ali didn't rely on intimidation, he certainly did count on his mystique to baffle, confuse and panic his opponents. As a longtime fan of Ali, I can tell you that Frazier and to an even greater extent, Norton two guys I hated back then because of how much I loved Ali) were able to beat Ali because he didn't get into their head. In hindsight, I especially admire Norton, because I really don't think he had the talent or experience to fight Ali so effectively---but he was able to convince himself that he belonged in the same ring with Ali and he didn't let Ali's tactics bother him---not even a little. I think Ali did get inside Fraizer's head, but Joe shook it off and he was the animal that Norton wasn't---and willed himself to fight Ali well.

Interesting comment ! I think that the second Ali-Norton fight was really impressive as Ali' was really in top shape, focused and angryand danced throughout the entire fight; but still I had Norton ahead by at least 1 point at the end of the fight. The second half of that fight was really GREAT.

The second Norton-Ali fight was the best of the trilogy. It is one of the more entertaining fights of the whole period and really gets lost in the shuffle. Norton on that night would have beaten prime Larry Holmes. It was Norton at his best, and Ali at his best post exile.

Maybe I'm partial, but I had Norton winning the first fight, Ali winning the second (not easily, but clearly) and Ali barely winning the third and lucky to survive with his title. I admit that if I didn't know either fighter, I might give Norton a slight edge, but that's not how I think the fight should be judged. Put in the context of a challenger trying to take the title from a long-time champion, Norton didn't do enough to win. Yes, Ali's history gave him an inherent edge that Norton had to overcome---and I don't think he did enough to overcome it.
That's how title fights are often judged, and not just Ali's. One exception to this was Hagler/Leonard, but then again, Leonard was himself a great champion.

I think Ali outboxed Norton in the second fight which was at best for Norton, a draw, but really, I think Ali outpointed him.
a brave fighter and that is why he took the Liston fights against Cus' wishes. Anyway, anybody who steps into the ring is not a coward, even if only in the context of keeping his title. Any fight can be dangerous. Recently I was at a fight card which saw a former national golden gloves champion named Travis Walker in his third pro fight and his opponent, who's name escapes me at the moment, had a pro record of about 3-15, 0 BY KO, as compared to Walker's of course, unbeaten record of 2-0, 2 by KO going into the four round preliminary fight. Anyway, the opponent knocked down Walker twice in the second round and the bell saved Walker, who had also knocked down the other fighter in that round, a great round nobody else will ever see as it likely was not taped. Walker came out a little unsteady for the third but by mid round he was OK. The two fighters traded hard for the remainder of the fight and Walker barely came away with a split decision win, which the crowed booed as they were siding with the underdog. My point being, this opponent with his lousy record, came to fight and although he was supposed to lose against this former amatuer star, he gave the favored fighter a fight to remind him not to take anyone lightly. Any fight is dangerous.

KENT: I respect you and your opinion very much but nothing will ever make me change my mind about Patterson. If he did not want to fight heavyweights, he should have stayed in the light heavies. It was he who was champion not Cus. My rough definition of champion is somebody who is the best in the world and willing to prove it against the rest of the best. from time to time. Dempsey caught hell for not fighting Wills for racial reasons, but just because both Williams and Patterson were black, Williams is a forgotten man today. In reality, they both got jobbed out of a chance to see what they could do.

I was thinking that probably Cus D'Amato was of Italian ancestry. D' Amato is an Italian surname. And Cus was a honest person !!!!! He was not in the mob !!!!!!!!Eureka !!!! Evviva !!!!! Wow !!!!! Cool as hell !!! It is possible to be an honest person even being of Italian ancestry. Tonight there is Lazio-Roma on TV. Paolo Di Canio vs Francesco Totti... Who is gonna win ?

I agree with John to the extent that Floyd was a big boy and to our knowledge, wasn't Cus' robot. If he wanted to take a Williams fight, it would have been done. I don't like when athletes hide behind their agent or in the case of a boxer, a trainer, manager or promoter. Let's face it, trainers work for the fighter, and if Floyd wanted to fight Liston sooner, or Williams, he could have said "Cus, I value your opinion and I trust you, but I've got to take this fight. Don't try to talk me out of it, just try to help me win it cause I'm fighting Williams/Liston with or without your blessing." Apparently, that wasn't said. Also, I understand that especially back then, the fighters were intimidated by the business side of it and did what they were told, but Floyd still had some free will and was definitely part of the process that kept him away from guys who could take his head off.

floyd was way to polished a boxer to have any trouble with the "big cat". ali gave him a shot,granted he may have shot as a fighter at the time. did sonny ko williams, i think he did. i would liked to have seen ingo fight liston, although sonny would likely ko him, ingo had a terrific right.

also, i think cus got real close to his fighters and was more of a father figure than a trainer and did want them to get hurt. who did he train besides patterson and tyson? thanks!
costs knowing that. I have seen Cleve at his peak and know how vulnerable Floyd was to a knockout. Terrible terrible stylistic matchup for Patterson. Patterson was a better fighter, but would lose to Williams more than half the time. Trust me.

Pre the 1970s the managers had more of a hold on fighters than they do today. Cus was a very dominant man, as television interviews of him show, and he would be the type that would insist on getting his own way. Don't forget that when Cus was in charge, Tyson never got in trouble. He was so tightly controlled by Cus that he wouldn't have dared. While I agree that Patterson was the champion and could fight who he wanted, the fact is that Cus was one of the most dominating and even intimidating managers in boxing history. The same was true with Marciano and Al Weill. Marciano hated Weill, and often disagreed with Weill's decisions, but he NEVER fought anyone that Weill didn't want. Weill pulled all the strings, just like Cus. In the end, it doesn't really matter. If Cus was avoiding certain fighters, then he was doing it on Patterson's behalf. Therefore Patterson conditioned what he did and has to live with the consequences either way. I think it's also true to say that Ali had an effect on the fighter-trainer relationship. Ali made the fighter more dominant. He was such a strong personality that he controlled his destiny and as his career rolled on he alone selected opponents.

From Ali onwards fighters took more control of their careers.

Good point. Look at Holmes-Richie Gichetti. It's routine now for fighters to fire managers/trainers but back in the 60's, it wasn't. I know that in the late 70's, Shavers freed himself from his manager and picked a new one for a time. And yes, it was Ali who bucked the system and made it a point to speak his mind and be his own man. Especially with the racial climate, some hated him, others respected him for standing up to the status quo. Certainly, many black people felt empowerment thorough Ali's strength.

I think Jake LaMotta was an exception to the manager domination rule though. Jake was his own man.

I disagree completely with any reference to Patterson being a coward in any way, shape, or form. Most of the time a coward doesn't get in the ring. Again, I will say it takes guts to get in the ring to fight anyone as anything can happen at any time. I like the Rocky movies because although the boxing scenes are not realistic, the interplay between Rocky and his manager, Mickey, are a lot like a real life situation as in Floyd and Cus. In Rocky 111, Cus is avoiding having Rocky fight Clubber Lang because Lang is too dangerous. Rocky takes the fight anyway because he doesn't want to feel like he took the easy way out. The scene where Rocky asks Mickey if the ten title defenses were set ups (fixed) and Mickey tells him, no they weren't set ups, they were handpicked. That he took the fights for Rocky that were safer to keep him healthy. This scene reminds me very much of Cus and Floyd in real life. Mickey, like Cus was for Floyd, was a father figure for Rocky. Cus also managed Jose Torres, who won the light heavyweight title. My question to John and the others who question Patterson being a true champion, if Patterson had taken fights with Folley, C. Williams, Machen (earlier than he did), or Liston (earlier than he did); and he had lost his title to any of these fighters, would you have more respect for Patterson as a champion?
the relationship between Rocky and Mickey seem to me?

I know for sure that Cus did train Jose' Torres. I was even asked to train a tall guy named Wilt Chamberlain when he was about to fight (or to fighting) Muhammad Ali'. Lazio b Roma 3-1. Di Canio won and Totti lost. Di Canio scored even a goal.

Obviously I meant... He was even asked to train etc., not I was. I was never asked to train Wilt Chamberlain.

That said, you're absolutely right that Patterson or any other professional fighter is about as far from coward as you can get.

when was all the hoopla about wilt and ali goin on? i remember a little about it and seeing wilt and ali squaring off on wide world of sports. i am glad it did not happen, i loved both guys and i think probaly wilt would have lost the only fight of his life, but wilt was a tremendous athelete. i don't think they ever got the money right did they?

Patterson would beat Folley and Machen most of the time. Those guys weren't the kind of fighters that beat Patterson usually. Cus knew this but was so cautious with his bread winner he still declared they eliminated each other when they fought to a draw in '58. Many thought Machen had won and he would have been more dangerous for Patterson. Eddie was a much better fighter before his loss to Ingo, anyone that saw him fight before and after would tell you that. Machen became MUCH more defensive from that time on. He was a much better offensive fighter believe it or not in the mid to late 50's. Eddie was a good family man, rest his soul.

An enigma about Patterson being a protected fighter is how come he took the fight with Johansson after Johansson knocked out Machen in the very first round, one of the fighters Patterson supposedly avoided? One would think that Ingo would be on Cus' list of dangerous fighters to avoid but Floyd fought him anyway.

"I think that Patterson froze in the first fight against Liston, and he got himself so keyed up about not freezing in the second fight, he froze again. Don't get me wrong. I told you before, Patterson was a very good fighter, but being psyched out, if that was indeed the case, can happen to any fighter. It isn't a question of being afraid, because there is no boxer I would call a coward. To have the guts to climb into that ring is bravery enough." In regards to Patterson's boxing ability, Dundee wrote, "Patterson intrigued me. He had a fine record both as an amateur (he was the Olympic middleweight champion in the 1952 games) and as a professional, knocking out Archie Moore in five rounds back in 1956. He had a strange style, known as the 'peekaboo' style. He held his gloves high, hiding his face, and I had watched him fight Joey Maxim a few years earlier, and I hadn't been too impressed. Joey beat him over eight rounds and never got a return. I didn't blame Cus D'Amato, Floyd's manager, for not chasing a re-match. To my mind, Floyd was a puffed up light-heavyweight...."|

|1/7/05 03:07:33 AM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Albert comment Kent ! Besides that, if Patterson was a chump, why did he fight a rough, dangerous and hard hitting fighter such as Bonavena at the age of 37 ? Was Cus still his manager in 1972 ? I have the tape of that fight and Patterson clearly outpointed him by about 3 points. The amazing thing is that Patterson fought amazingly well the last 3 rounds regardless of his age, while the younger Oscar hadn't fuel in the tank anymore. Patterson-Folley would have been a great fight. Zora humiliates Bonavena in 1965 ! He was a better fighter than Oscar. Hard to say who would have won a Patterson-Folley fight around 1958.Charles--I think Vitali is afraid of Shaq. Shaq has to dip to go through a door, Vitali is just too short for Shaq --). Wilt was pretty strong, but Shaq is just superhuman. He wears a size 22 shoe and makes Karl Malone look small. He can bring a rim (to) home whenever he wants. Calvin Lane makes him look small though. Who is Calvin Lane ? Calvin Lane is the biggest bouncer in the world.First let me say, I was wrong in using the term coward in association with Patterson's name. I stand corrected. But he WAS AFRAID of fighting top me. There is no question about that. Blame Cus, blame the system for allowing him to duck these guys and remain, champ, but I blame a man for his own actions. That being said, yes, had Patterson defended against Williams early and lost, I would have respected him as a champion. Also, Kent when you said earlier that any challenger can be dangerous, you missed my point. My point was it is not a matter of being dangerous it is a matter of being DESERVING. There were plenty of men around who DESERVED a title shot, while Patterson was playing around with Rademachere and other clowns. I think Floyd was a very nice man. He never should have been a heavyweight though and if he did not want the responsibility that goes along with being a champion he should have found another line of work. Williams would have destroyed him in six rounds.The comparison between Patterson's situation and Dempsey's regarding Dempsey not fighting deserving challengers such as Harry Wills is a good one as both avoided qualified challengers. But you never hear Dempsey's backbone questioned like you do Patterson's. Maybe it is because of stories such as Dempsey wanted to fight Wills but his manager paid off Wills to go away, a story I read some time back said Dempsey's manager gave Wills $50,000 to step aside, a large amount of money in those days. Also it can be argued that the social climate in Dempsey's time was against Wills getting a shot, the majority of the public didn't want the fight so the fight didn't happen. Yes later in Patterson's career he did fight fighters who were dangerous, guys you would think he would avoid if he was playing it safe, such as Jerry Quarry, Bonevena and George Chuvalo, in which Patterson fought what I think was the best fight of his career. Patterson was surprisingly strong against Chuvalo while giving away about twenty pounds in weight, he matched his strength against Chuvalo's strength and in a very tough fight he came away the winner. I don't know if Cus was still in Patterson's corner later in Floyd's career. Anyone know this?|
men when he was a CHALLENGER. The press said (and rightly so) that Norton, Lyle, and Young were all washed up when Gerry fought them; Patterson fought stiffs as CHAMPION and got away with it! Don’t you think a champion has much more of a responsibility to fight the best men than a contender does? I sure do. | 1/7/05 10:46:24 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|For more on Dempsey-Wills go to www.genetunney.org/goldenage1.html| 1/7/05 12:08:50 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||10|Cus was gone after the second Liston fight. The run of fighters that Patterson fought as champ was terrible. Pete Rademacher- A complete joke, the guy was making his professional debut! Roy "Cut and Shoot" Harris- Fought no one to get this shot. Best win was over a totally used up Bob Baker. Brian London- London had lost two of his past four fights before getting a title shot. Cus always thought foreign fighters were easy marks. He chalked the Machen loss up to a lucky shot by Ingo. He was overjoyed that Machen had lost so that Floyd could fight Ingo instead. Ingo still had a rep as a buffoon because of what happened in the '52 olympics against Big Ed Sanders.| 1/7/05 12:32:49 PM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|Roy Harris also outpointed the ill fated Alejandro Lavorante. However Roy, a well educated guy and former school teacher who boxed just to arrotdare lo stipendio and who, after his boxing career made a good amount of money as an economist ( the opposite of Mike Tyson) wasn't that good. He was a honest and decent professional heavyweight, but not a top contender. | 1/7/05 12:58:49 PM|charles |ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|okay, i have a question for you guys. was there ever any pressure for marciano to fight patterson?| 1/7/05 02:37:31 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|Damato said, Patterson would NEVER fight Marciano. He would just wait him out until he retired. | 1/7/05 03:09:44 PM|Noam|same||fstayy|||10|I just finished reading a biography on Marciano and Patterson's name wasn't mentioned in it. They never gave thought to Rocky fighting Patterson.The problem was that Rocky lost some of his hunger in 1954 and 1955, and he was also angry at manager Al Weill because he discovered Weill was ripping him off. Rocky pretty much decided after the Don Cockell fight in 1955 that he would soon retire and he then had his last one in 1956 against Moore.There was no way Cus would have allowed Patterson to fight Rocky, as Rocky would have murdered him.In fairness to Patterson it must be said that there might be another reason why he didn't fight certain fighters. The heavyweight division was basically run by a guy named Jim Norris who had the International Boxing Club that staged about 80 percent of the heavyweight title fights.After Patterson won the title, D'Amato opted to be independent of the IBC, which resulted in Patterson defending against boxers who were free of options held by the IBC. (You have to give Cus his dues; he was always prepared to do it differently and break the mould.) According to Peter Arnold's Pictorial History of Boxing, this ruled out some of the leading contenders and D'Amato was subsequently accused of giving Patterson easy defenses, which was the inevitable result of the policy. According to Peter Arnold's Pictorial History of Boxing, this ruled out some of the leading contenders and D'Amato was subsequently accused of giving Patterson easy defenses, which was the inevitable result of the policy.
Rademacher who was having his first pro fight. He then fought Roy Harris and his next fight against Brian London was in defiance of the British Boxing Board of Control, which did not consider London a worthy contender.

Patterson next fought Johansson and I think he risked this fight because of all the prior criticisms about the quality of his opponents. He took the fight to end the criticism and then paid the price in full.

By the way, the British Boxing Board of Control fined Brian London two thousand pounds for challenging Patterson for the title. The Board felt that London was undeserving of a title shot and then fined him for taking the fight.

On the day the older and retired Marciano taped that computer fight against Ali, he probably would have given Patterson a good run. No, there's no way a mid-late 50's Marciano would have had any difficulty with Patterson. Sure, he would have been hit, like he was in a lot of his fights, but he would have come forward, cut the ring off and eventually cornered and pummeled Patterson like no one else.

This one would have ended in the middle rounds whether Marciano was "hungry" or not.

Floyd Patterson fights Rocky Marciano 100 times, Floyd gets knocked out 100 times in 1957. It's all about styles. Rock would have had a much tougher time with fighters like Harold Johnson because Johnson was slippery as hell. Johnson would have been knocked out, but won many rounds along the way.

The third greatest light-heavyweight ever below only Archie Moore and Bob Foster. He did beat Archie Moore, Bob Satterfield, Doug Jones and Eddie Machen among the others. I think he would hold at least one of the belts in the heavyweight division today. A genius of the ring.

I agree I think Marciano would have knocked out Floyd Patterson maybe around the fifth. But I also think that Marciano was a very overrated Heavyweight Champ. I think the Liston who fought Cleveland Williams would have cut Marciano to pieces.

I also thought Marciano was overrated until I read a biography about him and I changed my opinion. Rocky had a will to win second to none, a pulverizing right hand, was very hard to hit with a meaningful shot, and had an ability to absorb punishment that would have made him more than a handful for anyone. Only Ali and Louis could have beaten him, in my opinion.

Let's see how smart you guys are. There is a horse race and the horse you bet on just overtook the second horse. Where does that leave your horse ?

Massimo says your horse would be first. No, that's wrong. Your horse would be second as it hasn't overtaken the horse coming first. (Massimo, Galleleo wouldn't have got that wrong.)

Massimo then asks whether I am drunk. You are half right (and I'm getting there.)

Lastly, I said that Mary's father has five daughters: Nana, Nene, Nini, and the fourth is Nono. What is the name of the fifth daughter ?

Your horse is the winner of the race and the fifth daughter's name is Mary. Mary's father is an idiot ! Are you drunk Noam ? Are you for real (slang) ? :-)

You are wrong, and half-right, and right.

To restate: if there is a horse race and the horse you bet on overtook the second horse, where would your horse be ?

Massimo says your horse would be first. No, that's wrong. Your horse would be second as it hasn't overtaken the horse coming first. (Massimo, Galleleo wouldn't have got that wrong.)

Massimo then asks whether I am drunk. You are half right (and I'm getting there.)

Lastly, I said that Mary's father has five daughters: Nana, Nene, Nini, and Nono, and what was the fifth daughter's name ?

Now come on. Most of you guys said Nunu, but Massimo got it right. Massimo is not smoking pot. The fifth daughter's name is Mary (obviously). Read the question again.

I've got another one. If there is a horse race, and the horse you bet on overtook the last horse, where does that leave your horse ?
Your right Noam and I am a half fool (or an half of a fool) !

In a horse race, the horse you bet on overtakes the last horse. Where does that leave your horse ?

Even though I rank Pittsburg slightly ahead of New England because they have the best record, and they beat New England in a head to head on the field meeting, I am going out on a limb and using my gut feeling that New England is going to pull off a mild upset (for this season, them winning the title last year means nothing to me in my picks) to go to the super bowl. I just have this feeling that even with their tremendous record, Pittsburg is somehow ready to be taken. No one is usually that good for too long in a season. Everyone normally loses at least a couple of games.

What you say is impossible ! Nobody can overtake the last one !

You got it exactly correct; no one can overtake the last horse and the question I put to you was therefore nonsensical and impossible.

I'll tell you a joke. Mario took his blind date to the carnival. "What would you like to do first, Mary ?" asked Mario. "I want to get weighed," she said.

They went to the weight guesser. He guessed 150 pounds. She got on the scale and it was 161 pounds and she won the prize. They next went to the ferris wheel. When the ride was over, Mario again asked Mary what she would like to do. For some unknown reason, she repeated, "I want to get weighed." Still, first date and all, Mario took her back to the weight guesser. Because they had been there before, the guesser correctly guessed her weight and this time there was no prize.

The couple again walked around the carnival and again Mario asked, "Where to next ?" "I want to get weighed," Mary repeated for the THIRD time ! By then Mario figured she was really weird and took her home early, dropping her off with a handshake.

Her room-mate, Laura, asked her how her blind date went. Mary responded, "Oh, Waura, it was wousy." Let's see whether you can figure that one out Massimo.

I need a good dictionary to understand what wousy means and then I will try to respond !

You say is impossible ! Nobody can overtake the last one !

You got it exactly correct; no one can overtake the last horse and the question I put to you was therefore nonsensical and impossible.

I'll tell you a joke. Mario took his blind date to the carnival. "What would you like to do first, Mary ?" asked Mario. "I want to get weighed," she said.

They went to the weight guesser. He guessed 150 pounds. She got on the scale and it was 161 pounds and she won the prize. They next went to the ferris wheel. When the ride was over, Mario again asked Mary what she would like to do. For some unknown reason, she repeated, "I want to get weighed." Still, first date and all, Mario took her back to the weight guesser. Because they had been there before, the guesser correctly guessed her weight and this time there was no prize.

The couple again walked around the carnival and again Mario asked, "Where to next ?" "I want to get weighed," Mary repeated for the THIRD time ! By then Mario figured she was really weird and took her home early, dropping her off with a handshake.

Her room-mate, Laura, asked her how her blind date went. Mary responded, "Oh, Waura, it was wousy." Let's see whether you can figure that one out Massimo.

I need a good dictionary to understand what wousy means and then I will try to respond !

You say is impossible ! Nobody can overtake the last one !

You got it exactly correct; no one can overtake the last horse and the question I put to you was therefore nonsensical and impossible.

I'll tell you a joke. Mario took his blind date to the carnival. "What would you like to do first, Mary ?" asked Mario. "I want to get weighed," she said.

They went to the weight guesser. He guessed 150 pounds. She got on the scale and it was 161 pounds and she won the prize. They next went to the ferris wheel. When the ride was over, Mario again asked Mary what she would like to do. For some unknown reason, she repeated, "I want to get weighed." Still, first date and all, Mario took her back to the weight guesser. Because they had been there before, the guesser correctly guessed her weight and this time there was no prize.

The couple again walked around the carnival and again Mario asked, "Where to next ?" "I want to get weighed," Mary repeated for the THIRD time ! By then Mario figured she was really weird and took her home early, dropping her off with a handshake.

Her room-mate, Laura, asked her how her blind date went. Mary responded, "Oh, Waura, it was wousy." Let's see whether you can figure that one out Massimo.

I need a good dictionary to understand what wousy means and then I will try to respond !

You say is impossible ! Nobody can overtake the last one !

You got it exactly correct; no one can overtake the last horse and the question I put to you was therefore nonsensical and impossible.

I'll tell you a joke. Mario took his blind date to the carnival. "What would you like to do first, Mary ?" asked Mario. "I want to get weighed," she said.

They went to the weight guesser. He guessed 150 pounds. She got on the scale and it was 161 pounds and she won the prize. They next went to the ferris wheel. When the ride was over, Mario again asked Mary what she would like to do. For some unknown reason, she repeated, "I want to get weighed." Still, first date and all, Mario took her back to the weight guesser. Because they had been there before, the guesser correctly guessed her weight and this time there was no prize.

The couple again walked around the carnival and again Mario asked, "Where to next ?" "I want to get weighed," Mary repeated for the THIRD time ! By then Mario figured she was really weird and took her home early, dropping her off with a handshake.

Her room-mate, Laura, asked her how her blind date went. Mary responded, "Oh, Waura, it was wousy." Let's see whether you can figure that one out Massimo.
gut prediction which is based on emotion not stats. Sometimes our gut feelings are right in this case we will see. Wouldn't be funny if none of the top three teams made it to the superbowl? After all, we already have two upset winners, St. Louis and New York Jets advancing to the next round. San Diego was my number five ranked team going into the playoffs too. It is raining a lot here in Southern California so maybe the Chargers didn't know how to deal with anything but perfect weather, who knows?

| 1/9/05 12:35:20 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | ||| ||| 10 | Fan | Sonny Liston did beat Amos "Small Bycicle" Lincoln in 2 rounds late in his career. Don't know that that one was a really good win for Sonny? |
| 1/9/05 12:58:08 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | ||| ||| 10 | Loony | Kent Appel underrated? Are you for real? He is from California, he stood next to Wilt Chamberlain and Mel Counts and he even saw Andre' the Midget in person. He makes Frank Sinatra sound like Donald Duck also. How can you ask for more? |
| 1/9/05 02:41:20 PM | Howard C | Louisville | howardc@louisville | ||| ||| 10 | Fan | I think Massimo is funny though. |
| 1/10/05 07:46:07 PM | Howard C | Louisville | howardc | ||| ||| 10 | Kent | fan has been drinking way too much coolaid. |
| 1/9/05 06:16:51 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | ||| ||| 10 | Kent | Kent's cool. Although not as cool as Fan. |
| 1/9/05 07:46:07 PM | Howard C | Louisville | howardc | ||| ||| 10 | Kent | fan has been drinking way too much coolaid. |
| 1/9/05 10:17:31 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | ||| ||| 10 | Howard C | Ricky Hatton is too hittable. I would pick Tszyu in this one. Great action in this one. Am I under or overstated? I don't know but I think I am funny and part of my humour is it is not important if anyone thinks I am funny as my goal is to entertain myself. |
| 1/10/05 12:39:21 AM | Howard C | Louisville | howardc@louisville | ||| ||| 10 | Kent | - might you be entertaining yourself too much, if you get my drift. regards tszyu, hatton is easy to hit, so is tszyu. but one is on the way up and one on the way down. after tszyu's latest great performance against mitchell, it's hard to bet against him. however my british friends think highly of hatton so we'll just have to wait and see. |
| 1/10/05 02:29:38 AM | Massimo | Roma | who is gonna stop Shaq?. Mihm ?.com | ||| ||| 10 | Where the hell is Noam? Is he recovering from the drinking? Now I wanna know if (or whether) my last answer was right. |
| 1/10/05 07:24:08 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | ||| ||| 10 | Kent | Kent's not overrated---but maybe Brett Favre is! Sure, he won a Super Bowl, but the guy has an uncanny knack for throwing interceptions at the worst possible moments, both in the regular season and in the playoffs. Since he won the Super Bowl, he has a losing record in playoff games and has thrown about 20 pics---about two per game. What did everyone think of the Randy Moss endzone celebration? The difference between T.O. and Moss is that T.O. makes a spectacle of himself in good fun (like with the Sharpie incident) while Moss always draws attention to himself with negative antics.}

1/10/05 08:32:24 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Angelo, Moss is an idiot. I betcha (Massimo, this is "I would bet you"-slang) that if Jerry was young and still a fighter that Moss, arrogant fool, would think he could beat Jerry. Heck, I would put Scrap Iron Johnson and ol George Scrapiron would kick Moss' ass!

Hey football fans, what is up with all of the playoff upsets? What do we have now, three in the opening round?

I didn't check the odds before the playoffs started but I think my one-two-thre teams of Pittsburg, New England, and Philadelphia were pretty close to being the same as the odds.

1/10/05 10:57:12 AM|Angelo|Washington, DCf||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Kent: It occurs to me that since it's easier to be a jackass than a stand-up guy, Moss is just taking the easy way out. Anyone can act like a jerk and get negative attention. If that's what he's craving, I guess he wins. I don't buy this nonsense that by drawing negative attention to himself, he's keeping pressure off the team by taking the focus away from the Coach and everyone else. That's a bunch of crap. By the way, when David Robinson played for the Spurs, he was extremely well liked in the community. Parents loved the guy because he has kids of his own, and refused to have a "bad boy" image---he wanted to be a good example to his kids and in the process, became a role model for other peoples' kids. Volunteering for all sorts of community activity and actually showing up, being patient with the media and giving decent answers, even to unfair questions---donating time and money for good causes---none of this is the "easy way out" that Moss takes, but I guess that's why people respect athletes like David Robinson and not Moss.

1/10/05 02:28:52 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Angelo, you are right about it being easier to act like a jerk than to be a class act like David Robinson. Robinson is a credit to professional sports when it seems there are more athletes acting like Randy Moss then not.

For some reason I thought of Jerry. I guess because when Jerry was fighting and my friends would bring up some guy they thought was tough, and often it was an arrogant guy like Moss, they always laughed at me when I said if the guy ever took up boxing, then Jerry would kick his butt. They would say, "but Quarry always loses" because the only time they ever saw Jerry fight was against Ali, Frazier, or even Norton, a guy Jerry would have had a very good chance of beating if they had met earlier in Jerry's career.

1/10/05 02:45:20 PM|Noam|same||jhuysta|||10|Massimo: Yes, you got it right but I'm not sure whether you fully understood the joke.

It ended with Mary saying, "Waura it was wousy" and, of course, she had a speech impediment and she was really saying, "Laura, it was lousy."

Now, Massimo, relate that back to Mary constantly telling her blind date Mario that "I want to be weighed."

1/10/05 02:49:59 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Kent: As a young fighter, Jerry Quarry had every right to act arrogant---and instead, by all accounts, he was level-headed, polite to fans and the opposite of "showboat." I say he had the right to act arrogant because he was voted "most popular" and had a huge following, and also some impressive big wins. The easy thing would be to let it go to his head and act like a self-absorbed idiot, but instead he showed restraint and was a good guy. And you know, when you look back at NFL record setting receivers, why are guys like Art Monk and Jerry Rice quiet and humble, while Randy Moss (who hasn't won a Super Bowl yet and hasn't had the longevity/productivity of Monk and Rice) acts like the greatest thing in the world?

1/10/05 03:45:26 PM|Massimo|Roma||.com|||10|Noam- I didn't understand why this Mary wanted to be weighed. Booohhh !!!!!

Tracy McGrady: 41 minutes played, 45 points, 12 rebounds and 5 assists ! This is Wilt stuff...In a
I was reading Michele Moorer's record and I noticed that he put 38 pounds in only 4 months between December 1990 and April 1991; then he started kicking asses in the heavyweight division until he met Small George. I was amazed! How is it possible to get all that weight in so little time without getting fat? I appreciate Michele as a fighter. He is very powerful and has a lot of heart (as he showed in the second Camposanto fight in 1997). I think Michele Moorer is underrated.

I apprectiate Michele as a fighter. He is very powerful and has a lot of heart (as he showed in the second Camposanto fight in 1997). I think Michele Moorer is underrated.

As far as NFL football goes, it is OK to celebrate a touchdown within reason. I know some guys dance around like fools but it is in fun but to stick your butt up to the opposition like Moss did is in poor taste to say the least. Should Moss be fined? I don't think so as he only hurts himself in that no one will want him for endorsement deals. So is the winner in the end, so to speak? Not Randy Moss.

Brett Favre is a great NFL QB, not doubt. It's just that the commentators have positioned either right below or even right to the side of Jesus. I like Favre (great player and what a cameo in "There's Something About Mary." He's an all-time great, but I'd take Montana, Elway, maybe Marino, Tarkenton, Unitas and Staubach over Favre. As for Namath, a healthy set of knees and he'd be the best ever. He read defenses and released the ball better than anyone else in his time. Also, Namath called his own game.

Brett Favre is now 13-13 vs Vikings. They are really the Hatfields and McCoys! As far as Cosell, He once said Jerry Quarry Will be okay as soon as he finds out what he's good at! You could deflectly say the same for HOWIE. Except for making dough. Jim Murray and those other idiot L.A. writers were the worst to Jerry, and what really bad is Jerry was such a respectful gentleman to them! Take Care!

Brett Favre overrated? You play 225 straight games in the frozen tundra, with those monsters coming at you, Brett has one of the best TDS VS INTS in the history of the sport, ask Joe Namath! But you are right he does have a tendency to throw them (when he does) at the worst possible moment, still one classy act! And carried the Packers all year with their 25th ranked defense. They came back from 1-4 record, and they were 2-1 vs Minnesota. In two other pressure games, Brett has nothing to prove, the toughest QB TO EVER DON A HELMET! As far as Mrs. Moss goes she would get released faster then Howard Cosell could find his hair piece after Scott LeDOUX!! save me about 20$mill a year in salary cap. Brett Favre is now 13-13 vs Vikings. They are really the Hatfields and McCoys! As far as Cosell, He once said Jerry Quarry Will be okay as soon as he finds out what he's good at! You could definetly say the same for HOWIE. Except for making dough. Jim Murray and those other idiot L.A. writers were the worst to Jerry, and what really bad is Jerry was such a respectful gentleman to them! Take Care!

Where is the Democrat Gerry Schultz from Cleveland, Ohio? He has been missing for too long! He saw Manute Bol in person once! I dream of (or about) a site people write often in and with joy, regardless of colour of the skin, political opinions (whether you are for Alex P. or for Steven), height, superstition or shoe size. You may say I'm a dreamer but I'm not the only one. I hope someday you'll join us, and the world will be as one. Gia'.

I fear I did create a monster... Give word... A bum !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
Angelo: Personally I would take and old running back/TAILBACK who because of a car wreck, was made into a quarterback. the one the Philadelphia Eagels made famous, you guessed it Billy Kilmer, he had a better QB ranking then Namath, By the way Favre's 205 consecutive regular season streak (plus 20 post-season games) includes a 135-70 record, and never a losing year for his whole career. To me out of the mentioned only Elway could compete, I do wished Staubach or AIKEYMAN could have held on to get the concussion record!!(just kidding).And Steve (AKA SHEMP) where are Kent and I's super stooge tickets you promised?? go Dorsey Levens.

Jimmy: Since Favre is top five in every major passing statistic, it's hard to argue that he's an easy first ballot hall of famer. As for Kilmer, the guy threw wounded ducks that somehow ended up in the receivers hands. Also, there aren't many QB's who have better leadership abilities than Kilmer. They guys teammates loved him and played their best when he was on the field. Sonny J's no slouch either!

Sgt Shultz is in Paris. Eating frogs. Counting from one to 1,460 days. Long way to go yet. Anyone here going to the inauguration ?

Last I heard of Gerri was that he was standing in the corner like a dunce after being sent there by Howard C. He began to behave himself and Howard C. (kindly) relented and said that he could come out of dunces' corner. However, Gerri has not been seen since. Should we send out an All Points Bulletin ? Or perhaps Gerri has taken up the offer on helpthemleave.com. Time to make a judgment call here fellow Quarry fans.

Unfortunately, after the election, it was 'wabbit season' on outspoken, unrepentent democrats like Gerri, who accused the rest of us of being stupid for voting for Bush. Gerri, you can come back now. Dry those tears. Stop the sobbing and the tanaunts. All is forgiven if you come back to only debate non-political subjects.

Tonight on ESPN Classic there is a legendary fight: "HUMBLE" MARVIN HAGLER vs ROBERTO MOSCIAN (DURAN) fought in 1983. Fifteen rounds between two of the greatest champions the world has ever seen ! This is legend in my book. I remember 1983 very well, I wasn't a seven footer yet. Italy was champion of the world after beating Argentina, Brasile, Polonia and Germania Ostest in a row. T-Rex were still alive. On the web there is a Marvin Hagler site. There are pictures with Hagler and Lewis, Hagler and Capriati, Hagler and Shavers, Hagler and Frazier etc. Heck (Kent taught me that one, it's California slang), Lennox Lewis is one hell of a big guy ! I doubt I would win a bar brawl against him. He makes me look small.

You know who did the color commenting for the broadcast of the Shavers verses Smith fight? None other than our own Jerry Quarry. Jerry was very good at his analysis of fights. I wish he had done more of them. Jerry said he didn't even break a sweat.

You know who did the color commenting for the broadcast of the Shavers verses Smith fight? None other than our own Jerry Quarry. Jerry was very good at his analysis of fights. I wish he had done more of them. Jerry said he didn't even break a sweat.
this guy Roy Williams is really a big man, he is bigger than George (Giorgio) and can punch harder than Giorgio. I have a DVD with Ali saying this stuff! He also says: "I'm a bad man, last night I murder a rock, injured a stone, hospitalized a brick, I'm so mean I make medicine sick". We know the guy, that was (and still is) Ali. Now my question is: how wilt Roy Williams is?

[1/13/05 11:32:42 PM]Steve|N.J.|dmmsrm@comcast.net|10

Hey Jimmy D., I hope you won't think less of me. However, I have an explanation! I must confess, that devil Kent got me all worked up about the Eagles with his merciless taunts! You know how he is. Jimmy, I'm sorry, but I SHOT MY MOUTH OF WITH AN EMPTY PURSE! I cannot possibly afford to send you two stooges Superbowl tickets. Jimmy D., you have a memory like an elephant!! Anyway, without Terrell Owens, we aren't going all the way. We'll beat Minnesota this weekend. It's pouring freezing rain all weekend with wind gusts of 50 mph. I'll tell you who scares me, the Colts and the Rams. Just as Kent said, "an underdog could emerge". I still think Tszyu will stop Hatton early. Hatton can be hit easily and often. Hatton does not have one punch stopping power, Tszyu does.

[1/14/05 09:48:30 AM]CHARLES|ARK.|CTJJANDFAM@AOL.COM|10

Didn't Jerry work the Ali-Norton 3 fight? What other fights did he work?

[1/14/05 10:52:25 AM]Kent|La Habra, Ca|kentallenent@aol.com|10

Charles, yes, Jerry worked Ali/Norton 3 as an announcer and I think that Shavers/Smith was on the undercard. I would have to get my tape out and watch it and if the fight is at Yankee Stadium, then it is the same card. Jerry also worked another Shavers fight versus Henry Clark and several others I can't think of right now. Maybe it was this one that was on the Ali/Norton 3 undercard. I wonder what happened to the esteemed Dr. Phillip Patterson who came to this site to drop a challenge to us that we should support banning boxing if we really care about boxers. I was hoping he would answer my question of since if boxing was banned, it would still exist underground and this illegal form would do the boxers more harm than the present legal sport. He seemed amazed that this site, which has goals to make boxing safer, was founded by a boxer who was destroyed by the sport. At least Jerry has a legacy of trying to do some good for the fighters that are to follow him, legal or otherwise.

[1/15/05 02:29:14 AM]Massimo|Roma|4|10

Slade, If I remember correctly, Brymer's defense was that he was afraid for his safety and Bonevena was trying to get into complex. But this doesn't make sense if Oscar was walking away. I can see why someone would be afraid of Bonevena as he would not be just some drunk for security to be throwing out of the door but was Oscar not threatening when the actual shots rang out? There seems to be a contradiction there and maybe the owners of the Mustang Ranch made some alleged payoffs to get their man off lightly. Something I can't prove but it is a feeling I have that it is quite possible.
Quarry would have likely outpointed Bonavena. Jerry could take one hell of a punch and was more skilled than Oscar. My only doubt is the cut factor. 70% Jerry wins on points, 30% Bonavena stops Quarry on cuts. I don't know who was the harder puncher between Quarry and Bonavena though. What( or which) were the most (or more) spectacular knockout wins in Jerry's career ? Shavers, Mac Foster, Spencer and then ? I wish I saw more footage of Jerry in the ring.

The shot came from inside the compound, which was surrounded by a tall prison style security fence. They found a loaded 38 pistols inside Oscar's boot....but Oscar's body had been moved before authorities arrived, so they could not tell where exactly inside the compound the shot came from (ground level, or from one of the gun towers that rose above the complex). There was also a question of someone planting the 38 inside Oscar's boot - the 38 turned out to be registered to Joe Conforte's wife (Conforte was the owner of the Mustang). It was reported that Conforte passed the word to employees, in case they were interviewed, to "shut-up and tell the truth", which probably means keep your mouth shut. In the days leading up to the murder, Oscar had visited the Police and said his life had been threatened. Just a few days before the shooting, someone had removed all his belongings from his apartment and burned them – which forced him to make a trip to San Francisco to the Argentine Consulate to get his visa related papers replaced (Joe's wife, Sally, went on this 2-day trip with Oscar). Oscar was sticking around Reno having fun, but he got involved with the dark side of the town and didn't get the hell out of there when he should have. As a boxing fax, we not only lost Oscar back in May 1976, we also missed a June 1976 Live NBC TV fight that was to match Oscar against Earnie Shavers.

Bonavena-Shavers would have been very interesting. Shavers actually improved later in his career---the '77 fight against Ali and later, his losses to Holmes as well as his round one KO over Norton---all later 1970's. In 1976, I don't think he was at his best yet and Bonavena might have had a chance at an upset.

Bonavena could take a punch, but was on the downside and not very active. Would have to pick Shavers by knockout here, although in 1973 I would Bonavena to knock Shavers out.

Bonavena-Shavers circa 1976 is an interesting match up and although I would favor Shavers in this one, as Bonevena was likely on the downside of his career, Shavers could not take a punch very well and he often had stamina problems as he would not pace himself very well, leaving him to often be very fatigued in the later rounds. No doubt about it, Bonevena could punch and he was very strong and durable.

It looks like Oscar Bonevena was still going strong at the age of 33 when he was killed.
getting old, but Hatton has beaten no one of real note. Sure he's had 38 wins from 38 fights, but who has he fought? Ben Tackie, who Tszyu destroyed, hurt Hatton in the last round of their fight. And Hatton struggled to beat Eamonn Magee (who?)\.

Critics say that Hatton decisioned Vince Phillips, who beat Tszyu in his only loss way back in 1996. But Phillips was 39 when he fought Hatton and I think Phillips got Tszyu on the only 'off night' he's ever had.\.At 35 Tszyu has not got many fights left in him. So every one of his remaining fights has to be a big pay day for him. He'll beat Hatton, no sweat.\.

Critics say that Hatton decisioned Vince Phillips, who beat Tszyu in his only loss way back in 1996. But Phillips was 39 when he fought Hatton and I think Phillips got Tszyu on the only 'off night' he's ever had.\.

At 35 Tszyu has not got many fights left in him. So every one of his remaining fights has to be a big pay day for him. He'll beat Hatton, no sweat.\.

Just passing through...I think your right Noam, Tszyu would beat Hatton at this point in their careers. Tszyu has too much experience. Shavers-Bonavena, Shavers can hit for sure but as Ernie but Shavers ran out of gas after 4 or 5 rounds, O.B. could box a little and stay out of trouble. Massimo....Oscar was 6'5" Wilt. Billy Kilmer...now that was a quarterback! | 1/16/05 10:42:20 AM|Massimo " Too Wilt" Cini|Roma||4|||10|Thanks Bob ! That's wilter than Giorgio Eduardo, who is a 6'4" midget. Roy is 6'5", I'm 5'6", where is the difference?\.

Both guys were past their primes by '76, but with a little gas left. Assuming they trained hard and fought hard, who would have won this bout?| 1/16/05 08:15:28 PM|Tyrone Washington|Mobile, AL||TyTy|||9|1976, Shavers DEFINATELY over Bobavena - here's why: In Oscar's last fight, also in 1976, he was at 219, about 14 lbs heavier than his best fighting weight. He had recently changed mangers, to a female, who knew NOTHING about boxing. Shavers was getting better and better and had good management during this period. I too watched the Bonavena-Frazier 1966 fight the other day on ESPN Classic, good fight by two great fighters. I wish there was more information about Bonavena, an interesting fella. I think his native language was Spanish, so there's probably not a lot of "interview type" information floating that would allow us to learn more. Did anyone notice his hair-do in the Frazier fight, kind of an "English Shag", new for 1966. I heard he got the name "Ringo" because his hair was like that of the Beatles in mid-1960's. | 1/17/05 02:10:57 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Angelo, Bonevena actually signed to fight Quarry in 1973 but Oscar was injured in training so the fight never happened. I would have picked Jerry to win the 1973 match up however, by 1976, Jerry had nothing left and if he had fought Bonevena then, Bonevena would have won this one handily.\.

Newcomer Tyrone may be right about Bonevena being on the downside enough to have him get beat convincingly by an improving Earnie Shavers but I don't think Bonevena at the time of his untimely death had slipped as much as Quarry had slipped by 1976.\.Jerry should have retired after after the second Frazier fight in 1974 or at least after the Norton fight in 1975, in which Jerry had slipped far from his prime skills. What makes anyone think Jerry could fight at a high level even a year after this in 1976?| 1/17/05 12:08:21 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Kent:He did manage to rally and KO Zanon in '79---so I'm thinking that in '76, Jerry, if he was motivated to train, might have had enough to beat Bonavena, who was also slipping. The new poster made a good point though, that Shavers was improving while others in the division were slipping, by 1976. It's interesting to note that we're discussing a fringe Top 5 or Top 10 guy (at least fringe in '76---though he became consistent Top 5 soon after), Shavers, many years after his retirement, and I believe he would handle most of today's top heavyweights without too much trouble. I'm impressed by Shavers because as someone pointed out, he had stamina problems and even a slightly suspect chin earlier in his career---but he worked hard to improve and brought an A-Game to his fights with...
Ali, Holmes and Norton.

Tyrone---aren't you from Shavers birthplace, Mobile? I know he moved to Ohio at some point (and now, I think England?), but isn't he Alabama born?

I have never seen the Ali'-Shavers fight, but I have seen the first Spinks fight in 1978 and Ali' was only a shell of the great champion (maybe the greatest ever) he used to be. I don't know, Ernie fought Ali in 1977, and I wonder how good Ali' was at the time. Was still better then Carnera? The Ali' who fought Smoking Joe in Manilla would have beaten Tyson, Lewis and Holyfield in my book (but what book?).

The Ali who fought in Manilla certainly would have beaten Tyson, Lewis and Holyfield---maybe on the same night! You're right though---his skills had slipped badly even when he fought Shavers. But still, Shavers showed a lot by learning to pace himself and actually box 15 rounds against the old master. Interesting to note that in the Spinks rematch, Ali lost a lot of weight, got his legs back and gave a boxing clinic one more time. He was at a very competitive weight against Larry Holmes---but it was smoke and mirrors---Ali took a bunch of diet pills to shed the weight to get down to around 218, but he was a very weak 218. I think in his last fight, against Trevor Berbick, Ali weighed around 230 and though he hit harder, he had nothing left. Berbick was kind and said that Ali's punches were harder than Holmes, but he was just being respectful. Ali was done and he knew it.

What is amazing about Ali was that even with very diminished skills, in his last match he still made a close fight of it with a top ten contender in losing to Berbick, who was the first fighter to go the distance in a title fight with Holmes. Still, Ali had no business being in the ring in this fight and I think it contributed to his condition now (see below). Angelo, yes Jerry came from far behind to knock out Zanon in 1977 but he was a shell of his former self who bailed himself out with his power against a weak chinned opponent. Again, I will say that after taking too much punishment against Frazier in 1974 and Norton in 1975 that Jerry didn't belong in the ring after this point. He may have only been almost thirty in years, but he was a shot fighter and if he had retired, he might be with us today.

I watched one of Ali's daughters (the non-fighting one) being interviewed on television recently. She insisted that her father's Parkinson's Disease is not the result of his boxing career. According to her, he would have got it whether he boxed or not. While it is true that this ailment can strike anyone---pugalists or otherwise (eg President Reagan)---it is difficult to resist the belief that boxing was the essential factor in his illness today. Perhaps, if he hadn't fought, the illness might not have hit him until his fifties or sixties. But the beatings he took around the head in his fights, as well as sparring when he refused to wear head protection sometimes, had to have done some lasting damage. The slurring of his speech was evident even on the night he beat Foreman. That ringside tirade he delivered after that fight showed signs of speech damage, and was certainly different to the earlier Clay after the first Liston fight.
It is rare that people get Parkinson's Disease in the late thirties or early forties when Ali was first diagnosed. So, once again, boxing looks likely to be the primary culprit, despite what his daughter says. <|1/18/05 06:34:11 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Noam, I do believe that Ali's condition was hurried along by his boxing career and especially his fights with Holmes and Berbick, when instead of enjoying his hard earned retirement, he was in the ring battling it out in gruelling competition, a fighter can take one too many or more fights.You are right that most of the time Parkinson's Disease doesn't strike people as early as the late thirties or forties and that non boxers such as actor Michael J. Fox are exceptions rather than the norm.I bring up that Jerry should not have fought at least after the Norton fight for the same reason. We fans can be selfish and I am no exception as I tuned into the Norton verses Young card mainly to see Jerry fight Zanon. In hindsight, I should have been against Jerry taking that fight and of course the three others he took after that!|<1/18/05 07:49:38 AM|Sally Spectra|Spectra Fashions.LA, California (and where else)|||||10|Ali' should DEFINETELY have retired after the Thrilla in Manilla. Invece he fought such monsters as Ken Norton, Ernie Shavers, Jimmy Old and Larry Holmes for a total of 56 rounds. That's just crazy ! Nuts ! Pazzo ! Loco ! And even Leon Spinks was way far from being a bum. <|1/18/05 02:21:25 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Kent, you describe it neatly in using the term 'hurry it along'. It aptly sums the situation up in just a few words.People are selfish with sports stars. We want to watch them at their best and, when they are well past their prime, we still want to watch them. The first part is because we like watching elite athletes; the second is that we are intrigued by tragedies and train wrecks. Many people would gladly pay to watch a fight even if they knew in advance that someone would be seriously hurt or killed. <|1/18/05 03:00:23 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Noam: Correct, and I'll add that we love watching old guys make comebacks because it gives us hope that if they succeed, we can turn back the clock too. When Foreman regained the title, or even when he fought Holyfield so well, every 40+ person watching had pride and thought it was them in that ring. That's the reason that even people who dislike Tyson might secretly hope that he regains whatever has been missing, and clocks somebody and gets the title back. <|1/18/05 04:21:14 PM|Massimo|Roma|||10|Kent, bravo for using hurried along ! What does it mean ? I know what "to hurry" means or "being in a hurry" ( avere fretta) means and I know what along ( lungo) means but I don't understand "hurried along". My guess is that that means " to take advantage quickly from a situation", ( battere il ferro finche' e' caldo) in other words. Gerry come back, I admit it, Wilt Chamberlain was the greatest, way better than Shaq, and than Mihm also, but come back ! Cheers. <|1/18/05 06:56:54 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Angelo|Foreman is a rare person. When he first came on the scene in the early 1970s, there wasn't much to like about him. Sure he waved the flag when he won gold at the olympics, but he was churlish and aloof with none of the glamour and pizzaz of a guy like Ali.So, as with the majority of boxing fans, I didn't like him. He shocked me with the way he so easily demolished Frazier and I was gearing up for Ali's funeral when George fought him. I was hoping against hope that Ali would win. And he did.I didn't start liking George until his second career. For the first time I saw him smile and he showed a personality. The whole world has affection for George now. I even have one of his grillers. <|1/18/05 08:11 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Angelo|Maybe if you watch a celebrity for 20 years or more you soften views about them. When you observe them for so long they become familiar and more easily likeable.But there are some characters it's difficult to warm to and I'm referring to Tyson. I saw a documentary on him recently and he has slipped in speech and demeanour. He presented as a guy who has given up on himself and who is only one bad night away from necking himself. Frankly, I felt really sorry for him. The guy has wasted so much talent, money, and opportunity. It's all behind him and his future is bleak. Perhaps he has one more victory in the ring left in him, but he has little else to look forward to. I wonder whether it would have ended differently had Tyson had a strong manager like Cus controlling him throughout his entire career. Instead he got Don King. Is that where it went bad for him? I think yes.

Hello Angelo. I believe Earnie Shavers is originally from Garland, AL. That's about 150 miles northeast of Mobile. Good Day, TY!

Tyrone: Yes, that sounds familiar. And I think in the mid-late 70's Shavers was fighting out of Warren, Ohio.

Noam: It's hard to have sympathy for Tyson. He might be one case where as a 40 year old underdog, he's actually unpopular instead of a sentimental favorite. I love watching Roger Clemens pitch, enjoyed Michael Jordan's comeback---it's great to see the older guys get in there and compete, like Foreman did. But with Tyson, he's older, but not more mature. You get the feeling that if he somehow gets back to the top of the mountain, he won't have learned anything from scraping the bottom and he'll blow it again. It would be nice if he mellowed out in his personal life and fires it up as a boxer again. Imagine if he did have Cus or other strong management all these years. He was a talenteddestroyer. If he had the right training in the ring, and good advice out of it, he would have been a guy who could have improved instead of declining and would have finished his career with a huge amount of money in the bank, probably a record similar to Foreman's (I still don't think Tyson would have been undefeated.) and a measure of popularity too.

Tyson has been a great fighter for 3 weeks when he had Cus d'Odiato as his trainer. With Cus in his corner even a bum would have won the heavyweight title. THE FEAR IS LIKE THE FIRE, that's all you need to know about boxing. Seriously speaking, I also think that with Cus in the corner Tyson would have become one of the greatest heavyweights in boxing history. You can never know, but I don't think that he would have lost with Douglas if he had had Cus to remind him that the fear is like the fire, Tommy.

With Cus in Tyson's corner the entire career, Tyson would certainly have been more focused and disciplined. He would have ended up rich and respected and liked. Personally, I think Douglas was primed to beat almost anyone that fateful night. He had nothing to lose after the recent death of his mother and it was probably the only occasion in his whole life that he gave it everything he had. Douglas also had the tools. He not only had a significant size advantage, but that great jab of his kept Tyson at bay. Douglas also threw some great combinations. It was probably the first time Tyson fought someone who wasn't intimidated. To me, I don't think Tyson fought so badly that night; it was just that Douglas had nothing to lose and he chanced his arm.
rules, rules that would have kept Tyson under better control.\\Atlas could have looked the other way knowing that by not confronting Tyson, he stood to make a lot of money training Tyson. But Atlas showed integrity and loyalty to his sister by not looking the other way.| 1/20/05 02:46:26 AM| Massimo | Los Angeles, California | 4 | || 10 | Noam |\I agree with you, Tyson didn't fight too bad against Giacomo Douglas; I have watched the fight again recently and it was much more close than I remembered. Douglas was clearly ahead at the time of the stoppage, but Tyson did much better than I remembered. Michele Geraldo didn't go too far from winning the fight (the knockdown in the eight round). Maybe Cus would have given him that PLUS (some ROCKY phrases or whatever else) he needed to win. Giacomo Douglas was a great fighter on that night.| 1/20/05 05:04:14 AM | Massimo | Los Angeles, Ca | 4 | || 10 | Another thing! Yesterday I have seen a synthesis of the Holyfield-Holmes 1992 A.C. fight and Larry held his own very well. He threw some good combinations and was never in trouble. It is unbelievable that this guy was going to whip Tyson's ass just (or only) a few years later. The same Tyson who had destroyed a younger version of Holmes in 1988 with no sweat.| 1/20/05 09:20:15 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | || 10 | Holmes fought very nicely against Holyfield. He was motivated and had been busy in the ring in the months leading up to the Holyfield fight. A guy that age giving in-prime Holyfield that much trouble proved how great Larry Holmes really was. As for his loss to Tyson, Holmes had ring rust and really just took it for the pay day. Also, it was a short fight, but Holmes showed Tyson a few tricks and won his respect. Watch the last seconds of the fight---Holmes is on the ropes, taking punches from Tyson. He lulls Tyson into bearing in, and then winds up for an uppercut, the same as he used to KO Mike Weaver. Except this time, Holmes arm gets caught in the ropes, taking him off balance, and leaving him wide open to get clocked by Tyson. If his arm didn't get caught on the rope on the way up, God only knows what damage would have been done had that punch landed flush on Tyson's jaw. At the very least, I believe we would have seen a knock down.| 1/20/05 12:26:51 PM | Massimo | Chattanooga, Tennessee | 4 | || 10 | Today Evandro Camposanto is about the same age Holmes was in 1992. Well, if this Camposanto fought the 1992 version of Larry, Larry would win hands down (and feet up).| 1/20/05 01:58:17 PM | Charles | ark. | cttjandfam@aol.com | || 10 | what is the latest on mike and bobby?| 1/20/05 02:39:53 PM | Noam | same | || 10 | Larry Holmes never seems to get the credit he deserves. He was right up there with the very elite and he would have given anyone in history a great fight.\In my opinion, only two or three in history would have consistently beaten him. Holmes also has a very good website where he personally answers your questions.| 1/20/05 05:04:38 PM | Massimo | Rome, Ca | || 10 | Do yoose think that Holmes won his fights with Norton, Witherspoon and "The Lie" Williams? I never saw those fights but I know they were controversial decisions.| 1/21/05 08:17:40 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | || 10 | Holmes built up a huge lead in his fight with Norton, then held off a furious rally, probably won the 15th round and had done enough to win the fight. Although Norton was the Champion, it had been won on paper, and by his elimination bout victory over Jimmy Young. He didn't beat a Champion to win the title and Holmes, coming off an impressive win over Earnie Shavers, was almost on an even playing field with Norton. I think people felt that Norton needed a couple big wins to establish himself as a true champ. Carl Williams did not beat Larry Holmes. He was game, Holmes was not on that night, and Williams took the fight to the distance, but no, he didn't do enough to unseat Holmes. Witherspoon came closer, in my opinion. Both of these fights reminded me of the Michael Spinks-Holmes bouts. Holmes was never in any real trouble, traded punches evenly, and certainly shouldn't have been dethroned by the performances of Williams or Witherspoon. Maybe you give Witherspoon the draw???

As I have already said I didn’t see those fights, I have just read some comments about them. Anyway, I think a fight should be scored just as it is, round for round, without thinking who is the champion and who is the challenger. If the challenger wins by even just (or only) 1 point, the judges ought to give him the title. Also, I think that if the fight is judged a draw the title should not remain to the champion but should be considered vacant and an immediate rematch should be organized.

I disagree to an extent. What it really comes down to, as you said, is that whoever scores the most points should win. But as we all know, scoring a fight is subjective. I think that going into the fight, some level of "benefit of the doubt" should be given to the incumbent Champion. The responsibility should be on the challenger to take the title away, not have it given to them. I'm not saying a challenger has to knock the other guy out, but for me at least, he has to do more than pitter-pat and survive---he has to make a strong case that he has unseated the Champion---stronger then the case the Champion must make that he has successfully defended his crown. I know this isn't scientific, but scoring a fight really isn't scientific in the first place. Similarly, I totally disagree with the Olympic scoring---that a clean jab that lands but barely stings is worth as much as a power punch that causes a knockdown. That's total crap.

Five judges might make the outcome more fair---but the added cost might prevent that from happening. Of course, for a huge title fight, why not splurge on two more judges? And in theory, you are right about it not being fair that the judge favors one of the participants just because they're the champ. But it's funny---I've even seen fights where an undefeated contender gets a bum decision over some old veteran trial horse who clearly should have won the fight.

The Ali/Jimmy Young fight was a close fight and Young outlanded Ali as far as punch numbers so some people thought Young should have gotten the decision. If the pros were scored like amateur fights are, this would have been true but Young didn't land the stronger more effective punches and he didn't land that than many more than Ali landed. Young also ran the entire fight and he even stuck his head out of the ropes to avoid getting hit. Now if Young had landed an overwhelmingly majority of the punches every round, then he should have been the victor but this wasn't the case. In effect, Young didn't take the title from the champion regardless of punch stat numbers.

You expressed it better than I could. If I never heard of, or saw these two guys, it's possible that I would have called the fight a draw, or maybe Young could have eeked out a one point win (I'd have to watch it again to be sure.). But I did know who these guys were, there was a lot of history, Ali was a great Champion and there's no way in hell I would take his title and hand it to Young based on a very awkward performance and a lot of light hitting. Without knowing them, I might say that Young was showing a weird style, but outlanded Ali and made him miss a lot, even if it was unorthodox (as Cosell liked to say). But by knowing the two fighters, my reaction was that Young's performance was a cheap survival---you don't wrest the belt from a legendary champion by sticking your head outside the ropes to avoid mixing it up.

Personally, I don't think it fair that a champion lose the title on a doubt. The challenger must decisively defeat the champion beyond any doubt to win a decision. My thinking is this: the title is the supreme honor and there should be no doubt about the credentials of the guys who hold it. They should be universally accepted as THE champion and this isn't the case when they win the title on shonky decisions (especially from judges of doubtful credentials and objectivity). For mine, I would give the champion a two point start in any fight. If the challenger wants the title, then he has to compellingly earn it by decisively defeating the champion. Lucky or corrupt decisions have to be taken out of play. The title should be such a precious commodity that it must be won, not gifted by a doubtful decision from a shadowy judge influenced by an even more shadowy promoter.

There must be a higher standard of proof for a challenger to win the title - just like there is a higher standard of proof in criminal as opposed to civil proceedings. When the stakes are higher, so must the winning margin to get the verdict. If we want the title to be the ultimate reward, then there must be no doubt about the worthiness of the champion holding it, in my opinion. By doing it this way it minimizes the opportunity for foul play. Judges are less likely to cheat by giving hometown decisions for a favoured promoter when the margin to earn a win is more distinct. By giving the champion a two point start, it means that the verdict must be beyond a reasonable doubt, unlike the current system which is basically on the balance of probabilities. Protect the title by making it special. Don't cheapen it by giving it away on a doubt. By giving the champion a two point start, you diminish the influence of judges and promoters.

that's interesting---I like to think that maybe the judges are already spotting Champions a phantom lead of a point or two and maybe that's why they get the benefit of winning a close decision or maintaining their title on a draw. I hate to make it an official rule that they automatically get a lead, but I like the concept that this system is unofficially happening.

Let's put it this way: I wouldn't want the Patriots to be spotted a field goal lead when they play the Eagles in the Super Bowl, just because they're the champs! I don't even think if I didn't know who Ali and Young were that Young deserved to win the fight. It was close yes but Ali controlled the ring and landed the harder more effective punches throughout even if they were slightly less in numbers than Young landed. It was case of quality verses quantity and the judges correctly took this into account. Ironic in that when Young fought George Foreman and Ken Norton, two harder punchers than Ali, he was still backpedaling but he was giving angles and counterpunching and he was more aggressive than against Ali. If Young had fought Ali like he did, especially in his win against Foreman, he would have won the title. As it was he came close to winning the title against Norton as that too was a close fight that went to Norton and was later called a WBC title fight after L.Spinks would not fight Norton and Spinks was stripped of that title.

As far as NFL football goes, each season is different and there is really no defending champion each year as all of the teams, even if with most of the same personal, start from scratch. Pittsburg has had a better season than New England this year and the odds should favor them to represent the AFC. I am going out on a limb by picking New England, not based on last year's win but on a gut feeling I can't nail down. Last year means nothing to me in my picks.
Hard times for the challengers! If a challenger loses the fight for the championship he might (or may) not have another chance! Never again! This isn't the case for the champion. The champion is already famous and has already a place in history, he'll have another chance to the title someday. Immagine a guy who begins his professional career, beats all the best contenders in the world, gains a N.1 CONTENDER position, fights against the champion, beats him by a very small margin [not enough to overcome (or overtake, or exceed) the 2 points deficit], doesn't win the title and is probably not going to have another chance to the title in his lifetime... What is he gonna do? Rocky 6 with Stallone? Again, hard times for the challengers!

Jerry Quarry became the number one contender three times but he only got two title shots. One against Jimmy Ellis in 1968 which he lost by split decision and once against Joe Frazier in 1969 in which he lost by TKO after seven rounds. Jerry fought well in this one, especially the first three rounds, but Frazier wore him down with his relentless style. He of course deserved a third shot in 1973 which he didn't get even though he defeated Ron Lyle, who had won 19 in a row and Earnie Shavers, who had won 32 out of his last 33, 32 by knockout going into the Quarry fight. George Foreman, champion at the time, was quoted as saying after Jerry's one round demolition of Shavers, that Jerry had just blown his title shot. Jerry took his ill fated second bout with Frazier instead and he showed little in being stopped this time in five rounds. If all of a sudden Jerry had started to fade after his good year in 1973 at least if he had been handily defeated by Foreman in 1974 instead of Frazier, he would have deserved to get the chance at the title regardless.

In the modern era, contenders get plenty of chances, whether they were unlucky or not. I can't think of a single contender who never got a second chance after a controversial loss. Heck, some guys make a living out of being a contender, given the number of titles on offer. Rather than have an unofficial system, make it official. Recognize that the champion earned the title and doesn't deserve to lose it on a doubt. To win the title you must do it convincingly and giving the champion a two point head start ensures this situation. Also, I'd change the procedure with the score cards of judges. Many say that the scores should be shown to everyone at the end of each round so that the fighters know where they stand. Have a score board. Fighters would see they can't win on points and would go all out for a ko making the fight exciting to the end. However, I wouldn't do this. I would instead collect the cards from the judges at the end of each round. Don't let the judges go back and tally who is leading. Some judges tally the scores and say, "Gee, Iron Mike is behind two points with three rounds to go. I'd better give him the benefit of the doubt in this round so he's still in the fight. I gotta make Don happy."

It would be better if the judges weren't in this situation. They should score each round on its merits and not be influenced by the rest of the fight and other rounds. Each round is an individual battle.

My boxing soul lives back in the 60s in California, even if I'm actually from Pisa and I started breathing in the 70s. Now, with all the belts available, being a title contender is almost inevitable. Yesterday I read Butterbean's record and I noticed that he is 1.82 (about 5'11 1/2 wilt) and weighted 391 lbs for one of his last fights !!!!!!!! Oh my God, who is this guy? Andre' the Midget's reincarnation?
About two years ago, Butterbean took a fight against fifty one year old Larry Holmes and Holmes totally outboxed Butterbean for ten rounds for an easy win. Holmes wanted to prove that Butterbean couldn't really be taken seriously as a world class fighter. Butterbean won one round on a bad decision by the referee who called a slip a knockdown in the tenth round. Butterbean was throwing a punch but the replay clearly shows that the punch didn't land and the alleged knockdown was Holmes slipping after the fighters' feet got tangled up. Butterbean is an exception as he must be in good health to at least box four rounds and he was able to chase Holmes for ten rounds. I know I weigh over 300 pounds but I would not even spar with someone let alone take a fight unless I lost 100 pounds.

There is a fighter named Corey Sanders (American with almost the same name as the other Sanders) who weighs in over 300 pounds but he is 6'6" wilt. Sander is a decent fighter who has a win over former contender Oleg Maskaev but he also has lost to 210 pound Davaryl Williamson, who recently lost a close technical decision to Wladimir Klitschko. Williamson had knocked Klitschko down but Klitschko was ahead by about one point on the scorecards after in the fifth round the fighters hit their heads together and Klitschko was unable to continue due to a cut.

About this paper, the Packers are not in it, But I do predict a Pennsylvania Bowl, and if so it should be rescheduled in Easton PA. (IN LARRY HOLMES BACK YARD by the pool-BOXING GLOVE SHAPED). Went thru all my Mags RING MAGAZINE FAVORED FRAZIER #1. And they only other time was of course 1970 Ring Magazine, where he stayed for four months. W.B.A. at the same time had Bonavena #1 and not taking anyway from Oscar, Jerry had fought and beat much better foes than Bonavena did. Oscar got himself DQ'UED in his home town in Argentina vs Miguel Paez, and still got W.B.A.'S NO.1 CONTENDER LIST.

Massimo: Why do I get the feeling that if it had been the young, not so legendary Mike Weaver, (circa 1979-80) he would have smoked Lewis the way Rahman and McCall did. I have never seen Weaver in his prime so... I just don't know. He had impressive biceps and shoulders! He could have been a great bouncer, that's for sure, I can see why they called him Hercules. Not the Hercules Hernandez who fought in wrestling, they meant the other one. Lennox Lewis could be great to watch and impressive sometimes. Of course, his 2 losses against Esimio Rahman and Olivio Mc Call just suck!

Another thing which (that 30%) is worth saying about (maybe better regarding) Lewis is that (now it's sure) he had one of the best uppercuts in the heavyweight history. In my opinion the best uppercuts in heavyweight history are:
- Mike Tyson (yeah, that bum!)
- Lennox Lewis
- Carlo "Figliolo" Liston

In my opinion the best uppercuts in heavyweight history are:
fighter Sam Peter on HBO Saturday night. He does look impressive. He kind of reminds me of David Tua, let's hope he's not easy to box like Tua is.

Speaking of uppercut, Andrew Golota had a great "LOWER" uppercut just ask Riddick Bowe.

An uppercut to the balls (or guts) is sure even more effective than one to the chin, but it's forbidden. Andrea Golota should know it. Once I received a shot there while I was playing soccer. It was pretty painful. If I had been American, it would have happened by playing baseball.

Samuel Peter is one to watch. He also recently knocked out Jeremy Williams, who is a good fighter with a decent record. This guy Diaz, Peter's opponent who Peter knocked down five times on the way to a fifth round KO, I really don't know much about him but he appeared to have some good boxing skills but he couldn't cope with Peter's power. Peter is not lacking in the confidence department either in asking for a fight with Vitali Klitschko. Roy Jones Jr. actually said he thought Peter was ready. But I think at 24 years old, with a record of 22-0, 19 by KO, there is time for him to get ready for a title shot. His time will come.

Oh yeah, to Steve and other Eagles' fans. Congratulations to the Eagles for making it to the Super Bowl. My picks were right for the big game, New England Patriots versus the Philadelphia Eagles. Again, my pick had nothing to do with the Patriots winning last year as I had Pittsburg rated number one going into the playoffs, it was a gut feeling I had that Pittsburg was ready for a let down after a great regular season record and playoff success (until now!). As to who's going to win, I have to, as Jethro Bodine, AKA Max Baer Jr. used to say, I'll siefer on this for a while.

Yanqui Diaz (Azcuy) was the guy that knocked out Juan Carlos Gomez and decisioned Vaughn Bean. He is a decent fighter. Peter will lose the first time he fights anyone that is slick. Shufford made him look terrible, but Shufford did nothing offensively and dropped the decision. Peter is a poor man's Tua, and will be exposed shortly. I like the guy's style, but he is too slow.

Jerry Quarry Vs Oscar Bonavena came up as a topic again. Jerry has a slight edge record wise 7-6-1 3 Knockouts, opposed to Bonavena 6-6-3 Knockouts. But vs World top ten Contenders Jerry had a big edge 8-5-1 4 Knockouts, and Oscar 4-6 no Knockouts. I still have to go with Jerry on this one maybe even a knockout. Jerr seemed to train a little harder and more focused when opposed to fighter's like Bonavena, Anyone want to read on "MURDER at THE MUSTANG" Just punch it in the computer, I have two pictures of that whole clan ata a casino including Bonavena, they all looked like one happy family!
Andreer than Kent's friend from Boston for about 270 pounds, the one and only... "The bouncer". Interesting match up.

Today on boxing record archive (another great boxing site) there is an interview to Tony "TNT" Tubbs. "TNT" thinks he can still make the top 10 and maybe even get a chance to Vitali. I think he is wrong. He has been an excellent and probably underrated heavyweight champion, but now, at 78 years of age, his career is over.

Tony Tubbs fought 2 fights in 2004, 2 fights in 2003 and 1 in 2002. He has no intention of quitting his ring career and he thinks he can still be very competitive. My guess is he is trying to get back what he could have had but it is too late for him.

Ironic in that if you asked Tubbs if Holyfield should still be fighting he would likely say Holyfield should quit and if you asked Holyfield if Tubbs should be fighting, Holyfield would say Tubbs should quit. But neither man can see that he, himself should quit.

Tony Tubbs, last I heard, was a trainer. I guess he still spars and he thinks he can compete. But sparring in the gym and actual competition can be two different things.

I hope Tony comes to his senses and keeps passing on the knowledge he still has before he takes a chance of losing what he has by returning to the ring.

Tubbs had a lot of talent but he often would not train hard and he would come into a fight fifteen or more pounds overweight. He has the perfect name for a fat fighter in that Tubby is American slang for being fat. My guess is he is trying to get back what he could have had but it is too late for him.

Ironic in that if you asked Tubbs if Holyfield should still be fighting he would likely say Holyfield should quit and if you asked Holyfield if Tubbs should be fighting, Holyfield would say Tubbs should quit. But neither man can see that he, himself should quit.

Ironic in that if you asked Tubbs if Holyfield should still be fighting he would likely say Holyfield should quit and if you asked Holyfield if Tubbs should be fighting, Holyfield would say Tubbs should quit. But neither man can see that he, himself should quit.

Massimo speaks it better than me. Kent is mufin man or mufin man is Kent. Koo koo klock is wise beyond comprehension. Tubby toney. Lennox L. and Oscar B. Who woulda thought.

Time for some home truths. Kent is mufin man or mufin man is Kent. Koo koo klock is wise beyond comprehension. Tubby toney. Lennox L. and Oscar B. Who woulda thought.

but neither man can see that he, himself should quit.
shines. fat as a pig. happy as a pig in a sty. falfal pig for islam. early bird catches the worm. mufnis man alias kent is caught. three cheers. hip hip horray. hip hip horray. hip hip horray. hip hip horray. for he's a jolly good fellow, for he's a jolly good fellow, for he's a ........

Tonight, on ESPN Classic there is TOMMASO "MACHINE" GUNN vs GIORGIO FOREMAN fought in 1993. I never saw this fight ! Come on, come to Italy to watch this fight ! All of you American sisters and brothers are welcome in my book. Come to Roma, I will be glad to show you this beautiful city. Cheers.

You are also likely, Howard C, Koo Koo Klock, and several others. I think the Muffinman is funny though. I wish I had thought of it. I will admit for the first time though, drumroll please! I have signed in as Richard C. Cunningham and my good friend is Alfredo Delveccio from Italy. I have never been the Muffinman and you if you are the real Muffinman knows this is true and if you are not, then the real Muffinman knows it is not me. Either way, I am not the Muffinman.

Holmes had all the skills, but I doubt he had the mentality to beat George. That's where Ali had the edge on Holmes. I believe that George would beat him just like he did norton.

Who is the Muffin Man? What did the Muffin Man do, Kent? You have overreacted to the accusation that Muffin Man is you, Kent, so Muffin Man must have some significance.

A key to beating the in prime Foreman was psychological. A fighter would have to hit George hard early in order to gain his respect to let him know he was in a fight and so George would not just wantonly charge in throwing bombs. Ali knew this and this is why he made a point of hitting George hard with right hand leads in the first round. Ron Lyle did this too and he nearly beat Foreman. In both of these fights George did fight back hard but these fights were in no way early demolition jobs we saw against Frazier and Norton. I believe that if Ali shook up Foreman with his punches, then Holmes could have done the same thing by setting up his right hands with powerful head snapping left jabs, catching Foreman coming in. Another key to a Holmes victory is Larry could take a great punch and even if someone knocked him down, Larry would get up and win. I still don't know how he survived that overhand right from Shavers. But survive he did and a few rounds later it was Shavers being stopped.

George Foreman was always dangerous and this is why I rank him number four of all time as he could do a demolition job on anybody whoever lived if he caught him right at any given time. Ranking him behind Ali, Louis, and Holmes. The younger version of Foreman had stamina problems past the fourth round or so. Can you imagine what kind of fighter he would have been if we combined the raw finishing ability of his youth with the boxing skill, wisdom, and pacing ability of his older version during his later comeback?

He used to pop in here (I guess straight from the oven!) last year to make smart-aleck remarks. I am not overreacting to being called the Muffinman. I am just pointing out that he is not me.

---

The "Hybrid" Foreman---power and invincibility of his first go-round with the wisdom, patience and stamina of his later career would have been maybe the best of all time. I think an in-prime Larry Holmes could have taken a 1972-77 Foreman much the way Ali and Young did. I don't think Foreman would have waxed Holmes the way he did Norton. For one thing, Holmes was a better boxer and for another, he could take a punch and trade back. Against the big hitters, Norton was like a deer in headlights. I rate Holmes up with Ali and Louis in the top 5, and I'd think about adding Marciano to that list as well. The fifth position is always open for debate---Foreman, Liston, Jack Johnson???

---

I think Dempsey would have beaten Johnson.

---

The Morrison-Foreman fight was a scandal because (or as) Tommy just run away (literally) from Giorgio for almost the entire fight. Tommaso showed courage in a lot of his fights ("The Lie" Williams, Donovan Ruddock and especially against the world champion Union Kane) but he was just scared shitless (sorry, Indiana slang) of Foreman. I think there should be a rule to keep the fighters from running in the ring.

---

I think the psychological component with Foreman only came into play because of his lack of stamina. Foreman had no psychological weakness at the start of a fight; it was only when fatigue took over against Ali. Once he got tired, his punches began to lack conviction, and Foreman realized that knockout was unlikely and that the time for a quick ko had passed. So when he got knocked down, he faced a choice - stay on the canvass or fight many more rounds in stiffling heat. (As they say, fatigue can make cowards of us all, and Ali obviously knew of this trueism before he fought Foreman.)

---

The second version of Foreman also had the power as witnessed by him dispatching Gerry Cooney brutally in two rounds, his one punch knockout of Moorer to win back the title, and he still had a majority of his comeback wins by knockout. As stated recently, Foreman himself said he didn't have the killer instinct the second time around and he said he would have a fighter hurt and then he would back off, not wanting to hurt his opponent further. He was too nice for his own good at the older age and this cost him, especially in the Alex Stewart fight, in which he took a lot of punishment after letting Stewart off of the hook after two second round knockdowns. This would have never happened in his earlier career as he would have destroyed Stewart without as much as a thought once Stewart was hurt. The reason Foreman was so brutal in the Cooney fight is Cooney hit him with a tremendous left hook that Foreman says was one of the two hardest punches he ever was hit with. The other coming from Ron Lyle.

---

Foreman said his very survival was at stake against Cooney after he was shook up badly by the hook in the first round so he had to get Cooney out of there in a hurry or face the same fate himself.

I don't think the first version of Foreman would have knocked out the second one. The second one was insensitive to punches or at least he could take them in a chivalian way. Foreman never went down in his second career and was hit by such fighters as Moorer, Camposanto, Gunn, Stewart, Cooper and Cooney. Very likely the first George would have outpointed the second George, but the second George would have had a decent chance at winning by KO. Maybe he would have beaten the first one by using the rope a dope and saying "That's all you got George?".

However, the second George still had the power to beat the first George. My guess would be a 9, 10 or 11 round knockout by the second George over the first.

It sounds a little odd (or strange) to say that an over 40 years old version of a guy would have beaten the same guy in his 20s, but I think it's quite possible.

Two things that Foreman lost in his forties as opposed to his twenties were his hand speed and his foot speed. That is why Tommy Morrison was able to stay away from Foreman and pile up the points. It is also why he was outpointed by champion Evander Holyfield as George just couldn't match Evander's work output. Just as it was the reason he would have lost to Michael Moorer if Moorer had decided to stay away from him for the remainder of their bout.

A combined Young and Old Foreman would have dominated Holyfield, Moorer, and Morrison as well as a lot of others. I would also favor Young Foreman over all of these fighters.

The speed and mobility advantages would favor the younger version of Foreman if Young Foreman versus Old Foreman were possible. What makes such a match up interesting is the intangible of the older Foreman's mental advantage of the wisdom that can come with age.

The younger Foreman could pace himself if he wanted to because he did so in going ten rounds with Gregorio Peralta but young Foreman often chose not to do so. Instead he would rely on knocking his opponents out early, which worked most of the time.

All that being said, I don't know who would win in a Young Foreman versus Old Foreman. It wouldn't surprise me the older version would win though as if anyone would know how the young Foreman was thinking it would be the old Foreman.

I agree. If the young George could fight smart and keep away from the old George, then he would probably win. But the young George was never smart enough to do that. And he didn't have the patience.

So at some stage the old George would land a haymaker on the young George. Lights out, folks. Afterwards, while the young George is out the back having apparitions and making excuses, the old George is talking to the press, smiling, and making more money.

I was wondering about 1 thing: is it possible that the Old Foreman could take a punch better than the Young Foreman? The Young Giorgio was knocked down by Ali', Young and Lyle while the Old Giorgio was never knocked down. Is it possible that getting old can make your chin better? Cassio Marcello Clay was knocked down by Sonny Banks and Enrico Cooper and hurt once by Doug Jones, while, on the other hand, Muhammad Ali' was able to take bombs from Shavers, Foreman, Norton, Lyle and Frazier (almost always). I don't know, I was just wondering.

Say what? Kent gets 'outed' for being some guy called Muffinman, but instead of taking the rap he brings me in to it. Somehow I am supposed to be the Muffinman, Looney Bin and Tune (are they brothers), and some nut called Kook Koo Clock, all rolled into one. Baloney. Go stand in dunce's corner Kent. Now stand there with Gerry and shut up. |

|1/28/05 10:04:16 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|OK, Howard C, maybe your are not the Muffinman, Looney Tune, or even the Koo Koo Clock but I think whoever it is, is one person.\>Come on Koo Koo, fess up!\>It is too crowded in the dunce corner and besides there is only one hat.| |

|1/29/05 02:30:06 AM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville||||10|Good try, but Gerry's left dunce's corner. He's moved to Canada. You can wear the hat that fitted him so well. |

|1/29/05 09:03:33 AM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com||||10|Ali only talked to people he thought he could whip mentally. Foreman, Frazier, Liston were real threats and Ali knew he would have to try to gain any advantage. Foreman and Liston were half whipped before they even got in the ring. Frazier shrugged it off better and fought his fight. The one guy Ali didn't even try to talk to was Ken Norton. During the fights Ali didn't say a word to Norton knowing it wouldn't do any good. Before the Norton fights Ali was also pretty quiet. Ali didn't just talk to talk, he talked to gain an edge. |

|1/29/05 10:56:59 AM|Massimo|Roma||the ball was on the line.com|||10|Gerry Schultz is in the legend of this site, just like Paul, RS and many others. Without him I wouldn't even know what Cleveland is, as the only Clevaland I knew was Cleveland Williams.\>Thank you guys, we are not going to forget you!\>Good luck, friends! The new guys are holding their owns, though.| |

|1/29/05 11:00:03 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Ali also used tactics like wobbling at the knees, pretending to be hurt in a mocking manner after getting hit with a good punch, to get in a fighter's head. He did this in the second round against Jerry Quarry in their second fight and it seemed, among other things such as Jerry worrying about his brother Mike's condition after Mike was knocked out by Bob Foster in a preceeding bout, to take the fire out of Jerry.\>Jerry had been aggressively pursuing Ali for almost two rounds and although Ali had landed enough jabs and combinations to win the rounds on the scorecards, Jerry was very much in the fight until he landed a good left hook/right hand combination to the head of Ali. Ali, with a scornful look on his face, wobbled at the knees in a mocking fashion as if to say, "is that all you got, my grandmother can hit harder than that!" Jerry from that point on until late in the six round when he rallied fighting back on instinct when Ali stepped up the action to try to take Jerry out of there, plodded after Ali throwing often only one ineffective punch at a time on the way to Ali stopping Jerry early in the seventh round.| |

|1/29/05 11:07:15 AM|Kent|same||same|||10|Oh by the way, Howard the real Muffinman insisted on wearing the dunce hat in the dunce corner. I didn't recognize him but I will have to take his word that he is the Muffinman.\>I do hope Gerry S. comes back. No big deal that some of the guys don't agree with him about certain things.| |

|1/29/05 12:38:25 PM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|As far as I know about American politics, I am more for Alex P. than for Steven and Elise. But still Gerry was a friend and did know something about boxing and about Wilt Chamberlain; so I'm sorry he ain't on this site anymore.| |

|1/29/05 03:56:05 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Ali sometimes pretended to be hurt when he wasn't so that when he was hurt and wobbling the opponent would be tricked into thinking he was laying a trap. It was smart and innovative.\>With the trash talk, Ali used it for two purposes; firstly, mostly early in his career, he used it to promote the fights. But the other reason, as Fan says, was to infuriate opponents into making mistakes. However, he only used it against fighters it would work on.\>Most of what Ali said about opponents was stock phrases and insults. Some of the stuff was childish (for example, hitting the toy gorilla at the press conference before he fought Frazier in Manilla).\>Ali also used stock phrases when interviewed by the media. Most of what he said was never thoughtful, philosophical, or intelligent. How many times have you heard him say to an interviewer, "Hey, you ain't as stupid as you look." Perhaps he had these stock phrases to mask his deteriorating condition from the disease. The disease stopped him speaking contemporaneously to his thoughts so he had the stock phrases in case his mind went blank. That aside, Ali was a pleasure to observe in and out of the ring. He has accepted his medical condition with dignity and courage. Ali had more impact on boxing than any other fighter in history, whether or not he is actually the greatest of them all.

1/30/05 02:14:27 AM Kent [LH] | same | 10

It suprises me that Ali wasn't talking to Norton as I seem to recall Norton saying Ali talked to him all the way through their fights. Howard, as I said, the real Muffinman is in the corner now. So I guess I don't have to wear the dunce hat.

1/31/05 11:41:04 PM Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville | 10

Kent is in dunces' corner because Kent is Muffin Man. Muffin Man was created by Kent when he needed a counterbalance to the kicks he was getting from Koo Koo Clock.

Rather than attack Koo Koo himself, he invented an imposter (Muffin Man).

Nothing wrong with that and it worked. Koo Koo's focus was taken away from Kent. Yes, you did that Kent. You did, you did, and you know you did.

DIIIID SSOOOOOOOOOO !

Admit that you are the Muffin Man, Kent, and I'll tell you why 'The Greatest' never trashed talked Norton.

2/1/05 01:41:57 AM Kent (Not the Muffinman) Appel | Non Muffinmanville | not muffin.com | 10

I am not the Muffinman, the Muffinman, the Muffinman. It is really true so help me God!

It is funny though and I kind of wish I was and I had thought of it first.

I counterattacked the Koo Koo Clock with a nasty post where I told him to go "F" himself and other terms I regret using as I had lowered myself in doing so and that is when Koo Koo backed off of me.

The Muffinman, whoever it is, came later and even though Koo Koo continued to send occasional digs my way, by that time he had cooled off his attacks on me quite a bit.

I would have to go back into the archives and learn the M.M. man's style if I wanted to imitate him but I don't want to waste me time doing so.

Come back Muffinman, we need your wit!

2/1/05 04:04:59 AM foolface | us of a | foolface2@yahoo.com | 10

if you don't get a job soon apple then you'll end up talking to yourself if you ain't already doing that. you got more time on you're hands than you now what to do with if you can be mufinman and kent apple all in one. wake up. get a job.

2/1/05 04:51:33 AM Massimo "The real truth" Cini | Roma | 10

To say that Kent APPEL is the Muffinman is bullshit! If he doesn't need a regular job, why should he get it? He ain't dumb! Working is not bad at all, but when you don't have a regular job there are many better things that you can do. In one word you have more time to dedicate to yourself.

2/1/05 07:20:25 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10

Hey Foolface, welcome back! Hey Massimo thanks for the back up but I don't let anyone bother me too much these days. It is like "water off of a duck's back,"

Foolface is one of my old critics and in some strange way I kind of missed him.

I am not sure why anyone would know for sure if I have a job or not. Maybe I do have one and if I don't and someone has investigated what I am doing, then I feel sorry for them as that is a total waste of their time to find out about my life.

It is amazing how some people seems to know what I am up to or not up to when I assume everyone here is a valued member of society. Yet some people judge me and they don't even really know who I am at all. What I do with my time is my business and yes I am a productive member of society who doesn't need to prove myself to anyone.

All I can say is things are going well for me right now and the future is looking bright.

To those who say bad things about me, and I am not talking about Howard C joking about me being the Muffinman as he often has insightful views on boxing and other subjects, I ask them, "what have you ever done to help anyone other than yourself?" I know myself that in some small measure I have done things to help others but I am amazed why anyone would ever care what I do. Does anyone ever say if Angelo, Massimo, Howard C, Noam, Gerry S. (if he is still with us), Jimmy D., Steve from New Jersey, R.S. (if she comes back), any of the other regulars, or if members of the Quarry family have regular jobs or not? So why me? I still haven't figured that out. | 2/1/05 08:13:25 AM|Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart|Salzburg, Austria|greatestartistsever@greatestgeniusever.com|10|

"Water off of a duck's...", "Dunce's hat"...I guess this is Georgia slang! You Americans have such a fantasy for these cool expressions! Keep (or keep on) all the good work! | 2/1/05 08:33:57 AM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|10|This place is weird. Fan knows what wasn't weird was the sound of Floyd Patterson's behind on the canvas against Jerry Quarry. Quarry was a huge underdog, as he was little known outside California against the legendary ex-champ who had just demolished Henry Cooper. Quarry-Patterson I is a fantastic fight, so is the second one as well. Fan likes to watch old Quarry fights and sip English Brown Ale.| 2/1/05 02:10:35 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|10|Well, I don't know if my job is regular, but it sure is a lot of hours! Still, it's good to have a break every now and then to contribute to the discussions here. Actually, if I didn't have a regular job, I'd probably spend even more time boring all of you! You all better hope I don't win the Lottery! | 2/1/05 02:16:17 PM|Kent|La Habra, CA|kentallenent@aol.com|10|Yes Fan, Jerry's win over Patterson was a huge win for him. Patterson had a resurgence in his career around this time with wins over Chuvalo, one of the best fights of his career, a near win over Ellis, in which a lot of people thought he had won the fight and then an upcoming win over Bonevena. I thought our Jerry Q won both fights with Patterson that the draw verdict in the first fight was based on a middle round knockdown of Jerry that looked like a slip to me. Some people say the Quarry win in the second Patterson fight wasn't right but I don't agree as Jerry knocked down Patterson twice in the fight in two separate rounds and Patterson would have had to dominate the rest of the fight to win. I thought the fight in the rest of those rounds was close, so Jerry wins, which he did. Fan, you are right, people here can be strange. Thanks for bringing up boxing again. | 2/1/05 02:19:13 PM|Massimo |Roma||10|(Italian American but not mafioso) Angelo-I'm ignorant about Michele "Il porta sfiga" Spinks as I have only seen him in his chump ridiculous performance against Tyson. That night if I had fought wearing a Mike Tyson's mask on my face I would have scared the hell out of him. The difference between Jerry and Floyd was that Jerry was a threat even for wilter and andrerer opposition since (I try with since) his chin was rock while Patterson...TSK,TSK. I can see JQ lasting the distance against Vitali Klitschko (if he didn't cut) while I can't see Floyd doing the same.

Yes, Patterson was limited as to how big his opponents would be but he seemed to be stronger late in his career. He able to use muscle against Chuvalo and Bonevena, both who outweighed him by fifteen to twenty pounds, and these guys were very strong, powerful fighters. I don't think we can use the Liston or even the first Ali fight as examples of how weak Patterson was as anyone can get knocked out early, as in the Liston fights, and Patterson's back went out early in the Ali 1 fight yet he still tried hard and even if he took a bad beating during this fight, he showed a lot of heart by do so.

He still would have lost to Ali, as he did in his last fight of his career in his second bout with Ali. But I am sure he would have put a better showing if he had fought Ali healthy in Ali 1.

Anybody have any thoughts on how Jerry would have done if he somehow could have come along at the time Patterson fought Moore? I think Jerry could have held the title for a while at that point and he would not have had to avoid the likes of C. Williams, Folley, Machean, or even Liston. Of these, he would have probably beaten the first three before losing his title to an in prime Liston.

I have seen the Patterson-Bonavena fight several times and Oscar never hit Patterson real hard during the fight. Maybe just once and Floyd wobbled. Oscar scored a questionable knockdown also but, anyway, that was quite a disappointing performance by Oscar. If Oscar had hit Floyd as hard as he hit Frazier or Ali' I don't know what would have happened (maybe I know). Patterson was very skilled and great to watch and a champion somehow, but I still think that JQ was a little better.

Quarry survives a couple tough rounds and uses his iron chin and determination to eventually wear down and knock out Cleveland Williams in about round 8. This fight would look a little like the Mac Foster fight.

Quarry and Machen go back and forth in rounds and Quarry takes a real tight decision by being the aggressor during Machen's slow periods.

Folley outboxes and uses angles against Quarry until a sharp right in the middle rounds turns the tide. Folley slowly regains form until being knocked down and out in the tenth round while ahead on the scorecards.

Any thoughts on who would win a Godzilla vs Mothra contest? Also who would u pick on an "in prime" King Kong vs Godzilla? What about Rodan? Would he be a match for any of them?

I have never heard of Mothra and Rodan but I have heard of King Kong and Godzilla. I think Godzilla is overrated. He is clearly under 9 feet wilt. They made the skyscrapers andrell to make him look wilter; King Kong over Godzilla by second round knockout. I wonder whether Wilt Chamberlain ever worked as a bouncer. Anyone knows ? Kent ? Gerry ? Bob ? Shaquille Rashaun ?

Yesterday I have seen the Chris "brains" Eubank vs Nigel "Bazooka" Benn 1990 fight. What a fight ! Chris Eubank was a great champion.
(or only) 1 for hitting after the bell. I remember that that fight wasn't as good as the first one, but Ruddock did a better job than Mike in the second half of the fight. The judges scored the fight for Tyson with a pretty wide margin, but I do believe they were wrong. The fight was very close without considering the points deducted, so considering them I think Donovan won. On the other hand I think that if Richard Still hadn't stopped the first fight in the seventh round Mike would have knocked Donovan out or at least won comfortably on points. Opinions from California or even other states?

Razor Ruddock was a very good fighter, one of the better, along with Jerry Quarry, contenders who never became a world champion but came close to it. He had a lot of heart to hang in there and trade with Tyson. He also showed a lot of determination in the fight with Morrison in 1995. He lost that fight but he had Morrison down a couple of times and he himself got up after a devastating knockdown in about the fifth round to almost finish Tommy "Gunn" off only to lose by knockout. Morrison verses Ruddock is one of the better action packed heavyweight contests along the lines of Foreman verses Lyle and Lyle verses Shavers.

Lyle-Shavers was like a street brawl.

Jerry was a very good fighter but Liston was a legitimate undisputed world champion who cleaned out the division on his way to the top. World Champions like Patterson and Ingo were afraid to fight him. He was an outstanding puncher and had good technical skills and perhaps the hardest jab of all time. He was also blessed with an 81 inch reach. I shudder to think what his jab would have done to the skin around JQ's eyes. He was much smarter and quicker and experienced than Lyle, Shavers, and Mac Foster, whom Jerry defeated all pretty early in their careers.

Lyle-Shavers was like Rocky-Tommy.

Don King 2: Tommy Gunn fights only in the ring!!!!

SCENARY: street of Philadelphia (the top of the toughness)

Don King 2: Tommy Gunn fights only in the ring!!!!

Rocky: My ring is the street!!!

Tommy: Yeah? Let's go then!!!

Rocky: What do ya want Tommy?

Tommy: I want respect!!

Rocky: Come and take it!!!

So John, do you agree with my scenario that if Jerry had come along at the time Patterson won the title instead of Patterson, he would have held the title for a while, defeating fighters Patterson was avoiding such as Folley, Machean (in prime), C. Williams, before losing his title to an in prime Liston? Jerry would have been a worthy champion, taking on all comers and losing like a true champion by avoiding no one. In the end, Patterson had to fight Liston or not be able to respect himself and he did the right thing regardless of what Cus, his manager, wanted or felt was best for Floyd. But it still wasn't fair that Patterson had to wait so long for a well deserved title shot. Still, Patterson's courage is sometimes questioned but Jack Dempsey's courage is not questioned when he avoided worthy challengers such as Harry Wills. Is it because the majority of the public didn't want this fight because of racial prejudice? or was it because Dempsey would have a good chance of beating Wills while most people thought Patterson would get easily defeated by Liston, which did eventually happen? I asked this question recently about Patterson's verses Dempsey's courage but no one replied.

How about Tyson vs. Liston? I'd have to take Liston here. Two intimidators facing off against each other---but when the bell sounds, it's whoever gets off the mark with the hardest, fastest punches and whoever takes the better punch. On quickness, an in-prime Iron Mike would have an advantage. But Liston could probably use the jab a little like Buster did to mark up Tyson from outside. Also, I have a feeling that Tyson couldn't punk Liston—-if he was losing and tried biting Liston's ear, Sonny might throw the rulebook out and break Tyson's ribs by throwing him out of the ring.

Liston would have intimidated Tyson. When he was a baby Liston was so ugly that when he played in sand pits his family pet cat used to cover him up. If Liston was as good as you guys say, and he was, then how great does that make Ali? Muhammad easily manhandled Liston in both their fights. Could any other fighter in history have done that to Liston? An in-prime Ali would have manhandled anyone in history, King Kong, Goliath, Batman, Rin Tin Tin, whoever.

If Liston was as good as you guys say, and he was, then how great does that make Ali? Muhammad easily manhandled Liston in both their fights. Could any other fighter in history have done that to Liston? An in-prime Ali would have manhandled anyone in history, King Kong, Goliath, Batman, Rin Tin Tin, whoever.

By the way, what does a fool face look like?

KENT: Regarding Dempsey's courage and Harry Wills. History was very kind to Harry Wills and I guess it should be since he never got a chance he deserved. BUT I recently saw a caption under his photo that said "The Man The Great Dempsey Was Scared To Fight". Utter nonsense. Dempsey did sign to fight him, they both started training, and tickets were even sold. The fight was cancelled for fear of race riots and Tex Rickard to whom Dempsey had contractual ties really did not want the fight. But my question is: how can he be afraid to fight a man he DID sign to fight? Also if you read the contemporary reports of Wills fight against Firpo, he won but bored the crowd to tears and the reporter even said Dempsey could have beaten them both on the same night. Regarding Quarry vs. Machen: Machen did beat JQ once so it is hard to say on that one. I do think JQ would have beaten Ingo Johanson though.

KENT ONE FINAL THING: Roger Kahn makes it clear in his autobiography that Jack Dempsey was willing to fight Harry Wills. Dempsey always said that Wills was made to order for him: big but not a hard puncher. Dempsey was not bragging, as he freely admitted that he may not have been able to beat Sam Langford even at his best. Nor was he a racist as right before he died he called Langford the best he ever saw. When Louis Firpo who lost to both men was asked who would have won he picked Dempsey in two rounds. Firpo went the full ten rounds against Wills and went out in two against Dempsey.

KENT: As an addition to my last posting, the original plan was for Dempsey to use Wills as a tune up for the Tunney fight. Dempsey always said that Wills was made to order for him: big but not a hard puncher. Dempsey was not bragging, as he freely admitted that he may not have been able to beat Sam Langford even at his best. Nor was he a racist as right before he died he called Langford the best he ever saw. When Louis Firpo who lost to both men was asked who would have won he picked Dempsey in two rounds. Firpo went the full ten rounds against Wills and went out in two against Dempsey.

KENT: As an addition to my last posting, the original plan was for Dempsey to use Wills as a tune up for the Tunney fight. Dempsey always said that Wills was made to order for him: big but not a hard puncher. Dempsey was not bragging, as he freely admitted that he may not have been able to beat Sam Langford even at his best. Nor was he a racist as right before he died he called Langford the best he ever saw. When Louis Firpo who lost to both men was asked who would have won he picked Dempsey in two rounds. Firpo went the full ten rounds against Wills and went out in two against Dempsey.

KENT: As an addition to my last posting, the original plan was for Dempsey to use Wills as a tune up for the Tunney fight. Dempsey always said that Wills was made to order for him: big but not a hard puncher. Dempsey was not bragging, as he freely admitted that he may not have been able to beat Sam Langford even at his best. Nor was he a racist as right before he died he called Langford the best he ever saw. When Louis Firpo who lost to both men was asked who would have won he picked Dempsey in two rounds. Firpo went the full ten rounds against Wills and went out in two against Dempsey.

KENT: As an addition to my last posting, the original plan was for Dempsey to use Wills as a tune up for the Tunney fight. Dempsey always said that Wills was made to order for him: big but not a hard puncher. Dempsey was not bragging, as he freely admitted that he may not have been able to beat Sam Langford even at his best. Nor was he a racist as right before he died he called Langford the best he ever saw. When Louis Firpo who lost to both men was asked who would have won he picked Dempsey in two rounds. Firpo went the full ten rounds against Wills and went out in two against Dempsey.

KENT: As an addition to my last posting, the original plan was for Dempsey to use Wills as a tune up for the Tunney fight. Dempsey always said that Wills was made to order for him: big but not a hard puncher. Dempsey was not bragging, as he freely admitted that he may not have been able to beat Sam Langford even at his best. Nor was he a racist as right before he died he called Langford the best he ever saw. When Louis Firpo who lost to both men was asked who would have won he picked Dempsey in two rounds. Firpo went the full ten rounds against Wills and went out in two against Dempsey.
Liston (who was hit harder earlier and later in his career and never went down like that). But with that said, Ali (Clay) totally dominated Liston in the first fight. I know that other posters here saw that fight differently and think that Liston was even with Clay---nonsense---Liston was consistently beaten to the punch, outboxed and looked like an old man sitting on that stool, face swollen, shoulders separated from the punches he missed—quitting against the man who would become the greatest, Muhammad Ali. | 2/3/05 05:04:09 PM|Massimo |Roma capitale||4||10|Howard C.Liston didn't train enough for the first fight with Clay. He had been making love twice a day with b====s an drinking all the way to the fight and he underrated Cassius. I think the first fight was very close for four rounds (I don't count the fifth round cause Cassio was blind). The second fight was a farse. I think that the Ali' who fought Cleveland Williams on 14 November 1966 was the greatest heavyweight of all time. I know that Williams was washed up, but he could still punch harder than Impelletiere and was a threat for any fighter. Ali' was unbelievable on that night, quick and even powerful. But I think that in an immaginary [(1958-1960 and well trained Liston) vs 1964 Clay] Sonny would have probably won.Sam Langford was almost a supernatural fighter. He was so small, shorter than even Andre' and so light but he beat over and over guys who were twice his size. Jack Johnson beat him quite easily though.Angelo-Liston vs Tyson  LISTON ALL THE TIME, TUTTA LA VITA !Sam Langford was almost a supernatural fighter. He was so small, shorter than even Andre' and so light but he beat over and over guys who were twice his size. Jack Johnson beat him quite easily though.Heck, in my prime, it didn't affect me. It was a confidence booster. And Muhammad had a harem in Manilla before the Thrilla when he beat the Gorilla. Liston didn't have any meaningful excuses; trust me on that.| 2/4/05 02:50:19 AM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Howard C.I have read it in a book written by David Ramnick that (or which) was about Patterson, Liston and Clay. I have never been a fighter but I remember that when Adriana wanted to make love with Rocky in Rocky 1, Rocky said:" No, Adrian, I can't because I'm in training". Physicists don't have this problem, obviously. | 2/4/05 07:06:47 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock2892@yahoo.com||10|Kent: I am incilined to agree with you that JQ in his prime would have beaten Machen in his prime although I am not sure about that. Machen did manage to last ten rounds against Liston in his prime and kept it pretty close. That tells me a lot about him. In all honesty I don't think JQ could have lasted ten against Sonny. But styles make fights and Machen had the style to make anyone look bad. I think JQ would have won a decision over him. I think Williams vs. JQ would have been a good one -- if JQ fought a smart fight like against Lyle he would have won. Williams unlike Lyle had a wicked jab and was a fast combination puncher, but I would have bet on JQ.| 2/4/05 08:04:02 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|Max Schmeling---dead at 99! I heard on ESPN today that Schmeling paid for Joe Louis' funeral---never knew that.| 2/4/05 10:02:28 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Schemling was a very good fighter and a good man and a man caught between the propaganda of his bad government in Germany in the time of Hitler and his inclination to do what was right.Ironically, it was sportsmen like Schmeling who seemed to keep their humanity when a lot of their countrymen were losing theirs. It doesn't surprise me that Schmeling paid for Louis' funeral as the two became good friends over the years.

Another German sports figure during the time of Hitler's domination of German politics was an Olympic long jumper who reportedly gave Jesse Owens some tips on jumping during warm-ups for their event. Tips that may have helped Owens win the gold medal in the event. The German, who's name escapes me, I believe got the bronze medal in the event for third place in those 1932 Olympics that were held in Germany. Not a bad showing but I am sure Hitler was not happy with his supposed German superman losing to an American, a black American at that!

Or were those German Olympic games held in 1936? I would have to look that up. I do think that the later date is when they took place.

1936 is the right date.

Max Schmeling dead at 99... The wet-nurse (thanks dictionary!) didn't strangle him. All jokes apart, rest in peace. He was a champion and above all a kind-hearted person. Primo Carnera and him were good friends and, if I remember correctly he helped Primo when the Italian midget was in bad waters.

It was people like Schmeling and this other German athlete who kept their humanity even as madness raged around them in their country.

I just saw a movie called Hotel Rwanda based on a true story of genocide in that country in 1994. One tribe in the country in general has slightly lighter skin and narrower noses and is taller and they are slaughtered by the other tribe during a civil war.

To an outside observer, they seem like the same people who's similarities far outweigh their differences. But those involved in the slaughter, those small differences are everything.

It reminds me of the Nazi Germans who slaughtered Jews just because they had a different religion and some different cultural practices. In fact, to tell them apart from the rest of the population, the Jews were made to wear insignias on their clothing to identify them as Jews. Otherwise, no one would know they were Jews they were so much like other Germans!

Some may wonder why prominent athletes such as Schmeling and the Olympic long jumper didn't speak out against the atrocities. But it is possible that they and many other German citizens didn't know about what was going on as the censorship of the regime was total.

Speaking out against atrocities with Hitler around? He would have sent him to Auswchitz. Hitler didn't like people who didn't agree with him. Schmeling likely was a very good man but wasn't a hero. I have seen him in pictures together with Hitler after his 1936 win over Louis. I'm sure he didn't agree with Hitler's (and sadly later even Mussolini's, even if in a much smaller measure) racial crap but he just couldn't show his ostility too much.

The world as well as the German people knew what was happening to the Jews, but it was easier to ignore their plight rather than acknowledge the massacre and actually do something about it.

Sounds familiar, doesn't it. Before we go getting moralistic criticizing others for not acting earlier against the atrocities on the Jews, we should look at modern humanity.

Many of the moralistic left were prepared to let hundreds of thousands of innocent Iraqis be slaughtered by Saddam. He gased tens of thousands of Kurds, emptied the marshes to destroy the environment sustaining the Marsh Arabs, filled mass graves with his own people, killed a million Iranians, rewarded the families of suicide bombers of Jewish school buses with $25,000.00 payments, etc, and in response the UN issued meaningless sanctions, UN officials were bribed by Saddam in the 'oil for food' program, while French, Russian, and German corporations profited from contracts awarded by Saddam. In exchange, the French, Russian and German governments refused to sanction the war, and so did the UN.If we'd left it to the UN and the other leftist moralists and elitists, the slaughter would be continuing.
Modern humanity is just as culpable as our ancestors in ignoring atrocities against humanity.And then along came George W. Bush.
Finally someone was prepared to do something. He took the fight to the terrorists on behalf of humanity. President Bush is actually doing something about a problem that has grumbled on for decades.In the meantime, guys like Michael Moore will still be making money out of anti-Bush propaganda. Why hasn't Moore done a documentary of militant Islam and the Saddam atrocities? My guess is that there isn't any money in that, he doesn't care, and he's scared that he'll end up like Salman Rushdie with a fatwah against him.I agree.I just think the German pre WW2 and WW2 period and all atrocities have something in common. They point out seemingly insignificant differences in people and amplify them way out of proportion in order to de-humanize the victims.I will take to my grave the belief that most people of every race, creed, color, religion, etc. are basically good and they all want the same things for their families and friends and that is, to have food, shelter, and prosperity. They don't want to be robbed of these things by whatever bullies exist domestically (in whatever country they reside in) or foreign and these same people do not want to deprive others of these same things.It is the small minority of humanity that causes all of the pain everywhere but unfortunately they often control the weapons that can impose their might.Moore is total in blaming the U.S. for most of the bad things that happen but he misses the point in that although the U.S. is not totally without blame for initially supplying thugs like Hussein (as is the former Soveit Union), the U.S. are not the ones who gassed his people and the U.S. did not commit genocide against tens of thousands of Iraqis, Kurds, and Iranians (who also had the might to commit atrocities in return).I was against the U.S. going into Iraq this second time but since it is already been done, I can only comment on where we go from here. In saying this though in hindsight there is no way I can say that Iraq in the long run will not be better off than they were with Hussein in power. People like Michael Moore ignore the fact that most of things the U.S. does are good, maybe not all but most, and the U.S. is always at the forefront of rescue efforts such as Tsunami relief. We can't be all that bad if we always come to aid of others. Moore and his supporter also are one sided in pointing out some things but like Noam said, ignoring others such as Hussein's brutality.Not all democrats are war out there like Moore and some of the leadership of the party. I am a lifelong democrat but more along the lines of FDR, Kennedy, Truman, and in some cases Carter and Clinton (although I didn't vote for Clinton the second time, or Gore, or Carter for his bid for reelection). I also didn't vote for Kerry as I am still waiting for a strong democrat to emerge and sorry Johnny Boy, it wasn't you!!

Just a couple of hours ago I have read an article on an Italian newspaper on Max Schmeling.The title of the article was:" Addio Max Schmeling, il Tedesco che aiuto' gli Ebrei". I'd say that the title speaks for itself! I realized that this man was not just (or only) a very good man, but a hero indeed. He nascose two Jews in his home saving them from the lagers. I wouldn't have had the courage of doing such a thing. His Mickey was a Jews guy named Joe Jacobs. When the Nazis ordered him to send Joe Jacobs away (I mean licenziarlo, but I don't know the English for that) he refused. I wouldn't have had the courage of doing such a thing. To thank and honour Massimo Schmeling for what he did to help the 2 Jews, in Nevada (it's a state in USA) every 6 December since 1989 there is the Massimo Schmeling day. So, MASSIMO SCHMELING WAS A HERO INDEED. | 2/5/05 02:39:45 PM|Fan|Fandom|Fan@Fandom.com|||10|What a good fight between Edner Cherry and Ricky Quiles on ESPN. These guys aren't world beaters, but in the 50's-60's people would still be talking about this fight after watching it on network T.V with Don Dunphy. In those days Cherry and Quiles would now have a following for the next time they are televised. Those times are a long time ago, but they were better times for boxing. | | 2/5/05 03:57:15 PM|Kent|La habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Thanks Massimo for the information on Schemeling, I didn't know he had done those things. So he did what he could and if more other people had done the same then a lot more people would have survived the brutal regime of Hitler.Fan, you are so right about how those regular shows kept boxing on the minds of fans. These days we need to go back to more boxing on free T.V. because even though there are regular programs on cable, we still have to pay for the service and pay for view is a joke that makes money for the networks and the promoters, it drives away the very markets they should be reaching, the general public. I think they would make even more money if there were not so many pay for view events and more free T.V. or at least cable.Howard C. A Foolface is a fool with a face but I really think it is the same thing as a Koo Koo Clock is. Howard, if you aren't careful, Foolface AKA Koo Koo Clock, will think you are really me. After all, he (they) always blames me for everything. Imagine that, me telling myself to go to the dunce corner! | | 2/6/05 12:05:42 AM|Noam|same||same|||10|KentYes, we initially supplied Saddam with arms, but this was immediately after he took power. At that point Iran had become our enemy after the hostages drama and it was hoped that Saddam would provide a counterbalance.No doubt, had we known then what we know now, we wouldn't have helped Saddam. But at that stage we needed a counterbalance to the Shia Muslims in Iran, and Saddam, being a Sunni Muslim, was just that. (Ironically a Shia Muslim government just got elected in Iraq to match the Shia Muslim tyrants in Iran.)In hindsight, it was wrong to assist Saddam, but no one knew then of the atrocities ahead.I know this is a boxing site, but now that the subject came up let me say this. Don't ever forget the common thread of all this trouble invariably leads back to the French. The French were in Vietnam before our involvement. They hotfooted it outa there when things got hot.Remember also that Ayatolah Khomeni (yes, my spelling is wrong) was exiled in Paris from Iran. He returned to throw out the Shah and after taking control encouraged the students to take American hostages.And, finally, don't forget where Pol Pot was exiled during his exile from Cambodia. Yes, Paris. He was partly educated in Paris, too. When he returned to Cambodia, we had the Killing Fields. Millions of poor innocents slaughtered. Okay, I'm sorry, for straying. Back to boxing. Vale Schmelling. | 2/6/05 02:37:46 AM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Yassar Arafat was flown from the Middle East to Paris on the French President's plane to receive top medical treatment before he died. How many people did that guy blow up? That old saying about when 'good men do nothing, evil flourishes' comes to mind about the Holocaust and also the more recent slaughters of the Kurds, Rawanda, etc. None of that stuff will completely go away until someone confronts it completely. | 2/6/05 02:41:21 AM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Kent, I thought fools are supposed to be faceless.

Noam, the French government's history of giving dictators safe haven makes me think that probably the perpetrators of the massacres a way out of their country when the rebels fighting against them pushed them out. Rwanda was a Belgian colony for much of the twentieth century and one of the reasons the faction that led the massacre of 1994 gave for their brutality was the other faction, the former rulers, were compliant with the oppressive Belgians. The French also had influence in the country. Sad, the next generation of one side ends up hating the other side for what they did and paybacks happen and the terrible cycle of violence keeps going and going. My prescription for world peace is if somehow we could all just tolerate each other enough not to kill one another. I don't think there will ever be universal love such as in the songs, "What the world needs now, is love sweet love" or "All you need is Love." If somehow we could agree that we will let the others who are not just like us or who believe differently than us the chance to just live, whether I like them or not. Sadly though sometimes people who are alike in culture and beliefs kill each other also. This can be seen by the gang violence in places such as in U.S. cities. So maybe the first step can be to say, "don't kill your own!" I will take the first step as because what I have seen here, I don't like this Foolface or Koo Koo Clock person for often trying to give me crap I don't deserve. "I HEARBY PLEDGE NEVER TO HARM HIM (OF THEM). AS HE (THEM) HAS A RIGHT TO EXIST UNHARMED." I think one of the reasons I like boxing, even though I am not fond of violence, is that it gives some people an outlet for aggressiveness that might show up elsewhere in society.

One more thing, Steve I haven't done my calculations for the Superbowl so my pick is totally subjective. I am going with your Eagles to win the big one as they appear to be the more hungry of the two teams.

What do you mean by saying SOON TO BE MURRIETA ? What's MURRIETA ? Was ist das ? Is La Habra changing its name ? I'm just wondering...Thanks.

Since we're on the topic of politics, though the U.S. has certainly spread its influence around the globe, it's usually in the form of empowering individuals to resist oppression and helping the cause of freedom. Yes, there are examples of where we have backed dictators for our own pockets, but usually, the alternative to those dictators were military or clerical zealots who would (and have) done far worse to their populations than the dictators we backed. For the most part, we've been the most decent and generous rich nation in the world's history, mostly using our power and influence to assist, lift up and enable others, not invade them and take their land. It's annoying when self-hating Americans or almost as bad, non-Americans who don't have a clue, rail on our government, our way of life and our policies. If the U.S. became totally isolationist and just let things happen around the globe, we'd find new energy sources, we'd still be rich and well-off, we'd still have a military armed to the teeth—able to defend our borders with savage fury—but the rest of the world, or at least a lot of places, would be far worse off. If we kept it all to ourselves and didn't intervene anywhere, you'd have a less peaceful and more chaotic world and we'd be no worse off and in fact, in some ways, better off. But the American way of life and philosophy has always been to empower others even at our own expense.

Well said Angelo, while the United States is not perfect, no country is, it has done far more good for the world than bad and we should be commended for being at the forefront of things half the world away such as Tsunami relief efforts.We are there helping and I think the extremist muslim terrorists of the middle east are still planning our destruction while we are there helping people, many of them muslim!Ironic in that it takes a huge disaster where it doesn't discriminate as far as rich or poor, black, white, or other race, for people to show the good side of humanity. The tsunamis were equal opportunity destroyers. Just about everyone is there helping but I doubt Al Qaida even lifted a finger to help because all they know how to do is destroy and blame the U.S. and the west for all of the bad.Massimo, I am moving into a new house in a couple of months, two miles away from my mother's house.La Habra is my hometown. I grew up here and lived here for twenty years, then moved away, but have been back for about six years. I am always driving back and forth to Murrieta and Temecula (next to Murrieta) and back to La Habra but it is time to move closer to some business interests and to be able to look in on mother too.| 2/6/05 04:44:41 PM|Massimo |The city with 300 churches|.US.com|||10|Yes, USA is a really great country. It's the second greatest country in the whole wide world. I'm Italian first, Pisan second, Roman third and Californian fourth in my heart.Unfortunately there is in Italy a diffuse AntiAmericanism ( I don't know exactly how many Italians dislike America, but it's an important percentage). This is really very sad and unfair. In Italy you can still find a lot of Che Guevara's shirts and flags and a lot of idiots buy them. I have always hated comunism and Che Guevara's guts. What a like the most about Silvio Berlusconi's politics is the strengthening of the ties between USA and Italy.Kent, I had never heard about Murrieta and Temecula. Strange names, they don't sound like American cities, they sound like Spanish or maybe even Italian cities. I can't say I know those city like my pockets. There is still a small part of the world which (or that) I don't know.| 2/7/05 01:31:16 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Massimo, Murrieta is a Spanish name as is La Habra. California used to be part of Mexico and before that it was the territory of Spain, so a lot of the cities have Spanish names for example, Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, etc.Temecula, a neighboring city of Murrieta, is on the other hand a native California Indian name of the same language that I have written here a couple of times. Murrieta and Temecula are both about a little more than an hour's drive from where I live now, south of here, halfway to San Diego.Zab Judah looked good in his ninth round knockout of Cory Spinks to win the Welterweight title and although the other major fight on the card, a heavyweight fight between Monte Barret verses Owen Beck was a sloppy affair, Barret pulled out a well deserved knockout win over previously unbeaten Beck, also in the ninth round.| 2/7/05 02:39:17 AM|Noam|same||same|||10|Who would the anti-Americans in France, Germany, England, Italy, et al, want instead as the world's policeman ? The militant clerics in Iran ? The Taliban ? Yeah, right.People forget that Americans lead the world in technical and medicinal advancements. We share our discoveries with everyone, often in the form of donations to third world countries and those in need.Likewise, America is at the forefront of space discoveries, spending huge amounts of money to find the secret to life and civilization. Once again, the discoveries and knowledge gained is shared.If America became isolationist and introspective, the whole world would suffer. No more sharing technology, discoveries, or medicinal advancements. No more helping when natural disasters happen. What would happen to countries like, for example, Australia, if the strong arm of America was not there as a deterrent ? Start worrying about Indonesia you guys down there.Same with Israel, Kuwait, Poland, Ukraine, Taiwan. Better the devil you know.Perhaps the neo-haters and the neo-antis should think a little bit about that. If it wasn't for America, there wouldn't be enough freedom left to allow them to hate and be anti everything. |

Massimo: I think some Italians, other Europeans and citizens of other countries for that matter, resent the U.S. for a lot of reasons---some fair and other reasons that are unfair. Much of it is simple misunderstanding. If only people could talk to people (like we do here) and keep governments out of it, the world would be better off. Like someone else said on a previous post, most people are too busy working, raising their family, enjoying life, to worry about hating. Americans are generally good people, and so are Europeans and others around the globe. I think that most Muslims are the same as I described above---raising families, working hard to have the good things in life and would be happy to live peacefully. The problem is the small minority of lunatics who do nothing but plan ways to destroy anyone who don't share their beliefs. These people are jealous of the lifestyle of Westerners and have never built anything to be proud of----all they can do is destroy what others have worked hard to build and they have no ability to create anything positive.

The Italian comunists not only resent (is it a new word ?) USA, they also resent Italy itself! When the holy Italian soccer team lose they often write on the walls things like "Cheers, Italy has lost" (but often in Italian, not in English). During the 70's, they wanted Italy to be a Brieznev's colony. They also sang in the streets "1, 10, 100 Nassirjya". They just resent (not a new word anymore) anything is good and love anything is bad. I know that Capitalism ain't perfect, but I do think is still way better than comunism or Benito.

Americans are tolerant of everybody. Muhammad Ali is the prime example. The most revered boxer in history, and probably the most famous and loved athlete of all time. And Ali is a Muslim to boot! If we were intolerant to Islam, how did Ali attain that exulted position. Why would we love him so if we have no tolerance ?

As a primarily christian nation it is not unexpected that the Pope is held in high esteem by us. But then again so is the leader of the Buddhist world from Taiwan. (His name has slipped my mind......happy guy always smiling, fat, bald, wears colorful dresses). We also loved Ghandi who was a Hindu.

It's only when they become intolerant of us, or anti-social, or criminal, or a terrorist, that we become intolerant of them.

All the people that hate America turn our own decency against us. They use our decency as a weapon. We have stuff ups sometimes, like Abu Grade prison etc (yes, the spelling is wrong), but our decency always takes over and we have inquiries and court hearings and punish the guilty. And we make laws so it doesn't happen again.

Those who hate us don't do that.

I like America.

I'll add something: Regarding Abu Grabe (spelling?) prison---I don't condone what happened there, but I'll make a couple points:

1) Terrorists are not protected by the rules governing prisoners of war. These terrorists, or suspected terrorists, were not representing a nation, and no nation was standing behind them, and for good reason. Thus, they weren't P.O.W.s.

2) I've seen the pictures of the "atrocities" there, and if you ask me, I saw worse occurrences when some friends tried to join a fraternity. Granted, the pledges volunteered for the humiliating acts of being put on dog leashes and other nonsense. But I'm being serious when I tell you that sorority sisters did more humiliating things to the frat pledges and these guys were subjected to more physical abuse as well, then the terrorists in those photos. That's not an excuse for allowing this type of thing in the future---it's just an observation that maybe videotaping someone's head being cut off and showing it on the internet is a little more repulsive than being put on a dog leash and having a woman in uniform parade you around. Where was all the outrage from the rest of the world when U.S. contractors had their heads cut off? Well, these "humanitarians" were too busy railing on what our soldiers did to the terrorists to make a comment. | 2/7/05 05:33:56 PM|Hulk Hogan|California, obviously|4|||10|I like American too. HULKMANIA rules. Andre' the Midget got his ass whipped. |
2/7/05 07:18:11 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC|renfbera@aol.com|10|Max Schmeling was not only a great prizefighter but as Massimo said, a great human being as well. Let's not forget what he did in the ring, he was truly a great fighter, but also a great man as well. |
2/7/05 07:49:13 PM|Noam|same|same|10|Angelo, I agree entirely with you. You got it word perfect. I also agree with the praise for Max Schmeling. I have not criticism of him whatsoever. He lived in difficult times. |
2/7/05 11:46:57 PM|Gerry|Cleveland|same|8|Probably, this isn't a good time for this, as Goldwater-Mania is again sweeping thru the site. I just wanted to let you know there is a Jerry Quarry group on Yahoo. Paul Maduros is there, as am I. So far, it's not much, but it's there if anyone is interested. No politics, fake names or other unregulated nonsense. Contributions in the way of photos or other materials are welcome.I have a lot of respect for the Quarrys and thought some of you might want to take a look-see... Schmeling was a true champion in many senses of that word, a top 20 all-timer in my book. His kind are rare in any era, he was definitely needed then... No, Massimo, Wilt never bounced. He owned. Wilt's Small World in Harlem once included a waiter who would get arrested and then change his name to Malcolm X. Given the way he broke up fights on the NBA hardwood during his day, literally lifting the likes of Paul Silas, Happy Hairston or Gus Johnson several feet off the floor and placing them down again like boxes away from the scuffling, is proof he could have bounced anywhere. I'm sure many are thankful the owner left that detail to others in his restaurant/bar. Thanks... P.S., I'll take young George over the old one, of course. |
2/8/05 01:10:46 AM|Noam|same|same|10|Goldwater-mania ? No, Gerry, just a differing opinion to yours, but of course that's not allowed. Good riddance. |
2/8/05 02:34:36 AM|Howard C.|Louisville|howardc@louisville|10|Typical of you Gerri. Firstly, you made a political cheap shot ("Goldwater-Mania") and then you say you've found a new site that is free of political cheap shots. Hypocrite, Gerri, hypocrite.And then you say that everyone on the new site uses real e-mail addresses and names. Wow, have you warned them about your propensity for violent threats. Last time you posted before your bitter, teary exit, you were threatening to travel around the country beating up guys with different opinions to yours.You better warn those running the new site that if they don't do exactly as you tell them, Gerri, then you'll leave the site and try and begin a competing one by stealing regular visitors. We still remember you pleading with Carl to take action against posters who didn't agree with you. When Carl wouldn't intervene, you made a tearful exit and now you are trying to sabotage the site. Get back in dunce's corner, you big cry baby. We'll now call it GERRI'S CORNER !|
2/8/05 02:52:52 AM|Massimo|Roma|4||10|Hi Gerry, what a shame that Wilt never bounced ! He was bigger than average, even taller than Muhammad Ali'. He would have been one of the greatest bouncers ever, probably second only to Calvin Lane.|
2/8/05 04:48:00 AM|Mr. America|Somewhere in America|U.S.A.com||10|Why doesn't Gerry like America ? Others were praising America and Gerry comes in with negative comments. Go figure why he hates us so.|
2/8/05 04:58:00 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca|kentallenent@aol.com||10|Gerry, I hope you continue to come here even if some disagree with you about certain things. Personally, I agree with you on some things but don't agree with you on others but there is room for differing opinions here. I also don't think drifting from the topic of boxing is a bad thing and as far as politics go, when we are discussing people such as Muhammad Ali or Max Schmeling, politics of the times are relevant. I also hoped Paul Maduros would come back as he is one of Jerry's biggest fans and a friend of Mr. Jimmy's. Paul is also my friend. So how do you get to the Jerry Quarry Yahoo group? I would like to check it out. Of course, I will always come to this site.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Author</th>
<th>Comment</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2/8/05 05:06:23 AM</td>
<td>Not the Muffinman</td>
<td>Howard, there is no room in the dunce corner because the real Muffinman is hogging the dunce hat and he won't give it up.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2/8/05 01:01:10 PM</td>
<td>Angelo</td>
<td>Washington, DC</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2/8/05 01:59:35 PM</td>
<td>Massimo</td>
<td>Roma</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2/8/05 02:12:03 PM</td>
<td>Howard C.</td>
<td>Louisville</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2/8/05 04:58:06 PM</td>
<td>Angelo</td>
<td>Washington, DC</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2/9/05 03:46:23 AM</td>
<td>Osama</td>
<td>Tora Bora</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2/9/05 09:58:56 AM</td>
<td>Fan</td>
<td>Fandom</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
I believe that an average man who takes care of himself and leads a fairly vigorous life can actually become stronger in his mid to late thirties, and even into his early to mid forties than he was in his twenties. (Please forgive my run on sentences.) This could be even more pronounced in a professional athlete. Very often men fill out in musculature, thicker necks, heavier thighs, calves, forearms, as they mature. They will lose speed and reflexes, and thicken in the waist and hips. However, if thier in training, the thickening of the waist, lower back, and hips could actually be an increase in muscle. I would site as an example the sports of power lifting and olympic lifting. This premise leads me to believe that the older version of Forman might have given Ali a much better fight. Hey Kent and Jimmy D., HOW ABOUT THOSE EAGLES! I can't believe the balance and execution of the Patriots! At least we gave them a better game than the Steelers did. Even though the Steelers spanked us this season.

Yes Steve, the Eagles looked very good in almost winning it all. They have nothing to be ashamed of in losing a close game. I just hope the Eagles fans will not become as frustrated as us Jerry Quarry fans can be and that almost winning the title will be enough for them.

Hey Kent, I've spent my whole life as a sports fan being frustrated and angry as a fan of Jerry Quarry and the Eagles. Now, as an older man, I realize that you have to view sports in their proper perspective, relative to your life. The important thing about Jerry Quarry is that he always gave his heart and soul to his sport. That's all you can do. That makes him a hero in my book! What are your thoughts on my opinion about older athletes sometimes improving with age?

Hey Kent and Angelo, and Gerri, while I agree and disagree with all your different political views, I find them all pretty intelligent and insightful. Oh yes, and Noam sounds like a very intelligent, thoughtfull person. Even with the occasional silly and sometimes nasty comments, I feel no reason to use a false E-mail address. I have enjoyed this site for many years, and I don't believe anyone means any real harm. Not even Koo Koo clock, who has had some pretty astute observations.

Steve - I think men can get stronger when they age up to a point of say, 50, if they keep working out. They need to work a lot harder though, but after 50 it is probably downhill. Reflexes suffer from perhaps age 30 onwards. I remember reading comments by Foreman a year or so ago when he described Lewis as the best heavyweight ever. I don't agree, but that is what Foreman said. George has a habit of making comments off the top of his head sometimes, without really meaning them. Regards e-mail addresses. The fact is there are lunatics out there who do, given the opportunity, play nasty tricks on the computers of others. All they need is a correct e-mail address. It is also a fact that Gerry, when people disagreed with him, threatened to beat them up. He even offered to pay his own air fares to do it. While Gerry losing it like that was very funny (and also a bit sad), it did illustrate the need to be careful because you just don't know who the real lunatics are from the hopelessly ignorant and ludicrously funny ones like Gerry. By the way, on one hand Gerry complains about false names and addresses, and then he posts here under a false name and address (ie. 'Fan').

I think people can get stronger into their 40's, but as pointed out, they lose speed and reflexes. A guy built like Holmes did very well for himself into his 40s---he never let himself get way out of shape---retained some power, did lose speed, but his legs and lower body were strong as ever and his stamina was very good.
off by people posting and responding to themselves, weird topics that relate nothing to boxing. Why would a hardcore fan come here? To read from Richie Cunningham about Shaq's shoe size in Vietnam? I was a friend to James Quarry, and he liked some off-topic stuff, but do you notice the Quarry's don't even come here much anymore. That should tell everyone something.

Fan, why are you frightened to say who you really are? If you are not Gerry, post under your real name. You're doing exactly what you criticize others for. You also criticize the topics discussed. Tell us who you really are so we can assess your contribution to those debates. What boxing topics did you bring up for discussion?

Anyways, the irony of boxing is that of all sports it has more the mix of politics and racism. Jack Johnson couldn't get a title fight because of his colour and then he was chased away because he married a white woman. Then there was Max Schmeling and Hitler, and later Ali and Vietnam. Heavyweight champions were regularly invited to the White House to meet the President. To be invited from other sports you had to be an absolute legend, like Tiger Woods.

Steve - more pros for being an older fighter: stronger physically and mentally, wiser and knows the shortcuts, endure more pain as been there and done that, older guys are more likely to get the sympathy and therefore favours from judges and fight officials, draw bigger gates because longer you been around the more fans you have, older means thicker skin and cuts less easily.

The cons - recover from injuries more slowly, the immediate impact of injuries is more severe, less stamina and durability, reflexes much slower, slower punches, hand/eye co-ordination suffers.

We ain't as stupid as we look Gerri. We know Fan is you. So Fan go stand in Gerri's Corner and I'll tell you when it's time to come out. Off you go.

We ain't as stupid as we look Gerri. We know Fan is you. So Fan go stand in Gerri's Corner and I'll tell you when it's time to come out. Off you go.

Fan is not causing problems here and he is welcome here in my book. It is his opinion that he doesn't think talking about shoe sizes is relevant and he is entitled to that opinion. Just as I think shoe sizes is a funny running joke and I am entitled to my opinion.

I think both views are welcome here.

Who wouldn't pay to know my shoe size? Come on! Is the name FAN any better than Richie Cunningham or Alfredo Delvecchio?

I too think that Fan is welcome and he surely knows a lot about boxing history and Jerry Quarry in particular. But I just don't agree with the last things he said because this should be a bunch (or group) of friends having fun and not a bunch (or group) of bank clerks (dictionary).

Fan is not causing problems here and he is welcome here in my book. It is his opinion that he doesn't think talking about shoe sizes is relevant and he is entitled to that opinion. Just as I think shoe sizes is a funny running joke and I am entitled to my opinion.

I think both views are welcome here.

Mr. Jimmy (James Quarry) liked having a free flowing of ideas and he oppossed censorship on this board and because of this at times, discussions became very heated, In fact much worse than the current tensions.

There have been times when people would post here and say bad things about even his brother Jerry, the reason for this site, and Jimmy would take it in stride by comparing the critics with fans buying tickets to a fight. "If they bought a ticket, than they have the right to boo," he always said.

It is too bad though when people begin fighting a lot on a mesage board. I think the reason the old Joe Frazie's gym site letter section was shut down was because there was too much fighting going on. A lot of the same posters used to go to the Frazier site and here and I miss it. | 2/10/05 08:50:52 AM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com||||10|I said my peace and it's over. Now back to boxing. I always wondered what would have happened if Leotis Martin had been able to continue fighting after beating Liston. He would have been an interesting guy to watch in the early 70's. He probably would have gotten a title shot, or at least a fight against Ali during Ali's trips around the world. Martin wouldn't have lasted against Frazier, but would have measured up quite well against most of the other top guys. I have seen his fight against Ellis. Ellis knocked him down in the first round, but then Martin was starting to come on only to be derailed by a cut eye. I would say Jerry would beat Leotis, but it would be a tough fight for sure. | 2/10/05 11:03:58 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Fan: If Martin ended up a trial horse and they matched an unpolished Foreman against him, what do you think the outcome would be? Could Martin tie Foreman up and force the fight into the middle or later rounds, or would he have been blown out early by Foreman's power? I've never seen much of Martin's fights. | 2/10/05 02:39:07 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com||||10|Martin had a decent chin, but not great. Martin was pretty slick, but not slick like Ali or Young. Against Foreman you had to be really slick or have an incredible chin. Ali had both, Young had the slick. Martin would have a chance to last the distance, but really like Peralta not have enough to beat George even early in George's career. | 2/10/05 02:55:04 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Young had a heart and somewhat strong chin---as evidenced by surviving Round 7 against Foreman. Foreman's attack that round would have taken out most heavyweights, including some great ones. Young stood in and took the punishment, relied on his boxing skills to get him out of immediate danger and actually turned tiger late in the round when Foreman's stamina began to slip. I think it was 75% heart and 25% chin that got Young through that. | 2/10/05 04:10:33 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|I would have to go with a young Foreman over Martin but it would be a tough fight for George. Leotis Martin did take some wallups from Liston and that knockout punch that put Liston down and out was something special. Martin hit harder than Peralta so you never know, George could be hurt so the case could be made for a Martin late round win similar to the Liston fight. I am assuming when we say the young Foreman that it is before he won the title. An in prime Foreman was stronger and he would defeat Martin but because of styles, it would not be a walkover. It is because of styles that Martin would likely lose to the pressure fighting of Joe Frazier but Martin most of the time would do better than Frazier did against Foreman. | 2/10/05 04:22:03 PM|Massimo |Roma||4||||10|I bought a boxing magazine a while ago (I'm not sure, maybe RING MAGAZINE), where Leonida (Leotis)Martin was included among the 100 hardest punchers in BOXING HISTORY. Others heavyweights included were Marciano, Foreman, Shavers, Louis, Max and Buddy Baer, Cleveland Williams, Jersey Joe Walcott, Mike Tyson, Donovan Ruddock, Lennox Lewis, David Tua and Gerry Cooney (maybe I'm forgetting somebody). Hard punchers such as Ken Norton, Jerry Quarry and Ron Lyle were not included. Larry Holmes once said that both Shavers and Cooney could hit harder than Tyson. Leotis Martin was small as a heavyweight but could punch. Where is Evren from England? God save the gracious Queen... | 2/10/05 04:26:17 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|Of course Charles Sonny Liston was included among the 100 hardest hitters of all times. | 2/10/05 04:35:41 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com||||10|I don't usually argue with the ring, but Martin wasn't one of the 100 best HEAVYWEIGHT punchers of all-time. He was no harder hitter than Jerry. | 2/10/05 04:56:30 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|It doesn't... surprise me that Holmes thinks Cooney and Shavers punched harder than Tyson. Iron Mike was a very good KO artist, but for pure hard punching, no one beats Shavers. And Cooney could bang with the best of them—would have been one of the best if he didn't have a few holes in his game. In regards to the hardest hitters: Sam McVey, Sam Langford, and maybe Harry Wills belong in there. McVey was the Mike Tyson of his day: 5'10" and 215 pounds and NOT fat. He never got his shot because he was black but he was one of the toughest men who never won the championship (never even got a shot at it), if not the toughest. JQ hit much harder than Leotis Martin who was a boxer/puncher.

In regards to the hardest hitters: Sam McVey, Sam Langford, and maybe Harry Wills belong in there. McVey was the Mike Tyson of his day: 5'10" and 215 pounds and NOT fat. He never got his shot because he was black but he was one of the toughest men who never won the championship (never even got a shot at it), if not the toughest. JQ hit much harder than Leotis Martin who was a boxer/puncher.

are available on tape the legendary fights between Johnson and McVey, or Mc Vey and Joennette or Jonnette and Langford or Langford and Godfrey. These are all legendary fights and ESPN ought to show us them. I have seen for instance the much more recent 1930 fight between Carnera and Godfrey and, even if it wasn't a good fight, it still was legendary for what it meant in that particular moment, a battle between 2 of the best heavyweight of the time. I long for yesterday.

Remember the Rocky movie where he fought the Russian? They had a machine that could measure punching power. Wouldn't it be great if they could actually determine all the variables that go into punching power in actual ring fighting conditions, and then rate the 10 or 20 greatest punchers of, say the last 100 years? With all due respect to The Ring Magazine, I think it's impossible to rate the 100 greatest punchers of all time. Hey Kent, I'm not trying to blow smoke up your skirt, but lately, you seem to have become the voice of reason on this site. I agree that everyone is entitled to their opinion on this site. Hey Fan, whoever your are, your posts are pretty good and are wellcome.

I think Bonavena hit harder than Leotis Martin.

Interesting observation! I have always wondered about how really hard a heavyweight contender or champion can hit. How much difference is there (or is there) between a left hook from Mike Tyson and a left hook from Massimo Giulio Leonardo Cini? Is Mike Tyson's punch twice as (or more) powerful as (or than) mine? Ten times as (or more) powerful? One hundred times as (or more) powerful? I really don't know, but I guess that 10 times is pretty reasonable. The Luna Parks have machines like that with about 6 different levels for power. The best is named SUPERMAN. I don't doubt that Mike Tyson, Joe Frazier and Jerry Quarry would have scored SUPERMAN, but I wonder what about a middleweight champion or a flyweight champion. I just don't know.

If we had a "Punch-O-Meter" that could accurately measure the impact and gauge the jaw crushing power index, I think that in my lifetime, Earnie Shavers would score the 10. Foreman would be up there too---his punches had better leverage, even though I think Shavers' popped harder on impact.

Years ago, as a twenty two year old 200 pound kid, I was at a cowboy bar that had a pad on a machine that supposedly measured the power of punches. I had a competition with some over 250 pound motorcycle riders (bikers), you know the kind with big beards, tattoo's, and leather or blue jean jackets, and I beat all of them in points. I am not sure what the scale of the points meant but I had the highest score. They couldn't believe how a skinny kid, I may have only weighed 190 come to think of it, and on my frame which carries over 300 pound now, I looked quite light at that weight, but because I studied Japanese traditional karate for four years and also hit the bags and did some sparring with boxers for cross training, I know how to throw a punch.
with karate lingo, a right handed reverse punch, which I adapted it to be more like a boxer's straight right hand, by shortening it from the way karate people throw their punches, so I believe my technique gave me an advantage over their superior strength.I don't know how my punch would have measured up to a real boxer's punch but it was good enough to be better than a few average everyday "yahoos."I do believe me at 190 pounds hit harder than I would now at 300 pounds.

[2/11/05 09:43:20 PM] Gerry | Cleveland | same | 8 | Someone here is saying I'm posting as someone else? Be serious, guys. I have no reason to play those games anywhere. This is the second time I've been here in weeks ... Kent or anyone else interested, you can search long and hard under 'irish jerry quarry at Yahoo' or you can go the easy route, dial up Yahoo, get a free Yahoo ID which is good for a lot of things there, click on Groups, and look under Irish Jerry Quarry. Now, it's not anything as cool as this site, not even close. Just something I decided to start last year when I was looking for JQ pics on the net. Come by if you'd like, or not. Either way, it's there if anyone is interested. I got a lot out of being here and thought it would be a good thing to build. Contributions by way of photos or whatever are welcome. Thanks.

[2/11/05 10:32:45 PM] Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 | There was a guy that used to post here that screamed at people anytime they would say Muhammad Ali wasn't the best. He used to always say Joe Frazier would have been nothing without Ali. Frazier would always be an all-time great no matter the decade. There is nothing better than the all-out aggression of pre-Ali I Joe Frazier. He was never ever the same after that first Ali fight. If he would have retired that night he would be called the greatest heavyweight that ever lived by many. Durham and Futch knew that, but Joe couldn't give it up at the top. So many athletes have that problem.

[2/12/05 07:02:20 AM] Massimo | Roma (means Rome) | 4 | 10 | AngeloIn the last two days I have been watching some of Tommaso Hearns's most exciting fights, in particular those against Marvin Hagler and Ray Leonard (thanks ESPN). Hearns recalls me (of) Lennox Lewis, as they both were so damn wilt, so damn skilled and so damn powerful (Hearns even more than Lewis POUND FOR POUND I think), but both were somehow fragile and couldn't take a great punch. In particular I think that Hearns's legs were very weak. I rate both Hearns and Lewis as GREAT CHAMPIONS, but not ALL TIME GREATS for their WEAKNESS. I think, on the other hand, that both Leonard and Hagler were ALL TIME GREATS. Who do you think was better between Hagler and Leonard?

[2/12/05 10:56:00 AM] Kent | La Habra, Ca | Kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Massimo, Thomas Hearns was at his best when he could pound guys from the outside, avoiding getting hit hard, and there were times when he looked unbeatable in his weight classes. However, you are right, he really couldn't take a punch well and even though he totally dominated Pipino Cuevas when he won his first world title by second round knockout, things may have been different if Cuevas had landed punches first. Cuevas was a tremendous puncher as a welterweight but he never even landed anything solid in taking a beating from Hearns. Hearns used his height advantage to keep Cuevas from getting close enough to do any damage but if Cuevas had landed some of those huge left hooks he had in his arsenal, than Hearns would have been written off as just another talented prospect who had been exposed. The Leonard versus Hearns fights and his fight with Marvin Haglar, fights which defined him, may not have even happened.Hearns did the same thing to Roberto Duran that he had done to Cuevas, he pounded Duran from the outside and he never took any punishment in that fight while scoring an early knockout, something no one else ever did to Duran.But even though Hearns had flaws, I would still rate him as an all time great in the welterweight and Jr. Middleweight divisions because at his best, he would have beaten most of the fighters in those divisions who have ever lived. Hearns also won titles all the way up to the light heavyweight division, an impressive feat.

I have a confession to make: Gerry is not Fan; I am. Sorry guys.

I come on this site often and read a lot of the posts but very rarely do I post. Think the site is great. Being you guys are talking about Hearns and his weight classes I thought something was worth bringing up, being the topic of Jr. Middleweight has come up. I think the most underrated Jr. Middle that never gets talked about was Mike McCallum. Was wondering what you guys think about that?

Fan, you were a good poster, so for you to say you were me I'll take as a compliment. Speaking of compliments, Jerry talked about sparring with Foreman. He said each of his shots felt like anything he had felt in a ring. That's a ringing endorsement indeed. Where's Evren?

Sean, Mike McCallum was a very good fighter who won titles from Jr. middleweight to light heavyweight. He beat a lot of good fighters but he is not quite as well known as Sugar Ray Leonard, Hearns, or Marvin Haglar as he came around slightly after their primes but none of them fought him when he was coming up, likely too dangerous of a prospect and not enough money to take the chance.

Forrest Ward, Gerry and Fan might be all the same person. Seems to me that Gerry is trying to sabotage this site because he has started his own. Amazing what some guys do when they don't get there own way. Gerry keeps coming back here trying to steal posters. Way to go Gerry. With Quarry fans like you Gerry who needs enemies. Sad.

Hey, Fan, your devotion to Frazier is admirable, but saying that he would have been regarded as the best heavy that ever fought had he not entered the ring again after the first Ali fight is, well, full moon territory. Look at Joe's record before and after the first Ali fight. Joe liked to avoid challenges and fight 'hand picks'. He also had a lot of luck. Joe was very lucky that Ali was stripped of his title. But he was then too tentative to take advantage of that luck by refusing to enter the WBA elimination tournament for the title. Eight other guys were prepared to enter, they didn't mind at all, yet Joe preferred to stay home with his feet up. Until then Joe had by and large fought ordinary guys. There were no ex or future champions among them and he was lucky to survive the Bonavena fight. Hardly 'greatest ever' stuff to be knocked down twice by Oscar. Yes, I know that Joe beat Quarry (a wonderful gutsy fighter, a true legend, but a lot of other guys beat Jerry, too, and their fans don't pretend that he is the greatest). Joe beat Ellis for the title. So what. Would you have backed Ellis against Marciano or Louis or Liston? You'd lose your trailer if you did. And, anyways, Ellis would never have been the champion had Ali not been stripped of his title. Yes, I know, Joe beat Foster. Big deal. Foster's was a light heavy, albeit a very great one. Joe then beat Ali in fight one. A tremendous effort. Truly fantastic. But would he have beaten an Ali who hadn't been off the scene for three years? A resounding "no" from the majority of the boxing community. No, no, no, and NO (is the chorus of the wise and the knowledgable!). By that stage who had Joe really beaten? A light heavyweight (Foster) and a ring rusty heavyweight (Ali). Hall of famer stuff at that point, Fan? Gimme a break. And what happened after the Ali fight? His career is pock marked more by who he ducked instead of who he actually fought. He fought exhibitions against nobodies, hardly fought at all, could only get himself up for fights on hate motivation against Ali before finally quitting (with bravery) in his corner, got humiliatingly slaughtered by Foreman twice, pointlessly recycled opponents he'd already flogged, and fought a draw with someone called Cummings. Jumbo was a household name, wasn't he?
And I still haven't got to the issue of all the real hard punchers that he refused to fight. Okay, I'll be fair. Yes, I know. He didn't fight Norton because they were great buddies and had too much affection for each other. Yes, I know Joe says that there was more money in fights against Daniels and other nobodies than there was against big names like Lyle and Shavers and Norton and guys who could really bang. And, yeah, sure, there are guys out there who believe this crap (the same imbeciles who think that money fairies live at the bottom of gardens). Fan, don't let it only be me spoiling your allusion about wonderful old Joe. Cast a critical eye over Frazier's career and maybe sense might start leaking from your mouth. (Notice I stuck to boxing and didn't say anything about the caliber of female opponents loveable old Joe also fought.)

I think it's not big deal that Frazier didn't fight in the WBA tournament because after he won the WBC title by beating Buster Mathis (a guy who had whipped him twice as an amateur) he defended it against Quarry and Bonavena (probably the 2 most dangerous fighters in the tournament and defeated them clearly). I just can't see Mildenberger, Spencer, Patterson or Martin whipping Joe. But like Lyle and Shavers would have been dangerous for Joe though but they would have been dangerous for any human being that(or who) ever lived, Carnera included.

Kent: Esteban DeJesus --- knocked Duran down early in their fights. Didn't he beat Duran? Frazier: As said before, he did duck some of the meanest and strongest punchers of the early-mid 70's.

Fan, if this site is so bad, then why do you keep visiting? Why are you continually taking cheap shots if you really want to only debate boxing? Seems to me you're trying to provoke trouble here to justify your criticisms of this site so others will join you at Gerri's renegade one. It's called 'poaching'. Anyway, if the WBA tournament was full of stiffs that Smokin' Joe would thrash, then why didn't he thrash them one after the other? Clay would have. It would have been easy for Joe, right? And tell me, Fan, why didn't Joe fight Norton and Lyle and Shavers? Was it truthful for Frazier to say that there was more money in fighting stiffs like Daniels or having rematches with Ellis and Bonavena?

Would Frazier have beaten Louis, Marciano, Liston, Holmes, Tyson, or Lewis? I predict that all these guys would have stopped quite easily the Joe that existed before the first Ali fight, and beaten ridiculously easily the shell of Joe that remained after he fought Ali the first time. That is not to say that Joe doesn't have his place in boxing folklore. His trilogy against Ali provided boxing with some of its most memorable moments, but Joe's efforts were fueled by hate, not pure ability. Take away Joe's famous left hook and what remained? Not much, really. A lot of simmering hatred and bitterness and excuses for failures (and denials that he bashed women) and that's about it.

Ever seen Joe happy and free of resentment. I haven't. Foreman extinguished any pretense about Joe being up there with the very best. Joe should have ducked Joe like he avoided Lyle and Norton and perhaps My view is that Joe's legend only exists because the haters of Clay early in his career were desperate for someone to beat the loudmouth and the braggart. The haters hitched their wagons to Joe and he gave them one moment of glory. His legend lived on even though there were more lowlights than highlights from that point on.

The best thing that ever happened to Frazier was Ali. Take Ali out of Joe's resume and there isn't enough left for the vultures to peck at.

Hey Angelo, Yes indeed, Jimmy Young must have had a lot of heart and a large proportion of self confidence and courage, to fight anyone from the 70's era. He reminds me of Chris Byrd. Very elusive, very little offence. I personally would be afraid to go into the ring knowing I couldn't beat a guy physically. In defence of Frazier and his management, maybe his team was a little more cautious than Quarry's. However, in the long run, I think a smart management team will realize that a particular fighter, (because of his style), only has X amount of fights in him. I believe it is smarter to let opponents pick each other off first. Then fight the weaker of the two. I believe that Frazier would have eventually beaten Lyle, and Norton, had he been forced to. If Lyle couldn't hold off Quarry, how would he have kept Frazier off? If Shavers couldn't keep Quarry off, how would he have been able to nail Frazier, who was much harder to hit solidly than was Quarry, and probably took a punch at least as well as Quarry?

First of all, Billy Daniels wasn't a stiff at all (I guess it means bum or something similar). Billy did beat the hard punching Mike De John, Doug Jones and was ahead against Clay in 1962 when the fight was stopped for cuts. I have seen a synthesis of the Daniels-Clay fight and Billy was more than holding his own. I think that prime vs prime Frazier would have beaten Tyson and Holmes. Holmes would have not been powerful enough to keep Frazier away and that chump, Tyson, would have quit in his corner after 6 or 7 rounds. Put Tyson in Manilla against Ali! On that night and Muhammad would have beaten the s out of him. At least Joe Frazier had gs enough for stepping into the ring with Foreman twice. Mike Tyson in the early 90's couldn't do the same, not even once.

Besides that, I think if a guy is brave enough to fight George Foreman a second time and with serious eyes problem, after that kind of beating he took the first time, I think he is brave enough to fight anyone in the world, but maybe Calvin Lane.

I disagree on both counts. I think Tyson takes Frazier 3 times out of 4 just by bombing him early and often. If Smokin' Joe survives the early onslaught, he has a chance, but my guess is that Tyson's fast and hard punches land Frazier on his back a few times and the fight is stopped, ala Foreman.

Tyson wasn't tall like Foreman, but big like a pit bull—stocky and solid. Frazier might get intimidated and clocked a few times. As for Holmes, I say no way an in-prime Frazier beats an in-prime Holmes, at least not most of the time. Holmes would jab Frazier to death and pile up points. By the way, if Holmes could get up after being floored by Shavers, then he'd also get up from Frazier's left hook—or not go down in the first place. You know Shavers—along with Lyle, two guys Frazier was petrified to be in the same city with.
I go back and forth on Tyson-Frazier. Sometimes, I think Frazier would punk Tyson just on sheer guts, but other times, I think styles make fights and Frazier slow starts coupled with Tyson flying out of the gates early would get Joe in a lot of early trouble.

If Tyson was so devastating, why didn't he manage to hurt Holyfield, not even once, in their 1996 fight? I do think that a good part of Mike Tyson's legend died that very night. Yes Mike destroyed Marvis Frazier in 30s in 1986, but I do believe that Joe was a little better than Marvis.

If Tyson was so devastating, why didn't he manage to hurt Holyfield, not even once, in their 1996 fight? I do think that a good part of Mike Tyson's legend died that very night. Yes Mike destroyed Marvis Frazier in 30s in 1986, but I do believe that Joe was a little better than Marvis.

Fan, I've never heard anyone describe Joe Frazier as the greatest heavyweight ever. No one sane, anyway.

The premise, as you put it, for my post was to respond to your assertion that had Joe retired after Ali 1 then many would have considered him the greatest ever. I argued to the contrary. By the way, I'm not arguing that Frazier wouldn't have beaten Norton, Lyle, and Shavers. I'm arguing that he deliberately ducked them. He did so because he was very damaged goods. After Ali 1 he was fragile and he knew it. Hence, Joe only wanted the 'super fights' without facing dangerous bangers in the lead-ups.

Wouldn't it be better Fan if you identified yourself? You say you used to visit here a lot so others who have been here longer than me would know you. Perhaps you don't want to identify yourself because you have a bad name or it may be you are ashamed of something.

I think you are Gerri.

Hi Kent

Frazier says in his book that he didn't fight Norton because there was no money for it. That was the reason he gave. Of course, it's nonsense. Was there more money fighting Daniels or beating up on guys he'd already defeated (Quarry and Ellis)?

Also, if Frazier was a confident former champion, the type that thinks of himself as elite and one of the greatest ever, then he would have fought Norton, Lyle, Shavers, and everyone else he ducked. Ali fought the best, the next best, and then the next next best, and so on. He ducked nobody. He fought 'em all. Regardless of your affection for Frazier, which I respect, his resume is stained by the fights he didn't have.

Would Frazier have won the below fights Kent: Louis, Marciano, Liston, Holmes, Tyson, Lewis.

Perhaps he'd stand a chance on his very best night if any of the above had their very worst nights. And then we have the fact that Ali beat him 2 from 3 (stopping him in the final bout) and Foreman destroyed him twice like Joe was.
a hopeless novice. Frazier's resume has too many big holes to be accepted in the same league as Louis, Marciano, and Ali.

To be honest, Joe was lucky that a mistake by the referee prevented him being ko'd by Ali in the second fight. Without the ref's error, Ali would have stopped Joe twice. Frazier had already recovered and was not in big trouble anymore when the referee separated the two fighters in the second round of their second fight. Ali wouldn't have stopped Frazier, Joe was punching back, he was not helpless. Years later I heard Ali admitting that he was not going to stop Frazier and Ali has never been a humble guy. Frazier would have been favored (or the favored one) against Earnie Shavers. Don't forget that Ron Stander knocked Shavers out, while Frazier did beat Stander. THE SECOND ALI-FRAZIER fight was VERY VERY CLOSE, IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN SCORED A DRAW, IF ALI' WON, IT WAS BY 1 POINT. THE THIRD FIGHT WAS A MASSACRE FOR BOTH FIGHTERS WITH ALI' PROBABLY 1 or al massimo 2 POINTS AHEAD AFTER 14 ROUNDS.

The Ron Stander point doesn't hold water. Foreman blew out Norton and Ali KOed Foreman---but that didn't mean that Ali would walk over Norton. Shavers raw punching power was a challenge for any heavy to withstand. If Frazier mixed it up with Shavers, I believe Shavers would win by early knockout. As for Lyle, I think he could beat Frazier the way that Foreman did----not quite as easily, but he could get it done. No doubt Frazier beat some good fighters, including Ali and Quarry, but his career maker was Ali I. Without that, he'd be just another good fighter. Beating Ali and especially knocking him down is what made his legend. Kent: You make valid points about why Frazier wasn't matched against some of the guys I mentioned, but it's all too convenient. I could see not fighting ALL of them, but come on, not fighting ANY of them??? There's a reason, or an excuse, for it "never happening" against a bunch of dangerous 70's fighters that Frazier never stepped in with. I believe that staying out of that tournament was a precursor of things to come. Frazier didn't have a stellar group of title defenses, did beat Ali, was destroyed by Foreman, then seemed to save himself by cherry picking his fights. Sure, if you can do what he did, why not? But the way he was deposed by Foreman, then losing the rematch to Ali---he wasn't so marquis anymore. At that point, a former champ has to prove himself again. Instead, he bided time and fought people he had already been in with instead of looking elsewhere. You've pointed out that taking on Quarry again was courageous because Quarry beat Lyle and Shavers. But by '75, Lyle was fighting Ali for the title. These guys won some, lost some, but all seemed to fight each other at some point, except for Joe. Come on, Ali, Lyle, Shavers, Norton, Foreman---most of these guys faced one another at some point, except Joe was very cautious compared to the others. Hey, I'm a Pennsylvania native and loved the Philly fight scene and Frazier was a stud back in the day. And by the way, Marvis was soundly beaten by Tyson and Holmes, but Marvis could fight. Frazier was a top heavy of his time---but surely, he's not in the top five ever.

I think that Frazier until 1975 was a great fighter not far behind his 1971 version. In 1974 he fought a great fight against Ali' where he won many rounds and costrinse Ali' to hold him very often throughout the entire fight, then he did beat Jerry Quarry. In 1975 Joe was part of the greatest heavyweight fight of all time. At that time he was not anymore the fighter he used to be, his weight was 215 instead of 203 and his eyes were deteriorated, but I think he was still one hell of a fighter. However, I agree with you that Frazier couldn't take a punch as well as Ali' or Chuvalo, but still I believe that he had a top heavyweight chin. I have both Ali' and Foreman above Frazier in the heavyweight history, but I think Joe Frazier is a top tenner. I'm not that sure that Joe Louis would have beaten him. Louis had trouble against Billy Conn, Tommy Farr... and Tony Galento! I love his 1970 fight against Ellis. What a fight it was!

Some of you guys miss the point that Shavers and Lyle didn't establish themselves as bone fide contenders until 1975 and later and Frazier was more or less out of the scene in 1975 after his one last big fight against Ali. He tried his one last hurrah, his ill-fated second fight with Foreman, hardly taking it easy by doing this but I think everyone agrees Frazier was no longer a factor by that point, the point when he would have had to face Shavers and Lyle, who had emerged. The fact that Frazier fought someone like Stander is champions get a couple of token defenses and Frazier didn't expect to lose his title so soon. I also would like to point out that Stander actually had a win over Shavers and I don't believe Shavers in the period of 1975 and after would have ever lost to Stander but the pre-1975 Shavers did lose to him. So why would Shavers early in his career have deserved to fight Frazier in a title elimination fight if at that point he couldn't even beat a token title challenger? Lyle, before the Quarry fight, did have a couple of good wins over decent fighters like Buster Mathis and Larry Middleton but he too had bigger wins over Bonevena, Ellis, Shavers, Bugner, his good showing against Ali for the title, and his magnificent brawl in a loss to Foreman in the period after Frazier was no longer a factor. The key is timing and by 1974 Frazier was only obligated to face the best fighter available and that was Jerry Quarry who had beaten both Lyle and Shavers. Again! both of these fighters lost the chance for a title elimination fight with Frazier and Quarry earned it by beating both of them! It is all about when things happened and this is why I don't believe Frazier avoided these fighters.

Fair enough—we might agree to disagree. As I said, your points about timing are legitimate, but I've never bought into the theory of having to "prove yourself" to take on a former champion. In fact, former champions have to prove THEMSELVES, if they're looking to get back to the title. Kent, based on your idea that guys like Shavers and Lyle didn't "earn" the right to fight FORMER CHAMPION Frazier, then Muhammad Ali shouldn't have ever fought Ken Norton. What exactly did Norton do to "deserve" a shot at former champion Ali? Norton was a big, muscular guy who was dangerous, but he hadn't consistently beaten top fighters. Still, as a former champion, Ali was fighting his way back and taking all comers. He took on Norton and had his jaw broken, lost, and then had to fight Frazier, Norton again, and others. Again, it seems as though Joe was walking on eggshells, not staying active, not taking on everyone he could have and should have. It was so fortunate for Frazier that Quarry took out Shavers—as he had already beaten Quarry and had the style to beat him again. Lucky Joe. As for Lyle: Quarry beat him, but enough time had elapsed that Frazier COULD have taken a Lyle fight. Of course, he could have also taken a Norton fight, but we know that he had his reasons for not doing so. My point is that he had reasons for staying out of the tournament in the 60's and then had reasons for staying out of the ring against some big bruisers five years later. Yes Massimo, he probably ranks Top Ten, or very close. He doesn't come near the top five and I believe Joe Louis accomplished a lot more.

When Ali' fought Norton the first time he just didn't know that Kenny was dangerous. Ken was a bum in his book, at the time. In fact, Ali' trained very poorly for the first Norton fight. Ken Norton is a top 20 heavyweight in my book (different from Ali's book). pound body builder type who could pose problems. If anything, Shavers and Lyle had done more to deserve getting into the ring with Frazier than Norton did to match up with Ali. The whole discussion revolves around the fact that some of us here view Frazier as having taken a pass on fighting often and fighting threatening competitors.

On the topic of Norton being Top 20, I think that might be a bit of a reach, but he was pretty damn good. One some nights, he looked less than average (KO losses to Foreman and Shavers---and I won't even count Cooney) but other nights, he looked all-world (decision losses to Holmes, Ali II, & III.) and he certainly looked great in his decision win over Ali and destructive KO of Bobick. His loss to Holmes made me a real believer that Norton was championship caliber, had heart and belongs in the class of 70's superstars. His win over Jimmy Young showed that he could take care of business against a very strong opponent. Going into that fight, Young was on a tear, having beaten Lyle and Foreman among others. The fight was about even in my book, but Norton showed a lot to accomplish that and get the decision. Top 20? I'm not sure. He's right alongside Jerry Quarry being at or near the top 25.

Norton was not able to adapt his style to deal with bangers. He was great against anyone that didn't pack a huge punch, but when he reached the level of all-time great punchers he was dazed by a single shot. He could absorb many, many blows as long as they weren't hellacious bombs like Foreman and Shavers threw. Norton would have had a terrible time with Lyle, but would always give any guy that didn't pack a huge wallop fits. Liston knocks Norton out in 1 or 2. However Norton is only a slight underdog against Pre-Exile Ali and even-up against post-exile Ali. It's what makes boxing great.

The only Top 10 I'd have Frazier in is the Top 10 Humiliations of All Time. Foreman's two demolitions of Joe are in THAT Top 10. Look, no guy beaten that badly TWICE can be in the Top 10 of all time for ability. No way. Take Ali out of his resume and Joe really didn't beat much at all. You can also have all the excuses in the world, but there were fighters that Joe should have fought that he never did. The fact that these fighters were all dangerous bangers (the type Joe realised he was vulnerable to after the Foreman debacle) is more than a coincidence. He was deliberately avoiding big hitters. If Joe wanted to fight those guys, he would have. Ali made time for everyone. And Ali never did take it easy after he won the title. He fought the best, the next best, and the next next best. None of this 'I'll take it easy with a few stiffs' like Joe did against Daniels and Stander. In 1973 Joe only had two fights (Foreman and Bugner). He only had two fights in 1974 (Ali and Quarry). For 1975 he only had two fights (Ellis and Ali). In three years he had six fights - one every six months. Ali, who is older than Joe, had 10 fights in that same period - one every 3.6 months. In that period Ali found time to fight Norton and Lyle. Joe had a much less crowded agenda, but he didn't fight them. He fought Ellis and Quarry for the second time, knowing full well that he'd beaten them easily years earlier. That was the reason he took those fights. Frazier wasn't a risk taker. He wasn't a frontiersman. He didn't look for new horizons. And as such he isn't a Top 10'er of all time. By the way, notice how no one ever needs to make excuses for the career of Muhammad Ali. His career stands by itself. Well, guys, Joe Frazier's career is built on excuses. Deep down, you all know it.

Frazier beat during his career Bonavena 2X, Machen, Doug Jones, Chuvalo, Mathis, Quarry 2X, Ellis 2X, Foster, Ali, Bugner. Ali was better, but Joe was great as well. Shavers wasn't regarded as much more then a club fighter until he beat Ellis. Then Quarry took him out. Shavers was a ranked contender in '73 briefly then '76-'79. Joe was done by ’76 and in ’73 Quarry took him out in one round. Why didn't Ali fight Shavers in ’73? Because Shavers was viewed as a non-entity. Frazier could have fought Lyle, but he lost to Quarry. So Joe fought Quarry. It makes perfect sense that Joe doesn't fight either. At least to those of us that remember when it came down. Seems like Joe Frazier has to be defended here against an Ali fan about every year or so. Par for the course.

Howard....while true that Ali's career stands on its own without need for exaggeration or explanation, I think it untrue to say that Frazier's legend is BUILT on excuses. Frazier did enough to be considered significant in his own right. However, his legend is embellished by Ali-haters (perhaps like Fan or Gerry or Forest) who were desperate to see Ali get beaten for his controversial views that ran opposite to mainstream white America at that time. It is more true to state that the legend of Frazier is GLUED together by excuses. His career needs excuses to survive critical scrutiny. There are too many gaps in Joe's resume for Joe to be considered a great and his prime was probably the briefest of any fighter arguing for acceptance as an elite.

Ali beat him and then stopped him. Foreman thrashed him effortlessly twice. Even poor old Oscar came close. Louis would have stopped him on sheer power. Marciano's right hand would have knocked him silly. Frazier was very vulnerable early when Tyson was at his deadliest, so Tyson knocks him out round 2. Holmes would have jabbed him around the ring winning an easy decision. And Lewis would have been too big and too strong for the shortish Frazier with the short reach.

That's my opinion, anyway, Fan (or Gerry or Forest or whoever you are), and it's as valid as yours. By the way, Fan, first of all you criticized us here for discussing subjects away from boxing. So we stopped that to please you. But now you criticize us for talking about Frazier. Give us a break, Fan. What game are you playing? Is it your agenda to sabotage this site so that others begin visiting Gerry's new one? Evidently that is what you are trying to do.

Some fan you are of the Quarrys. Everyone's opinion is as valid as mine. To say I am an Ali basher is absurd, terribly absurd. I have never discredited anything about Muhammad Ali and hold him incredibly high regard. The idea that I was an Ali basher Noam? Where did you get the idea I was an Ali basher Noam?

I agree with the posters who placed Frazier in the top 10 or 15. Angelo, as you stated, the whole discussion revolves around opinions on Ali's, and Frazier's place on the all time greatest list. I don't dispute the fact that Ali was a more complete fighter than Frazier. My point is that Frazier was the recipient of very very good management, and a very different type of fighter than Ali. Timing is everything! If Frazier had met Lyle or Shavers in his prime years, he would have walked them down. Much as Quarry did.
prove something to himself (Balboa did the same when fought Clubber Lang the second time). And I think his second loss to Foreman was dignified, he did pretty well in rounds 2 and 4. If Ali' had a better chin than Frazier, Joe was a better puncher than Ali'. If we are criticizing Frazier, what should we say about Tyson? He fought once a year or even less for most of his career and when he came back, he did step into the ring with the likes of Peter McNeeley, Bruce Seldon, Julius Francis, Lou "Brave" Savarese and Clifford "The Warrior" Etienne. Joe Frazier was involved in so many exciting fights and I, as a boxing fan, am very thankful. |

2/16/05 02:28:11 AM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|I can't agree, Massimo and Steve. Frazier spaced his fights and avoided the bangers that he didn't have to fight. Anyway, some allege that Joe has some of his toughest fights out of the ring against women. The fact that an allegation like that was even made is sad. |

2/16/05 03:27:29 AM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Howard C.-I was only (or just) talking about Frazier as a fighter in the ring. I think Joe Frazier fought some good bangers, Bonavena, Mel Turnbow, Quarry and Chuvalo were all good bangers, even if they weren't all time greats for punching power.When a guy is accused of having done something, at 90% he is guilty. This is what I think and what I learnt during my life. If somebody accuses an innocent, very often the innocent can bring on the table hundreds of proofs of his innocence. Nobody ever accused Mother Theresa of (or for) something. I agree about that, it is very sad that Frazier is, at 90%, a women beater. |

2/16/05 03:33:24 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallen@aol.com|||10|I think some of the people here may have been too young to remember the 70s period well. It is why some of them think Frazier avoided Lyle and Shavers.That he avoided them is like saying, if Lennox Lewis makes a comeback nowadays, that he would have to fight someone like Samuel Peter, a young powerful up and coming but unproven slugger, before he could get a shot at Vitali Klitschko. Lewis being a former champion would get the luxury of even if he had to have a fight to get a shot at the title in a comeback to only have to fight the very top rated contender. He would not have to work his way back up again. Lewis might even not have to face a contender first. As I said, ex champions have a privileged position they earned by winning the title. Lyle and Shavers, before 1975, were considered like Peter is now as having potential but below the upper level of the division. We as fans didn't think they deserved to fight Frazier for a title shot and they are much better known now than they were then and also Joe, as an ex champion, should just have to fight the top available contender, Quarry, to get a shot, which he did. Nobody today would say that Lewis, even if at times he has shown a chin that is not the best, would have to face Peter to get a shot. |

2/16/05 04:25:38 AM|Noam|same||same||10|My view is that if someone isn't charged with something, then they are entitled to a presumption that they are innocent. It troubles me that an allegation about bashing a woman was made against Frazier, but he wasn't charged with it. So we should move on from that.

Something else. Frazier is around 60 years of age. To my knowledge, he's never been convicted of anything. He's certainly not a thief. I've never heard of him being involved in road rage. Joe hasn't been to jail for rape or even accused of it (unlike Tyson). Although I firmly believe that Frazier is overrated as a boxer, and while I disagree with his comments about Ali, I know of no stains against him as a human being. In fact, if we had a world full of guys like Frazier (and Ali and Lewis and Louis and Holyfield - but not Liston and Tyson) we wouldn't need police forces or armies. That's makes Joe a good guy in a world full of very bad ones. I've slung off at Joe for the bashing allegation from the woman, but I shouldn't have and I won't do that again. Some interesting facts. These are the winning statistics for fighters we often talk about:1) Marciano, 100%2) Louis,
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Rank</th>
<th>Boxer</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>Foreman</td>
<td>95.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Lewis</td>
<td>93.8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>Liston</td>
<td>92.5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>Holmes</td>
<td>91.9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>Ali</td>
<td>91.8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>Sullivan</td>
<td>91.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>Tyson</td>
<td>87.7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>Frazier</td>
<td>86.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>Sullivan</td>
<td>91.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10</td>
<td>Ali</td>
<td>91.8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Sullivan</td>
<td>91.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Lewis</td>
<td>91.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Liston</td>
<td>92.5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Holmes</td>
<td>91.9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Ali</td>
<td>91.8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Sullivan</td>
<td>91.0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

To fit Joe in at no. 10 I have had to ignore the records of others, including M. Spinks, 96.8% M. Bowe, 95% Bruno, 88.8% Carneros, 85.4% Baer, 84.3% by the above comparisons, statistics don't support the view that Frazier was one of the very best of all time. He was very good, but not near the greatest. Statistics also tell a story about the number of fights he had compared to others.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Rank</th>
<th>Boxer</th>
<th>Number of Fights</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>Foreman</td>
<td>81</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Holmes</td>
<td>72</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>Louis</td>
<td>66</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>Ali</td>
<td>61</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>Tyson</td>
<td>57</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>Liston</td>
<td>54</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>Marciano</td>
<td>49</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>Sullivan</td>
<td>45</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>Lewis</td>
<td>44</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10</td>
<td>Frazier</td>
<td>37</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

To fit Frazier into this list, I ignored the below:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Boxer</th>
<th>Number of Fights</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Carneros</td>
<td>103</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baer</td>
<td>83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bruno</td>
<td>45</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bowe</td>
<td>42</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Marciano averaged 4.9 fights each of the years he fought. Ali averaged 3.3 over 19 years. Frazier is way down the list averaging 2.8 annually.

Before you tell me, I know statistics aren't the be all and end all, but that they are useful comparison tool. If we respect the statistics, Marciano was probably the greatest.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Time</th>
<th>Location</th>
<th>Email</th>
<th>Nickname</th>
<th>Message</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2/16/05</td>
<td>10:42:43</td>
<td>Washington, DC</td>
<td>funktron@yahoo.com</td>
<td>Angelo</td>
<td>I think your analogy is lacking. Lewis is a retired champion. Frazier was a guy who had his head taken off by Foreman and then lost to Ali. So if Lewis were to come back, I'd say, yeah, let the former champ take a tune-up against whoever he wants to, including Cyndi Lauper. Then he gets his title shot. But Frazier was a dethroned champion who was disgraced by being knocked around the ring and put on the ground six times in less than six minutes by Foreman. Then he lost his rematch against Ali when neither of them were Champions. Yes, this guy should have had to fight his way back by taking on up and coming talent---sure, someone like Samuel Peter's equivalent in the mid-70's, whoever that would have been. As for Tyson, I've never said he's an all time great. He never fought enough once he became Champion. Too inactive throughout the 90's, to the present. On any given night, his power could take out any heavyweight. So if we match up &quot;in prime&quot; Tyson with some of the all time greats, I could see him winning. But his career was way too spotty to be considered in the same sentence with Louis, Marciano, Ali, etc.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2/16/05</td>
<td>01:08:45</td>
<td>La Habra, Ca</td>
<td>kentallenent@aol.com</td>
<td>Kent</td>
<td>Frazier was not disgraced by being knocked out by Foreman. He was badly hurt early in the fight and he never recovered. In fact Frazier showed the heart of a lion by getting up and trying to fight back, no matter how ineffectively. He was out on his feet after the second knockdown and the only disgrace were the referee and his corner for not stopping the fight, at least after the third knockdown in that first round. That they let the fight continue into the second round for three more knockdowns was senseless no fight, even for the heavyweight title, is worth dying for and Joe &quot;The Lionhearted&quot; would have died before admitting defeat. The fact that Frazier won the superfight for the title with the greatest of all time put him in a vaulted position that no one else can take away from him. Lewis, although he beat some excellent fighters never accomplished such a feat. Both he and Frazier were elite nevertheless and they deserve to be honored as such. Joe's career was winding down by the mid 1970s but he took on on comers in his prime, defeating Ali, Quarry, Ellis, Mathis, B. Foster, Chuvalo, Machean, and Bonevena. He did take on all comers during that period and if Lyle and Shavers had been viable contenders like they were 1975 and after, in the period of 1966 to 1972, and Joe wouldn't fight them, then I would say he was avoiding them, but as it was, their period near the top of the division came after Joe's period. I know no one has brought it up but saying praises for Frazier is by no means taking away from his nemesis Ali's legacy as Ali is the greatest of all time in the heavyweight division. We can praise both Ali and Frazier at the same time. As far as Frazier allegedly assaulting women, I don't know for sure one way or the other if it's true or not but as someone pointed out, in the United States, presumption of innocence</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
prevails so I lean towards that it didn't happen.

Doug Jones hit and stunned Clay in 1963 in the first round. Maybe Diego Jones is underrated as a puncher. Clay's win was well deserved, but still Jones gave him one hell of a fight. Joe Frazier knocked Jones out in 1967.

You're correct that losing to Foreman was not a disgrace, and Frazier gave it his best shot——no shame in that. I'm wrong for characterizing it as a disgrace, though it was a one-sided beating by a challenger who most didn't think would win. I do stand by my belief that Ali made Frazier and Norton. Ali is a combined 4-2 against these guys—all pretty close fights——yet in my opinion, Frazier and Norton would never be household names if not for Ali. Wins and losses against Ali gave these two most of their fame. If you eliminate these six fights, Norton and Frazier would have been good heavyweights: Frazier a decent champion and Norton a great opponent——both slapped by Foreman. Also, without Ali in the picture, maybe Frazier and Norton would have had to face guys like Lyle and Shavers earlier and it's my opinion that there would be a few losses there for Frazier and Norton. But hats off to Joe——he was a courageous champ who pulled off the win over Ali and was the loser in Manilla——still the alltime best heavyweight title fight for my money. Norton? His loss to Holmes was one of the top 5 greatest heavyweight title fights. Many believe that Jimmy Young was rooked in the split decision loss to Norton. If it were Young who advanced to be named Champion, to defend against Holmes (who beat Shavers in the ABC televised 12 round eliminator), who knows?? Young as Champion might have successfully defended against Holmes——history would sure be different if that happened.

How come when we get to debating boxing issues and no one takes offense to the disagreements but gives his opinion and takes differing views respectful, that the knuckleheads, ie, Koo Koo Clock, Looney Tunes, Foolface, The Muffinman, or any other clowns of the like don't show up here?

Could it be that most of the time, these folks won't or can't debate boxing issues on a boxing site?

Also, whatever happened to that Dr. Patterson who showed up here and made some challenging statements about banning boxing but never showed up again to defend his positions after some of us responded to his challenge?

Hey Howard C., I agree that any professional fighter who assaults a woman, child, or any civilian is not an acceptable member of society. However, the allegations against Joe Frazier have no bearing on his accomplishments in the ring. Many fighters have fallen into alcoholism or mental instability after their careers are over. That's sort of what this site is about. After a lifetime of training and trying to destroy your opponents, a form of P.T.S.D. probably sets in.

Prosecutors in Philadelphia dropped assault charges against former heavyweight boxing champion Joe Frazier on Tuesday after the alleged victim refused to Frazier, 60, was arrested after a domestic dispute in February and charged with assaulting the mother of his 12-year-old son. The case was scheduled to go to trial Tuesday, but prosecutors said there was no way to proceed without testimony from the woman.

How about Two Ton Tony Galento? You must be proud that he knocked Joe Louis down! I think Two Ton Tony would have handled Butterbean without too much trouble.

Both Sam Langford and Two Tons Galento were hardly human beings. I will discuss about Galento first. Where did we ever see a guy that andre' (it's Illinois slang for short, fat or both SHORT AND FAT at the same time)and that dangerous. Galento not only knocked The Brown Bomber on his very ass but he did beat Lou Nova and other excellent fighters. I didn't know he was an American of Italian origins. Now that I think about it, it's true, Galento sounds Italian. I'm personally an Italian of Italian origins! They call us Italo-Italians. Do you know that the legendary Giosue' Carducci (1835-1907), a Nobel Award 1906 for Literature, was my gran-gran...grandfather. Oh yeah, there are gocce of his blood in my own blood. Who cares? I certainly do. And now it's time...SAM LANGFORD! A while ago I said that Johnson did beat him easily. I have recently found out on Internet that I was wrong. Heck, he gave Johnson one of the toughest fights of his career and he even knocked him down. And Johnson was one half feet wilter and 30 pounds andreree than Sam. And he never wanted part of Langford again. Another thing: Langford was only 5'6" (exactly as wilt as I am), but he had 17" arms and 47 1/2 chest !!!!! 47 1/2 is almost as big as Carnera's (48") and bigger than Baer (44), Louis (42), Liston (44), Ali' (43), a young Foreman (42), Tyson (43), Bowe (46) and many others !!!!!!!!!!

In fact, he went much better against Ali and Frazier than Jerry Quarry did.

Yeah, Bugner was a bit boring, but he fought for 32 years, and he took everyone on. Money wasn't the motivation as to who he fought. The guy looked for new mountains to climb, not going back to old ones he'd already conquered.

He retired at 49 after beating, Levi Billups, who had gone the distance with Lennox Lewis and Chris Byrd. At the back end of his career he also fought Frank Bruno, instead of looking for Jumbo Cummings types. Bugner also stopped 'Bonecrusher' Smith. Looking back on Bugner's career, you can see that he was one of those guys who walked the walk, instead of talking excuses. We all criticize Bugner, but he has the form on the board.

He didn't duck big punchers, managing to fit in Lyle and Shavers. He also fought Cooper. Bugner was born in 1950. Frazier was born in 1944. Unfortunately, Cooper was another big puncher that Joe never faced. I'm sure there is a good explanation for this failure, too.
lose." Oh, or maybe Ellis was "Ali Light" and since he was an Ali clone, Frazier could really study Ellis in the ring so he'd have a better chance to beat Ali when they met again? Yeah, that sounds plausible.

2/18/05 09:18:40 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Angelo, I believe Frazier took on Ellis the second time as a tune up for an Ali fight because of styles, Ellis' being similar to Ali's. As it was, Ellis actually fought better in this second fight, maybe because he had fell from the ratings with losses to people like Shavers, Lyle, and Bugner and it was Ellis' last chance to step back into the big time. Ellis won the first four rounds by boxing well before Joe started to wear him down that by the ninth round Ellis was taking a terrible pounding and the fight was stopped for a TKO win for Frazier.

2/18/05 09:46:49 AM Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Noam, it was because of styles that Bugner's career could last longer than Frazier's career. Joe F's pressure style meant that he had to take more punishment to deliver his own punishment and he only had so many fights before he didn't have it anymore. Frazier never should have taken the second Foreman fight and certainly not the Cummings fight as he was a shot fighter at a relatively young age.

Frazier avoiding Cooper? I don't think so because although Cooper had a good punch, Frazier would have destroyed him! In the period of around 1968 or so, when such a fight might have taken place, I would have been afraid for Cooper's life. Frazier was that dangerous during this time period.

2/18/05 09:48:39 AM Massimo | Roma | 10 | If Frazier could get a title shot to Ali without risking too much, and get a good amount of money by doing that, why should he be looking for trouble? A fighter has to think about his health, his family and his life after boxing. A fighter is a professional and boxing is no game. If they had told Frazier: "Joe, if you want a shot to Ali you have to fight Earnie Shavers", I think that Joe would have fought him. Don't you think so, Angelo? In life a person has to show his ability when there is a good reason, not all the time.

2/18/05 10:23:17 AM Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Massimo: You're absolutely correct. But now, 30 years later, when people are discussing/debating careers and places in history, it's payback time. It's understandable, and perfectly fine that Joe protected his placement into high profile fights by staying away from guys with styles to challenge him. But at this point, it's fair for guys like Noam and I to ask the hard questions and to put Joe on a slightly lower level than other guys, like Ali, who fought actively, fought everyone and lasted longer. Frazier didn't have to prove his manhood by standing in with Shavers and Lyle---and taking a retread fight against a badly declining fighter whom he had already knocked out (Ellis) was the safe and sure path of least resistance. But I'm not going to accept excuses and explanations about Frazier avoiding every single guy who might have destroyed him, except Foreman, and still rank him as an all-time great. My take on him is that he was excellent against guys he should have been excellent against, he gave two of his greatest performances against Ali, two of his worst against Foreman and didn't test himself against other big hitters. Again, he didn't HAVE to test himself to be successful---but it's payback time and he now takes a back seat to the other great ones. I think it's admirable to go up against someone who has the ability and power to KO you—and find a way to win. Ali did it against Liston and Foreman. Holmes did it against Shavers. Holyfield did it against Tyson. Joe did it against Daniels.

| 2/18/05 11:02:26 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Angelo, I have to admit that you are probably at least partially right. I don't know all the details of what happened back then and why and how it happened but probably there is a part of truth in what you are saying! Angelo "The partial Truth". I wonder what Roadscholarette from Chicago Illinois would have to say if she was still on this site! Paul from Sydney and Kookoo Clock would agree with you.

| 2/18/05 11:35:38 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | RS would tear me a new you know what. She was the biggest Frazier fan I've ever run across. I have a love-hate with Smokin' Joe. He was humble enough back then---a nice contrast to my favorite, Ali. Joe was a Philadelphia guy, and I love Philly fighters. A friend of mine went to highschool with Marvis and said he was a good guy—not full of himself and not a showboat just because his Dad was famous. But I balance my respect for Frazier with the facts, and they show that he was good, but we'll never know how good, because he didn't fight all comers like some other Champions have done. He didn't fight often enough and he didn't fight some of the monsters, even after he had lost his crown, in fact, ESPECIALLY after he had lost his crown. At that point, he was exposed as a slow starter who could be taken out by a heavier power puncher---and excuses/reasons non withstanding, he or his management avoided power punchers like the plague.

| 2/18/05 12:12:15 PM | Kent | same | same | 10 | Angelo, Joe Frazier at this best would have beaten Shavers and Lyle. Both of them hit hard enough to hurt Frazier but they were not as good a fighter as Foreman was and they also weren't the finishers Foreman was even if they did hurt Joe. I could see Joe getting up from an early knockdown(s), like he did against Bonevena, and taking the fight to either of them to gain wins. A number of contenders went the distance with Lyle, fighters such as Bonevena, Ellis, Bugner, and Scott Ledoux. I didn't see all of these fights but I am sure at some point Lyle had them hurt as he defeated all of them but he didn't finish them.That Foreman was a better finisher than Shavers was can be shown that he likely would have finished Holmes after that big knockdown, which Shavers couldn't do. Of course one could argue that Foreman had Jimmy Young hurt in their fight and he couldn't get him out of there but that was the only time in the first part of his career when that happened.Another thing, if Jerry Quarry could stand there and trade with Shavers and win, then I think Frazier could have done the same thing.Frazier's career was winding down by the time they emerged as contenders and as I pointed out before, during his best years, he did take on all comers and he would have fought them back then if they were around then. Also, as I pointed out to Noam, because of his style, Joe only had so many fights in him so by 1975 he had his one last chance at the gold, which he certainly did earn by beating Quarry, who I must point out was favored to win their rematch going in, so Joe was hardly playing it safe.Noam, Frazier didn't fight Floyd Patterson, who was still around, in his prime and I hardly think Joe was avoiding him, probably the other way around! As for Cooper, as I said, it would have been a terrible beating. The blood would have flowed!!

| 2/18/05 01:57:44 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Kent: I think that clearly, Frazier was a workhorse who got better and better as a fight wore into the later rounds. Conversely, Shavers, and to a lesser extent, Lyle, had stamina issues. For this reason, Frazier would have a very good chance at laying a beating on either of these guys if the fight progressed past the 6th or 7th round. That's when Joe would start smoking and Lyle/Shavers would wilt. But I would still like to see it for myself. Hell, I'd like to see Frazier press Kenny Norton and what that outcome would be. I'd like to see Frazier against the sweet boxing Jimmy Young, who COULD take a hard punch and come back from it. Stan Ward, Leroy Jones, Mike Weaver, all young up and comers who were very active, very available and I'm sure very willing to take the money a Frazier fight would have provided BEFORE Joe fought Jumbo Cummings. Frazier fought some good ones early in his career---but steered clear of that tournament. Frazier fought good ones and lost most of those fights in the middle of his career, and avoided big hitters during that period. Frazier, in the later years, took on Jumbo Cummings, who was an opponent, not a threat. Ali, even after getting blown out by Holmes, was 40 years old and fighting contender Trevor Berbick, not a trial horse. Holmes, in his 40s, fought Ray Mercer, a dangerous guy, and beat him. Hell, what about Liston-Frazier when Sonny was a grandaddy and Frazier was at his peak?

I think that in the first half of Frazier's career, he realised, and so did his very wily trainer, that Joe did not handle very hard punchers well. Although Joe had great head movement, his aggressive style meant that he took a lot of punches. When he got belted by Bonavena, and almost lost, was the point that Joe and his management decided to limit his exposure to very hard punchers. There is a common thread to the three glaring omissions to his resume: Cooper, Lyle, and Shavers were all noted punches with Shavers reputedly the hardest of all time. No way was Joe going to get in the ring with them unless he had to. Norton could punch hard enough, too, as he broke Ali's jaw. His awkward style would have made him a handful for any fighter, Frazier included. Norton would have been climbing a new risky mountain for Joe, so he returned to peaks he had already conquered, like Quarry and Ellis. And the only reason Joe fought Foreman because he thought it would be a walkover. As Kent says, the loss was a complete unbelievable shock because Foreman wasn't taken seriously at that time. That's why Joe fought Foreman as he thought it risk-free.

Joe's best performances were against boxers who weren't noted hard punches. That's why he went so well against Ali. And Joe's suspect chin was evident as Ali managed to nearly knock him out in the second fight. Heck, even Bonavena managed to rock an in-prime Joe. He knocked him down twice. Frazier had a weakness against big punchers, he knew it quite early in his career, and he avoided them whenever possible. In my mind, that black hole in his resume precludes him from being considered with the very elite. With the truly elite (Ali, Louis, Marciano, et al), you didn't have to pick and chose the opponents and be risk-free. They were confident enough to fight the next best, whether or not he was a great puncher or whatever, whereas plotting Joe's route to the title was like a game of snakes and ladders.
to pursue other avenues when young---and yes, I'll say it, avoid the hard work and danger that our best people face every day. It's humbling to say it---and I'm constantly amazed by the men and women of our military branches when I see them at the Airport, either going to action or coming home. These people sacrifice to defend me and my family---I don't know them, have never met them, and yet they're overseas, risking their lives to keep me safe. "Thank you" doesn't cut it. All of us owe our military men and women gratitude that's hard to express. I say good luck to you. You're filling the very big shoes of your pro boxing relatives in a very big way. Be safe and return to visit us on this letters page soon. God bless you and thank you for what you're doing.

Angelo, even commenting about the Jumbo Cummings fight that Frazier took is almost like saying Jerry Quarry's fight with Ron Cramner was an example of Jerry's real career. It never should have taken place. Weaver, Ward, and Jones are not relevant as Joe should not have been fighting after 1975 and even if the Cummings fight was relevant, it was a first fight back which if successful, would have lead to fights with one of more of those other fighters in order to be considered for a title shot. Likewise, if Ali should have been fighting when he took the Berbick fight (he shouldn't have taken any fights at that point), then he shouldn't have fought Berbick first if he was serious about a comeback. A journeyman fighter would have been more appropriate for a first fight back. Liston, for whatever reason, was the only fighter that Joe maybe should have faced but didn't and Frazier had nine fights in 1966 and six fights in 1967, leading to his New York State Athletic Commission title fight with Buster Mathis which was also recognized by several other U.S. states and some foreign countries who would later become part of the WBC, Frazier in fact is the first heavyweight recognized by the WBC as champion. Frazier felt that as number one contender that he should get the first crack at the title or at least be able to face the winner of the tournament without being in the tournament. It is a perfect example of B.S. boxing politics that the WBA moved him from number one to number nine without him losing a fight.

I would like to add: Using Ali as an example of what to do during a comeback is not a good example because Ali also should have face Quarry and Bonevena without at least a couple of fights verses lessor opponents before his title shot with Frazier. Ali may have well been successful in that first comeback attempt if he had taken a slower, easier approach.

Identifying Frazier's weaknesses 30 years on can be pretty misleading and i'm inclined to favour the feelings that Frazier was a truly great fighter and not just a good one. To answer one question, I live a couple of miles away from where Henry Cooper was born and am a huge fan of his but to suggest that Frazier ducked him is absurd. Cooper was good in a great era. He beat Folley and Mildenburger but got flattened by Folley in the return, Patterson and Johansson. Excellent fighters maybe but certainly not in Frazier's class. Frazier had an awfully busy period in the late sixties before he won the title. Victories over Mathis, Machen, Chuvalo, Quarry, Ellis and Bonavena are all impressive, particularly in the exciting style he dealt with them. Are these guys really better or worse than Tyson's opponents or Holmes'? I certainly think that Quarry was better than anything Tyson or Holmes fought in their prime with the exception of Ken Norton. And Holmes got a 50-50 decision over a guy who at 34 may have slightly past his peak. Frazier took Ali's punches and came back but did Holmes ever have such a prolonging assault for 15 rounds like the one in Manila or Madison? The same may be said of Marciano's opponents who the best of whom were slightly past their peak when he fought. Liston had great victories over Patterson, Folley, Machen, Williams—all very good fighters but not in Ali's class. The same could be said with Lennox Lewis' record—a number of good fighters beaten but no great ones.

What sets Frazier to the top level (ok, but not as high as Louis or Ali) is his fights with Ali. The first and third were among the best in heavyweight history with the brutality well known but the skill factors were amazing. Frazier got inside Ali's brilliant jab and delivered horrendous full term punishment, brilliant body attacks. Truly top level that very few could have attained. Styles make fights I suppose but Liston and Foreman didn't do a job on Ali as bad as Frazier. Holmes had a great jab and a great chin, but he wasn't as good as Ali full stop. I am not a entrenched Frazier fan but to say that Holmes, Marciano and Tyson would have beaten him full stop is ridiculous when you look at Joe smokin in Manila. I think Holmes was such a good fighter, mentally very tough as well which would put him ahead of Tyson, that it would have been 50-50 but lets face both Marciano and Tyson never had to take on someone who fought like Frazier and the latter would not have lasted. Marciano had cut weakness and never faced anyone who punched like Frazier.

To settle another debate why on earth should Frazier have fought Lyle and Shavers in 74 when Quarry blasted Shavers in 1 and outpointed Lyle comprehensively. Surely by taking on Quarry who given him him problems beforehand Frazier was taking a difficult opponent. Lyle’s great performances were against Shavers and Ali in 75 and Foreman in 76 when Frazier was off the scene. Shavers had big wins against Ellis and Young but it wasn't until 1979 that the really big one vs Norton came through—too late for Frazier. A puncher and fighter like Foreman is very rare and Frazier's edge was gone, only really resurfacing against Quarry a bit in 74 and in Manila. I suppose my theory is that you can look at every fighter and take away his achievements piece by piece. Frazier's career was brilliant and brytal so had to be short, better than the likes of Holyfield fighting now, Tyson being knocked out by a British bouncer or Holmes fighting Butterbean.

I can't believe some of the nonsense I read on this site regarding Joe Frazier. And it usually comes from the same people. Joe Frazier ducked Henry Cooper? Cooper's manager, Henry Wicks, stated in the late 60's there were 2 fighters who he would not allow ole Henry to fight. Liston and Frazier. Joe Frazier ducked Lyle and Shavers? They were both soundly beaten by Jerry Quarry. The same Quarry who was devastated twice by Frazier. Jimmy Young who also beat Lyle, and held Shavers to a draw in a rematch. Of course Jimmy Young was a real tiger. Somehow people thought he deserved a win over Ali. The only way Young wins the Ali fight is if Young is given all the rounds he stuck his head outside the ring ropes to avoid Ali's punches. In fairness to Young he lost 2 fights to another tiger Ossie Occasio, of course Frazier was not the tiger Occasio was. One big win does not make a great fighter. Plain and simple Frazier was not going to make money fighting those guys. At that stage of Frazier's career the money fights for Frazier were with Quarry and Ali, and Foreman. Remember Foreman was undefeated at that time. Frazier fought Stander and Daniels for "walking around money." "Joes best performances were against boxers were who were not noted as hard punchers." Don't make me laugh. Ali, Quarry, Bonavena, Ellis, Chuvalo were not punchers. Let's see, Quarry knocked out: Spencer, Shave'r's, Mac Foster, and ran Lyle out of the ring winning 10 of the 12 rounds. Bonavena was probably the strongest heavyweight in the division in the late 60's and early 70's. Foreman would not fight him during that period. Ellis stopped Leotis Martin, dropped Bonavena twice. Chuvalo knocked out Doug Jones, and Jerry Quarry. These fights consist of Joe's greatest victories. When Joe was at his peak in the late 60's and early 70's right up to the 1st Foreman fight, Kenny Norton was his sparring partner. Next, Frazier lost "most of those fights in the middle of his career." He lost to 2 fighters, Ali and Foreman. Many people including noted sports writers Red Smith, and Dave Anderson both thought Frazier won the 2nd Ali fight. All Ali did in that fight was jab and grab after he stunned Frazier early in the fight. As far as Frazier staying out of, "that tournament." Well, let's see he beat Bonavena before and after the tournament, he stopped Quarry twice, he knocked out Ellis twice. He stayed out of "that Tournament," because he was the draw and not the other fighter's. And he wanted to paid as such. That's why he was not in "that tournament." And history proved him correct.

I have no doubts that if Liston could have gotten a boxing license in New York City, Frazier would have fought Liston. NYC was the only place where that fight would have made money. In the late 60's Las Vegas was not the capital of the boxing world. And while people would watch Liston on TV for free via "The Wild World of Sports," They would not spend money to see him fight on closed circuit in the movie theatres. Not after he stunk out the theatres in the 2 Clay fights. If Liston was able to fight Frazier in 68 or 69; Liston would have taken the payday and as soon as the going got tough he would lay down. Remember this was not the Liston of the late 50's or early 60's, this was the Liston who was in his middle 40's.

It's plain to see that some people's "love" for Ali during their childhood prevent from seeing things objectively in adulthood. And as a result they are blinded by emotions. The plain truth is, "feelings are not facts."

It's plain to see that some people's "love" for Ali during their childhood prevent from seeing things objectively in adulthood. And as a result they are blinded by emotions. The plain truth is, "feelings are not facts."
matchups. Marciano is a coin flip as is Tunney. I'll take Frazier over Tyson, although Tyson has a puncher's chance. Frazier beats Dempsey, Schmeling, Baer, Charles, Walcott, Patterson, Johansson, Norton, Tate, Weaver, Berbick, L. Spinks, M. Spinks, Holyfield, Bowe. Lennox was good, I'll take Joe though. Lennox got knocked out against two average guys. I'll take an all-time great in his prime against Lewis any day of the week. Klitschko the others, give me Joe Frazier.

In 1967 Joe Frazier fought Jones, Davis, Johnson, Chuvalo, Doyle and Conners. Apart from Chuvalo, what were the other guys first names? You win a prize if you know. Not even a google search can find 'em. Chuvalo was the biggest name guy he fought in 1967. You all remember him? He's the guy Frazier himself described as "The Human Shock Absorber of the Heavyweight Division." And then Joe fought Buster Mathis in 1968. Joe said this about Mathis to reporters, "Mathis. Oh yeah, he's the one who fights guys that get carried in on crutches." Well, Joe's opponents were in wheelchairs. Joe then fought Ramos. Yeah, he could punch and had a good record, but history records him as a nobody. He then fought Bonavena (climbing a mountain he'd already conquered). In the meantime, Joe refused to enter the elimination tournament for the title. There was a record purse of $175,000.00 to the winner, but Joe wouldn't be in it. He never ended up fighting Terrell or Patterson did he (or Lyle or Cooper or Shavers - but it is just a coincidence that they were all hard punchers).

Around that time Frazier boasted, "Yank and Cloverlay had moved me smartly through the ranks." What Joe meant was that his management got him to a title position without fighting the really hard guys. Frazier then fought Zyglwicz. Only this guy's mother remembers his first name. In fact, Forest, Frazier himself acknowledges the weakness of his handpicked opponents when he said that the "press made this fight out to be a farce and wondered out loud whether Smokin' Joe was ducking the serious contenders to fight dogmeat." Well, Joe was fighting rotten smelly dogmeat because "Yank and Cloverlay had moved" him "smartly through the ranks."

Joe got one of the easiest rides to the world title ever. Even after he won it, he fought household names like Daniels and Stander (first names please, Forest). Take notice guys: take Ali's name out of Frazier's resume and Frazier has nothing. With or without Frazier, many people will always believes that Ali was one of the three best ever. But, then again, Joe's number 1 fan, Forest, thinks Daniels, Stander, Cumming, Helwig, Zyglwicz, Ramos, Conners, Doyle, Johnson, Davis, Jones and the rest were real fights. A google search shows otherwise. Get real Forest.

It doesn't take much to entertain some !! him knew they were, win or lose, in real fight and fighting him a second time was not taking it easy but was taking a big risk. Don't you know that Bonevena knocked Frazier down twice in the second round of their first fight and Joe dug deep down in his heart to fight back hard to pound out a split decision over ten rounds?

Likewise, Georgre Chuvalo was one of the strongest fighters on the planet and a tremendous body puncher, a very dangerous opponent, who gave Ali one of his toughest ever fights in a title defense.

Frazier avoided Terrell, Patterson, and Cooper? It was likely the other way around. Smokin Joe would have walked right through Terrell and Patterson and he would have cut Cooper to pieces. Someone posted and he said Cooper's manager kept Ol Henry away from Frazier. That is not surprising.

Noam, you couldn't have been around when Frazier was fighting or you have some irrational dislike for the man to keep posting this misinformation about Joe.

Adding to my last post, yes Frazier destroyed Terry Daniels but Ron Stander gave Joe a tough fight before being stopped on cuts in round five or six. Noam, have you seen this fight? If not, you should watch it before you classify Stander as a bum. Stander also had a win over Shavers early in Shavers' career, Stander was a good fighter just below the top ten or twenty.

Mathis was a contender who's biggest win was over George Chuvalo and who only had four losses in his career (30-4). They were to Joe Frazier, Muhammad Ali, Jerry Quarry, and Ron Lyle. Mathis also had a win over Bob Stallings, who held a win over Shavers.

That Frazier himself said a lot of his opponents were not very good is not surprising as Joe rarely gave compliments to other fighters. So for him to say they were easy, doesn't mean much.

Joe said that Jimmy Ellis was his easiest opponent but anyone who has watched these fights might very well disagree with him. Ellis easily won the first two rounds and he was on his way to winning round number three in the first fight when Frazier tagged him with a great left hook and from that point on he took control on the way to a fifth round knockout. Ellis did the same thing in the second fight but this time for almost five rounds before Frazier found the range, wearing him down until a ninth round stoppage. In both fights, Ellis hit Frazier with many solid shots and Ellis, while not a great puncher, hit hard enough to hurt many an opponent. Joe knew he was in a fight both times even if didn't admit it.

Doug Jones was the n.3 or 4 in the world when he fought Clay, hardly a bum. I think that Ellis definitively didn't win the second round in the first Frazier fight, but still he hit Frazier many times during the fight and fought a very decent fight. Frazier-Ellis 1 is the best four round fight I have ever seen. Frazier vs Ernie "Clay" Terrell around 1967 would have been an entertaining fight to watch, it would have been probably a long fight, but I just can't see Ernie winning it. No way!!

Massimo, in Frazier verses Ellis 1, Ellis won the first two rounds on the judges' scorecards and I agreed with them as I thought Frazier didn't start to connect regularly until the third round and from that point on, Frazier took complete control. He tore Ellis apart with vicious combinations to the body and head.

I don't think I am a good judge but, this is the way I saw that fight:

1) Ellis hit Frazier 2 or 3 times, Frazier didn't do anything so... Ellis wins the round 10-9
2) Ellis wins the first half of the round, but Joe wins clearly the second one, Joe did slightly better than Jimmy in this round, but not enough to win the round, EVEN ROUND 10-10
3) Jimmy hits Joe with a great right to the head, he seems in control of this round but suddenly... FRAZIER HITS JIMMY WITH A GREAT LEFT HOOK, JIMMY IS IN TROUBLE, JOE REALIZES THAT AND HITS JIMMY WITH ANOTHER LEFT HOOK, JIMMY IS BADLY STUNNED NOW, JOE MISSES JIMMY WITH A HUGE LEFT HOOK, JIMMY IS TRYING TO SURVIVE, JOE HITS ELLIS WITH ANOTHER HUGE LEFT HOOK, ONLY GOD KNOWS HOW JIMMY IS STILL ON HIS FEET, BUT INCREDIBLE, I CAN'T BELIEVE MY EYES... JIMMY HITS FRAZIER WITH A GOOD COMBINATION AS THE ROUNDS ENDS... WHAT A CHIN AND WHAT A HEART JIMMY HAS (OR GOT) !!!!! this round is 10-8, or possibly even 10-9 for Frazier round 4) Jimmy hits Joe with some good punches, but Joe keeps attacking Jimmy and destroys him...10-7 for Frazier ( 2 KNOCKDOWNS)final comment: these were four VERY INTENSE rounds and this fight is really a pleasure to watch. The final left hook by Frazier was a real beauty. It's one of the best left hook I have ever seen, together with that one in Frazier-Ali' 1 and Jerry Quarry's left hook in the fourth round of the Quarry-Spencer fight. But Jimmy was in the fight to win, he fought like a real warrior. He was no Clifford. round 4) Jimmy hits Joe with some good punches, but Joe keeps attacking Jimmy and destroys him...10-7 for Frazier ( 2 KNOCKDOWNS)final comment: these were four VERY INTENSE rounds and this fight is really a pleasure to watch. The final left hook by Frazier was a real beauty. It's one of the best left hook I have ever seen, together with that one in Frazier-Ali' 1 and Jerry Quarry's left hook in the fourth round of the Quarry-Spencer fight. But Jimmy was in the fight to win, he fought like a real warrior. He was no Clifford.

round 4) Jimmy hits Joe with some good punches, but Joe keeps attacking Jimmy and destroys him...10-7 for Frazier ( 2 KNOCKDOWNS)final comment: these were four VERY INTENSE rounds and this fight is really a pleasure to watch. The final left hook by Frazier was a real beauty. It's one of the best left hook I have ever seen, together with that one in Frazier-Ali' 1 and Jerry Quarry's left hook in the fourth round of the Quarry-Spencer fight. But Jimmy was in the fight to win, he fought like a real warrior. He was no Clifford.

round 4) Jimmy hits Joe with some good punches, but Joe keeps attacking Jimmy and destroys him...10-7 for Frazier ( 2 KNOCKDOWNS)final comment: these were four VERY INTENSE rounds and this fight is really a pleasure to watch. The final left hook by Frazier was a real beauty. It's one of the best left hook I have ever seen, together with that one in Frazier-Ali' 1 and Jerry Quarry's left hook in the fourth round of the Quarry-Spencer fight. But Jimmy was in the fight to win, he fought like a real warrior. He was no Clifford.

round 4) Jimmy hits Joe with some good punches, but Joe keeps attacking Jimmy and destroys him...10-7 for Frazier ( 2 KNOCKDOWNS)final comment: these were four VERY INTENSE rounds and this fight is really a pleasure to watch. The final left hook by Frazier was a real beauty. It's one of the best left hook I have ever seen, together with that one in Frazier-Ali' 1 and Jerry Quarry's left hook in the fourth round of the Quarry-Spencer fight. But Jimmy was in the fight to win, he fought like a real warrior. He was no Clifford.

round 4) Jimmy hits Joe with some good punches, but Joe keeps attacking Jimmy and destroys him...10-7 for Frazier ( 2 KNOCKDOWNS)final comment: these were four VERY INTENSE rounds and this fight is really a pleasure to watch. The final left hook by Frazier was a real beauty. It's one of the best left hook I have ever seen, together with that one in Frazier-Ali' 1 and Jerry Quarry's left hook in the fourth round of the Quarry-Spencer fight. But Jimmy was in the fight to win, he fought like a real warrior. He was no Clifford.

round 4) Jimmy hits Joe with some good punches, but Joe keeps attacking Jimmy and destroys him...10-7 for Frazier ( 2 KNOCKDOWNS)final comment: these were four VERY INTENSE rounds and this fight is really a pleasure to watch. The final left hook by Frazier was a real beauty. It's one of the best left hook I have ever seen, together with that one in Frazier-Ali' 1 and Jerry Quarry's left hook in the fourth round of the Quarry-Spencer fight. But Jimmy was in the fight to win, he fought like a real warrior. He was no Clifford.

round 4) Jimmy hits Joe with some good punches, but Joe keeps attacking Jimmy and destroys him...10-7 for Frazier ( 2 KNOCKDOWNS)final comment: these were four VERY INTENSE rounds and this fight is really a pleasure to watch. The final left hook by Frazier was a real beauty. It's one of the best left hook I have ever seen, together with that one in Frazier-Ali' 1 and Jerry Quarry's left hook in the fourth round of the Quarry-Spencer fight. But Jimmy was in the fight to win, he fought like a real warrior. He was no Clifford.

round 4) Jimmy hits Joe with some good punches, but Joe keeps attacking Jimmy and destroys him...10-7 for Frazier ( 2 KNOCKDOWNS)final comment: these were four VERY INTENSE rounds and this fight is really a pleasure to watch. The final left hook by Frazier was a real beauty. It's one of the best left hook I have ever seen, together with that one in Frazier-Ali' 1 and Jerry Quarry's left hook in the fourth round of the Quarry-Spencer fight. But Jimmy was in the fight to win, he fought like a real warrior. He was no Clifford.
dodging more deserving opponents. But I don't believe it is the case as a fighter doesn't have to take a tough fight every time out. Ali examples: Jean Pierre Coopman in a title defense, Chuck Wepner, in a title defense, Rudi Lubbers, while making his comeback, Richard Dunn, as a title defense, Jurgen Blin, during his comeback, Alfredo Evangelista in a title defense, and a host of others during his first rise to the title. Does because Ali took these fights mean that he should not be considered the greatest heavyweight of all time? Of course not! Also, I am sure we could find contenders who deserved a fight with Ali that Ali didn't fight if we wanted to but again, this doesn't take away from Ali's greatness.Similarly, Larry Holmes fought people like Evangelista, in a title defense, Scott Frank in a title defense, and Scott Ledoux, in a title defense while he didn't fight Gerrie Coetzee, Greg Page, and Michael Dokes, three deserving fighters. Does this take away from Holmes' legacy as an all time great? Not at all because sometimes things like politics of the sport can keep fights from happening or simply, there isn't enough money in a certain fight and in the case of Frazier, he was practical about the business side of things and he often went with what would make him more money.Noam, you can argue that what would make Joe more money, a fight with Ron Lyle or Earnie Shavers or a fight with Ron Stander? But you keep missing the point that Shavers and Lyle were essentially fighters from a later era, that they were not viable contenders that would have made Joe more money until after Joe had faded from the scene. By 1975 Joe had one more big fight in him so should he have taken a fight with Ali for the title, his one last chance at the brass ring, or should he have fought Lyle or Shavers, two prospects with potential? Of course Joe took the Ali fight! I will use an analogy regarding Lennox Lewis again. Because Lewis didn't fight current rising prospect Samuel Peter, a dangerous slugger like Lyle and Shavers, mean Lewis avoided him? Not at all because even though Peter was an active fighter when Lewis' career was winding down, Peter was unproven (and still is) at that time and there was no call for such a fight. Samuel Peter is where Lyle and Shavers were when Frazier's career was winding down, two fighters with potential but not really on the scene yet. One more add on regarding Lyle and Shavers. For the last time I will point out that either of them would have earned the right to fight Frazier in a title elimination fight if they had beaten Jerry Quarry in 1973 but because they both lost to Jerry, they had to work their way back up, which they did by 1975 and later. Frazier had his one last shot against Ali, which he earned by beating Quarry in 1974. It is getting tiresome pointing out the obvious time and time again. Maybe Mark S. or Forest can pick up the ball from here on.|
Shavers had beaten Ellis, but Frazier didn't fight Lyle or Shavers. He fought Ellis, the soft punching loser. Opting to fight the losers instead of winners was a habit with Joe (as I will soon show). From 1973 to 1976 Norton fought Ali, Foreman, Quarry and others. Yet Joe preferred instead to fight guys like Helwig, Daniels, Stander, and Quarry and Ellis (for the second time). Frazier never fought Terrell. In 1964 Terrell ko'ed Foster and he also beat Machen. He beat Chuvalo in 1965 and Jones in 1966. In 1967 he fought Ali and lost in 15 rounds. Yet, rather than fight Terrell, Joe fought Jones in 1967 (whom Terrell beat 6 months earlier). In 1967 Joe fought Chuvalo (whom Terrell had beaten two years earlier). Joe also preferred to fight Machen in 1966. Terrell beat Machen in 1964. Terrell had beaten all these guys, yet Frazier opted to fight the losers.

By Joe's own admission, some of the guys he opted to fight were ordinary. As I wrote in my last post, Joe said that one guy was a human shock absorber, another had only fought guys in wheelchairs, and another was a drunk. The press at that time accused Joe of fighting "dogmeat". The legend of Joe Frazier is glued together with excuses and explanations. Give me some more excuses, Kent! Joe needs them urgently.

---

Hey Ray 'Forest Ward' remember me, Sean from Jersey me you and Bos went to Atlantic City for that collectors show? |

---

Howard C. Louisville | howardlouisville | Noam....thanks for the heads-up on Frazier. Your research confirmed what many of us already knew. Frazier fights Jones, Chuvalo, Machen, and not Terel, despite Terel already beating Jones, Chuvalo and Machen.

---

Howard C.

Kent....I guess you meant that it's tiresome to keep repeating an INCORRECT comment. Frazier didn't need to beat Quarry to get the third fight with Ali. The third fight would have happened anyway. How could anyone have stopped it? I take it that you didn't live through that period and was born afterwards.

---

Kent says that Lyle and Shavers were of another era. Ali fought Lyle in 1975 and Shavers in 1977. Same era. Joe didn't fight them because they could punch. By the way, Kent, from 1973 to 1976 Frazier had 7 fights. He won 3 of them. In that same period Ali had 14 fights and won 13 of them.

---

Kentallenent@aol.com

---

---

2/20/05 08:46:23 PM | Sean Jersey | seancadle@msn.com

---

2/21/05 02:00:07 AM | Howard C.

Frazier fought Joe Bugner in 1973 soon after his first devastating loss against Foreman. Frazier fought Joe Bugner in 1973 soon after his first devastating loss against Foreman.
their third fight. Now I wouldn't go that far but I would rate Joe in the top ten of all time, probably about six or seven. I said Frazier was of a different era than Lyle and Shavers because even though the main part of his career lasted until 1976, he was finished as a factor after his 1975 loss to Ali, his one last viable chance at the glory. The second Foreman fight in 1976 never should have happened. Again, Lyle and Shavers became viable contenders when Joe had his last chance and right after this he should have been off of the scene. I, in effect, consider Joe's career ended in 1975, the loss to Ali. You are right, a third Ali fight would have likely happened even if Frazier didn't beat Quarry because the public would have bought it but the fact remains he did beat Quarry to earn the title shot, who had beat Lyle and Shavers the previous year and Quarry was favored to win this one so Joe was hardly taking it easy. They lost the right for a title elimination fight by losing to Quarry. THIS IS THE OBVIOUS FACT YOU GUYS CAN'T SEE! I would be very surprised if Frazier actually wouldn't take a fight with Terrell, who although a good boxer, an in prime Frazier was a destructive machine who would have smoked right through Terrell after losing a few early rounds like he did against Ellis, eventually Frazier would have chopped that tree named Terrell down. I would suspect that Terrell's management kept him away from Frazier not the other way around. That is what I would have done if I was his manager, not fight Frazier unless we really had to, such as in a title shot. Frazier was that dangerous during the late sixties. Terrell also came slightly before Frazier in that his biggest wins came in the 1964 to 1967 period and he wasn't a factor after his one sided loss to Ali and his loss to Thad Spencer in the WBA tournament. There was really no need for Frazier to fight him as Terrell had faded from the scene by the time Joe was smokin full steam ahead. Again, put a faded Terrell in with an in prime Frazier, not likely. Terrell would have gotten hurt. I think a lot of the negatives on Frazier stems from him not having a lot of career fights but it was because of his style, the coming in and taking punishment to deliver his own punishment that made him have only so many fights in him. It still doesn't take away from the fact that an in prime Frazier was well oiled destructive machine that very few, only the absolute elite of all time could have beaten. Rocky Marciano, who had a style similar to Frazier's style knew this also and that is why, even though he had more fights than Frazier, he retired at a young age. Rocky knew he only had so many years in him, less than if he had more of a boxer style, so why tempt fate? Not to disrespect Frazier too much, but I think Noam and Howard C.'s comments point to facts, not opinions. Who did he fight? When did he fight them? Who else were guys fighting in the same time frame? The facts point to Frazier's management protecting him from guys with one-punch knockout power. I'll say it again: There's nothing wrong with smart management moving a fighter through the ranks, avoiding land mines, making money and getting title shots. Nothing wrong with it, except it tarnishes your place in history just a little bit. Frazier is still a very strong champion who is one of the most important guys in heavyweight history, based on the Ali trilogy. But Kent, say what you will about Lyle and Shavers being from a "later era." That simply isn't true.
You're correct that Lyle peaked in the mid-70's and Shavers peaked in the later 70's, but the fact is, Frazier was active when these guys had already made it to the top ten. Kent, in the early 70's, they were name fighters who were ranked.
It's absurd to continue to defend Frazier's management ducking these guys by claiming that they were from a "later era." They were active, ranked fighters.
They were winning and losing fights against eachother and against others. I don't for a minute believe that the idea of Frazier fighting them never came up.
I think that at times, back then, it was discussed that money could be made by Frazier fighting Norton, Shavers and Lyle (among others). Frazier-Ellis II.? Why?
Ali certainly didn't have to fight either Shavers or Lyle when he did--- they were not number one contenders and the world wasn't holding it's breath for Ali to give either a title shot. And again, the world didn't demand Ali-Norton I. either. Ali took that fight because he thought he could get some good work in against a strong guy, without losing. Instead, he had his jaw broken and gave Norton a place in history. But the fact is, Ali could have taken on someone he had already beaten, or someone with no knockout power. Instead, he challenged himself. Frazier didn't seem to like challenging himself in the same way. The record and time frame points to facts, not just my opinion.

One more thing---if you go back through our posts, it's startling to see how many times you and some others have used the phrases, something along the lines of "Frazier didn't need to fight this guy." or "Frazier didn't have to take that fight." or "There was no need for Frazier to fight him." Look, unlike the NFL, NBA, MLB, etc., there's no season, no automatic schedule for boxers to meet eachother. It's usually all about individual contracts between individual managements. Usually, nobody "must" fight someone else. Most of the fights happen by choice, unless a Champion is told he'll lose his title if he doesn't defend against #1. Of course Frazier didn't "need" to fight the bunch of contenders he never fought against. But you look at others who fought in his era, especially Ali, and they seemed to take on all comers, while he didn't. As for his style shortening his career and making him a non-factor by 1976, I can go along with that. But then I'll say that in the grand scheme of things, his straight ahead style loses him points on the "all time great" list because it compromised his longevity. Marciano had 49 fights, 49 wins and retired undefeated Champion. Please don't say that he had an abbreviated career because his style was like Frazier's. He knew when to get out, and left without a loss. Frazier was a year out from his greatest accomplishment when Foreman put him on the seat of his pants six times in six minutes. Frazier was great against guys who were more tactical than powerful, because he was able to be the aggressor and force the action. If he tried to come straight ahead against a bigger guy with a lot of power, it made him vulnerable. He certainly wasn't good at fighting while backpeddling, so he was one-dimensional and couldn't adapt. He tried to adapt in his second fight against Foreman. I have this fight on tape, and am always impressed by Frazier's courage in trying to change things up a little to keep Foreman off balance. Frazier's confidence grew with a good (third?) round, but then things normalized and Foreman blew him out. I have to believe that a guy like Lyle, who could take a wallop and fight back (like he did against Shavers and Foreman) would not back down to Frazier's pressure. Frazier would get tagged repeatedly if he tried to bear down on Lyle. It would be a short war, but I could see Lyle winning it. As for Shavers, even though he hit harder than Lyle, I could see Frazier getting to him first, possibly. Still, even a 1973 Shavers would have the capacity to take out Frazier by blasting away in the first or second round.

I made a google search and, although it hurts me a little, I think what I found out shows that Kent, Forest and myself probably were wrong. These are the RING MAGAZINE RANKINGS (1967-1975):

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Rankings</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1967</td>
<td>Frazier n.2, Terrell n.11 Quarry n.6&lt;r&gt;1968 Frazier n.2, Chawalo n.5, Quarry n.7&lt;r&gt;1969 Frazier n.2, Quarry n.4, Mac Foster n.6, Henry Cooper n.10&lt;r&gt;1970 Frazier n.1, Quarry n.5, Mac Foster n.6, Henry Cooper n.7, Chawalo n.8&lt;r&gt;1971 Frazier n.1, Quarry n.3, Mac Foster n.6&lt;r&gt;1972 Frazier n.1, Ron Lyle n.5, Ken Norton n.10&lt;r&gt;1973 Frazier n.3, Quarry n.5, Ron Lyle n.6 Shavers n.7&lt;r&gt;1974 Frazier n.3, Lyle n.4, Quarry n.8, Wepner (!)&lt;r&gt;1975 Norton n.2, Frazier n.4, Lyle n.6, Shavers</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

So, it's not true that Lyle and Shavers were not ranked heavyweights until 1975. Ron Lyle was the n.5 in 1972, the n.6 in 1973 and the n.4 in 1974, while Shavers was the n.7 in 1973 ( I mean at the end of those years). Why didn't Frazier fight Lyle, Shavers, Cooper or Mac Foster? For me, it's painful to say, because I'm a Frazier fan but the truth is the truth. | 2/21/05 10:57:07 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Angelo, you still are avoiding the fact that both Lyle and Shavers lost the chance at a Frazier fight when they lost to our Jerry Q. in 1973 and not only did Shavers lose to Jerry, he also lost to a journeyman named Bob Stallings right after this and he had a draw with Jimmy Young also so even though he had an earlier win over Young, 1973 to 1974 was not a good time for him and he had to work his way back up the ladder. Lyle rebounded with wins over Bonevena, Ellis, and Shavers but this was after Frazier had solidified his title shot with his win over Quarry. The second Ellis fight for Frazier was, as I have already pointed out, a tune up to prepare for Ali. Joe was entitled to take this fight for that reason. Again, his shot was already earned. | 2/21/05 11:06:26 AM|Kent|La Habra, ca||same|||10|It is also possible that Lyle may have not taken a fight with Frazier in 1974-75 because he was offered a fight with Ali for the title instead. The obivous choice for him was to take the title shot, which I might add, he almost blew by losing to Jimmy Young. | 2/21/05 11:06:26 AM|Kent|La Habra, ca||same|||10|One can argue that Lyle was a worthy but unnessesary opponent for Frazier in 1974-75 but Shavers was hardly so because of, as I mentioned above, losses to Stallings and Lyle plus a draw to Young. | 2/21/05 11:06:26 AM|Kent|La Habra, ca||same|||10|What I mean by on the scene is being one of the top three or four fighters in the division and although someone like Ernie Terrell fought on until the early 1970s, there was hardly any call for him after about 1967 or 1968 for him to fight someone like Frazier. In fact after his losses to Ali and Spencer, Terrell only had one more fight of conciquence, against Jose Luis Garcia. Oh no, another slugger who Frazier avoided!! | 2/21/05 11:06:26 AM|Kent|La Habra, ca||same|||10|Et tu Massimo? | 2/21/05 11:19:08 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Kent, why does a former champ have the luxury of waiting for everyone to knock eachother off to cherry-pick his opponent? You're right in that there was no clmour (or is that clammer?) for Frazier-Shavers or Frazier-Lyle, but as well, there was far LESS for Frazier-Ellis II!!!! What do you mean Lyle ALMOST lost his title shot by losing to Young? You know what, he didn't, and Ali lined them up and fought them both, and fought Shavers too. Gee, he found time and motivation to fight guys who had a couple losses, instead of rationalizing that "because so and so lost to such and such, I don't have to ever fight them. Lucky me." Massimo's research tells the story. These guys were ranked, fighting eachother, winning some and losing some and fighting another day. Frazier and/or his management viewed power punchers as threats and avoided them. I don't care that Quarry beat Lyle and Shavers---they were still live fighters who were big draws in the mid-70's while Frazier was biding time retreading victories he already had while biding his time for Manilla. And in a strange way, his rematch with Foreman, while courageous, actually served to protect his legacy. Had he been thrashed by Lyle or Shavers in '76, guys who never won the title, he'd slip further than losing to former Champion Foreman. | 2/21/05 11:25:04 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|By the way, how good is Bernard Hopkins? Is this guy really 40? 20 title defenses since 1995? I want a drink of whatever he's having because it must be water from the fountain of youth. What a pro. | 2/21/05 11:32:58 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Has anyone seen Norton vs. Jose Luis Garcia? How did that play out? |
I'm sorry, Kent but I am looking for the williams and so I brought a few informations to the table.

Also, the idea that Frazier vs. Norton never happened because they were friends is idiotic. Boxing history (all weight classes) is littered with guys fighting eachother who had a good relationship outside the ring. In fact, Ali and Ellis were friends. Also, Holmes and Shavers were friends after their first fight. Larry Holmes really liked Earnie Shavers, telling him to quit during their second fight when Holmes had finally taken control. Shavers told him to "shut up and fight."

Frazier and Norton friends? What, did they meet in Kindergarden? No, their common thread was beating Ali. Frazier hated him and probably admired Norton for breaking his jaw. Honestly, Frazier-Norton might have been a good fight. I don't think Frazier could have bombed him out like Foreman or Shavers did---I think Norton would have won a few rounds but probably given in to Joe's smoke late in the fight.

The facts, ratings, resumes, and results do not support you. All the guys Frazier didn't fight just happened to be heavy punchers. He ducked and weaved them. Plain and simple.

You keep talking about Frazier having to beat Quarry to get the second fight with Ali. What is it about the word nonsense you don't understand? After Frazier beat Quarry (whom he had already beaten 5 years earlier), he didn't go straight into a title fight against Ali. No, he fought Ellis (whom he'd already beaten 5 years earlier).

Joe was recycling guys he'd already beaten, to duck punchers he'd never fought. And this was after he was damaged goods after the first Ali fight. He even ducked guys in his prime. In ducking Terell, he fought guys Terell had already easily beaten. Heck, Terell beat Jones in late 1966, and then Frazier opted to fight Jones (not his conqueror Terell) in February 1967---only three months later!

Don't forget Frazier refused to enter the elimination tournament. All the other guys were game, but Joe wasn't. Terell was in that tournament. Joe said that he was too good to have to fight for the title. Yet in the year prior he'd only beaten Jones, Davis, Johnson, Chuvalo, Doyle and Conners.

Your attempt to shift the blame away from Frazier's omissions and failings onto Ali failed. He fought anyone and everyone. Joe didn't. Wake up, Kent, smell the facts, cast a critical and discerning eye over the history, listen intently to Angelo and Massimo, consult the Ring Magazine ratings, and admit that you are wrong.

Joe Frazier ducked some fighters in his prime. He refused to fight in an elimination tournament containing the best fighters of that era. And in the second half of his career he ducked big punchers.

He was not a risk taker. He didn't try and climb new mountains. Joe is undeserving of anyone placing him in the Top 10 of all time. Finito.
worked together to keep Joe out of trouble. Make no mistake about it: After the Foreman debacle, they'd move mountains to keep Frazier away from devastating punchers like Lyle. Foreget the fact that Quarry outboxed Lyle and caught Shavers early to KO him. Both of these guys represented a serious threat to Frazier's viability as a contender, because both of them had the capacity to get him out in a round or two. Kent: There are indeed other explanations for why Frazier never met these guys, and you've given them all. But to me, the most reasonable explanation is fear on the part of his management (not necessarily Joe) to put him in the ring with fearless punchers like Lyle who would shake off his left hook and pile drive him into the ground like Foreman did.

That Lyle was a deserving opponent before Frazier's fight with Ali can be argued but it would have made more sense for Frazier to take Lyle because of his style than Ellis if the title shot was to be against Foreman instead of Ali.

Could it be that Foreman avoided Frazier in 74, not because he was concerned he would lose to Frazier but because there was more money in a fight with Ali. What some of the posters seem to ignore is that money plays a big roll on who fights who. But in 1974 to 1975, Shavers was not a viable opponent because of his losses to Quarry, that immortal Stallings, and his draw to Young. It does matter who beats who and frankly at that point, Shavers was not deserving.

Howard Joe did beat Quarry five years earlier, but going into the second fight Odds makers had Quarry the favorite, because of his wins over Lyle and Shavers. I am not a big Frazier fan, but that being said I dont think he ducked Lyle or Shavers. I think Joe would have had alot more problems with Lyle than Ernie but I think he would have gotten to both of them. Condition was a problem for both Shavers and Lyle.

Ali disciples: how many fights did he lose? How many close decisions that he got did he really lose? How many "victories" were actually very close fights that could have gone either way?
In fact, how many rounds did the (apparently) despised Joe Frazier win in their three bouts, and who knocked who down? Was this guy really worthy of the self appointed title "The Greatest"? Shouldn't the "greatest", in anything, be dominant, like, say, Babe Ruth was in his time? Come on. Be honest.

Why do Frazier groupies assume that because someone critically examines Frazier's career, he must automatically be an Ali groupie ? Likewise, why is it that Frazier groupies try to take the critical spotlight off Frazier by criticizing Ali ?
The most popular saying on this site is that styles make fights. That saying explains why Frazier ducked punchers. You can't get away from the facts of who he fought and didn't fight. A common thread exists that he ducked heavy hitters when he had the option to do so.

You guys have tried every excuse to clear Joe. First of all it was because he was too friendly with someone or the guy was from a derrent era or he was unranked or there was no money in fighting him. None of the excuses cut it, guys. One by one the excuses were knocked over and Massimo destroyed the last one by revealing the rankings.

Now this guy Fan, whoever he is this time around, tries to defend Joe by making accusations against Ali. Fan, Ali fought everyone. He didn't duck anyone. He fought the punchers and the boxers and everyone. If there was controversy in the result then he fought them again (and again).

Meanwhile, Joe was hiding from the punchers. Deep down all you guys know it, too. By the way, I'm no special fan of Ali. I don't believe he was The Greatest. But his resume is a long way ahead of Frazier's.

In 1969 he fought Quarry and Verdi@vapensierosull'alidorate.com

"the real Greatest" Zyglevic. Why didn't he fight the up and coming monster Mac Foster? In 1970 he fought Ellis and Foster. Why Foster? What did ever accomplish Foster in the heavyweight division to deserve a shot to Frazier? He had his ass whipped by Doug Jones, Ernie "Clay" Terrell and Zora Folley. He fought only 6 rounds in 1970. Why so little? He was the n.1 heavyweight in the world, and he was at the top of his game, he should have fought much more. Six rounds in a year, come on, that's almost Mike Tyson stuff! Joe Frazier gave so much to boxing and I am a Frazier fan, but I love the truths. Massimo "The truth" Cini.

2/22/05 08:30:24 AM|RUFUS C. GOOFUS|DUVASVILLE||DUVASVILLE.COM|||10|JOE FRAZIER AND MUHAMMAD ALI WERE GREAT FIGHTERS. A-HILT, A-HILT, A-HILT!! BY GOLLY, YES SIR REE BUB!!

2/22/05 08:31:06 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Kent: You keep saying that Shavers was "undeserving" of a "shot" against Joe Frazier in 1974. But Joe Frazier wasn't the champion anymore. He was two fighters removed from the title. Exactly what did Frazier do after losing to Foreman that elevated him to the status of being so unapproachable by Earnie Shavers? Why was he waiting in the wings for everybody to knock each other off instead of having his ass in the ring fighting along with everyone else? My point is that you put him on a pedestal by saying that other top ten guys needed to prove something to be deserving of a fight with Frazier. To me, after being pummeled by Foreman and beaten in the rematch with Ali, Frazier was the one who should have been charged with proving that HE was deserving of the big fights. Instead, Frazier laid back and his prayers were answered when a guy who he had already beaten knocked off the guys who might do to him what Foreman did. That isn't greatness, it's dumb luck.

2/22/05 08:33:01 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Eerie similarity to staying out of that 60's tournament too---let everyone fight each other, then take on the winner. Yeah, that's easier than two or three hard fights against top ten guys with different skill sets.

2/22/05 09:14:36 AM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com|||10|In early 1973 given a choice of Frazier fighting Foreman or Lyle Foreman was the bigger money fight and the more dangerous opponent. Frazier fought Foreman. In late 1973 given the choice of fighting Ali or Shavers there was no choice the world was waiting for ALI-Frazier 2. So Joe fought the winner of Quarry-Shavers. Joe didn't duck anyone.

2/22/05 09:46:38 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Fran: Joe Frazier was a warrior and I said in an earlier post, he'd fight whoever they put in front of him---and he'd fight them tooth and nail. Even in his losses to Foreman, he didn't want to quit after getting knocked down. You watch him in Manila and he didn't want to quit, even though he couldn't see. I'm not dumb enough to question Fraizer's courage---but I do believe his management protected him from guys with the style to beat him, especially after 1972.

2/22/05 09:54:40 AM|Kent|same|||10|One thing that Frazier had going for him, and Massimo's looking up the ratings shows this is true, Frazier was higher rated than either Shavers or Lyle in the period of 1974. As the higher rated fighter and the ex champion, he could fight the winner of those below him. Remember also that Frazier had a win over Joe Bugner, a fighter ranked in the top ten, in his first fight after losing his title to Foreman. I think a lot of the negativity surrounding Frazier comes from the vision of seeing him knocked down six times in less than two round verses Foreman. But consider what likley would have happened if say Earnie Shavers was allowed to continued after he was knocked down and out on his feet when he got up verses Quarry. Shavers likely would have went down multiple times but the referee did the right thing by stopping the fight when Shavers was badly hurt. So the image of Shavers isn't damaged because we didn't see him bounced around like a ball by Quarry a bunch of times. Frazier on the other hand was the victim of bad refereering and a negligent corner for allowing him to be knocked down six times in two rounds against Foreman. That fight should have been stopped after the second knock down. If that had happened, then everyone would say, "oh, Joe just got caught early and he never recovered," like Shavers did against Quarry, but the image of Joe going down so many more times is etched in a lot of people's memories and it takes away from a likely earlier perception that Joe was devastating before the Foreman fight, which he was. At his best, Frazier was brutally devastating, even for a brutal sport. He was just relentless.

That's a fair point about the image of Frazier going down six times against Foreman---being burned into our minds. I will say that it seemed as though Shavers took a lot more punches from Quarry before going down, then took a lot more and finished on his feet. Some of Foreman's knockdowns seemed to be scored with one big punch, or a couple big punches that had Frazier sailing down face first. Foreman was a devastating puncher and his show against Norton was every bit as impressive, even though there weren't six knockdowns. But I still disagree with the quality of Frazier's opponents being appropriate. Sure, Bugner was good. But wasn't he still a safer play (for FRAZIER'S STYLE) than someone like Lyle?

It wasn't that Frazier was unapproachable by Shavers. It was Shavers wasn't deserving of fighting whoever was higher rated that would give him a shot at the title because of losses to Quarry and the immortal Stallings, and a draw with Young in a return match. He had slipped in the rankings after his good showing earlier in 1973 when he had knocked out both Ellis and Young, which earned him the right to fight Quarry, who had beaten Lyle earlier in the year. The two highest rated fighters, Quarry and Frazier, then met to decide who would get a title shot and Frazier won that fight.

Someone here says Frazier beat Quarry easily twice. But this isn't true as anyone who has seen the first Frazier/Quarry fight would know. It was a gruelling match and Frazier wore Quarry down in a slugfest over seven rounds. It was because it was a difficult fight in their first meeting and that Quarry was on a roll going into Frazier/Quarry 2 after winning six in row, including the Lyle and Shavers fights that people thought it was Joe who was ready to be taken but it turned out to be the other way around as Quarry didn't show much and Joe had an easier time of it the second time out. The point is nobody thought Joe had taken the easy way out going into Frazier/Quarry 2. For some reason, Jerry just didn't have it anymore by the time of Frazier/Quarry 2 and he should have retired after this fight. It doesn't take way from Frazier's victory though as Joe seemed rejuvenated and he fought like he had fought in his prime.

Kent, do you understand why Frazier fought Bob Foster ? I just can't, he wasn't in the top ten. Maybe his management got the wrong Foster, maybe they meant Mac Foster. Try asking your 6'9" friend in Boston, maybe he knows ! I know that Mac Foster lost to Quarry in June 1970, but he still was way more dangerous than Bob Foster and much higher in the rankings. Mac Foster was big, had one hell of a right hand, had long arms and was very powerful. He was a little bit slow, but still an excellent heavyweight.

How far is it from the Staples Center ? And from Santa Monica ? I am no Frazier groupie. Just took a critical look at the record of "The Greatest" and concluded that the moniker, accepted by many, is a undeserved (and ruffled a few feathers in the process). By the way, does anyone recall how close Jerry came to a third Ali fight? Speaking of objective examinations of fighters and fights, take a look at Jerry at the end of the Shavers fight. Think if Ernie had survived the first round the outcome might have been different? Quarry's exhausted condition may have suggested what was, unfortunately, ahead for him. Maybe Frazier was lucky Jerry won.

I don't see the point in this Ali-vs-Frazier's place in heavyweight history debate going on much longer. It's abundantly clear that both camps are firmly entrenched in their opinions. I do believe, however, that the people who are defending Frazier's place in heavyweight history are taking the higher ground. Kent, Massimo, Noam, Fan, and myself have all acknowledged that Ali was probably the greatist heavyweight of all time. Angelo, you seem to feel as though Frazier was less than an all time great based on the often repeated argument that he ducked all heavy punchers. Notably Shavers, Lyle and Norton. I've got to repeat my stance that the fact that he fought Foreman a second time, Ali three times, Oscar Bonavena twice, and Jerry Quarry twice, kind of refutes your statement that he ducked all difficult fights. You can only fight so many fights in a given time frame. For Frazier to have fought every top ten ranked fighter during the mid seventies, he would have to fight every two months. Yes, Ali fought everyone out there, and look where it got him. Yes, Angelo, the idea that "styles make fights" is a valid argument. It's not an excuse. Frazier defeats Ali, Foreman crushes Frazier, Ali ko's Foreman. Quarry walked through Shavers, and beat the heck out of Ron Lyle. Are you saying that Frazier, by fighting Quarry a second time, was ducking Shavers and Lyle? Did any of Foreman's knockout victims ever fight him a second time? Where would you put George Foreman on the all time list? Remember, he has been quoted as saying that he "ducked Jerry Quarry."

Massimo, why did Ali fight Bob Foster, could he have thought he was giving Ken Norton a fourth chance, since he stole the third fight?

Where a grueling fight schedule against the world's best got Ali is two places: 1) He has severe neurological problems due to Parkinson's Syndrome (or Parkinson's Disease) very likely due to boxing, though Michael J. Fox and Janet Reno have the same disorder and they never faced Shavers, Foreman and Frazier, at least not to my knowledge. 2) The other place it got Ali is to the top of all time greats are discussed. If he isn't the greatest, he's pretty damn close. Frazier? Very, very good heavyweight of his era and a fine Champion. Don't tell me that he couldn't take on every top ten fighter or he'd be fighting every two months. I never said he had to fight EVERY top ten guy---it just would have been nice if he fought a few different ones or at least, for instance, Ron Lyle instead of Jimmy Ellis a second time. Okay, okay, he was training for Ali and Ellis was a better test for him than Lyle or Shavers. Fine. With Bugner, what's the reason there? Hmmmm....let's see, Stander and Bugner are both a little slow, so that's a good reason. No entrance into the tournament? Ahhh...let's see, the best in the world shouldn't have to prove it by fighting three times, why not wait till the dust settles and just take on the winner and hope that it's a guy with a lighter punch. Then I could beat him and low and behold, fight him 5 years later and beat him again.

Massimo, I believe Big Mac Foster was 20 wins, 0 losses, 20 knockouts when Jerry Quarry took him to big boys school. I guess Jerry had to fight him, since Frazier was ducking him.

No one can identify any viable heavy that Ali didn't face. It didn't matter who they were, he fought them. Frazier didn't. Fact. Joe and Yank and Cloverlay had board meetings to decide Joe's next opponent. They discussed who and what to avoid (like the elimination tournament). Fact. Meanwhile, Ali didn't need discussions; he just fought the next best. Fact.
examples (facts) with Joe. Look at Doug Jones's schedule:1966 v Terrell Lost 151966 v Spencer Lost 101967 v Frazier KO by 6Frazier fought the loser Jones instead of the winners Spencer and Terrell. Fact.Look again at Terrell. In 1965 he beat Machin and Chuvalo and in 1966 he beat Jones. Yet Frazier fought all the losers (Machin and Chuvalo), and not the winner (Terrell). Fact.Same with Thad Spencer. In 1996 he beat Jones and not Spencer. Fact.Look at Shavers. In 1971 he had 17 fights and 17 KO's. In 1972 he had 8 fights and 7 KO's. Yet Joe never made time to fight him. Fact.We should examine who Ellis fought in the lead up to the second Frazier fight. Ellis had lost three and drew 1 of his last four fights, yet Frazier decided to fight him a second time, despite the fact that Lyle and Shavers were still out there. Lyle and Shavers had already beaten Ellis, but Joe opted on the loser. Fact.Steve....Joe fought Ali three times because he hated Ali, there was too much money to refuse, and Ali wasn't a puncher. Facts.Frazier fought Foreman the first time because he didn't consider Foreman a dangerous opponent. Joe expected to beat him easily. He said so in his book. Facts.Joe fought Foreman the second time because he had to. He couldn't duck that fight if he had any aspirations of getting the title back. Fact.As I've repeatedly said, Frazier's legend is held together with excuses and explanations. Ali's isn't. Fact. Get used to it.|2/22/05 03:01:12 PM|charles|ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com||10|jimmy young dead at 56|
|2/22/05 03:02:19 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net.||10|Angelo, with all due respect, I'm not a medical expert, so I cannot say that Ali's condition is a result of beatings he took over the course of his career. My asking where his career choices got him was a rhetorical question. Don't take everything said about Ali that you don't agree with as an personal affront. I can't believe we're discussing Joe Bugner. Does any one who was alive in the early seventies, and saw Joe bugner fight, really believe anyone took him seriously as a threat to Ali or Frazier?|
|2/22/05 04:12:05 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|That's terrible news about Jimmy Young. Very sad. He was a favorite of mine. Howard C: That post sums it up better than I can. Facts are facts. Probably the most ridiculous and surprising thing you pointed out was Jimmy Ellis' futility leading up to the Frazier rematch. Could they possibly have picked a less threatening opponent that anyone had ever heard of than a guy who was having draws/losses in bunches like that? Ellis clearly had nothing left, nothing at all, and still gave Frazier a few tough rounds (I have that one on tape---Ellis actually stayed away and boxed well for about 4-5 rounds.). Kent: Newsflash, if he wanted to prepare for Ali, Joe would have been better off sparring with Marvis, who was about 12 years old at the time, rather than a 1974 Ellis. This wasn't about finding someone to prepare for Ali, it was a payday against an opponent who was utterly incapable of hurting Frazier. As if Ellis' poor recent record wasn't enough of an insurance policy, there was the history that Frazier had already KOed him when Ellis was actually good. Steve: No, to answer your question, no one alive in the early 70's had any reason to think Bugner could beat Ali or Frazier and that's the point. Ali fought him, but also fought everyone else. Frazier fought him but had very few other fights in the period—making Bugner a bigger part of his history, not a footnote like Bugner is with Ali.

Charles, yes it is sad Jimmy Young died, he was only 56. I haven't heard the details but I do know, from a very reliable source, that he was a heavy drinker, he had a severe problem and he was either on the streets or close to it in recent times, penniless.

We can't forget our fallen warriors as often times the problems they face after their careers are over are magnified by damage they suffered in the ring. I always thought Jimmy was one of the ones who stayed in the game way too long.

RIP JIMMY YOUNG 1948-2005.

Honour to Jimmy Young, rest in peace.

Steve, whether or not Ali received his illness from boxing, shouldn't detract from his reputation as a boxer. The reality is that he fought EVERYONE, and writing his schedule wasn't a game of chess like it appears to have been with Joe. Ali's daughter denies that the illness was from boxing, but I believe that boxing probably sped up something he was always going to get, but probably later.

People forget that Ali taking the first fight against Liston was very risky. No one gave him a chance. Critics thought he was stupid for taking the fight. But Ali and Dundee had confidence in his ability. On the other hand, Frazier never pushed the limits or his luck like Ali did against Liston and later Foreman.

It is interesting about the second Frazier v Ellis fight. It took place in some place called Melbourne. It just looks to me like Joe was taking it easy. He wanted the big money fights against Ali and Foreman, but he didn't have enough confidence in himself to take risk against decent oppositions, especially big punchers.

Truth is, in the second part of his career, Frazier was suspect to big punchers. Don't forget that both losses to Foreman happened AFTER the first Ali fight.

But what evidence is there that Frazier wasn't vulnerable to big punchers BEFORE the first Ali fight? Would Frazier have done any better against Foreman if he'd fought him before Ali? No, I don't think he would have. I think the doubt with his chin was always there and Foreman would have knocked him out at any stage of Joe's career.

Someone said that Joe fought substandard opponents after he won the title because champions are entitled to fight a few stiffs as a reward. Well, Joe had a very extended 'honeymoon' after he beat Ali. He beat Ali in March 8, 1971. He didn't fight again until January 1972 against Daniels and then in May 1972 against Stander.

It wasn't until January 1973 that Joe's two years long 'honeymoon' ended when he lost to Foreman. As can be seen, his only two defences before he lost it were to Stander and Daniels. That took him 24 long months.

Someone should have told Ali he could have a 'honeymoon' after he won the title. After he beat Liston in February 1964, his next fights were against Liston, Patterson, Chuvalo, and Cooper—two ex-champs in that list. No 'honeymoons' like Daniels or Stander in there.
Foreman for the title in 1974, Ali fought Wepner, Lyle, Bugner, and then Frazier. He had four hard fights in the year after he regained the title. Unfortunately, comparisons don't do Joe any favours.

|2/23/05 10:24:28 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|Kent: I didn't mean to imply that you were disrespecting Young. In fact, it's very likely that if he had a drinking or drug problem, that definitely contributed to his heart condition at a relatively young age. I've heard the same things about Young that you have. He seemed like a very good guy with typical money and substance problems that affect a lot of former athletes/boxers. I had heard that he had some neurological problems, but was not clear if it was from blows to the head or substance abuse. I remember reading that Aaron Pryor compounded possible mental slowdown from blows to the head, by using serious drugs---and it's fully possible that the drugs contributed to his condition far more than concussions or brain injury from boxing. As for Jimmy Young, he was a polite guy who was humble as a former boxer and approachable by fans. I wish he could have become a trainer or stayed active in a productive way, and stayed away from alcohol. He had a lot to offer. |

|2/23/05 11:00:18 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Angelo, I wasn't implying anyone here was saying I was disrespectful to Jimmy Young's memory. I was maybe being a little over sensitive to the fact that the man has just died and I had repeated something that a writer friend, who I will not identify here (see I am not always name dropping as some here claim at times) said in confidence. In fact I did a short obituary for Eastside Boxing and I didn't mention his problems or condition as I considered the piece like speaking at someone's funeral. |

|2/23/05 11:54:41 AM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com||10|I have spoken at length about Jimmy with one of his good friends about two years back. Jimmy never could let the Norton decision go. It compounded in his brain along with the Ali decision and led Jimmy to believe that boxing would never give him a fair shake. Jimmy was never serious about boxing again after the Norton fight. Jimmy had trouble after his career, and it's a shame to hear he is gone. |

|2/23/05 12:18:35 PM|Steve|N.J.||N/A||10|Jimmy Youngs's death is tragic. It makes this site's purpose even more clearly defined. I brought these ideas up once before. What about set number of fights allowed to reach certain career goals. Unless a fighter is undefeated, he has a limit of, say, 40 fights? Thats if he still hadn't won a title or was not the champion at the time he reached 40 fights. Not allowed to fight after a certain age, say, 40 years old, unless undefeated, and of course can pass some form of neurological testing? These limits are just an opinion, but clearly, some limits should be imposed. It might have saved Jerry Quarry. I guess this again brings up the need for a federal boxing commission. It would also have powers over fighters from other countries who fight in this country. For that matter, we would probably need a world wide governing body. Probably impossible! |

|2/23/05 12:49:35 PM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Yesterday I have seen a fight between Samil San and a guy named Lawrence Clay Bey. Bey is 39 years of age and overweight (about 6'3", about 258) and although he fought a great fight and almost beat Samil San, I was wondering: "What is this old man in the ring for?". He started his professional career at 32 and now he has a record of 21-3-0. Just a while ago, fighters that old were a rarity, now I see too much of them in the ring. I think this is not good for boxing. |

|2/23/05 12:49:40 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|Young was within grasp of the title and fell just short against Ali. I believe the Norton fight could have gone either way. I scored it in favor of Young (I had him ahead by two points), but I could see how a judge might like Norton. Young was an odd case—he did not have a good record and had some bad losses. Then, it really seemed to come together for him after losing to Ali. He beat some good fighters and did so impressively. He handled Lyle and Foreman, no small task.
He had a very strong showing against Norton. I really feel that if he could have just held it together a little longer by beating Ocasio, he was next in line for Larry Holmes. At that time, I think Holmes probably would have taken him in a decision win, but Young would have had a good payday and a chance at more.

As for regulating boxing---it's a shame to say it, but it's like cockfighting. If one place puts in some smart rules that prevents guys who don't belong in the ring from stepping in, another place will welcome them with open arms if money is available. Personally, I admit to the guilt of watching it. I watched 40-something Foreman and 40-something Holmes take on Holyfield. I watched Foreman vs. Moorer. If Greg Page had been fighting in the DC area and I could get a ticket, I'd probably go see it and watch him slip into a coma (and by the way, reports say that he is improving). I've watched mismatches like Holmes-Cobb and old guys going for another shot at glory. I guess boxing fans do that. As long as there is a demand, they'll put on the show. The common sense way of handling it is a federal organization that sanctions fights based on physical condition, not age or how many fights you've had. If the person has reflexes within a reasonable margin, a healthy heart and normal brain activity, they can fight. If someone is knocked out, there should be a long waiting period until they are cleared to fight again. If there are more than two 10 count KO losses in a row, they should have to sit out for a very long time and get a close examination. This won't solve the problem---they could fight in another country---but it will discourage craziness from going on.

Ali's slurring in speech was evident immediately after the Foreman fight when he spoke at ringside. No attempt was made to dissuade him from fighting again. Even when his doctor said he should retire, the authorities paid even less heed than Ali did.

Boxers make money for the sanctioning authority and the promoters, not to mention his own trainer, manager, and family. Fights sell newspapers and pay-per-view so don't expect to read or hear about the health problems fighting causes in the media. The system is not self-defeating and everyone has a vested interested, making it easier to turn a blind eye and muffled ear to the deteriorating symptoms in the fighter.

Most fighters don't have other skills. Opportunities are rare. So they have to decide between poverty and ill health. Because ill health is a slowly deteriorating spiral, whereas poverty is almost instant, it's expedient to keep fighting. They put the medical problem off for another day. When that day comes the problem is usually so developed that it's way too late to help.

Pre-fight medical examinations obviously aren't working because they fail to detect problems at an early stage. Trying to regulate the problem is difficult because outlawing a sick boxer is a restraint of trade and therefore actionable at law.

All of the above makes it easier for authorities and fighter management to hide the problem as it deteriorates and then, when the world finally realizes that the fighter is badly damaged, he's hidden away and ignored because he's an embarrassment and a burden. It is a barbaric and unforgiving livelihood. If the fighter's health gets in the way of a good payday, then it is the payday that takes precedence every time.

Someone has to save the fighter from himself, but so far no one has had the strength of character to do it. As far as many boxing fans are concerned, train wrecks are more appetizing to watch than a bloodless points decision.

In the end, everyone has had a piece of the boxer, but the fighter is left to deal with the problem alone and penniless. Some have a wonderful family like Jerry Quarry did to help but that is rare.

Fighters usually lack the guile and sophistication to get the proper help by themselves. Some turn to alcohol and drugs because the effects temporarily mask the physical pain and the loneliness. Eventually they mask it continually by drinking continually.I hope it wasn't so for Jimmy Young.By themselves. Some turn to alcohol and drugs because the effects temporarily mask the physical pain and the loneliness. Eventually they mask it continually by drinking continually.I hope it wasn't so for Jimmy Young.

Funktron@yahoo.com

Noam: It's all pretty accurate---though there have been many cases where a financially healthy boxer continued to fight past his prime---disproving the poverty reason.
Ali, Holyfield, Leonard and others had millions of dollars banked as well as the opportunity to make money, in retirement, through commentating, promoting products, personal appearances, etc. Still, they boxed. Holyfield puzzles me.
Why keep going for this long? I read a Washington Times article on Jerry Quarry in the mid-90s. It talked about how his father had hoped he'd retire from fighting when he was young and not affected and buy some gas stations and just have a comfortable living. As we know, this didn't happen. Jerry's an example of a guy who did a great job doing color commentary on fights, had popularity and personality---and could have stayed out after the second loss to Frazier. I guess it's in your blood to keep coming back for more.Angelo

In the early 70's or earlier to get wealthy you had to be one hell of a fighter! Heck, Frazier and Ali only got 1.5 million dollars for the Fight of the Century. I'm not 100% sure, but very probably Mike Tyson got more money for his fight with Clifford!
Today, you don't have to be a champion to make money! Heck, John Ruiz probably is already very wealthy! And still (or yet) surprisingly today the fighters fight until they are very old, while in the past they usually did quit their careers very soon (on average, there were a few exceptions like Jersey Joe Walcott etc). Guys, I really don't think that a great fighter like Zora Folley got (or became) SUPERWEALTHY. If Ali' and Frazier got 1.5 million dollars for their first fight, how much did Zora Folley get for his fight with the legendary Duke Sabedong (a guy who was only 3 inches shorter than Kent's friend in Boston)?

On the other hand I remember that Michele Geraldo Tyson got an unbelievable amount of money for his 1996 fight against Frank Bruno. I've never been shorter, I meant andreer.

Noam

With some fighters boxing is a means to an end. They make good money and get out. Other fighters are involved because they have no other options. With some fighters boxing is a means to an end. They make good money and get out. Other fighters are involved because they have no other options. But a guy like Holyfield is a warrior who truly loves the sport and the battle (whether or not he gets beat up). Holyfield is past the point where he needs to be protected from himself. Then there are guys like Larry Holmes. He was all three of those things. He fought as a means to an end and then invested his money well and is set for life. Larry probably also didn't have many choices; boxing was all he was good at. And then Larry kept fighting past his prime - not because he needed the money and had no other options by then - but simply as a result of loving the challenge and the battle. Perhaps Sugar Ray Leonard was like this as well, although he got out rich when the writing was definitely on the wall for him. Rocky Marciano was smart enough to know when to stop.

Lennox Lewis is smart too, but I'm not convinced he'll stay retired. Most boxers don't know when to call time and in the most dangerous sport of all that can be a fatal mistake.Ali certainly fought everybody. The only thing close to "ducking" anyone, as I recall, was his decision to fight Olympic champ Leon Spinks, who had about 8 pro fights, at a time when fans were clamoring for yet another Norton bout. Leon was entirely cooperative in Ali's quest to regain the title again, which, you may recall, was a huge deal at the time. (After losing it to Spinks he easily won it back from him). However, by fighting everyone - and going the distance repeatedly with great fighters - Ali took several lifetimes of punishment. Just consider what he endured in his three close bouts with Frazier and Norton respectively. Young, Lyle, Shavers... he got as good as he gave in all of these fights and more. Far more abuse than the human body is designed to take. (BTW, re: pre-Ali evidence of Joe Frazier's ability to take a punch - Jerry Quarry, at his peak in June, 1969, threw everything he had at Frazier and didn't budge him. I don't think anyone would say Jerry couldn't punch, especially in 1969). The best way to stay healthy is to be a big puncher, run up a bunch of early KO's, and, if you're going to lose, get quickly starched a few times and then call it quits. Gerry Cooney almost had it right, then he imprudently fought the grossly underrated Michael Spinks and Big George, when Gerry had no business being in the ring. But for those mistakes, he would have suffered only one beating in a very profitable career. Jimmy Young was a smart, slick, entertaining and underrated boxer. Another sad ending, and he won't be the last.

Hi Fan,

Yes, Quarry hit him hard and he didn't budge. But do you really think that Jerry punched as hard as Foreman or Shavers or Lyle? After all, Jerry in his prime couldn't even knock an ageing Patterson out. The first one was a draw and the second a points win. Heck, Patterson in his prime couldn't even get past the first round in his two fights against Liston. Bonavena didn't punch overly hard and he nearly stopped Joe and this was only 12 fights into Frazier's career. Patterson beat Bonavena in 1972.

So I'd have to disagree with you. I've gone through everyone that Frazier fought before Foreman and I really can't find heavy punchers, certainly not ones in the league of, for example, Lyle and Shavers and Liston. I think Ali was perfect for Joe because Ali was not a huge puncher. Ali suited Joe because Frazier could be aggressive as he knew a bone rattler wasn't going to come his way. Even so, Frazier was never the same after the first fight against Ali. Despite his win, the fight shook his confidence and he became gun shy. He didn't fight for over a year and, when he did, it was only against Daniels and Stander. Of all the fighters Joe faced, he only faced two men in the top 10 of all time (Ali and Foreman). He faced them five times for only one win. Joe was stopped three out of the five times. Joe's popularity with some fans mirrors Ali's unpopularity with those same people. That tells you something.

My honest opinion is that Frazier is hugely overrated. Louis and Marciano and Holmes and Tyson and Liston and Lewis would have blown him out of the ring pronto.

FAN: I think Ali ducked giving Jimmy Young a rematch. He would never even discuss a return about. Young deserved a rematch in my opinion.

John: I don't think Ali ducked a Jimmy Young rematch out of fear of losing. Ali weighed 230 pounds for the Young fight, about 10 pounds over his fighting weight of that era, and worse yet, was not trained well. Even so, he managed the win and was never hurt by Young. I believe that there would have been a rematch if there was a big demand for it and Ali would have won a much more decisive decision! I agree that Ali wanted no part of Norton after 1976. He could have let Spinks defend against Norton, and taken on the winner, keeping the title unified. Instead, he fought Spinks to get his title back, then semi-retired. I don't think he was afraid of losing to Norton by KO, but his best years were behind him and Norton was peaking. Ali was concerned about losing the title to Norton—probably figured Norton would take out Spinks and be fully charged to take him too. The only other person who Ali probably should have taken on, but didn't, was George Foreman again. After Ali beat Foreman for the title, Foreman won some fights (including the slugfest with Lyle) and didn't lose until 1977. Between 1974 and 1977, while Ali was defending against Jean-Pierre Coopman, Wepner, Evangilista, etc., why not give Foreman a chance to reclaim his title? I say this, and I'm Ali's biggest fan. Interestingly, Foreman believes he "would have made the same dumb mistake" in a rematch with Ali, and would have lost again, back then. I think the new Foreman believes he was better at 43 than he was at 27. But you know, we're talking about guys who Ali "should have fought again" including Norton, who he beat twice in three matches. It's a big reach to say Ali ducked anyone. Conversely, speaking of Frazier, we talk about fights that never happened, not once, not ever, against Lyle, Shavers, Liston, Norton, Young---the list goes on---and we talk about how Frazier gave rematches to people he knocked out (like the used-up Jimmy Ellis of 1974, who rode a losing streak in to face Frazier).

And come to think of it, Kent made a facicious comment wondering if we think Frazier ducked Jose Luis Garcia (since he was known as a puncher). On the surface, it was a humorous/sarcastic comment that I thought was funny. But the more I think about it, the more I wonder. I never saw this guy fight and that's why I asked what his KO over Norton was like. It occurs to me that if Garcia had a big punch, maybe, just maybe, Frazier's "committee" did in fact to the "discuss and avoid" shuffle. I know this sounds crazy, but...where are the big punchers, aside from Foreman, on Joe's record? We know they were out there, but there always seemed to be some explanation for why fights against these guys never materialized. In a historic context, I wonder why Frazier and Garcia's paths never crossed?

I do know that Frazier was offered a fight against Liston early in Joe's career and turned the offer down.

The only guy Frazier ever ducked was Lorenzo Zanon and Ali! ducked him too :-) I certainly don't blame Ali' for not fighting Foreman a second time, Norton a fourth time and Frazier a seventh time, he was somehow a human being and needed to breath once in a while. Primo Carnera never ducked anyone.

Fan

Thanks for the heads-up on just how good Frazier's jaw really was before the first Ali fight. You say that Jerry Quarry never "budged" Joe in their 1969 fight. Look at the lead-ups Quarry had: Earls W10 Ellis L15 1967

So, Fan, thanks for setting us straight that Frazier's jaw was at least as durable as Earls's, Ellis's, Patterson's, and London's. Wow !

Jimmy Young fought Ali in April 1976. In December 1976 Frazier fought exhibitions against his son, Marvis, and then against Foranicki. Joe would have been better off fighting Young. Or Lyle. Or Norton. Or Shavers. Ali fought all these guys; Frazier fought none of them. Yet you criticize Ali for not fighting Young a second time? I guess that sums up the bone headedness of the Ali haters.

Just a minute, Patterson went on the canvas one hundred times against Quarry, while Frazier never went down against Jerry. And Jimmy Ellis wasn't maybe a great puncher, but he had a very good jaw, he was never even knocked down before (or until) the first Frazier fight and went twelve rounds with Ron Lyle.
I apologize for calling you a bonehead. I shouldn't have because you are usually a sensible poster. However, I disagree with you about Ali not fighting Young a second time, especially in view of your failure to criticize Foreman for not fighting Young, Lyle, Shavers, Norton, et al, FOR THE FIRST TIME. On the other hand, you did mention that Frazier refused to fight Liston. Anyway, these are the REAL reasons Joe never fought Liston, Terrell, Young, Shavers, Norton and Lyle,1) Cloverlay and Yank told him not to.2) Joe was too friendly with them.3) Joe was entitled to easier fights in warm ups before title fights.4) Joe was entitled to easier fights in warm downs after title fights.5) There was more money in fights against Daniels and Stander.Joe was instead concentrating on his burgeoning singing career.7) Yank's dog ate the fight contracts before Joe had a chance to sign them.I've set the record straight. | the uppercut Shavers knocked out Ellis with in 1973...That punch was really scary, I think it's a miracle that Jimmy Ellis' head is still on his shoulders! Hell, that uppercut would have knocked out cold Ali', Chuvalo, Quarry, Carnera, Spalla, Warren Coolidge, Hulk Hogan, Wilt Chamberlain, Andre' the Midget, Jim Clancy...probably even Calvin Lane! That punch would have killed most of the people in the world, including Kent's friend in Boston (who is, by the way, clearly wilter than Byron Stewart).

Jim Clancy? You mean the 1970's pitcher for the Toronto Blue Jays? As for Earnie's uppercut that took out Ellis---Ole' Jimmy's bells were still ringing when he stepped in against Frazier AFTER Shavers KOed him. Lucky Joe. Gee, Kent likes to point out that Lucky Joe took on the winner of Quarry vs. Lyle then Quarry vs. Shavers (just so happened that Lucky Joe had already knocked out this winner, our own Jerry Quarry, back in the 60's). Of course instead of fighting the winner of Shavers vs. Ellis, Lucky Joe was fortunate enough to "negotiate" to fight the loser, the one round knockout victim LOSER of that fight, Jimmy Ellis.Lucky Joe, good ole' Lucky Joe.

No, I have never heard of the Toronto Blue Jays, I meant that guy who talks often on the CNN. Don't you get CNN over there in Washington? I use to watch CNN every day, it's very interesting and well done, even if I really don't understand why they use to repeat over and over again the same 5 or 6 news for (or throughout) the entire day. It's a very good training for my English and I'm getting better day after day. They have been talking about the Pope's health conditions for many hours today. Where is your home town Washington exactly? I know that it is on the east coast (very far from California, and this is no good) but in what state is? Maybe Idaho? Maybe Washington?

Hey Angelo, what is your final point in this seemingly never ending debate? Based on your last sarcastic post, I guess you feel that Frazier and Quarry were very, very, lucky to have even gotten into the top ten rankings during the seventies. Taking your logical argument a step further, Shavers, SLOW MOTION Ron Lyle, and Ken Norton, were probably better fighters, who were robbed of their greatness by being ducked by Frazier.

I don't think Jerry hit as hard as Shavers or Foreman. He really didn't have one punch knockout power against top heavies. But I still think the Quarry of June 23, 1969, threw some bombs. He vowed to destroy Frazier, and try he did; he let it all hang out for a few rounds, including Ring's round of the year. Many fighters would have gone down against that assault, but the Frazier of June 23, 1969 was barely fazed. I agree that the Ali fight took a lot out of him, though he did quite well in the next two fights, especially if Ali was as great as many seem to think. They were both close, so if Frazier was indeed washed up, what does that say about Ali's performances? Just a bit better than an overrated bum, as many here seem to believe of Joe? That's "The Greatest"?
Joe was entitled to a tune up fight.Angelo, answer the question why Shavers in 1974 to 1975 deserved to fight for a chance at the title when he lost to Quarry (can be considered in this time frame as it took place in December 1973), the immortal Bob Stallings, had a draw with Jimmy Young, and a loss to Lyle?  I know one can argue the fact to support why Lyle deserved a chance, which he did get in 1975 against Ali, and isn't it possible Lyle could have been offered a fight with Frazier but wisely took the Ali fight because it was for the title?  But the same cannot be said for Shavers in this same time frame as 1974-1975 was not a good time for him.  1976 to 1977 was a better period in Shavers' career and Frazier was not avoiding him then as he was gone, a shot fighter who would never have taken the second Foreman fight.  When I am talking about a time frame when a Frazier verses Lyle or Shavers is possibly viable it is the period before Oct. of 1975, his third fight against Ali.  Before 1973 both Lyle and Shavers were relatively unknown prospects who were unproven, sluggers like today's Samuel Peter, but still unproven and there was no call for a fight with either of them verses Frazier but they were probably less known than Peter is now.  No one at that time was saying Joe was avoiding them.  It is only after the fact, when Lyle and Shavers are better known that people are bringing this up.| 2/24/05 09:00:14 PM|Steve|N.J.||N/A|||10|Fan,I agree Jerry didn't hit as hard as Shavers or Foreman. However, it did take Foreman six knock downs to stop Frazier. It took three knock downs to finish of Lyle. That's not exactly one punch knockout power. Quarry dispatched Shavers with a lot less effort, and took Lyle's best shots, without blinking. | 2/24/05 09:19:48 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago||joseph......|||10|Shavers was not in the same league as Frazier, but it would not have been a good match-up styles wise for Frazier.  Slow starter against incredible starter. No one except Jerry actually came at Earnie Shavers.  Lyle retreated the first 3 rounds before turning it on. If Frazier comes right at Shavers there is about a 40% chance Shavers knocks him out in the first 3 rounds. I have seen every fight either has ever fought that is on tape and don't say that lightly. | 2/24/05 09:43:20 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Pan, I agree with you, Jerry didn't hit as hard as Shavers or Foreman. However, it took six knock down for Foreman to finish of Frazier. It took three knock downs to stop Lyle. That's not exactly one punch knockout power. Quarry stopped Shavers with a lot less effort. He took Lyle's best shots without blinking. Norton got knocked out by any one who could punch a little bit. Garcia, Foreman, Shavers, Cooney. Quarry and Frazier were both masters at setting traps and counterpunching. I think Lyle, Shavers and Norton are lucky they didn't fight Frazier at his peak. | 2/25/05 03:18:08 AM|Massimo|Roma||skyhookkareem@lefthookFrazier.yahoo.legends.com|||10|Howard C., Noam, Angelo-It is still unclear to me why Frazier fought Foreman a second time. To get a title shot? Come on, Ali would have never fought Frazier a fourth time after Manilla. I'm not sure, but I think Frazier fought George a second time for a matter of self pride. Ain't it possible?  | 2/25/05 06:37:27 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||Kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Steve, it really didn't take Foreman knocking down Frazier six times as Frazier was finished by the second or at least the third knock down. He was fighting back feebly on instinct alone and he could have died in the ring in which case the referee and his corner would have been criminally negligent. Smokin Joe would have gotten up a thousand times, if possible, before he would have admitted defeat but why make him prove it? I remember watching it live, I can't remember if it was live T.V. or a close circuit broadcast at a location, but it was downright scary and I remember yelling at the screen, "Stop the fight!" "Stop the fight!" This was after the third knock down. As I stated in an earlier post, I think a lot of the negative image people have of Frazier is watching him in that first Foreman fight being bounced around like a rubber ball when the reality is Joe got caught and badly hurt early in the fight and he never recovered and if the fight would have been stopped, as it should have been, after the second or third knockdown, then that image of him being completely destroyed would be lessened in people's minds and they would say, "Joe got caught early," cause that is what happened.Since you asked, my final point, and really my only point is that Frazier did not fight the highest caliber, best available opponents during his career and also did not fight often enough to be considered a top 10 all time champion. That's it. The discussion has gone round and round due to the enormous amount of explanations and excuses offered as to why Joe didn't fight these highest caliber/dangerous opponents and didn't fight often enough. Everything from "timing wasn't there" to "didn't need to fight him" to "entitled to fight Stander instead of ____." Frazier fans normally always bring it back to knocking down Ali and winning their first fight, and this is why the knee-jerk reaction here is to then point to the fact that Ali fought and defended his title against the long line of power punchers and other dangerous opponents that Frazier skipped over while both were active. You get to be "all time great" by doing it longer and better than everyone else. Joe Louis, Muhammad Ali, Larry Holmes---held the title a long time and took on everyone challenged them.Foreman: Two careers, champions in both.Frazier: Lots of mystery about what "might have happened if he fought _____." Why? Because he DIDN'T fight _____. Title reign unimpressive because his 70's defenses were against lackluster opponents save for Ali.

That said, he's right outshine the top 10 in my book, which is pretty awesome considering how many professional heavyweight boxers have come and gone---thousands---and whatever negative things I've said about Frazier's career, for me, he's around # 10 out of thousands of fighters. So I balance my skepticism about his management and his choice of opponents by admitting that he was pretty damn good.

Tonight in Italy on ESPN Classic there will be a special of about half an hour on Joe Frazier "Joe Frazier, the legends of sports". I invite all of you 280 millions of Americans in "my" home tonight. My home is very close to Ponte Delle Valli, in Quartiere Montesacro. It's also about 10 miles far from Colosseo.

That said, he's right outshine the top 10 in my book, which is pretty awesome considering how many professional heavyweight boxers have come and gone---thousands---and whatever negative things I've said about Frazier's career, for me, he's around # 10 out of thousands of fighters. So I balance my skepticism about his management and his choice of opponents by admitting that he was pretty damn good.
Hey Angelo, if you guys invite me to the pizza party, red wine is fine, but I'll bring the Wild Turkey and Millers.

What are these toppings? Something to eat (or eatable, or of eatable)?

Kent, yeah, I remember watching Foreman vs Frazier. Do you remember, in those days they had closed circuit tv at places like the Cherry Hill Colliseum? I'll never forget Howard Cosell screaming at the top of his lungs, "Joe Frazier is down, Joe Frazier is down, Joe Frazier is down!"

Hey Massimo, if you ever tasted a Philly cheese steak, you wouldn't even care about pizza!

What are these toppings? Something to eat (or eatable, or of eatable)?

Hey Massimo, if you ever tasted a dish of LASAGNE, you wouldn't even care about the Philly cheese steak (....Whatever it is...).

Massimo, if you ever tasted a dish of LASAGNE, you wouldn't even care about the Philly cheese steak (....Whatever it is...).

Hey Massimo, does PIATTI mean food?

Hey Kent, don't knock your peoples culinary skills, Redskins! Just kidding!! Did you ever wonder how American Natives flourished for centuries before the coming of the white man? What the heck did they eat? Can you really kill an animal with a bow and arrow? Those guys would qualify for Special Forces today!

Hey Angelo, what about Pat's cheese steaks?

In hindsight, Ali was not big on rematches unless he got beat the first time. Good policy if you can pull it off, which you could if you were Ali. (Frazier, Norton - yes, Lyle, Young, Shavers - no). Jerry was probably fortunate, at least financially, to get one.

Ali also fought his share of stiffs. Let's not forget what was being called his version of the bum of the month club (Coopman, Lubers, Engelsta come to mind). On the other hand, he had fought all the top guys three times each, he probably wouldn't even be around today. Most great fighters have maybe one such series in a career. The good part about Ali's tuneups was that the fights were on network TV and you didn't have to shell out for closed circuit. Although Ali barely squeaked by in a few, those were all against world class fighters, I'll give him that. Someone mentioned that Louis and Marciano fought everyone. Maybe, but who was there, really? Louis' big rivals were Conn, a lightheavy, and Schmeling, already fading at the time of their first fight. Marciano's were Moore, a lightheavy who floored him, and Walcott, also an aging fighter. Although it's tough to envision Rocky beating Ali or Frazier, he did defeat everyone they threw at him. I guess you can't argue with success.

Speaking of the cost of being a fan, I paid $20 to see Ali-Frazier I - live. As I recall the blue seats at MSG were $10 for several of Jerry's fights. Hard to believe now.

Steve -

"Piatti" is the plural form of "piatto", obviously. In the contest I used it meant "kind of food", I was saying that "lasagne is one of my favorite kinds of food". Guys, what I was trying to say is that sometimes I have heard of people outside Italy calling (or who calls) "pizza" something that ain't even close to what pizza should be, THE REAL ITALIAN PIZZA. So, be carefully about that!

Steve, I don't know how to shoot a bow and arrow but my brother could shoot one at about six years old, my dad taught him and my brother is probably still good at it. The leader of our tribe once said, "I can shoot a bow and arrow as good as good as my great-grandfather could shoot one, but now we have lawyers to do our fighting for us." Yeah but wiwish still stinks, yuck!

I have never objected to the term Redskin but maybe it is because I am white European also. What is between Red and White? I guess it would be pink and I don't think I would like to be called pinkskin!

I can blend in with the white people though but sometimes someone will think I am part Mexican or that I have some Hawaiian blood in me or even Italian as I have dark hair, and still dark at 46 years old!

One last time regarding Joe Frazier. On Joe's way up to the championship he fought anyone that stood in his way to become the #1 contender and eventually champion. As a champion he fought the best available at the time: Quarry, Bonevania, Ellis, Ali, Foreman. After losing the championship he fought whoever was in front of him to get a championship fight, in Joe's case Quarry was the primary contender. He beat Jerry easily. What some of the Ali worshipers on this board lack is analytical ability. Anyone can look at a boxer's record and say, well, "fighter X did not fight fighter's Y and Z, so fighter X ducked them." To someone without analytical ability; and a true understanding of the nature of boxing and boxing history, that means fighter X was ducking fighter's Y and Z. That by no means is true. In Frazier's case, when he was in his prime he fought the best fighters available. When Joe started slipping his management made the best matches available for Joe both in terms of money and in advancing his career, which in Joe's case meant getting a title shot. Which he got with Ali.

Now let's take a look at Ali's career. On his way up he did not fight the best fighters available. No way. As Ali has said many times, Ali wanted to avoid fighting such fighters as Eddie Machen, Cleveland Williams, Ernie Terrell, even George Chuvalo. Instead Ali talked his way into a title fight with Liston by beating Doug Jones and Henry Cooper among others.

Now someone without analytical ability might say he ducked those fighters. Which of course is not true. Ali with his charisma and predictions established himself as the best money opponent around for Liston to fight. Surely there were more deserving fighters available. But Ali realized a way to make himself more valuable than the other contenders without ever fighting them. Hence, Ali had the analytical ability to advance himself, without fighting the contenders who stood in front of him. If I were to use the logic of some of the people on this site (God forbid), then I would have to say that Ali ducked them. As a result of the managerial skills of Frazier's management, Joe was able to leave boxing in relatively good health. The main reason for this is because Joe's management used prudence when Joe was no longer in his prime and put him in matches that maximized Joe's talents. They used guess what? Analytical ability. In boxing that is called, SAVY.

Now sadly in Ali's case his management did not use analytical ability in making Ali's matches. They were motivated solely by money and nothing else. A quick look at Ali's career after his layoff: Frazier 3 times, Blue Lewis once, Norton 3 times, Shaver once, Bonevenc once, Chuvalo once, Foreman once, Holmes once, Berbic once. All these fighters had one thing in common to varying degrees they were bangers, and they all took Ali into the late rounds (except Foreman). Imagine the pounding his brain stem took. Is there any surprise that before Ali's career was over, he was talking with slurred speech.

The point I am trying to make is that these Ali worshippers do not realize what ingredients are necessary when making boxing matches for ranked fighters. If the did then they would not use the logic, "well if fighter X avoided fighter's Y and Z, well then fighter X was ducking them." That is not the case. If it was then Ali ducked Machen, Williams, Folley, Terrell, Patterson and when he did fight them some of them they were well past their prime.

If one wants to develop analytical ability regarding boxing, and boxing history one has to be open to new ideas.
Austria for a couple of weeks back in 1991. So, I don't know how good Italian restaurants are in Virginia. I have only (or just) referred something I heard. If you order a pizza in a restaurant in Naples you can bet (I could have said "Betcha"), but I didn't want to get you in trouble with my slang) it's very good, if you order a pizza in Seattle, you can only (or just) hope that it's good. I have seen that stuff on Joe Frazier, it was interesting, it was better than I expected it to be. Joe Frazier said that Jerry Quarry was a great puncher and that he felt his punches, even if he didn't let others know. He also showed a lot of sportmanship by saying that he didn't underrate George Foreman at all before their first fight, but that George was just too strong for him and overpowered him. He called Eddie Machen and Oscar Bonavena tough guys also.

Forrest/Kent: The analytical ability also tells us that by analyzing their careers, irregardless of life after boxing, Ali fought better opponents, much better, than Frazier. Ali was a three time Champion. Ali's career spanned two full decades---my debate has never been about whether it was SMART or SAFE for this man to endure what he did against the great fighters and sluggers of a 15-20 year span---my debate has simply been that when the dust settled, it's clear that Ali did much, much more in his career than Frazier. Ali is, if not the greatest heavyweight ever, very close to the top of the list. Frazier is a good fighter who had Ali's number, won the title, defended a few times and lost it. Good, but not great. Analysis Forrest, is what Frazier's camp was very good at. Their analytical ability told them the truth---a heavier guy, a big puncher could defeat Frazier. Thus, they certainly seemed to avoid these guys in the second half the fighter's career. Good for his life after boxing? Probably so. But it's what separates his legacy from Ali's and the other great ones.

Who do you think would win a Lewis-Frazier fight prime vs prime?

Fan - you criticize Ali for not fighting the same guys twice, three times, and even four times. But you still can't get around the fact that Frazier never ever fought some of these guys even once. Forest, you forget to mention Cooper, Liston, Terrell and Patterson. You later forget about Shavers, Lyle, Norton, et al. You forget that all the guys Frazier didn't fight usually happened to be big punchers. You forget that after the first Ali fight Frazier took two fights in two years (Legends named Daniels and Stander). You forget that after the first Ali fight Joe only had 10 more fights (lost 4 of them and drew 1), while Ali had 29 fights and won 25 of them. You forget that Ali was older than Joe. You forget that instead of fighting punchers like Norton and Lyle and Shavers, Joe opted to fight a washed-up Ellis in 1974 after he (Ellis) had been beaten by Bugner, Lyle and Kirkman, and drawn with Middleton in his last four fights. Joe had plenty of time to fight the guys he ducked. He hardly fought at all. Ali was older and fought three times as often. Yet you applaud Joe and criticize Ali. What you lack, Forest, is objectivity. You love Frazier so much you can't tell fact from fiction (Hans Christian Ward?). And, by the way, I am not an Ali worshipper. I just happen to know that Ali, Louis, Marciano, and, among others, Holmes, were more than a little Actually, I wasn't critical of Ali at all regarding that point. Quite the contrary, I acknowledged that when one wins so many close fights against formidable opponents, it is simply impossible to have classic trilogies with each of them - there just is not enough time in a career to do so. Moreover, the damage anyone would likely sustain would render such an undertaking futile. Can you imagine if Ali had taken on three Shavers fights, three Lyle fights, three Foreman fights, etc.? Between Frazier and Norton, he had six wars which equaled a lifetime of punishment for many, if not all, of the greats. Consequently, I believe that there is no question about his heart. He (or his managers) may have done a bit of ducking, but by and large, he fought everyone. In my opinion, Ali's lot was just the result of being able to take a punch well but not having the ability to take adversaries out early. Perhaps it's semantics, but I do not believe that he was sufficiently dominant to be dubbed "The Greatest". And as I have admitted, I am uncertain who is deserving of that title...certainly not Joe. Here's a thought - maybe no one is. I assure you that if there is a boxer whom I supported unequivocally, it was not Smokin' Joe, but Jerry Quarry. That's why I am here. PS I stand corrected - there were actually $5 seats for at least one Quarry fight at MSG - the Chuvalo bout. Almost as incredible as the ending, where the photographs demonstrate that Jerry took so little punishment his hair is still parted as he goes down, while George looks like he's been through a meat grinder. I wonder why, if Frazier had problems getting (or to get) himself started (he lost the first round in most of his fights, including the Stander fight), didn't he use to fight a couple of rounds in the gym with his favourite sparring partner just before the fight. Could it be possible that it was Norton who was avoiding Frazier in the most likely time period when such a fight would have happened, 1973? After all, Norton had already earned his title shot with his win in the first fight with Ali and a near win verses Ali in the second fight didn't keep him from getting his title shot verses Foreman. Norton likely would not want to put his title shot in danger by fighting Frazier. After all, as I stated above, he had already earned his shot so he waited for it, just as Frazier waited for his shot later, the next year after beating Quarry. Norton didn't fight Frazier because it wasn't needed. Also, Norton himself had trouble with punchers, which Frazier was. Norton had a knockout loss to J.L. Garcia, and his later blow out losses to Foreman, Shavers, and Cooney. In effect, Norton's managment knew this weakness all along and they avoided Frazier so Norton could keep his title shot. In the period before 1973, Norton had not beaten anyone of note, his biggest win, Henry Clark. That is why his win over Ali in 73 was such a big deal, it was a huge upset and Norton had been Frazier's sparring partner, the public wasn't calling for such a fight. You can say that Ali did take just such a fight with Norton and Frazier didn't but I doubt Ali thought in his wildest dreams he would lose it. In 1974, Norton was for the most part inactive after losing to Foreman and in 1975 Frazier took his tune up with Ellis, which he was entitled to do prepare for Ali. After Oct. 75, Frazier verses Norton was a moot point as Frazier was finished as a factor after the tough loss to Ali.
Ali. In 1977 it was Young, and in years to follow Holmes, Shavers and Cooney.Norton was prepared to fight punchers and boxers. He wouldn't have avoided Frazier, who was clearly on the decline. Frazier had a history of ducking tough fights; Norton didn't. It's insulting to Norton to suggest otherwise. You were the guy Kent who said that Frazier was entitled to a few easier 'warm downs' after he won the title. Someone, perhaps you, also said he was entitled to easier 'warm downs' in the lead up to title fights. It is getting ridiculous. The excuses are like listening to UFO 'full mooner'.

It is interesting what you say. If Frazier sparred with training partners just before he entered the ring, I imagine some of the sparring would have been more difficult than the actual fights, given the quality of many of his opponents. I am not trying to be silly saying this.....just think of Stander and Daniels.

Kent also says that Frazier was entitled to fight Ellis as a 'tune up' before the third Ali fight. By this stage Ellis was as dangerous as your grandmother. Ellis hadn't posted a win in his previous four fights. Ali's 'tune up' before he beat Liston was a prime Henry Cooper. His 'tune ups' for Frazier 1 were prime Quarry and Bonavena. His 'tune up' for Foreman was Frazier. Kent has become the most faithful of Frazier lovers.

And yes, by the time he granted Ellis that important rematch, Billie Jean King would have been a tougher opponent in 1974.

Norton had only two fights, both with Ali in 73 and only two fights in 74, his title shot with Foreman and a fight with Boone Kirkman. This is the time period when he could have fit Frazier in but didn't. Before 73 he was a sparring partner for people like Frazier and he wasn't very well known, a prospect who hadn't proved himself worthy of a title shot yet, which he did in 73 with the Ali fights. Again, after Oct. 1975, Frazier was essentially gone from the scene with only the second Foreman fight, a fight he never could have taken, to follow, not counting the ludicrous fight with Jumbo Cummings which of course never should have happened.

Do you believe that Frazier didn't deserve his shot at the title against Ali in 1975? If so, I don't know how you can say this as Frazier did earn his shot by beating Quarry in 1974, who had beaten both Lyle and Shavers in 1973. That Frazier beat the fighter who beat two of the fighters you claim Frazier was avoiding. To get another shot, he would have fought either of them if they were the winners of that slightly lower bracket, but they weren't. You never answer this.

If the time period was late 1975 and onward, then fighting Lyle or Shavers, or for that matter Norton would have been relevant if Frazier was still a factor but he wasn't a factor by this point, another example of the time period being the important factor, a fact that you continue to ignore.

Another possibility is like Frazier said, the was no money in a Norton fight or maybe neither Frazier nor Norton was interested in such a fight.

The example of Ali fighting Quarry and Bonevena before Frazier one is not a good one as most people agree that Ali should have taken at least four fights leading up to a title shot two easier opponents, then Quarry and Bonevena, then the title shot. Ali was off almost four years and he needed the work to be at his best and if he had taken those other fights, then maybe he would have won the first Frazier fight.

| 2/27/05 04:24:32 PM| Angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com||10|Kent: Apologies to the visitors who think we've beaten this to death, but I think it's a fun topic to debate. That said, if it's true that Shavers and Lyle didn't deserve to fight Frazier the ex-champion in 1974/75 (because they lost to Quarry), exactly what did Daniels and Stander do to deserve the shot at CHAMPION Frazier a few years earlier? Did they waltz through the top ten to deserve their title shot? The theme is that Frazier took the easier road, both as a Champion and as a contender. Was there some sort of actual elimination process pre-announced that whittled down the contenders to Quarry vs. Frazier? I don't think so. In fact, it makes absolutely no sense to keep hearing that Frazier beat this guy and that guy, so he got a crack at Frazier and the guys he beat didn't deserve to beat Frazier. If there was actually something organized in place, it would have been the four of these guys (Shavers, Quarry, Lyle, Frazier---throw in Norton and someone else for that matter) fighting each other, with the two winners advancing. Instead, Jerry had to take out two guys and then face Frazier, presumably all for the right to challenge Ali. Again, Lucky Joe avoided some hardship and fights and still got a crack at Ali. Lucky because he got to wait around for one guy to clean up the division---a guy he already had a win against---and then had the tune up against another guy he had a KO win against.

| 2/27/05 04:25:48 PM| Angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com||10|I meant to say Quarry beat this guy and that guy, so he got a shot at Frazier. Sorry!

| 2/27/05 04:34:38 PM| Mork|Ork||morkork@mindycalifornia.com||10|Hopkins b Westwoman UD 12 for the WBA,WBC,IBF,WBO,WBU,IBC,WFF Middleweight TitleBernard rules.

| 2/27/05 05:05:58 PM| Massimo |Roma||4||10|In that show I saw on ESPN yesterday (and which you guys missed by not coming in my home as planned) there was an interview with Joe Frazier. In this interview Joe says that he had a lot of respect for his manager and his trainer and that he would have done anything they wanted him to do. For example (or for instance, it's the same) Joe said that he was ready and willing to fight that last round in Manila, but when his trainer told him that it wasn't the case, he just obeyed. So, if his manager had told him to fight Ron Lyle or Marion Cunningham or anyone else he would have fought them. I don't think he was afraid of anybody. If you are brave enough to keep (or keep on) getting up while Foreman is hitting you, you are ready to fight anyone. Can you imagine Clifford in the ring against a 1973 version of George Foreman? I think the fight would have lasted a fempto-second! |

| 2/27/05 09:57:01 PM| Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville||10|Let me get this straight. Firstly, Frazier groupies say that Joe didn't fight Norton because he had too much affection for him. Hey, forget Romeo and Juliet. The real thing was Ken and Joe. Then we got the excuse that a big money fight for Joe wasn't against Norton. Joe had better 'get rich quick schemes' fighting Stander and Daniels and Ellis (again). He should have run that one past his financial adviser first. And now we discover that Norton was actually ducking Frazier and not the other way around. So the earth is really flat after all. Think about it. Norton opted to fight an in-prime Foreman who floored Frazier 1,716 times (plus some) rather than fight the by then "Smokeless Joe." Talk about ducking David to fight Goliath. Kent also says that Norton was ducking big punchers (something he never accused Joe of). Yeah, right. Like Norton thought that Shavers and Foreman were limp wristed sissies. What was Norton on, thinking Foreman and Shavers couldn't punch while only Joe could. Now Kent says that Norton was Frazier's sparring partner and that's why they didn't fight. I guess that explains why Ali never fought Ellis and Holmes.
who were also his sparring partners. (I'm being cynical, guys, I know he fought them). Look, all these excuses are black belt dumb. Fairies at the bottom of the garden stuff. Blaming Yank's dog for eating the fight contracts is more plausible. By the way, I hear Simon and Garfunkel are doing a remake. It's called 'Fifty Ways to Duck a Puncher'. I wonder who that's about. Kent can write the lyrics.

I get it. So Joe didn't fight all those punchers because his managers told him not to. Thank God other managers aren't like his. There'd never be a risky fight. Shavers and Lyle would never have got a fight against anyone. Ultimately, Massimo, Joe was in charge. The buck stops with him. Even with his managers protecting him as much as they did, even with him ducking punchers, even with him fighting a washed-up Ellis instead of Norton or Shavers or Lyle, Joe still only won two of his last six fights. Anyway, Massimo, Joe blames his managers for making those decisions as to who he fought and who he didn't fight. He would, wouldn't he. What else did you expect him to say.

The buck stops with him ? What does it mean ? I thought my American Slang was good ! It ain't good yet, I guess ! I couldn't understand that sentence not even by using my Italian-English,English-Italian dictionary. However, a part (from) that sentence I have understood what you meant, Howard C. ! You are not wrong.

Most of us Americans don't know how American slang originated either! As for "The buck stops here." that might have been coined by Teddy Roosevelt? The buck stops at my desk! I know what it means---translated, it sort of means "I'm the decision maker, it gets sorted out and decided on by me." but honestly, I don't know if my history is right that Teddy Roosevelt came up with it. Guys, help me out---how did this phrase get its start? Anyway, it did seem as though Ali called his own shots at least a little more than Frazier did. Ali's image was the black maverick who challenged the system. He played himself off as the proud man who would stand up to authority and fight. He also used this angle to gain support in the black community while characterizing Joe Frazier the "Uncle Tom" who pandered to white folks. I truly believe that Ali started this as a way to create the rivalry and sell tickets. Again, he was playing the part of villain, mimicking pro wrestling/Gorgeous George in a sort of reality series! He saw that it got to Frazier and he kept it up. As big a fan as I am of Ali, I don't think it was fair to Frazier to stir the black community against him at the time. The Civil Rights movement had gone through riots/assassinations, etc. and Joe Frazier was just a boxer trying to put food on the table and give his family a better life. He didn't want to get thrust into something like that.

On the other hand, this drama sure made a lot of fortune and fame for both guys.
Lyle, and he had a draw with Jimmy Young. He also had lost to Ron Stander earlier in his career, the same Ron Stander who people here are putting down for not deserving a title shot against Frazier. So Shavers didn't deserve a shot at the title before 1974 either and even though he had knocked out Young and Ellis in 73, these wins were negated by his performance in 74 to 75, the relevant time period.
I SAY SHAVERS, AT THAT POINT, DIDN'T DESERVE TO FIGHT FRAZIER AND NEVER MIND ABOUT FRAZIER NOT BEING IN THE 1968 WBA TOURNAMENT EITHER.  ANSWER ABOUT SHAVERS ONLY DURING THIS RELEVENT TIME PERIOD.  ALSO, AFTER OCT. 1975, WHEN SHAVERS HAD REDEEMED HIMSELF, IS NOT RELEVENT AS FRAZIER WAS ESSENTIALLY GONE FROM THE SCENE.

| 2/28/05 09:39:46 AM | Massimo | Roma (means Rome) || W.A.Mozart.com || || || 10 | Thanks guys, I gotta say that I'm planning to move to Los Angeles as soon as I can, so the American Slang is very important to me! |
| 2/28/05 11:16:11 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC || funktron@yahoo.com || || || 10 | Kent: Remember, a lot of the discussion started because we questioned Frazier's selection of opponents---not because we thought Earnie Shavers was the second coming of Joe Louis. Kent, the point is that Shavers did as much to "deserve" a shot against Frazier as Jimmy Ellis did. What was Ellis' record in his recent fights that elevated him to this "tune-up" with Joltin' Joe? In fact, if Ellis managed the upset against Frazier (pretty hard to imagine considering that his 1974 punches were roughly the same intensity as Gary Coleman's), would he have then been in line to fight Ali? The only issue is that some of us feel Frazier jockeyed to fight the easy touches, not the sluggers. So Kent, you're right, Earnie Shavers did not "DESERVE" to fight this former World Champion in 1974. Neither did Jimmy Ellis, yet because he couldn't punch and had been soundly beaten by Frazier previously, his recent 1-4 record was gladly accepted by the Frazier camp as a legitimate guy to take on. |
| 2/28/05 02:26:56 PM | Noam | same || same || || || 10 | Massimo - Cloverlay had contractual management rights over Frazier from 1965 to December 1974. The first fight Frazier chose after the contract expired was Jimmy Ellis in March 1975. We can guess why Frazier chose Ellis a second time, because this is what Frazier said of his first fight with him, "The fight was even easier than I expected. Ellis' punches were pudding. By the third round I was walking through them, cracking him with vicious shots and practically laughing at him when he tried to counter me. "Sissy, you can't hit" I told him." In his own words, Frazier was fighting "pudding" in that second fight against Ellis. By that stage Ellis hadn't posted a win in his last four fights. Uhhm. Massimo asked why Frazier fought Foreman the second time. Frazier said in his book, "I needed to beat a name opponent to prove I deserved another title shot." In effect, Joe didn't have much choice. Interestingly, Foreman alleges that Frazier ducked fighting him the first time. Frazier elected to fight Stander and Daniels instead of Foreman. George said this, "Frazier apparently hoped that I'd lose to someone else, and therefore my place as a contender, because over the next two years he rejected me time and again as an opponent. At both of his title defenses after Ali, I dogged him at ringside." Indeed, by then a trademark of Joe's career was that he took the easier options. He fought Stander. Wasn't Stander one of the four or five guys that Foreman beat one after the other in the one night? Frazier at one time opted to fight Mel Turnbow. Turnbow was Floyd Patterson's sparring partner. Frazier himself said that these guys were "tomato cans", and "bodies for me to beat up on." Some of his fights were jokes. He fought Zyglewicz, a 10/1 underdog. He beat him in 36 seconds. It was at that point when the media accused Frazier of "fighting dogmeat" and that revelation stung Joe into fighting real guys (sometimes). But he still took the easier option when given the choice. By then Frazier had ducked Liston, Terrell, and even Zora Folley. He'd always taken the easy option and admitted this when he acknowledged that "Cloverlay had moved me smartly through the ranks." Of all the questions asked about Frazier's missing opponents, Kent has only been able to zero in on the one regarding Shavers. While Howard C. can answer it himself, Kent even had to narrow the question down to a very specific period of 1974. (Apparently, waiting to fight Joe was like watching for Hayley's Comet to reappear every 75 years - the window of opportunity was miniscule). In 1974 Shavers didn't have much doing. He beat Wallace, lost to Stallings, and drew with Jimmy Young. Okay, not much. Even so, in early 1975 Frazier chose to fight Ellis, the guy he ridiculed as being a "sissy" and "pudding". Ellis hadn't posted a win in his last four fights. In 1973 Shavers fought Young, Carter, Ellis, and Quarry. He was available to fight Frazier, if Frazier had wanted to fight him. Who would the fans have wanted to see fight? Frazier v Ellis or Frazier v Lyle? Kent - Frazier made his bed and now he has to sleep in it. There were too many guys he didn't fight and they were all dangerous punchers. I'll tell you something else; Lyle would have knocked Joe out had they fought after 1974. Joe ducked him, too. Believe it. After all, Mike Bruce floored Joe in Joe's second pro fight. And don't forget that Bonavena put Joe down twice. After the second knockdown Joe admits that he "grabbed and clinched" to survive the second round. This all happened to a prime Joe. Imagine what a Lyle boomer would have done to an over-the-hill Frazier. When given a choice between dangerous punchers, "sissies", "tomato cans", "dogmeat" and "dead bodies to beat up on," Joe rarely chose the dangerous punchers. Fact. | 2/28/05 02:59:21 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|I somehow substituted the name Lyle instead of Shavers in one of my questions below. You'll know when you get to it. Kent, I hope you don't misinterpret my tone as being disrespectful. However, debate is less awkward when robust as it becomes tiresome and boring to be overly polite. The debate on Frazier has been enjoyable and I'm sure our knowledge of his career is better as a result. I'd make another point about Joe. Usually an aspiring young fighter on the way up pads his record by fighting 'name' guys on the way down. Unfortunately, with Joe the reverse seems to be true. While he was still around the top echelon, he was padding his record with 'name' guys he had already beaten like Quarry and Ellis who had both seen better days. I say he did this to avoid guys he hadn't beaten. | 2/28/05 03:07:29 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Noam: You can't dispute this: Ellis was a better tune-up for Frazier in 1975 than Lyle would have been. Why? Well, he had a cakewalk with Ellis, but had he fought Lyle, I have a feeling Joe would have been able to fight at the lights around the third or fourth round and they'd still be counting today. Poof goes Manila. | 2/28/05 03:53:51 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|To everyone out there who has been on the "Frazier Skeptics" side with me (and everyone else for that matter)---I do have question to pose: Realistically speaking, around 1967-68, would Sonny Liston have a chance to beat Frazier? We (including me) have said that Frazier might have ducked Liston, but by the middle-late 60's Liston was a few years removed from the title. I know he could still fight right up to the end (I have his bout against Wepner on tape), but he wasn't nearly the fighter he was in the early 60's. We're talking six, seven years, at least, past his prime. Frazier was about in his prime. How would Sonny have done against the much younger Smokin' Joe? Also, why wasn't Sonny included in that tournament? | 2/28/05 04:37:48 PM|Massimo |Roma |||4|||10|Thanks Noam for the interesting explanations, now I got (or have, or have got-it's all the same) another question: why did Frazier fight Bonavena a second time, a pretty hard puncher who had already hurt and knocked him down? Frazier would have beaten Liston in 1967-68. By that time the only thing Liston had left was his left jab, his only weapon against Wepner. I think Joe would have avoided his left jab by bobbing and weaving and outsmeled him on points or by late round stoppage. Sonny might have hurt Frazier once during the fight and possibly even knocked him down, but Joe would have recovered just to press and beat him to a pulp. I don't know why Sonny wasn't in the tournament. I do know that by the late 60's he was back in the top 10.

|2/28/05 04:58:12 PM|Forest Ward|NYC||raymccormack2003@yahoo.com||||10|Kent, now it's becoming a little more clearer to me. The Ali worshippers main argument is that Ali fought better opponents than Frazier. Well, for their information Ali fought better opponents than any champion ever, in any weight class. How come they don't attack the other champions with the same zeal they attack Frazier. Could it be all they know or care about in boxing is what they read about Ali? The problem I have with the Ali worshippers is that they disparage Frazier constantly. Ocasionaly they throw a nice word in about Frazier, but, normally they make it very personal when they attack Joe. By in large, I find their knowledge about the subtle points of boxing lacking. As Ali historians they rank very high, as boxing historians, well, not so high. How can a so called boxing historian yammer about the great opponents Ali fought and beat, and then ignore Ali's life after boxing. Ali's health was undeniable related to the opponents Ali fought. One cannot separate the two. It's like saying Doc Kearns was the greatest manager who ever lived because of what Kearns did with Dempsey. But, forgetting about what Kearns did with Mickey Walker. Which was putting Walker a great welterweight and middleweight in with heavyweights. Like Ali Walker never ducked anyone. And as a result Walker suffered severe brain damage. But, Kearns like some of the Ali worshippers was not interested in Walkers life after boxing. Frazier's management cared about him and they made fights which enabled him to become wealthy and the Heavyweight champion of the world. One of the subtle point the worshippers miss is that the name of the game is too make as much money as possible while protecting your fighter at the same time. For thse people to denigrate Frazier and Frazier's opponent shows how myopic their boxing perspective is. Especially when on considers the goals of the Jerry Quarry Foundation.

|2/28/05 06:32:58 PM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|ForestJust because someone disagrees with you doesn't mean that they are wrong and that you are a super brain. Likewise, disagreeing with you doesn't make someone an "Ali lover". Sorry to ruin the allusions that sustain your adulation of Frazier. Frazier fought Bonavena the second time because he thought the first effort from Oscar was a fluke. Jimmy Ellis and Zora Folley had knocked Bonavena down. Joe thought he'd do the same thing easily the second time. The issue is not whether Liston, Folley, Terrell, Norton, Lyle, and Shavers would have beaten Frazier; the issue is whether they would have been more competitive than some of the stiffs Joe frequently faced (Stander, Daniels, Zyglwicz, et al). The point is that Frazier never fought Shavers, whether it was warranted in 1974 and 1975 or whenever. He preferred to fight guys that presented no challenge to him, usually non-punchers rather than unpredictable punchers like Shavers and Lyle. You say that the second Frazier fight against Ellis in March 1975 was a "tune up". It was more a post mortem. Ellis hadn't won a fight for years. After the first fight Joe knew he presented no danger and had called him a "sissy" and "pudding" (thanks for the research Noam). Ellis was a way out of form fighter but that didn't stop Frazier fighting him. Yet he wouldn't fight the out of form Shavers because he had a punch and Ellis didn't. Joe couldn't sell the farcical Ellis fight in America. The fight stank. He was fighting a washed-up stiff with no chance. So Joe took the fight to the other end of the planet in some placed called Melbourne, Australia, where gullible fight-starved fans would pay to watch. No one else on planet earth would take the fight. Forest, I know it upsets you, but in the interests of truth it must be said: Joe wasn't a take a risk warrior searching for higher mountains to climb and new horizons to explore. He didn't ask himself, "Who would be the best fight for me?" or "What fight would the public most like to watch?" No. He always asked himself, "Who would be the easiest fight?" The interests of the fight game or the paying public didn't matter. He fought whatever stiff he could get away with fighting. Whether Shavers was in form or not, he always had an unpredictable punch that presented a clear danger to Joe. So he didn't fight him. Same with Lyle. And Norton. And I could go on. Joe himself acknowledged that he fought "tomato cans", "dogmeat", "sissies", "human shock absorbers", and a "pudding". I guess you've got to have superior intelligence and wisdom like Forest says he's got to really appreciate mismatches and post mortems.

---

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>2/28/05 10:30:33 PM</th>
<th>Steve</th>
<th>N.J.</th>
<th>n/a</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Yeah, you guys who really seem to be determined to disregard Frazier as a great fighter compared to Ali must be correct. Since there are so many of you out there. As a young guy, I was always much more excited watching Ali torment Cleveland Williams, Zora Foly, Ernie Terrel, and Floyd Patterson. Yeah, that was way more exciting than waiting for a Frazier fight against Quarry twice, or Foreman twice, orBonevena twice, you know, all those soft touches.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>2/28/05 10:44:30 PM</th>
<th>Steve</th>
<th>N.J.</th>
<th>n/a</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>At their peaks, Quarry and Frazier would have walked through Norton, Shavers, and Lyle! I just don't see any of them having a chance of slowing SMOKING Joe down. Did any of you guys actually see Joe fight in his prime? He was a nonstop punching machine.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/1/05 01:36:59 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Forest, I think some of the Frazier critics might assume that since I am defending Frazier's postion as an all time great that I am putting Ali down. But this isn't the case as I have always said Ali is the best heavyweight of all time and if Frazier is also an all time great, and Ali beat him two times out of three fights, this improves Ali's legacy because the had the edge over a great fighter and as you pointed out, they try to make Joe measure up to Ali's example when very few, if any, could even come close to his example. It seems some here are stuck in the logical fallacy of the the either or syndrome. In which if one variable is true than the other variable has to be false. But this isn't true as two items can be true and the argument holds up.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/1/05 03:25:13 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Howard C. - Zora Folley knocked down Oscar Bonavena in 1965 while Bonavena fought Frazier the first time in 1966. So this doesn't explain why Joe fought him again in 1968. Anyway, it is true that the pudding (another new word together with the stopping bucks) Ellis knocked Bonavena down twice after the first Joe-Oscar fight.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/1/05 05:53:53 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Small Daddy&quot; Bowe will be sadly back in the ring on 25 March against a journeyman named Willie Chapman. The real &quot;Big Daddy&quot; is a guy who lives in Miami now but used to live in Los Angeles, my next home town.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/1/05 07:03:50 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I have seen met Willie Chapman and I have seen him fight and mark my words here, I would not be surprised if he kicks Bowe's ass and sends him back to retirement. Chapman only has about a 50% win rate in about forty fights but he has a habit of beating young undefeated fighters who try to take him on before about their fifteenth fight. It is not a stretch that he has a good chance to beat an aging ex champion in Bowe.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
on almost no notice but he shows up relaxed and ready to give anyone a tough fight.I just hope Bowe doesn't get hurt.[3/1/05 07:24:13 AM]|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|Hey Kent, how wilt is Willie ? Did you stand next to him ? Is he from Boston ?| [3/1/05 08:35:19 AM]|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Massimo, Willie Chapman is not very wilt for a heavyweight, about 5'11," the same as me. He does not have a good record and he is not a big puncher but he is still a tough guy and Riddick Bowe should not be fighting at all.I don't know where he is from.| [3/1/05 11:09:14 AM]|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|I truly hope Big Daddy Bowe isn't our next Greg Page. Actually, it sounds as though Chapman might be an appropriate match-up for him---even if Chapman comes to fight, a .500 record means that Bowe should be able to hold his own. If Bowe has trained with any intensity at all and is anywhere near what he once was, he might be able to win on auto pilot. He can take on Jimmy Ellis next. | [3/1/05 11:47:39 AM]|Angelo, Jimmy Ellis as a tune-up for John "Yahwn" Ruiz. More than a tune-up that one would be a tune-down, in my book. Is Willie the next Scapriron ? I wonder about that !| [3/1/05 01:59:49 PM]|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Hey SteveHow was your trip Down Under to watch the second Frazier v Ellis fight ? None of us got the chance to watch it, which was a pity, given that "sissy" Ellis (Joe's description) was a "pudding" who hadn't won his last four fights. Stander and Daniels were great fights too. Zyglwicz as well. 36 seconds of pure excitement that one. Newspaper reports of the time said it wasn't much fun watching Joe fight "dogmeat", but you beg to differ.Watching Joe fight Foreman must have been enthralling, if you like watching massacres and train crashes. But we don't know as much about it as you because you were there for all of them, and we weren't.I guess that's why know-alls like Steve and Forest know more than the rest. When they can't argue the facts (which we were debating about Joe's record) you attack the person making the argument. Even Joe had a laugh about the standard of opponent he fought. "Dogmeat", "tomato cans", "human shock absorber", "sissy", and "pudding". These are Joe's own descriptions. The only ones not laughing are Steve and Forest. Stop taking it all so seriously. | [3/1/05 02:58:24 PM]|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|No Massimo, Willie gets knocked out more than Scapriron did but he does come to fight, rather than to survive and this is why Bowe at this stage might be in some trouble.Joe Frazier never gave anyone any credit so you can't go by his description of Ellis' abilities. Some of the people are sure being disrespectful to Jimmy Ellis here of late. Remember he is the one who won that WBA tournament Frazier wasn't a part of by beating Jerry Quarry in the finals. He also had wins over tough Leotis Martin and Oscar Bonevena, no small feats and he didn't lose his title until he faced Frazier two years later, who by the way, not only defeated the winner of this tournament, he defeated the runner up in Quarry and a semi finalist in Bonevena also. Doesn't sound like he was avoiding anyone then, does it?I hope you will all be kinder to Ellis when we hear about his passing away as he may be the next warrior that we lose as he is a damaged man. Brave Jimmy Ellis, not a sissy as some have portrayed him here. Oh by the way, even though Frazier said Ellis was an easy fight for him, I doubt he ever said Ellis was a sissy.| [3/1/05 03:40:24 PM]|Ellis was a better than average heavy who was fortunate that Ali was in exile---and was able to claim part of the title before being blown out by Frazier. His decision over Jerry Quarry was questionable in my mind---and also, in my opinion, the most frustrating loss of JQ's career. Quarry fought like a tiger in taking out Shavers and had a full tank of gas at the end of his fight against Lyle---yet couldn't follow up on a punch that staggered Jimmy Ellis late in their fight.
JQ, many times in his career, would have finished the fight within 30 seconds after landing a punch like that—but let Ellis off the hook. Speaking of hooks, Ellis walked into Frazier's, and went down faster than Monica Lewinsky. Kent—I do believe that in his day, Ellis was pretty good. However, "his day" was about 7 years before the second fight with Frazier. The real criticism I've had is with Frazier's camp for making that fight—not challenging, not interesting, not wanted by fans, not necessary. Yes, I've pointed out that Ellis was running on empty in 74-75, throwing pitter pat punches that wouldn't hurt a poodle and losing fight after fight. But I've made these comments not to disrespect Ellis, but to take Frazier to task for not fighting a legitimate heavyweight with legitimate power and some intrigue...someone with the skill to give fans the chance at a suspenseful outcome. Instead, we have Jimmy Ellis, who we knew would either run and somehow survive to lose a one-sided decision—or actually try to fight and get knocked out by the superior fighter, Frazier. Go Joe—hey, you took on someone everyone in the world knew you would beat, and guess what, you beat him! I don't know how many of you were actually following boxing back then, but the fact is there was never any talk of Frazier ducking anyone. I grant you that in hindsight, it seems that he avoided some worthy contenders, but—I repeat—back then, for whatever reason, it just wasn't an issue. People like Lyle, Shavers, and Norton were not even on the radar screen at the time.From 1968-1973 Frazier was considered the ultimate, unbeatable fighting machine— not unlike Roberto Duran at the time. Ali, for his part, was bent on hypo-activity after his "layoff" (the truth is he never stopped fighting, whether in the gym or in exhibitions— unlike Jim Jeffries, who gained 100 pounds in 5 years of inactivity, Ali pretty much maintained his fighting trim during 3 years in exile—he was obviously obsession with getting the title back). His devotion would pay off, three years later. However, as of March 8, 1971, Joe was way on top, and there wasn't any pressure to fight anyone in particular, with the possible exception (from the demanding Ali die hards) of a rematch with Ali. But that took 3 years and resulted in a "razor thin" decision, in 1974. (BTW, referee Tony Perez allowed a shameful number of clinches whenever Ali got in the slightest trouble—the reports of the day document this). Before Ali-Frazier II could happen, however, Foreman shocked the world in 1973—yes, if you were there, it was a HUGE upset, just listen to the call by Howard Cossell—by KO'ing Joe. You have to remember how dominant Frazier was considered to be prior to that. One judge had Ali-Frazier I 11-4 for Joe, while Ali suffered an embarrassing broken jaw. The NY Daily News even had a cartoon of Ali with a zipper for a mouth and the caption "Well, Shut My Mouth". You younger folks (I assume that is the reason for the factual disconnect) seem to be unaware of the historical context. As I tell my kids, they're all invincible until they lose. I guess you had to be there, but please, let's not rewrite history. Maybe Ali, Frazier or Frazier, Ali are #1 and 2 of all time. That would certainly be a compliment to Jerry Quarry.
After Joe fought Ali in 1971 (at the young age of 27), the only victories he could muster after then were against Daniels, Stander, Ellis, and Cumming. Hardly a hall of fame achievement. Fan, the facts speak for themselves. You didn't need to sit in the stadium cheering for Joe fighting Ellis in Australia, or Daniels and Stander in Hickville, to realize that he was ducking punchers in more important places. And, by the way, hindsight is usually more accurate and considered as the emotion of the moment doesn't get in the way.

Fan, the facts speak for themselves. You didn't need to sit in the stadium cheering for Joe fighting Ellis in Australia, or Daniels and Stander in Hickville, to realize that he was ducking punchers in more important places. And, by the way, hindsight is usually more accurate and considered as the emotion of the moment doesn't get in the way.

| 3/1/05 05:46:29 PM | Noam | same | || same || || 10 | Two corrections to my last post. Firstly, it should read that Frazier's management didn't take fights against big punchers that they didn't have to take. Secondly, after Frazier beat Ali in 1971, his only subsequent victories were Daniels, Stander, Bugner, Quarry, and Cumming. As I said, hardly hall of fame stuff! By the way, as I've said often, I am no Ali lover. I am happy to debate flaws I believe that Ali had. But I just happen to believe that Ali is one of three of the best of all time, while facts and statistics and personal observations say that Frazier is well down the list. |

| 3/1/05 09:14:55 PM | Original Fan | Fandom | || Fan@Fandom.com | || || 10 | Well New Fan you seem to be pretty knowledgeable so you can take my name as I am officially signing off. This Fan's job is done........... |

| 3/1/05 09:24:34 PM | Angelo | dc | || funktron@yahoo.com | || || 10 | Yes, as they say, hindsight is 20/20. We know that everyone was captivated by Ali-Frazier I., and looked forward to the rematch. The talk was Ali-Frazier—and nothing else. No one was talking about Joe ducking big punchers. Of course, after Foreman bounced him around like a ping pong ball and dropped him like a sack of potatoes six times, Frazier was exposed as someone who would have trouble against any big puncher—especially someone physically imposing. It was already known and talked about that he was a slow starter. Now, you had the double whammy of slow starter and clearly vulnerable to someone with a punch. We know that the world was still fixated on Frazier-Ali, even when neither of them had the crown. Why else would Wide World of Sports spend an entire program with these two joining Cosell in the studio? So no, no one talked about Shavers, Lyle or Joe facing Norton. And that reminds me, Ali's jaw was swollen, but not broken after the first Frazier fight, as a previous poster claimed. Sure, Norton broke Ali's jaw, and curiously, Lucky Joe didn't face Norton and Norton didn't face him—they were such good pals—Kenny N and Little Buddy. But now, in perspective, it seems clear that after the Foreman fiasco, they stayed clear of big hitters and focused on preserving Joe's record, pride and health by not sticking him in with someone like Lyle. |

| 3/2/05 03:40:43 AM | Noam | same | || same || || 10 | Angelo Yes, Ali's jaw was swollen after the first Frazier fight, but Frazier was the more banged up. I understand that he spent a month or so in hospital and, as we now know, he hardly fought at all in the years that followed. Frazier was never the same again after that fight. Even so, he won it, fair and square and it was something for him to be proud of. In any case, some of you guys ridiculed my suggestion that Shavers and Lyle could hold a candle to Smokin' Joe. So I ask the question again: If someone named Mike Bruce could knock down an in prime Frazier, and if Bonavena could twice knock down an in prime Frazier and almost knock him out, why is it so ridiculous to suggest that murderous punchers like Shavers and Lyle could knock a past prime Frazier out? Please don't ignore the question, Frazier lovers, as it is relevant and fair. Thanks. |

| 3/2/05 05:14:58 AM | Massimo | Roma | || Garibaldi-Mazzini-Cavour.com | || || 10 | Yes, Frazier was more vulnerable to punches than Ali' (was), but I want to point out that not many fighters in boxing history could have taken George Foreman's and Ernie Shavers's best shots. Even George Chuvalo would have been killed by Foreman if the referee hadn't wisely stopped the fight. Quite surprisingly Gregorio "Goyo" Peralta took well some unbelievable bombs from Foreman in their first fight. Probably Oliver McCall, never down in his professional career, would have withstood also (or too). Of course it is possible Frazier could have been knocked out by Shavers or Lyle. The point you seem to miss time and time again is in the relevant time period, Frazier would have likely faced at least one of those fighters in order to get a title shot but they both lost to Jerry Quarry and he beat Quarry to get his title shot. Again, comparing Frazier's career to Ali's, the greatest of all time is not quite fair as one of the reasons Ali is the greatest is he did things other fighters never did and few could measure up to his standards, Frazier included. I have acknowledged time and time again that Ali was the greatest and I have never said otherwise. Ali, in my opinion, is clearly better than Frazier was but Frazier was great also. I never even heard of Lyle or Shavers before 1973, they are much better known after the fact and after they accomplished more later in their careers, when Frazier's career was winding down or when he was off of the scene and the majority of the public was, like me, not calling for Frazier to fight either of them. We were more interested in an Ali rematch, even when Joe had lost the title to Foreman. I first heard of Lyle when I read in a boxing magazine that he had beaten Buster Mathis and Larry Middleton and I think I read an article about him that he had been in prison. This was just before he fought Quarry. I first heard of Shavers when he knocked out Ellis in one round, not before this. Interesting side note, Shavers had lost to Ron Stander earlier in his career, the same Ron Stander who you imply was a bum who didn't deserve a title shot but who was 22-1 going into his fight with Frazier. I believe Stander had a lot of potential, which he showed in giving Frazier a tough fight, which he never lived up to because of his training habits. Ironic that before 1973, Stander did deserve a shot more than Shavers as he beat Shavers. The Shavers/Ellis fight could have just as easily turned out the other way around. As Ellis, who supposedly can't punch, had landed some hard shots to Shavers head in that first round. Shavers was obviously hurt and was wobbling, nearly going down from Ellis' punches when Shavers, almost out of nowhere, landed a tremendous right uppercut that knocked out Ellis cold. If Ellis had just landed maybe one or two punches more and he didn't get hit with that uppercut, than he could have been the first round knockout winner.
a post mortem against Ellis in Australia. Frazier was a shot fighter at a relatively young age. He probably had the briefest 'in prime' period than any other boxer whose fans argue he is one of the elite. Of all the champions, he fought fewer of the top contenders around, he fought far fewer fights by comparison, and his winning percentage is down on theirs. This comparison is against Frazier's champion peers, not just Ali. Thanks.

Maybe Dundee said that to build interest or justify Ellis-Ali? Exactly who are these guys he knocked out in one round? Did he KO Jimmy Young in the first? I never thought of Ellis as a power puncher—-but instead more of a finesse fighter. In any case, he was shot by 1975, when Frazier gave Ellis some thunder down under in the battle of Australia. Go Joe!

You cannot be serious! I have a cool book whose title is: MUHAMMAD ALI' (A FORMER BOXER) THE GLORY YEARS. In this book is written that Dundee said:"Jimmy Ellis is the best one round-banger in the world". He knocked out in the very first round the likes of Eddie Dembry, Tommy Sims and Johnny Persol in the years 1966-67... Cassius Marcellus Clay ain't a bum in comparison... I don't know, maybe Dundee was drunk when he said that! Tonight I have seen Mike Tyson in an Italian show on TV named "Festival di Sanremo" where he ha concesso an interview to Paolo Bonolis (a guy you all over there know since 1974, especially in California) and even sang a song in Italian. He sang one of the most famous Italian songs ever "Nel blu dipinto di blu" by Domenico Modugno. Actually he sang wrongly "Nel blu dipinto di blu" but as we say in Roma "Sticazzi", it's not important. On another canale there was "Rocky 1" ADRIANAAAAAAAAAAA !!!!!!!! Oh boys what a night !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Kent, where do you get the energy to keep responding to this idle prattle put forth by the Ali worshippers. God bless you, it must get tedious.

Kent, case in point, one of the worshippers makes a statement to you, "However, there would have more Ali v Frazier fights, whether Frazier beat Quarry in that fight or not." How does the worshipper draw this conclusion? Quarry was favored in that fight. He had wins going into that fight over Shavers and Lyle. If Quarry beat Frazier, Ali was going to DUCK Quarry and fight Frazier? I got the clear impression from the worshippers that only Frazier DUCKED fighters. Now, I am told that Ali would ducked Quarry and fought ole Joe.

Then the worshipper goes on to doubt his own statement, by asking you, "are you sure that it was an elimination fight for the title." I find that typical of the worshippers, they make statements on how they "feel," and expect others to accept these statements as fact. Feelings are not facts; unless you are a worshipper.

The worshipper goes on,"Frazier was a shot fighter at a relatively young age, he probably had the briefest 'in prime' than any other boxer whose fans argue that he is one of the elite." Kent, I will save you the time and effort responding to this remark. The worshipper probably never heard of the description of a "Philadelphia fighter." I will inform the worshipper of such. "Philadelphia fighters," are notorious for being sluggers with great left hooks. When they spar in the gym it is an all out war. Their primes are normally shorter than those of fighters who are not from Philly. Philadelphia fighters were normally considered at one time to be the most exciting fighters in the world. Naturally there was a price to pay. They burn out sooner.

Finally the worshipper says to you (not me mind you). "Of all the champions, he (Frazier) he fought fewer of the top contenders around, he fought far fewer fights by comparison, and winning percentage is down on theirs. This comparison is against Frazier's champion peers, not just Ali." Let's see, the worshipper is telling you that Patterson fought more contenders than Frazier, that Dempsey fought more contenders than Frazier (even including lightheavyweight Georges Carpentier). Lets look further, Tunney fought 2 contenders, Walcott fought 2, Liston fought 2, Jack Sharkey fought 1, Max Schmeling 2, Braddock 1 Max Baer fought 1, Primo Carnera fought 3, Holmes beat among others Shavers, Cooney, and a host of other names I can't remember. The only champions who fought better contenders than Frazier were: Ali, Marciano and maybe Joe Louis and his bum of the month club. We can't hold it against Joe Louis because he was so great, that most of the contenders he fought were regarded as bums.

Kent, I am not even going into about winning percentages regarding Joe Frazier and the other champions, Frazier lost 4 fights in his career. Kent, the worshippers have shown to me anyway, that they are fanatics, it is difficult if not impossible to deal with fanatics. But Kent may God bless you, you have the patience of Job when you respond to them.

I began reading your post but then lost interest and yawned at all the personal abuse you throw. You twist comments (for example, I never used the word "feel") and completely misconstrue arguments put forward. You see insults about Joe that weren't written. It seems that I can't even ask Kent a question without you intervening with abuse. I am honestly uncertain whether the Frazier v Quarry second fight was a declared elimination bout for a shot at the title. All I was doing was politely asking Kent to confirm that this was the case. I feel certain that Kent wasn't offended by this question as he realized that it was asked in good faith. Your overreaction says to me that you are very sensitive about the subject, probably because of your discomfort that Joe didn't like eliminations. After all, he ducked the WBA elimination series when Ali was stripped of the title. For your information Frazier did have a remarkably brief championship career. After winning the title, he successfully defended it against Foster, Ali, Daniels, and Stander. Apart from the Ali fight, he beat two nobodies and a light heavyweight. Big deal. I can also again provide the statistics and facts supporting the other views I expressed. You keep disparagingly calling me and anyone who dares disagree with you "Ali worshippers". I don't worship him, but that doesn't matter and I don't mind what you call me. If you want to believe that then knock yourself out. However, I don't know what to call you. I know you are bad tempered. I know you don't tolerate other views and appear to be very moody and brooding. All this behaviour is consistent with alcoholism but I hope I'm wrong. (If I was into insults like you are I might wonder aloud whether you are a repressed homosexual with a prison cell fantasy for Frazier. Who knows ? I've heard of weirder things.) The other night I spent some time going back through the posts to see whether the Frazier argument had happened before. I read that you once claimed that you were in prison where they didn't have the internet and you said this to explain your failure to post for several months. That's okay; I've known plenty of goes who did time in the slammer. But later you claimed to be a New York policeman who worked 9/11. You said this when you were trying to garner support and a bit of sympathy after you got in (another) spat with a fellow poster here over, you guessed it, something someone said about Frazier. As such, it seems that you are more confused about who you really are than the rest of us. Whatever the case, I like discussing boxing issues. You like arguing them. I'd rather leave the personal abuse out of it. You revel in it. The sneering, condescending tone of your latest rant evidences your hatred of Ali and those who admire him. Grow up. Thanks.

6, Patterson 6, Ali 20 plus, Holmes 16 plus, Tyson 9 plus, Lewis 12 plus.....and then down to Frazier on 4 (against Foster, Ali, Stander and Daniels).Frazier fought 2 guys in the top 10 of all time. He won one of those five fights. In three of the four he lost, he was stopped three times. | 3/2/05 07:00:02 PM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Wait a minute, Frazier won the first version of the title in 1968 against Mathis and then defended against Quarry and all the others you mentioned. If you are talking of the undisputed heavyweight champion, then, with all the respect, you can't say Tyson 9 as Mike Tyson became the undisputed heavyweight champion against Tony Tucker (if I remember correctly) and then defended the title less then 9 times.| 3/2/05 08:44:43 PM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Thanks for setting me straight on why Frazier burnt out so early, Forest. Being from Philadelphia, he "fought all out wars in the gym", you wrote. You should given have the heads-up on that to Cloverlay. They could have squeezed more juice out of him had they known he was fighting so hard in the gym. I already suspected he liked hard gym work, what with his match-ups with Stander, Daniels, Zygliwicz, and that last blockbuster against Ellis.You've put me straight couple a couple of times, Forest. When I was beginning to think that Frazier might have ducked Norton, you filled me in that Joe liked him too much to fight him. Now I know that Joe burnt out early because he came from Philadelphia. I learn something every day.| 3/3/05 03:35:05 AM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Tyson yesterday told Paolo Bonolis (a legend in the USA) that he will be back in the ring around 20 June in Angelo's home town (Washington, Maryland). I'm very concerned about his health, he should not be fighting anymore. When I see his old fights against Berbick (the tragic ballet), Holmes, Bruno etc. I can't believe he is still an active fighter. I think he will have economic problems forever and he is gonna keep (on) fighting until he is 72 years old. He is gonna get hurt, we got to stop him somehow.
What's next ? Bowe-Tyson ?
It was a tough fight with Ali winning a 15 round decision. Before the loss, Foster had a record of 30 KOs in 31 fights.The same year (1972) Frazier defended his title against Daniels and Stander. Foster deserved a shot at the title before those two, but Frazier never gave him the chance.I'm sure Frazier had very good reasons for ducking this guy, too. Perhaps he liked him too much. Maybe there was more money in fighting Daniels and Stander instead of a guy with 30 KOs in 31 fights. After 1969 when Frazier got the first version of the title, these are the guys he fought whom Ali didn't fight: Zygliwicz, Stander, Daniels, and Cumming.These guys were Frazier's warm up, warm down, tune up, and an easy fight to which it is said that he was entitled having just won the title.Here is the list after 1969 of the guys Ali fought whom Frazier didn't: Blin, Mac Foster, Al Lewis, Patterson, Norton (3 times), Lubbers, Wepner, Lyle, Coopman, Young, Dunn, Evangelista, Shavers, Spinks (twice), Holmes, and Berbick.Ali is four years older than Frazier. Interesting. | 3/3/05 11:33:29 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Noam, if Frazier was avoiding punchers, then why did he fight Foreman after Stander and Daniels, who were tune ups Frazier was entitled to? Ali, two tune ups, and then Foreman, sounds fair to me.Do you know why Foster had 30 wins in 31 fights before the Ali fight? It was because he had a loss to Jerry Quarry and maybe, just maybe this took him out of the title picture. Sound familiar?Quarry had a history of sending back down the ladder up and coming contenders put in front of him. Thad Spencer, (who had beaten Terrell) Lyle, Shavers, and Foster all fell victim to Quarry.It makes sense to me that a fighter works his way into the top ten rankings and then he loses to a highly ranked contender, Quarry. This would mean Foster would have to work his way up again while Foreman, who was undefeated, got his title shot and won.
Sure Foster could hit, as all of his wins in his entire career were by knockout, 30-6, 30 by KO, However, he was slow and ponderous. He had a good left jab but his feet were like he was stuck in mud. Sure there was a chance one of his bombs could hurt Frazier, catching him coming in, but I see Frazier putting so much pressure on Foster that he would have cut him down on the way to a mid to later round stopped win for Joe. Noam, it seems you never saw Frazier at his best as he was downright scary he was so relentless in pursuit of his opponents and except for Foreman, one of the best if not the best finisher once he had someone hurt the game has ever seen, who hurt Frazier badly early in the fight and Frazier never recovered, Frazier walked through almost everyone he ever fought. You see a pattern of Frazier avoiding punchers. What about Quarry, Bonevena, Chuvalo, and yes even Stander? All of these guys could hit hard and even though they are not the pure punchers that Foreman, Shavers, Lyle, and Foster were, Quarry etc, were dangerous opponents. That the other Foster, Bob the light heavyweight champion got a title shot, it is custom that many light heavyweight champions get a chance at the heavyweight title. No big deal that Frazier gave B. Foster a shot. Oh by the way M. Foster's fight with Ali was not that tough of a fight as he even though M. Foster was durable and game, Ali won virtually every round.

Let me make some points clear. As of lately on this board I have seen the Ali worshippers distort boxing history. They do this primarily by pretending their opinions are facts. And the end result is they distort boxing history. I have no problem with them doing whatever they like amongst themselves, but my fear is that when they do it in public forum like this site they may unduly influence someone who is not familiar with boxing history. Their attacks on Frazier are relentless, and confusing. A short time ago I thought I finally understood the point the worshippers were trying to make. That Ali defended his championship against better contenders than Frazier did. I went one step further, and remarked that Ali defended the title against better contenders than any champion ever, in any division. That did not satisfy the worshippers, they continued to attack Frazier, and not accept counter views. Why are the worshippers so rigid in accepting opposing views? Well, I have a few thoughts about that. One, they do not read the post of others with an open mind, or completely. Two, because they do not read the opposing posts correctly, they respond with poison pen attack at Frazier. In all my years on this board, I have never seen a champion, any champion, attacked the way they attack Frazier. Finally, the worshippers will deny this but they put forth their opinion as if they are boxing experts. When confronted with misconceptions on their part which are documented, they ignore the correction. As if their errors never happened. Finally, anyone who is an Ali worshipping, and does not like the description, WORSHIPPER, then look up the definition. Now let me respond to the worshippers.

We will start with the most recent postings 1st. Mac Foster never beat a ranked contender in his whole career. Ali is 2 years older than Frazier. Worshipper #2. There was no need for me to give Frazier's management Cloverlay "the heads-up. They managed Frazier into a fight for 2.5 million dollars, at that time the biggest purse ever. It was not Cloverlay goal to as you write, "Cloverlay could have squeezed more juice out of him," (Frazier). When Joe's career was over he was wealthy, and healthy. Cloverlay did a great job. Frazier defended his title against among others: Ellis, Quarry, Bonavena. Also, Joe was a champion or a ranked contender for approximately 9 years that's not a bad run for a "Philadelphia fighter." On to worshipper #3. I started off by saying to Kent, "I am not even going into about winning percentages regarding Joe Frazier. All I said,"Frazier lost 4 fights." Worshipper #3, Frazier had less fights than Louis, Marciano, Liston. He also made and kept a lot more money than these 3 guys.
Shame on Frazier for doing that. Finally we come to successful defenses as per worshipper #3. As I mentioned in the earlier post, Ali, Louis, Marciano fought better contenders than any of the other heavyweight champs.

Alright #3, top 10 ratings rating began during Dempsey's reign. Dempsey defended his title against a light heavyweight, and Dempsey did not defend his championship for about 3.5 years. Patterson defended his title against an amateur, and ducked all the top black contenders of his era, Liston was the #1 contender for 2.5 years before Patterson fought him. Alright #3 since you are recognizing all of Ezzard Charles defenses as legitimate defenses, then I think it is fair to recognize all of Fraziers defenses as legitimate. A little historical background is necessary here. New York City and Europe did not recognize Charles as champion until he beat Louis. That being the case using your logic Frazier had 9 successful defenses; Quarry, Bonavena, Ellis, Ali...

Back to worshipper #1. You admit to not reading posts all the way through. You said in an earlier post, "However, there would have been more Ali v Frazier, whether Frazier beat Quarry in that fight or not." I ask where do you get that information, how can you make such a remark? Then in the next sentence you ask Kent, "are you sure that it was an elimination fight for the title?" You make an assumption, present it like it is a fact, and then in the next sentence, you ask a question that demonstrates you have no basis for your assumption. Also regarding Kent, in a previous post he thanked me and another individual Mark Sargent for defending Frazier's ability, because he (Kent) was getting tired of doing it.

Back to worshipper #1, look up the definition of the word worshipper, you will see that it is applicable to you and the other worshippers.

Finally, you pretend that you rantings against Frazier are not personal. Really? Aand you then go on to call me an alcoholic and a homosexual. Well, worshipper #1, I've been call worse things than that, by better than you.

Finally we come to successful defenses as per worshipper #3. As I mentioned in the earlier post, Ali, Louis, Marciano fought better contenders than any of the other heavyweight champs.

Alright #3, top 10 ratings rating began during Dempsey's reign. Dempsey defended his title against a light heavyweight, and Dempsey did not defend his championship for about 3.5 years. Patterson defended his title against an amateur, and ducked all the top black contenders of his era, Liston was the #1 contender for 2.5 years before Patterson fought him. Alright #3 since you are recognizing all of Ezzard Charles defenses as legitimate defenses, then I think it is fair to recognize all of Fraziers defenses as legitimate. A little historical background is necessary here. New York City and Europe did not recognize Charles as champion until he beat Louis. That being the case using your logic Frazier had 9 successful defenses; Quarry, Bonavena, Ellis, Ali...

Back to worshipper #1. You admit to not reading posts all the way through. You said in an earlier post, "However, there would have been more Ali v Frazier, whether Frazier beat Quarry in that fight or not." I ask where do you get that information, how can you make such a remark? Then in the next sentence you ask Kent, "are you sure that it was an elimination fight for the title?" You make an assumption, present it like it is a fact, and then in the next sentence, you ask a question that demonstrates you have no basis for your assumption. Also regarding Kent, in a previous post he thanked me and another individual Mark Sargent for defending Frazier's ability, because he (Kent) was getting tired of doing it.

Back to worshipper #1, look up the definition of the word worshipper, you will see that it is applicable to you and the other worshippers.

Finally, you pretend that you rantings against Frazier are not personal. Really? Aand you then go on to call me an alcoholic and a homosexual. Well, worshipper #1, I've been call worse things than that, by better than you.

Finally we come to successful defenses as per worshipper #3. As I mentioned in the earlier post, Ali, Louis, Marciano fought better contenders than any of the other heavyweight champs.

Alright #3, top 10 ratings rating began during Dempsey's reign. Dempsey defended his title against a light heavyweight, and Dempsey did not defend his championship for about 3.5 years. Patterson defended his title against an amateur, and ducked all the top black contenders of his era, Liston was the #1 contender for 2.5 years before Patterson fought him. Alright #3 since you are recognizing all of Ezzard Charles defenses as legitimate defenses, then I think it is fair to recognize all of Fraziers defenses as legitimate. A little historical background is necessary here. New York City and Europe did not recognize Charles as champion until he beat Louis. That being the case using your logic Frazier had 9 successful defenses; Quarry, Bonavena, Ellis, Ali...

Back to worshipper #1. You admit to not reading posts all the way through. You said in an earlier post, "However, there would have been more Ali v Frazier, whether Frazier beat Quarry in that fight or not." I ask where do you get that information, how can you make such a remark? Then in the next sentence you ask Kent, "are you sure that it was an elimination fight for the title?" You make an assumption, present it like it is a fact, and then in the next sentence, you ask a question that demonstrates you have no basis for your assumption. Also regarding Kent, in a previous post he thanked me and another individual Mark Sargent for defending Frazier's ability, because he (Kent) was getting tired of doing it.

Back to Worshipper #1, look up the definition of the word worshipper, you will see that it is applicable to you and the other worshippers.

Finally, you pretend that you rantings against Frazier are not personal. Really? Aand you then go on to call me an alcoholic and a homosexual. Well, worshipper #1, I've been call worse things than that, by better than you.

Finally we come to successful defenses as per worshipper #3. As I mentioned in the earlier post, Ali, Louis, Marciano fought better contenders than any of the other heavyweight champs.

Alright #3, top 10 ratings rating began during Dempsey's reign. Dempsey defended his title against a light heavyweight, and Dempsey did not defend his championship for about 3.5 years. Patterson defended his title against an amateur, and ducked all the top black contenders of his era, Liston was the #1 contender for 2.5 years before Patterson fought him. Alright #3 since you are recognizing all of Ezzard Charles defenses as legitimate defenses, then I think it is fair to recognize all of Fraziers defenses as legitimate. A little historical background is necessary here. New York City and Europe did not recognize Charles as champion until he beat Louis. That being the case using your logic Frazier had 9 successful defenses; Quarry, Bonavena, Ellis, Ali... in 8 or 9. What's your call on that.Be well!!|

[3/3/05 01:02:52 PM|Forest Ward|New York City||raymccormack2003@yahoo.com]|10|Hey John, it's good to hear from you. Your are probably right 8 or 9 rounds. Although, it would be an interesting fight, especially in the early rounds. If Tyson does not get discouraged, it go 15 rounds. But,that is a big IF.| [3/3/05 01:25:27 PM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Steve--You said "Now that I'm done kissing up to you", what's that ? Iowa slang ? I'm not sure I have understood what you meant...Up ? Up where ? Bah !I understand the Roman much better, aoh !Frazier gave Ali THREE GREAT FIGHTS, not TWO but THREE !!!!!! The second one on 28 January 1974 was actually very close. Also I have seen the second Ali-Norton fight once and I honestly think that Norton won by a couple of points. I should see that fight at least two more times to be sure tough but I can't because my recorder was out of order when ESPN gave this legendary fight (SNORT). Catcha ya later !Can your Calabrese wife understand the Roman dialect (it's almost equal to standard Italian anyway) ? My best greetings to my Italian sister (your wife).PS: I have to say that Mike Tyson behave very kindly yesterday in that Italian show and everyone appreatiaced (spelling) it. He didn't even bite Paolo Bonolis. He behave like a good guy yesterday. Bravo Michele Geraldo !!|

[3/3/05 01:34:40 PM|Steve|n.j.||N.A..]|10|Hey Forrest, I think Ali vs Tyson is interesting. Tyson, at his PEAK, was almost as hard to hit, with his Gus D'amotto training, as was Frazier. He may have had faster hands, and probably hit harder. I like him to possibly have KO'D Ali in the early rounds. Remember, different eras.|

[3/3/05 02:10:33 PM|Noam|same||same]|10|ForrestI haven't had time to read the book you just posted. You mentioned some guy named Job in another post. I guess he didn't fight Joe either.So you're saying that anyone who didn't beat Quarry wasn't suitable to fight Frazier. By the way, if you stopped to read what I wrote, I agreed with you about Frazier fighting Quarry again rather than Lyle and Shavers at that point. I then asked whether it is actually true that the Frazier and Quarry second fight was a recognized eliminator as I couldn't find verification of this. Forrest took offense. Yet you know it wasn't meant that way, yet you haven't the balls to come out and say so. You also asked me, Kent, about the second Foreman fight. Frazier had to fight him a second time if he was to redeem his reputation after the first fight flogging. In Joe's mind he couldn't retire without trying to avenge the loss where he got knocked down six times. A loss that put his suspect jaw in perspective.By the way, guys, this is a Jerry Quarry site. The way most of you moan on about Frazier it seems you don't recognize that. That you can't even acknowledge the obvious - that Joe ducked many fighters of his era - says more about you than your scribblings do. Like Forrest, you have trouble rationally discussing topics involving Joe. Another thing. Has Forrest ever begun or positively contributed to a discussion on this site ? Seems to me he just sits back and snipes negatively every now and then when someone displeases him. Mr Negative. Any way, Liston, Terrell, Mac Foster, Lyle, Shavers, et ai, according to you guys, were bums not good enough to fight Frazier.|

[3/3/05 02:28:45 PM|Noam|same||same]|10|SteveRead my post that upset Forrest and then tell me that he is not hot tempered, too.Anyway, like you, I think Frazier is in the Top 15. I don't think Ali is the greatest. I think he is in the Top 3, though.I am not criticizing Frazier because I adore Ali. I just think Frazier is overrated, especially by (some) rednecks whose only reason for loving him is because they hate Ali. I don't admire Ali. Personally, I didn't like all that stuff he went on about when he was younger. I didn't like his politics. I don't like his religion. And I think he should have been more recently critical of extremists. My admiration for Ali is for his boxing. As a person, I admire him for the brave way he had fought his medical condition. If you go through my posts, I limited myself to criticizing Frazier's boxing. I wasn't critical of him personally. You mention the Vietnam War. I believe that war needed to happen. Had it not happened then communism would have had an easy run over Thailand and Malaysia and who knows where else, instead of just Vietnam and Laos and Burma. In my mind, Vietnam was a necessary 'speed bump' against communism. The fact that we lost 58,000 and damaged the lives of countless others is appalling and terrible and a tragedy. But the cause was noble and necessary in my humble opinion.

You mention the Vietnam War. I believe that war needed to happen. Had it not happened then communism would have had an easy run over Thailand and Malaysia and who knows where else, instead of just Vietnam and Laos and Burma. In my mind, Vietnam was a necessary 'speed bump' against communism. The fact that we lost 58,000 and damaged the lives of countless others is appalling and terrible and a tragedy. But the cause was noble and necessary in my humble opinion.

Steve, I didn't call you an alcoholic and a homosexual. I called Forrest that. His writings reflect an intolerant, obsessive, hate-filled, moody, depressed, bullying, and erratic person. These symptoms are often consistent with recovering alcoholics or repressed homosexuals. There are textbooks on it. When Forrest jabs at me, I'll jab right back at him. Thanks.

| 3/3/05 02:34:07 PM | Steve | n.j. | NA | 10 | Massimo, what the heck are you talking about? "Iowa slang"? You better get your geography straight before you question me on slang. "Kissing up to you", is N.J.slang! Iowa is a small province in Canada. Kissing up, just means trying to smooth over hard feelings, or trying to make up with someone, by trying to acknowledge their point of view, while sometimes being a little over ingratiating. Slang phrases don't always fit into the concept of good grammar. As in, "up yours", which is a gross insult in N.J. Your silky smooth Italian accent has charmed my Calabrese wife, you know, the mother of my one daughter and five stupid Irish sons. I am disappointed and offended by your behavior towards my wife. I don't feel your talking to her as a brother. However, after reasoning with my wife, she too has become offended that you would infer that all Calabrese are illiterate to the Roman dialect. Your best greetings are now falling on deaf ears, as she now won't be able to trust you. Up meaning she wants to beat you down. Please apologize immediately, or I cannot protect you! |

| 3/3/05 03:21:21 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Steve - I didn't want to offend anyone, I called your wife sister because the Italian hymn starts with "Fratelli d'Italia" that means "Italian brothers"... I asked whether your wife understands the Roman dialect because I (born in Pisa and living in Roma) personally don't understand the Calabrese dialect very well. I don't even like dialect that much, I do like the Standard Italian. Are you two really angry at me or are you joking? |

| 3/3/05 03:23:22 PM | Steve | N.J. | na | 10 | Noam, I was just telling you how I feel about the Ali, Frazier era. I took no offense at your post. I would never try to impose my feelings or philosophy about that era on you. I'm just trying to tell you how some of us felt. You have as much right to your opinion about that era as anyone. I spent a lot of time in South East Asia, and to this day, I cannot give you a coherent, informed opinion about what it did to this country. Your opinion is as valid as mine. I didn't mean Imply that you had to be there! I am a great believer in God's will, or (if you will), fate. What will happen, will happen. |

| 3/3/05 03:27:50 PM | Forest Ward | New York City | raymccormack2003@yahoo.com | 10 | Steve, regarding Ali-Tyson. The reason I like John's prediction is because Ali had a great chin. I have feel that he could avoid Tyson's punch in the early rounds. As the rounds continued I feel Tyson would get discouraged and lose interest. That's why I could see Tyson being stopped in rounds 9 or 10, or possibly going 15 rounds. In their primes I have no doubt Ali beats Tyson, but the Tyson who fought Mike Spinks would make it very interesting against Ali. |

| 3/3/05 03:39:27 PM | Steve | Sicelia | under federal indictment | 10 | Massimo, you have my sympathy! The vendetta has already been placed! Ask Kent what this means! He's an American Indian. That's the same as Italian, since you guys all claim to have discovered America. |

| 3/3/05 03:58:29 PM | Steve | N.J. | na | 10 | Hey, Massimo, you goofball, I hope you and Kent know I am just playing with you'se guys! I apologize for any ethnic slurs.

What does it mean " the vendetta has already been placed "

I read your posting. It doesn't make much sense. You assume criticisms of Frazier that weren't made. You twist facts to support an unsustainable view. You deny facts that history records. And you nitpick with semantics.

Even when I conceded a point to Kent about the Quarry fight, and then asked Kent to confirm a comment he made (that the Quarry fight was a recognized elimination bout), you condemned me. It was a sincere question without hidden motive and I still don't know the answer to it. I haven't been able to confirm Kent's assertion elsewhere, as the fight wasn't listed as an official eliminator. Frazier doesn't describe it as an eliminator in his book. So forgive me for being curious and I'll pardon you for being unusually touchy.

You also deny that there would have been a third Ali v Frazier fight had Quarry beaten Frazier in their second fight. At that point Ali and Frazier were one each, and nothing was going to stop a third bout.

After a loss to Quarry, Joe would have gone out, padded his resume with some more "sissies" and "tomato cans" (his description) and, bingo, Ali v Frazier 3. The world would not have let their feud rest at one each. Anyways, you revel in the memories of Joe fighting Stander and Daniels as title defences, while the rest of us will keep wondering what would have happened if a past prime Joe had chanced his luck against Shavers, Foster, Norton, Lyle, and the other viable fighters around at that time.

Remember this, Forest: if Bruce and Bonavena could knock down an in prime Joe, any fight a past prime Joe had against Shavers, Lyle, Foster, and Norton were fraught with risk.

Forest, I suspect that if you get away from the topic of Frazier and Ali, you are probably not a bad guy. I'd guess that we share similar views about many things in life and, apart from generational differences, our backgrounds are almost the same. Neither of us were born with silver spoons.

Noam, no I don't officially have proof that Frazier/Quarry 2 was an official title elimination fight but I do think Frazier deserved a title shot for beating Quarry when most people thought Joe was through and they favored Quarry going in, but in hindsight it turned out to be the other way around, Frazier had some life left in his career and Quarry didn't. I seem to remember seeing some ads saying it was an elimination at the time but can't confirm it.

Me not having balls for not saying you didn't mean offense by asking me this question? Huh? Your argument between Forest and yourself is just that, between Forest and yourself and I am not involved.

I am just trying to make my points about Frazier's ability as a fighter and Forest happens to agree with my position, period.

It is too bad Mr. Jimmy (James Quarry) isn't around. As he knew a lot of what was going on in boxing back then. Noam, I have a feeling Mr. Jimmy would disagree with you but we will never know for sure.

Noam, I have a feeling Mr. Jimmy would disagree with you but we will never know for sure.

The closet person we have is Bob (Robert) Quarry and although he is younger than the other Quarry brothers, he has a lot of knowledge about Jerry... and he is familiar with Joe Frazier as well as being a former professional fighter himself, I wonder what he would have to say about this debate. He is not online but I have a way to contact him and I will do so when possible to ask what he thinks about this. Hey Bob, if you do happen to check in here, please let us know what you think about Joe Frazier supposedly ducking fighters like Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers, and Mac Foster.

Frazier doesn’t say it was an eliminator in his book and I've looked up fight records and it isn't catalogued there either. It might not have been an eliminator. You say Joe didn't duck those guys; I believe he did. He didn't fight them and they were available. They were all viable opponents. They were all better fighters than Stander and Daniels and Ellis (at that stage of his career). And they were all damaging punchers, which is the very species that presented the most danger to Joe at that stage of his career. Like they say, if it walks like a duck and quacks like a duck then more likely than not it is a duck. I still say Joe ducked all of them (sorry for the pun). Regards the 'balls' comment. Forest barked and you yelped. As soon as Forest said you should be impatient with us "Ali worshippers", you became spontaneously impatient with us "Ali worshippers." The perogative to do so is all yours, of course. Thanks.

Speaking of balls, how would Frazier do against Lynn Ball? Do you guys remember him? You're right Angelo, Lynn Ball kicked Ron Lyle's ass in 1979!

Frazier fought Daniels and then Stander the year after he fought Ali the first time, and was workin his way back in to fighting shape. They wanted to set him up with a few tune-ups. Thats boxing. At that time Shavers and Lyle weren't ready for a title fight. They were still being groomed, learning the trade. When they made their move they made the same mistake a lot of others did when they fought Jerry Quarry. Back then Lyle and Shavers were never mentioned in the same sentence as Frazier. Not that they weren't good fighters but, no one wanted to see Frazier fight those guys. Frazier was working towards Ali because thats where the money was at and thats what boxing is all about. If Frazier fought Foreman when he did you could never say he ducked anyone. He was handled the right way and every fight he fought was a non stop war. Ali could hold n clinch and clown because of his style and size. Frazier had 2 careers Before Ali 1 and after Ali 1. The first career he was unbeatable. Forget the second career he had already proven himself by then.

You must like to argue just to argue as now you are starting in on me. So what are you going to do now? Start an argument with Steve cause he often agrees with me and say he has no balls cause he didn't jump to your defense against me? Also, there are plenty more people you can argue with if it isn't Steve next.
1974 and Foreman avoids Quarry again, and signs to fight Norton. Jerry starts yelling that the black contenders are discriminating against him. Yes, Jerry used the word discriminating. Jerry claimed that the black fighters wanted to keep the title amongst the blacks. Some people bought into this. Ali steps in to defend his heritage and make a lot of money and agree's to fight Quarry. Bob Arum was going to promote the fight. Quarry was going so well at the time, that it was a real possibility in some peoples minds (Don King being one) that Quarry might beat Ali. Then, that would kill the big money fight between Foreman and Ali.

Don King tells Ali that he can match him against Foreman at the fall, but he must not have any fights until he fights Foreman (at the time Ali was desperate to fight Foreman and he thought Foreman was ducking him). Meanwhile, Quarry starts yelling again about black fighters discriminating against him. Well, Joe Frazier agrees to fight Quarry. Quarry readily agrees with the "stipulation" that the winner of that fight is entitled the next crack at the title. This "stipulation" was carried in all the newspapers at the time. As a result the fight was recognized as an elimination match. Of course what happened was the 2 favorites Quarry and Foreman lost. And Frazier and Ali were matched again after Ali fought Wepner, Bugner, Lyle. Frazier and Ali were matched again after Ali fought Wepner, Bugner, Lyle.

Don King tells Ali that he can match him against Foreman in the fall, but he must not have any fights until he fights Foreman (at the time Ali was desperate to fight Foreman and he thought Foreman was ducking him). Meanwhile, Quarry starts yelling again about black fighters discriminating against him. Well, Joe Frazier agrees to fight Quarry. Quarry readily agrees with the "stipulation" that the winner of that fight is entitled the next crack at the title. This "stipulation" was carried in all the newspapers at the time. As a result the fight was recognized as an elimination match. Of course what happened was the 2 favorites Quarry and Foreman lost. And Frazier and Ali were matched again after Ali fought Wepner, Bugner, Lyle.

Jerry didn't decide what the elimination fights were. The champion and the governing body did. Frazier's next fight after beating Quarry was against Ellis. So I take it the Quarry v Frazier fight was an elimination to fight Ellis. Frazier Groupies are full of crap.

Hey, I'm not laughing at anyone---just waiting to hear if Lynn Ball would have KOed Frazier like he did Lyle! And let's add to that: Prime vs. Prime, Frazier vs. Cooney.

Ali Worshipper #2, the stipulation was made by the New York State Boxing Commission. As a result of the announcement the press recognized the fight as an elimination match for a championship fight. When both Quarry and Foreman lost all the dynamics changed. Ali Worshipper #2 Do yourself a favor go to a library and read the newspapers of that period. Why the hell does everyone keep saying the Mike Bruce fight was in Frazier's prime? It was his second fight? When did a fighter's second fight become his prime? I guess Ali was in his prime when he got knocked down by Sonny Banks since it was passed his second fight. How the hell could the great Ali be knocked down by Sonny Banks in his prime?

Not to nitpick - but I believe Howard is correct - the winner of Quarry-Frazier II, which took place in June, 1974, was not assured a Foreman fight. If anyone was, it was Ali, who had beaten Frazier in their January, 1974 rematch. When Jerry beat Shavers only a few weeks before that in December, '73, Gil Clancy indeed claimed to have a Foreman contract in hand, however the Norton fight was already a done deal. What prompted Jerry's "Black Conspiracy" charges (which both he and Clancy later said were just a ploy to get Ali in the ring for a lucrative payday) was Ali backing out, on February 13, 1974, of a fight with Quarry scheduled for May. MSG was planning to hold a press conference announcing the match the very next day, February 14, when Ali abruptly pulled out. The obvious reason was the concern that the "new" Quarry might spoil an Ali-Foreman blockbuster. Unfortunately, instead of getting Ali in May, Jerry instead got decked by Joe Alexander, before knocking him out. We all know what happened in the Frazier rematch the next month. All of which strongly suggests that, as much as we Quarry fans would have enjoyed it, Jerry was not about to beat Ali at the time.

Anyone that says that Joe Frazier should have fought Earnie Shavers truly proves their complete ignorance of the time period relating to the heavyweight division. Was Joe supposed to know that Earnie would get dangerous in 1976 and end up better remembered than the guy that knocked his head off Ron Stander? Stander killed Shavers, beat him all over the ring in the middle rounds. You guys don't know that though. Ignorance supports your claims, however real knowledge will open your eyes. Looks like Fan has some work to do still.

By 1973, the entire boxing world knew that Earnie Shavers was dangerous—the entire boxing world, most notably Yank Durham. Please, Shavers was a heavy puncher with stamina problems, but he rode an impressive KO streak into the Quarry fight and was expected to KO Jerry as well—and it ended up being another case of underestimating the talents of JQ. At the same time, by 1974, Frazier was no stranger to early round knockouts, as Foreman knocked him around the ring like a rag doll—point being that an early knockout can happen to anyone and it shouldn't have made Shavers damaged goods in terms of a match with Frazier between '73-'76. Far from it, what made Shavers undesirable to the Frazier camp was the very thing that's been discussed the past few weeks: Shavers' PUNCHING P-O-W-E-R. Between 1973 and 1976, there were combinations of guys fighting eachother including Ali, Foreman, Norton, Lyle, Shavers and Quarry. As for Frazier, the only ones in this group he ended up fighting were Quarry, Ali and Foreman. Combined record: 3-4. That includes two wins over Quarry and one over Ali—neither of which were considered to have one-punch KO power. Foreman blew him out—Lyle and Shavers were considered to be slugging power punchers, not boxers and that's why discussion of Frazier fighting them didn't materialize. As for Norton, we all know by now that he and Frazier were like Skipper and Gilligan, Blossom and Six, Arnold and Willis, Brad and Jennifer—they wouldn't fight eachother cause they were sparring partners and pals.

I am afraid you are wrong. I never said the winner of the Frazier-Quarry was ASSURED a title fight with Foreman, I said the New York State Boxing Commission Boxing Commission made the stipulation that the winner of the fight was ENTITLED to a title match. I never said that the New York State Boxing Commission stipulation was BINDING. As a result MSG announced to the press that it was an elimination fight. And the press recognized it as such. You must remember that at the time it was considered a foregone conclusion that Foreman was going to destroy Ali. And that at the time Foreman was ducking Quarry. At that time Frazier was regarded as a shot fighter who the "new" Jerry Quarry was going to beat. When Quarry and Foreman lost all deals were off. Even if both Quarry and Foreman won their respective bouts; there would have been no way for the New York State Boxing Commission to enforce that stipulation, short of stripping Foreman of his title if he did not fight Quarry. It is all conjecture at this point. But, it is worth noting only 7 years earlier the NYS Boxing Commission stripped Ali of the title and recognized the winner of the Frazier-Mathis match as the new champion. As a the NYS boxing Commission's action would not have been unprecedented if they went that route. The main point being that Kent was correct when he remarked that it was recognized by the public and the press as a elimination bout. Ali Worshippers #1 and #2 were wrong, no surprise there. One must remember that while the ALI Worshippers are part of the public, their fanatical beliefs and their closedmindless bias against Joe Frazier is so far out of mainstream beliefs; they can be regarded as a sect.

Here are the facts on Frazier-Shavers. Frazier fights Stander on 5/25 in 1972. At that time Shavers best win was over washed up ex light heavy champ Vicente Rondon in a ten round snooze fest. There was no way that Shavers was more deserving for that shot then Stander. Stander beat Shavers straight up and Shavers was fighting stiffs. On 1/22, 1974 Frazier fights George Foreman. Obviously Joe was avoiding big punchers with this selection. After Joe is demolished, Shavers gets his first decent win over the then 7-3 Jimmy Young. NOBODY thought Jimmy Young was going to be anything at that point. Shavers then signs to fight Jimmy Ellis for 6/18. After that fight is scheduled Frazier inks to fight Joe Bugner on 7/02. At this point Shavers has beaten NO ONE and Bugner is at least on the map. They both win and Ali offers Frazier another go for over a million each. During this same time Shavers negotiates to fight Quarry. This would be a decent test for the unknown Shavers. They both lose. Shavers actually RETIRES FROM BOXING after this fight. Ring magazine completely writes him off as does the public. The fans are clamoring for Quarry and Frazier to go again. They sign for 6/17, 1974. During this time Shavers unretires and goes back to ham and eggers beating Cookie Wallace in 1 round. After they both win Shavers LOSES to Bob Stallings on 11/04, 1974. He then draws with still unknown Jimmy Young later in the month. Frazier beats Ellis as a warm-up for Ali. It could be said he could fight Shavers here. He could have fought 50 other guys that were thought of on that same level at the time. Shavers was thought of as a joke at the time. Nobody would buy that fight. At least Ellis had once been good. Shavers was a never was. After Frazier beats Ellis and Shavers beats immortals Leon Shaw, Rochelle Norris and Oliver Wright, Shavers loses again. This time he is knocked out by Ron Lyle as Frazier is preparing for Ali-Frazier III the Thrilla in Manila. At this point Joe is basically done and Shavers would be ranked about #30 in the world. This is definitive and the final word.

You are not only a fan, YOU ARE CERTIFIED BOXING HISTORIAN!!!!!!

Fan, that posting was great!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

You don't recall what you seem to, and I still have many articles from that period (NY papers) but I do recall the NY Commission — and only 5 other states — recognizing Joe as champion and disregarding the WBA tourney. They were certainly a minority, and any proclamation that Jerry-Joe II was some sort of elimination bout would have meant little. Ali-Foreman was THE fight everyone wanted, and I agree that nearly everyone thought Foreman would trounce him. I also agree that Jerry was considered the favorite to retire Joe. In hindsight, given the Alexander and Frazier results, he probably should have been considered a huge underdog vs Foreman at that time. But I admit I would have lost my shirt betting on Jerry.

|3/4/05 08:26:28 PM|Steve|N.J.|na|na||10|Angelo,Frazier vs Cooney is a good one. I have to admit I haven't seen much film of Cooney's earlier fights. I can't remember why. I guess I wasn't paying attention until he suddenly became a hot contender, and, of course, a big white hope. I must admit, sometimes over the years, I've been the kind of casual fan who only watches the top dogs. I saw him knock out Norton. I remember he gave Holmes a very competitive fight for thirteen rounds. Norton seemed to be vulnerable to anyone who could really crack. Why didn't Norton ever fight Lyle? Anyway, prime vs prime, I think Frazier would have introduced Cooney to the term, pressure. Cooney was no Ali or Holmes. I like Frazier by tko in about five rounds. Remember, Angelo, Foreman had to knock down Frazier six times. I know Kent argues that Frazier was finished after the first or second knockdown. I'm not sure what that means. Does that imply the Ref. didn't do his job? It only took Foreman three shots to dispatch Lyle. Does that mean Joe could take a shot better than anybody, except Ali?

|3/4/05 08:37:46 PM|Noam|same|same|same|10|Forest, your story doesn't cut it. I'll back you up. Frazier was so confident of beating Foreman that he didn't insist on a mandatory rematch in the contract. (Hear that Fran - Frazier felt he was home and didn't need a guarantee of a rematch.) In January 1973 Foreman knocked the "unbeatable" Joe down six times in 4.35 minutes (a knockdown every 45 seconds). The result was so demoralizing that a thoroughly beaten Frazier didn't ask for an immediate rematch. Because it was one of the most lopsided mismatches in heavyweight history, the media and the public were not clamouring for a rematch either. No one was. People like to move on from train wrecks. Foreman got on with business. He beat Roman and then Norton. He looked down from the ring and told Ali he was going to kill him when they fought. The fight with Ali was then arranged. That was the fight everyone wanted. Meanwhile Frazier had lost his second fight against Ali. The loser of two of his past three fights, a rematch between Frazier and Foreman was the last thing on anyone's minds. After all, Frazier had the patron saint of lost causes looking after him (help me out here Forest, you study the bible and knew who that patient guy Job was. Who is the patron saint of lost causes?)In June 1974 Quarry and Frazier fought. By then Foreman and Ali had signed to fight in October 1974. Neither Quarry or Frazier was the champion. Neither Quarry or Joe had legal standing whatsoever to demand a title fight. As far as the title was concerned at that time, they were nobodies. Not the champion. Not a contracted mandatory challenger. For Forest to imply that Quarry or Frazier could demand anything aptly demonstrates his profound ignorance of the workings of boxing.It is history now that Ali beat Foreman in October 1974. As there was no mandatory challenger from any prior elimination bouts, Ali fought Wepner (March 1975), Lyle (May 1975), Bugner (June 1975), before stopping Frazier in September 1975. Those are the facts. Forest says otherwise. Show me the newspaper stories from that era Forest and I'll read them. But a wise man once counselled me that you shouldn't believe everything you read in a newspaper. I'd instead rather rely on what Frazier and Foreman say. Go read their books. Neither claims that the Frazier v Quarry second fight was a recognized elimination bout. No mention of the alleged elimination bout at all by them. Fact. Besides, Frazier didn't like eliminations. He squibbed out of the WBA elimination tournament. Remember? Something else. As champion in 1965 and 1966 and 1967 Ali fought defences against Liston, Patterson, Chuvalo, Cooper, London, Mildenburger, Williams, Terrell and Folley. All these guys were generally accepted as viable opponents to challenge for the title. Joe Frazier fought from 1965 through to 1969 when Ali had his title stripped. Of all those top fighters that Ali defended his title against, Frazier only faced Chuvalo. The top heavyweights of that time, who were good enough to challenge for the title, but whom Frazier never fought were: Liston, Patterson, Cooper, London, Mildenburger, Williams, Terrell, and Folley. Unless words have completely lost their meaning, Forest, I have cleared the issue up once and for all. Now for Kent. 'QUIT BEING SO PRECIOUS'.

Forest, I have cleared the issue up once and for all. Now for Kent. 'QUIT BEING SO PRECIOUS'.

Joe Frazier fought from 1965 through to 1969 when Ali had his title stripped. Of all those top fighters that Ali defended his title against, Frazier only faced Chuvalo. The top heavyweights of that time, who were good enough to challenge for the title, but whom Frazier never fought were: Liston, Patterson, Cooper, London, Mildenburger, Williams, Terrell, and Folley. Unless words have completely lost their meaning, Forest, I have cleared the issue up once and for all. Now for Kent. 'QUIT BEING SO PRECIOUS'.
Groupie 2 then further admits that the sanctioning meant nothing. It couldn't be enforced. The papers only called it a sanctioned fight to get a bigger gate. IN OTHER WORDS, IT WAS NOT A FIGHT SANCTIONED BY THE GOVERNING AUTHORITY OR THE WORLD CHAMPION. IT WAS NOT AN ELIMINATOR. WHAT THE GROUPIES WERE TELLING US WAS ALL BALONEY.

Groupie 1 and 2 (Kent and Forest) GO STAND IN THAT DAMN CORNER. YOU CAN'T COME OUT UNTIL YOU APOLOGIZE TO NOAM. Noam, congrats on being right. Also congratulations on your great summary and research. It's good to know that the Groupies are being called to account. Keep at 'em champ. You knocked 'em dead!

Howard C, if I am groupie one I have never abused Noam. I only responded to a crack when he said I have no balls, an insult I do not deserve and which has nothing to do with the issue at hand. I think he should apologize to me for that remark, not the other way around as it was a cheap shot to disrespect me that way when I didn't disrespect him. All I have done (before his remarks, and precious is another insult) is disagree with him and that is all I will do now is discuss the issue. But if you want, go ahead and disrespect me too again as I won't respond to it, only the issues at hand. It seems like I become a target every once in a while because I do try to play fair. that some people think it is funny to mess with me, don't you think Steve?

Oh by the way, I am not on Forest's side, we just agree on this issue and he speaks for himself just as I speak for myself, period.

In the 1960s and early 1970s the New York State Athletic Commission carried a lot of weight so if they said Frazier/Quarry 2 was an elimination, at that time it rivaled a similar decision if it had been made by the WBA. I said it was a title elimination bout based on my memory of seeing it billed as such. But whether it was or not has nothing to do with the fact that both Lyle and Shavers took a step backward as contenders when they lost to Quarry and Frazier took a step forward when he beat Quarry. I would have to get my tape out and watch Frazier/Quarry 2 again to verify this but I seem to remember them being announced as the number two and three ranked contenders at the time and that the number one ranked contender, Ali, had signed to fight Foreman for the title.

That the New York commision was a powerful sanctioning body that had influence beyond its borders can be seen that Frazier's title, before he unified it with his win over Ellis in 1970, was recognized by five other states and several foreign countries that would later join to form the WBC. In fact, if you look at the list of WBC recognized champions, you will find Frazier recognized as heavyweight champion and this is a distinction before he beat Ellis. In addition to this, besides Ali being considered the rightful champion as he didn't lose his title in the ring during his forced retirement, most people around at that time considered Frazier as the stronger champion. They really didn't take Ellis' WBA belt as seriously as they did Frazier's title, which he proved in the ring when the two met to settle matters.

Another reason the WBA title during the late sixites was not taken very seriously is that they had recognized Ernie Terrel as champion even while Ali was still active, which Ali cleared up with a lopsided decision win over Terrel.

You know, Jeff Merrit would have been a more interesting and deserving opponent for Frazier than "Lopsided Loss Central" Ellis. And to be clear, I do agree that the generalization that a bunch of guys fought eachother and Frazier avoided some of them is weak---it's always better to go case by case and figure out why some fights were made and others weren't, but come on guys, where there's smoke, there's usually fire, and while a lot of the potential matches really can be dismissed legitimately by timing, rankings, rematch obligations, etc., they can't ALL be explained away. Frazier did not fight the highest quality opponents available to him as a young contender, a champion or a dethroned challenger. Plain and simple, he and his management were extremely strategic and at times lucky, and he avoided fighting a group of guys that posed a threat to him. Smart? Probably. Once again, it was smart and necessary to get him the title, make some money and keep him from being knocked out by anyone other than Foreman (and the late TKO loss in Manilla). Smart, but in a historic context, it raises the question of where he ranks all-time, because certain key fighters in his era are missing from his schedule. They mostly fought each other, but not Joe. To have a logical explanation for every single instance (okay, what about Merrit—hell, Stan Ward fought him in the late 70's, but alas, Jumbo Cummings was a better opponent than Ward or Merrit?) is nice, but doesn't hold water. And the nice, neat, compartmentalized excuse for beating up on Ellis a second time (gee, he's from Louisville, doesn't have a knockout prayer against Frazier and reminds us of Ali) is bogus and we all know that---stop this crazy rationalizing for every weak fight Frazier's camp scheduled. He fought the path of least resistance, Jimmy Ellis, instead of any one of 20 other fighters who would have been more intriguing.

The Jumbo Cummings fight is not relevant as even if it had been successful, they fought to a draw, it was a first fight back after a long layoff and a fight like this is needed to get some work. It is only after a couple of these fights that a tougher opponent such as Ward would be taken. But really, Joe should not have taken any fights at this point in his life and it is not representative of his career at all. Please don't point out again that Ali took on Quarry and Bonevena after a long layoff as Ali was unique and that is one of the reasons his claim of being the greatest holds so much water. Besides, they are not the same thing as Ali was still close to his prime, not the shell of a former great fighter that Frazier was verses Cummings.

I have tried to make a case by case analysis of why Frazier didn't systematically avoid a whole group of fighters but the reason it is likely that Frazier was not avoiding all of these fighters is because the public was not calling for such fights to take place. So why take fights the public doesn't want to see? The exception, of course is the occasional tune up fight to stay sharp.

It might be a kick if we could meet somewhere in northern Italy. I don't know what I will be doing in September but, if I can, I will be glad to meet you. With all due respect, it was not until Forest told you to be impatient with his Job comment, that you suddenly became impatient. And when you became impatient and rude, you were also precious. You were caught out about the recognized elimination bout. You sold it like it was legally and officially sanctioned. In the end it turns out that MSG publicized it as an elimination to boost the gate. The New York Boxing Commission went along with the ploy (bearing in mind they have no authority to sanction eliminators for world titles). They probably got a fee for issuing a phony sanctioning. Suckers are born every second and it got you in. So you were wrong all along, but you didn't have the balls to apologize for the rude comments you sent my way. You still don't. Instead you come out with the "everyone knows that I'm fair" nonsense which proves and means nothing. You say you are a journalist. My understanding about journalism is that you are supposed to be fair and balanced. Try it some time.

Thanks for the comments. There's many out there that agree with us, but they probably stay away because they get howled down by the Groupies. Maybe if we were unemployed like some of the Groupies, we'd have more time to go through things case by case. The list of viable opponents that Frazier never fought before he got the title is gobsmacking. Liston, Patterson, Cooper, London, Spencer, Mildenburger, Williams, Terrell and Folley. To ignore entering the WBA elimination when he hadn't beaten most of the guys in it was staggering in its arrogance. Given that Frazier had been decked by Bruce and Bonavena, Joe was no shoe-in against those guys. Of course, after he won the title we had the farces that were the Danieles, Stander and Ellis fights. Ellis hadn't won his last four fights but Joe opted to take him on. There were lots of other guys out there. Shavers, Lyle, Norton, Mac Foster, et al. Joe only had 37 fights. In his last 10 fights, he lost four of them. The five fights he had against Top Ten Greats (Ali and Foreman), he lost four of them and was stopped three times. Against Foreman he couldn't stand up longer than 45 seconds before falling down again. You can't argue with facts, Howard. While I think you are wrong, I won't argue with you. I have too much respect for your past and that overrides any urge to set you straight about Kent being wrong and unfair.

Steve

While I think you are wrong, I won't argue with you. I have too much respect for your past and that overrides any urge to set you straight about Kent being wrong and unfair.

I do respect Kent as a journalist and enjoy his writing here and on the Eastside site. I do disagree with him though about Frazier. Perhaps most glaring of all is the fact that Frazier had under 40 fights and lost 4 of them and had a draw---not a great winning percentage considering it's relatively few fights, including just as many "soft touches" on his schedule as anyone else (probably more). It's one thing to say he had a rough and tumble style and that shortened his career and another thing to say that his "in prime" period was short---but the record and timeline do not lie. His greatness, if it exists, is based primarily on one fight (Ali, 1971) and especially one knockdown in that fight, and in my opinion, greatness that doesn't make. You could also make a case that his loss in Manilla showed signs of greatness---but I think like Norton's loss to Holmes, it showed courage, determination, guts and yes, brutal skills, but not greatness. In individual sports, as opposed to team sports, the greats don't just come close, they win. Yes, Frazier had the huge win over Ali, but suffered after affects from that fight that in my mind, shortened his title reign and career. He also had two crushing knockout losses to Foreman where he never got untracked---and in the first loss, didn't show any sign at all, not for a second, of even being competitive. Bobick was KO'ed by Norton, finished on his feet, but still became a laughing stock. Meanwhile, Frazier looked drunk, dizzy and ate canvas about a dozen times against Foreman and no one said a word. It's well documented that Ali has Parkinsons, probably expedited by boxing and surely contributed to by the fights with Frazier---but it didn't stop him from winning back his title, holding it awhile and fighting the long line of contenders/challengers that for some reasons, whatever those reasons were, Joe never quite managed to fight himself.

What does employment status have to do with boxing knowledge? Noam, are you saying that Frazier fans are unemployed as a whole and therefore can actually use facts to back up their arguments because they have more time? If this is your premise, it's one of the most asinine things I have ever seen posted here. If it's not your premise please clarify.

Noam, I see you said some of the groupies not all. I still want to know what you meant though.

The Ali-Frazier fights are the McEnroe-Borg of boxing. Since these two fighters have quitted their careers, maybe we have no hope to see anything even close again. Ali-Frazier 1,3 are both in my top 3 heavyweight fights of all time.I think it's not a coincidence that Frazier was involved in both these fights (or in both of these fights). Joe Frazier was a decent fighter. In particular Ali'-Frazier 3 is like the Borg-McEnroe Wimbledon final in 1980. When tennis was a great sport... And when boxing was a great sport.I long for yesterday.

Kent, that is flat out not true that I was rude to you after Forest's Job comment about me. It was after you made the "balls" comment that I responded in kind and YOU OWE ME AN APOLOGY AS I READ ALL OF MY POSTS AFTER THAT POINT AND I AM DISCUSSING THE ISSUES WITH NOTHING PERSONAL DIRECTED AT YOU. You just didn't like it that in your mind, I hadn't admitted Frazier/Quarry 2 was not a title elimination fight. I could not answer on this as I didn't know and still don't know if it was or not and while you bringing up the question put in my mind it might not have been one, it didn't prove it wasn't one. because if the New York State Athletic Commision said it was, then that body carried a lot of authority outside of New York at the time. If you have proof it wasn't one and have posted this information, maybe I missed it so post it again and I will acknowledge I was wrong if the information holds merit, but I will not apologize to you as it was you who were rude to me.

by after the point, I mean after Forest's Job comment until Noam's "Balls" comment. After this comment by Noam, I responded in kind to Noam, not before.

My meaning was that some of the Frazier Groupies seem to be unemployed as they have more time to research and post comments. I was commenting to Howard C. that unlike some we do have jobs. KentKentI do not owe you an apology. You initially said that the fight was sanctioned as an eliminator. Now, rather than admit that it wasn't, you say you don't know whether it was.The MSG and New York State Boxing Commission has NO authority to sanction world title eliminations. Fact.
It did not control world boxing. Wise up, admit you are wrong, and apologize for being rude. When you do that I will realize that you do have "balls" and I will then apologize for being wrong in saying that you don't have them.
AngeloYour post was very fair. When you take the emotion out of it, and sit back and read Frazier's record, the holes there are glaring. He missed fighting some of the best of his era, seemed always to be looking for the easy option, usually avoided big punchers, and fought guys he'd already flogged. Take the first Ali fight out of his portfolio, and you've just about gutted his entire portfolio. A friend of my father, who was heavily involved in the boxing scene from the 1960s onwards, once told me, "Poor old Joe had to be propped up by his management after the first Ali fight. They knew he was shot so they tried to save him for the important fights."
Looking at Joe's record, those words ring true.

I changed my position on saying it was a title elimination fight to I am not sure it was a title elimination fight because you brought up the possibility. I will have to research on my own, not just cause you say it is so. If I find you are correct, I will acknowledge this. Disagreeing with you is not being rude, you taking a cheap shot by saying I have no balls is being rude and sir, you owe me an apology and everyone else here knows it.

Everything I post is from pure memory or if I sometimes go to another site to look up someone's record. The reason I did at least give the possibility that I was incorrect regarding Frazier/Quarry 2 and then I said I wasn't sure if it was true or not, is because I haven't done independent research to confirm or deny it one way or the other. It is quite possible I haven't had the time to do so.
I think I was being flexible and open minded by considering I could be wrong.
Yet someone here continues to insult me even when I said he might be right just because I disagreed with him before on this issue and I continue to disagree with him regarding the larger issue regarding Frazier's greatness.
Notice how Angelo and I have argued points back and forth now and probably in the past about other things but we still show each other mutual respect, as it should be.

An official elimination bout, like you alleged existed between Frazier and Quarry, means that the winner has a mandatory challenge against the champion.
Commission has no power or standing to sanction such a fight. Neither does MSG or the media. Frazier Groupie 2 maintains that the New York State Boxing Commission sanctioned the fight as an elimination and so did MSG and the press. I'll say it again. The New York Commission, the press, and MSG have no authority to do that. What happened is this. A Frazier v Quarry (2) was not a fighting the regular fan wanted to watch. It was a rematch and Frazier had already beaten Quarry years earlier. Also, by that stage, Frazier had lost 2 of his last 3 fights. So, to make the fight more attractive MSG began publicizing it as a sanctioned eliminator, even though it wasn't. MSG got its pals in the New York Commission to play along with it, and its pals in the newspapers did too. It sold tickets and made the fight more attractive. But it was never a sanctioned eliminator. Neither the champion or the world governing body sanctioned the fight. Even if we accept the facts as provided by Groupie 2, those facts demonstrate that it was NOT a sanctioned eliminator. It is not a hard concept to grasp. But rather than admit being wrong, Groupies argue semantics. Okay, whatever, but if that stubborn attitude rubs off on your credibility don't yelp like a stuffed pig. Go back through the posts and read how rude Groupie 2 was when trying to attack me when I innocently asked whether you were certain that it was a sanctioned fight. Had I spoken to someone like Groupie 2 did then I would have been pulled up. All of this doesn't worry me because I have been vindicated and I know that I was not being rude or offensive when I asked you to confirm that it was a sanctioned eliminator. If you want to portray yourself as being fair and even handed, then pull Groupie 2 into line when he chucks his regular hissy fits.

I have no problem with that. It is when you started taking personal pot shots at me is when I had a problem with you. YOU KNOW, I DON'T KNOW WHO STARTED IT BETWEEN YOU AND FOREST AND I AM NOT GOING THROUGH ALL OF THOSE POSTS TO FIGURE IT OUT BECAUSE IT WAS BETWEEN YOU AND HIM. BESIDES, WHO APPOINTED ME REFEREE HERE? I have been fair here in my arguments about the subject and that is all I can do. My argument centers on how much power the New York State Athletic Commision had at the time in question, 1974. Because if it still had as much power as it did in 1968, then if it ruled Frazier/Quarry 2 was a title elimination this rivaled the power of the WBA even if the WBA didn't sanction it as such. The question centers on if the New York commision still had the backing of other states here in America and other countries that formed the rival WBC, which it did in 1968. That the New York commision had more power than other state commisions is seen by its recognition of Frazier as world champion in 1968, a title that carried at least as much weight if not more so then Ellis's WBA title. There, I have presented information that still puts in dispute your contention that the fight in question was not a title elimination fight. My position still stands as not being sure if it was or not. A position, I will again add has changed from saying it was. This movement towards your position was brought on by your arguments. So I am being reasonable. I have to do more research on the subject when time permits.

