Welcome to the new Jerry Quarry Foundation Letters Forum. We are still in the process of moving the web site to the new provider, but I've opened up the Letters pages, so you can begin adding your messages here. Look for a revised home page soon. This forum is a little different than before, but it's user friendly, and gives everyone a chance to add more information. We're glad you're back, so "Let's get it on!" --Carl

Just wanted to be one of the first to use the new letter section it was greatly missed. I hope to see comments by all of the regulars to this site.

Glad to see this back. Keep up the good work. We love & miss you Uncle Jerry!

Steve, I have been going to the Frazier site longer than most of those jokers and I am not about to be run off of the site by anyone. Besides, I have chosen to do sports journalism as well as other forms of writing so I had better get used to negative comments. I usually don't like to use this or other letter sections to plug my writing but this week I have an article at eastsideboxing.com about Jerry's fight against Ron Lyle. I hope some of you check it out.

Kent, please keep writing, Please keep us informed no matter what. Another note if it ever will be printed. I would like to read on the web page how some of the fans feel about Mike Tyson? Based on what I saw on the stage about him talking racial slurs. I feel the guy should be banned from boxing. There sure are some exciting boxing matches coming this year.

My Name is Jeff Ford, I am a professional fighter - Boxing, MuayThai Kickboxing, Ultimate Fighting. I am in the K-1 held in Vegas on May 3, 2002. My website is www.jefffordkickboxing.com for more info on me. I am looking for fights and a manager. I have done over 40 fights by myself setting them up and my own training, I need assistance at this point. I can beat anyone out there, I need the training and a chance.

Jeff Ford
816-564-2064

[1/24/02 07:55:22 PM] Joe Krause | Chicago, IL | sadmspats@yahoo.com | 10
Good to see this back again. I am in the process of getting a whole bunch of rare fights from a collector and I am very interested to see these for the first time. Among the fights are Chuvalo vs Doug Jones, Chuvalo vs Terrell, Patterson vs Cooper and Frazier vs Machen highlights. In total I am getting over 100 rounds of stuff. I will let you guys know if I see anything real interesting. I have everything on Jerry except a 7 min clip against Machen and a very bad available copy of Quarry vs Alongi I from New York. Anyone know of any rare Quarry stuff let me know. I already have vs Orbillo and London 1, Billy Daniels and Alex Miteff which is the rarest stuff I have seen.

[1/25/02 12:22:48 PM] James Quarry | TJQF | boxerquarry@netscape.net | 10
Joe; I have a copy of the Machen fight. I didn't know you were looking for it. I have just about everything except for Mathis, |

[1/25/02 03:39:55 PM] James Quarry | TJQF | boxerquarry@netscape.net | 10
Are we back to normal?

[1/25/02 07:42:50 PM] Kent Appel | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10
Mike Tyson should have been banned for life after he bit Evander Holyfield. Boxing is violent even within its rules but it still has rules just the same and there is no room for such clearly unstable behavior. The man has a "screw loose!" Recently a fighter named James Butler was suspended imdefinitly for "sucker punching" a fighter named Richard Grant after Butler lost to Grant and Grant was trying to congratulate him for a good fight after the fight was over. I had called for Butler to be banned for life but I have changed my position when you consider that if Tyson had done the same thing, would he have been banned for life? I doubt it because too much money is to be made by all concerned and it is easy to make James Butler the scapegoat for all that is wrong in boxing because he doesn't bring in the big money. Don't get me wrong, Butler still deserves to be punished for his actions so he should get at the very least a one year suspension and a hefty fine, but punishment should be fair for all. Maybe the boxing world will finally get rid of Tyson because of some of the alleged criminal activity he has been involved in. If Tyson is behind bars, then it will be very unlikely he will ever fight again.

[1/26/02 11:13:28 AM] Kent Appel | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10
Anybody else watch Vernon Forrest dominate Sugar Shane Mosley? I don't know if Forrest can now claim to be the top of the pound of pound list but he is for sure the king of the welterweights. Anybody surprised at the outcome? One thing about tonight's fight, and that is it was nice to see two gentleman giving each other credit instead all the circus like BS and trash talking we have had to deal with recently. Much as I like the WWF, all of the nonsense going on lately in the boxing world is getting a little boring. After all, you would think that professional boxing is not supposed to be like pro wrestling.

[1/27/02 04:10:33 AM] Evren | London | Evren@btinternet.com | 10
Enjoyed your article on the Quarry vs Lyle fight, Kent. It's good that Jerry and others are remembered elsewhere on the internet. Keep up the articles !!

[1/27/02 08:35:12 PM] Joe Krause | Chicago, IL | sadmspats@yahoo.com | 10
Kent, nice job on the article. I also saw an article on Chuvalo-Terrell on there which is a fight I am getting soon and was written well. Mosley is a great fighter and I think he will beat Forrest in a rematch. Forrest is also great it seems, but I can see a much more focused Mosley beating an over-confident Vernon next time out. Vernon sure did look like Hearns though didn't he?

[1/28/02 12:33:56 AM] Kent Appel | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10
Mosley looked good in the first round but he seemed to not have his legs under him after an accidental head butt in the second round followed by two legitimate knockdowns. Forrest fought a great fight though and he deserves all of the credit in the world but I am not sure who will win a rematch because if Shane avoids getting hurt by mainly the right hand, and if he boxes like he did in the opening round in the second fight, the outcome may be different. Forrest said he would give him a rematch and I hope it does happen. We just may have the makings of a trilogy like Ali/Frazier and Leonard/Hearns. Yes Forrest does kind of remind me of Hearns.

1/28/02 05:58:24 PM|James Quarry|Hemet, Calif.|boxerquarry@netscape.net|I have o do it and get off boxing for just a moment. "What about them Rams?" It was a joke between Jerry and myself that the Rams would never win the Super Bowl. Just could be that they are going to win it twice. I was very surprised that Mosley lost. Soon we will have a new location for this web page. We will keep you posted. I hope our web master puts all the old letters back up for viewing.

1/29/02 07:40:33 PM|Kent Appel|La Habra, CA|oriononside@aol.com|Yes Mr. Jimmy, The Rams have won a super bowl and they may win another one this year, but are they really still the Rams we remember? I am from the Los Angeles area, just like Jerry and you. I haven't considered them my Rams since they moved to St. Louis from Los Angeles (actually Anaheim, but still in the area). I not sure your bet with Jerry would still count because when the discussion started you guys were talking about the Los Angeles Rams, not the St. Louis Rams (those traitors!)

1/30/02 12:58:40 PM|Johnny Q|Hanna-Barbara|johnqw@yahoo.com|I watched the Martin-Liston fight on CSN last night. I knew Liston had lost, but it was still a shock to see him on has back and out cold. People were in the ring and Martin was being interviewed even before Liston was revived. It was a very weird scene. There was some question sometime back as to how Jerry would have done against Liston at this point and I don't think Jerry would have had much of a problem in 1969. Once Martin recovered from being knocked down, Liston immediately began to get tired. He really looked all of his 37 years. It was very sad.

1/30/02 05:52:27 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago, IL|sadmspats@yahoo.com|Martin-Liston was a good indicator as to what Jerry would have done with him by that time. Max Kellerman was inaccurate when he said that the Martin-Liston fight was part of the WBA elimination tournament. We all know that Martin lost in the first round of that to Ellis and Liston wasn't even in the tournament. I already had the Liston-Martin fight, but was so pleased to get that nice crisp copy of Chuvalo-Ali I complete, which Classic showed last night as well. I am pouring through my 125 Ring magazines I purchased that range from 1965-1986 and am really enjoying going through various careers month by month. My goal after getting all the tapes of fights is to get every Ring magazine from 1960-1980. That is about 240 magazines and I have about 80 or so different right now. It may take a while, but I am sure it can be done. The way Ring covers Norton is funny, they start building him up then break him down after he gets knocked out by Jose Luis Garcia. They changed their tune again after the first Ali fight.

1/30/02 06:44:51 PM|Kent Appel|La Habra, CA|oriononside@aol.com|I too watched Leotis Martin verses Sonny Liston and it was scary when Sonny was out cold on the floor as Martin and his people celebrated. It is ironic how much bias there is in the media for a favored fighter, in this case Liston. Howard Cosell, when he was interviewing Martin after the fight, told Martin that Cosell thought he was behind in the fight, implying that Martin would have lost if not for the knockout, while Martin thought it was about even. If Martin was behind it was only because he suffered a knockdown. I thought the fight was very close up to the end. I have never seen what the scores were before the knockout. Anybody know what they were?
How did Martin do in his career after Liston? I seem to remember reading that he suffered a detached retina in the Liston fight. Anyone know about this?

Hey, when are we going to start up our tournament again?

Writing on behalf of the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) and The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia (TJQF), I have provided below comments on your recently introduced legislation, S. 893, The National Boxing Commission Act of 2001. Both the Association and the Foundation, two organizations believe that the passage and implementation of this proposed piece of legislation in a properly amended form could greatly improve the sport in many ways.

The initial suggestions presented below for possible inclusion are based largely upon four major problems that exist within professional boxing. First of all, the fighters are always at a distinct disadvantage in bargaining for their financial, mental, and physical well being with the managers, the media outlets, and the promoters. As a result they often sign one sided, unconscionable, and extortionary contracts that do not represent their best financial interests and unwisely take cash advances from managers between fights. Secondly, as opposed to other sports, many people see boxing as a crooked and dishonest business that presents fights that are fixed and/or stained with obvious unfairness, and thus the fans and their favorite athletes are simultaneously exploited in a wide variety of ways. The third problem is that boxing has failed to address the relatively new, yet significant, issues of female participants and the movement of important matches outside of the United States. Finally, this sport has not improved itself in any measurable way since the passage of the Professional Boxing Act of 1996 and the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act of 2000. These bills have not been used to alter the unfair and illogical ratings systems and officiating frauds frequently perpetrated by the self appointed, self perpetuating sanctioning bodies (e.g. IBF, WBC, WBO, WBA, etc.); foster any kind of meaningful labor movement, union, or organizational effort on the part of the fighters; create viable pension plans; promulgate any significant and important findings of the one hundred fifteen page, 1 June 1998, National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health’s study regarding the health, safety, and equipment standards for boxing; or create a or encourage any type of civil or criminal litigation by individuals, private groups, or governmental entities that might right many illegalities and wrongs that often characterize the billion dollar boxing industry. Because nothing has occurred, much more needs to be done to change the “red light district of sports”, “anything goes”; image/mentality that constantly causes the sport to be the object of and/or perpetrator of ridicule, scandal, disrespect, tragedy, permanent injuries, needless deaths, unfair poverty, foreshortened life spans, consumer fraud, and unconscionable greed.

Given all of the above, I will now make initial comments regarding this proposed bill. Subsection (b) (3) of Section 5 describes the qualifications of the members of the Commission. It is significant to note that this part of the legislation does not refer to the mandatory appointment of members from what I call, the advocacy organizations. In my opinion, an advocacy organizations would be a federally tax exempt, not for profit, organization that has specifically and directly supported positive changes in professional boxing in exchange for minimal financial gain (less than $5,000 in net profit to the organization in any year) from any activities related to boxing. Thus, for an organization to be described as acting in an advocacy role, it would have had to have written and sent letters to legislators, provided oral testimony at hearings, produced manifestos and other such public statements, and issued and distributed letters, newspaper columns, and press releases for public reading in publications and on various sites on the world wide web that supported changes enhancing the employment rights and consumer concerns of the boxers and their fans respectively. While I am currently aware of only two organizations in the United States that fit these criteria, the AAIB and TJQF, other groups might meet these standards. Given the sordid history of boxing and its enormous need for major and wholesale reformation, I believe that the Commission should have five members, three of whom should be active and ongoing members of these advocacy organizations. If this idea is not adopted, the Commission will undoubtedly be another "go along, get along, business as usual, don't rock the boat" bureaucracy that merely promotes the self-destructiveness of the status quo of professional boxing, Thus the adoption and implementation of this concept would be an excellent way of avoiding that problem and promoting positive change in boxing, something that this sport desperately needs.

If you want to provide feedback, I can be reached at 330.743.2898 or at 142 Upland Ave., Youngstown, Ohio 44505. I am looking forward to your comments. Sincerely yours,

GEORGE OTTO, BCD, CCD, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LISW, MSUS
Chief Counsel/Legislative Consultant

cc. Mr. Stephen Acunto, Sr., Co-Founder, American Association for the Improvement of Boxing
Mr. James Quarry, President, The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia
The Honorable John McCain, United States Senate

It has been a long time since we've heard from Mr. George Otto. As you can see, when he speaks about boxing it is very well worth reading. Thanks George for letting us know that you still have something to say. Sometime in the near future we will be moving this web page to another server. From what I understand Carl Weingarten has re-designed our page. We are in the final stages of preparation. The safety in boxing has come along way since we went public with Jerry's dementia. My wish now would be that if a boxing commission make a decision regarding a fighter it should be enforceable in all areas. Example, Mike Tyson.
have the letters page back! Thanks for one of the best boxing sites on the internet.Belated Happy New Year to all the regulars here and especially to James and the Quarry clan.| 2/5/02 11:07:53 AM|James Quarry|TJQF|boxerquarry@netscape.net|||10|We would like to apologize for any delays with video and T-shirt orders. The last 8 weeks have been complicated. At this point I have been told I have lung cancer. All kinds of test and treatment have been performed. Therefore, I have not been on the computer much and have been to sick to stay on top of things.Please remember the magazine has not been printed yet and the people who promised this have not kept thier word.Sorry for any inconvenience this may cause. Sincerely.| 2/7/02 03:57:59 PM|Evren|London||Evren@btinternet.com|||10|I am very very sorry to hear that James. It seems strange but my father was diagnosed with both lung and bowel cancer last week and my whole family are devestated and trying to deal with things in the best way for my parents. It is so important to keep positive and 'upbeat' through the hard times. The power of 'self belief' goes a long long way and I pray you will be fine. My dad has yet to start treatment but he is already negative and I am constantly trying to gee him up (putting on old fights). My thoughts are with you and I empathise with you and your family at this hard time. Best Wishes, Evren| 2/7/02 07:05:59 PM|Kent Appel|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|James, my hopes and prayers are with you and your family. You seem to me to be a kind and decent man and I wish you a safe and speedy recovery from your illness. I know you will take on this challenge with all that you have! After all, there is no quit in a Quarry!!| 2/8/02 10:58:09 AM|Rufus Defibaugh|Fort Loramie, Ohio||rufusdefibaugh@hotmail.com|||9|Jerry Quarry should have been a worlds champion, if boxing didn't have tko's I very much believe Jerry Quarry would have slugged the whole 15 rounds of both matches he had with Muhammad Ali and possibly could have beat him Querry was a tough guy.| 2/8/02 05:21:42 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|DID ANYONE SEE THE 32-MAN ALLTIME TOURNAMENT ON HEAVYWEIGHTS.COM? IT HAD HOLMES STOPPING JQ WITH A SINGLE BODY PUNCH FOR THE TEN COUNT. THIS WASN'T MAXIE "PAD" KELLERMAN'S DOING, OR WAS IT? THE WHOLE BOUT, IT ALLEGEDLY WENT 7 JERRY WAS HURT BY BODY SHOTS FROM HOLMES, I WOULD SAY HOLMES COULD NOT HAVE KNOCKED JERRY OUT WITH A HOWITZER MUCH LESS, A SINGLE BODY SHOT AT 43 SECONDS OF THEY 7TH ROUND. IT WAS THEY 1969 JERRY QUARRY VS THEY 1979 LARRY HOLMES. I AM NOT SO SURE HOLMES WOULD HAVE EVEN WON.ALTHOUGH I WOULD HAVE MADE LARRY AT LEAST AN 7-5 FAVORITE. THEY "EASTON ASSASIN" WAS THEY MOST UNDERRATED CHAMPION OF ALLTIME. BUT JERRY ONLY HIT THE DECK 6 TIMES HIS ENTIRE CAREER, AND ONLY LOST IN TWO OF THOSE, THEY HARDEST BODYPUNCHER OF ALLTIME JOE FRAZIER COULD ONLY GET A 4 COUNT ON JERRY IN 1974 AND THAT DID NOT EVEN STOP THE FIGHT. AND THEY OTHER CHUVALO, COME ON, JERRY SHOULD HAVE GOTTEN UP AND STOPPED GEORGE IN THEY 8TH, (instead of watching the clock). ONE OF THE 6 KNOCKDOWNS IN JERRY'S CAREER WAS A SLIP VS PATTERSON. I WOULD HAVE GIVEN 100-1 ODDS JERRY WOULD NOT HAVE BEEN STOPPED BY A SINGLE BODY SHOT FRO HOLMES!!| 2/9/02 11:02:35 AM|James Quarry|TJQF|boxerquarry@netscape.net|||10|Evren; This is a message for you dad. It would be real easy to be negative to my situation.If I did become negative then it would effect my whole family. Even though i may have cancer in the lungs, this doesn't mean the signing of my death certificate. John Wayne has lung cancer for 15 years. I must remain possitive.Not for me but my family. I do not intend to walk around feeling poor me. If it is the case that I must die. Then I will leave my family with only possitive thoughts with my family after I am gone. Please, if not for me, please stay possive for your family!!This part is for Jimmy Dorsey, There is no way that Holmes could have stopped Jerry with a body punch. Because of his style, it is quite possible that Larry could have a win over Jerry, but only by decision. Larry's style was a stick and move, like Ali. Love to all.

I happened to meet veteran corner man Chuck Bodak last night at a local fight card here in Southern California. I am sure that this man, who has worked with 56 world champions, has more boxing knowledge in his little finger than most of us will ever have. He said he knew the Quarry family well. Interesting thing he had to say about Muhammed Ali. He said, "Ali is the greatest human being I have ever met." Mr. Bodak, if you happen to read this, I was the guy you talked to in the parking lot after the fights when you were looking for your group. I agree that there is no way Jerry would ever be stopped by a body shot by Holmes. Holmes may have won by a decision or maybe even by cuts, but never by a body shot!

Thanks for your kind words James - things do get very difficult and people can only understand it when they go through it - which I wish on no living soul. Best Wishes

Mr. Quarry your a great guy, but you and your family have to much guts for your own good/ please don't let this guy kent take over/ i have a lot of respect for you/ otherwise i would have gone all out against some of the people that come to this site/ koo koo clock is a good guy/ he just wants to know the truth about things/ by the way i'm glad jerry knocked out THUG SPENCER HA HA HA HA HA :)))))))

We'll start it soon - things are a bit pushed at the mo' but next week will be good if that is okay with everyone. Numbers and statistics are a bad way to pick winners in fights !!

James: Our prayers are with you. Best wishes for fighting this the way Jerry fought Shavers! As for Holmes vs. Jerry Quarry: My pick would be Holmes by hard fought decision or possible TKO. Holmes' jab was deadly for opening cuts. Also, Holmes could take a hard punch and get up from a knockdown. I think this would have been a very competitive and interesting fight.

In a great battle
I pick Ellis to score a late round Ko over the Swede but not before being decked himself. Ellis had a great chin in his prime and this would make him prevail. In the most boring fight of the competition Young does just enough to win and Bugner does just enough to lose. Ellis would win by landing one of his quick rights over the slow jab of INGO. KO 7 Ellis would win a snoozefest over Bugner 8-5-1 even.

Young wins by landing enough to win and Bugner does just enough to lose. Ellis would win by landing one of his quick rights over the slow jab of INGO. KO 7 Ellis would win a snoozefest over Bugner 8-5-1 even.

Young wins by landing enough to win and Bugner does just enough to lose. Ellis would win by landing one of his quick rights over the slow jab of INGO. KO 7 Ellis would win a snoozefest over Bugner 8-5-1 even.

I ran across this great interview with Ron Lyle. When asked about Jerry he said, "Jerry was a very tough fighter. It was my first big fight in boxing and the first loss on my record. He was not given enough credit in boxing and really was a legit fighter in the ring. He had great combos with power who wasn't a big guy but was in a big division. Bottom line: Quarry had a heart of a lion." Go here: http://www.fightnews.com/berkwitt39.htm

I wish you all the best James. My thoughts are with you in your journey to victory over your illness!

I am picking Moorer over Savold by late round knockout. Moorer beat a better quality of fighters than Savold did. Savold never beat a name fighter except for two wins over Lou Nova. In a wild sloppy affair, I pick Galento over Berbick by mid round knockout. moorer over lee savold by tko in 3 rounds, based on moorers' latest performance. berbick over galento in 3 rounds. galento cannot be seriously considered a viable professional, even by the standards of the 30's and 40's. not even against berbick. even though i don't place a lot of value on trying to compare fighters of remotely separated decades, i'm still going to pick the ten best i know of since dempsey. i hope everybody disagrees just to bring a little life back to this website. no disrespect intended towards the quarrys', as i'm sure they want to continue bringing attention to blunt force trauma problems in pro. boxing, despite james' illness.

1, joi louis 2, muhammed ali, 3, jersey joe walcott, 4 george forman, 5, rocky marciano, 6, joe frazier, 7, larry holmes, 8 jack dempsey, 9, evander hollyfield, 10 ezzard charles.

---

DEAR MR. JIMMYQ. HOPE YOU ARE FEELING BETTER, THIS IS ONE GREAT BOXING SITE, HATE TO GO BACK IN YOUR TOURNAMENT BUT I PICK INEMAR TO GET A LEFT-RIGHT CLEAR UPSET KNOCKOUT OF JIMMY ELLIS, SORT OF IN THE FORM VS EDDIE MACHEN, JOHANSSON WAS 26-2 WITH 17 KNOCKOUTS, I KNOW ONE THING THAT COMPUTER TOURNAMENT HOLMES/ QUARRY WAS SORT OF A FARCE, ARE THEY SURE IT WAS NOT GERRY COONEY? I WOULD HAVE TO GIVE IT TO HOLMES BUT NOT IN THAT FASHION, NO ONE KNOCKED JERRY QUARRY OUT WITH A BODY SHOT OR ANYTHING ELSE, NOT EVEN THEY CHUVALO DEBACLE, IF HOLMES COULD NOT KO SHAVERS, THAN HOW THEY HELL IS HE GONNA KO JERRY? TAKE CARE!

OKAY I STAND CORRECTED, JERRY WAS KAYOED ON A SPARRING SEGMENT OF ELLERY QUEEN (BRAD "KID" HOGAN). BY THE SAME GUY WHO WAS THE POLICEMAN FRIEND OF AL'S IN "MARRIED WITH CHILDREN!" AND EARLIER SUFFERED A KO LOSS IN A STREET FIGHT WITH BARBARA EDEN ("I DREAM OF JEANNIE!").

AND THEY TV FIGHT WITH JEANNIE, I BELEIVE JERRY WAS TOOK OUT WITH A BODY SHOT!! DID ANYONE EVER FIND OUT THE BOXER'S WEIGHT OF THEY QUARRY-LOU BAILEY, JQ-RON CRAMNER, JQ-CHARLEY RENO?? I AM STILL RESEARCHING, AND DOES ANYONE KNOW IF THEY W.B.A.DID THEY OFFICIAL RATINGS OF THE HEAVYWEIGHTS OF THE 70'S?

The only time Jerry Quarry was ever down for the count except for the controversial Chuvalo fight was at the hands of none other than brother Jimmy Quarry who did the trick in the amateurs. Mr. Jimmy doesn't always mention that he was 14 years old and Jerry was 13 at the time! If memory serves me, Jerry was also knocked out in TV land by Batman or Robin when he was hypnotized and under the power of the Riddler.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF BOXING, INC. 86 Fletcher Avenue, Mount Vernon, New York 10552 914.664.4571THE JERRY QUARRY FOUNDATION FOR PUGILISTICA DEMENTIA, INCORPORATED, 2255 East Oakland Avenue, Hemet, California 92544 909.929.69776 March 2002Dear Ms. Ambrose:Councilperson, Council of the District of Columbia, Committee of Boxing and Wrestling441 4th Street, NWWashington, DCDear Ms. Ambrose:The American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) and The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia (TJQF) are not for profit organizations that have often provided comments and input regarding proposed state and federal legislation regarding professional boxing. It is important for you to know that neither of them is currently or has ever previously promoted, staged, televised, or financially benefitted in any way whatsoever from the occurrence of any professional matches. It has come to our attention that your Committee will examine the operations of the D.C.
Boxing and Wrestling Commission at a public hearing on 12 March 2002. Based upon what these two organizations know about the legislation to be covered at this hearing and their collective expertise in such legal matters, the AAIB and TJQF would like to offer their comments on boxing commissions and their functions:1) All boxing commissioners should be paid for their efforts. Implementing such a policy reduces the chances of bribery and chicanery occurring on the part of such persons. Paying these individuals will also enhance the possibility of appointing knowledgeable and honest persons to these positions.2) Only those individuals who have demonstrated solid expertise in professional boxing should be appointed to serve on such a commission. The sport is too dangerous for any other arrangement.3) Given the carnival and "stagey" nature of professional wrestling, the boxing and wrestling commission should be separate entities made up of different people. Even with all of its problems, professional boxing is a legitimate sport.4) Because of the historically negative, corrupting, and undue influence of the so-called, self-appointed sanctioning bodies (eg. WBA, WBC, WBO, IBF, etc.) boxing commissions should have total control over all aspects of boxing shows. This jurisdiction should include: the equipment used, the referees and judges utilized, the scoring of the bouts, the weigh-in procedures, the contracts of the fighters, all safety and medical procedures, and all other similar items.5) No boxing commission should have the dual responsibility of both attracting/soliciting boxing business and regulating it. No body should undertake these potentially conflicting functions at the same time.6) All states, reservations, territories, and the District should have a state athletic commission that not only provides oversight and supervision to the separate boxing, wrestling, football, etc. commissions, but also reports directly to the chief executive officer (eg. Governor, Mayor, etc.) of that political entity.If you have any questions concerning the above comments, please contact me at 330.743.2898 or ehnpbasa@aol.com. I am George L. Otto, BCD, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LISW, MSUS Legislative Counsel/Chief Counsel Legislative Counsel/Chief Counsel Mr. Stephen Acunto, Co-Founder, AAIB Mr. James Quarry, President, TJQF The Honorable John McCain, United States Senator The Honorable Anthony Williams, Mayor of the District of Columbia The Honorable Carol Schwartz, Councilmember, the District of ColumbiaIf you have any questions concerning the above comments, please contact me at 330.743.2898 or ehnpbasa@aol.com. I am George L. Otto, BCD, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LISW, MSUS Legislative Counsel/Chief Counsel Mr. Stephen Acunto, Co-Founder, AAIB Mr. James Quarry, President, TJQF The Honorable John McCain, United States Senator The Honorable Anthony Williams, Mayor of the District of Columbia The Honorable Carol Schwartz, Councilmember, the District of Columbia SORRY GENTS: BUT I HAVETA WRITE IN AGAIN, (SEE I'M BETWEEN ROOFING JOBS AND HAVE TOO MUCH TIME ON MY HANDS) I ARGUED WITH A FIGHT BUDDY OF MINE ABOUT YESTERDAYS HEAVYWEIGHTS COMPARED TO TODAY. HE SAID TUA WOULD TAKE CARE OF BONAVENTA IN 2 ROUNDS, THEY ARE BIGGER TRAINED BETTER, SHARPER ETC. AND YU KNOW HE MAY WELL BE RIGHT THE BIGGEST GUY JERRY EVER FOUGHT WAS BUSTER MATHIS 238 1/2LBS. STANFORD HARRIS 233 1/2 . FINALS IN KC I THINK THE GUY WENT 238. (JQ ENDED HIS CAREER). I KNOW ONE THING THAT YESTERDAYS HAD BETTER-HEART. NOBODY QUIT, (APOLOGIES DURAN-LEONARD). AKINWANDE GETTIN HIS 8$MILLION DOLLAR PURSE QUIT AGAINST LEWIS; ( I THOUGHT REFEREE MILLS LANE SHOULD HAVE HIT HIM) McCALL CRYBABY THING. HOWEVER DID YU SEE TIM WITHERSPOON.

It is funny how people think just size rules over skill. It is ironic that David Tua is used as an example of the better fighters of today. In his last major fight Tua was handily outpointed by 213 pound Chris Byrd, a fighter similar to Jimmy Young in style. Tua with about a 22 pound weight advantage got his ears boxed off by Byrd and I believe Young would have done the same thing to him. Not to mention what Muhammed Ali would have done to the "Pineapple Head." Both Byrd and Young are not hard punchers and I think Jerry would have possibly kayoed Tua, probably in the later rounds. Tua is strong and he has a dangerous left hook but little else. Joe Louis in his prime knocked out the following fighters when he was giving away over 50 pounds to his opponents in some of these cases: Buddy Baer, Abe Simon, Primo Carnera, Tony Galento, and Max Baer all made Louis look small at about 200 pounds and out of these fighters; B. Baer, Simon, and Carnera all were above 6'5" in height and they were no match for the better skilled Louis. Jack Dempsey also destroyed much larger fighters like Luis Firpo and Jess Willard, so size alone doesn't guarantee victory. Out of today's larger fighters; only Lennox Lewis, and maybe the Klitscko Brothers seem to show any kind of boxing skill that would trouble the oldtimers. Because without the skill, they would not have a chance against the all time greats. But all of these fighters have question marks that need to be answered in order to include them among the greats. Lennox has a questionable chin and the Klitsckos have both shown not to respond too well when things are not going their way.

Wladimir K. fell from exhaustion in a later round when journeyman Ross Puritty didn't fall from from an early beating and Vitaly K. quit on his stool due to arm injury while he was ahead of Chris Byrd on the scorecards. I am not doubting that Vitaly K. was injured but an old timer would have fought one handed for a couple rounds and end up winning a decision rather than give in to defeat (I realize that Sonny Liston did the same thing in the first Ali fight-I am talking about oldtimers in general).

If you can agree, the only exceptions are Lewis and Bowe who were better when they were around the 220-230 lb mark....'nuff said !!!!!!!

The last 40 year - best heavyweights - Ali - 205-225lbs - Frazier - 200 - 215lbs - Foreman - 210 - 225lbs (prime) - Holmes - 206-220 lbs (prime) Mike Tyson - 216 - 224 lbs - Holyfield - 202-218 lbs - They have been the best - the only exceptions are Lewis and Bowe who were better when they were around the 220-230 lb mark....'nuff said !!!!!!!
Dear Senator Reid:

Writing on behalf of the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) and The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia (TJQF), I have provided below additional comments on your recently introduced legislation, S. 893, The National Boxing Commission Act of 2001. As I indicated in my previous letter dated 19 January to you regarding this introduced bill, both the Association and the Foundation believe that its passage and implementation in a properly amended form could greatly improve the sport in many ways. Both the AAIB and TJQF firmly believe that professional boxing still lacks the unity, discipline, consistency, and integrity exhibited by other sports, despite the passage and implementation of The Professional Boxing Safety Act of 1996 and The Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act of 2000. For that reason, the Association and the Foundation believe that S. 893 must include provisions that provide for the establishment of a committee that would draw up uniform laws regulating all aspects of professional boxing, in all political subdivisions of the United States and their territories. Thus this bill, when passed in its acceptable form, would appoint all members of the Association of Boxing Commissions, five representatives of the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, and four members of The Jerry Quarry Foundation to a rule-making group that would develop these regulations. The agreed-upon rules would cover all aspects of equipment standards; health and safety precautions; promotional guidelines; contractual regulations; pension provisions; the deportment of the fighters and their staff members during all public appearances to include the bouts themselves; the payment of the fighters; the training, qualifications, appointment, behavior, payment, and appointment of the referees; judges, timekeepers, cut persons, trainers, managers, inspectors, and boxing commissioners; and any other needed rules and regulations. The Federal Government would organize and pay all the financial expenses of those individuals carrying out such an enormous and important undertaking. Finally, the results of such an effort would form the basis of any laws imposed upon foreign countries that would stage and promote professional boxing matches throughout the world. Without question, professional boxing desperately needs such uniform standards and criteria in every location where it occurs. Otherwise, the unsanitary traditions of staging "back alley brawls," "waterway barge fights," and unsavoury spectacles will continue to haunt the sport and reinforce its already dreadful reputation for underhandedness, illegality, cruelty, and consumer fraud.

If you want to provide feedback or ask questions concerning this letter or any other related subjects, I can be reached at ehnpbsa@aol.com, 330.743.2898, or 142 Upland Ave., Youngstown, Ohio 44505. I am Sincerely yours,

GEORGE OTTO, BCD, CCDIII, ESQUIRE, LICADC, LISW, MSUS
Chief Counsel/Legislative Consultant

cc. Mr. Stephen Acunto, Sr., Co-Founder, American Association for the Improvement of Boxing
Mr. James Quarry, President, The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia
The Honorable John McCain, United States Senate
could greatly improve the sport in many ways. Subsection (a)(6) of Section 9 of S. 893 covers the issues surrounding conducting discussions and entering into agreements with foreign boxing events and foreign boxers, trainers, cut men, referees, judges, ringside physicians, and other professional boxing personnel. The language in this section should be amended to reflect the following policies for numerous reasons. First of all, it is important to note that the most powerful people in the boxing industry, as well as most of the fighters and their fans are citizens of the United States. Thus, even though an increasing number of bouts now occur outside of the United States and an increasing number of fighters are coming here from overseas, the interests of United States citizens still dominate this sport. It is also important to note that the geographical sites of the fights have become increasingly unimportant in terms of generating revenue because of increasing amounts of money coming from pay per view and cable television fans paying subscription fees. Nevertheless, in attempts to secure additional revenue, some promoters have staged boxing productions overseas by presenting fighters who are not physically and/or mentally fit to pass any examination given by any boxing commission in the United States; also promoters, for the same reasons, have taken advantage of lax foreign safety regulations in eliminating certain expenses, such as having an ambulance at ringside to provide additional medical coverage for injured boxers. Given the spirit and intent of the previously approved and enacted Professional Boxing Act of 1996 and the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act of 2000, this bill should ensure that all professional boxing matches involving any promotional, media, or athletic interest connected to the United States, and occurring outside the United States, comply with uniform medical, contractual, and safety standards as set forth by the Association of Boxing Commissions. Furthermore, these rules should be uniformly promulgated and enforced by the boxing commissioners in all local jurisdictions where such a professional boxing match occurs. To guarantee that these rules be enacted, all current and future trade agreements (e.g. NAFTA and GATT) should include provisions ensuring that the Association and the local boxing commissions work together to establish and implement these rules and regulations in a consistent and fair manner. Including this proposed amendment in S. 893 will greatly help in improving the safety and fairness of this sport overseas. As mentioned in my previous letter, if you have any questions concerning the above, please call me at 330.743.2898 or email me at ehnpsa@aol.com. I am\textit{Sincerely yours,}

GEORGE L. OTTO, BCD, CCDIII, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LISW, MSUS
Chief Counsel/Legislative Consultant

cc. Mr. Stephen Acunto, Sr., Co-Founder, American Association for the Improvement of Boxing
Mr. James Quarry, President, The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia
The Honorable John McCain, United States Senate

3/17/02 12:12:43 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)| Joshua Tree, CA |
3/17/02 07:12:24 PM | Kent Appel | La Habra, CA |
3/18/02 10:28:04 AM | Bob Bumbera | Charlotte NC |
3/18/02 05:34:53 PM | Kent Appel | La Habra, CA |
Oleg Maskaev, completely was outboxing American Corey Sanders (not the same Corrie Sanders from South Africa). Maskaev easily won the first seven rounds and he was winning the eighth round when all of a sudden Sanders nailed him with a combo and down Maskaev went. He got back up but Sanders again hit him with a hard combo and the referee stopped the fight. The reason why I am bringing up this fight is for about seven and one half rounds the fight reminded me of Jerry's fight with Ron Lyle. Maskaev though a big guy at 6'3” 238 pounds, was dwarfed in size by the 6'6” 312 pound Sanders and until the knockdown, Maskaev was proving what I have always believed, that a smaller fighter with better skills can beat a much larger opponent. He was moving in and out and counter punching beautifully and he was beating Sanders to the punch until the first knockdown. One thing though I noticed Maskaev's corner telling him a couple of times to not stand in front of Sanders when he got in close and that he needed to give Sanders angles so Sanders would be less likely to catch him with good shots. I think Maskaev wishes he listened to his corner now!

In the competition we have Moorer and Berbick through. The next round we have All time great Rocky Marciano against TNT Tubbs and in the second match - Jersey Joe Walcott against Bonecrusher Smith...good matches you'll agree.

Marciano over tubbs by ko in two. Walcott over smith by a methodical beating and ko in five rounds. anyone watch a walcott fight film lately? i am amazed by the way he changes momentum on a dime. stops moving forward, and calmly walks to the side four or five steps, giving his opponent new angles to deal with. Walcott is highly underappreciated. He ranks in at least the top five all time greats.

The thing is Steve, for almost eight rounds Maskaev was wiping the floor with a guy who outweighed him by 74 pounds. There were several occasions where Sanders was rocked and he appeared hurt. If Sanders had not got lucky and tagged Maskaev with some "Hail Mary" punches, no one would mention the weight difference. It was not the size difference that did Maskaev in. It was his own stupidity of staying in front of Sanders. Maskaev earlier in his career did the same thing against David Tua when he was leading in the later stages of a fight and he got caught and knocked out by Tua and that time he was the bigger fighter and although the weights were about the same, he had a big height advantage against Tua.

I am picking Marciano by fifth round knockout over Tubbs and Walcott by decision over Bonecrusher. "Bonecrusher Smith" is a great name though. Maybe he should have been or should be still a pro wrestler.

Ronny, as I remember it, the Olympic Auditorium in downtown Los Angeles had regular boxing shows on Mondays? one of Jerry's earlier bouts, in L.A. was on a monday. I say they only ran shows on Thursday and Friday at OLYMPIC. Seems like Saturdays were very special boxing events like the COLISEUM OR SPORTS ARENA. AND ANYONE KNOW THE WEIGHTS FOR JERRY Q-JOEY ORBILLO BOUT? JQ 192LBS AND ORBILLO?? boxing shows on Thursday nights with Friday nights being for the bigger name fights. I suppose they could have used Saturdays as well. They also had pro wrestling regularly on Wednesday nights with some Friday nights for their special events. I don’t remember any boxing shows ever being on Monday nights. Of course it has been many years and I may not be remembering correctly.

Marciano over Tubbs TKO 10. Walcott over Smith by decision. I saw part of the Maskaev-Sanders fight also. At the time of the KO, Maskaev was well ahead on points and was on his way to a decision win over a badly out of shape Sanders, at least he looked out of shape to me. I am one of those people who believe a good big man will beat a good small man most of the time. A good boxer will beat a good puncher most of the time. We had Marciano and Walcott in our bout this week. He was being wiped out by Walcott in their title bout. He made one mistake and it was over. And he was the smaller guy. I also believe Roy Jones can and will beat Vassiliy Jirov. A smaller guy wins. Consider this. If say, Jack Dempsey had been born in 1980 instead of 1895, he would be about 6'3" or 6'4" and weigh 220-225. Jack was a good size athlete in his day. The same goes for Joe Louis. So, I'm also one of those people who think we need more separation in the heavyweight division. Cruiserweight say 180-200, Heavyweight 201-225 and Superheavy 225 and up. Call me crazy, but if you are 185 lbs and you have a guy that weighs 235 or 240 and has two or three inches on you. You will have a very hard time.

I pick Walcott to eek out a close decision over a Prime Bonecrusher. I also see the Marciano fight closer than you other gentleman. After falling behind and getting cut an haymaking right stops Tubbs in the tenth round.Well that puts Marciano and Walcott through. In the round next we have 60's hard man Ron Lyle against the wily Eddie Machen. In the second match (and final one of the first round we have a rematch of sorts as Riddick Bowe and Pinklon Thomas meet again. This time it will be an early-mid eighties Thomas against an early nineties Bowe. Will be a good fight.

In a tough fight, I pick Lyle by split decision over Machen. Machen lands more punches but Lyle knocks him down twice in the fight to get the narrow victory with two 10 to 8 rounds. Thomas never threatens and Bowe wins a decision on all three judges cards. Bowe easily wins 9 out of 12 rounds for the verdict. Big Daddy Bowe by a close but unanimous decision over Pinklon Thomas, and Lyle over Machen by a middle round TKO. Bowe would tire toward the end of the fight, but hold on for the win.

based on machens'performances against liston and quarry, i pick machen by a decision in a brutal,exciting fight.these are the kinds of matchups i can savor!bowe by ho hum decision over thomas.why pick names out of a hat ?why not post fights you would really like to see? then tally the votes.i can think up a dozen matchups more interesting than fights involving tubbs and bonecrusher smith.pick x amount of fighters by vote or consensus among participants.then,vote on matchups,then conduct an elimination tournament.this would eliminate fights based on random change or a game of statistics.
CA||Sonia81@aol.com||||10|HAPPY EASTER TO ALL!  WE LOVE & MISS YOU UNCLE JERRY, AND WE'RE HERE FOR YA DAD!|
|3/30/02 05:15:10 AM|EVREN|London||Evren@btinternet.com||||10|I agree with SM - Lyle and Machen were my two of my favourite fighters and I am kinda sad that have been drawn against one another. I feel Machen would win a close decision as Lyle had difficulty with the crafty boxers and Machen definitely fell into this category. Machen on points in a tough tough battle. I also pick Bowe to outpoint Thomas in a surprisingly close contest. SM - I feel that we all picked fights we wanted to see then we would have a pre conception of the result already. Like the heavyweight tournament in the late sixties it was done this way with all the best boxers available. However if you really feel that way is better e-mail everyone with your idea and we can go from there. Best WishesEvren|

|4/1/02 08:05:20 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||||10|I DO NOT MEAN TO INTERRUPT THE TOURNAMENT, BUT HERE IS A LITTLE TIDBIT, JERRY SCORED AROUND 70 KNOCKDOWNS IN HIS CAREER, AND ONLY HIT THE DECK HIMSELF -6 (ONLY IN WHICH 2 HE LOST 69' CHUVALO 74' FRAZIER) THATS ABOUT 11 OR 12 TO 1, THIS IS AMAZING, SOME OF THE GREATS PATTERTSON, FRAZIER ETC. DO NOT COME CLOSE TO THAT RATIO, OF COURSE 8 OF FRAZIER'S 11 KNOCKDOWNS WERE TO FOREMAN, WITH THE CALIBER OF JQ'S OPPONENTS THIS IS HALL OF FAME STUFF, THEY ONLY ONES THAT HE REALLY DID NOT KNOCK DOWN WERE THEY ABSOLUTE BEST ALI, FRAZIER, NORTON, MACHEN, CHUVALO, AND ELLIS |
|4/2/02 03:11:41 PM|sm|nj||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|i'm relatively new to this site, so some of this may be old ground already covered, but not for me. kent, great articles on welterweight div. and timetunnel: quarry upsets lyle. evren, i think you're doing a great job running the tournament. at his peak, jerry quarry would have won matches or at least rematches with ellis, chuvalo, norton, machen, and a good chance against foreman. remember i said at the top of his game. he's a very underrated fighter. if not for the winds of chance and fate, he could have been considered one of the very best all time. fights i'd liked to have seen, lyle vs frazier, norton, frazier vs norton, shavers, liston, quarry vs foreman, rematch vs ellis, chuvalo, machen, norton, again, both at their prime. |
|4/3/02 12:33:02 PM|Evren|London||Evren@btinternet.com||||10|We need a deciding vote on Machen vs Lyle the we can proceed to the next round. Evren|
|4/3/02 02:45:35 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||||10|I'M USING BOTH IN THEIR PRIME'S UNFORTUNATELY LYLE (7 1/2 YEARS IN PRISON) DID NOT REALLY HAVE PRIME YEARS, MACHEN WINS THEY FIRST 3 ROUNDS, IN AND OUT QUICKER THAN LYLE CAN REACT, LYLE GETTING MORE VISCIOUS, AND TAKES 4TH AND 5TH ROUNDS, AS HE LANDS A FEW BOMBS, MACHEN NOW MORE DEFENSIVE, TIES LYLE UP, 6TH-ROUND EVEN AS MACHEN WINS A FEW TOE TO TOE EXCHANGES BEATING LYLE TO THE PUNCH, 7TH ROUND LYLE TIRING MACHEN OUT A LITTLE LEANING IN ON THE CLINCHES OF HIS 25 POUND LIGHTER FOE, ANOTHER DEAD EVEN HEAT, MACHEN AGAIN WINNING A FEW TOE TO TOE EXCHANGES TAKES THE 8TH, BUT LYLE HAS HIS BEST ROUND OF THE NIGHT IN THE 9TH, SCORING A FEW POWERFUL AND DECEPTIVE COMBINATIONS, WHILE TRAPPING EDDIE IN A CORNER, LYLE GETS IN A 2 POINT ROUND, AS MACHEN IS HOLDING ON AT THE BELL. LYLE IS THROWING COMBINATIONS NOW, AND WHEN NOT USING HIS REACH WITH A JAB, MACHEN HOPEING TO GET A STRETCH RUN, STARTS HOOKING UNDERNEATH LYLE'S JAB. - LYLE'S ROUND. THEY 11TH MACHEN HAS REGAINED HIS SECOND WIND AND NOW CONFUSING LYLE WITH RIGT LEADS, IN CLOSE HE'S COUNTERING WITH HOOKS. - MACHEN'S ROUND. EDDIE TAKES IT HOME IN THE 12TH THROWING, TYING UP AND THROWING AGAIN, LYLE SLOWED FROM HIS OWN EARLIER PACE IS JUST FLAT GETTING BEAT TO THE PUNCH, EDDIE EXHAUSTED, BUT GOING FOR BROKE, LYLE'S FACE SAYS HE WOULD KILL MACHEN IF HE COULD GET AHOFLD OF HIM, AS HE IS SPENT BUT DETERMINED AS THE ROUND ENDS. JUDGE TONY CASTELLANO SCORES IT A DRAW 95-95 BUT IS OVERRULED BY REFEE REFEREE MERCANTE, AND THEY OTHER JUDE LARRY ROSADILLA 96-95 WINNER BY MAJORITY DEC. EDDIE MACHEN (NO KNOCKDOWNS)|
|4/4/02 06:44:53 AM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com||||10|Machen over Lyle by decision, 7 rounds to five. Bowe over Thomas by KO in round 9.

Well there we have it Lyle and Thomas go out. Well guys that is the end of the first round. The real matches start from here. Will start the next round very soon. Evren

Thanks SM for your compliments about my article at eastsideboxing.com about the state of the welterweight division and my article about the Jerry Quarry/Ron Lyle fight. The welterweight article is on the home page, while the Quarry article is and several other articles I have written are on the more news page (page two) that can be found by clicking on the more news banner at the left side of the home page and also at the bottom of the home page. You will need to scroll down the pages to find my articles.

Okay the final thirty two combatants are - Ken Norton, Joe Frazier, Muhammad Ali, Sonny Liston, Mike Tyson, Carl Williams, Lennox Lewis, Hasim Rahman, Jimmy Young, Jimmy Ellis, Michael Moorer, Gerry Cooney, Tony Tucker, Ezzard Charles, Trevor Berbick, Rocky Marciano, Jersey Joe Walcott, Jerry Quarry, Riddick Bowe, Eddie Machen, George Chuvalo, Larry Holmes, Max Schmeling, Joe Louis, Earnie Shavers, Floyd Patterson, Michael Dokes, George Foreman, Evander Holyfield, Zora Folley, Roland La Starza and Cleveland Williams. Okay for the first two matches of the next round are...50's stylist Zora Folley takes on former world champ Tony Tucker. In the second bout Riddick Bowe meets murderous punching Earnie Shavers. Evren

I pick Tucker by close decision over Folley. Tucker uses his height and reach advantage to win enough rounds for the verdict. In a wild one where both parties hit the deck, it is Bowe by eighth round knockout over Shavers.

Tucker was a nice technical fighter, so was Folley. Tucker was much bigger however, and would pick apart Zora to win a tough decision. Bowe vs Shavers is a pick-em. I say Riddick got hit too much and Earnie takes him out pretty early. Like round 4.

In an excellent technical matchup Foley and Tucker engage in scientific boxing. The fight is even going into the later stages when Tucker lands a crashing right cross and Foley's chin gives out. The fight is won by Tucker in nine. The second bout is brutal - Bowe decides to match fire with fire against Shavers and is damaged severely for his ignorance. A crashing left hook right cross puts big daddy down for the count of seven in the first. The bell saves him. After an all out effort in the second Bowe finds a way to survive the bombardment and comes fighting back at the bell. Shavers is a little weary in the third and Bowe begins to box keeping him on the end of a long jab. The fourth round is the same. The next stanza sees Bowe begin to unload on a tired Shavers who sags in the corner, badly hurt. The referee administers a count but lets Shavers continue. As Bowe comes in for the kill Earnie finds some strength and turns Bowe on ropes where he unleashes five savage punches to Bowes exposed chin. Riddick falls heavily on his front and the referee counts him out in a brutal bout. In the interview after Earnie considers whether he will fight on in the next round as he is so battered. He will of course.
|4/12/02 12:12:39 PM|Evren|London|||||10|Tucker is definitely through - Shavers is ahead - 3-2 votes - I will post next matches tomorrow so if anyone else would like to vote then today is the day.
|4/13/02 03:19:19 PM|EVREN|LONDON|||||10|Shavers and Tucker through. Next two matches are - Ezzard Charles vs Jimmy Ellis. Trevor Berbick vs Muhammad Ali (Rematch).|
|4/15/02 12:09:48 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|I pick Charles over Ellis by decision and Ali over Berbick by 8th round TKO.|
|4/17/02 02:07:03 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|MIKE PAUL COMPOSED AN ALLTIME RATING SYSTEM, THAT I CONSIDER GREAT FOR ALLTIME, AND TERRIBLE YEAR TO YEAR, EXAMPLE: JQ rated 18th in 1969??! but has Jerr no.26 alltime, it goes as a points system, off the fighter's biggest win, which by his standards Quarry's would be Shavers. there is a big discussion about this on boxingrec.i know for a fact JERRY QUARRY WAS ANYWHERE FROM TOP 8, (DRAW WITH PATTERSON) TO THEY NO.1 CONTENDER BY RING MAGAZINE FROM 1967-75. And the W.B.A. which were they official rating committe rated JQ even higher for they did not recognize Ali's exiled years. Disregard mike paul's year to year rating's. But on they other hand his Alltime were pretty damn good. There was an 64-month period were Jerry only lost to PRAZIER AND ALI, and beat 5 top teners, Foster#1, BODELL#8, MIDDLETON#7, LYLE#3, and SHAVERS#5|
|4/18/02 05:28:40 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com.au|||10|Mr James Quarry, congratulations on the tremendous work you have done with the foundation. While you deserve the appreciation of all boxers for this work, your family has also earned the respect of all fight fans for the courage always shown. I understand that you have a battle of your own. Having 'Quarry' as your last name must surely help. Best wishes from Australia. |
|4/19/02 11:40:50 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Come on guys and vote on the latest fight in our tournament. It looked like we were going good again in the last fight so lets keep it going.|
|4/19/02 06:46:07 PM|Sonia Hathaway|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia81@aol.com|||10|Yes, Dad, you've/we've got a battle to face but as the saying goes "THERE'S NO QUIT IN A QUARRY". We're behind you all the way. We love & miss you Uncle Jerry! Take care all!!|
|4/20/02 10:43:24 AM|Evren|London||Evren@btinternet.com|||10|A 212lb Ali comes out to meet Trevor Berbick in the center of the ring with a lightning right cross stamping his authority on his bigger foe. Ali starts his pattern of jabbing and moving, tying up Berbick on the inside. In the next few rounds Berbick continues to press and makes the fight exciting but continually gets beaten to the punch and is getting totally boxed out. In the 10th round a battered Berbick gives up and Ali moves in landing a 15 punch combination and the referee stops the bout with Trevor collapsing by the ropes.The second match is a great tactical battle between two excellent boxers. For once, at heavyweight, both are fighting opponents their own weight and both perform admirably. The fight is close all the way with Charles taking a little edge due to his extra skill level and he wins a close unanimous decision in a 'purists delight'.|
Jerry was my only idol growing up in the late '60s and '70s. I remember listening to his late night fights from the west coast, or staying up late waiting for results. His passing hit me really hard. I truly regret not meeting him. This man gave it all in this brutal sport, he left a piece of himself in each one of those 66 fights for the entertainment of the public. Why do bad things happen to good people. He's truly a warrior who didn't deserve such a fate. A cruel ending to this remarkable person. May God Bless you Jerry.

Ali over Berbick TKO 8. Charles over Ellis by decision.

Ali (apart from that last fight) would always be way too strong for Berbick. Probably a TKO early, I'd say round 5. Ellis is better than history records, but Charles too tough for him. The Charles before the Marciano fight would win convincingly by TKO, while the Charles after Rocky might beat Ellis on points.

In their primes, Ali overpowers Berbeck in 4 or 5 rounds. I agree with Paul, Jimmy Ellis had some attributes that aren't mentioned very often. He had very fast hands, excellent ring movement, and a powerful, sneaky right hand. I still see Charles as a better fighter overall. Charles wins a 15 round decision.

Okay Ali and Charles are through unanimously. next round...Lennox Lewis meets the rabbit Floyd Patterson. In the second match Hasim Rahman meets Iron Mike Tyson.

Lennox is way too big and strong and would land in the 3rd round and Floyd would fall. Tyson in his prime would knock the slow moving plodding Rahman out pretty early. Let's say round 4.

Yes, Lewis over Patterson and Tyson over Rahman; both by knockout before the fifth round.

Hey Kent, I feel this matchup of Lewis vs Patterson strengthens my argument for a superheavyweight div., starting at 225lbs. Patterson was a great fighter, for his size. He beat most of the top ten guys of his era, but he has no chance against monsters like Lewis. The fact that Maskiev was beating up on Simon and knocked out Rahman only attests to the larger man's mediocrity. As Dennis Miller says "that's just my opinion, I could be wrong." Anyway, Lewis by Tko in 3. Tyson walks through Rahman in 3.

Patterson gives Lewis some problems with his movement and speed but eventually gets battered along the ropes mid way through the seventh round though the fight was quite close at that point. The Tyson - Rahman bout is a real war with Rahman trying to outmuscle Tyson but soon realises that Mike wasn't just about speed - he was speed and dynamic and he crushes Rahman a la the way he destroyed Bruno in '96. Tyson by 3 round ko.

Patterson lands some good body shots, but goes down 5 times in 4 rounds before the Ref stops it. Tyson crushed the slow moving Rahman in 3 rounds. Rahman kept Mike off him in the first round, but is hurt by body shots. The second goes much the same. In the middle of the third, Tyson lands his classic uppercut, two quick hooks to the body, then a right forearm puts "The Rock" in a coma.

Hey Kent, I feel this matchup of Lewis vs Patterson strengthens my argument for a superheavyweight div., starting at 225lbs. Patterson was a great fighter, for his size. He beat most of the top ten guys of his era, but he has no chance against monsters like Lewis. The fact that Maskiev was beating up on Simon and knocked out Rahman only attests to the larger man's mediocrity. As Dennis Miller says "that's just my opinion, I could be wrong." Anyway, Lewis by Tko in 3. Tyson walks through Rahman in 3.

was notorious about not taking a punch very well so that is why I think he would be knocked out by Lewis. If it was Jerry verses Lewis on the other hand, even though he was a lot smaller than Lewis, he would be more of a match for Lewis than Patterson if only because Jerry could take a terrific punch. I would say the same thing about Rocky Marciano verse Lewis as well. I will have to think about the current matches and post about them tomarrow or Sunday.

In the first fight, Quarry stops Young by TKO in the 6th. The first 3 rounds saw Jerry pressing the action to the body, Young using his jab to fend him off. Young is very hard to hit with a clean shot. In the fourth Jerry lands some hard body shots, a stiff right sends Jimmy reeling. The fifth round Young is holding, and ducks through the ropes when Jerry puts more than three punches together. The ref takes the round away from Young for this tactic. In the 6th, Jerry staggers Young with a left and right on a break, Young retreats to the ropes. Jerry try's to put Young away and drops him with a right. Young gets up at 7 and ducks through the ropes again. The ref stops it at 2:06. Young protests and says he is not hurt and later says he was robbed. Williams stops La Starza in the 5th round. Williams towers over the 5'11" LaStarza and uses his long left to set up right hands. Both fighters head hunt for the first two rounds and Carl gets the better of it. In the third Roland shifts to a body attack and gets in some good shots though Williams seems to take it well. In the fifth round Williams hurts LaStarza and opens a cut above his right eye. By the end of the round Williams is giving LaStarza a thumping. Williams opens the 5th with a hard combination that sends Roland reeling. A left hook drops him to one knee. Up at a count of 8 Williams hammers him along the ropes and drops him as the ref steps in. TKO 1:43.

Quarry vs Young is a tough one. Would it be like the Ellis and Machen fights for Jerry or like the Spencer and Patterson fights. I know I'm not going to win any popularity awards but I must pick Young - in his prime he gave Foreman, Ali and Norton fits and you could argue he won the last two (many do). If Ali and Norton couldn't knock him out I feel that Quarry couldn't do it either. Young on points. La Starza was a cagey boxer with a good chin, I believe he was stopped only twice (by Marciano and Julio Mederos). The size would be a big factor and believe Williams after a few scary moments takes a good decision. I do feel Williams would win a decision if the two were the same size however.

I pick Jerry by late kayo over Young and Carl Williams over La Starza by decision. Gil Clancy once said that Jerry was the best gym fighter he ever saw and that he used contenders like Young as sparring partners and he controlled the action. Interesting point about the Young verses Lyle fights, Lyle has always believed that he won both fights. As I remember them or at least one of them, Lyle landed the more telling blows and he kept up a steady body attack, but Young landed more punches and the fights were close.

Glad to be back after long absense. Had to get some business done across the US. Especially Georgia. Recently returned from Santa Ana, Calif. I'm very glad to see this site still going strong. Also glad that certain "characters" are no longer here. Very ineteresting match-ups. Jerry vs Jimmy is very tough. I pick Quarry by ko 6. This is Quarry prior to the 2nd loss to Frazier. If it was post Frazier I would pick Young. I don't think using Ali is a good measuring stick. Many could argue that Ali was finished after the Manila fight with Frazier. He was clearly out of shape in that fight. He looked fat to me. Clearly a lack of motivation on Ali's part. Also Young didn't go after Ali like my Norton did. Norton was far more robbed than the elusive Young. Norton beat Ali twice (official and unofficial) while Ali was in his prime. Of course Ali was washed up when Norton beat him the 3rd time. I'm no hypocrite.
Truth" Williams he is just too big and strong for the blown up light-heavy Laztarza. Easy decision win. Even if Laztarza is actually more skilled. Same goes for Lewis over Patterson. Patterson is one boxer who would do poorly against today's heavies. He's way too small and weak chinned. Can you picture him against massive Tua and mutants like the Klitcho's, Goofi Whitaker, McLine, etc. Lewis would KO him in about 8th round. I saw a past match-up. The Ali-Berbick match is too easy. Ali would whip him thoroughly. Even Berbick must know deep down that he would have lost to the prime Ali and not the washed up 40 year old. Where exactly is Bakersfield anyway? I was in California Bay area. Just realized that perhaps I could've stopped by. | 4/28/02 04:47:45 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com||||10|Welcome back JP. No Bakersfield is nowhere near the San Francisco Bay area. It is closer to Los Angeles, which is about 400 miles south of San Francisco. Oh by the way, you sent me a message a while back but I couldn't open the attachment for some reason so I never knew what it was about. I wasn't ignoring the message. | 4/28/02 04:51:44 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com||||10|JP, just noticed you were also in Santa Ana. That is close to where I live but also about 100 miles from Bakersfield. | 4/29/02 12:10:15 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago||sadmspats@yahoo.com||||10|Jerry was a shade better than Young and would win a tight-tight decision. I don't see Jerry knocking Young out though, other top guys couldn't other then Shavers once. | 4/29/02 01:35:25 PM|steve|nj||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|just looking at commen apponents,jerry outboxed and hurt ron lyle.both at thier peaks,i always believed quarry would have taken norton out rather handily.i believe jerry would have found a way to beat young,especially with a good ref who doesn't allow all that holding and sticking -his-head-through-the-ropes nonsense.young was a fighter i never enjoyed watching.quarry by decision after hurting young several times.williams too big for la starza,wins by decision.| 4/29/02 04:42:48 PM|Ricardo Ortiz|San Francisco,CA||ricort@msn.com||||10|Jerry's career was very moving,sad and exciting.He had a great courage and gave his best for the sport of boxing and tragically, resulted in harm for his health.He always will be remembered by his gallantry and bravery forever.| 5/2/02 06:04:12 PM|Evren|London||@||10|Well I was truly out numbered there - Quarry and Williams through. The next round sees Jersey Joe Walcott take on Larry Holmes in a beautiful match up and in the second bout George Foreman takes on Mike Dokes. | 5/3/02 04:08:28 PM|mark burgess|southsea ||mark.burgess7@ntlworld.com||||9|Could anyone tell me if thad spencer & leotis martin are still alive and what they are up too? i would be very grateful| 5/3/02 07:54:46 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com||||10|Sadly,Leotis Martin has been dead for about six years. I am not sure how he died. Thad Spencer is still alive. I don't know what he is up to. Anyone out there know?| 5/4/02 04:04:40 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com||||10|Foreman over Dokes, third round Kayo, Holmes over Walcott eighth round Kayo. Evren, I have what you requested lately. Will be sending soon.| 5/6/02 05:19:58 PM|brenda quarry|paso robles ca||bgquarry@hotmail.com||||10|I am writting on my brothers web page to let them know Jim had lung cancer. We have been informed he has two to thirteen months to live. I am asking for all to pray. He is going through chemo , rad. and has been for the last five weeks. This is also the month of our brother jerry's birthday, please add my mother, father and sibblings to your prayers. thank you bg | 5/6/02 06:38:55 PM|Evren|London||Evren@btinternet.com||||10|If James could e-mail me or if someone would give me his e-mail address I'd very much like to write to him about my father who is in the same situation. I can perhaps offer hope...please get well very soon I am praying. Kent once told me that Doctors don't know 'cause they are 'nt God '. I have never forgotten those words and I have 'nt looked back since.|

|5/6/02 07:25:42 PM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia81@aol.com|||10|Yes, prayers are a good thing. Just remember "THERE'S NO QUIT IN A QUARRY". We love you Dad. Uncle Jerry, we love & miss you!|

|5/6/02 07:50:01 PM|Kent Appel|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Of Course Jimmy and his whole family are in my prayers. His family has been an inspiration for me for years and will continue to be so. Yes I do believe that doctors only tell people the worst possible news and that they can't know for sure if someone is going to leave this world or not as that is God's domain. Jimmy we are pulling for you as we still need your leadership to make the sport we all love, boxing, safer. Miracles have happened before, why not at least once more? |

|5/7/02 08:50:27 AM|Joe Krause|Chicago,IL||sadmspats@yahoo.com|||10|I will keep you in my thoughts James. |

|5/7/02 10:25:42 AM|Sabrina Quarry-Porter|Florida||sabrinalporter@aol.com|||10|Dad you're always in my thoughts, prayers and heart. i may not be there physically with you but i'm there in spirit always...I wish i didn't live 3000 miles away, i would be visiting you all the time....But always remember I LOVE YOU VERY MUCH!!! AND I LOVE YOU TOO UNCLE JERRY|

|5/8/02 04:33:50 PM|mark burgess|southsea||mark.burgess7@ntlworld.com|||10|first of all i would like to say to james quarry you are in my thoughts & prayers as you face your biggest fight.I would also like to add while i am not jerry quarrys biggest fan, i personally find this the best boxing website their is, and the love & support for the quarry family is fantastic and may it long continue. also i have got the bodell v quarry fight programme i am not intrested in money but if anybody has anything to swap to do with boxing that would be great!|

|5/10/02 02:07:22 PM|Paul Maduros|midwest||pama42@yahoo.com|||10|It's been a long time since I've posted here, I just can't believe what I've just read. Let me tell you if anybody can beat something like this it's James. I want James and the whole Quarry family to know that I'll being praying for a recovery. James Quarry is like a brother, God bless you James. |

|5/10/02 03:13:29 AM|Evren|London||@|||10|I think the Foreman - Dokes bout would be exciting while it lasted. Dokes being an underestimated cute fighter would give George a few problems with his slick moves and would share the first three rounds in a highly charged fight. But things would come tumbling down for 'Dynamite' in the fourth as he is blown apart on the ropes. I see the holmes vs Walcott very close and a pick-em fight. It is a master class by both guys as Holmes gets frustrated by Walcott's movement and cheekiness. The fight is even untill the eigth when Walcott catches Holmes flush with a counter and drops him for a count of five. Holmes, being the great champion he is fights back immediately and staggers Walcott as both trade at the bell. From then on it is no looking back for Holmes who pushes out a close decision with a late surge. Holmes by close, unanimous decision.|

|5/10/02 03:39:41 PM|Kent |La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Jerry took the Norton fight on about three weeks notice and he didn't have time to train properly. I think he took it because he probably needed the money but I am not sure about this. At this late stage in Jerry's career, he wasn't weighing in at 196 anymore. He could have been in good shape around 200 to 202 pounds like he was for the Lyle and Shavers fights. I know he weighed less than this for the second Frazier fight but I have always thought he was too light in that fight at about 197. Jerry still fought well for a few rounds anyway against Norton. The third round when he got cut near the beginning of the round is one of the best non stop action I have ever seen. Jerry punched himself out in that round trying to go for a knockout because of the cut and he had little left after this because of poor conditioning going into the fight and because all of the ring wars he had been in up to that time had caught up to him. I think Jerry would have had a good chance to beat Norton if the two had fought earlier in Jerry's career.

I have also read and heard from other people that ken norton stated that jerry quarry was the only fighter he went in the ring with that he hated and wanted to punish because Jerry was a racist, i find this hard to beleive but is there any truth in what norton said?

Mark, Ken Norton may have said that but in his book he softens it a bit and says he didn't like Jerry but after they hugged each other in the ring after a tough battle, all the bad feelings he had for Jerry went away. He praises Jerry for being a very game fighter. I think Norton may have changed his mind years later after looking back at things. Anybody that has ever had contact with Jerry has said Jerry was in no way a racist and he had many friends of all races. I met Jerry in the early 1980s and I found him to be a down to earth guy, very easy to talk to and respectful. Regarding Norton, sometimes for unexplained reasons, people can rub each other the wrong way. I have never met Ken Norton but I have talked to people who have met him and some say he is a great guy while a couple of people said he was somewhat of an arrogant jerk. The only way I could form an opinion on him is if I met him.

A little up date on James he is not doing very well he is up her in central ca. with his family and wife. He has some very bad days seem more bad then good however, we are working on a small garden so when he does feel good he can work in it. Thank you all for your prayers we really need them. My dad is also very sick and not doing well, it seems sometimes when bad times hit they come all at once. Jim is having a hard time paying for all his meds. if anyone can help out please do it will be one less worry for him. Thank for listening to me sometimes I need to let it all out to others. God bless all. Jim woun't be on his site for awhile nonethe less if i can answer any questions i will. Thanks to all the quarlys!

Thank you kent,you have a mind of useful information which if alright with you i would like to about jerry quarry and other heavyweights from the 60s and 70s. I have just watched quite a few jerry quarry fights over the last few days i.e lyle,shavers,ali 1&2, frazier 1&2,bodell,mac foster,chuvalo to name a few and i must admit i could not work jerry out, he was brilliant against shavers & lyle and not so good against chuvalo & ali 2 why was this

Also could you tell me if possible why jerry quarry had to fight joe frazier the second time(surely his chance to fight ali for the title would of come round eventually),and what was jerrys tatics going into that fight. I hope you dont get bored with me asking these questions but to me this is really enjoyable and i do come from a country that bought you thrilling heavyweights like Bugner,bodell,mcalinden,bruno. I say no more!
back so I can ask you something further off of the letter section.

[5/12/02 05:04:23 PM] Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com |

in my last post I also put in a wrong address. My E mail is oriononside@aol.com. I am also going to try and write to the Jim's boxer quarry address and see if you get the message I sent.

[5/13/02 07:20:36 AM] Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | SabrinaLPorter@aol.com |

James is with some of his family, his children are elsewhere but we are always thinking of him. We all wish we could be there with him especially me being in Florida. But I'm always with him in spirit and he knows how much I love him with all my heart... Keep the prayers going please... Thank You all very much... I LOVE YOU DAD FOREVER!!!!

[5/13/02 07:37:15 PM] Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com |

Hang tough James and all the Quarry's out there. I know everyone who contributes to this site is praying for all of you. I think Foreman would take out Dokes in 7 or eight rounds. Dokes was a good fast boxer and would win some early rounds but George, in his prime, is just too strong and powerful. Very few great heavyweights could handle George's power and Dokes is not a great heavyweight. Holmes vs. Walcott on the other hand is a battle between two great prizefighters. Both men are solid punchers with beautiful boxing skills. I see both men hurt with solid shots, in the end Larry would take a very close decision. That's hard to say. I'm from Jersey, and Walcott was always one of my favorites. I've met him several times and have an autographed program from the Qwai-Holifield Cruiserweight bout. A very nice man. But in their primes I think Holmes would get the nod.

[5/13/02 08:05:57 PM] Sheri Coolbaugh | Paso Robles, CA | lizardluver@hotmail.com |

hello, I am Brenda Quarry's daughter. My mother's email address is bquarry@hotmail.com. I believe Kent was asking for it. The garden is going well. I just took a load of compost over there on Saturday in my truck. My uncle looked good that day and was excited about the garden. They are planning to plant a lot of vegetables, and trying to keep the deer out (that is going to be their big challenge!). Thank you for all your hope and prayers.

[5/13/02 09:32:35 PM] Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com |

Mark, Jerry took the second Frazier fight because Foreman, who was the champion at the time, wouldn't give him a shot probably because Foreman had a chance to fight Ali and he didn't want to risk blowing getting the Ali fight. Jerry took the second Frazier fight because it was thought Jerry could Frazier at this point because Jerry had been on a roll. Joe proved everyone wrong just as Jerry did against Lyle and Shavers. Jerry's plan was to box and counter punch, which is what he did for the first two rounds with some success but by the third round he reverted back to slug it out with disastrous results. I didn't think Jerry looked too bad in the Chuvalo fight he just got caught with a good punch in the seventh round and it was being careless and not keeping track of the count more than anything else that beat him. I do believe that if Jerry had beat the count that he would have won the fight as he wasn't hurt too badly and he had been handing Chuvalo a beating up to the knockdown. The second Ali fight has always been a sense of frustration for me as a Quarry fan in that after the second round until near the end of the sixth round when Ali stepped up the pace to try and get Jerry out of there and Jerry fought back hard, Jerry just seemed to be going through the motions and he didn't seem to fight hard like he always had before. He just plodded after Ali throwing half hearted punches one or two at a time while at the same time eating numerous Ali jabs and right hands. I am not sure why he didn't seem to be up for the fight.

[5/14/02 03:04:22 PM] markburgess@southsea | mark.burgess7@ntlworld.com |

Kent, thank you again for replying, I just like to say that in reading an old ring magazine Jerry was stated in saying that how much he was affected by seeing his brother Mike being knocked out by the great Bob Foster; so when he had to go in and fight Ali his heart was not in it, I don't know if you have heard this before but what is your theory on it. I've got the chance to order the quarry v Ellis fight is it worth watching and how on earth did he lose to Ellis a blown up middleweight,? One more thing for tonight, the first time I saw Jerry fight was when he knocked out Jack Bodell in London, (I saw it on TV a few years back) what has been the general opinion of that fight in Jerry's career, ie was he expected to knock out Bodell quickly, or a long hard fight? Over here in England the fight was billed as an eliminator was anybody in America aware of this!

5/14/02 08:52:54 PM Kent La Habra, California || oriononside@aol.com |||| 10 | Wow this is turning into the Kent and Mark show. Any other Quarry regulars feel free to jump in at any time. I have heard the idea that Jerry seeing Mike brutally knocked out by Bob Foster didn't help Jerry's concentration but I also think Ali got into his head in that second fight. If you notice Jerry is aggressive in rounds one and two but towards the end of round two, Jerry lands a good left/right combo to Ali's head and Ali plays acts like he is hurt by wobbling at the knees scornfully. It was like he was saying, "Is that all you got?" It was after this second round that Jerry's fire seemed to go out until he was in survival mode near the end of the sixth and he fought back like the Jerry Quarry we all know only to be stopped while out on his feet by Ali early in the seventh round. I had heard of Bodell but as I remember it here in America it was considered a tune up for Jerry at the time.

5/14/02 09:00:30 PM Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) Joshua Tree, CA || Sonia81@aol.com |||| 10 | Dad, we're all here for you, no matter what. This site is still awesome. Let's keep it up always!!

5/15/02 09:04:12 AM Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) Joshua Tree, CA || Sonia81@aol.com |||| 10 | HAPPY BIRTHDAY UNCLE JERRY! YOU'RE STILL LOVED & VERY MUCH MISSED!!

5/15/02 10:35:27 AM Sabrina Quarry-Porter Florida || SabrinaLPorter@aol.com |||| 10 | HAPPY BIRTHDAY UNCLE JERRY....WE ALL LOVE AND MISS YOU VERY MUCH!!!!!!

5/17/02 10:22:08 AM Slade Oregon || info@ptctel.com |||| 10 | I recall the after fight interviews of the Quarry-Ali II fight and the Bodell fight. Jerry mentioned 3 things that definitely affected his performance. First was the knockout of his brother. Second, of course, was the good performance Ali put together. I vaguely recall what the other things was... but there was definitely something else he mentioned that was bothering him... he may have felt he came into the fight overweight - not sure if weight was the specific 3rd issue he mentioned though. I think he scaled 198 in that fight, but I've seen him fight well at 205. One of the sports writers asked Quarry immediately after the Bodell what he thought of Bodell. Jerry said "Well, he fell awkwardly".

5/17/02 12:50:21 PM Kent La Habra, California || oriononside@aol.com |||| 10 | I think the thing that bothers me as a Quarry fan is that most of the time the only fight that is ever shown is the second Ali fight when Jerry wasn't at his best and people get the impression that Jerry fought lethargic like that every time. Ali had a style that was difficult for Jerry, and Jerry probably would have lost the fight anyway, but if Jerry had been at his best, then the general public would see what a good fighter Jerry was even in defeat. Jerry's best chance to beat Ali would have been in their first fight if he hadn't been cut. Ali might not have been as sharp as the bout wore on due to his inactivity and Jerry appeared to be stepping up the pace in that third round. You could sense a slight changing of the momentum starting towards the end of the second round of that fight and throughout the third round prior to the cut and it could have increased if the cut hadn't occurred. Ali still probably would have won the first fight also but at least Jerry would have given him a run for his money. OH BY THE WAY, ARE SOME PEOPLE HAVING TROUBLE COMING TO THE QUARRY SITE? EVREN
IN ENGLAND TOLD ME HE HAS BEEN HAVING PROBLEMS ACCESSING THE SITE. |
|5/17/02 02:15:13 PM|Evren|London||@||10|I've found my way back Kent...see you all in a week - I'm off to the city of Istanbul...Best Wishes everyone. I have tried to e-mail James but get an error message as it isn't a recognised address anymore. See ya...|
|5/18/02 08:47:08 AM|mark burgess|southsea ||mark.burgess7@ntlworld.com|10|I must say that in watching jerry quarry in action i do find him very unpredictable from one fight to the next, but can anybody tell me how and why did he lose to jimmy ellis a blown up middleweight, who i thought was very over rated!|
|5/18/02 10:55:36 AM|Gerry Schultz|ohio||jgschultz@firstam.com|8|I guess I have to type this again... Hi, my first time here, I'm really impressed there is a site for Jerry and this cause. I'll try not to unload all my opinions on Jerry and his sport here now, but here are a few: I think, overall, he is probably one of the 20 or so greatest heavyweights ever, without being a true heavyweight. I have his small highlight tape, and his matches vs. PattersonII, Spencer, Lyle and Foster show very well his remarkable ability in the ring. I was always impressed with his courage, skill and effort. I was disappointed that my tape did not include any Mathis film, or any interviews from the many involved in his career to historicize him better. It is too bad he did not have better strategy vs. Ellis or Frazier as he was certainly good enough to beat both. He was certainly better than Chuvalo, and, I think would have defeated Foreman. Overall, I have him about equal to Frazier and Norton, who caught him on the downside. I also have him better than Patterson or Holmes, prime vs. prime, or most of the late 70's-early 80's dopers who followed until Tyson. He would be a sensation as cruiserweight champ today, but the heavyws now are too huge to compare. It is too bad he did not bulk a little to slug Ali as he certainly could have carried it. He absolutely SHOULD NOT have fought in '91, which was sick and stupid. In closing, I think headgear should be MANDATORY for boxing, that boxing (and sports as a whole) would clearly benefit from a government agency which would provide better fights with better opportunities for those who have ability, and better standards for judges and refs who often make the sport a laughingstock. As a kid in the 70's, I was a big Quarry fan, and I'm thankful he was there for me and so many others. Best Wishes Always.|
|5/18/02 10:59:50 AM|Paul Maduros|midwest||pama42@yahoo.com|10|I hope and pray that when people come to this site that not only that they post but make a donation. I didn't know that James was having trouble paying medical bill which we know are sky high these days. I would like to donate to help James. I would hope all of would try and do the same. Hang in there James, a lot of people love you.|
|5/18/02 01:38:17 PM|Evren|London||@|I have to disagree strongly with Gerry on his comments about Quarry having the ability to beat Frazier and Foreman and a better fighter than Holmes. While I am a tremendous Quarry fan I find those comments somewhat startling. Quarry was at his best when he fought Joe and was outsmoked - Frazier was'nt even at his peak yet. Holmes and Foreman were just a league above as is shown by their championship calibre. Quarry was one of the greatest contenders ever, however and if fighters were rated on intestinal fortitude then Mr Quarry would be in the top five best ever heavies. Evren|
|5/18/02 03:51:22 PM|Kent |La Habra, CA||oriononside@aol.com|10|Mark, a lot of the reason Jerry lost to Jimmy Ellis had to do with the fact that he had a chipped vertabre, in essence a broken back, during the fight which was causing him pain but hadn't been discovered until he had a more complete physical after the fight. He was placed in a body cast soon afterward. Jerry wasn't as aggressive as he usually was but even so he lost by a split decision. Jerry probably would have beaten Ellis on most occasions. I too agree that Jerry wasn't better than Holmes and Frazier but I do think as I have stated before, that prime against prime he would have had a very good chance of beating Norton. Ring Magazine in 1998 rated Jerry the 27th best heavyweight of all time. That is about right.

I'm having trouble with the idea of a fighter preparing for a title fight, having a serious back injury, and his trainers and manager never picking up on it! I seem to remember Ali postponing a title fight for a hernia. Just for fun, transpose Holmes back ten years, then match him against late sixties and early seventies heavyweights. My point being in all this conjecture, that, given the superior competition of the time, and perhaps a better management team, Quarry could have very easily rated above both Ellis and Holmes, and again, Norton, who seemed to both fear and resent Quarry, and was managed well enough to wait till Jerry was used up before fighting him.

Steve, I am not sure why Jerry's management, at the time his father Jack Quarry and Johnny Flores, didn't listen to Jerry when he complained about being in pain. James and Mike Quarry have both said their brother fought Ellis with a back injury and James told me Jerry was put into a body cast not long after the fight. Jerry is rated above Jimmy Ellis in most all time rankings and rightly so, as Jerry overall was the better fighter. That is not to take anything away from Ellis, who was a fine fighter in his own right. I find myself in a rare instance when I appear to not be on Jerry's side when it comes to saying Larry Holmes was the better fighter. I am one of Jerry's biggest fans and of course I think the world of the Quarry family, Holmes was a master boxer, a top ten all time great who would be a champion in just about any era. Like I said, the ring magazine rankings of the all time greatest heavyweights was fair in regards to placing Jerry at number 27 in their list of the top fifty of all time. I think he is about number 20 to 25 but number 27 is objective.

Holmes' difficulty with Norton, Weaver, his lack of competition in his era, make me think he was an overexalted copy of Ali. How would he have fared against Joe Frazier, George Foreman, a prime Ken Norton, or even, yes, a prime Quarry? For all his boxing skills, he seemed to turn some fights into wars. Shavers, Cooney.

I have just read an article from the Philadelphia Weekly dated 26 Dec 2001 about the sad life of Jimmy Young who has been battling drug addiction and apparently suffering from dementia pugilistica, the very same condition in which Jerry Quarry suffered from. Young like Quarry did not duck anybody, Shavers, Norton, Ali, Foreman, Cooney, Lyle, Dokes, Page, to name a few but now as he fights his biggest battle I hope and pray there is some light at the end of the tunnel!

I personally think Young was one of the best heavyweights there has been, I think wins over Lyle, Foreman plus very controversial losses to Ali & Norton and a debatable draw with Shavers confirm this. I also think if young kept his weight and conditioning together particularly after the Norton fight he could of been world champ (well WBA champ young i dont think would have beaten Holmes for the WBC title).

Quarry was an unpredictable fighter who could have beaten Foreman if Foreman had analyzed Quarry from his fights with Ellis, Chuvalo, Ali and Frazier. You never knew what mind set Quarry had going into a fight a la Spencer, Mathis, Foster, Shavers and Lyle. I think Quarry would be up for Foreman circa 1971-early 1974.

To respond to Evren, I believe having the ability to defeat someone, and being a better overall fighter than someone are not the same thing. Quarry, in my opinion was clearly a better boxer than Frazier, and clearly had the edge after Round 2 in their first fight, so he did have the ability to defeat him. There are some interesting similarities between the two, both known for their courage, toughness and punch, though Frazier more so. Jerry's flaw versus Frazier, and others, I think, was that he was prone to cuts and did not block punches well. Take those two items out of the mix, and he is very competitive vs. Frazier, a very good puncher vs. boxer matchup. So, I stand on my opinion that he was in fact, in Frazier's league. If you ask Joe, or read his book, he'd agree himself. Foreman beat Frazier twice, but most writers rate Frazier as better. I feel Jerry is also. Why? Foreman has admitted to dodging Jerry, who he saw as another Clay Hodges, a fighter who dominated Foreman in amateur matches. Foreman was a great physical presence but could not box, was flat-footed and unskilled. I believe Jerry could've taken his punch, and had the ability to outbox him. As for Holmes, who did this guy really dominate, of his real contenders? I don't think, despite a great effort, that he beat Norton, who was very underrated. He had a suspect chin, and should've been counted out versus Snipes, a fighter Jerry would defeat easily. A master boxer yes, with no real punch. Put him in the mix 1969-1975, he's in the pack with Young, Shavers, Lyle, Jerry, Norton et al. Not a top ten great certainly. Also, I think Jerry was best about 1973, not in Frazier I. Just my opinion, thanks.

5/20/02 02:47:48 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com||10|Gerry you make some good points in your last post. Having the ability to beat someone and being better than someone are two different things and yes in the best possible situation, Jerry could have beaten Frazier on a given day. As far as Jerry verses Holmes, it isn't who beats who and who lost to another fighter. It is styles that makes fights and Holmes' style would have been a difficult one for Jerry. His quickness of foot and fast jab would have been hard for Jerry to cope with and I see Holmes winning by decision or possibly by cuts. Holmes had a similar style to Ali's and that is why Norton gave Holmes trouble and he probably always would have. Just as Norton couldn't seem to handle sluggers like Shavers, Foreman, and Cooney while except for a knockdown suffered against Shavers in their second fight; Holmes beat Shavers twice rather convincingly-again styles make fights. I don't think Holmes had that weak of a field. Witherspoon, Snipes, Bonecrusher Smith, Carl Williams, Cooney, Weaver and a few others were all good fighters. The field may have not been as strong as the field Jerry Q, Frazier, etc had to contend with, but it wasn't weak and it was better than what we have today. The Larry Holmes of the period from 1979 to 1982 was almost unbeatable it was after this time that he started to have difficult defenses but he still seemed to find a way to pull out victories. Regarding Frazier being rated above Foreman; any writer that says so should have his head examined! Foreman defeated Frazier twice in the ring where it counts and once when Frazier was just below prime status. Don't get me wrong I am a very big fan of Smokin Joe but facts are facts. Foreman was dominate over Frazier.

5/20/02 02:58:17 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com||10|Gerry, one more thing I wanted to add to my last post. I too believe Jerry would have been a good bet to beat Foreman. We probably could have gotten good odds too, say 3 to 1 or maybe 5 to 1 favoring Foreman.

5/20/02 06:14:14 PM|Gerry Schultz|ohio||jgschultz@firstam.com||9|Nice replies, Kent. I don't mean to monopolize this space, but I am getting some good interesting answers here... I think if somehow Joe and Jerry were to go 10times, I think Jerry would win three, which is better than any given day. Foreman was a brutal puncher, but he was weary of Quarry, so I agree Jerry would stand a very good chance, despite being some 25 pounds lighter, of beating George, which is why there's a website for Jerry, I guess. Even though George did clearly dominate Joe, I still have Joe as better overall. Both had the great forward gear, but Joe could box some, and did clearly defeat Ali in their peerless matchup. I doubt George could ever catch Ali, which as you said, is about matchups. Quarry fared much better against a younger Lyle than George. You bring a nice list of opponents for Holmes, my issue is Larry's performances in those fights. "The Truth" I think was made pretty visible. I enjoyed watching Larry, who was a real thinking man's boxer, but his lack of punch and chin are a good walk, to me, from Ali. Larry probably could discision Jerry, but lacks Quarry's list of quality performances. I give Jerry the edge based on that.

Thanks |

| 5/21/02 02:06:18 PM | steve | n.j. | dmodsrm@comcast.net | 10 | hey kent, or anyone else, is there anyway you could list the ring magazine top 27 up to and including quarry? i would think it would make for some fascinating debates on this site. by the way, kent, you and evren seem to be the only guys contributing regularly and trying to keep the conversations alive, thanks! i'm glad to see some new people venturing their opinions. i enjoy reading anyone's thoughts on jerry and his place in that golden age of heavy weights. |

| 5/21/02 07:27:34 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10 | Yes Steve I am also glad that some newcomers are joining in. I know some of the other regulars haven't been contributing as much lately and I hope it isn't because James hasn't been here lately because obviously he has more important things to take care and I am sure when he is feeling better he will join in again as before. I have to run at the moment but I will post not only the top 27 from the holiday issue of Ring Magazine 1998, I will post the entire top 50 as I have a copy of the issue. |

| 5/22/02 10:36:53 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | sonia81@aol.com | 10 | WE LOVE YOU DAD! LOVE YOUR KIDS |

| 5/23/02 04:32:44 PM | Evren | London | @ | 10 | Jerry you are entitled to your opinion. The facts are Frazier beat Jerry twice, without a tremendous amount of trouble. Foreman would have beaten Jerry easily I believe but I appreciate your points on that match-up. Holmes would have beaten Jerry easily, in my opinion. Evren|

| 5/23/02 09:48:10 PM | Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com | 10 | Jerry beat Holmes, Foreman, Frazier? I don't think so. These men are three of the greatest Heavyweights of all time. And I don't think saying Jerry couldn't win against these guys has anything to do with not being on Jerry's side, it's just being realistic. Jerry proved what he could do against Frazier and I don't care what kind of fight plan he had, the result would have been the same. Joe was a better fighter. Yes Jerry did beat Ron Lyle a guy who had Foreman out on his feet, but I think Jerry's style would have been his undoing against George. And Holmes, he did take some easy fights later in his reign, as most long time champions do, but he dominated the division, scraped himself of the canvas several times and I don't see Jerry winning this fight either. I wouldn't keep coming back to this site, and I certainly wouldn't add my two cents in if I weren't a Quarry fan, but I just don't see him beating these three guys. |

| 5/24/02 01:08:10 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10 | Bob, out of the three, Foreman, Frazier, and Holmes, Jerry would have had his best chance against Foreman because of his counter punching style for the same reason Jerry decisioned Lyle. Jerry, if he followed his fight plan against Foreman could keep George off balance and beat him to the punch like he did Lyle. Foreman had a tendency to wind up and telegraph his punches and Jerry's quick hands could be a plus in keeping Foreman honest because like the Lyle fight, Jerry would land some hard punches to let Foreman know he was in for a fight. Foreman badly hurt both Frazier and Norton early before either of them landed their best punches, something that would have made him have more respect for them. If you notice, in two of Foreman's toughest fights, a loss to Ali and a near loss to Lyle; Foreman was hit very hard in the first round and he seemed to take notice he was in for a tough battle. Another reason for Jerry having a chance against Foreman, his ability to take a punch. Jerry took some hard shots from Lyle and he was still standing. Jerry also absorbed a couple of hard punches from Earnie Shavers before lowering the boom on Shavers in the very first round. That Jerry did well with sluggers can be shown by the Lyle and Shavers fights as well as the Mac Foster fight which ended with Jerry winning by sixth round knockout. Foster entered his fight with Jerry 24-0, all by knockout and ended his career with a record of about 30-6, all of his wins by knockout. Bob when you say Jerry would lose to Foreman because of his style, it seems that you are going by the public's perception of Jerry's style of standing in front of his opponent and slugging it out. Sure Jerry could be something of a "lunkhead" at times and do just that, a perfect example of this is the first Frazier fight. But Jerry could also be a fine boxer if he used some in and out movement and counter punched. This is the style that would give him a good chance to defeat Foreman.
into a scenario against Quarry or Frazier?
5/24/02 04:53:13 PM|steve|nj||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|I want to hear everyone's opinion on where Jerry Quarry really belongs on the top 50! I personally am trying to get him as high on the list as possible, but also with some degree of realism. I think I can honestly get him at about number 19 or 20. At this rarified area of fighters, every spot means a lot! Could you imagine one like Quarry in a street fight, or even against fighters below the top 20 of his era?

5/24/02 05:31:11 PM|mark|southsea||mark.burgess7@ntlworld.com|||10|As much as I like watching Jerry Quarry fight, I find it very hard to put him in the top 30. He lost all his career defining fights and that's not including losses to an ageing Eddie Machen & George Chuvalo. I do agree Jerry was a brilliant counter puncher and on his day potentially he was as good as any heavyweight I've seen, but to me he rarely lived up to his potential, his temperament being his biggest let down!

5/25/02 03:54:25 AM|Evren|Lon||@||10|Well I think in the last round of the competition for those who voted had Holmes and Foreman through - next round - Norton vs Schmelling and in the second bout - Moorer vs Liston. Thanks to everyone who votes.

5/25/02 10:26:34 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Mark, Jerry lost eight times in his career and all of those losses were to bondafide contenders or champions (not counting the fiasco at age 47). Of those eight losses, six were to fighters who were world champions at some point in their careers as well as six were to fighters ranked in the top fifty of the greatest heavyweights by the Ring Magazine. Jerry lost to Muhammed Ali and Joe Frazier twice each, that is half his losses right there to better fighters. Of the other four losses; two were to fighters he should have beaten, Ellis and Chuvalo and that is disappointing while another loss to Machen was when Jerry was only 21 years old and Machen was vastly more experienced. The last loss in his original career was to Norton, which by this time Jerry was well on his way down and ready to be taken. Who did Jerry beat? He defeated fourteen fighters who at some point in their careers were ranked in the top ten in the world. Jerry's six biggest victories were over the following fighters: Buster Mathis, who outweighed Jerry by about forty pounds and who was supposed to represent the USA in the 1964 Olympics when he defeated Joe Frazier in the trials but he missed the games because of an injury; Floyd Patterson, a former two time heavyweight champion and still top five in the world when he fought Jerry; Thad Spencer, who was the number one contender when he fought Jerry and who had just beaten former WBA champion Ernie Terrell; Mac Foster, who had won 24 straight fights by knockout prior to his fight with Jerry; Ron Lyle, who had won 19 straight fights when he fought Jerry; and Earnie Shavers, who had won 33 straight fights by knockout when he fought Jerry. I would say Jerry did quite well and deserves at least a top 25 ranking of all time.

5/25/02 05:18:50 PM|mark|southsea ||mark.burgess7@ntlworld.com|||10|Thank you for your comments Kent I would like to answer these as follows, as successful as an amateur Buster Mathis was who did he beat in the pro ranks to get a top ten ranking and why was this a good win for Jerry was it because Buster was in the top ten or was he that good a fighter? Apart from beating a fading Ernie Terrell who did that Spencer beat? I believe that was a shot fighter when Quarry fought him and his fight record after this proves that. I know Jerry beat and shared a draw with an ageing Patterson but at the time the vast majority of people thought Patterson won both fights, what do you think? Mac Foster reminds me a bit of Frank Bruno in that he was fed on nobodies and shot fighters to build up their records, but when it came to the crunch TIMBER!!! Again what top fighter did Foster beat? But in saying all this, when he fought Lyle & Shavers he did look the part and was world class no doubt but as I have said before he was too hot and cold to be in my top 20.

One more thing Jimmy Young should be in the top 30!

Mark, Thad Spencer was the number one contender when Jerry fought him who also had wins over Doug Jones (who gave Ali hell), Jack Bodell, Billy Daniels, and Amos Lincoln; hardly household names but good fighters. Spencer seemed to self destruct after his loss to Jerry and he never won another fight. His win over Terrell in the WBA tournament was an accomplishment though as Terrell still had some life in him afterwards, going 7-3 for the rest of his career including a win over Jose Luis Garcia, the man who gave Ken Norton his first career loss. Mac Foster was always a very dangerous opponent who landed a right hand in the third round on Jerry in their fight that seemed to almost take Jerry's head off but somehow Jerry absorbed it without going down. Foster is one of the few fighters who had all of his career wins by knockout, quite an accomplishment in itself. Not everyone thinks Patterson won both fights against Jerry. I for one think Jerry won both fights and although he would be considered biased because he is Jerry's brother, James Q here thinks likewise. I mention James because he said here before that the knockdown of Jerry by Patterson in about the sixth round (I would have to look it up to be sure of the round) in the first fight was a slip. I have watched the tape of the fight and it doesn't look like a clean knockdown to me. If in fact it was a slip, it would have given Jerry the win on the scorecards. In the second fight Patterson appears to have a slight edge in the number of rounds won but Jerry scored two knockdowns in two separate rounds, which gave him the victory. The truth of the matter is Jerry's fights with Patterson were both very close and no one had a clear edge in a lot of the rounds in both fights. Patterson also wasn't completely through after his fights with Jerry going 9-2 for the rest of his career including a win over Oscar Bonevena and a close loss to Jimmy Ellis for the WBA title. Patterson's last fight was a loss was to Muhammed Ali in 1972 in which he gave a much better showing than he did in 1965 when he fought Ali and his back went out early in the fight and he still bravely fought on in spite of the pain. In his second fight with Ali, Patterson was stopped in seven rounds while still on his feet when one of his eyes swelled shut. Buster Mathis didn't have a bad career as a professional. He had wins over George Chuvalo and Amos Lincoln. His career record was 30-4 and his losses were to Jerry, Muhammed Ali, Joe Frazier, and Ron Lyle. Mathis was a good boxer with a good long jab and surprisingly good movement for a man his size.

Kent, I do agree with you on Foreman. Jerry had a better than even chance to beat him if he could force himself not to slug with George. I know Jerry had very good boxing skill, quick hands and, of course, had true heavyweight power in both hands. But looking back, Jerry had more of a tendency to turn a fight into a war when maybe he didn't have to. I saw the Lyle fight a few years after it was fought and thought Jerry put on an almost Duran like performance against a guy who was just as big, powerful and faster than George. It was amazing to watch. If he fought Foreman that way he could have won. I just don't think it would turned out that way. I would have put Jerry a little higher on the list of top 50. maybe swap places with Baer. And Holyfield? No way he's #3. He belongs in the top ten for sure. Move everyone else up one and put Holyfield ahead of Liston. Also, by fighting tougher competition, Frazier belongs ahead of Liston. And who did Sonny fight to deserve to be on the top ten list anyway? He made one defense, beat some good fighters on his way to the title Machen, Williams and Folley. Tyson has done more than that. It seems Sonny's glare is still as strong as ever. Speaking of Sonny's glare, he KO's Moorer in the 8th round. Norton is too much for Max although Schmeling holds his own until the 10 round. TKO for Kenny. Oh yeah, prime vs. prime, Jerry KO's Norton in 4.

It's Memorial Day so
I have the day off! Steve you wanted to know about Harry Wills, Joe Jeannette, Sam McVey and Jimmy Bivens. All of these guys were great fighters. Wills, McVey and Jeannette were victims of the color line that was drawn at the time. Wills "The Black Menace" was 6'4" and fought around 220. A classic stand up boxer with good power he was given a good chance to beat Jack Dempsey. In fact, Dempsey had his licence revoked in New York for not fighting him. Dempsey's manager, Tex Rickard set up a bout between the two but the promoter couldn't back up the money. Race riots were also feared if Wills won. That set up the Tunney fight in Philadelphia in 1926. McVey was about 5'9" and 180-190. He was a very crafty boxer who was beaten by Jack Johnson. Joe Jeanette was another great boxer around the turn of the century he beat Johnson and beat McVey in Paris, a fight that recorded 38 knockdowns. Jeanette hitting the floor 27 times. These two along with Sam Langford and Jack Johnson were the best fighters of the era. White fighters drew the color line, if they were "allowed" to fight a white, they almost had to lose, draw or foul out to keep from being lynched. Jeanette, McVey and later Johnson exiled to Paris where attitudes towards blacks were more tolerable. Jimmy Bivens was another great boxer in the late fourties and early fifties. He was avoided by every heavyweight and light-heavy of the era. Given a good chance to beat the aging Joe Louis, I didn't look up his record before writing this but I believe he beat Walcott twice and lost to Ezzard Charles. He also fought Lee Ohma, Lou Savold, Elmer Ray. Steve, I hope this helps you out a little, and if I'm wrong on any of this please correct me.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/27/02 12:12:48 PM</th>
<th>Bob Bumbera</th>
<th>NC</th>
<th>renfbera@aol.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

I was wrong about Bivins record Steve. He was beaten by Walcott and beat Charles although Charles beat him four times. He also had five fights with Archie Moore winning once by KO. He also decisioned Gus Lesnevich, Tami Mauriello, Bob Pastor and Joey Maxim. He also had wins over Middleweight Nate Bolden and future Middle champs Teddy Yarosz and Billy Soose. He retired in 1955 with a record of 86-25-1 with 31 KO's he met 11 world champions, defeating eight of them. Steve, look up some of these guys on cyberboxingzone, I should do it more often!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/27/02 12:23:21 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>oriononside@aol.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Liston over Moorer and Norton over Schmeling, both bouts by mid round kayo.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/28/02 11:13:26 AM</th>
<th>Gerry Schultz</th>
<th>Ohio</th>
<th>jgschultz@firstam.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

I realize it is somewhat subjective, but I'm impressed that Ring's list gave Jerry Q proper credit for his remarkable talent vs. the fighters in his very-strong era. The late 60's early 70's should be represented with Ali and Frazier ahead of Jerry, Norton and Foreman, who I'll refer to from here as "the group". It is tough to compare, but Foreman was well-suited to Frazier's style, Norton to Ali's and had the benefit of surprise. Quarry nearly surprised both of the above principles, but got cut before he could attack in AliI, and got too much of Joe in Round 3 in FrazierI before he could convert to counterpuncher. I think both Ali and Frazier were looking past Foreman and Norton respectively the first time, but both proved they belonged in their second fights. Jerry clearly belongs in this foursome given his list of remarkable performances versus slightly lower but strong contenders in the era, and all four in the Top 20. Prime vs. prime Jerry matches well vs. both Norton and Foreman. The other two took him very seriously certainly, he brawled too much with Frazier when he clearly could've challenged Joe even better as a counterpuncher. He needed size to slug Ali. It is curious how he brawled in some fights, was more a boxer in others, and often picked the wrong style for these opponents. Still, on talent alone, he belongs. Frazier and Foreman both agree themselves. Again, I rank Holmes somewhere near Norton, Jerry, and Foreman. Holyfield also about the same, with Bowe close behind the group. Lennox Lewis I rank ahead of Bowe, worthy of belonging with Norton, JQ, George and Holyfield. Tyson has to be a top ten pick, not much else from the 90's. I don't think Holyfield really beat Tyson as much as head-butted him and confused him. I put Tyson clearly ahead of him, ahead of the above group with Frazier. Gerry Cooney, without all the racial pressure, was a better fighter than he showed I think, perhaps top 25 material. Micheal Spinks was very good and belongs with the above group. Schemeling is very underrated and was much feared during his era. He is much closer to Norton than you think. He dominated Joe LouisI, and Joe is #2. Ezzard Charles, to me, could be top ten, but behind Marciano and Tunney who I have as top five fighters. Patterson was very good, but I think Jerry was better and would have been champ if he'd fought between Marciano and Liston. Classic guys like Corbett, Jefferies and Jack Johnson who owned their era are, to me, at least top ten. How good could Greg Page have been versus what he actually did? thanks guys.

Joe Krause|chicago|sadmspats@yahoo.com|10

Norton wins close decision, remember Schmeling beat Louis. Liston 2 round demolition of Moorer. Sonny would have knocked his block off.

Johnny Q|Phila, PA|johnqw@yahoo.com|10

I'm skeptical of any "all time" ratings of athletes that include people who were active within the last ten years. Not only with the Ring ratings, but anyone who watched the Sports Illustrated Century Awards could not help but see how very recent athletes were stacked into the top numbers. The Ring Magazine's 75 Year Awards also missed the mark as often as they got it. I don't buy the idea that current athletes are superior across the board, which is what these ranking suggest. A look back at the press over the years, and the all-time rating that have been held since the Dempsey days, the fighters of each period are always overrated. It's only years after they are retired and the next generation comes through that we can have any genuine perspective. Especially if any of the fighters are still active, the etched-in-stone all time ratings can suddenly get changed? Case in point, the up coming Tyson-Lewis fight result will surely effect the ranking of these two fighters. Should Tyson win against Lewis, his rating goes way up, and Lewis's rating, already tarnished by Rachman, drops considerably.

Joe Krause|Chicago|sadmspats@yahoo.com|10

I would like to give my observation on the Foreman-Quarry fight. I have every fight on tape that either has fought until 1979 that is available except 10 minutes of Quarry-Machen which I will get soon. I feel very confident that Jerry would not have lasted against George. Lyle and Foreman were not the same type of fighter. Lyle was good, Foreman was great and that is a huge difference. Nobody could hurt Chuvalo, Foreman had him visibly shaken. Nobody could knock out Frazier, Foreman dismantled him. Foreman had those sweeping uppercuts that worked great against shorter fighters. I love Jerry and am a huge admirer of him, but everything I know points to Foreman. Jerry had great heart, but was very susceptible to the jab that Foreman had. I have been at this site a long time and am not a basher of Jerry. I have great respect for him, but wanted to give my opinion. Pre-Ali Foreman would have lit Jimmy Young up. Foreman wasn't the same fighter after that fight, his personal aura was gone.

Evren|London|10

Thankyou Joe - you speak great sense - Foreman was a great fighter not another top contender! Liston over Moorer in a bout similar to the two Williams bouts. 3rd round KO. Norton to win split decision over Schmeling after getting decked late.

Kent|La Habra, California, USA|oriononside@aol.com|10

Joe, of course you are not a Quarry basher as all of the long time regulars know already. To the newcomers, everyone who has been posting here lately is a very big fan of Jerry Quarry and are supporters of the Quarry family. Joe, one of reasons I believe that Jerry would have a good chance against Foreman, besides his performances against Lyle and Shavers; is how Gregorio Peralta, a fighter with a counter punching style gave Foreman a lot of trouble twice. Jerry had a similar style to Peralta except he hit harder than Peralta. Joe do you believer that the Foreman that destroyed Frazier and Norton was better than the up and coming Foreman who had trouble with Peralta?
The accounts I have of the 2nd Foreman-Peralta fight make it seem it was very one-sided in Foreman's favor with Peralta basically running for 10 rounds. I think Jerry would not have been able to run for that long because he was too willing to go to war. Jerry countering could give Foreman some problem, but Foreman would catch him and Jerry might slug. The Foreman against Peralta was a little green, he was about 75% of his max efficiency I believe.

I'm enjoying everyone's letters. A Foreman-Quarry in the 73-74 period would have been something of a toss-up. No doubt very exciting. This was the very best period for Foreman, but unlike Norton, and I believe Frazier, Jerry would have not been afraid of Foreman, and the fight may have easily ended up in a Foreman-Lyle scenario. Jerry had the necessary ammo, but it would also have had to depend on Jerry's variable state of mind. Focused and determined Jerry, or insecure and self-defeating Jerry? We do know for sure that Jerry and George did spar in 1968 and Jerry reportedly had the upper hand. We also have on record George's admission that he avoided Jerry during his career. This isn't saying he would have lost, but the fact that George did not avoid Frazier, Ali, Norton, but he did avoid Jerry says something. I do want to say that I think Foreman is among the all time greats. However, he had one of the most carefully managed careers in history, and it's too bad. The vast majority of Foreman's record was against unrated opponents with Gladiator-style results. The much smaller Chuvalo, his only pre-1973 credit, was little more than target practice. All the way up to the first Frazier fight, Foreman was still very sloppy, and down right clumsy as soon as he got tired. True, he did fight several of the 70s best, (Frazier, Ali, Norton, Young, Lyle) but that's basically it, and he still lost to two of those fighters (Ali, Young) and was nearly kayoed by Lyle. Even after having been champion, Foreman continued to fill his record with easy opponents, and avoided the other top ten fighters of the day. Win or loose, he never fought Foster, Shavers, Holmes, Quarry, Ellis, Bugner, etc. Foreman was fantastic, but never fully tested. His greatness may actually have been in his 90s fights. He pulled off an amazing comeback and finally fought the top ranks as he should have from the beginning.

No disrespect of Chuvalo intended. He fought bravely against Foreman, as he did through his entire career. My point being Chuvalo was only a test for Foreman, and not a risk. From 1969-1973, while the other heavyweight contenders were fighting each other, often more than once in order to get a title shot, Foreman was developed largely by reputation. Forman was finally matched with Frazier without having ever taken on any of the leading (top 5) contenders, and only after Frazier had spent himself defeating everyone else. After his 6 minutes with Frazier, Foreman then took most of a year off before yet another easy fight against Roman in September, then finally Norton in March 1974. I agree Kent, that Foreman did not duck anyone out of fear. But loose to Ali or not, his management played it very safe for him. 69-73 was a long time for an unbeaten professional not to fight another title contender. Foreman was a great champion, no doubt, but spoon-fed most of his opponents, which makes him appear much larger in perspective. From 1969-77 Foreman put it on the line when he had absolutely no choice. All said, Jerry was tested to say the least. He was fearless against Frazier 1, matched speed with Patterson, chased after Ali 1, came back against Foster, handled Lyle and Shavers, but was careless against Ellis, unprepared for Norton, lackluster against Frazier 2, an emotional mess against Ali 2. But he came back many times before the end. However, after only the first loss of his career, Foreman fell steadily apart, and in only one fight, against Lyle, did Foreman show he had the stuff. Jerry would have stood a very good chance.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/30/02 03:41:20 PM</th>
<th>steve</th>
<th>N.J.</th>
<th>dmsrm@comcast.net</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Norton over Schmelling by 8th round ko. Liston over Moorer in two rounds. Hey Bob Bumbera, formerly of N.J., I will take your advice and go to cyberboxingzone. Thanks for the info. on Bevins, Harry Willis, Joe Jeannette, and Sam McVey. I've argued in the past that it's impossible to compare fighters era's 2 or 3 decades apart. However, these comparisons will always go on. Since that's the case, I'd like to put my 2 cents in. In respect to Jerry Quarry's place the top 50, I would put him at #21, ahead of Floyd Patterson. As far as I can determine, Floyd's claim to fame is being knocked out by Johenson, avenging this with a knockout, and being crushed twice by Liston.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/31/02 03:17:57 AM</th>
<th>Evren</th>
<th>London</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I would have to put Patterson ahead of Quarry—remember we are talking about a cruiserweight who beat many great fighters—Hurricane Jackson (twice) — Archie Moore — Ingemar Johansson (twice) — Eddie Machen (who beat Quarry) — George Chuvalo (who beat Quarry) and Henry Cooper. Floyd Patterson was a highly skilled competitor—I have some footage of his early bouts against Chester Mieszala and Dick Wagner and his speed and combination punching ability is just awesome. I admit his chin was not great but he only lost 8 times and importantly 2 times champion. I rate Jerry about one place behind Jerry not just on ability but from the standpoint that he was champion for a long duration. That his managers avoided some of the top contenders does marr his reputation though. &lt;br&gt;In the competition Norton and Liston were clear winners and are through to the next round. The next draw is as follows:- Joe Louis vs Cleveland Williams and in an amazing match Frazier meets Marciano (all hell will break loose !!!!!).</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/31/02 02:29:49 PM</th>
<th>Joe Krause</th>
<th>Chicago</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Williams vs Louis would be very interesting with Williams a live dog. I feel Louis would be steady enough to withstand the prime Williams charge that would surely come at some time or another. Williams usually lost by knockout and that wouldn't change here—Louis KO 7. Frazier-Marciano is impossible to call with any degree of certainty, but I will give the bigger man the advantage as the rest of their skills are comparable. Frazier would be hit hard though as would Marciano and I doubt this could possibly go the distance. Frazier KO 13 without any idea if this would be accurate!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/31/02 06:38:10 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>In a fight for the ages Joe Frazier wins by split decision over Rocky Marciano. Joe is slightly busier in a battle that tests the heart and will of both men and since neither will back down, it is one for the highlight tapes! Joe Louis uses his stiff jab and combinations to wear down Cleveland Williams for an eighth round TKO.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/1/02 11:07:21 PM</th>
<th>bqquarry</th>
<th>ca.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hi thanks to all that are praying for Jim, he is not doing very well he is down to 150 pds. Jim does not at this time have the energy to be on the computer, so please bear with him until he can get back on. If you wish updated you can e-mail me at abouve add. please let me know it is in regards to jim or i usually will not open if i don't know the person. Thank you again for your prayers. It is very hard to watch a brother going down hill. However, he is a quarry so there is still hope through God love me</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/4/02 04:11:01 PM</th>
<th>Gerry Schultz</th>
<th>ohio</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>No offense, but Chuvalo did not beat Quarry. Clayton's decision to count out Quarry was</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
wrong-- he did get up then knelt to rest until 8--it was a joke. Quarry had clear command of Chuvalo, a very tough fighter past his prime when they met. Patterson may be a better all-round boxer than Jerry, but not a better heavyweight. Every time JQ hit Floyd he buckled. Marciano-Frazier would be a bloodbath, 8 rounds or less. Both fighters were poor defensively, but Rocky could not be stopped. I give him the nod.

|6/5/02 11:03:14 AM|p. drolet|montreal||drolpaul@aol.com|||10|

I agree with everything Gerry says except his claim that Chuvalo didn't beat Jerry. Jerry rose just as Clayton tolled ten. He simply misread the count. Jerry was certainly winning; Clayton himself had Jerry ahead 4-1-1 after six. Chuvalo looked ready to go before he launched that left hook that caught Jerry high on the temple. Jerry simply misread the count. Coupled with the split-decision loss to Ellis, the Chuvalo debacle was a bitter disappointment for Jerry. But as he did so often throughout his career, Jerry rebounded with the big K.O. over Mac Foster. Marciano-Frazier is very tough to call. Marciano, at 185, was exceptionally strong. Although Frazier had 20 pounds on the Rock in his prime, I don't think the added weight would favor Joe. Marciano by late round K.O. or Joe on points. My hopes and prayers are with James and his family.

|6/5/02 11:10:53 AM|Evren|London||@||10|

In perhaps the fiercest battle to ever take place - Marciano and Frazier launch nuclear bombs at one another for ten rounds and Fraziers extra advantage in speed and power is troubling the Rock. I pick Joe in a late round stoppage (cuts) or a close points decision. In the other bout Williams really holds his own for the first 6 rounds and decks Louis in the fifth - Joe rises however and comes back in the 7th to drop Williams this time it is the full count.

|6/5/02 04:05:50 PM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree, Ca||Sonia81@aol.com|||10|

Dad, I Love You!

|6/5/02 08:39:08 AM|Sabrina Quarry-Porter|Florida||SabrinaLPorter@aol.com|||10|

I LOVE YOU DAD...LOOKING FORWARD TO SEEING YOU NEXT WEEKEND.....

|6/8/02 04:32:49 PM|EVREN|LONDON||@||10|

LEWIS BY KAYO - ROUND 6-8 !!!!!!!

|6/8/02 04:59:09 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|

My mind says Lewis will beat Tyson but my gut feeling is Tyson is going to explode all over Lewis' fragile chin in round four. I know Tyson should be rusty in he hasn't been very active for about two years now and that he tends to fall into his bad habits of standing up too straight and loading up and only throwing one punch at a time and wrestling around the ring with his taller opponent, but if Tyson has any of his old skills left and he does stay lower and come in behind the jab and use combinations, Lewis will be in a lot of trouble. I am going with my gut on this one and pick Tyson. Besides, Max Kellerman of ESPN picks Lewis to win and Max isn't right very often but you never know. Maybe Max picked one right this time.

|6/8/02 07:56:54 PM|Sabrina|Florida||SabrinaLPorter@aol.com|||10|

GO LEWIS......KNOCKOUT TYSON....

|6/8/02 11:24:22 PM|Kent |La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|

Wow Evren, you sure did call it! Lewis by knockout in the eighth round. The pay for view system was down for my area so because of technical difficulties I missed the fight even though I ordered the fight and stayed home just for the fight and cancelled other plans I had for absolutely nothing. Oh well from the AOL report of the round by round action it looks like Tyson did all of the things I mentioned that are his bad habits. I have been saying that he needed at least four or five tune up fights to be sharp enough to challenge for the title. It is pretty cool that Lewis shut Tyson's big fat mouth. I used to say that I would probably root for Tyson if he ever fought Lewis as I usually root for an American against someone from another country but I have changed my mind here and I would like to give Lennox Lewis three cheers. Hip Hip Hooray! Hip Hip Hooray! Hip Hip Hooray! Maybe Mike Tyson can retire and take up his real calling, shaking down old ladies for their retirement checks!

The fight, apart from the first round, was very one sided. Although I pulled for Lewis and hoped he would win I was very upset seeing Tyson and his Era end in such a devastating way. Tyson was absolutely terrible compared to the great fighter we remember. He was outjabbed, outsped and outfought. His footwork was slow and it seems the decision to bring him in heavier was a mistake. Mike wouldn't have needed anymore power than he had already. All the weight meant was that he wasn't able to get inside Lewis' reach with his notoriously fast movement.

Lennox, it must be said was excellent, sticking to Emmanuel Steward's game plan, frustrating Tyson early and then dominating after Tyson had 'blown out'. The afterfight interview was touching and it was a great moment to see Tyson accept his defeat like a man. No excuses and full of praise for Lewis' ability. I think he may have earned himself a lot of respect right there. He can be a nice, intelligent person and it would be nice to see more people to try and get to his sensitive side when writing about him or interviewing him.

The end of an era...

I must rate Tyson of the eighties and early nineties in the top ten Heavyweights of all time with Lewis just outside maybe (it is very crammed up there). He must also, surely go down as among the top five 'punchers' in history along with Foreman, Liston, Shavers and Louis. My respect goes out to Lennox (once again) and my respect goes to Tyson for being graceful in defeat. Tyson's quote 'Thankyou, it was a great payday' was one to remember.

WAY TO GO LEWIS...TYSON IS ALL WASHED UP.I DIDN'T GET TO WATCH THE FIGHT BUT I'M SURE IT WAS A GOOD ONE...I KNEW LEWIS WOULD WIN.....

I did not see the fight but it does not surprise me at all. Tyson is not the fighter he once was and maybe he doesn't care to be. I said here a couple of months ago I wanted Tyson to win, but thought Lewis would take it. Hey, at least from what I read, Tyson went down like a man this time. I also believe there is nothing else for Lewis to prove. He should retire and live a healthy life from now on. The Marciano-Frazier fight would be brutal indeed. A Prime vs. Prime fight between these two, I'd have to give the nod to Frazier. I think Joe would get hurt, but that hook is too fast for The Rock. It would cut him up like it sliced up Ron Stander. I'm not positive, but the times Rocky was knocked down in title fights were from left hooks, Walcott and Moore. Neither man was a fast starter so I'll say 8th round TKO for Frazier. Louis would KO Williams within 6 rounds. Liston KO'ed Williams once in the 6th and again in the 2nd. So I know Louis could do it in the same time frame. Although, in the second fight The Big Cat hit Sonny with a tremendous right that bloodied Liston's nose, so Joe could have been knocked down by a right, as he sometimes was. A question for you guys. Who is/are the fighter(s) Jerry's putting the wood to on the opening page and home page of this web site? I've trying to figure it out for months now. My best guess is Lou Bailey. Am I way off base?

It's amazing how Lewis continues to peak. If he continues to fight, I wonder when we will see him start to diminish? At 37, 39, 41? He has done such a great job developing in his later years. Age probably isn't the most significant factor that effects a fighters ability. If you look at some of the great title fights over the last century, some folks might argue that fighters tend to lose skills because once they have fought their greatest fight (say, winning the title), they no longer have the overwhelming drive to peak at that point again. I noticed in the after fight interviews, Lewis was often asked "what's left for you to prove?" and he didn't have an immediate answer, other than he was going to take some time off and consider his options... and Louis through. We now have the last two matches in the second round. Evander Holyfield meets Irish Gerry Cooney. Eddie Machen takes on George Chuvalo.Bob, I do not mean to be pedantic but in order to get facts correct Liston beat Williams in three rounds and then two respectively. Also Marciano was dropped by a Moore straight right hand if my memory serves me correct (I have not reviewed the film). My thoughts are with James and his family as always. Bob Quarry did you get my e-mail.Evren| 6/10/02 03:19:21 PM|Gerry Schultz|ohio|||jgschultz@firstam.com|||9|Lewis vs. Tyson went pretty much as I thought, also. I made a couple bucks picking Lewis by KO9, because I expected a more motivated effort from Tyson, than the one who looked fairly resigned to defeat on Saturday. He certainly does look the tragic figure now. Lewis did well to use Buster Douglas's approach to jab and set up Tyson as Tyson came forward. Despite his win, though, Tyson still, to me, clearly out ranks Lewis all-time. This fight should've happened ten years ago, and would've had a much different outcome. Evander Holyfield helped back up my argument that he never really beat Tyson with another headbutting performance vs. flash-in-the-pan Rahman. Anyone who can rank this guy #3 all-time, to me, is smoking something. He's not much out of the ring either. Lewis does now have Byrd to train for, but has nothing left to prove as the best champion since Tyson in the late 80's. thanks|Evren| 6/11/02 06:56:19 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago|||sadmspats@yahoo.com|||10|Holyfield would be too tough and knock Gerry out in about the 8th. Machen would beat Chuvalo in a close fight. George didn't like slicksters like Machen and Folley and would lose a close one. Cheers to Lewis!|Evren| 6/11/02 07:51:42 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC|||renfebena@aol.com|||10|Evren, I wasn't sure if it was a right or left that Moore dropped Marciano with. I also read a bio on Liston that said he KO'ed Williams in the sixth so I've believed it until now. Anyway, I don't think Holyfield would KO Cooney. Gerry was a pretty good fighter. He took Holmes into the thirteenth round before he ran out of gas and it was a close fight at that. Holyfield is a tough guy no doubt and he would do a number on Cooney. A decesion for Holyfield. A decesion for Machen also. Eddie didn't have the power to stop George. He would have out boxed him though. I don't see George doing any major damage to Machen.|Evren| 6/11/02 08:05:43 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca|||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Evren, I wasn't sure if it was a right or left that Moore dropped Marciano with. I also read a bio on Liston that said he KO'ed Williams in the sixth so I've believed it until now. Anyway, I don't think Holyfield would KO Cooney. Gerry was a pretty good fighter. He took Holmes into the thirteenth round before he ran out of gas and it was a close fight at that. Holyfield is a tough guy no doubt and he would do a number on Cooney. A decesion for Holyfield. A decesion for Machen also. Eddie didn't have the power to stop George. He would have out boxed him though. I don't see George doing any major damage to Machen.|Evren| 6/11/02 03:39:15 AM|Evren|London||||||10|Quite a big thing was made about the knockdown by Archie. He claims that the referee cost him the fight. I think the referee was Harry Kessler (who also done Ali-Williams), Archie landed a perfectly time inside right cross and Rocky fell down and got up quicky. Archie claims that the referee gave Marciano extra time by getting him to go to Neutral corner or wiping Rockys gloves down. The film however never did justify this statement to me though. It looked fair and square to me. Holyfield late round drubbing over Cooney in a good fight and Machen on points.|Evren| 6/13/02 10:30:11 AM|bquarry|ca.|||bquarry@hotmail|||10|I was so glad to hear that Lewis won, perhaps a new era of fighters are about to come to pass. Boxing has not had good fighters for awhile now. The fighters of the past were not fighting for money like today, they fought because they loved the sport. Jim doesn't have much time left, thank you for your prayers and help he needs it bad. He keeps telling me he will be with Jerry soon. We are losing another brother our oldest and our father. Please keep up the prayers. brenda|Evren| 6/13/02 06:17:39 PM|steve|n.j.|||dmmsrm@comcast.com|||10|Just by utilizing the toughness factor, Holyfield would probably wear down Cooney and TKO him in the 10th round. Machen was way to technically proficient to have any trouble with a block of wood like Chuvalo. Machen by easy decision. So where do we put Tyson now in the top 25? In some ways he reminds me of Jerry Quarry. He had all the talent needed to dominate the division, and yet he falls to Buster Mathis. Then he gets outsmarted by Holyfield. It seems as though his emotional instability would not allow him to train and develop strategies for different opponents. Just as Jerry seemed to either fight down to the level of his opponent, {Floyd Patterson}, he seemed not to fight with the same intensity as in other fights. He slugged with Frazier and boxed with Jimmy Ellis. He should have and could have blown both Patterson and Ellis out of the ring! He had some some mediocre efforts in some of his draws such as Tony Longi. I think I'm trying to say that some of the most exciting fighters, like Quarry and Tyson, have attracted so much attention over the years because they where both unpredictable knockout artists.

Kent, it was a right that dropped Marciano. I don't have the fight on tape but I think Moore threw a left hook before or after the right I not sure. Steve from Jersey, I think I told you Tex rickard was Dempsey's manager. It should have read "Tex Rickard, Dempsey's manager". Doc Kearns was Dempsey's manager. Rickard also promoted the Johnson-Jeffries fight and swore he'd never promote a fight between a white and black again. Sorry about that.

I pick Holyfield to stop Cooney in ten rounds and Machen to outbox Chuvalo for a wide decision. Okay the last sixteen are: - Tony Tucker, Jerry Quarry, Mike Tyson, Larry Holmes, George Foreman, Eddie Machen, Evander Holyfield, Sonny Liston, Ken Norton, Joe Frazier, Muhammad Ali, Carl Williams, Joe Louis, Ezzard Charles, Earnie Shavers, Lennox Lewis.

Well its time for the last sixteen - first match - Sonny Liston vs Carl Williams. In the second match we see World War III - George Foreman vs Earnie Shavers. May I say it was terrible to read of James in his condition all my thoughts go out to the Quarry family and friends. God bless you all. Evren going for a knockout and he had very little left except for his great heart after this round. No one else comments when I say the third round of Quarry/Norton is one of the best rounds of heavyweight action I have ever seen. The two go toe to toe for almost the entire round. Jerry controlled the action landing more punches but Norton landing damaging blows on the cut. When the call came for Norton, Jerry was living the good life in Hawaii. He had less than two weeks to prepare which wasn't nearly enough for the likes of Ken Norton. He was woefully ill-prepared. He was soft at 207. Norton admits that Jerry stung him in the first round. Jerry told Clancy between the second and third rounds that he was going to try to knock Norton out in the third because he knew he didn't have the staying power to go the distance. Kent has already alluded to how thrilling that third round was. I'm with Joe: prime vs. prime Norton-Quarry is a pick-em fight.

I too beleive Jerry would have KO'ed Norton. Kenny didn't fight well going backwards, and Jerry would have forced him to do so. Jerry was the harder puncher as well. Norton has said that he never fought Joe Frazier because they were too close as friends. But he knew from sparring with Joe he would have been KO'ed. Anyone who moves in against hard punchers like Joe and Jerry are in big trouble. Liston over Williams in 6 rounds. Foreman over Shavers in...I'll give Ernie a break and say 2 rounds. He didn't have the chin or defense to stand up to George.

The thing is Bob, Jerry did land some very hard punches on Norton when the two did fight and the saying goes that even if Jerry was on his way down skillwise, the last thing a fighter loses is his punching power. Prime against prime Jerry would have been more accurate which would have given him a much better chance of winning the fight. There was still a possibility of Jerry being cut as Norton had a very good long hard left jab and poweful overhand right. Can you imagine the action if say Jerry had been cut and he went toe to toe with Norton and still had something left if the knockout didn't occur and the two of them would have traded like they did in their fight in the third round for several rounds? What a fight it would have been! I think Quarry verses Norton would have been a good candidate for fight of the year in almost any year if the two of them were at or near their best. Of course there was always a possiblity of Norton, often a slow starter, getting caught with some hard punches in the first or second round by Jerry with Norton being an early knockout victim. The other way around with Norton knocking out Jerry early or at all isn't likely due to Jerry's great chin. A Norton victory would most likely be by decision or by cuts.

I'm joining the rest of you to say Liston by early - mid kayo over Carl Williams. Foreman - Shavers would be a WAR !!! Foreman's better chin would win him a wild affair that would see possibly both of them on the deck before George ended Shavers' dreams with a savage flurry in the third ! Tha puts George and Sonny through to the last eight. In the next two bouts we have Mike Tyson taking on Ken Norton and Joe Frazier meeting Eddie Machen. This time around it is a prime, fit Machen not the end of career version. All fights scheduled for 12 rounds. In the quarter-finals we will move the distance to fifteen rounders. Hope this is okay with everyone. Evren have enough. Frazier by decision.

I've read some pretty wild stuff about the events leading up to Quarry vs Norton. Norton accusing Quarry of being a racist. I believe Jerry was still married to that beautiful blond called "Charlie". If I remember correctly, that this couple where the darlings of the boxing magazines during this last of Quarry's comebacks. I remember a cover with Jerry and Charlie on it. The splash on the cover yelled, "what hidden power is driving Quarry to the heavyweight crown!" There seemed to be rumors that Norton treated Quarry with very little respect, even going so far as flirting with Quarry's wife. Norton had great physical strength, and a fairly effective, difficult style. His defence could be punched through by a powerpuncher. I personally think Norton is overrated. He would have been KO'd early by a prime, top performance Quarry, such as the Quarry who handily defeated Ron Lyle, in my opinion, his greatest performance. Liston Ko's Williams as soon as he catches him, 4th or 5th round. Foreman over Shavers by KO in 2. He wasn't in the same league as a pro. fighter. No boxing skills, no chin, only a freakishly hard punch, if he could land it. It didn't work on Larry Holmes, or Ali. Norton's inability to cope with power punchers who start fast would continue and Norton is KO'd in the second round. Joe Frazier is still too much even for a prime Eddie Machen. Frazier by decision again.

Tyson by third round Kayo and Frazier by decision over Machen. There is always a possibility of an in prime Jerry catching Norton early and knocking him out but, Norton had a style that gave Jerry trouble, so we can't automatically say Jerry is a clear winner. Jerry's strong showing for at least three rounds in their fight in his bad condition and diminishing skills point to a victory for Jerry if the two had fought earlier in Jerry's career, but you never know in a fight what will happen. Oh by the way, did Norton and Jerry ever spar? If so, does anyone know how the action went?

Norton and Jerry never sparred. In the fall of '66, however, Joe Frazier was in L.A. getting ready for Eddie Machen. One day, Joe sauntered into the Main Street gym and spotted Jerry in the middle of a workout. The two laced up and, according to witnesses, went two blistering rounds. Jerry got cut but Eddie Futch told the people at Cloverlay Inc., Frazier's braintrust, to hold off fighting Jerry in '67. "Those two are too evenly matched," he said. Fight fans would have to wait 2 1/2 years before their first memorable fight in the Garden.

On a lighter note, I saw the Batman episode that Jerry was in yesterday on TVland on cable. He is only in it for a minute. He is one of the boxers taken hostage by the Riddler, who is trying to control boxing in Gotham City. Jerry is put under a spell by the Siren, played by Joan Collins.
have gone past six or seven rounds. And I don't think Kenny's hand would have been raised as the victor. But you never know. Jerry was kind of unpredictable in big fights, but most of his losses in big fights, during his prime years, were to great fighters. Kenny was a very good fighter, not an over rated one, but a very good one. Jerry just had too much fire power in his prime. And Tyson vs. Norton? This one would have been like the Spinks or Marvis Frazier fight, no contest. Jaws by KO 1:35 of the first round. Frazier by decision over Machen. Eddie takes a knee in the last round. Joe wins 8 to 4.

In the Tyson fight I think it would be more evenly contested than you other guys have predicted. Norton was a smart fighter. I think he would have known what was coming at him in Tyson and dealt with it in an intelligent way. Using his strength to tie up Tyson and his considerable skill to frustrate him. I do feel however, perhaps in the manner of the first Ruddock fight, Tyson would catch him and force a stoppage in about 7 rounds. I thin the Frazier - Machen bout would be similar to their actually contested bout except at a more frenetic pace. In their actual fight, Frazier hadn't reached his peak and Machen was passed his. The result I feel...Frazier by late round kayo, say around the ninth. In the next two bouts we have Larry Holmes vs Joe Louis and the second bout, Lennox Lewis vs Muhammad Ali. Some great matches there. Evren

In two great fights, Joe Louis wins a split decision over Larry Holmes and Muhammed Ali wins a close but unanimous decision over Lennox Lewis. In the Louis/Holmes fight; two judges vote for Louis by only a two point margin while the third judge votes for Holmes, also by a two point margin. In Ali/Lewis, two judges give the bout to Ali by a two point advantage while the other sees him winning by only a single point.

The huge Lewis would cause Ali huge problems. Ali would not have the reach and would have to move inside to land. That was never Ali's style and it wouldn't be here. Ali would lose a boring tactical fight as Lewis' size is the determining factor. Holmes-Louis is a toss-up, but I think Louis never fought anyone with the speed to match and surpass him and Holmes would win a unanimous decision by a couple of points.

The Joe Louis vs Larry Holmes fight would be a real toss-up. A great, great match-up. In a highly competitive fight Larry Holmes would take a close decision, winning the rounds late. I feel Ali would have been far to fast for Lewis. Ali had good natural size and his reach wasn't too far off Lewis'. Lewis could n't use his size and bulk against Muhammad as he would n't be there to be hit. The Terrell fight comes to mind with Lewis being not nearly as awkward or fast. Lewis strength and weight would make it hard for Ali during the middle rounds but I would see 'The Greatest' stopping Lennox late with an unanswered barrage against the ropes.

I always felt that Quarry and Bonavena would have been an excellent match-up. A real war! Cold bless both of them. they gave us all alot of thrills.

I am an admirer of Lennox Lewis. However, I wouldn't rate him to win a fight over Ali. "Reach" would not be an issue in this fight. Ali had an 82 inch reach, Lennox 84 - very close, but Ali was much more agile and quicker. I don't mean to take anything away from Lennox - I like him very much. Some may argue that Lennox fought and old Holyfield and an old Tyson.
actually took place. The Bonevena fight was supposed to replace the Shavers fight or be a tune up for the Shavers fight. What a tune up to look forward to! I don't think Bonevena was ever an easy fight for anyone. I would have loved to see Foreman fight Bonevena as Bonevena was not afraid of anyone. I think Foreman would have won but it would have been wild while it lasted. |

Here is my honest, unbiased assessment of Oscar Bonavena vs. Jerry Quarry. My guess: Jerry by decision.|

Size: EvenSpeed: Edge to JerryBoxing skills: Edge to JerryPower: Slight edge to Oscar (his right knocked Frazier down twice)Stamina: EvenHeart: EvenDurability: Slight edge to Oscar - he did not cut and could really take a punch to the jaw (as could Jerry)Common opponents: Ali, Frazier, Ellis, defeated both of them.Bonavena beat Chuvalo, who Ko'd Jerry. Jerry beat Patterson and Lyle both of whom beat Oscar via decisionAdditional: both men were trained briefly by Gil Clancy.

I pick Ali to knockout Lewis in 12 rounds. I thought Lewis's performance again Tyson was much ado about nothing. It never ceases to amaze me how easily even knowledgeable fight fans, even the guys on this site, can have their judgement swayed by the promoter's hype! Tyson hadn't beaten a decent opponent in many years. Lewis is getting rave reviews for beating up a shell of the old Mike Tyson. Lewis looked clumsy, he missed all of his uppercuts, was hesitant with his right hand against a guy with no upper body movement who either stood still, or leaped in with one punch. Joe Louis over Larry Holmes by decision. Either Joe Louis wasn't as hard punching and fast-of-hand as he looked in old fight films, or Larry Holmes was a much better fighter than the one I remember losing his title to a lightheavyweight, Michael Spinks.

I agree with your assessment of a Quarry/Bonevena fight. Jerry would have probably outpointed Bonevena but it would not have been easy.

The votes at the moment - 4 - 1 for Ali over Lennox. The Lewis-Holmes bout is on 2 - 2 - we need some deciding votes. The round will end by the end of Sunday.

I am sure that Earnie Shavers' autobiography, 'Welcome to the Big Times' is out in the United States, but does anyone know when it is being published in the UK? I'm sure a decent sports bookshop will have it but I've heard a rumour that you may have to order. I'm sure it would be a great read, considering the desperate beginning to Shavers' life, his very hard-hitting exploits, and his ability to talk honestly about the 'golden era' of the period. Wars with Ali, Holmes, Norton, Quarry, Lyle, Ellis, Young and Bugner should make for a great book. As well an interesting fact, particularly for the UK readers, do you know that as well as spending time as Don King's chauffeur, Earnie has a house in Liverpool where he lives for six months of the year with his English wife? Not only that but he as also worked as a 'greeter' for some of the city's more fashionable clubs! I imagine he doesn't have too many problems!

Mark: you'll have to order the Shavers book on-line through Amazon.com or you may be able to order it through www.sportspublishinginc.com. Sports Publishing Inc. are the same people who published the Norton book a few years back.

I think the Shavers book is the one where James contributed to the section about Shavers' fight with Jerry. I remember a while back that Earnie had contacted James regarding the book. I am glad to know it is out as I will get a copy soon.

Oh one more thing, tonight on HBO is Wladimir Klitschko versus Ray Mercer. It should be interesting. Let's see if Dr. K is for real. Mercer is a bit old though.
could give Klitscko real problems. I however feel that Klitschko is fresh and will force out a one sided battering. He may stop Mercer late or wide decision.

|6/30/02 04:18:56 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10| Klitschko looked very good stopping Mercer in the sixth round. Mercer was still on his feet but taking too much punishment. Klitschko dominated the action and scored the only knockdown with a left hook at the end of a combination in the first round. Mercer did cause a slight abrasion under Klitscho's left eye and swelling under both eyes with a good jab but otherwise Mercer never really was in the fight. Looks like Lewis verses Klitschko is going to be the next big fight in the heavyweight division. |

|6/30/02 05:59:51 AM|Evren|London||@|||10| I agree Kent, Wladimir looked very good - but it was a little flattering to deceive with the way Mercer was. Ray has always been one of my favourite fighters - sharp, hard punching with a real buzz to his fighting style. He unfortunately has none of that left. His punch resistance has gone also I feel. It really saddens me seeing 'the old boys' taking a beating like Mercer did - it tarnishes their reputation. In the entire pantheon of history it's hard to think of but a handful of heavies who got out the game without taking a beating. Tyson, Ali, Frazier, Norton, Louis, Holmes all took a beating at the end. George Foreman never took a real beating where he lost -he took a beating in the Moorer and Stewart fights but still won. There are but a few men in history who could ever match the toughness of Foreman. I think that aspect is overlooked as people always see his punch power as his only asset (and it was a good one). A definite top 10 heavy of all time for me. I admire him tremendously. Evren. |

|6/30/02 07:42:15 AM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10| Holmes vs. Louis. A battle of jabs, with Joe landing some strong body shots. Larry scores more, Joe does more damage. Both men are shaken up, Joe does more body work and this slows Larry down late in the fight. Louis goes down from a right in the fifth. Joe catches Holmes in the last round and puts him down but can't finish him. Louis in a close decesion. Lewis vs. Ali. Lennox ain't slow but Ali makes him look like he standing still. He also looks awkward against the silky smooth Ali. Lewis is much bigger, at 245 is 33 pounds heavier,3 inches taller and 4 inches in reach. Remember, Liston had an 84 inch reach and he was only 6'1". Ali comes out fast moving in and out jabbing to the head and body. Lewis is much stronger and hits harder and Ali avoids clinching, when they do Lennox lands some very effective body shots. Ali is scoring more with combinations. Lewis can't find Ali's head, but the body work slows Ali down. Muhammad ends the last 3 rounds with flurries. In the end Ali wins a 7 to 5 decesion. |

|6/30/02 07:54:47 AM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10| By the way,in a re-match six months later, Louis KO's Holmes in the 7th round. |

|6/30/02 04:12:04 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10| Well Holmes crashes out and Ali goes through after a tough battle with Lennox. The last two matches in this round to be called tonight. |

|7/1/02 03:08:22 AM|Evren|London||@|||10| Yes, I am not sure how beating up an aging ex contender Mercer does to show what Klitschko can do. If the Mercer of a few years ago, the one that gave Lennox Lewis hell, where in the ring last night and he landed more powerful right hands on Klitscho, the fight would have maybe taken on a far different meaning. As it was, Mercer landed the right the few times he threw it and the jab connected numrous times. Mercer may have seen openings but most of time he couldn't react fast enough to take advantage of them. We still can't be sure how good WK is even though he looked very good last night against Mercer. |

|7/1/02 10:30:37 PM|Sabrina Quarry-Porter|Florida||sabrinalporter@aol.com|||10| I JUST WANTED TO SAY I LOVE YOU DADDY COOL!!!!!!! |

|7/1/02 11:11:11 PM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree,
CA||Sonia81@aol.com||||10|I LOVE YOU TOO DADDY COOL!|

[7/2/02 07:46:46 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||||10|Saw Klitchko battery Ray Mercer on HBO.Its true Mercer had seen better days but the Russian showed he can throw every punch well, is light on his feet, is technically sound, and does not cut (he swells). The only thing he did not demonstrate was if he can take a punch or if he has heart. If he has those 2 qualities he may be the best since Ali and Foreman. Those are ver bigs IFs, however.|}

[7/2/02 08:46:04 AM|evren|london||@||||10|I agree Klitschko looked really good and is destined for the very top. What we need is to see him against a fighter on the way up - one with desire. There are not many heavies I see out there with that burning desire to win. The future of the heavyweight division is terrible with the only few decent heavies are ones in their thirties so there the Klitschko's stand alone !!!|}

[7/2/02 11:41:14 AM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||||10|DEAR EVERN: CONGRATULATIONS ON YOUR FIGHTER LENNOX LEWIS RECENT VICTORY, NOTHING TO DOWNLOAD LEWIS TALENT, BUT WHO HAS TYSON EVER BEAT, NOT MANY PUNCHERS OBVIOUSLY! LOOK AT HIS RECORD (NO PUNCHERS). DON KING IS A SMART MAN, NO - BOWE, MERCER, MORRISON, WITHERSPOON, FOREMAN, COONEY, MOORER, ONLY HOLYFIELD (BECAUSE THEY THOUGHT HE WAS PAST HIS PRIME AND TOO MANY RING WARS) WHICH TYSON DID NOT HAVE TO ENDURE!! THAT IS ANOTHER THING ABOUT WHY LEWIS IS FIGHTING THIS WAY AT HIS AGE, VERY LITTLE WEAR, ANYWAY CONGRATSES!!!|

[7/2/02 04:37:54 PM|Evren|London||@||||10|Sorry for the delay in the next round: - Evander Holyfield meets Tony Tucker and Jerry Quarry meets Ezzard Charles - another two great matches.I do not agree with the opinion that Tyson has'nt beat anyone...on the contrary I think he beat alot of very good fighters and beat alot of them easily. He is amongst the top 10 heavyweights who ever lived, in my opinion. Above Lewis.|}

[7/2/02 06:29:28 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago||sadmspats@yahoo.com||||10|I think Tucker was a pretty decent fighter, but Holyfield would win a pretty lop-sided decision, let's say 9-3. Charles and Quarry match up similarly in terms of talent, I think this would go the distance with Jerry taking a close decision. Charles was the better fighter historically, but he was at his best at lower weights and was naturally smaller. I think Jerry was better then past-prime Walcott, although he was a real good fighter against Marciano, who is over-rated himself. I think the 50's heavyweights are a run of the mill group to be honest with you.|}

[7/3/02 02:42:16 AM|EVREN|LONDON||@||10|I have seen a lot of Charles film including some in his prime and cannot see Quarry beating him - Ezzard takes a points decision in a good match or late round cuts stoppage. Evander by decision over Tucker - say 9-3 or 8-4 in rounds.|}

[7/3/02 07:20:06 AM|John Gerard|NYC, NY||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|As a side note, I think that one of the most under rated punchers of all time was Ingomar Johansson. Note I did NOT say one of the most under rated fighters, I mean when just measuring punching power. Johansson's right was just as good as any punch ever thrown by anyone -- but Ingo had no left, could not take a punch and hated to train. But he is very under rated when it comes to sheer punching power. He eaily kayed Machon, Cooper, Patterson (once!), and others. The guy could really hit.|}

[7/3/02 08:28:44 AM|Joe Krause|Chicago||sadmspats@yahoo.com||||10|It has to be taken into account though Evren that Charles was really at his best at light-heavy where he had his best form. He had the weakest crop of title defenses in history and that includes Patterson. If you were to put Charles in his prime as a heavyweight then you have a fighter that never really existed. Charles wasn't ever in his real prime as a heavyweight. By 1948-1949 he had been in many wars with Bivins, Moore and other decent light heavies in the mid 40's. I don't think the Charles I see in early 50's film vs Louis, Walcott I,II and Marciano twice was that overly impressive. He didn't have a real big punch at heavy and I really think Jerry of '69 would have beaten Charles of '50 or '51. I would realize I would be in a minority in this opinion, most experts would agree with you Evren.

Last night ESPNCL ran the entire Holmes v Cooney fight. I'd never seen it before, though I'd heard about it from many people over the years, including how out classed Cooney was, and how the fight was over hyped etc. What I saw was something different. I saw a close fight, up until the last couple of rounds. I saw a great fighter in Holmes, fighting a tactical fight and having a tough time with a big determined challenger. Cooney did not have the skills and experience to take the title, but he came back from a second round knockdown to stand with Holmes until the 13th round. Cooney did a lot better than the majority of Holmes other opponents. Despite what I've read, Holmes never beat Cooney up. He outboxed and outlasted Cooney, who ran out of gas. It was perhaps Holmes toughest fight next to Norton, and until he lost to Spinks. Cooney made for an exciting fight, and got bashed by the press who exploited the racial element. I was glad to see the program pointed out that Holmes and Cooney have since appeared at events together and show mutual respect.

Them fights mentioned of Charles' were not I agree his most impressive but watch some of his non title encounters with Satterfield, Layne, Norkus, Reynolds etc and you see a completely different beast..a very aggressive sharpshooting fighter who was smart, real smart. In my opinion he would have been to good all round for Jerry, but then again we all see fights differently and I respect everyones opinions and thoughts greatly.

I agree Johnny, Cooney fought an in prime Holmes very tough and he actually would have been ahead on the judges scorecards at the time of the stoppage if not for three points being deducted for low blows, in which two of the deductions were legitimate and one was shown on a replay to be a good body shot that was called a low blow by referee Mills Lane. It was one of Holmes toughest title defenses in which he pulled out a victory in true championship form. Holmes showed true championship heart by facing adversity and coming out on top. It was in no way an easy victory and I have new found respect for Cooney as I haven't seen the fight since it happened. After much consideration, I have to say the Ezzard Charles that split Rocky Marciano's nose and gave Rocky hell would beat our Jerry by decision. As much as I love Jerry, I have to rate him below an in prime Marciano and I think Charles would outscore him. In a fight that could have taken place for real, Holyfield wins by decision over Tucker. I think Tucker is an underrated fighter but Holyfield would outwork him over the distance but it would not be an easy fight for Holyfield.

I AGREE, HOLMES WAS A GREAT CHAMPION. NO OPINION ON CHARLES-QUARRY! ELLIS 4TH RANKED BY W.B.A. AT THE TIME OF HIS SHAVERS LOSS, MUST MEAN QUARRY'S LYLE WIN HAD HIM #5. THE RING MAGAZINE LIKED TO DIFFER.

I agree, Holmes was a great Champion. No opinion on Charles-Quarry! Ellis 4th ranked by W.B.A. at the time of his Shavers loss, must mean Quarry's Lyle win had him #5. The Ring Magazine liked to differ.

Bob Bumbera: I have not been around Bob but the fighter on the front of the site, whom Jerry is putting the wood to. is none other than "bad" Thad Spencer. I recently sent to Iowa to get the Quarry/Bailey Fight off microfilm, they wanted too charge JQ admission, than after decking Bailey 5 times and going 10. Second-ranked Jerry was locked out of his dressing room!! He got treated a little tacky down there in DES MOINES, Lew Eskin referee, Quarry said in 50 bouts it was they worst he'd experienced in 50 pro bouts!! Eskin was editor of Boxing Illustrated, maybe that accounted for there terrible top ten ratings!! ha ha does that mean you cannot pick a winner or just not interested...(FOR JIMMY). Lennox is'nt my fighter by the way. He did however grow up about 100yds from where I work today...I used to see Lennox running in the park nearby when he was just turning professional...

Having no opinion on Quarry - Machen -

| 7/4/02 10:10:24 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | HAPPY 4TH OF JULY EVERYONE! WE LOVE YOU DAD! WE LOVE & MISS YOU UNCLE JERRY! |
| 7/4/02 02:27:00 PM | Gerry Schultz | Ohio | jgschultz | As much as I hate to say it, I have to agree that Charles would edge Jerry, based on his aggressiveness, quickness and accuracy as a puncher. Jerry would not go easy and both fighters would probably cut, but Charles was a better defensive fighter. It is a shorter list, as I've said, of fighters than Ring Magazine has led many to believe, the heavies who are better than Jerry, certainly not 26. But Charles is on that short list, in my opinion. I don't think Ez could knock Jerry out, but he would outbox him. |

| 7/5/02 09:23:29 AM | Kent | La Habra, CA | oriononside@aol.com | EVERN: I GUESS MY CONGRATS FOR YOU ON LEWIS WAS A LITTLE, PREMATURE. WHO BY THE WAY WAS A GREAT FIGHTER THAT MR. TYSON BEAT?? I CAN NAME MORE HE DUCkED (ALL PUNCHERS!!). I DO NOT REMEMBER EVEN MENTIONING MACHEN! AND HIS BOUT, AS FOR QUARRY-CHARLES I DID NOT COMMENT. BECAUSE I FELT I'BD A LITTLE BIASED FOR JERRY. ITS HARD TOO SEE JERRY LOSE TO A SMALLER OPPONENT, WHEN HE WAS BEATING MONSTERS LIKE LYLE, SHAVERS, FOSTER, MATHIS, ETC. I KNOW YOU GUYS HAVE BEEN AT THIS TOURNEY FOR A LONG TIME, AND SEEM TO BE HAVING FUN WITH IT, PERSONALLY AS MUCH AS I LIKE AND RESPECT EZZARD CHARLES, HE WAS BEFORE MY TIME, LIKE I HAVE A TENDACY TO DOWNGRADE MARCIANO, AND SAY FRAZIER, ITS HARD TO ARGUE WITH 49-0 43 KNOCKOUTS. |
| 7/5/02 03:53:38 PM | Evren | London | @ | Just look at Tyson's record he beat many many top rated fighters... |

| 7/6/02 02:21:14 AM | Kent | La Habra, CA | oriononside@aol.com | I understand that the person I saw who I thought might be Mike was probably just someone who looked like him. I hope Mike is doing well. |
| 7/6/02 04:27:59 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | On the subject of lightheavys vs heavyweights; First, how would you guys rate Bob Foster vs Ezzard Charles? Foster had no success against any heavyweights of his era. Yet has to be considered one of the top two or three lightheavy weights of all time. Ezzard Charles had mixed success against the heavyweights of his time. We could either assume that Charles' heavyweight opponents where superior to Foster's, Walcott, Louis, Marciano, ect., as compared to Ali, Frazier, ect., or not. Having said this, I think Charles vs Foster would have been a fascinating fight. Does anyone think Foster could have stood up to Quarry's weight and power advantage? I do not think Quarry would lose to any fighter 15, 20, or 25 lbs lighter. He was much too powerful for his size, and too used to wrestling with much bigger, stronger fighters like Lyle, Frazier, Spencer, Mathis, ect. |
| 7/6/02 04:38:08 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | While I'm on the subject. If you belief Charles could defeat both Quarry and Bob Foster, then that would surely put him in amonug the top ten heavyweights of all time. |
| 7/6/02 06:30:00 PM | Joe Krause | Chicago | sadspats@yahoo.com | I have Charles and Quarry in the 15-25 range all-time heavies. As far as light-heavy the
Foster-Charles match would have been incredible. Foster would have been my favorite. Charles peak heavyweight weight was about 188ish. He was never really bigger than that until his last couple fights which should not even count in evaluating him.

I think Jerry could have beaten Bob Foster. Foster never had much success against heavyweights. It would have been a crowd favorte that could have been billed as the Quarrys' revenge, for Foster knocking out Mike. While I think Jerry would not beat Charles at heavyweight, I think Jerry could take the light heavyweight version. I am basing my vote in he tourney on the Charles at heavyweight peak of the Marciano fight. While Charles didn't have a long prime at heavyweight, at this prime would have been a very tough task for Jerry.

I've been knocked off aol 3 times this morning so I'll make this quick. Thanks Jimmy. I notetced they were wearing Flores gloves and that would point a finger to a West coast fight. Charles over Quarry 6-5-1. Charles out-boxes Jerry but Jerry does hurt Ez in the 6th and it looks like he's ready to go but Charles hangs on and comes back strong in the 8th. Tucker-Holyfield. Evander does his usual workman like job on Tony and takes a 8-4 decesion. Tucker starts and with a good hard jab and combinations takes the first 2 rounds. Evander works the body trying to slow him down. Holyfield lands a good headbutt in the 6th and again in the 9th after he is hurt by a Tucker right. Tony spends the rest of the fight protecting his very swollen left eye.

My deepest Sympathay goes out to you all.gov bless his soul and may he rest in peace.

I would like to extend my deepest condolences to the entire Quarry family on this sorrowful day. As president and co-founder of TJQF, James made a an invaluable contribution to the integrity of professional boxing. With an eye to chronicling his brother Jerry's life and career in a biography, I flew out to Portland several years ago and met James. Although the book project has been shelved (for the time being at least), James was unfaillingly supportive in my efforts. My prayers are with all Quarrys in this their grieving hour.

My heart goes out to the Quarry family. Jim faced his battle with the courage and dignitiy that showed the true meaning of the family motto of "there is no quit in a Quarry" Mr. Jimmy, I will be drinking a toast to you tonight! You will not be forgotten and your great work will continue!

We mourn the passing of Jimmy Quarry--a stand-up guy and a worthy representative of his family, always ready to fight for what he believed in.

I want to say "Thank you all" for your kind words. Yes, I do agree he sure lived by the Quarry motto "There's no Quit in a Quarry" cause he sure didn't give up. Now he'll be with Uncle Jerry, so Dad, I love you & I will surely miss you. We love & miss you too Uncle Jerry.

I want to say "Thank you all" for your kind words. Yes, I do agree he sure lived by the Quarry motto "There's no Quit in a Quarry" cause he sure didn't give up. Now he'll be with Uncle Jerry, so Dad, I love you & I will surely miss you. We love & miss you too Uncle Jerry.

I LOVE YOU DAD ALWAYS!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

I LOVE YOU DAD ALWAYS!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

I LOVE YOU DAD ALWAYS!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
Porter|Florida||sabrinalporter@aol.com|||10|Grandpa we love you always...and forever in our hearts...Love Your Grandkids, TJ, Bobi & Donald|

CALIFORNIA|RONNYRAIN@YAHOO.COM|||10|I cannot believe JIM IS GONE!! My goodness what a great guy!! He always had time for me wether on the phone, emails etc. My deepest condolences to the QUARRY FAMILY, JAMES QUARRY WILL BE MISSED.| 7/8/02 02:46:12 PM|Brenda Quarry|Ca.||bquarry@hotmail|||10|Jim's services will be held Sat. the 13th at the Shafter Memorial Park 18662 Stanta Fe Way Shafter Calif. 93263 Peters Funeral Home 844 East Lerdo Hwy. Shafter, Ca. # 661- 323- 7119Jim will be missed I loved him very much, bye brother. Jim will be layed to rest by to Jerry his best friend and brother and Debbie our niece.| 7/8/02 03:41:53 PM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia81@aol.com|||10|THANK YOU ALL FOR YOUR THOUGHTS, PRAYERS AND VERY KIND WORDS ABOUT MY FATHER....AND TO HONOR HIS MEMORY I HOPE WE ALL CAN KEEP THIS WEBSITE GOING FOR A LONG TIME TO COME..MY DAD WAS THE BEST FATHER IN THE WORLD AND HE WILL BE MISSED BY US ALL....| 7/8/02 07:05:15 PM|George L. Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com|||10|In a variety of roles, I had the good fortune of working with James Quarry on multiple boxing issues since 1995. He was a good listener and compassionate man who strongly supported TJQF's involvement in all of the important activities and issues that supported the rights of the professional fighters. These included the Professional Boxing Act of 1996, the National Association of Attorney Generals' Hearings On Professional Boxing in 1999, and the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act of 2000, and National Boxing Commission Act of 2001. Because of James' interest for these types of issues, TJQF played a key role in promoting the betterment of the sport-- especially in working in conjunction with the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing and U.S. Senator John McCain of Arizona. All that is right and good in the world of professional pugilism mourns this terrible loss! | 7/9/02 07:44:33 AM|Sabrina Quarry-Porter|Florida||sabrinalporter@aol.com|||10|THANK YOU ALL FOR YOUR THOUGHTS, PRAYERS AND VERY KIND WORDS ABOUT MY FATHER....AND TO HONOR HIS MEMORY I HOPE WE ALL CAN KEEP THIS WEBSITE GOING FOR A LONG TIME TO COME..MY DAD WAS THE BEST FATHER IN THE WORLD AND HE WILL BE MISSED BY US ALL....| 7/9/02 08:09:52 AM|steve|NJ||dmsrm@comcast.net|||10|My deepest sympathy to the Quarry family on their tragic loss. I'd also like to help keep this great site going. As long as this site continues, it will keep the memory of James and Jerry alive for all of us old guys who inhabit this website. May James Rest In Peace.| 7/9/02 10:17:48 AM|Evren|London|||10|I think that with things as they are at the moment I am leaving the competition for a couple of weeks. I hope that is alright with everyone.I think that is the greatest compliment any child could give their parents ' My father was the greatest father in the world'... I feel the same about my dad..|7/9/02 09:10:04 PM|brenda quarry|ca.||bquarry@hotmail.com||||10|Jim's services will be held at 2 in the afternoon on sat. the 13th. Thank you for all for your prayers. Jim rest in peace knowing that your web pge will go on as you wished thanks to your kids and your wife Brandy and of course George Otto. I know you are in God's arms now and no more pain. bye Jim|
|7/10/02 04:00:08 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca.||oriononside@aol.com||||10|A friend of mine asked me if there was to be any donations requested in lieu of flowers for Jim's service; and if so, is there an organization that donations could be sent to in memory of Jim?
|7/10/02 12:30:13 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|I think I speak for all the regular visitors to this site when I say that James Quarry was appreciated as a fair-minded, honest, intelligent, all-around good man. He will be sadly missed by each of us. Throughout the last 3 years, the Quarry family has experienced more than their share of adversity. But through it all, the obvious strength and courage this clan possesses has made them stronger. James' passing will be no exception. To Sabrina and the rest of the Quarry family: You're in our thoughts and prayers. May God bless you. |
|7/10/02 04:27:56 PM|Brenda Quarry|ca.||bquarry@hotmail.com||||10|Thank you all for your prayers and comments regarding Jim, he will be missed. Peters Funeral Home 844 East Lerdo Hwy. 661-323-7119Graveside Ceremony will be held Sat. the 13th of July at 2 p.m Shafter Memorial Park 18662 Santa Fe Way Shafter Ca. 93263 661-746-3921|
|7/11/02 12:36:45 AM|Eric Quarry|Santa Rosa, Ca||esq1064@aol.com||||10|I would like to thank all who visit our web page, I know my Father would be very proud from all the concerns that have poured in to the family. I would love to invite all that are interested in attending the servises for my Father (James M. Quarry) at Shafter Memorial Park in Shafter Ca.on Saturday 13, 2002, at 2:00 p.m. Once again, Thanks to all who have visited my Fathers Web site in memory of his brother The Irish Jerry Quarry. |
|7/11/02 07:24:49 AM|Sabrina Quarry-Porter|Florida||SabrinaLPorter@aol.com||||10|They say memories are goldenwell maybe that is trueI never wanted memoriesI only wanted youA million times i needed youA million times i criedIf love alone could have saved youYou never would have diedIn life i loved you dearlyIn death I love you stillIn my heart you hold a pieceNo one could ever fillBut now i know you want meTo mourn for you no moreTo remember the happy timesLife still has much in storeSince you'll never be forgottenI pledge to you todayA hallowed place within my heartIs where you'll always stayIf tears could build a stairwayAnd heartache make a laneI'd walk the path to heavenAnd bring you back againOur family chain is brokenAnd nothing seems the sameBut as God calls us one by oneThe chain will link again...I WANT TO READ THIS AT THE SERVICE BUT I DON'T THINK I WILL BE ABLE TO SO I PUT IT ON HERE FOR EVERYONE TO READ...|
|7/11/02 05:53:37 PM|Selina|Hemet||res0x4lt@verizon.net||||10|I will miss my Dad very much. It makes everything easier for me to know that he doesn't have to suffer any longer and can finally be at peace. I don't visit this site very often, but what I do see impresses the hell out of me. My father did all he could to make boxing better for the fighters of our future, and I hope that it will keep getting better. Please everyone do not let his dream die. Support it and keep it going. I love my Dad very much and will miss him. Thanks for the support. |
|7/13/02 06:10:45 PM|George Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com||||10|My thoughts and prayers go out to the entire Quarry family regarding the death of James! He was a positive force for all of us in many ways!!

7/14/02 12:12:41 AM | Paul Maduros | midwest | pama42@yahoo.com | 10 | To all the Quarry family, you have my deepest sympathy. I just met James over the net in 1998 and now he's been taken from us all. I just don't understand life. The greatest gift I ever had is being able to tell James how strongly I felt about Jerry and now James has been taken. My biggest regret is that I never got to meet him in person. What a great person James was, I will miss him deeply. God take of you James, we will meet someday.

7/14/02 03:03:20 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10 | It was nice to see the Quarrys yesterday. Jim's service was very good and the family was very nice to me, even though they were missing their loved one. I think Jim was there though, smiling down on his family. Oh by the way, Mike if you read this, I am going to practice up on pool and whip you next time. You had the home field advantage, you are used to the Bakersfield sun.

7/14/02 03:59:06 AM | Evren | London | 10 | Couple of interesting things I heard on Jerry recently...I was watching a tape of Larry Holmes vs Rodney Bobick which was on the undercard of the Thriller in Manila and Ken Norton was the commentator along with Don Dunphy. Don mentioned to Kenny that he was excellent against Jerry to which Norton responded 'I was lucky. I had an excellent night'. I thought that was quite interesting. In another fight Liston vs Clark - Liston mentions in his afterfight interview that he wanted a fight with Jerry Quarry as Jerry had shown a willingness to fight him. Does anyone know if negotiations ever got underway etc..

7/14/02 10:00:38 AM | Bob Bumbera | N.C. | renfbera@aol.com | 10 | I was out of town last week and did not have a chance to log on. My deepest sympathy to all the Quarry's and may James rest in peace.

7/14/02 03:03:29 PM | Slade | Oregon | info@ptctel.com | 10 | Evren, a couple years back there was some postings on this site discussing the issue of a Quarry-Liston fight. There was some very interesting postings. Based on comments made, ideally the fight would have occurred in 1968 - Liston was still strong, but on his way out - and Jerry was on his way up. If I recall correctly though, in reality, the fight did not occur because there was no significant demand for it at the time (circa 1968) - I think it would have been a very interesting fight though.

7/14/02 10:51:17 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 | Dad, I love you and will miss you always. You are the best. Kent, it was nice to meet you at my Father's Services. Now Dad, and Uncle Jerry, are together again, taking care of each other.

7/15/02 07:36:12 PM | Gerry Schultz | Ohio | gschultz@firstam.com | 10 | I just wanted to say I'm truly impressed with the sense of family and mutual support at this site, especially being expressed at this time. I became a fan of Jerry's as a kid who found this athlete as someone I liked more than most others of so many in the early 70's, often reading of his sense of family, of the Quarrys as a whole. I had to age a little myself to appreciate the real value of that. There are, and have been, some great families in sports, not just of families who produce surprising sibling performers, but also of those who sacrifice so that others can be the stars we so much enjoy. Not everyone, especially in this age of glitz, cash and excess, gets just how important family is to everyone, let alone entertainment superstars. I bet even the great Ali must have been truly impressed with the spirit of unity represented by the Quarrys when he first met them. Wins and losses aside, I come away from these recent entries impressed that this family knows that their greatness in supporting one another makes them all a champion, which is how it should be. Quarrys, you represent well.

7/15/02 11:11:06 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | 10 | Gerry, well said! I once read somewhere a writer referring to the Quarrys as a "Steinbeckian clan". I guess he was talking about the "Grapes Of Wrath" novel about Oklahoma families migrating to California during the dust bowl depression days of the 1930's. If so, I can't imagine a greater compliment to the Quarry family! The living conditions of these people, the hardships of their journey, is what produced the tough, close-knit, tenacious families. This kind of American stock is what produces people like Jerry and James Quarry. A few more families like this clan, and maybe the terrorists would leave us alone.

REGARDING JERRY VS. LISTON.LISTON was full of hot air about wanting to fight Jerry. Sonny turned down a Seattle offer from Jack Hurley to fight Boone Kirkman. If he was scared to fight Kirkman, he would have never have messed with Jerry.

My sympathy goes out to all the Quarry's. Steve, you were right in saying that a strong family bond comes from within, and Arwanda (Jimmy's mom) had taught the values family well as did her brother. My mom and the rest of the Tolbert bunch send out sincere condolences!Faye "Tolbert" Sneed

I think Jerry would have had a good chance against a '68 Liston but not against a '58 - '62 Liston...few people would have. The Liston is famous for a couple of things. One was the fantastic beating Wepner took to his face which was so badly cut up that Al Braverman didn't know which one to work on. Secondly, a comment made by Liston after the match...When asked 'Is Wepner the bravest man you have met'. Liston replied 'No, his manager is'. Not reported on so much but clearly visible in the film is that Liston decked the tough Wepner with a body shot.

Has anyone have any old boxing illustrated magazines 1966-1975. I am interested in they monthly ratings of JERRY QUARRY, I have every top ten world rating of JERRY FOR RING MAGAZINE, which i consider they best, but interested where WBA WBC HAD JERRY IN THEIR RATINGS. I HAVE BEEN TOLD THEY OFFICIAL RATING COMMITTEE was they WBA, during QUARRY'S TIME. THANKS FOR THE HELP!

I'm very sorry for using the website for voicing my opinion and I will never let it happen again...all of us fans want to keep this website going for James and Jerry's memory...and I don't want to be the cause of it shutting down....
No none of this matters, you just have to Love them. bye Jim
Mr. Dorsey I have the magazines in question, please give me a couple of more days I will go thru them.]

| 7/17/02 08:57:10 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | | 10 | Johnny Q, the old Joe Frazier's gym website is gone but there is a new site at www.joefrazier.com. It looks like it is still under construction but I don't see a letter section yet. I hope they have one there as we had some interesting dicussions there. Besides where else have I ever been so popular? I was so loved by the posters over there! HA! HA! HA! For some strange reason, I kind of miss some of the comments that were regularly sent my way by my "friends." I HAVE BEEN RESISTING GIVING BOTH BARRELS TO A CERTAIN INDIVIDUAL WHO HAS RECENTLY SHOWED UP HERE AND I THINK I WILL CONTINUE TO IGNORE THIS PERSON AND I HOPE EVERYONE ELSE WILL DO THE SAME. |

| 7/18/02 03:31:25 AM | Evren | London | | 10 | All I can say Kent is that if people have such strong feelings and want everyone to know about them they could at least identify themselves, but that is the way cowards work...ignorant and without a backbone. None of us are perfect and if I wanted to say anything to anyone my name would be at the bottom of it... |

| 7/18/02 09:21:20 AM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | sabrinaquarryporter@aol.com | | 10 | well i must say i agree with those people on what they said about my aunt and grandmother because it is the truth.you guys don't know my family very well and i guess thats a good thing...all they do is talk bad about people behind their backs...even after my father was buried, Arwanda was talking crap about my step mom Brandi until someone stepped in and told her to stop...it's pretty sad that people can do these things.My father would not be happy to hear this stuff...But as they say everyone is entitled to their opinion, we don't have to agree with it just deal with it....Kent thanks again for coming to the service it really meant alot...DAD AND JERRY I LOVE AND MISS YOU BOTH VERY MUCH!!!!ALWAYS IN MY HEART!!!!KEEP PUNCHING!!!!! |

| 7/18/02 10:47:36 AM | Selina (Quarry) Parrini | Hemet | res0x41t@verizon.net | | 10 | I want to thank every one who came to my Dad's services, we appreciated the support. Everyone is entitled to their opinion, be it good or bad, We do not have to agree with it. This site was started for a specific reason, let us keep that reason going. Thank you for the support!! |

| 7/18/02 11:01:57 AM | Sonia Hathaway(Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | | 10 | YOU GO GIRLS! WE'LL ALWAYS LOVE YOU DAD & MISS YOU, UNCLE JERRY, YOU TOO. LET'S KEEP THIS SITE GOING FOR THEIR SAKE. |

| 7/18/02 12:04:20 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | | 10 | Sabrina, my main objection to the person or persons bringing up negative comments about your family members is the timing. I obviously don't know anything about the family conflicts, every family has them. I just thought that since your dad had just passed away that it was the wrong time to air differences. Of course I don't know anything about your grandmother saying something about your step-mother. It is best I stay out of your family business anyway. P.S. I hope you got the message I sent you that your dad had sent me. |

| 7/18/02 01:23:30 PM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | sabrinaquarryporter@aol.com | | 10 | Yes Kent i got your email and i thank you very much...We all miss Our Father, and it is just hard to understand why family members treat other family members the way they do....But enough of that sappy stuff....Lets keep Dad and Jerry's dream going on this website.... |

| 7/18/02 03:28:06 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | ronnyrains@yahoo.com | | 10 | THANK YOU BRENDA QUARRY WAS THAT YOU, WITH JIMMY AND JERRY, ON THE PHIL DONAHUE SHOW??THEY ONLY BOXING ILLUSTRATED FOR 1966 WAS THEY NOVEMBER ISSUE, AND JERRY WAS RATED 22ND, IT WAS RIGHT AFTER HIS DEFEAT TO MACHEN, WHO WAS 11TH,I AM A YOUNG SPRY 42 WITH NO GREY, BUT I CAN REMEMBER WHEN JQ SANG "BY THE TIME I GET TO PHOENIX" ON THE MERV GRIFFIN SHOW,
Hey Jimmy Dorsey, where did you see that show with the Quarrys' on it? I definitely would spend money to get that tape! Anyone have an observations or opinion on Liston's hand speed or quickness? I'd have to give the edge in power, especially the left jab, to Liston. I based this, (wrong or right), on their common opponent, Floyd Patterson. Didn't Liston have an unusually long reach, increasing the effectiveness of his jab? Without knowing much about Liston's boxing ability, I'd give him the edge over Jerry just based on pure power.

Hey Kent, so what was Mike Quarry like? How is he holding up? Have the years been kind to him? Weren't you just a little afraid about shooting pool with him? Did you lose on purpose? Just kidding.

Steve, Mike seems to be doing well. He is making every effort to stay physically and mentally as sharp as he can be. As those that have met him will tell you, Mike is a funny guy. He was joking around with me doing his Muhammed Ali impression (I remember seeing Jerry do this also on a T.V. program). No I didn't lose to Mike in pool on purpose. He wouldn't respect me if I did. I am just not a good pool player. Robert Quarry also looks to be in good shape. I will tell you, both surviving Quarry brothers are in shape, trim and fit. A lot of us could take a lesson from them in fitness, myself included. I am still on the wrong side of 300 pounds but am working to solve that problem.

Steve, nothing really earth shaking about boxing was said. Of course the subject came up in conversation but the only thing I remember Mike saying about it was he thinks Bob Foster would have knocked out Mike Rossman and also Roy Jones Jr. One other thing, I do know that the Quarrys prefer Elvis Presley to the Beatles. I mentioned that I had Jerry years ago and he and I had discussed music as Jerry was a good singer and I am one also (although I never got further than the bar bands). When I said that I had told Jerry that I liked the Beatles better than Elvis, several Quarrys all said Elvis by far is better. That was Jerry's opinion also. Mike also said Jerry's son, Jerry Jr, kind of looks like Elvis and he does a little bit as did Jerry Sr. I personally think Jerry Sr. would have had a good chance to be a star in the entertainment business, singing or acting, if he had pursued it full time.

Steve: NO STEVE I DO NOT HAVE A TAPE OF JERRY SINGING ON MERV GRIFFITH, I WAS 12 AND LIVING IN KERN COUNTY, IF JQ WAS NOT SO RUGGED YOU WOULD HAVE NEVER KNOWN THAT HE WAS EVEN A FIGHTER, HE SURE HAD CHARISMA, A SHAME HE WAS TOO TOUGH FOR HIS OWN GOOD, I THINK 25TH OF ALL TIME WOULD BE A FAIR ASSESSMENT OF JERRY'S TALENTS, AND YES I THINK SONNY LISTON/QUARRY WOULD HAVE BEEN A WAR. IN SAY 1969, ANY EARLIER I WOULD HAVE TO GO WITH SONNY AND THAT DAMN JAB. JERRY NEVER DUCKED SONNY HE JUST DID NOT HAVE THE TITLE. TAKE CARE.

FOLKS; I REALLY DO NOT HAVE ANY COMMENTS, ON THE BICKERING OF THIS GREAT SITE, AND LATELY ITS BEEN GOOD, REMEMBER THIS SITE IS FOR LADIES AND GENTLEMAN, AND SOME COMMENTS WILL ONLY COME BACK TO HURT YOURSELF.

Uncle Jerry had a wonderful singing voice. I remember him singing alot to us kids when we were little.. And my Dad sang a song "Daddy Cool" and it fit perfect because he will always be OUR DADDY COOL!!!! I LOVE YOU DAD FOREVER!!!!!!

It is interesting to hear of Jerry's other interests and talents. No one, of course, is one-dimensional, though I get the feeling JQ's die was cast as early as age five. I think I'd read somewhere was he was a pretty fair baseball player also. I think if he'd arrived today instead of 1966 or so, Jerry might well have had a better chance to see how well he could act or sing. While we've all had our chances on the subject, again, I feel more than a few of Ring's Top heavies are in groups side-by-side, with Jerry in a cluster of six or so outstanding guys between #15-20. If he'd been a little bigger, had boxed more and resisted the brawl a little, and defended more, he'd have a belt, then where would you put him? Many champions have said so. How many heavies since his time have been clearly better? Pretty few, in my opinion.

Gerry, you're right. James claimed that Jerry excelled at everything he touched athletically. He hit a hefty .375 in 2 years of American Legion Ball and could drive a golf ball 300 yards down the middle of a fairway. And he was far from being one-dimensional. Apart from his singing ability, he had a fine mind and capacious vocabulary. His mother, Arwanda, said he could scan a financial sheet and instantly spot an error. He had rare mathematical acumen and a photographic memory. Randy Gordon, the former editor of Ring magazine, told me it was uncanny the way Jerry habitually knocked off the New York Times crossword in less time than a four-round prelim. He certainly put the lie to the stereotype of prizefighters as crude, unthinking louts. As you so ably put it, the die was indeed cast early on. Despite the shroud of dementia that enveloped Jerry in his last years, there were moments of lucidity. He prided himself above all on what he had been, a prizefighter, and he was a damn good one at that. The fact that he couldn't quite crack the heavyweight quinella of his day - Ali and Frazier - means little in the grand scheme of things. Dante wrote: "The victory lies in the struggle." Reflect on this for a moment: you're a youngster and have been diagnosed with a life-threatening illness, nephritis. Doctors declare your chances of survival are no better than 50/50. If you're lucky enough to survive, the remaining days of your abbreviated life will be spent as a semi-invalid. In a dozen years, you're a top-flight heavyweight contender and you remain so for a half-dozen more. That is a jaw-dropping feat. It was only one of many hurdles Jerry overcame. Dante's saying is a fitting epitaph for both Jerry and his brother, the co-founder of TJQF, James Quarry.
Ali over Holyfield easily, you might as well give him the title now. Ali's gifts were numerous, the height when on his toes, the rope-like reach, weight at least even or above most of the competition of his time, mental edges, I could go on and on. Holyfield was great at Jerry's weight, and clearly a very good fighter, but nowhere near what he was made out to be at his peak. He would have to be much better defensively for Ali. He'd probably try to head-butt Ali! He never honestly beat Tyson, could not handle a prime Bowe or Lewis. Jerry vs. Evander would be a better match.

Muhammed Ali outpoints Evander Holyfield over the distance on the basis of better defense, footwork, reach, and hand speed. We Quarry fans have at times been accused of being biased in favor of Jerry but we have shown more objectivity than we are given credit for by voting Jerry out of the all time tournament on his own website (although he did well to get to the final 16 out of 64).

Paul Droulet: You are right Jerry was very good at a lot of things, they 1974 SUPERSTARS, (NOT 1975). Jerry did so good he earned enough points to be called back, set records in bowling and baseball hitting, second in golf and went out at 220lbs in the lifting, finished second in the bike race. (no one seems to have a tape of it). But it was filmed right after JQ KO OF SHAVES. He was in shape and there to win, TAKE CARE.

I remember Jerry on the Superstars too. I think it was the same one that Joe Frazier sunk to the bottom of the pool and needed help getting out. Jerry was an athlete, Joe was a prizefighter. I also recall other shows, Ernie Shavers coming in second to O.J. in the 100 yard dash and Foreman's epic battle with Greg Pruitt in weight lifting. I almost forgot that show. Ali vs. Holyfield. Ali KO's Evander in 8. Holyfield was (is) not a big banger, Evander would press Ali early, Ali circles and jabs, the endless jabs. Holyfield try's the classic "Atlanta Headbutt". (I've heard rumors he opened a school to teach it to welterweights). Ali gets pissed, a whirl of punches and the fight over. Evander doesn't have the power to neutralize Ali's speed. If you don't have it against Ali, you're doomed. Sabrina, I feel for you. I lost my Mother and Sister within a year and my dad's not doing well. Life goes on, but it's never quite the same. You are in my prayers.

I have the tape of Jerry on the Superstar's when he is in the bike race. It looks like he has a chance to win the race - then a fellow cuts him off (he may even bump him) and slow him a bit. Jerry hops off the bike after the race and tracks the fellow down who cut him off and jokingly with his fists in the air says "Hey, how about you and me go 3 or 4 rounds...". Keith Jackson interviews him and they show some clips of his fights - Jerry tells Keith that if he doesn't get a Title fight within the year, he will probably hang up his gloves. Jerry is in a swimming contest, but this is not the one where Frazier swims. I got a copy of the tape from a fellow named (if I recall correctly): Kent Noltimier in Minnesota. As I recall, he had most of Jerry fights on tape (as well as other fighters). I paid him to put a few fights and a VHS tape for me. If you need his phone number, let me know and I'll email it to you.

THANK YOU ALL FOR YOUR THOUGHTS AND PRAYERS...THIS IS A VERY DIFFICULT TIME FOR US KIDS BUT SOMEHOW SOMEWAY WE WILL GET THROUGH IT, I HOPE...BUT YOUR THOUGHTS AND PRAYERS REALLY MEAN ALOT.....|

CALIFORNIA] [RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM] [10] Dear Slade: I have a tape of that one it was they 1975 version: JERRY Q. was not near as competitive on that one, as the one in 1974, and the 1974 superstars, had better atheletes, i think one big difference, was 74' he had just ko'd SHAVERS ( WHO BY THE WAY RAN A 10.5 HUNDRED IN THE SUPERSTARS) AND WAS IN SHAPE AND ON A HIGH, AND THE 75' VERSION, HE HAD NOT FUGHT IN 8 MONTHS AFTER THE SECOND FRAZIER LOSS, AND MAYBE ON A LOW. THEY IRONIC THING,IS MOE (JIMMY) TOLD ME JERRY WOULD HAVE WON THE WHOLE THING IF THEY WOULD HAVE HAD IT IN 1969.WOULD HAVE LOVED TO HAVE SEEN IT.|

Ali takes Holyfield rather easily, piling up the points round after round and finishing with a flurry to win by late round TKO. Holyfield would be scrappy, but simply outgunned. He would try to pressure Ali ala Smokin' Joe, but wouldn't succeed. He would just get jabbed to death and pounded as he bored in. |

They showed last night on ESPN classic Muhammed Ali verses Joe Frazier 3 and Ali/Quarry 2. The Thrilla In Manila is always worth watching but once again it is disappointing that the only fight they ever show featuring Jerry is Ali/Quarry 2, of course not one of Jerry's better performances. |

Very interesting Superstars stuff... In mentioning again Ali- Quarry, and our current Ali-Holyfield, good points are made regarding what it took to really challenge this guy. Opponents would almost surrender speed, height, movement. Regardless of their package, they would have to pursue, get inside, slip, eat jabs. Frazier, of course, was great at this, and was the only one to really put dents in this guy's smile, which I enjoyed. Ali had to get arrogant and slip up for a cunning boxer like Jerry to seize on him, which he nearly did. Jerry bullied Frazier in their first fight in the first two rounds, and was amazing, I think. This was his best chance against Ali, who might then be inclined to play into JQ's counterpunching by pursuing. Jerry showed Ali a great deal of respect, and did not build up in training to be the "Frazier type" to slug him. You're right, this fight is overplayed, but for Ali fans and the race angle. You have to be a boxing fan to know how good Jerry was, which is too bad. But if their fight had turned to where Ali had to exchange and box JQ, the better side of Jerry's game would've been displayed. He just couldn't put Ali in that positon.|

We need to get a letter campaign together to ESPNCL. Coming up is Jerry's fight with Norton; another example of using Jerry's losing efforts for the ratings game. They use to show the Jerry v Earnie Shavers fight, until Classic Sports was bought out by ESPN. That's when it became, all too often, the Ali & opponents show. I'm going to petition them to show Jerry v Shavers, Foster, Lyle, Bodell, Frazier 1 and others.|

That is a good idea to lobby ESPN to show other fights besides the same old tired ones we have seen a million times. I am looking forward to watching Jerry verses Norton though because I only have parts of it on my highlight tape and that fight was a good one even though Jerry lost.|

ok here goes, we are trying to find the lyrics or even the record "Daddy Who Daddy Cool" by Robie Porter, its a song our father sang to us when we were kids, tried to find it for his services, but couldn't. So thought maybe someone out there could help. Dad, we love & miss you so much, its so hard to believe that you are not with us any more. Uncle Jerry, we love & miss you also. Take care of each other. | unanimous but not landslide decision over the real deal. The next matchup sees George Foreman take on Ezzard Charles.

I don't know if it is the same song but the flip side of "Silhouettes" by The Rays is called "Daddy Cool." According to the Billboard book of top 40 hits, it was released in 1957. Ezzard Charles may stay away from Foreman for a while but I pick big George to catch him by the fourth round for a knockout.

Ezzard Charles may stay away from Foreman for a while but I pick big George to catch him by the fourth round for a knockout.

I have to pick George here. Charles was a better all round fighter than Foreman, If Ez were a bigger guy he'd clean George's clock, but I don't see a 185 pound guy standing up to Foreman's power. Although EZ, in his prime, would be tough to beat, and George the First was usually exhausted after 6 rounds. I'll say George wins a 12 round decesion, a close one.

I have to pick George here. Charles was a better all round fighter than Foreman, If Ez were a bigger guy he'd clean George's clock, but I don't see a 185 pound guy standing up to Foreman's power. Although EZ, in his prime, would be tough to beat, and George the First was usually exhausted after 6 rounds. I'll say George wins a 12 round decesion, a close one.

I have the Miteff fight and Jerry doesn't get knocked down if I recall correctly.
My apologies Paul for seeming to pile on but, Jerry was decked in the first Patterson fight, which was scored a draw. Jim Quarry said in a post here once, that Jerry was not really hit with a solid punch and that the knockdown was really a slip. If this was the case, then Jerry would have won the first Patterson fight.

I agree Joe - didn't see Quarry take a count in that one!

Wasn't Jerry decked by Memphis Al Jones?

I believe Jerry was decked and in real trouble against Al before knocking him out in the 5th. No tape of that one is available.

So it was Jones and not Miteff who knocked Jerry down. Thanks for setting me straight, Joe. |

Never say never when looking for old fight tapes - it's amazing what turns up.

Jerry Quarry scored a 12 round TKO over Thad Spencer in the semi finals of the WBA tournament to crown a successor to Muhammad Ali, who was stripped of the heavyweight title. Jerry scored two knockouts in the fight, one by a left hook in the fourth round and one by a right hand in the tenth round. Jerry stopped Spencer with seconds remaining in the fight with a barrage of punches that had Spencer helpless. EVREN, I GOT THE EARNIE SHAVERS TAPE. THANKS, IT IS GREAT.

Jerry Quarry was knocked down a total of 6 times, twice in the third round against "MEMHIS JONES" were he lost 4 teeth and a broken jaw, only to kayo JONES IN THE 4TH, A PECULIAR CALIFORNIA RULE, WENT IN THE BOOKS AS KO-5, BECAUSE IT WAS AFTER THE 4TH ROUND BELL (very strange rule). Then the slip vs PATTERSON, THEY CHUVALO DEBACLE, ALEXANDER, 2ND "smokin" JOE FRAZIER. THEY RUFUS BRASSELL BOUT, DID NOT GO IN THE BOOKS AS A OFFICIAL KNOCKDOWN, FOR IT WAS AFTER THE BELL. ONCE BEATEN RUFUS(at THE TIME). HIT THE DECK FOR A LONG TIME THE NEXT ROUND, COURTESY OF A VERY POTENT LEFT HOOK BY A VERY ENRAGED "IRISHMAN".

KENT: VERY KNOWLEDGEABLE COMMENT, on they PATTERSON/QUARRY ist bout, Many people think they 2nd bout was so controversial, how about JERRY'S 2 POINT ROUND SLIP, VS FLOYD AT THE COLISEUM. No one talks about that one, EVEN FLOYD said it was a slip, still say CORLETTI BOUT at the forum knuck,knock, knuck, and leslie BORDON BOUT at WOODLAND HILLS, MIKE AND MIKE NIXON'S old stomping grounds, TAKE CARE.

OKAY IM GETTING A LITTLE LONG WINDED. ONE THING I KNOW I RESEARCHED IT EVEN AMAZED MOE(MR.JIMMY) IS THAT JERRY WAS IN RING MAGAZINES TOP 8 (NEVER 9TH OR 10TH) 87 MONTHS, AND WOULD HAVE BEEN 93, IF NOT FOR A 6 MONTH RETIREMENT HE WAS RATED #1 (4) #2 (10) #3 (20) #4 (29) #5 (8) #6 (6) #7 (6) #8 (4), IM SURE THEY W.B.A RATED JERRY EVEN BETTER, FOR THEY DID NOT RECOGNIZE ALI.

I'd seen, elsewhere on the internet, that Ring Magazine had JQ in the top 10 from 1967-1974, except for 1972, I think. That is exceptional staying power in such a brutal sport, which says volumes to me not just about his talent, but his toughness. For folks on the outside, boxing appeared to be Frazier and Ali, and a faceless pack until Foreman and Norton gained credibility by beating both, and Holmes took over later. Quarry, other than being the White Hope who almost did, did not get the public respect those five champions got. But what he did accomplish, what he gave, what he had, and the damn good fighters he did beat, I'm glad it's not as much a secret now as it once was. I hope this is not a stupid question: "The Great White Hype", with Samuel L. Jackson, is playing somewhere on cable. Is this flick a swipe at Jerry?

---

DEAR GERRY; YES THAT RING MAGAZINE THING, WAS YEARLY RATINGS, WHICH DID NOT REFLECT THEY ENTIRE YEAR, CASE IN POINT, from FEB 72 RING MAGAZINE TO AUG 72 RING MAGAZINE, JERRY QUARRY WERE THEY NO.2 CONTENDER, SEP 72 ISSUE HE WAS MOVED DOWN TO #4(2ND LOSS TO ALI). AND OCT 72 #5 then he annouced his 6 month retirement at a press conference. ELIMINATING HIS SELF FROM 1972 YEARLY RATINGS. FROM SEP 67 TO JUNE 75 RING MAGAZINE ONLY HAD 37 TOTAL HEAVYWEIGHTS, YOU REALLY EARNED YOUR RATING WITH RING MAGAZINE, IRONICALLY THEY GOVERNING BODY W.B.A PROBABLY HAD TWICE THAT MANY, EVEN RON STANDER AND TERRY DANIELS, TOUGH GUYS BUT THEY NEVER BEAT A CONTENDER, THIS IS ONE REASON ALTHOUGH I LIKED DUANE BOBICK, HE NEVER BEAT A TOP TENER.

---

In an excellent match up the smaller Charles takes the fight with the Gregorio Peralta-Foreman match in mind. He aims to use his speed and cunningness to take George into the latter rounds. The first two stanzas see the viscious Foreman deck Charles twice only for Ezzard to get up each time shaking his head "I'm alright". In the third and fourth as Foreman tires Charles begins opening up and landing razor sharp combinations making the big guy look pedestrian. As round 7 enters Charles begins to take the lead, boxing, bouncing and slipping punches. It's all going the way of the underdog until a sneaky in close left hand renders Charles almost senseless, guard down against the ropes. A suddenly energised Foreman measures up the 'Cincinatti Cobra' and unleashes a frightening torrent of savage hooks. the ref jumps in as Ezzard crumples to the ground for the count of 70.(in the next round Joe Frazier takes on Mike Tyson.)

---

Tyson and Frazier would be a war. The difference between the fighters was heart because both would hurt each other. Frazier would out gut Tyson who never won a fight where someone stood up to him. Frazier by KO in 6|

---

I also think Tyson verses Frazier would be a war but I think Tyson would be too strong for Joe so I pick Tyson by knockout in the third round.

---

FRAZIER 1969, BY 6TH ROUND OR LESS KNOCKOUT, WHO'S THE LAST PUNCHER TYSON EVER BEAT, THAT DID NOT KNOCK HIM OUT????????????????HE MISSED BOWE, MERCER, MORRISON, WITHERSPOON, TOO ONLY NAME A FEW.

---

I just don't think the competition Tyson faced in his heyday match up well against the guys Frazier fought, Quarry, Bonavena, Jimmy Ellis, Eddie Machen. Compared to Razor Ruddick, Trever Berbick, Michael Spinks. Can you compare thier opponents in thier first defeats? George Foreman and Buster Douglas? How strong was Tyson? He got outmuscled by Evander Hollyfield! I think it would be an exciting fight, with Tyson probably getting to Frazier and shaking him or maybe dropping him once or twice in the first three rounds. I also see Frazier moving Tyson all over the ring and hurting him inside with body shots and uppercuts. Tyson had very fast hands and threw beautiful, multi-punch combinations. Frazier, however, had great upper body movement and was very difficult to hit cleanly. Joe would stay in Tyson's chest and smother most of those combos. In rounds four and five, Tyson starts getting frustrated and wearing down. He loses his concentration and starts to slow up and hesitate just a little bit. As soon as Frazier feels this, [I've heard Frazier called, "a truth machine"], he would turn up the pressure and the pace. By round seven he'd be picking his shots and methodically battering Tyson. The fight is stopped at the end of seven, Frazier wins by TKO.

The big difference between Frazier and Tyson was that FRAZIER HAD HEART. He got up six or seven times against Foreman. No other man alive could have or would have got up again and again to face that onslaught. Joe would have knocked him out in about 7 rounds.

Evren, I like your take on the Foreman-Charles fight. Charles was a very crafty boxer, one of the best heavies ever. He was even better as a lightweight. Frazier-Tyson. Tyson's hands and feet are quicker than Joe's, he has a bit more power and out weighs Joe by 12 or 13 pounds. But, Mike loses it when he is attacked. He would hurt Joe for sure, Joe in the late 60's was not easy to hit with a clean shot, Ali was one of the few to land solid combinations on him. Mike had the uppercut to do some damage, and the hand speed to maybe knock Joe down. And Joe was not a fast starter like Tyson so the first couple rounds would be shaky for Frazier. But I think Joe was just too tough for Mike to beat. I'll go along with a 7th round TKO for Frazier. Hey Steve, although Holyfield was not a massive heavyweight he was very strong, he stood up to Bowe and Lewis, and Rahman all very big very strong heavies. If Evander had a true heavyweight KO punch, he would be a lot higher on the alltime top ten list. I lived in Atlanta for 20 years and have seen him around quite a bit, never really liked him that much but I do respect what he did in the ring. He is one tough cookie and I would give him a shot at any former heavy champ. He might not win, but it would be a war.
Hey Bob the rambling man, [formerly from N.J.] I agree with you totally on Evander Hollyfield. I didn't mean that he was a weak heavyweight, quite the opposite. He did stand in there and held his own against bigger guys. With Tyson however, Hollyfield seemed to be much stronger of the two. He stopped all of Tyson's charges cold, without backing up very much. It seemed to me he outmuscled and moved Tyson around much more easily than he did Bowe or Lewis. So how strong does this make Tyson? Overall size and strength does not allways equate with a knockout punch, example Oscar Bonavena. That's why I feel Frazier would be able to get Tyson going backwards after the first few very dangerous rounds. Look at the Chuvallo vs Frazier fight. When Chuvallo tried to bull Frazier into the ropes, Frazier would grab him and spin him around, and then hit him!

Steve, you are right about Joe Frazier's strength. Interesting story that I heard about the Frazier/Chuvallo fight; that before the fight, the two fighters armed wrestled and Chuvallo beat Joe both right handed and left handed. Joe was embarrased and took it out on Chuvallo in the ring. I think what I meant about Tyson being stronger than Frazier was his punching power and I can see Joe charging into Tyson like he did against Foreman in their first fight and Tyson catching Joe early before Joe was fully warmed up, like Foreman did. It was because of styles and the fact the Joe was always a slow starter and would be vunerable to the Tyson power early that makes me think Tyson would win by early knockout. Jerry was also very strong for a small heavyweight. The way he threw either Thad Spencer or Mac Foster, I can't remember which, to one side to give him a better punching angle leading up to stopping his opponent showed how strong Jerry was.

Hey Kent, that's a great little anecdote about Frazier and Chuvallo arm wrestling. That's the kind of info I really enjoy picking up. It seems as though a few of you guys, Paul Drolet and Jimmy Dorsey and yourself, have alot of good insider information. As for Tyson vs Frazier, I think you and I will have to agree to disagree. Your right about the possibility of Tyson getting Frazier early and cold. However, it only happened to Frazier against one guy, The monster, known as George Forman. Forman was so much bigger and stronger that it looked like they belonged in different weight classes. I am of the opinion that Forman would have controlled the smaller Tyson and battered him much as he did Frazier. Here's a question for everyone's opinion. Is there a difference between a heavy handed puncher and a sharp, high velocity hitter like Quarry? Who was a more effective ko artist, a Quarry or a Forman?

Steve, no problem. I'm only in Texas till Tuesday then it's back to Charlotte. George Foreman would destroy Mike Tyson, 5 rounds tops. George was just too strong for him. A common opponent? My old head-buddy Evander Holyfield. I read an article in SI a loooong time ago about an arm-wrestling champ who was a sparring partner for Rocky Marciano. I can't remember his name, he said he and other sparring partners would beat The Rock arm-wrestling all the time, he didn't seem that strong outside the ring. But inside, when he hit you, you wanted to run for your life. Guy's who can hit like that, the Ernie Shavers, Tysons, Bob Fosters of the world will have a better KO percentage than a more accurate guy most of the time. If nothing else it won't take them as long to do the job. There are a lot of big strong guy's, people who can pick you up and toss you across the room, when it come to punching power they just don't have it. Of course there are those that do like George Foreman. Foreman will cream guy's like Frazier and Tyson every time. Put him in against Ali, Young, Larry Holmes accurate guy's who'll pick you apart and he'll lose. I guess it's all about styles, and who can take a punch. Ali-Foreman, Leonard-Hearns. Who's the harder hitter and who can take a better punch. Ok I'm getting long winded, it's time to get back to work.

Yes, it is all about styles. Ali beat Foreman and Norton beat Ali (although Norton caught Jerry on the way down), Frazier doing it twice, but Jerry would have had a better chance of beating Foreman than either Frazier or Norton. I don't think Jerry could have ever beaten Ali unless he was in his prime and Ali was over the hill like against Leon Spinks. Ali won almost every round against Jerry in both fights and Lyle and Shavers came close to beating Ali and both lost to Jerry.

Jerry gave Ali too much respect & he never really pressed the attack, preferring mostly to counterpunch. Foreman ducked Jerry for very good reasons, he said, "I dodged him purposely." He goes on to say about Jerry, "He chose to go toe to toe with Ellis & Frazier.....if he had only switched tactics, he would have been the Heavyweight Champion of the World." AND, geocities.com says a fantasy Lewis - Quarry match has Lewis' jab being counter well by Jerry's counterpunching. Jerry would stay busy throughout the fight and steal some close rounds. Prediction....Quarry by split decision.

Boxing News and the BBC in England proved with the original film footage and radio footage for the Cooper-Clay fight in 1963 that the time in between rounds was around 60 seconds give or take a couple. It has been proved that this story of a long gap in between rounds was a myth that has grown and grown over the years. Apparently (according to him) Angelo did help the tear along a little but this did not give them more time. That is what I read and I remember Boxing News have asked that's this issue be dead and buried as it is untrue. Ali would have beaten him regardless of the bell going anyway - he was the Black Superman.

Pick your poison.

Steve, by way of an answer to your question on whether there is a difference between a heavy hitter like Foreman, and a sharp, high velocity puncher, here's what the uncontested authority on taking a punch, George Chuvalo, once said when asked to compare Frazier and Foreman: " When Frazier hit you, it was like being rammed by a Chevy at 100 miles an hour; with Foreman, it was like being hit by a semi at 50." Pick your poison.

EVREN: I WILL TAKE YOUR WORD FOR IT, FOR I REALLY DO NOT KNOW THE DETAILS, FROM WHAT I HEARD THE BELL SAVED ALI, WHO TOOK A REAL GOOD LEFT HOOK FROM "ENERY"! AND WAS NOT AT ALL IN GOOD SHAPE, SO ANGIE TORE THE GLOVE AND THEY HAD A HARD TIME GETTING ANOTHER ONE TO THE RING, I DID NOT READ THIS IN A MAGAZINE, I WAS TOLD BY AN VERY ADEPT OLT TIMER, BUT I KNOW HOW STORIES CAN GET BENT WAY OUT OF PROPORTION. TAKE MIKE TYSON FOR INSTANCE.

Thanks everyone for keeping this going!  Dad, and Interesting stuff about strength and punching power. Arm wrestling, of course, is concentrated strength. Throwing a punch, or a baseball, requires a series of things, like leverage, or coordination of the related muscle groups. There are major league pitchers who couldn't do 30 pushups but can throw 90mph. Punchers like Marciano and Frazier got power out of their shoulder motion in the way they threw that arm-strong guys like Chuvalo didn't have. As with the 'Superstars' entries earlier, Jerry proved to be a very good all-around athlete, who became a great boxer by virtue of his intense training and experience. Frazier was good at little else, but had the gift of his 'fastball' or punching ability to be the legend he became. Without it, Jerry would have beaten him. Good stuff about styles also regarding the 70's heavies JQ, Foreman, Norton, etc. Joe proved to be better than Jerry, but would not fare as well vs. Foreman, Joe much better vs. Ali than Jerry. All of these six (Ali, Frazier, Foreman, JQ, Norton, Holmes) showed to be of championship caliber. It was simply a matter of who fought who when, and in what order. Hasn't been that way in quite a while.

Gerry, you are so right about the motion of the shoulder and the coordination of muscle groups being the basis for a good power punch. We hear people say to put your shoulder into a punch but it doesn't mean using shoulder power because that would be just an arm punch. It means to turn the shoulder in coordination with the hips and the legs, which are the anchor to true punching power, putting the whole body weight behind the punch. By relying on the shoulders and arms alone a fighter actually loses power because he can be too tense in the shoulder area. The shoulders need to stay relax.

Well Dad this is my first birthday without you and Mom...Boy is this hard. but i know you're watching over me wishing me a happy birthday....I LOVE AND MISS YOU VERY MUCH....ALWAYS IN MY HEART FOREVER....

Tyson vs Frazier is such a hard one. The Frazier of 70/71 was one of the most complete fighters I have seen - It's all a matter of whether Joe can survive the initial 2 round on slaught and my guess is he'll know what's coming and play smart and then out tough Tyson down the stretch. I here Mike is fighting again in November possibly against Clifford Ettiene ! Anyway the last match of the quarters sees Joe Louis take on Sonny Liston.

Louis vs Liston would have been a great fight. Someone on this site recently stated that "the difference between Frazier and Tyson was that Frazier had more heart". Tyson has been accused of having a bully's mentality, and so has Liston. I do think that both fighters relied heavily on intimidating their opponents. I do not believe Liston ever faced anyone even close to the physical skill level of Joe Louis. Liston was a great fighter and probably belongs in the top 20 heavyweights. That said, I still think Louis was quicker, a better combination puncher, tougher, and may have hit just as hard as Liston. I pick Joe Louis by TKO in eleven or twelve rounds.

In my last post I forgot to factor in Sonny Liston's very long armed, accurate and powerful jab. This would not have changed the outcome of the fight but would have made it even more exciting. A question for everyone's analysis, who had the most effective jab of all era's? Effective meaning it played a large part in the fighter's victory. In terms of speed, accuracy, and power, and ability to cause damage, cuts, swelling, etc.

In my last post I forgot to factor in Sonny Liston's very long armed, accurate and powerful jab. This would not have changed the outcome of the fight but would have made it even more exciting. A question for everyone's analysis, who had the most effective jab of all era's? Effective meaning it played a large part in the fighter's victory. In terms of speed, accuracy, and power, and ability to cause damage, cuts, swelling, etc.

Just watched on ESPN Classic Jerry verses Norton and Jerry verses Frazier 2. We have recently discussed that Jerry was on the way down when he fought Norton and was not in his best condition but still gave Norton a good fight, in the first three rounds at least. In Frazier/Quarry 2, Jerry boxed very well in the first round but seemed to abandon a good plan of moving and counter punching after that. It made for some great action of Jerry and Frazier going toe to toe, it became a war, but Frazier was in complete control by round four on the way to a fifth round TKO win. Did Jerry go away from his plan of boxing instead of slugging because as the announcer said, Frazier would not let him move or was it because Jerry was stubborn and chose to slug it out with Frazier? I think it may have been a combination of both.

I just recently watched Joe Frazier vs. Ron Stander on ESPN, after two rounds it was tough to watch. I give Joe a lot of credit for the way he trained, his courage and attitude as a fighter, and how well grounded he was/is out of the ring. During their day, I cheered for both he and Jerry about equally because he came across well as a good guy and an overachiever. But I do not see him beating Tyson, a harder, quicker puncher who could do Joe like Foreman did. Joe would be tougher and more skilled, but also easier to hit. While I prefer Joe, I have to be honest... As for Liston/Louis, I do feel Joe was the fighter of the century because of the way he conducted himself, that he united people in a tumultuous era, and he stood for the country even when it did not for him. Again, I have to pick the villain, Liston, though. Joe, from the waist down, was like most fighters of his era, not mobile, but was a punching machine from the waist up. Liston was bigger, stronger, very intimidating and just as methodical, plus he had that ridiculous jab, which required a movement fighter, an Ali, to avoid. The good guys lose both of these, in my opinion. Great fantasy bouts, though.

Also, to answer Kent and Steve, I feel Jerry had two real flaws in an otherwise outstanding package, 1) low hands 2) an instinct to brawl that squashed good tactical opportunities. He had Frazier early in their first fight, and figured that he could continue to push and trade with him. The Norton fight shows flashes of what Jerry could have done if they'd fought sooner, but does not come close to prime vs. prime, which is about even. I think if you want to look at a fighter who built a great game around the jab, Larry Holmes might be the guy. Ali was amazing, but also had so many other weapons. Holmes really managed his opponents with the jab, I think.

I agree, Jerry held his hands low, even when he punched, he'd hold em' low and punch again, (mac Foster). I personally think both he and Frazier would have given "Iron" Mike tyson, all sorts of hell, Tyson's intimidation factor would not be in effect, "Iron" or aluminum, Always lose's in that aspect Where larry holmes, was the most underrated CHAMP, "Aluminum Mike" was the most overated, back to where JQ carried his hands low, he must have been comfortable with it. He sure won his share of bouts, same as his age at his untimely death (53).

In Frazier 2 Joe threw too many right hands that Jerry did not expect to see. Joe was real sharp that night, maybe the best complete fight of his career because he used both hands effectively. Jerry looked like he slapped with his right hand against Frazier and Norton. Looked like the only thing he wanted to throw was a left hook.

As expressed earlier, Holmes was and is a very underrated Champion. He beat whoever they put in front of him. They lined up the ducks and he knocked them down. He had a jab that rivaled Liston's and Ali's, plus great boxing ability. On the times that he got caught, like against Shavers, Weaver and Snipes, he recovered to take control and score a knockout each time. An "on the hill" Holmes should have been awarded decisions over Michael Spinks, because Spinks didn't do enough to take the title from a Champion. An over the hill Holmes gave Tyson a few tough rounds on short notice, gave Holyfield a very good fight and beat Ray Mercer in an upset. The win over Norton was a classic. And speaking of Norton, people forget that he might have made a career out of matching up well against Ali---but also had good power, a bizarre crablike style that confused his opponents and good stamina too. His close win against a prime Jimmy Young and the one round KO of Bobick, as well as the war with Holmes showcased the various styles/abilities this guy had.

I'm starting to come around to the theory that Tyson isn't as good as everyone thought. I always thought he was an awesome power puncher who was mishandled and could have been an alltime great. But so many people are now making excellent points about how horrible his early competition was. He beat Larry Holmes after Holmes frustrated him for 3 rounds. He KOed Marvis Frazier and Michael Spinks. But what legitimate great heavyweight did he beat? After Douglas exposed him, it seems as though most decent fighters stood in with him and either beat him or at least tagged him a few times like Ruddock did. I mean, people love to take cheap shots at Gerry Cooney, but quite frankly, his wins over the senior circuit (Lyle, Norton, Young, etc.), wins against club fighters like Horace Robinson and 13 rounds with Holmes are as good as Tyson's career. A few years ago, I would have picked Tyson to beat Joe Frazier handily. Now, I look at the greats that Frazier stood in with, I look at his heart in wins and losses and I think he would survive Tyson's intimidation tactics to possibly get the win. I'm on the fence about Tyson----I actually picked him to beat Lewis. But now, I'm thinking he might not be anywhere near the fighter we all thought he was.

I feel Tyson was and is perhaps still a great fighter. He may have not beaten all time greats (Larry Holmes not counting) but look at how many decent fighters he beat— you can argue that some were past their primes or some not really that good but you'll find a lot of Tyson's opponents done miles better with other opposition. Trevor Berbick—demolished in 2Pinklon Thomas—demolished in 6Bonecrusher—easy pointsTucker—pointsBiggs—demolished in 7Holmes—demolished in 4 (no one has done that since)Tubbs—demolished in 2Spinks—demolished in 1Carl Williams—demolished in 1Bruno—demolished in 5 & 3Alex Stewart—demolished in 1Ruddock—stooped in 7 and pointsSeldon—ghosted in 1Golota—destroyed in 3 (later no contest)I think Tyson is a great fighter. Nobody had such an easy time with this amount of DEAR EVREN: I am forced to go with ANGELO, on this one, he just made points that i have said all along, do you honestly think, the "greatest" ALI would have ducked "merciless" RAY MERCER, RIDDICK BOWE, GEORGE FOREMAN, TOMMY MORRISON, TIM WITHERSPoon, DAVID TUA, THE KLITISHKO'S, AND THERE ARE MORE, ALI WOULD HAVE Fought AND BEATen THESE GUYS TWICE, IRONICALLY THERE IS ONE THING ALL THESE FIGHTER'S HAVE IN COMMON (THEY ARE BIG PUNCHER'S). SEEMS LIKE THERE IS SOMETHING TO THIS AND TYSON BEING ALLEGGEDLY BROKE, HE WOULD HAVE MADE MORE MONEY, FIGHTING THESE GUYS, THEN THE CREAM PUFFS YOU MENTIONED, FRANK BRUNO, TREVOR BERRICK, RUDDOCK, BONE CRUSHER, MICHAEL SPIKNS, WERE SCARED TO DEATH, THEY WERE BEATEN BEFORE THE BELL, RUDDOCK COULD HAVE SMOKED HIM, HAD HE NOT BEEN SO INTIMATED, OKAY LETS SAY HE WOULD HAVE RUN ROUGHSHOT, ON THEM ALL, HOW COME WE DID NOT SEE IT, PEOPLE STILL TALK ABOUT FOREMAN/QUARRY, I ONLY WISHED JERRY WOULD HAVE GOT THE SHOT THAT HE DEFINETILY DESERVED, IT WOULD HAVE ANSWERED ALL THE 30 YEARS OF QUESTIONS, BOY TIME FLY'S WHEN YOUR HAVING FUN!

What annoys me is that Tyson's opponents suddenly become 'poor' after Tyson wiped them out. You heard 'nuff about Spinks, Biggs and Ruddock before Mike dealt with them. Then they were suddenly chimney or scared. tyson was a great great fighter. Is Marciano also not a great for all the fighters he avoided - I think no! Is Dempsey not a great for not facing the brilliant black fighters of his time. Is Holmes not a great for defending against moderate opposition and a few good'n's past their best. I am not saying he is ali - no one is - but a great - definitely. Could have and should have been one of the best ever! He dealt with so many good fighters easily and has only had three losses by opponents who were better on the night. He is past his best now and will never reclaim his past glories. He will forever be remembered both good and bad.

Tyson at his very best would have been tough to beat in any era. The problem with him is his screwball personality and it is because of this that he squandered his talent. His prime was not very long, about 3 years from 1986 to 1989 and he did beat some good fighters during this time but after this he wasn't the same anymore. By the time Douglas got a hold of him the problems in his life had taken their toll. I hate to pass judgement on any person and there may be some good in the man somewhere inside of him but, I have always hated the term that is often said after a fight that the best man won the fight. IN TYSON'S CASE, THE BEST MAN MOST OF THE TIME WOULD NEVER WIN THE FIGHT AS MOST OF HIS OPPONENTS ARE PROBABLY BETTER MEN THAN HIM BUT NOT BETTER FIGHTERS.

Here's an item I just came across on another site that I thought I'd share. Rick Farris, who would become a main-event lightheavyweight from L.A, said the following about a gym tussle he witnessed between Jerry and Ken Norton: "I saw Jerry literally knockout Norton 3 years earlier at the Main St. Gym, shortly before Kenny upset Ali. Norton's trainer, Bill Slayton, kept Norton laying on the canvas for a couple of minutes after a brutal left hook to the body, right cross to the head paralyzed Norton." By the way, Bill Slayton was one of the first trainers Jerry had as an amateur.

Paul, it doesn't surprise me that Jerry handled Norton well in the gym. Gil Clancy said that Jerry was the best gym fighter he ever saw. Jim Quarry said once that Jerry sparred with Joe Bugner a couple of times in the early 70s and he also was dominant over Bugner and Clancy said that Jerry used to have is way with Jimmy Young in the gym as well. In his era, the only people who really should have beaten him when Jerry was at his best were Muhammed Ali and Joe Frazier. He would have had a good chance of beating Norton and even Foreman. Of Jerry's other losses, Eddie Machen got Jerry when Jerry was only 21 and Jerry would have beaten him prime against prime and I don't believe that either Jimmy Ellis or George Chuvalo could have beaten Jerry in rematches and he never should have lost to them in the first place. | 8/18/02 11:22:30 AM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|DEAR EVREN: I guess we are never going to agree on MR.TYSON, I'd say this is why we are boxing fans, (and i respect you as one, believe me). How about this, similarities between "IRON MIKE". And the "bellflower Bomber". WHEN JERRY, beat a top contender, all the sudden the guy was a "BUM". And when JQ lost 4 BOUTS, He was termed a loser, a JUNIOR CHUVALO (no disrespect to George). And the opposition TYSON LOST TO HIS FIRST 4 WERE NOT ANY SUPERIOR TO THE FIRST 4 THAT BEAT JERRY. Tommy Morrison and tyson, have identical records now, PRIME FOR PRIME AND POWER FOR POWER, i would have paid to see that one. TYSON would have been at least 5 to 2 favorite, but i think it would have been exciting, say what you say about Morrisons chin, he did have a wallop in that hook, and intestinal fortitude, maybe we can agree on that, TAKE CARE. |
8/18/02 11:31:10 AM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|One thing I do not get, (and i was there). Is how JQ was treated in California, Here is a local, that has enough odds against him anyway, And the media and boxing public treated him tacky, later in his career NEW YORK took him in as there own. And it should have been that way in CALIFORNIA, and I KNOW IT BOTHERED JQ. |
8/18/02 11:57:41 AM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|On they other hand EVREN: KENT and I SUFFER from "STOOGEMANIA", and sometimes think JERRY was superhuman, and still fighting somewhere. "WATCH OUT, IT MIGHT BE A MACKERL?" KNUCK, KNUCK, KNUCK. |
8/19/02 02:19:39 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|I don't think the people were down on Jerry here in Southern California, it is the press that was down on him, not the people. There are still a lot of people in this area who had and always will have a lot of respect and fondness for Jerry and the Quarry family. OH, I SEE JIMMY DORSEY IS STILL BEING A WISE GUY! SHUT UP YA LUNKHEAD! KNUCK! KNUCK! KNUCK! |
8/19/02 08:02:17 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|you are right KENT, Jerry was respected, by the california people, i should have made it a little clearer on that, the media chastised him, he was n't to into the press there for a long time, and i did not blame him one bit |
8/20/02 07:36:38 AM|Sabrina Quarry-Porter|Florida||sabrinalporter@aol.com|||10|THANK YOU DAD I RECEIVED YOUR GIFT YESTERDAY....AND IT MEANS THE WORLD TO ME THAT YOU THOUGHT OF US KIDS.....I LOVE YOU ALWAYS IN MY HEART FOREVER......|
8/21/02 01:39:01 PM|Evren|London|||10|Liston was amongst my top 10 fighters but I could see Louis outlasting him and battering him to defeat in the late rounds.|
8/21/02 08:29:58 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10|Mike Tyson a great fighter. Oh yeah! He is a top ten great for sure. Untill he went to prison he was the best heavy out there. His involvement with Don King and his thug like actions outside boxing led to his downfall. His own doing mind you, he made those decisions by himself. The only fighters the "young" Tyson would have had problems with were, of course Holyfield, Douglas and Bowe. His early fight with Bonecrusher Smith showed he could be tied up and out-muscled by a big man. If Smith had opened up earlier in the fight he may have hurt Mike. Was Smith and the others intimidatad by Tyson? Sure. But that wasn't Tyson's problem. Did he take advantage of their emotional short comings. Yeah. So did Liston, Louis, Foreman and Ali. Liston was a guy who beat up the contenders that Floyd Patterson would not fight. He did nothing after he won the title, yet most people rate him high as a Heavyweight Champion. Holmes wipes out a whole generation of good, bad and indifferent heavies and is rated low on the totem pole. People compare Tyson to Sonny, but Mike did a whole lot more during his career in the ring. So as far as I'm concerned he was a great champion, and would hard for anyone from any era to beat in his prime. I still think Frazier would beat him prime vs. prime, I can also see him losing by early KO, but we'll never know for sure. As for Liston vs. Louis. Sonny did have that 7 foot arm span to deal with, he was a little quicker on his feet and about 14 pounds heavier than a prime Louis. He also had a habit of bringing that jab back slow and would be a prime target for a Louis right counter. Both men were fearsome punchers, but Joe was more accurate than Sonny. I think it would a battle of jabs for a while, Joe might get hurt by Sonny's hook, maybe knocked down. But Louis would hurt Sonny, and if Louis hurt you, your finished. Louis by 9th round KO. suggesting Jerry would give him a good fight. Time and perspective do change, and now people are seeing better what Lyle, Shavers, Spencer, Alexander and others did then. That, and the fact that the depth of talent was so much more than it has been since. Real talent stands up with time.

[8/27/02 01:11:40 AM] Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Gerry, people laughed at you because you said Jerry Quarry would have given a good fight to Leon Spinks? Now that in itself is very funny! Jerry would have not only given Leon a good fight, he would have knocked "Neon Leon" out! Jerry would have used angles to make Spinks miss as he charged in and he would have made Spinks pay big time with hard accurate counter punching. I would pick Jerry by mid round stoppage, if not earlier. Steve, Paul D. was working on a book about Jerry which Jim Quarry had a lot of input. I hope you put it together soon Paul. I know of another book that someone else has in the works about Jerry's life that we should be hearing about some time in the near future. It really is a shame that Jim Q is no longer with us as he was a wealth of information on Jerry and boxing in general.

[8/27/02 06:11:26 AM] Sabrina Quarry-Porter|Florida||sabrinalporter@aol.com|||10|I THINK WRITING A BOOK ABOUT MY UNCLE JERRY IS A GREAT IDEA....I HEARD RUMORS ABOUT IT BUT NOTHING HAS COME OF IT YET.....IT WOULD BE A VERY GOOD BOOK TO READ...A MOVIE WOULD BE GOOD TOO THERE'S LOTS TO TELL....JERRY WAS THE GREATEST CHAMPION TO NEVER WIN A TITLE AS GEORGE FOREMAN ONCE SAID...MY FATHER JAMES WOULD BE VERY PROUD..LOVE YOU DAD AND JERRY.....|

[8/27/02 01:18:45 PM] Jimmy Dorse|ventura california||RONNYRAINS@yahoo.com|||10|I also believe QUARRY would have ko'd SPINKS early,if those guys laughed at JERRY,is only because he was on the shelf, and probably after ZANON,WHO WAS THEY NO.1 EUROPE GUY AT THE TIME, Jerry say 1969-70 beats SPINKS easy.I observed almost every one of spinks bouts,JERRY WOULD TURN HIM EVERY WHERE BUT LOOSE,I'M not so sure JER would have even lost to MICHAEL SPINKS.|

[8/27/02 02:12:00 PM] Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|I think Jerry would have been too strong for Michael Spinks. M. Spinks was a blown up light heavyweight who like his brother Leon, was lucky to catch a great champion, in M. Spinks' case Larry Holmes, on the way down. I pick Jerry by Kayo over Michael Spinks as well.

[8/27/02 02:39:33 PM] Joe Krause|Chicago||sadmspats@yahoo.com|||10|Let's be honest, Leon wasn't real good and was quite possibly the worst Lineal Champion ever. Michael was far superior and would Jerry a good fight. Mike Spinks reminds me a bit of Jimmy Young at heavyweight with a weird style and counter-punching style. Jerry would be a slight favorite over Michael, although it is no sure thing.

[8/28/02 11:48:38 AM] Jimmy Dorse|V ENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|dear kent: your mission,if you decide to accept it (get me those quarry clippings on microfilm). FROM LOS ANGELES,ironically KENT,NEON LEON, is seen quite frequently at a JOPLIN MISERYBAR!! called "irish" murphy's. SEEMS as thou he owns a part in it. KENT what i am trying to do homework on. IS was JERRY'S BOUT with J.p. SPENCER, at OLYMPIC AUDITORIUM,OR las vegas HACIENDA, and the dates AUG 2,or AUG 27,1965, I'VE GOT SO CAUGHT UP IN THIS RESEARCH, I EVEN SENT FOR MICROFILM, FOR THE LOU BAILEY, BOUT IN DES MOINES, THEY WERE OBLIGING. TAKE CARE FELLOW 'stooge'|

[8/28/02 02:24:08 PM] Jimmy D|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Where would I look for these bouts, maybe microfilm of the Los Angeles Times? I remember the school library when I was going to school at a community college had a lot of back issues of newspapers and magazines on microfilm. I have that scrapbook of clippings that I got from the website, but I don't remember seeing anything about those fights in it. It doesn't have a lot about obscure fights in Jerry's career anyway, so they might not be in there. Anyway, maybe we can clear up where the Corletti fight happened after all. KNUCK, KNUCK KNUCK | [8/28/02 03:06:32 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA] | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | ||| 10 | DEAR KENT: Any major newspaper where you are at, HERALD EXAMINER, LA TIMES, ETC. they should have them at the libraries, I got into this 3 years ago, unfortunately, I could have researched everything on JERRY FROM THE TOWNS I WAS AT, LOS ANGELES, BAKERSFIELD, LAS VEGAS, ETC. BUT I HAD TO MOVE TO A LITTLE ONE-HORSE town in OKLAHOMA WHERE JUST GETTING A NEWSPAPER IS AN ADVENTURE. I HAVE 20 YEARS OF NEW YORK TIMES MICROFILM, they only covered JERRY'S BIG BOUTS OF COURSE, HAVE RESEARCHED ALOT THOUGH, NOW I WANT TO GET THE LITTLE DETAILS, WEIGHTS, CARD SCORES, KO TIME, TKO OR KO, ARENA, THEY HARDEST TO FIND. are JERRY'S FIRST BOUT WITH, "SERGEANT" GENE HAMILTON, AND HIS LAST BOUT WITH RON "THE CREEP" CRAMNER IN COLORADO, I HAVE COMPLETED EVERY TOP TEN RATING RING MAG. ever gave JQ, and now researching what WBA had. TAKE CARE, MY MONIES ON FABOULOUS FORUM FOR CORLETTI, KNUCK KNUCK KNACK!! | [8/28/02 07:05:30 PM | Kent | La habra | ||| 10 | Boy, I must be getting old. I signed in as Jimmy D, when I meant to sign in as me. Go figure? | [8/29/02 10:28:22 AM | Johnny Q | NYC | jjohnq@yahoo.com | ||| 10 | My Friends,  The CORLETTI fight was at The Forum. I watched it on TV in 1972, as part of a series that had Foreman on a couple of weeks earlier. ESPNCL has the tape and could show it, however it seems to be asking too much for them the air Jerry's winning fights. The only victory of Jerry's they show is the Shavers bout. ESPNCL's recent double bill of Jerry Vs Frazier II and Norton back to back was insulting. Can't help but notice they have scheduled two of Chuvalo's losing efforts in a row next week as well.  | [8/30/02 10:20:30 AM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA] | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | ||| 10 | I can remember JQ being interviewed, and he was saying every fighter, fights his share of bums. It's the learning process, but YOU LOOK AT jerry's record LORENZO ZANON european champ BODELL every major title in europe, James J. WOODY NEW YORK CHAMP, (I SAW THAT ONE LIVE). TONY ALONGI 38-2, SEEMS EVERYONE JQ fought was at least a top 50 heavyweight or better, can DUANE BOBICK say that?? | [8/30/02 11:37:04 AM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | ||| 10 | what's going on with the tournament? I missed the results of the last two matches, Liston vs Louis and Frazier vs Tyson. | [8/30/02 12:12:19 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | ||| 10 | Steve, Evren is doing the tournament. He hasn't posted in about a week. I think we agreed that Frazier won over Tyson but the results of Louis and Liston hadn't been posted yet. I think, without going back to the posts, that Louis was probably our pick to win. Hurry back Evren, we have gotten this far with the tournament, we might has well finish it. I think it would have been a better idea to do 32 fighters at the beginning of the tournament instead of 64. I do hope we can finish it though. We sure have been through a lot in the time since it started, and not all good of course. | [8/30/02 12:12:51 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | ||| 10 | I read an interesting article on another website by a guy who was trying to become a fighter as a teenager. Jerry was just turning pro at the time, coming of his amazing amateur career. this guy was inspired by Jerry's success. He tried to contact Jerry without any success. He finally just looked him up in the phone book. To his amazement, Jerry himself answered the phone. Jerry was full of encouragement and even invited him to visit when he was training, at the time in a converted garage in Johnny Flores backyard. I don't know the guy's name, but wonder if it might be the heavyweight Rick Farris mentioned by Paul Drolet. | [8/30/02 12:27:59 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | ||| 10 | Kent, I enjoyed your latest article on eastside boxing. Why don't you try to sell more articles to Eastside for their "Time Tunnel" series. Especially anything about 70's fights.

8/30/02 05:53:38 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|Louis through 4 - 0 - 1 draw. Okay the last 4. In the first semi-final we have - Muhammad Ali vs Joe Frazier - WOW !Good luck chaps.
8/30/02 08:12:25 PM|paul|Montreal|drolpaul@aol.com||@||10|Steve, the man who called Jerry was indeed Rick Farris. I think I may have been mistaken in claiming Rick was a lightheavy. He was lighter. I believe Rick hailed from Burbank, an area not known as being fertile ground for aspiring prizefighters, but he had a lengthy, good career and fought main-event bouts in the L.A. area. Rick is also a boxing writer. You probably read the piece on the "cyberboxingzone" website. It has a section called Wail which I highly recommend. Rick's piece is called "My Memories of Jerry Quarry." |
8/30/02 09:34:35 PM|Kent|oriononside@aol.com||oriononside@aol.com||@||10|Steve, thanks for the compliment on my article about the recent James Toney fight. I have done one piece for the time tunnel section over at Eastside Boxing about Jerry's fight against Ron Lyle. I will probably do some more about fights from that time period in the next few months. I have been working on a series of articles for Eastside and another site called Heavyweight News featuring hypothetical fights between Wladimir Klitschko versus six of the all time greats. I have done four or the six bout series so far. I am also doing the series of all time greats verses each other for Heavyweight News. The editor gave me the assignment after I complained about the results of Jerry Quarry losing to Larry Holmes by a knockout by a body shot and now I am working on a bout between Jack Johnson and Max Baer. That is if the editor over at heavyweights isn't impatient with me as I promised him that piece a few weeks ago but I have been too busy to get it done. Finally, I will be reworking an interview I did last year with James Quarry about the foundation that appeared here on the Quarry site homepage and at Eastside boxing, and I am updating it to acknowledge his passing away. It should be up at Heavyweight News in the coming weeks. |

9/1/02 10:41:43 AM|George L. Otto|Youngstown, Ohio|ehnpbsa@aol.com||@||10|Below is a copy of a document that I helped write and edit for the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, 86 Fletcher Avenue, Mount Vernon, New York 10552-3319, 914.664.4571, email--aaib@worldnet.att.net, and website: http://www.aai.b.att.net. Those of you who have followed the efforts of TJQF to make boxing better for the fans and fighters know that TJQF has frequently worked closely with the AAIB to support the same positions on many legislative issues through the efforts of James and myself. In my next posting, I will provide a copy of MANIFESTO 2001, a document that contains many of those positions and refers specifically to the importance of TJQF's role in all of this. Please read this and provide any feedback on this to me, as your comments are very important in keeping the reform movement of TJQF moving ahead !!!Thanks !!|

9/2/02 12:35:41 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com||@||10|Special thanks to Mr. George Otto for all of his hard work in keeping the spirit of TJQF alive. I will read the item when time permits and comment accordingly. I pick, after some rough early rounds in which Joe Louis is decked twice by George Foreman, Louis recovers to win a decision over Foreman. I pick, prime against prime, Ali to win by decision over Frazier.|

9/2/02 02:18:17 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC|renfbera@aol.com||@||10|Wow! There's a lot of stuff here. One thing I noticed was 13 round championship bouts. Why is 13 rounds any safer than 15? An athlete who is trained well should be able to go the 15 round distance. The ones who aren't will fade long before. I know championship fights went form 15 to 12 rounds shortly after the Mancini-Kim fight. The reason, of course, was in the the name of safety but at the time, many politicians were calling for a ban on the sport. In an effort to quiet them down the major organizations reduced the title fight from 15 to 12 rounds. I believe with proper training of ref's and cornermen, it will reduce the chance of injury. There will always be fighters, and athletes in many other sports who have too much guts for there own good. They don't know when to quit. If the people around them, their "team mates" if you will, and the officials, can stop the event before it goes too far serious injury can be avoided. But in the sport of boxing many will still wind up like the Robinson's, Quarry's or Ali no matter what safe guards are in place. I will have to pick Ali by decision over Frazier. Louis by KO in 7. |

| 9/3/02 08:08:31 PM | charles anderson | pine bluff, arkansas | ctjjandfam@aol.com | |||10|| | I would like to see some of jerry's fights where he wins, such as lyle, foster, etc. even zanon would be better than watching the ali and frazier fights over and over and over on espn classic. |

| 9/3/02 08:11:44 PM | charles anderson | pine bluff, arkansas | ctjjandfam@aol.com | |||10|| | what do you think, kent? you got any pull with espn? |

| 9/4/02 04:07:34 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | |||10| | Charles, the only pull I have with ESPN is that I sat right behind the announcers table a couple of times on ESPN 2 Friday night fights. Teddy Atlas gave me a funny look as if to say, "that is pretty lame," because I kept yelling, "let's get ready to rumble," every time the public address announcer (not Michael Buffer) had his back turned. I only had those ringside seats because I showed up the first day they went on sale. It is difficult to get sites or publications to "comp" me tickets at times, so often the money comes out of my pocket. Trying to break into the big time in sports journalism can be difficult. So to make a long story short, no, I have no pull with any of the networks. It does give me an idea of doing an article about how fans have to watch the same repeats over and over again, and about how sick we are of it. I could send it to ESPN and see if it helps any. PS, I actually do a fairly good imitation of Buffer's signature saying. |

| 9/4/02 08:59:03 AM | Joe Krause | Chicago | sadmspats@yahoo.com | |||10| | Louis didn't run from anyone, and if you didn't run from George he would cream you. This would end in a KO in the 6th for Foreman. Ali in his prime was not as much better than the "old" Ali as everyone says. I have all his fights so I should know. He was quicker but made more mistakes. Nonetheless Ali by close decision. |

| 9/4/02 08:33:29 PM | Gerry Schultz | Ohio | jgschultz@firstam.com | |||10| | Your tournament has been fun to follow, but must say I'm surprised Foreman is in your Final Four. A huge puncher, yes, but with poor balance and few real skills which Lyle and Young further exposed after Ali skillfully handled him. Louis would pick him apart, but his flat-footedness might indeed give George his opening, tough call. I think Ali was peaking about the time he was stripped, 1967 or so. Frazier is as courageous a fighter as anyone I've ever heard of, but could not defeat a focused Ali. One thing I noticed in their fights is the way Ali would lean way back on the ropes where Frazier could not head punch him, then come down on Joe when Frazier went back to the body. I'm not an Ali fan, based on the way he treated Joe, and his politics, which were very anti-christian. But he's the best I've ever seen. Jerry was very respectful of him, and did not get much back for it. |

| 9/5/02 11:06:05 AM | Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com | |||10| | C'mon Joe. Foreman over Louis? Ok, Foreman is bigger by about 20 pounds and taller, there's no doubt he was one of the strongest heavyweights of all time, his upper body strength was tremendous, and he would use that to push, pull and throw guy's off. Louis was also a very strong guy, who was a very accurate and deadly puncher. His left jab was one of the best ever seen in a heavyweight. So good that other fighters jabs are judged against it. Big George was very easy to hit, he telegraphed his punches, he had no stamina or footwork. He could take a good shot but, if he didn't take you out in the first 5 or 6 rounds, which was a strech for him, you could pile up the points. His style was tailor made for a guy like Louis or even Dempsey. Fast, accurate, deadly punchers. No way would George beat Louis.

Foreman and his twenty pounds would manhandle Louis and put him into position to be hit. Louis stands right there and used an offensive not defensive jab. Louis moved forward and could be hurt by good punchers. He would be hurt and decked using this strategy which is the only one he ever employed. You can't stand in front of George and that is what Louis would do and it would be lights out no question in my mind. Of course it is only a fantasy bout, who knows?

I last night saw Mr Earnie Shavers who, as many of you know, lives in England. Earnie was very sad to hear of the death of James Quarry and he asked me to communicate his sympathies, and his support, to the Quarry family.

As great as Louis was for his day, Foreman would have ko'd him in 3 or 4. George was wild, but not slow. He had a good reach, and his power is legendary. Louis was not the iron man that Frazier was, and Joe got demolished. Foreman was also about 20 pounds heavier. Dick Saddler was a good trainer and teacher. In all honestly, I am not even sure Louis could have beaten the Sonny Liston who beat Cleve Williams.

You know, I've been way off base here before. Sometimes dead wrong, but geez Foreman over Louis. Can't see it. George was KO'ed by Ali, not the hardest puncher in the world, almost KO'ed by Ron Lyle and fell apart against Jimmy Young. Yes, Ali and Young were defensive minded fighters. Young and, more so Ali took a beating trying to wear George out. Lyle who was every bit the puncher George was, went after George from the opening bell. He hurt Foreman from the first round until he collapsed in the corner. Louis was quicker and more accurate than either of them. He could box defensively, if he had to. George could not. If a prime Joe Louis hurt you, you were finished. And Louis would have hurt George early.

Louis was not a bobbing weaving fighter who needed to get in close and wear you down, like Frazier. Frazier was a slow starter who could be hurt early, Ali did it in all three fights, Jerry hurt Joe early, so did Manual Ramos, Bob Foster buckeled his legs, even Ron Stander shook Joe up. Louis was not a wild puncher, he threw every punch from the balls of his feet straight off the shoulder with tremendous force. He would punch between George's looping punches and destroy him. I think George's best prime fight was his second fight with Frazier, a nice straight forceful jab set up his looping right hand shots. But I think Louis could have easily avoided Foremans right, if it went five or six rounds, and countered with deadly results. George was very strong and that would have kept him in the fight for a while. But he would take too much punishment from Joe. It seems as though you guys are only looking at what Foreman could do and not what Louis could do. As for Louis-Liston. If anybody on the top ten all time great heavyweight list is overrated it's Sonny Liston. Hey Evrin, Kent, Steve where are you guy's on this one? Are you going to bail me out or put me in my place?

Bob, I am with you on this one. I picked Louis over Foreman, although with some rough early going. I think Louis speed would be a key element and I think he was much stronger than people give him credit for.

REGARDING LISTON: Well, I think the problem with Liston was that even early in his career he was much older than people thought he was and probably started out almost past his prime. But his fights in the late 1950's and early 60's were pretty impressive. But I realize that part of greatness is longevity and Liston was really a flash in the pan, but a very impressive one while he was hot. I have seen films of him against Cleve Williams, Eddie Machon, Patterson, etc. and for a brief moment he was awesome. the pay he pulverized Nino Valdez had to impress. By the time he fought Ali he was about 40 (in my opinion) and washed up. And yes, he lacked heart, he never should have quit in the Miami fight against Ali. I still don't know the real story on that one — or how he died. |

9/13/02 02:41:24 PM|Steve|N.J.|dmmsrm@comcast.net|||||Hey Bob, I agree with you completely on Joe Louis. I personally think he and Ali are a pick-em for all time great heavyweights. Louis threw faster, more accurate combinations than either Foreman or Liston. He was also a harder puncher and stronger guy than he seems to be getting credit for on this site. |

9/13/02 03:59:39 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC|renfbera@aol.com|||||John, Liston's mother once said she thought Sonny was born in 1929 then later changed it to 1932, no one knows for sure. I don't think Sonny knew how old he was. He was born on an Arkansas plantation with no birth certificate. I believe his mother had 12 or 13 kids with various men. So he may have been as old as 35 when he won the title. I think in the first Ali fight he just said the hell with it, I'm tired, I can't catch this guy I'm going home. Another day another dollar. I remember a story when Sonny fought Chuck Wepner. Wepner said during the ref's instructions Liston looked like he was 50 years old and been out drinking all night. He was a good, strong fighter with one of the best jabs in boxing history, but he had a hard time coping with crafty boxers like Machen. Maybe if Liston had given himself a break earlier in life he would have made a great champion. |

9/13/02 07:35:10 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca|oriononside@aol.com|||||How come we don't have more comments on Ali verses Frazier, prime against prime? I want to say again, or if I have neglected to do so, thank you to Evren for keeping our long time tournament going. It has been a long hard road from start to finish. |

9/14/02 12:16:28 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||||EVERN: It must be nice!, no, I hope you are having a good time there (especially on there beaches!). I've sat back and pondered the FOREMAN/LOUIS bout. I have to agree with JOHN G. AND GO WITH BIG GEORGE. And only going by opponents alone, didn't LOUIS have a "BUM OF THE MONTH CLUB?" I know George fought more than his share of "bums!" But at the same token, he sure took on a lot better, Lyle, Ali, Frazier (twice), Norton, Holyfield, Chuvalo, Moorer, Morrison, Young, ok ay big GEORGE never used footwork, and neither did LOUIS, (THEY DIDN'T HAVE TOO!) GOING OUT ON A LIMB. EARLY ROUND KAYO-FOREMAN. |

9/14/02 03:31:52 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||||TWO-THINGS THAT I HAVE FORGOTTEN, EDDIE MACHEN TURNED 34 THE NIGHT HE UPSET JERRY. AND SHORTLY (A FEW MONTHS) BEFORE QUARRY'S COME BACK VS LORENZO ZANON. JERRY ROLLED HIS PICKUP AND BROKE HIS BACK FOR THE THIRD TIME, ON A CALIFORNIA BACK ROAD BY WHERE, JAMES DEAN MET HIS DEMISE. MIGHT HAVE HAD SOMETHING TO DO WITH JERRY'S PERFORMANCE ALTHOUGH HE GUTTED IT OUT W/ KAYO WIN. QUARRY SHOULD HAVE BEEN FIGHTING SOMEONE LIKE 8TH RANKED EVANGELISTA, AND GOT AN EARLY KAYO, WITH THE RANKING RATHER THAN TAKE ON A MATADOR LIKE ZANON. I REMEMBER BOXING ILLUSTRATED DID RATE JQ 15TH WORLD FOR THE COMEBACK WIN. |

9/14/02 06:25:04 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca|oriononside@aol.com|||||Jimmy D, Jerry had no business fighting anybody in 1977, Evangelista included. Even though he was still at a relatively young age of 32, he had taken far too much punishment and he should have stayed retired after the Norton fight. As a fan of Jerry's I was happy to see him fight again, and I screamed at Jerry on the TV to please throw punches all the way through the bout, which saw Zanon outbox him for almost eight rounds before Jerry lowered the boom. In hindsight though, I think I was a bit selfish for wanting Jerry to fight again because it was in Jerry's best interest not to do so. Oh by the way, I think Jerry would have beaten Evangelista, even at that stage of his career. |
KENT; I agree, JERRY should have stayed right there in that broadcast booth, for CBS SPORTS SPECTACULAR, and been happy. There were a lot of heavyweights around making ungodly money that were far inferior to JERRY'S CAREER. And of course the lure of $ included JQ TOO. Even BOONE KIRKMAN was MAKING A COMEBACK!! I had a ring magazine "comebacks in jeopardy" and IT WAS AN ARTICLE, on DON KING, and JERRY'S Bout with ZANON. JQ was getting pressure from friends, even the networks were bidding for his comeback including CBS. TO "get in there". Of course when you see EVANGELISTA going 15 w/ALI, FOR MORE DOUGH THAN JQ EVER MADE IN ONE FIGHT! When you doing the commentary!? I also remember seeing on the news were JQ had broken his back, than sometime later he's on a comeback in "VEGAS" and also, I BELIEVE THEY BEST TIME FOR JERRY to retire permanently would be after that terrible cut vs ALI. As you selfish me would have wanted him back on the scene. Although we were all ready for him to call it a day after NORTON permanently. also "CURLY" I MEAN "KENT". I have that clipping of that truck wreck i could send a copy. He was also doing a lot of television at the time. TAKE CARE!!

I've just returned from fabulous Sunny Sardinia - what a place - great food and wine lovely scenery great company - WOW! Anyway - In a fight greater than their actual three Ali will eek out a decision over Joe. I'll go for Foreman over Louis by 5th round ko.

I'll go a step further---I think Frazier would have beaten Louis. Joe had a real hard time against a crouching, plodding Arturo Godoy. Frazier was faster, smarter, much harder punching, and heavier than Godoy. Please don't get me wrong, I think Joe was great for his day, but he fought small men and fought none of the top African American heavies of his day. If a white fighter had avoided fighting a black fighter for as many years as Louis did, he would have been crucified by the press.

AGAIN ON LOUIS: I will go a step further---I think Frazier would have beaten Louis. Joe had a real hard time against a crouching, plodding Arturo Godoy. Frazier was faster, smarter, much harder punching, and heavier than Godoy. Please don't get me wrong, I think Joe was great for his day, but he fought small men and fought none of the top African American heavies of his day. If a white fighter had avoided fighting a black fighter for as many years as Louis did, he would have been crucified by the press.

John in your opinion then who were the 'great black fighters' of Louis' era that he avoided ?

John Gerard
NYC
rock289z@yahoo.com

Again on Louis: I will go a step further---I think Frazier would have beaten Louis. Joe had a real hard time against a crouching, plodding Arturo Godoy. Frazier was faster, smarter, much harder punching, and heavier than Godoy. Please don't get me wrong, I think Joe was great for his day, but he fought small men and fought none of the top African American heavies of his day. If a white fighter had avoided fighting a black fighter for as many years as Louis did, he would have been crucified by the press.

Steve, I have been having some trouble with my computer lately. I haven't had any kind of virus alert come up. Any suggestions as to how to fix this problem? Also, would I be sending it to other people I have E-mailed? I have never set up my address book and I send each E-mail seperate. I am hoping this means that I haven't sent the virus to anyone else.

That is one fighter - Louis beat him in '51 when both were old anyway. You can argue that most fighters in any era 'ducked' certain challengers.

I don't think Ali or Frazier ducked anyone. Holmes you could argue Pinklon Thomas, Tim Witherspoon (rematch). I agree that Louis had poor opponents as did Larry. Ali and Frazier met them all between them.

Joe did duck Jimmy Bivins, Archie Moore maybe, Charley Burley was too small to fight Louis. Ezzard Charles was avoided for a couple of years. But Joe was old and soft by then. All of these guys were too young for Louis to fight during his prime years 1937-1941. Not a lot of great black heavies of that era, at least no one Louis couldn't handle. Besides, there was no money in two black guys fighting for the heavyweight title. No one would back a fight like that in 1940. White people liked Joe Louis, if Joe lost to another black fighter and didn't regain the title he would have never been forgiven and blacks would not have been given the chance at the title. Lose to a white guy and Joe is still a hero and we have our Great White Hope. As for Ali, Holmes and Frazier. Frazier has the worst record here. After "The Fight", Frazier fought Terry Daniels and Ron Stander, Stander KO'ed Shavers to get the title shot. I don't know where Daniels came from or where he went after he got out of the hospital. Those two were not world beaters. Ali, on the other hand fought 9 times including Mac Foster, Blue Lewis, Euro Champ Jurgen Blin, Bob Foster. Maybe Frazier was taking it easy for a couple of fights while Ali went right to work. Holmes fought every one out there at the time. He didn't duck anyone. They may not have been the greatest bunch of fighters, but no worse than some and far better most. I still don't think he lost to Spinks - I thought it was a bad decision.

Frazier took two easy fights as champ. However he never really "dodged" anyone. He fought Foreman when told not to. He also fought a who's who list of heavyweights in the late 60's. Look on Boxrec.com and see the records and opponents he fought. He went through them all except Liston who nobody wanted anything to do with.

Frazier's two "easy fights" I assume you mean Stander and Daniels. Stander KO'd Shavers and I would match him up against ANY of Louis' bum of the month club boys and bet on Stander to win. Holmes was VERY good and probably great.

was quarry-lyle on espn classic? i have never seen it and it was one of the fights i really wanted to see. was that clancy's first time in jerry's corner?

Ken, I recived e-mail.
from what i guess was your virus scanner informing me that i had a virus. the way the klef virus works is that it attaches itself to your e-mail address and sends infected e-mail all over the place! the older anti-virus scanners often don't detect and alert you. i checked mine every week and was informed that no viruses where detected. i had a new scanner installed for $50.00 and this cleaned the virus off my computer. it also showed me the 4 infected e-mails i received that started my problem. i was told to use an anti-virus scanner that constantly updates itself, or do so yourself.

9/18/02 07:10:33 AM | Paul Drolet | Montreal | drolpaul@aol.com |
Charles, the Lyle fight was Clancy's second as Jerry's trainer. Clancy replaced Teddy Bentham after Jerry's second bout with Ali. He was in Jerry's corner for his comeback against Randy Neumann and remained until the Norton bout in March '75. They had a good run together until Jerry ran into Frazier again in June '74.

9/18/02 07:44:50 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com |
Has anyone ever seen the Bonavena-Chuvalo fight? Bonavena won a decision, but i remember reading in Ring magazine that Bonavena scored a knockdown which i find hard to believe. Can anyone verify this?

9/18/02 08:44:12 AM | Paul Drolet | Montreal | drolpaul@aol.com |
John, although i haven't seen the bout, this can't be right. In a 91-bout pro career, Chuvalo was never felled by any man. "Ringo", however, did have Frazier on the deck twice in the first round of their September '66 bout in New York.

9/18/02 09:34:44 AM | Adam Doyle | London |
Actually, there are many talented 80s Heavyweight whom Holmes did not fight, which is why some observers have a problem with his legacy since he was unable to "clean up" the division as Tyson would later do. It's true that Holmes didn't fight Page, or Thomas or Coetzee. Nor did he fight Dokes or Tubbs whose hand speed might well have caused Holmes troubles. Personally, I rate Holmes very highly, but it's true that, unlike Ali in the 70s, Holmes missed fighting some of the more talented fighters out there.

9/18/02 11:59:25 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com |
Just as a side note -- when discussing champs who ducked certain challengers we must take into consideration that sometimes contracts between rival promoters make fights impossible even if both boxers want to actually fight. I remember hearing Gerry Cooney say that one reason he fought so many few top ranked heavies was because they were all controlled by Don King and he would not sign a multi-bout contract with them. Don't get me wrong, I know he is not a good example because he was a very protected fighter, but you get my drift. I honestly don't think Holmes was afraid of anyone and I think he had the best left jab of any heavywight champ. Other great jabs were Louis, Ali, Liston, and when he remembered to use it like in the second Frazier fight, Foreman.

9/18/02 01:43:21 PM | Joe Krause | Chicago | sadmispats@yahoo.com |
I have Bonavena-Chuvalo and Chuvalo was robbed in that decision. I had it 6-4 Chuvalo and it seemed a draw was the worst George would do, he outmuscled Bonavena on the inside and won most of their confrontations. Chuvalo was not knocked down in that fight, although he slipped. The only time i ever saw George visibly shaken in my large library of Chuvalo fights was the 3rd round against Foreman. He was never shaken like that before or after.

9/18/02 01:46:35 PM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com |
THANK YOU JOE. I always wondered about that. George really was an iron man. Bonavena was pretty tough too. I think he may have hit harder than George.

9/18/02 01:50:48 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net |
Paul Drolet, what's your statis regarding a Jerry Quarry biography? Nows the time for it, since the 70's heavyweights seem to be experiencing a surge in popularity among a growing number of younger as well as boomer fight fans. Are you still considering it or have you given up?

9/18/02 03:06:17 PM | Kent Appel | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@sol.com |
Kent, for quite some time now. All my life I have had to correct people on this as well as my last name. My last name is Appel, pronounced A-Pell, not apple. You would be surprised how many people get this wrong. Back to boxing, I just saw some highlights featuring Ali's early championship bouts and the first Ali/Chuvalo fight was one of them. Very few people fought Ali tougher than Chuvalo did. Besides the Bonevina fight, Chuvalo seemed to get the short end of the stick on other decisions as well. One that comes to mind is when he appeared to beat Ernie Terrell only to have Terrell declared the winner. Jerry was just about the only major contender Chuvalo beat and this is surprising as Chuvalo was one tough guy.

I thought Terrell beat Chuvalo about 9-6 in their fight. Chuvalo's best night against a contender was probably his good victory over Doug Jones. Jones had just knocked out Zora Folley and was looking to a big payday. The Quarry fight of course was a good win, but George didn't look that good doing it. I have that Jones fight and it was a nice find as I have seen it rarely offered. Chuvalo was too big for Doug who could have been a great light-heavy if he could have stayed down there.

I thought Terrell beat Chuvalo about 9-6 in their fight. Chuvalo's best night against a contender was probably his good victory over Doug Jones. Jones had just knocked out Zora Folley and was looking to a big payday. The Quarry fight of course was a good win, but George didn't look that good doing it. I have that Jones fight and it was a nice find as I have seen it rarely offered. Chuvalo was too big for Doug who could have been a great light-heavy if he could have stayed down there.

I thought Terrell beat Chuvalo about 9-6 in their fight. Chuvalo's best night against a contender was probably his good victory over Doug Jones. Jones had just knocked out Zora Folley and was looking to a big payday. The Quarry fight of course was a good win, but George didn't look that good doing it. I have that Jones fight and it was a nice find as I have seen it rarely offered. Chuvalo was too big for Doug who could have been a great light-heavy if he could have stayed down there.

I thought Terrell beat Chuvalo about 9-6 in their fight. Chuvalo's best night against a contender was probably his good victory over Doug Jones. Jones had just knocked out Zora Folley and was looking to a big payday. The Quarry fight of course was a good win, but George didn't look that good doing it. I have that Jones fight and it was a nice find as I have seen it rarely offered. Chuvalo was too big for Doug who could have been a great light-heavy if he could have stayed down there.

I thought Terrell beat Chuvalo about 9-6 in their fight. Chuvalo's best night against a contender was probably his good victory over Doug Jones. Jones had just knocked out Zora Folley and was looking to a big payday. The Quarry fight of course was a good win, but George didn't look that good doing it. I have that Jones fight and it was a nice find as I have seen it rarely offered. Chuvalo was too big for Doug who could have been a great light-heavy if he could have stayed down there.
extended Jerry Quarry fight tape from the Foundation and what fights are on this tape? I would prefer purchasing from the Foundation and making a contribution to the cause. I would, however, like to buy any fights not on the Quarry Foundation tape.

9/19/02 12:23:35 PM| Evren| London||| ||| I have all those fights and Joe has all those fights. I suggest that you can buy them off Joe and he can donate some of the money to the Foundation or Maybe Mr Lonis Tuna could give money to the foundation as this is a non-profit making site. Evren

9/19/02 04:43:08 PM| Bob Bumbera| NC|| renfbera@aol.com||| | Frazier did fight every top contender in the late 60's. Never said he wasn't a great fighter. He would have beaten Liston in 68' or 69' and clobbered Norton in 73' or 74'. And he has my vote for fighting Foreman, when his people knew what would would happen. And Stander did rock Joe in their fight. All I'm saying is that between the three, Frazier didn't fight as often or defend his title as successfully as did Ali and Holmes. Style has a lot to do with it. As for Leroy Haynes? I think he had something like 20 wins and 19 or 20 losses. Very formidable guy. Elmer Ray, Obie Walker and Turkey Thompson would have given Louis a good tumble. But there's that black-white thing again. |

9/19/02 08:38:12 PM| JON| Montreal|| superflyflamboyant2000@yahoo.com||| | ANYONE LOOKING FOR BOXING VIDEOS TRY THIS WEB SITE www.boxingtimes.com then hit classifieds.......then hit videotapes there are tons of guys selling video tapes. I would recommend Pat Merrick and Lonis Tuna good prices and excellent quality videos........cool web site also|

9/19/02 07:01:57 AM| John Gerard| NYC|| rock289z@yahoo.com||| | There is no doubt in my mind that the reason Leyron Haynes at 20 loses was because he didn't he would "never work again" I could be wrong. No proof.|

9/19/02 07:35:09 AM| Kent| La Habra, Ca|| oriononside@aol.com||| | Yes there is a dark side of boxing and there is a related story that Jim Quarry either told me or posted here, I don't remember which. I tend to think he told me as it is something that could have gotten him in trouble and since we don't have some of the archives, I can't go and look it up here. Anyway, Jim said that there was a famous boxing official who approached the Quarrys and said if Mike ever was in a close fight, if the Quarrys gave him a specified amount of cash, he could make sure Mike got the decision. Anyone that knows about Mike's career knows he was on the short end of some close verdicts that he might have won. I am not going to say who the official is as what I am saying is legally hearsay and it could bring a libel lawsuit. I tend to believe the story is true. I guess if I get a chance to see Mike again in the near future, I could ask him myself, but I am still not sure I would repeat his answer here. Sorry about leading you folks on by not saying who the official is, but I don't want to cause any problems for the Quarrys as everyone knows how "sue" happy people are these days. Oh by the way Steve, I would call you mister but that title around here was reserved for Jim Quarry, AKA "Mr. Jimmy." |

9/20/02 02:35:53 PM| Jimmy Dorsey| Ventura California|| ronnyrains@yahoo.com||| | KENT: Okay Kent I'm not being a "wiseguy!".KNOWN-KNOWN-KNUCK. finally researched all of JERRY Q'S Los Angeles BOUTS: 16-1-1 (8 KNOCKOUTS). At they OLYMPIC, 1-0-1 (including pro debut) at they COLISEUM, 1-0-1 w/knockout at the SPORTS ARENA. 1-0 WITH A KNOCKOUT AT WOODLAND HILLS, AND LAST BUT NOT LEAST, 2-0 w/2 big knockouts of TONY DOYLE AND none other than EDUARDO CORLETTI. |

9/20/02 02:40:57 PM| Jimmy Dorsey| Ventura California|| ronnyrains@yahoo.com||| | WHICH WAS AT NONE OTHER THAN THEY "fabulous forum" INGLEWOOD CALIFORNIA, ANOTHER TOPIC IS NOW THEY ARE SAYING THEY J.P. SPENCER BOUT IN 1965 WAS AT THEY HACIENDA HOTEL IN CALIFORNIA. I WONDER IF "mr. JIMMY" ALSO HAD HIS PRO DEBUT THERE. YOU DO KNOW HE Fought a BOUT AT LIGHT HEAVY? IN LAS VEGAS! |

9/20/02 07:40:16 PM| Keith White| Seattle, WA|| QuarryJKW74@aol.com||| | Hello
all. I was REALLY hoping that Jerry's big 1977 comeback against Lorenzo Zanon would have been much more eventful and successful than it was for Jerry.... I saw the fight in full back then. I know Zanon was a skillful boxer, but he had a reputation as having a glass chin. Zanon also gave Ken Norton a tough go of it. It broke my heart to see Jerry get out-boxed so bad against Zanon.... This was a great chance for Jerry to jump back into the top 10 with an impressive win, but as you know the win wasn't impressive at all. I think Jerry in his prime would have crushed Zanon! Why in you guy's opinion didn't Jerry prepare himself better for this big comeback ON NATIONAL TV???? What happened????

Howard Cosell said that Zanon was knocked out by what he called "glancing blows". Do you think Zanon actually took a dive so Jerry could possibly continue his career????

| 9/20/02 08:06:26 PM| Kent| La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10| Keith, Howard Cosell was famous for saying, at times during a bout, that a punch did no damage. After all, he can say that from the safety at ringside as he wasn't the one getting hit. I do believe that Zanon got hit with good punches and I don't believe he layed down at all. Why would he fight hard for almost eight rounds and then all of sudden take a dive? It doesn't make sense. Also Keith, Jerry wasn't in shape but as we have stated here recently, Jerry had no business getting in the ring at that stage in his life. He, for his own good, should have stayed retired. Jimmy D, you are right, the Corletti fight was at the forum. I stand corrected. Mr. Jimmy never said where his one and only pro fight was, only that he lost. Maybe someone in the Quarry family knows this information. Sabrina, Sonia, or Eric, do you know where and when your dad's only pro fight was?

| 9/20/02 08:27:35 PM| Evren| London | @ | 10| The Quarry vs Doyle fight of '73 was on the undercard of Ali - Norton 2 - This probably means that there is footage of this fight somewhere. I hope it turns up.

| 9/21/02 09:03:25 AM| Sabrina Quarry-Porter| Florida | sabrinalporter@aol.com | 10| Kent, i don't know where my Dad's one and only pro fight was held, but i have seen a picture of him in the ring, my Mother had it all these years...Thanks to everyone for keeping this website going, it really means alot to us and i know my Dad would be proud....

| 9/21/02 10:09:36 AM| Jimmy Dorsey| Ventura California | ronnyrains@yahoo.com | 10| KEITH WHITE: Keith there is no way Zanon took a dive, Jerry always had problems when his foe was a "JABBER" and had an 80' inch reach, Tony Alongi, Tony Doyle, of course MUHAMMAD ALI, KEN NORTON, LARRY MIDDLINGTON etc. like fellow "stooger" Kent, we think he should have fought 8th ranked ALFREDO EVANGELISTA and got the KAYO and his RANKING#8. I HAVE a clipping of JERRY ROLLING HIS PICKUP and breaking his back that same year, before, they comeback. And i still say that had alot to do with his performance vs ZANON, HE HAD NO BUSINESS TAKING ON A "BOXER". SHOULD HAVE TOOK ON A SLUGGER WHO COULDN'T HAVE HURT HIM LIKE EVANGELISTA. KEITH COULD YOU LOOK UP 2 BOUTS AT SEATTLE LIBRARY MICROFILM, JAN.27,1969 QUARRY VS CHARLEY RENO, AND JUNE 19,1971 VS RICHARD GOSHA,THE GOSHA BOUT WAS AT OCEAN SHORES INN.(ESPECIALLY WANT TO KNOW THE BOXERS'WEIGHTS OF THE Reno BOUT, THANKS ALOT JIMMY|

| 9/21/02 10:23:36 AM| Jimmy Dorsey| Ventura California | ronnyrains@yahoo.com | 10| Kent; "MR.JIMMY" FOUGHT IN LAS VEGAS, I SENT HIM, THEY "ring magazine" clipping about a year and a half ago. i will look it up again, he weighed 174, and had come down from 189lbs!! He was so weak he couldn't fight, and was stopped, And was made to lose the weight! Funny those who were driving him weren't taking any shots. (imagine that). I THINK IT WAS AT THEY OLE HACIENDA HOTEL IN "vegas", take care.

| 9/22/02 05:19:45 AM| Evren| London | @ | 10| At the moment the scores as far as I can work out are 4 wins to Foreman - 3 to Louis and Bob Bumbera seemed to sit on the shelf a little. Bob can you give your final verdict on this one. I am off to Turkey today to join my dad on holiday who is convaelscing from his Chemotherapy treatment. Will return in a week or so. Evren

[9/22/02 11:44:52 PM] Kent Appel | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10

if you are still here, I think Bob voted for Louis over Foreman. Which means we may need someone else to decide the final verdict. Anyone else want to write in and vote as to who you think would win, Foreman or Louis, prime versus prime.

[9/23/02 10:54:29 AM] Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com | 10

I picked Louis to KO Foreman.

[9/23/02 11:51:43 AM] John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10

I don't think Zannon took a dive. He just had a style that always gave Jerry trouble. If you remember, Randy Neuman was doing very well against Jerry till he got ko'd. Against Zanon, Jerry was just very rusty and I believe it was the first and only time Richard Giachetti was in his corner.

[9/24/02 09:05:17 PM] Gerry Schultz | Ohio | jgschultz@firstam.com | 9

I well-remember JQ's fight with Zanon, Jerry was not Lyle-Shavers caliber at all, looked sluggish. Zanon was sharp but could not hurt Jerry enough to win. I don't know that Jerry won a single round, but he finally caught him and that was it. I was glad to hear he'd retired after. No dive, guys. Zanon got nailed.

[9/24/02 10:07:31 PM] Steve Morris | Oaklyn, N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | 10

Since we were down to the last matchup of the tournament, maybe now we can address the rope-a-dope! I've brought this subject up before without a response. Can it possibly be legal to lean outside the ropes to the extent that your opponent literally cannot reach your head with his punches? Can anyone tell me those ropes weren't illegally loose? C'mon, I agree Ali was a great fighter and arguably the best heavyweight except for the way he began and ended his career. No one will ever convince me the two Liston fights and the Foreman fight were on the up-and-up. I think Liston was coerced by the "mob", and the Zaire fight was decided by even more powerful racial and political factions in both Zaire and the United States. Odd that I've never seen ropes that loose again, except maybe in the Foreman vs Jimmy Young fight.

[9/25/02 06:55:36 AM] John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10

I respectfully disagree on the part about the Ali-Foreman fight being fixed. Maybe Liston took a dive -- nothing he would do would surprise me. Call me naive, but I honestly think that for the most part, the big fights are on the level. If boxing was fixed, Cooney would have beaten Holmes. Everyone was drooling for a white money maker like him and he fizzled. Just my opinion.

[9/25/02 09:50:48 AM] Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10

Steve, yes the ropes were loose in the Ali/Foreman fight, but I don't think they were as much of a factor as the media has led us to believe. After seeing the fight again recently, I was surprised how active Ali was during the whole fight. I had remembered him spending a lot of time leaning out to avoid Foreman's punches but when I saw the fight again, Ali was punching more than I remembered and about the only round he was really leaning back solely was in the fifth round. Yes Ali had his back to the ropes in much of the fight, but Ali was counter punching and giving Foreman angles and beating him to the punch a lot of the time. It was a good strategy as Ali knew he couldn't dance for the entire fight. Ali was also tying Foreman up by grabbing his a lot. I think one of the main things that did Foreman in was the heat. Remember it was held at 4 am in the morning, Zaire time, and the temp was still over 80 degrees Fahrenheit.

[9/25/02 02:10:37 PM] John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10

As a side note, I saw Jimmy Young fight Ali. Young got robbed big time. And there was not even talk of a rematch.

[9/25/02 05:33:10 PM] Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com | 10

I don't think either Liston fight was fixed. Liston got tired chasing Ali around and quit. Liston kept up with Ali for most of the fight and caught him a couple of times, he just didn't have it in him to continue. In the second fight he got caught by Ali with a right hand as he was coming in to jab, with his left foot off the canvas, off balance. It was a fast flush shot that shook him up and set him down. I think if the ref had been a pro and kept Ali in a neutral corner, Sonny could have gotten up and continued. With Ali standing over him not moving away the ref, Jersey Joe Walcott, should have called time and restored order. Ali would have KO'ed him anyway. Liston was hurt by smaller guy's than Ali. Machen shook him up, and the guy who took Sonny 10 rounds twice, I can't think of his name(I'll look it up), also shook Sonny up and remember Leotis Martin. Also, Liston was a strange bird, nobody liked him and he might have just said to hell with it who needs this crap both times. We may never know. As for "The Rumble in the Jungle", the ropes were loose, witch doctors were dancing the Moon was in the Seventh House yadda,yadda,yadda. I don't think it made any difference. George never had the kind of endurance needed to keep up with Ali. Ali took a body pounding on the ropes yes, he also landed straight hard shots on Foreman that wore George down. Big George's legs were gone after the 6th round. The heat may have bothered George but it was the same temperature for Ali. The time off for the cut eye? George had enough time to get back into shape. Don King? Well maybe. But a fix...no way. George can't beat Ali period, prime vs. prime, 32 vs. 28. I also don't think Jimmy Young got robbed. He did jab Ali's head off, but every time Ali went on the offensive he ducked through the ropes to hide. If you say "thats his style" fine, that style won't win you a championship. Judges are influenced by your style and, if your trying to win or just survive. Young wasn't trying to beat Ali like he was vs. Norton or Foreman. He was in there, that night, to survive. | 9/25/02 05:52:15 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10|Bert Whitehurst was the guy that took Liston the distance twice. I think Sonny hurt him in both fights and couldn't put him away. Small crafty guy from St. Louis. Oh, Steve, what was questionable about the way Ali began his career.| 9/26/02 12:09:26 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago||sadmspats@yahoo.com|||10|Liston got hit with the best shots Cleveland Williams had and wasn't seriously hurt. Ali beat Liston twice the record books say. I have heard many stories about those fights and can only say no one really knows what happened except for Sonny. The Foreman fight was legit with Ali of course having all the advantages. He always had them by that point of his career because he was Ali.| 9/26/02 01:40:55 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|I believe Liston and Williams fought twice and they both ended in round 2. Williams was good fighter with a good left hook and left jab.Sadly, he was hit by a car and killed about two years ago in Houston. | 9/26/02 08:46:48 PM|tim|New York||steinmec@frontiernet.net|||10|I loved Jerry Quarry. Does anyone remember his fight with Chuvalo? Seems to me that Jerry was kicking his butt when he got caught with a left hook. He went down, jumped up and for some reason took the 8 count on one knee. But he stayed down until after Zack Clayton counted 10. He went nuts claiming he missed the count. Later Boxing Illustrated magazine implied the Quarry quit because he couldn't put Chuvalo away. That is the dumbest thing Bert Sugar ever said. He said something about the draw with Tony Alongi--that Jerry complained about low blows and at one point wanted to quit that fight also. I seem to rember Ring magazine describing Chuvalo after the fight as a "mess" and "took quite a going-over even as a winner". Any comments out there?| 9/27/02 06:51:27 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|Chuvalo was a very tough guy and won fair and square. He did take a beating, but Jerry stayed down too long. I don't know why. He certainly did not quit. Perhaps he was too disoriented by the punch, the crowd, or whatever. Bert Sugar will say anything just to get quoted. He thinks he is terribly clever and is his own greatest fan.| 9/27/02 09:36:54 AM|P. Drolet|Montreal||drolpaul@aol.com|||10|John, the first Liston-Williams fight, held in Miami on April 15th, 1959, ended in the 3rd round. Jerry's losses to Ellis and Chuvalo were the ones he most regretted. The Ellis fight should have been postponed. Jerry was devastated by the loss to Chuvalo. In the fight's immediate aftermath, Jerry's entourage claimed that Clayton's count was quick. There was no malfeasance on Clayton's part, however; Jerry rose just as Clayton had tolled ten. Like Cosell, Sugar has a strain of bluster and self-promotion about him. I wouldn't give much weight to remarks he may have made about Jerry looking to quit. I've seen a tape Sugar narrated several years back that featured highlights of Jerry's career. After his ill-advised last comeback against Cramner, Sugar remarked that it was tragic to see what had become of a "once great fighter". Gone were the heady days when he floored and bested his boyhood idol, Floyd Patterson, at 22; his pitched battle against Frazier in 1969; the disappointments against Ali, and the nights he soared against the likes of Lyle and Shavers. He was reduced now to fighting some no-name pug in a Denver hotel for a thousand bucks.

As a fan, the losses to Ellis and Chuvalo were the most frustrating. In hindsight we know Jerry was injured before the Ellis fight. It is just that Jerry should have been at least WBA champion, even if only briefly. I wish Ellis had given him a rematch instead of Ellis fighting Patterson. Jerry would have won the rematch. As far as Chuvalo goes, Jerry was put down with a good punch but he didn't appear too badly hurt, Jerry somehow forgot he had jumped up at about the count of two and when he kneeled down, he thought he was taking the eight count. It was a mental lapse on his part, he simply lost track of the count. Jerry Quarry never, ever quit in a fight.

OKAY: I happen to have both press clippings of 2 N.Y. papers on they alongi,bout in old msg.I was proud of Jerry in this one, and i will post it SUNDAY, get your own opinion.Is all I am going to say, new york times, AS FAR AS CHUVALO, Only reasonitly put it on Jerry's record as a loss!!!

"californian Drops opponent in rough bout at Garden"-Jerry Quarry of Los Angeles,tough resilient and dogged,fought to a 10-round draw with they more experienced Tony Alongi,and emerged as they most interesting heavyweight of Madison Square Gardens dozen last night.Pressing his attack on the bigger man,Quarry managed to get underneath Alongi's good left jab,and knock him down in the 7th with a left hook to the face,the crowd seemed ok with they verdict. And they really didn't seem to consider Alongi's long and vicious thumb. His three solid left hooks to Quarry's groin,and his quick elbows in the clinches,Quarry a 20 yr old 6-footer,4 inches shorter, 7 years younger, and about 15 pounds lighter, tried not to consider them either, but his legs slowed in the later rounds due to the low drubbing.Referee Mercante(one of his infrequent bad nights scored the bout even)as did judge Aidala 5-5.and Leo Birnbaum,who should have never been gave a pencil had it 7-2-1 Alongi.n.y TIMES Scored it 6-4 Quarry. all six HW MATCHES CONSISSED of young heavyweights, but only Quarry seemed to combine a sense of patterned intelligence with pure animal power,his jab needs more training, but his reactions were quick, and his willingness to stay belligerent and pressing ahead was impressive.P.S. JOE FRAZIER WAS ALSO ON THEY UNDERCARD!!I'll take this article by Robert Lipsite,over anything ole Bert Sugar had to say of JQ!!!!! thing about belts and talent, the same guy doesn't always have them both. In the public eye, Jerry was considered a "champion" from before the Ellis fight to the first losses to Ali and Frazier. It took Joe some time to be considered clearly better, and Ali was out of the picture and had lost to Joe. During this period, Jerry was often treated as a champion, and better than Ellis, whom actually briefly had a belt. Says a lot about perception and opinion.

9/27/02 11:35:05 PM | tim | new york | steinmec@frontiernet.net | 10 | Thanks for the comments. However to be fair re the Chuvalo fight: Ring magazine wrote in their fight report that Chuvalo "appeared to be coming on stronger in the 5th and 6th rounds. Boxing Illustrated gave a very slanted report of the fight claiming that "in spite of fighting with practically one eye Chuvalo took the 6th round when he forced Quarry to the ropes and whaled away at the body. Quarry was being forced to stand and fight instead of boxing Chuvalo" Forced to stand and fight? Hello, at no time in his career was Jerry "forced" to stand and fight! Also, Chuvalo was quoted as saying "I wasn't too badly hurt no matter how I looked. I was smothering a lot of his shots" With what George, your face? Sorry, but it seems to me that George was getting pounded. Also as I recall watching this fight on WOR TV I recall that announcer Don Dunphy did not like Quarry. He consistently highlighted every time Chuvalo landed a punch. Later when Quarry KO'd Mac Foster, during the post-fight interview in the ring Dunphy kept saying "I know that, Jerry" in a very condescending manner. Oh well, Don never stepped into a ring himself, did he? In closing it should be remembered that Zack Clayton was in fact yelling the count in Jerry's ear. I can't blame Clayton-when he yelled "10" Jerry's knee was on the canvas. It was Jerry's mistake and he paid for it. No surprise that Chuvalo never stepped into the ring with Jerry again.

9/28/02 05:46:17 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10 |
Yes it was hard to accept that Jerry lost the Chuvalo fight. But Jerry did lose, it doesn't matter what the circumstances were. The main thing that bothers me now is when I read where Burt Sugar said Jerry quit. I will repeat again, Jerry never quit in his life! Sugar does not know what he was talking about. For my own reasons though, I think Zack Clayton didn't like the Quarrrys and he wouldn't have gone out of his way to give Jerry the benefit of the doubt if there was any way he could have decided in Jerry's favor.

9/29/02 01:34:08 AM | Daryl Breese | Bakersfield | CALBREESE@AOL.COM | 10 |
Prime versus Prime Louis takes Foreman by mid to late round KO, Louis' boxing and power begin to dominate in the 6th round and he goes on to a 9th or 10th round KO. Foreman's youthful ability to overextend himself was brought in full view by Ali and Jimmy Young. The feeling of omnipotence that floods us in youth has no place in the heavyweight arena. Sure, George won alot, but was outpaced and outfought by Ali and Young when planning, wisdom, and vision outweighed a near equal amount of talent and intestinal fortitude on both sides. Granted, later, Big George with more wisdom and the big picture tanked Moore in ten to regain, and if he had had the same planning, maturity, and ability to pace himself in his prime (with his incredible physical ability), he would have KOed Louis inside nine rounds. Remember, George had tenacious counterpunching and boxing ability, but preferred to attack. That, in his prime, was his mantra, and in a few fights, it cost him.

While running a health spa in Houston, I invited George to a workout, just after the Young fight. What an incredible guy! He had just been rope-a-doped twice, and still maintained his personality. A quick comment on the rope-a-dope; Ali & Young used their full talent in conjunction with the parameters that the ring offers just so they might not miss out on the biggest individual title on the planet! Sounds smart to me. What do you think?

9/30/02 09:10:40 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 |
Way to go all, the way this is all kept going. Thank you all, our Dad, & Uncle Jerry, would be glad to see all this.
Well - Louis pips Foreman thanks for the great vote - the biggest yet ! ! So there we have it the Final. Muhammad Ali vs Joe Louis. I agree personally that these were the two finest Heavyweights in history both in their accomplishments and ability. If we can have all the results by next tuesday. Thankyou.

Ali U dec over 15 9-6 8-6-1 7-5-3 judges scores

In reference to some of the conditions that where allowed in the past, and were legit at the time. If they were within the "parameters of the ring", then I guess I don't a legitament complaint. I did notice that after the Ali vs Foreman fight there was allot of attention paid to rope tension among fight managers and safety commision inspectors after that fight. After the Young vs Ali fight, I've never seen the rope- a -dope tactic used successfully again. Bob, I expressed myself poorly on one of my posts. The opinion I ment to give was that Ali's heavyweight championship tenure was damaged at the beginning by the two Liston fights. If I'm wrong about the Mafia and black muslim influence, then okay I could be wrong. What about, however, the claims that Liston was much older than he claimed. I read somewhere that he might have been as old as 50! If just that this guy Liston went from crushing guys like Cleveland Williams twice and Floyd Patterson twice, to suddenly looking like an old man, chasing Ali without without a clue. I guess in retrospect, it doesn't matter. No one else of that era could have even touched Ali anyway. I would pick the Ali of the Cleveland Williams fight, which I consider his masterpiece of speed and reflex against a heavy hitter. [Although I don't know how old Williams was, I did see a tape of the fight] This Ali would confuse Louis with his movement and batter him with those lightning fast combinations and those accurate, lightning fast jabs. Ali would tko Louis while still on his feet in 10 rounds. The heavier, slower, stronger Ali who fought Joe Frazier at any time during those three fights would have ko'd Louis in 8 to 10 rounds.

Louis is like Tyson is just one way. Both were blessed with fast hands but not particularly fast feet. Louis would never touch Ali and even if he did, no champ ever took a punch like he could -- and that includes Jeffries, Marciano, and other iron men. Probably only Chuvalo was more durable than Ali. To make a long story short -- Ali by 9th round TKO. In my mind Ali was about as good they get.

Here is something to think about, i came up with 13 major bouts of JERRY QUARRY'S career that were upsets, all four draw's, Jerry was they underdog (YES ALL FOUR!) . then Jerry "UPSET!" Patterson, spencer, Mathis, Foster, and on him being "upset". Machen, Ellis, Chuvalo, and SECOND JOE FRAZIER (QUARRY 6-5 FAVORITE). I do not know of any other heavy that had many "upsets" win, lose, or draw!

OH YES NO.13 RON LYLE OF COURSE, JERRY WAS 12-5 UNDERDOG. some places however went 7-5 LYLE BY FIGHT TIME, JERRY WAS FAVORED OVER SHAVERS SO I COULD NOT INCLUDE THAT ONE. 13 UPSETS IN MAJOR BOUTS OF ONE'S CAREER IS ASTOUNDING, WIN LOSE OR DRAW. Another thing was after only 13 fights, jerry was rated #33 world. and #22 after machen, I THOUGHT HE WASN'T BROUGHT UP THAT QUICKLY?

Steve, Sonny may well have been payed off by the mob or threatenend by the Black Muslems, wouldn't suprise me a bit to find out Sonny took a couple hundred thousand to tank it. And no one knows for sure how old Liston was when he fought Ali. I think he was closer to 40 than 32. So yeah, Ali did start his reign with controversy. I just wasn't clear what you meant. A 40 year old guy trying to catch Ali in 1964? I beleive, like I've said before, he just said screw it. He hit Ali with everything he had, couldn't catch him long enough to hurt him, he didn't really train hard for the fight, thinking he would take the kid apart in two or three rounds. He was tired and in pain and quit. Please don't think I took offense to your post. Hey, I come here because I love boxing, Jerry was a hero of mine and I like to re-live the past little bit, maybe gain a new insight or perspective on some idols of my youth. And this site has done that for me. As for the Ali-Louis fight. I'll have to go with Ali. Louis was not that great when opponents showed movement and kept him off balance. Tommy Farr and more so Billy Conn showed that. Conn was 5'11" at 174. Ali would come in about an inch and a half taller and 10 pounds heavier than Louis, Ali had size, speed and was too smart to get cornered by Joe. Ali by 9th round KO. | 10/2/02 08:51:03 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|I always thought Jerry was rushed too quickly into the big time. He fought Machen at age 21 and Patterson for the first time at 22. He also had his only two title shots at age 25, against Ellis and Frazier. Jerry had so many tough fights that by the time he was 29, he was through as a major talent. Bear in mind he also had over 200 amateur fights. In hindsight, maybe if he had been brought along slower, than maybe he would have had a better chance of winning a title. In contrast, Wladmir Klitschko of Ukrain is now 26 and he has not had near the level of competition that Jerry had early. Klitschko is the biggest threat to Lennox Lewis around (both literally and figuritively) but could it be that he is being moved too slowly? The opposite of Jerry?| 10/3/02 09:23:09 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||||10|As a sidenote: I think that Jerry and Joe Bugner would have been a good matchup. Bugner could box, take a punch, was gritty, but was not a great puncher. We all know what Jerry brought to the table.| 10/3/02 11:43:56 AM|Evren|London|||10|The one and only Ali would have stopped Louis late in a match that would be very tough in the early going. When Ali's weight tolled in the later rounds a battered Joe would be caught on the ropes defenseless as Ali 'ripped into him'. The Winner is the greatest. I think Jerry would have edged Joe Bugner in a tight match because of his greater desire.| 10/3/02 03:16:18 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z2@yahoo.com||||10|JOHN GERARD: YES I THINK QUARRY-BUGNER WOULD BE INTERESTING,ALTHOUGH MR.JIMMY TOOK THE TRIP TO ENGLAND WITH JERRY AND SAID HE TOYED WITH BUGNER IN THE GYM WITH INSULTING EASE(About 1972). OF COURSE BUGNER CAME ON IN 75' WHERE QUARRY HAD THE WARS WITH FRAZIER,NORTON. I USE TO TALK TO MIKE QUARRY OFTEN IN BAKERSFIELD SUMMER 1980. AND HE PRETTY MUCH KNEW JERRY BEST,BOBICK,BONAVENTA,BUGNER,KIRKMAN NO PROBLEM, I ALSO BELIEVE RANDY NEUMANN WAS A BETTER FIGHTER THAN EVER GIVING CREDIT FOR,HELL HE WAS A COLLEGE STUDENT WITH A 22-2 RECORD, NO PUNCH,BUT I SEEN HIM WIN EVERY ROUND VS BOONE KIRKMAN ON THE 1975 FRIDAY NIGHT FIGHTS, ALSO ONE MORE THING, I HEARD OF RAY "WINDMILL" WHITE'SPARRING EXPERIMENT WITH JQ IN L.A. WHEN WHITE WAS A HEAVYWEIGHT EARLY ON.JERRY STARTED OFF TAKING IT EASY WHICH RAISED SOME EYEBROWS, THEN WHITE CLINCHED AND DID ONE OF HIS PATENTED BEHIND THE BACK PUNCHES TO THE FACE,JERRY WAS NOT AMUSED CORNERD WHITE AND DECKED HIM BREAKING A COUPLE OF RIBS!!| 10/3/02 07:52:37 PM|Gerard Carrier|San Jose, California||gcarrier62@go.com|||10|Any chance of a book on the life and career of the late Jerry Quarry being published in the future?|
It is almost unfair to compare eras when Ali and Louis are paired. I agree, they are the two best ever. But Louis is a victim in that his movement and physical attributes as a fighter, while ahead of the class for his day, pale when compared to athletes who came later. A prime vs. prime does not do justice to Louis, who would be even better had he come along later. Still, Ali is nearly unbeatable anyway. Despite what some have said, I think highly of some of the heavies mentioned, Jimmy Y, Bugner, Bonavena, and Chuvolo. I think Jerry probably would have all their numbers, though. I also agree, as I've said, that JQ was rushed, and took too many real fights too soon. It had a big impact on the way his career unfolded. As good as he was in 1973, he'd have probably been even better with a climb less steep.

I have been working on the JQ Biography for months. I still have a dozen interviews to get, and could used all your help with any special stories and memories. Call my cell phone 661.703.4444. This will be a very positive book with no cheap shots. My goal is to have this book hit hard---just like Jerry.

Gerry - that Louis reached the final is testament to his abilities regardless of era's. It is no shame to lose to Ali.

I am picking Ali by decision over Louis. Ali had the advantage of movement and hand speed as well as at his best, he was very hard to hit. Add to this his ability to take a punch and we have Ali winning by out landing Louis over the distance. Louis had trouble with Billy Conn because of his movement and boxing ability and Ali was bigger and better at it than Conn. So the winner and still THE GREATEST OF ALL TIME, MUHAMMED ALI!!

I am picking Ali by decision over Louis. Ali had the advantage of movement and hand speed as well as at his best, he was very hard to hit. Add to this his ability to take a punch and we have Ali winning by out landing Louis over the distance. Louis had trouble with Billy Conn because of his movement and boxing ability and Ali was bigger and better at it than Conn. So the winner and still THE GREATEST OF ALL TIME, MUHAMMED ALI!!

Kent - if you are gonna be a good journalist you are gonna have to learn how to spell the greatest heavyweight fighter of all times name !! (joking)

Don Dunphy was o.k, he let the action speak for itself most of the time. I really enjoy Dick Enberg's call of the Quarry-Orbillo fight in Los Angeles I believe. Any of you Californian's know what network Dick was working for back then? Was he a west coast NBC guy?

Kent, Enberg was with California independent station KTLA, channel 5 during this time. I don't think he went to NBC until much later. Enberg was the voice of Southern California major league baseball team, the Angels, for quite some time and they broadcast on KTLA.

You got it right about Ali -v- Louis. Both were great punchers, but Ali absorbed punishment better. It is sad that there would have to be a loser from these two great fighters, however, for mine, Ali wins on points. He got up when knocked down (and at some stage he would have tasted the canvass against Louis); he scored points even when off balance; his punches hurt even when he was going backwards; and his evasive skills were freakish and only the best managed to hit him. Add the best jab in the business, and the most reliable chin that ever survived bombs like Henry's Hammer and Joe's left hook, and there you have it ......... the greatest of all time! At least in my opinion anyway. By the way - this is a terrific site.

So the votes are in and they are unanimous - The Greatest of All Time - Ali! Ali! Ali! Thanks for everyone that took part, Evren.

Joe Krause: Joe did ENBERG give the fighter's weights of the Quarry/orbillo BOUT? mr.JIMMY SAID JERRY WAS 192LBS BUT I'm not sure if he mentioned the weights, I will be watching that fight again soon and will let you know. That is a very good fight.

Special thanks again to Evren for running the tournament. It was a long hard road from beginning to end. You know, my spell check kept saying I was spelling Muhammad wrong, but I just ignored it. That means everything I have ever written, in posts and articles, is wrong as I never bothered to check it. Thanks Evren.

The tournament was interesting, as it allowed for comparisons between fighters from different eras, and gave us a chance to appreciate what made each of them remarkable. Again, I don't think the more classic guys, except Louis, received their full due, but it is all fun and opinion anyway. Particular to Jerry, who fight 3 of the Final Four, it again gives him credit. He took rounds from Frazier in their two matches and outboxed him before succumbing to Joe's power and steam. Had Jerry fought Foreman in '73 or '74, some think he might have made history. In this tournament I think Jerry just made the Sweet 16, showing that the difference between some of these guys is pretty slim. I'm glad there's a site like this, with these kinds of discussions. Fun stuff.

I don't have any direct knowledge on how Jerry got along with Cosell. I know Cosell at times said some unkind things about Jerry. For example, in the commentary leading up to or during the Ali verses Lyle fight, Cosell made a snide comment when he mentioned Lyle had lost to Jerry, he said, "not many can make that claim." Which is to say that Jerry almost always lost, which we know isn't true. Cosell was very much a fair weather friend who didn't have much use for someone who wasn't on top anymore.

I don't have any direct knowledge on how Jerry got along with Cosell. I know Jerry was cordial with him, but I am not sure why. Cosell at times said some unkind things about Jerry. For example, in the commentary leading up to or during the Ali verses Lyle fight, Cosell made a snide comment when he mentioned Lyle had lost to Jerry, he said, "not many can make that claim." Which is to say that Jerry almost always lost, which we know isn't true. Cosell was very much a fair weather friend who didn't have much use for someone who wasn't on top anymore.

I've heard a lot about Cosell's comments on Jerry Quarry, good and bad. I remember Chuvalo saying Jerry was cocky, but I truly believe Chuvalo liked and respected Jerry, I know JERRY was steamed a lot. about how their bout went, How about the Giants-angels, ive been a giant fan since 1969!

Hey, Look, Quarry fans it is time to step up to the plate and provide the quotes and stories to put the polish on the JC Bio, whether you want credit or to remain anonymous, good Lord call me, Daryl 661.703.4444 Jerry would have loved this, it will be good for boxing, holy cow they are doing Sandy Koufax BIO for Pete's Sakes..........please, pitch in, NO QUIT! Call me, I am friendly, I have lunch with Bobby on a regular basis. The input I have from senators and professional heavyweights is good, but the fans of the sport remain a little lean. So let's glove up and do this for the Quarry Family. I admire them more than any other boxing family I know.........help me honor them. My mailing address is 12124 Cliff Avenue Bakersfield, CA 93306 |

Mr. Breese, can't wait to see a biography on Uncle Jerry. Dad, we all love & miss you, Uncle Jerry you too. It's great this site is still going, boy my Dad, and Uncle Jerry, would love this. |

Looking forward to attending The Battle Of The Badges at Soboba Casino in San Jacinto Ca next Saturday, October 26. Eric Quarry, Jimmy's son, will be fighting an exhibition. Eric, I know your dad will be in your corner, just like before. Hello to Sonia and everyone, I am sure I will see you there and if you can't make it down, hello to Sabrina also. Speaking of Bobby Quarry, he is planning a tribute to Jerry Quarry and a battle of the bouncers in Bakersfield, Ca, at the Dome for Saturday, November 26. It is the fourth annual event. More information on this event is to follow.|

Regarding Bobby's event, the date is November 23 or 30. I need to check on this. As I said, more information to follow.|

Kent, I will be there at Saboba Springs to watch Eric's fight. So maybe we'll see you there, should be fun. Yes, Dad, will be there to watch over it all, Uncle Jerry, too. |

California|ronnyrains@yahoo.com|||10|Did anyone see Mike Paul's alltime rating system? heres a run down of Quarry oppponents, 1-Muhammad Ali,9-Joe Frazier,20-Ken Norton,21-Floyd Patterson,42-Earnie Shavers,83-ron lyle,123-Jimmy Ellis,126-eddie machen,152-Mac Foster 199-George chuvalo, this is of course of alltime sooo Jerry fought 10 guys inside the top 200, P.s. JERRY QUARRY IS RATED #27 I FIGURE THATS ABOUT ACCURATE|

Did anyone see Mike Paul's alltime rating system? heres a run down of Quarry oppponents, 1-Muhammad Ali,9-Joe Frazier,20-Ken Norton,21-Floyd Patterson,42-Earnie Shavers,83-ron lyle,123-Jimmy Ellis,126-eddie machen,152-Mac Foster 199-George chuvalo, this is of course of alltime sooo Jerry fought 10 guys inside the top 200, P.s. JERRY QUARRY IS RATED #27 I FIGURE THATS ABOUT ACCURATE|

Did anyone see Mike Paul's alltime rating system? heres a run down of Quarry oppponents, 1-Muhammad Ali,9-Joe Frazier,20-Ken Norton,21-Floyd Patterson,42-Earnie Shavers,83-ron lyle,123-Jimmy Ellis,126-eddie machen,152-Mac Foster 199-George chuvalo, this is of course of alltime sooo Jerry fought 10 guys inside the top 200, P.s. JERRY QUARRY IS RATED #27 I FIGURE THATS ABOUT ACCURATE|

Did anyone see Mike Paul's alltime rating system? heres a run down of Quarry oppponents, 1-Muhammad Ali,9-Joe Frazier,20-Ken Norton,21-Floyd Patterson,42-Earnie Shavers,83-ron lyle,123-Jimmy Ellis,126-eddie machen,152-Mac Foster 199-George chuvalo, this is of course of alltime sooo Jerry fought 10 guys inside the top 200, P.s. JERRY QUARRY IS RATED #27 I FIGURE THATS ABOUT ACCURATE|
Norton and also Baer and Sharkey and been rated a little higher. Sharkey would have been a tough one for Jerry, Schmeling would have out-boxed him and I've always felt he would have creamed Norton. But hey, 27th all time is not too bad for a guy who never became champion.

| 10/22/02 11:24:38 AM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA |

CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10 |

Talk about some of the bouts we missed, of that great 70's era, RON LYLE- KEN NORTON, THEIR RECORDS ARE ALMOST IDENTICAL, AND PRETTY MUCH AGAINST THE SAME COMPETITION, although sure to be Norton they odds on favorite, i might have threw a few bucks LYLE'S way.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>10/22/02 12:53:57 PM</th>
<th>paul</th>
<th>MONTREAL</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>drolpaul@aol.com</td>
<td>10</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Steve, Jerry's trainer at the time of the Ellis bout was Teddy Bentham. But it wasn't Teddy's call; it was Jerry's father, Jack, who green-lighted the bout with Ellis. He feared that postponing the bout would jeopardize Jerry's largest purse up to that point, $125,000.00. The decision doesn't cast a very favorable light on Jack.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>10/22/02 05:43:22 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>LA HABRA, CA</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>oriononside@aol.com</td>
<td>10</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

I am not siding with Jack Quarry's decision to go ahead with the Ellis fight because if Jerry was in pain, he should not have taken the fight. But in all fairness to Jack and Bentham, I don't think they knew the severity of Jerry's injury before the fight. It is my understanding that it was after the fight that they discovered that Jerry had a broken back and it was then he was put into a body cast.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>10/23/02 03:15:13 AM</th>
<th>mr tuna</th>
<th>VANCOUVER CANADA</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>jabboxing@yahoo.com</td>
<td>10</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

ANYONE LOOKING FOR JERRY QUARRY FIGHTS ON VHS VIDEO CALL 1 604 517 1558 FOR DETAILS .................VERY NICE PICTURE QUALITY ..............IF U NEED REFRENCES I CAN GIVE U REFRENCES ..............CHECK IT OUT{{{{{{ |

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>10/23/02 03:27:42 AM</th>
<th>mr tuna</th>
<th>VANCOUVER CANADA</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>jabboxing@yahoo.com</td>
<td>10</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

fantasy match up ..........WHO WOULD HAVE WON IF JERRY QUARRY GOT A CHANCE AT GEORGE FOREMANS CROWN IN 1973?????????? ILL GIVE U MINE.......I LOVE JERRY QUARRY.........BUT BIG GEORGE WOULD HAVE REALLY PUT A HURT ON JERRY..........CHUVALO HAD A GREAT CHIN AND QUARRY DOES ALSO ....I THINK JERRY WOULD HAVE LASTED 1 MORE ROUND THAN CHUVALO..THE BOUT WOULD END IN 4TH RD TKO.....I THINK JERRY COUNTERPUNCHING MIGHT HAVE BOthered BIG GEORGE IN THE 1ST RD BUT THATS IT.........FOREMANS CHIN AND HEART IS GREATER THAN SHAVERS..........AND JAB...............MY OPINION ONLY.........MAN I WISH THEY WOULD HAVE GOTTEN IT ON .........MY VHS COPY OF THE SHAVERS/QUARRY HAS GIL CLANCY (QUARRYS TRAINER/MANAGER AT THE TIME)) CALLING FOREMAN ON. SAYING FOREMAN WAS DUCKIN QUARRY.............TO LARRY HOLMES DIDNT PEAK A LITTLE YOUNGER HE PROBABLY COULD HAVE FOUGHT QUARRY AROUND 75.......THAT WOULD BE A TOUGH CALL............IN 75 HOLMES WAS FIGHTING NOBODIES IN THE PA AREA........HE DIDNT FIGHT ANYONE WITH A NAME UNTILL 76 (ROY TIGER WILLIAMS) AND AN 34 YEAR OLD SHAVERS IN 78....I SAY QUARRY HAS DECENT CHANCE IN 1975..........BUT NOT REALLY AFTER.......HE LOOKED HORRID AGAINST ZANON IN 77 AND LARRY STARTED LOOKING GOOD ON ABC TELECASTS LIKE HIS FIGHT WITH TOM PRATER IN 77.....|

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>10/23/02 03:30:30 AM</th>
<th>TUNA</th>
<th>VANCOUVER CANADA</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>jabboxing@yahoo.com</td>
<td>10</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

ANYONE ELSE ON HERE COLLECT JERRY QUARRY FIGHTS ON VHS//????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????????!!!!!
DOES ANYONE HERE HAVE J QUARRY VS DOYLE ON VHS VIDEO?????? |

My 2 cents on Foreman-Quarry. In all respects to Jerry, I think Foreman would have won. Similar to Foreman-Chuvalo. In my book, George was a great one, Jerry a very, very, good one. I think the combination of George's size, Jerry's tender skin, George's power, and a few other things would have conspired against Jerry. With all that being said, I would not have been shocked to hear Jerry won. He was that good a competitor and that game a fighter. |

Jerry verses Foreman seems to be a recurring theme around here but here goes, again. One thing Jerry would have to do is to get respect early in a fight with Foreman. He would have to tag him hard in the very first round, and probably he would have to do it more than once, something Frazier and Norton were not able to do as they both got hurt early and they were never really able to recover. The fact that Foreman would wind up and telegraph his punches would be to Jerry's advantage and Jerry could take advantage of this with his superior speed by moving side to side and in and out, beating Foreman to the punch. Remember Jerry took a couple of bombs from Earnie Shavers in their fight in than he knocked Shavers out just after this. Jerry also took some bombs from Ron Lyle and Mac Foster and he won those fights handily. The point is, Jerry did well against big punchers. I think Jerry could take Foreman's best shots and not go down. Remember, Chuvalo was still on his feet when his fight was stopped against Foreman (when was he ever off them?) and I think Jerry would not have been knocked down too. But could Foreman cut Jerry? This was a recurring problem during his career as half of his losses were due to cuts and it is a possible ending to a Foreman fight. |

John, Jerry was fast, even at the end of 1973, when he knocked out Shavers. He must of hit Shavers with 20 quick unanswered punches, all within a few seconds leading up to the knockout. He was also beating Lyle to the punch throughout their bout and Lyle was as quick as Foreman, as Lyle proved in their slugfest. In a bout with Foreman, Jerry may not have been as fast as he was in say, 1968, but he was certainly faster than Foreman, one of the advantages of Jerry being a small heavyweight. John, you make a good point about Foreman having a good jab and that is why he might have cut Jerry.

Bobby Quarry's event, A Tribute To Jerry Quarry and the Battle of the Bouncers, is scheduled for Saturday, November 30. It is a benefit for Puglistica Dementia and it is going to feature bouts between local bouncers and other bouts as well. I will be there and I hope to see and finally meet some of the regulars that frequent this board. More to come on this event.

yes ONE THING JERRY DID HAVE WAS HAND SPEED, HE WAS DEFINETLY FASTER THAN GEORGE, I KNOW JERRY HAD BILLS TO PAY, BUT IF HE COULD HAVE REFRAINED FROM FRAZIER IN 1974, I THINK THE PUBLIC WOULD HAVE DEMANDED HE GOT A TITTLE SHOT, QUARRY-FOREMAN WOULD HAVE ANSWERED ALL THE 3 DECADES OF QUESTIONS
yes ONE THING JERRY DID HAVE WAS HAND SPEED, HE WAS DEFINITELY FASTER THAN GEORGE, I KNOW JERRY HAD BILLS TO PAY, BUT IF HE COULD HAVE REFRAINED FROM FRAZIER IN 1974, I THINK THE PUBLIC WOULD HAVE DEMANDED HE GOT A TITTLE SHOT, QUARRY-FOREMAN WOULD HAVE ANSWERED ALL THE 3 DECADES OF QUESTIONS

TO JIMMY DORSEY: yes, agreed Jerry did have hand speed over George. But the Foreman who destroyed Norton had legs that were just as fast as Jerry's. Also, even though the Foreman-Lyle fight was one of the most exciting and re-watched fights of all time it was actually George at his worst. He was very rusty after the Ali fight and had still had some mental things to work out after that loss. He was wild, slow, and rusty in that fight. But in his next major fight, the second Frazier battle he overcame all that and looked very good. We can't judge Foreman solely on the very sloppy (but fun) Lyle fight. It was George at his worst, even though he won. I saw Jerry fight Joe Alexander (who I believe scored a knockdown) and Randy Neuman and even though he won, they were by no means a fair indication of how good Jerry really was. All fighters have performances like that but they can't be extrapolated and have their entire career evaluated on that. Personally I think George peaked with the second Frazier fight. And since he retired way too early we will never know how good he could have been.

TO KENT: Agreed Jerry could fight moving backwards much better than Frazier. Not sure about Norton. I think George just cut the ring down on Ken. Peralta fought pretty well on the run against a very young George. All things considered, I still think George's size, jab, power, combined with Jerry's tender skin would have done it for him. But Jerry could counter punch and early in his career George lacked stamina and maybe Jerry would have gotten to him in a late round. I would still pick George.

I am up early on a Saturday morning and low and behold, something is not right in Quarryville! I have spoken to Bobby several times, mainly about the event he is putting on (which I am helping get the word out on) and boxing, and though I don't know him well, some anonymous comment does not make me form an opinion on Bobby. Besides, it is not my place to get involved in Quarry personal matters anyway.
JERRY QUARRY OR GERRY COONEY?????

|10/26/02 03:10:18 PM|paul|montreal||drolpaul@aol.com|||10|Jerry...in a walk over Cooney. Cooney had poor coordination, a brittle chin and a spindly set of pins. He did ride that big left hook to considerable success, however. But Lyle and Norton were both shot when Cooney lowered the boom on them. Although Jerry would have to be careful, I'm convinced he would have side-stepped Cooney's jab and put some serious hurt on him on the inside. Jerry within 3.|10/27/02 09:53:25 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|I agree with Paul, Jerry could take Cooney, probably mid round stoppage. If someone doesn't think such a smaller man could do Cooney in, just remember what Michael Spinks did to him. I realize Cooney was ill prepared for that fight, but if Spinks could hurt Cooney, then Jerry could hurt him too.|10/27/02 01:41:16 PM|mark sargeant|UK||lpu00mts@reading.ac.uk|||10|Although i believe that Jerry would beat Cooney, and probably by knockout, I don't think it would be that easy. Cooney may have knocked out excellent fighters when they were past their prime (Young, Norton, Lyle) but it still took something decent to do it. Likewise, I thought he gave the magnificent Holmes a good battle as well, showing that he could take punishment and dish some out. Holmes admitted in his autobiography that Cooney hit him with some of the hardest shots he experienced and coming from someone who fought Tyson and Shavers, that is no small tribute. Jerry was at times a bit inconsistent, but still an excellent fighter, but at his best I think his handspeed would have given him the edge, and gone towards ensuring a pretty convincing points win or late knockout. The Quarry who fought Lyle, Shavers and the first Frazier fight in particular would have been too much for Cooney.|10/27/02 01:49:44 PM|steve morris|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|I've just read three so-so books on 70's and 80's fighters. Norton's book gives very little in the way of respect for Jerry's qualities as a fighter or person. He has no solid facts to back up his somewhat vague assertions that Quarry may have been a racist or that he was cocky. He says that he always felt he could beat Quarry, Larry Holmes does say that Quarry was one of a group of fighters who would be champion's if fighting the more recent heavyweights. Ernie Shavers ,however,seems to have given Jerry the most respect. He writes that Jerry "pummelled me from ringpost to ringpost" and generally gave him the worst beating of his career. He makes no excuses about walking into a lucky punch.|10/27/02 08:47:46 PM|Kent |La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Thanks Eric for winning last night at Soboba. I was getting a complex because the last five fighters I have met that I have seen fight recently have all lost. For those that don't know, Eric Quarry, son of Jimmy, fought in a benefit for the Police Activities League (PAL). It was rough going but in true Quarry sprit, he pulled it out by close decision over Richard Perry. It was nice to see that Brenda and Sonia were looking well (they worked Eric's corner) but I didn't get a chance to get back stage to say hello to everybody as I was taking notes for an article about the event that I am doing for an Native American news site that is at the following address, www.pechanga.net. My report will probably be up on that site on Tuesday under the Native News section. Sorry Eric, I can only give you one line as there were 13 other fights. |10/27/02 09:52:24 PM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia81@aol.com|||10|Thanks Kent, it was awesome to be there with my brother Eric, to support him. I will say though I was a bit nervous, not that I was afraid he'd lose but I goof up or something, but it was all well worth it. I am proud of my brother, cause not matter what "he didn't quit" so as the saying goes "THERE'S NO QUIT IN A QUARRY". Richard's a nice guy also. Dad, would've been proud, but then again he always was.|10/28/02 07:07:40 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock2892@yahoo.com|||10|ON QUARRY VS. COONEY: Are you guys kidding? Jerry was a REAL fighter not some built up phoney. Spinks and Foreman revealed Cooney for what he was. Cooney had a fine left hook -- and NOTHING else. Jerry would have KO'd him in four or five. Granted, Cooney looked good in his loosing effort against Holmes, but if Holmes at not been so overly careful, he could have ended it in the second round -- Jerry would have. Don't get me wrong, I picked Foreman over Jerry, but there is NO COMPARISON between Cooney and Quarry. | 10/28/02 01:44:49 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago||sa....|||10|Quarry would be a terrible match-up for Cooney. Cooney would hit Jerry and Jerry would smile a little and Cooney would say oh .... and crumble shortly thereafter. I say Quarry about in 5 thinking that Jerry would play with him a couple rounds. Cooney was not a bad fighter, but this isn't the right match-up for him at all!| 10/30/02 12:55:27 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Steve, I also have Ken Norton's book and in it, he never says Jerry was a racist. He may have been quoted saying this in another source, but in his book, while he does say that he and Jerry did not like each other, he never brings up the race issue regarding Jerry. In fact, he praises Jerry for being a very game fighter and for fighting his heart out until their fight was stopped. Norton also says that all of his bad feelings for Jerry went away after he and Jerry hugged after the fight. |

---

CALIFORNIA|ronnyrains@yahoo.com|||10|I agree with Kent,Norton and Jerry had some issues,i think they 1969-1970 QUARRY COUL'VE HANDLED THEM DIFFERENTLY, also heard Jerry kayoed in training,I wished Bonavena would have went ahead with his bout with Norton,QUARRY was a replacement,if you can fathom that, and only had a few weeks of training,regardless, man i wished that would have been JQ's last and final bout,no more sparring or nothing,i also heard they used to give JERRY and BOBBY THE KEYS TO stronbow stadium,In Bakersfield and they hammered on each other sparring thru out BOBBY's career,i'm sure that never helped Jerry's eventual condition!! Does anyone have any old BOXING ILLUSTRATED'S from 1965-75?| 10/30/02 08:18:50 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10|I'd have to go with Jerry over Cooney. Gerry never impressed me at all even in the Holmes fight. As mentioned before, Larry could have taken him out earlier if he turned up the pressure. Jerry was a far better boxer than Cooney and would have hammered him. And Big George would have battered Jerry. Jerry was faster and would have hurt George but I don't think Jerry could have put a series of hard combinations together to put George away. Foreman was just too strong and he could take one hell of a wallop. On another topic, if Roy Jones fights Ruiz, who do you think will win. I know Jones could beat Jirov and don't know why he won't fight him...Money? Anyway, I think Jones has a good shot vs Ruiz. What do you think boxing fans? I have some old Ring mags going back to 68'-69' somewhere, when I find them I'll post where Jerry was rated. |

---

ON JONES VS. RUIZ: I wonder what round Ruiz is going to clutch his groin, fall down, and complain of a low punch. I think doing that is an official part of his training.| 10/30/02 08:04:41 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|ON JONES VS. RUIZ: I wonder what round Ruiz is going to clutch his groin, fall down, and complain of a low punch. I think doing that is an official part of his training. |

---

HAPPY HALLOWEEN TO ALL! HAVE FUN AND BE SAFE! LOVE YA DAD, MISS YOU TOO. |

---

Jones verses Ruiz is an interesting match up. A good big man versus a great smaller man. I am not sure who will win. It is kind of a test to see if some of the smaller great heavyweights of the past could have handled a big heavyweight from today. Jones should come in at about 185 pounds and he is strong for his size, but can he hurt the 235 pound Ruiz? Another question, is Jones going to be too fast for Ruiz? Will Ruiz be able to land effectively? Like I said, I just don't know who is going to win this one. The bigger question is if the fight will come off at all. I have my doubts about this. |
Jones may be making a big mistake in fighting Ruiz. If it comes off, it could be interesting.

U GUYS ALWAYS TALK ABOUT QUARRY ON THIS MESSAGE BOARD BUT WHAT DO U GUYS HAVE OF JERRY ON VHS????????

JERRY QUARRY VS INGAMAR JOHANSONPS INGO BEAT MACHEN.........QUARRY DIDNT!

Here are the ratings for Jerry that I could find. The Ring mag's I have (10 in all) are between Feb 74&#8217;s and July 76. Jerry is not rated any of in them. I thought I had more from the late 60's and early 70's but I can't find them. They were more than likely lost in one of my many moves over the years. I thought it was interesting that Oscar Bonavena was rated in the top ten International Boxing: Jan 72 Jerry rated 4th Ali 1, Foreman 2, Bonavena 3.  Mar 72 Jerry rated 3rd Ali 1, Foreman 2.  June 75 Jerry rated 7th, Norton 1, Foreman 2, Bobick 3, Holmes 4, Young 5, Lyle 6.  World Boxing: June 72 Jerry rated 3rd after Ali 1 and Foreman 2.  March 75 Jerry rated 3rd Foreman 1, Frazier 2.  May 75 Jerry rated 3rd after Foreman 1, and Frazier 2.July 75 Jerry rated 4th Norton moves to 3rd behind Foreman and Frazier.  Sorry about the skewed sentences, I pasted this from Word.  Tuna, i've thought this matchup before and my first reaction is that Jerry would kill him. But Ingo did knock Patterson out and down, what 10-11 times in 3 fights. And KO'ing Machen in 1 round was quite a feat. Liston and Williams couldn't knock him down! I don't know the circumstances surrounding that fight, was Machen in shape? How cold was it in Stockholm that night, the fight was outside. Anyway, Johansson had one hell of a right hand. He might have dropped Jerry a couple of times. Although Jerry could have blasted him like he did Earnie Shavers. I do think Jerry would have KO'ed Ingo but there might be some interesting rounds of boxing before the end. Good matchup!

I preveiwed my post really fast because I keep getting knocked off AOL. Here's the rest of my thought about Oscar. I don't find it so interesting that Bonavena was rated, but that in the ratings I looked at he's in the top 10 more than Jerry during the same period. Maybe a 3 to 1 ratio. More activity?

Jerry was a better boxer than Ingo and he was only 21 when he lost to Machen. As I said in making a case for Jerry having a good chance of upsetting Foreman, Jerry took very hard punches from Lyle, Shavers, and Mac Foster, as well as from Joe Frazier and he was still standing (except for one body shot from Frazier in Frazier/Quarry 2-he got up from this one), he would have been able to take Ingo's best shot and not go down. Jerry had trouble with fighters with hand speed; Ali, Frazier, Ellis, Norton, and even Patterson. Ingo was slow and ponderous. Jerry wins by decision or mid to late round stoppage. Jerry and Norton had a personal problem not a race problem. Don't forget Norton trained in hemet where Jerry was already training. So there was a lot of stuff being written to promote fights. However, Jerry never held a grudge towards anyone. Jerry would have knocked Conney out in four rounds, Conney would have been a punching bag for Jerry. Eric you did well and for a good cause.

Sorry Cooney for the spelling nonetheless same result four rounds.
Bonavena was rated by "THE RING MAGAZINE". A total of 95 months.never No.1 contender, but he did have a number one W.B.A. RATING over JERRY, oct 25, 1970. the day before JERRY FOUGHT ALI?wonder who he beat for that one?Everyone else rated JQ #1. Oscar Bonavena's RING MAG. #2 (6) #3 (14) #4 (13) #5 (24) #6 (12) #7 (13) #8 (5) #9 (7) #10 (1). for a total of 95. vs World champions QUARRY 1-6-1, BONAVENA 0-5, VS World Top Ten Current Contenders QUARRY 7-0, BONAVENA 4-2, THEIR COMMON OPPONENT'S were astounding JERRY 7-6-1 3KO, TO oscar's 6-6 3ko, take care! it was interesting to look up.

Any thoughts out there on Ward-Gatti II?
the original TV broadcast - quality is mint. I have also obtained a highlight of Quarry vs Machen in colour which is about 5 minutes - colour mint. Does anyone have the full fight of that?

11/6/02 09:19:47 PM|charles anderson|ark.|ctjjandfam@aol.com|10|has mr.jack ever reflected on how he would have handled jerry's career if he had to do it over again?

11/7/02 08:12:54 AM|John Gerard|NYC.|rock289z@yahoo.com|10|Even though I know it is a waste of time to look back and say "what if", I often think how different Jerry's career would have been had he been handled by Rappaport and Jones (the people who so carefully protected and guided Cooney). Victor Valle was a very protective trainer. But then again, I don't think anyone "protecting" him.

11/7/02 05:20:35 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca.|oriononside@aol.com|10|Would Jerry had won the title if he was brought along slower? Maybe he would have, or maybe he wouldn't have, because say for example, Jerry got his first title shot in 1970 instead of 1968, the champion would have been Joe Frazier at this point and maybe Jerry still might have not defeated Frazier. The real question would have been if Jerry would have been as damaged in the end if he hadn't had so many tough fights early and there is a good chance that Jerry would have had a longer career. The way it turned out, Jerry was a shot fighter before he was thirty. Jerry might have had something left later and it could have been Jerry instead of Leon Spinks taking the title away from Ali in 1978. Jerry would have been 33 and quite possibly still going strong. About Jerry not wanting to be protected; fighters sometimes need to be protected from themselves. It is ironic that I remember hearing that Mike Quarry was upset with Jerry because Jerry was working the corner in one of the Mike Rossman fights and Jerry had the fight stopped because Mike was taking a beating. If Jerry had been the fighter and Mike had been working the corner and Mike had the fight stopped, then it would have been Jerry who would have been upset with Mike!

11/8/02 09:26:05 AM|John Gerard|NYC.|rock289z@yahoo.com|10|Some years back I heard Dennis Jones, the manager of Gerry Cooney discussing Cooney's career. He said something to the effect of "Gerry may not have been the artistic success we had hoped for but he was a finanical one and left with his health." Had Jerry had this type of mentality in his management, I honestly believe things would have turned out much different for him. Can you imagine the hype Jones and Rappaport would have created after Jerry beat Lyle and Shavers? They would have beaten the drums so loudly that Foreman would have had to have fought Jerry. Don't get me wrong I said all along that I think George would have beaten Jerry, but perhaps if Jerry had less wear and tear and Victor Valle traning him ......???

11/8/02 03:30:10 PM|bquarry|ca.|nnn|10|Most people do not know that my father Jack begged Jerry not to fight. Yes my dad loved fighting and wanted one of his son's to be champ.however, when Jerry turned 18 he told my dad he wanted to turn pro. dad said go train, run and hold a job 8hrs a day and in 6 months if you still want to fight i will help you. All the boys did jr gloves. But when it came time to turn pro. this was the boys choice not my dads. Jerry loved fighting it was a excape for him. He loved his fans the cheers and yes the money. But money came last untill the last. My dad gets a bad rap with this side of jerry's career. Once they started and the fame came and money then perhaps if they had the knowledge about boxing and the politic of the sport things would be very different. |

11/8/02 04:31:50 PM|John Gerard|NYC.|rock289z@yahoo.com|10|I am sure your dad did what he thought was best for his sons. Hindsight is 20/20 and if the cards had fallen a little differently, everyone would be saying what a fine manager Jack was. I made a mistake comparing Jerry's management to that of Cooney's. Different times, different personalities.

11/9/02 08:47:24 AM|Bob Bumbera|NC.|renfbera@aol.com|10|Jimmy, I double checked the ratings and they are all correct. I thought some were strange also, but maybe it's because the magazines are printed 3 or 4 months in advance, say the November issue would be printed in July or August. I guess it would not really change the fact, as has been said, that Jerry fought at the same time as Ali and Frazier, and being THE champ was not really in the cards with those two out there. That being said, Jerry's accomplishments are still very impressive. I know that when I first signed in here, I felt Jerry was "about equal" to Joe, he certainly matched well with him, as he would with Foreman. Joe could reach down, though, and find a little more. Jerry pushed as hard as just about anyone Frazier ever fought, and given how many good heavies were out there, that's really saying something. His aura being brought up, Jerry, to me, really did have something special. He was a very good athlete, a hugely likeable guy, and what anyone thinks of that 1968 WBA tournament, he was unquestionably the star of it, no disrespect to Jimmy Ellis. Because of that, he was treated often like a champion, something Mike Tyson might not be able to have often said. Since he was, in my opinion, better than Ellis - a very good fighter in his own right - I consider Jerry a champion. But two things I'd like to add, first, quality contenders like Jerry who come up short of a belt are not often given the respect they deserve for being outstanding fighters and athletes. Second, as boxing is not treated the same as others sports, unless these contenders grab public attention like Jerry did, they disappear quickly from public light. It's too bad that the public doesn't take this sport seriously enough to 1) respect them from a health and safety standpoint to demand they wear headgear, given that a public outcry brought out football helmets and goalie masks, and 2) that those who fall just a little short of the top are not as praised as other athletes in other sports who never win the big one. I think the fact that this site is here is proof enough that even without a pro belt, Jerry impressed a large population of people and lived a very compelling life.

It is a shame that in our competitive culture that second place is just not good enough. I have heard some people saying that the San Francisco Giants failed because they lost a close baseball world series to the Anaheim Angels. I have been a huge baseball fan for many years and I have to go back quite a long way to find a better played series than this one. There really were no losers in this one. Back to boxing; two former long time contenders come to mind who both fought in very tough eras but who, like Jerry, never won a world title, but still deserve the title of great fighter they are, middleweight Bennie Briscoe and light heavyweight Yaqui Lopez. Both of them will be well remembered by fans much longer than some palooka who got lucky in an easier era and held a belt for one fight. We can also add our own Mike Quarry to this list. Mike, like Jerry, fought his heart out every minute of every round and though he may have also come up short of a title, he could have well won a title in a less competitive era. I think we should stop knocking Jack Quarry here. After all, he is the one who instilled the motto of "there is no quit in a Quarry" in his family and who knows, without Jack, maybe Jerry wouldn't have had the drive to go as far as he did in the boxing world.

Good news is out on Parkinson's Research. A new Synchromed XL pump delivery system when used in conjunction with GDNF (glial cell line derived neurotrophic factor), a protein produced by the connective tissue has shown to not only halt, but REVERSE the damage caused by Parkinson's with no apparent side effects, human studies started in May 2002. The drug had been dismissed three years ago as ineffective, but when coupled with the new delivery system, shows promise for brain cell regeneration. Business Week November 18th 2002 pp. 58-60. By Catherine Arnst and Arlene Weintraub. This is simply great news! Daryl, 661.703.4444.

| 11/11/02 06:56:36 PM | TUNAMAN | CANADA | jabboxing@yahoo.com | 10 | MANY JERRY QUARRY FIGHTS ON VHS CALL 1 604 5171558...........OR EMAIL JABBOXING@yahoo.com...........i also have rare british prefight of ali/quarry 1 on vhs..............includes footage of jerry sparing.......... |
| 11/18/02 07:30:55 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | 10 | How about Archie Moore vs Roy Jones Jr. at 175 lbs or 190lbs? |
| 11/18/02 08:02:34 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | 10 | I just read a good article on the East Side Boxing website. It's in the time tunnel, where our own Kent Appel occasionally writes some great articles when the mood seizes him. This article goes into light heavyweight history and sort of puts the great Roy Jones Jr in a more realistic perspective for less than serious boxing historians who think that Max Kellermen is the final word concerning the place of Jones in boxing history. |
| 11/18/02 08:20:39 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | 10 | How would Roy Jr. have fared at 175 and 190 against the likes of Billy Conn, who competed quite well with Joe Louis, Harold Johnson, a 5 ft. 10 in. lightweight who defeated Eddie Machen and Doug Jones. How about Roy vs that freak of nature, Bob Foster? |
| 11/20/02 12:01:30 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10 | Roy Jones Jr. needs to be tested and until he faces some tougher challenges and comes out on top, then we will know what he is made of. The Ol' Moongoose knew every trick in the book and I would bet he would find a way to win out over Jones. Jones is a good talent but the jury is still out on him. Thanks Steve for the roundabout compliment and I will try and kick myself in the butt more and increase my work load of articles in the coming months. Right now I am concentrating on my book of children's stories, not sports related, that is coming out very soon called, "Kent's Story Telling Book-Volume One." I have always felt funny about plugging my own projects here but Mr. Jimmy always told me to do so. So I guess there is no harm done. |
| 11/25/02 06:12:57 PM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | sabrinaquarryporter@aol.com | 10 | QUARRY RULES FOREVER!!!! WE LOVE AND MISS YOU DAD AND UNCLE JERRY FOREVER!!!!! |
| 11/26/02 04:06:45 AM | Paul | Sydney, Australia | plmls4@aol.com.au | 10 | The Ol' Moongoose was gutsy enough to step out of his division and fight heavyweights like Ali. He was always prepared to have a go against the odds (even into his forties). Bob Foster was the same. Roy Jones Jr has been tremendous against his own division, but has he ever chanced an arm by fighting against the odds? Not yet anyway. And for guts and perserverence, the Quarrys deserve to rule. |
| 11/26/02 07:23:36 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 | WHAT ABOUT FRAZIER VS. TYSON? Personally I think Tyson had superior physical gifts such as power and speed but Joe had more heart, determination and stamina. I think Joe would have gutted him in 9 rounds. |
| 11/26/02 10:44:23 AM | Mark Sargeant | UK | lpu00mts@reading.ac.uk | 10 | Frazier vs Tyson is certainly a dream fight, but I'm probably one of those who believe that Frazier would win out of favouritism for the ex-champ. As long as Tyson didn't catch Frazier early, Joe would slowly wear him down and knock him out between the 10th and 12th rounds. I think it's important to remember that whilst Tyson was at his awesome peak for three years and beat only a couple of very good fighters (and none for 14 years since Spinks!!), although Ruddock proved himself in both their fights), Frazier was doing the same seven years and beat a longer list of competitors. |
| 11/26/02 02:32:51 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | 10 | I still want to know what the varied and interesting mix of opinions are from our regular contributors on this website. I'd like opinions on the outcomes of the following matchups. Billy Conn vs Roy Jones, Harold Johnson vs Roy Jones, Bob Foster vs Roy, and how about Jerry Quarry vs Roy Jones or Jerry vs Bob Foster? Hey, it's all just conjecture and fun, right?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/26/02 05:54:24 PM</th>
<th>Gerry Schultz</th>
<th>Ohio</th>
<th>jgschultz@firstam.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I always thought Bob Foster vs. Jerry would've been a natural match, given Mike's fight with him. Bob was very good, but there's a reason why boxing has weight classes. As close as it might be early, Jerry would've thrown some heavyweight cheese at him and wore Bob down. Conn was a better boxer than Louis, a huge compliment.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/26/02 08:12:22 PM</th>
<th>Bob Bumbera</th>
<th>NC</th>
<th>renfbera@aol.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I think Jerry would have clobbered Foster. Foster had that long lean body Jerry would have feasted on. Don't forget what Frazier did to Foster. Jerry was more of a counter puncher than Joe so the fight would have probably gone more than a round and a half, but Jerry would have KO'ed him. As for Roy Jones, Jones over Foster over 12 rounds, I think Billy Conn would have a good chance to beat Jones. They match up size wise and Conn was very strong, though not quite the puncher Jones is, he still managed to hurt Joe Louis. I'd also have to give Archie Moore the benefit of the doubt. There wasn't much you could put over on the 'Ol Mongoose.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/27/02 07:48:43 AM</th>
<th>Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)</th>
<th>Joshua Tree, CA</th>
<th>Sonia81@aol.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>HAPPY THANKSGIVING TO ALL! WE LOVE &amp; MISS YOU DAD, AND UNCLE JERRY, MOM, TOO. KEEP UP THE GOOD WORK ON THE SITE.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/27/02 02:32:15 PM</th>
<th>Jimmy Dorsey</th>
<th>Ventura California</th>
<th>jimmydorsey@ventura.california.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I agree Jerry SHOULD HAVE BEATEN FOSTER, BOB NEVER BEAT A HEAVYWEIGHT CONTENDER, I SAW THEM BOTH ON THE &quot;SUPER STARS COMPETITION, THE ONE BEFORE 1975, WHERE JERRY EARNED ENOUGH POINTS TO BE INVITED BACK, AND BOB ACTED A LITTLE SCARED OF JERRY, OF COURSE QUARRY WAS ALL BUSINESS THAT FIRST COMPETITION, I'M SURE THERE WERE GUYS THAT COULD HAVE BEATEN JERRY THAT WE QUARRY FANS, THINK WOULD'NT HAVE, AND GUYS JERRY WOULD HAVE KO'D THAT WOULDN'T HAVE ADDED UP! FOR BOXING IS A BATTLE OF STYLE'S, I WOULDN'T HAVE BEEN SURPRISED IF JERRY COULD HAVE BEATEN BOTH ALI AND FRAZIER IN A STREET FIGHT! HAPPY THANKSGIVING TO ALL</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/27/02 04:18:01 PM</th>
<th>Steve</th>
<th>N.J.</th>
<th>dmmsrm@comcast.net</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hey, Jimmy Dorsey, aah, so glad you brought the subject up. Ali would not have done any better than any other 6 ft 3 in. 210 lb, super fast guy with the courage to fight in the street. I think Quarry and Frazier would have probably killed someone in a street fight fairly early in their career and been sentenced to prison.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/27/02 04:42:48 PM</th>
<th>Carl Weingarten</th>
<th>The Jerry Quarry Foundation</th>
<th>guitarosphere@yahoo.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I discovered a web site devoted to petitioning&lt;br&gt;ESPN Classic for better programming. The creator of the site feels that ESPNCL has lost its way, &quot;What once was a great concept has become mainly a channel for newer sports games and events and they show very few 'classic' games&quot; (you mean fights!). I have to agree. Please visit and devote your rant toward showing the great fights we never get to see. Visit: http://www.petitiononline.com/sportfan/petition.html</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/28/02 05:28:54 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>oriononside@aol.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Jerry was a very good street fighter. In fact Jimmy Q said he doesn't remember his brother ever losing in the street. This is a story that I posted here about two years ago that was lost in the old archives: Years ago I was working as a security officer and my partner was a retired Los Angeles County deputy sheriff. He told me that he once responded to a call to the Quarry family bar in Bellflower (as I remember the story) and that apparently Jerry had been attacked by a customer with a pool stick in the parking lot. The man had stolen the pool stick and Jerry went outside just to ask the man to bring it back into the bar. But instead of listening to Jerry, the man hit Jerry in the head with the pool stick and when he tried to swing the stick again, Jerry stepped in and hit the guy</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
with a short left hook that knocked the man down and out in a bloody heap. My co worker, the former deputy sheriff, recounted the story and he said that when he arrived on the scene, he thought that the man was paralyzed except that one of the man's feet was twitching as the man laid there unconscious in a pool of blood. No charges were brought against Jerry as it was a clear case of self defense. Oh by the way, the man was said to be about 6'6" tall and about 260 pounds. I asked Jimmy Q about this once and he told me the same story. My feeling is this is a true story because Jerry's brother and a retired police officer told me the same story.

11/28/02 10:25:00 AM| JIMMY DORSEY| VENTURA CALIFORNIA
| ronnyrains@yahoo.com |
| 10 |
| STEVE: living most of my life in the SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY, we used to hear all kinds of JERRY QUARRY stories, (STREET STUFF THAT IS). One he broke both hands on a guy, and broke the guys jaw in 2 places, one the police in Bakersfield were asking "can we cuff you Mr. QUARRY, can we cuff you?" Most of my info came from Jerry's close friend a welterweight named Billy Wagner, who is now deceased. Wagner fought at the old stretch stadium in BAKERSFIELD. Wagner was also going to introduce me to JQ, never materialized, What really bummed me out was stepping into the SPORTS BOOK at the Las Vegas Hilton, and a cocktail waitress said "DO you remember Jerry Quarry he was just here!!"

11/28/02 10:25:29 AM| JIMMY DORSEY| VENTURA CALIFORNIA
| ronnyrains@yahoo.com |
| 10 |
| STEVE: living most of my life in the SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY, we used to hear all kinds of JERRY QUARRY stories, (STREET STUFF THAT IS). One he broke both hands on a guy, and broke the guys jaw in 2 places, one the police in Bakersfield were asking "can we cuff you Mr. QUARRY, can we cuff you?" Most of my info came from Jerry's close friend a welterweight named Billy Wagner, who is now deceased. Wagner fought at the old stretch stadium in BAKERSFIELD. Wagner was also going to introduce me to JQ, never materialized, What really bummed me out was stepping into the SPORTS BOOK at the Las Vegas Hilton, and a cocktail waitress said "DO you remember Jerry Quarry he was just here!!"

11/28/02 05:10:16 PM| JIMMY DORSEY| VENTURA CALIFORNIA
| ronnyrains@yahoo.com |
| 10 |
| LET ME BE MORE SPECIFIC, MOST OF JERRY'S "STREET BRAWL" STORIES. ARE WHEN HE WAS YOUNGER, AND NOT A SEASONED PRO, LIKE HE OWNED VIKINGS HALL OF FAME TACKLE RON YARY IN HIGH SCHOOL, THEN THEY BECAME BEST FRIENDS, I REMEMBER WHEN JERRY AND DEACON JONES WERE PROMOTING BOXING SHOWS UNDER "salt and pepper enterprises" in Los Angeles.

11/28/02 05:27:00 PM| Kent | La Habra, Ca |
| riononside@aol.com |
| 10 |
| I really don't think Jerry went looking for trouble but that some people, even after he became well known, wanted to try and take him on. I met Jerry in person and I am about 5'11" tall and Jerry seemed about the same size as me. He may have been slightly taller than me but I didn't notice much of a difference. My point is, people who thought they were tough wouldn't be intimidated by his prescence. Plus, Jerry was an easy going guy and I don't think he was that easy to provoke but some people were probably stupid enough to cross over the line.

11/28/02 09:17:12 PM| JIMMY DORSEY| VENTURA CALIFORNIA
| ronnyrains@yahoo.com |
| 10 |
| Kent: yes I agree I've had alot of people tell me some would take a sucker shot at Quarry, just to say "They hit Jerry Quarry" And I'm sure alot of them paid for it, I know he had that scuffle with the pipeliners up in Alaska, where one pulled a gun, Even "Irish" Mike Nixon SCUFFLED with Jerry!

11/28/02 09:27:48 PM| JIMMY DORSEY| VENTURA CALIFORNIA
| ronnyrains@yahoo.com |
| 10 |
| Kent: Where did you talk to JQ AGAIN? And what where the circumstances, in other words elaborate for us Kent, Was he still boxing? or still in the top ten rankings? Sorry to put you on the spot, But had a boring Thanksgiving, except for watching the Redskins blow another one to Dallas!! Where is John Riggins when they need e'm? ?

11/29/02 12:58:52 AM| Kent | La Habra, Ca |
| riononside@aol.com |
| 10 |
| Jimmy D, I met Jerry at a bar in the early 1980s and he was just about through with his career. Jerry was in a place in Costa Mesa, Ca (near Newport Beach). I can't remember if he lived in the area at that time or if he was just visiting friends. I had a chance to chat with him a couple of times and we mainly talked about music. Him being a singer and I am a singer also. I used to do some bar gigs but never anything big time. I saw Jerry in this bar several times but he never seemed drunk or out of control and he never had an incident while I was there. Jerry didn't seem to me to be the type of guy who went looking for trouble. I was just speculating as to why someone would be foolish enough to mess with him. Regarding the incident at the Quarry family bar, I was repeating what Mr. Jimmy and the retired police officer I used to know had told me. I found this site with a search engine, not knowing that it existed. I was a huge Jerry Quarry fan in the 1960's and 1970's. Having grown up in San Diego, I saw him and Mike on Olympic Boxing Thursday nights. I was deeply saddened upon hearing of Jerry's death a few years ago. Some of the streaming video at this site of Jerry in 1995 brought tears to my eyes. In an age when heavyweights seem to bounce in and out of prison, Jerry was a real class act. Nobody has adequately filled his shoes in the boxing world. A champ among champs.

For any Quarry fans that may be interested, I have found a rare copy of one of the three Mike Quarry bouts with Mike Rossman. It is the third bout of the trilogy. I would rate the quality of the footage as Good. Also, the same collector has a Mint version (Excellent Quality) of the 2nd bout between Jerry and Joe Frazier. It is the complete program with cameo appearances by many former Boxing Greats during the Intro's and has the postfight interview with Joe Frazier. If anyone is interested contact me and I will provide you with the name and address of the collector. This is a great site for us Quarry fans, keep up the good work.

Also KENT: JERRY DID TWO OTHER THINGS IN LAS VEGAS WHEN HE WAS RETIRED, HE HAD A SINGING GIG AT CAESARS PALACE CALLED "JERRY QUARRY WITH PLEASURE" AND BAR TENDED AT THEY NEARBY "STAGE DOOR". I THINK I WAS LIVING IN LAUGHLIN, NV. AT THE TIME. WHERE THEY HAD HIM DOWN AT THE "EDGOWER" ALAS I HAD TO WORK. WE AT QUARRYVILLE DO HAVE A TENDACY TO TREAT
JERRY AS A LITTLE SUPERHUMAN. HOWEVER I SUFFER FROM THE AFFLICTION,"STOOGEDIS". AS WELL AS KENT, TAKE CARE.

I had the great pleasure of hearing my uncle Jerry sing on many occasions, and I think he was a great singer and one song that sticks in my mind is "A Closer Walk with Thee". Uncle Jerry was the best at everything he did. And him and my father James would be very proud to see this website still going strong. Thank you to all the fans of this site and please let's keep it going for the memory of Jerry and James....Dad and Uncle Jerry I miss you with all my heart and I will love you both always in my heart forever. Looking forward to seeing you in the afterlife...Keep Punching!!!!!!

I really thrive on these tidbits of info we occasionally get on this site, mostly from Jimmy D. and Kent, about Jerry's life outside the ring. I've always somehow identified with his life {wishful thinking} I don't know the psychological reasons behind that. I do know that he gave my friends and I, who gathered in front of TVs or went to the Cherry Hill Coliseum, long since burned down, alot of enjoyment, and disappointment, during the late 60's and early 70's. He held our interest and attention, and maybe mirrored our aspirations, like no other heavyweight of those wonderful decades could.

Three of my friends and I arrived late for a closed circuit, and very expensive in those days, live broadcast of Jerry Quarry vs Earnie Shavers. As we fought our way down the isle to our row of seats, we could hear the fighters being announced. We couldn't see the screen yet because everyone was still standing up. As we got to our row, the fight started, NOBODY was sitting down. We had to force our way down the row to our seats. We could hear the KO taking place. When we reached our seats it was over! Watching the replays just wasn't the same as seeing it live. Still, it was a great night out with my friends. A memory for a lifetime.

STEVE: Did not know, you were so close too Cherry Hill, New JERSEY. I have never been any farther East, than Chicago, But didn't Muhammad Ali live there for a while, At the same time Joe Frazier lived in nearby Philadelphia, before the "Battle of the Century". Thats where Ali was gonna meet Frazier in the park, Remember that one 1970??

Jimmie D., I live between Camden and Cherry Hill. I'm about 4 miles across the Delaware River from Philly, and 5 miles from Cherry Hill. We used to go to the Blue Horizon, which was at that time a pretty well known albeit small fight club in North Philly. I saw Bennie Briscoe fight there twice. I was there the night Joe Archer and Eugene (Cyclone) Hart fell out of the ring locked in a clinch. They landed on a table with a crash you wouldn't believe. I think Joey Archer hurt his neck. He was a very slick, classy boxer. Hart had a monster left hook, and and nothing else. Both of these guys were top ten middleweights in the early 70's, and hugely popular in Philly. The way that club was set up, If I am remembering correctly, was that the best seats to view the fights where in the eighth row. Anything closer you couldn't see over the people standing up. Also the cigarette smoke enveloped the first seven rows like a fog. I saw Emile Griffith there several times when he came down from N.Y to scout a future opponent. He had shoulders that in a suit looked about 8 feet wide. Joe Frazier still actively runs the cloverleaf gym. I've never met him, but have been told he's very accessible to the public. When Ali came to Philly, it was like the president was visiting. Down town Philly is beautiful, but all the secondary streets are narrow. Whenever someone important comes to town, the police start blocking of streets, and it turns the town into bedlam. Ali had that effect. He almost caused a riot when he went to Frazier's gym.

Jimmie, you want to talk about a sports town? You should have seen Philly and South Jersey the night the Flyers won the Stanly Cup!! Ali had a beautiful home. in the ritzy part of Cherry Hill. Where all the mob guys live. No one I know ever saw him there. I lived about three blocks from Bobby Clarke's house the night they won the Stanley Cup. People were wandering all over his property just drinking, partying, and raising hell.

12/4/02 02:16:23 PM JIMMY DORSEY VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM |

THANKS STEVE: I can talk all day about stories like that, Ali acting crazy the day in Philly with Frazier, had to be one of they all-time classics, I'll bet it was bedlam, if I REMEMBER CORRECTLY, he was either still exiled from the sport, or had just beaten Quarry on cuts, and Bonavena. (exhiled I believe to be more accurate). I REMEMBER THE world rankings W.B.A had 1-Bonavena 2-QUARRY, RING MAG. 1-QUARRY 2-BONAVENA, so you have to give Ali credit for going right to the top three guys ending with Frazier, did you ever get to see Jerry Quarry on "I DREAM OF JEANNE" it was hilarious, not just because of Jerry, wished I had it taped, also Steve, do you remember Middleweight Mike Nixon? (QUARRY CLAN- brother in law). He beat Mike Rossman in Binghamton N.Y. AND South African contender Gert Steyn by KNOCKOUT!, his big problem was his chin he lost 6 of 8 bouts by KNOCKOUT, and in 4 he'd won every round, and a televised rematch in VEGAS with ROSSMAN, and ko'd on "FRIDAY NIGHT FIGHTS". WE ONLY HAD IT 3-2-1 AFTER SIX ROUNDS TO ROSSMAN, BEFORE NIXON got clocked (he was the first fighter to beat Rossman as a pro). ended career by 4th round KO to Vito Antofermo in MSG. He was one of the best built middleweights I have ever seen, and although only 10 ko's in 27 wins, was known for his big punch, and boxing ability, once ranked 14th world for his Rossman win, International boxing had him #5 Junior Middle, after a great Steyn win in 1977. take care!

12/4/02 03:40:05 PM Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net |

Jimmy D. I worked on a hi-rise with two guys who lived in Cherry Hill and went to school with Mike Rossman. His real name is DiPiano. He took his mother's maiden name Rossman, maybe because they thought it would be more marketable at the time. Cherry Hill has a very large Jewish population. By all accounts I've gotten, Mike doesn't seem to be a real nice guy. One of the guys told me he had a gym in his cellar. He was always trying to get neighborhood kids to fight him.

12/4/02 03:51:29 PM JIMMY DORSEY VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM |

Steve: I can believe that about Rossman, it is too bad Mike Quarry did not have the big punch he would have been 3-0 vs Rossman, instead of 1-2, One fight I recollect, is when Rossman quit in his second title fight vs Victor Galindez, because of a hand injury, Can you ever imagine JQ or MIKE QUARRY ever Quitting with any type of an injury----now way!! especially a title tiff!! I'LL tell you though a natural would have been a Bobby CYZZ-Mike Rossman encounter, any predictions on that one ? I'd go with Cyzz i guess.

12/4/02 06:51:11 PM Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com |

Cherry Hill eh' Steve. Part of my yout was spent in Willingboro. Ages 5 through 14. I was born in Passiac and most of my family lives in the Clifton, East Rutherford area. My mom used to drive us by Ali's house on the way to the Cherry Hill Mall. As I remember it, a Spanish style house with a black iron fence around it. I think he had a couple of Mercedes sedans in the driveway. When I was in the Boy Scouts we'd get tickets to sporting events in Philly, Eagles and Fliers games, Rollerdurby, the SF Bay Bombers kicked butt. And the the event that sparked my interest in boxing a Joe Frazier training session. I don't know what fight he was training for but it was in late '69 or early '70 it was probably Jimmy Ellis. Hey, speaking of Philly remember Matt Franklin vs Marvin Johnson. Blood and guts for 12 rounds!!

12/4/02 07:11:51 PM Jeffery Smith | New Orleans | jls@runbox.com |

My 6 rating of the site was based only on having hit so many dead links at the time I perused it. On the video page, about half of the links were dead. I'LL go back and check it.But while I'm on the line, I think Jerry would have pulverized George Foreman had they fought when Jerry was still in his late 20's. Jerry never had problems with big sluggers (although I remember his getting nailed with one big Mac Foster right hand a bit before kayoing Foster). Jerry walked through slow sluggers like Ron Lyle, Mac Foster, and Earnie Shavers. And pounded the stuffing out of a big fast puncher, Buster Mathis. Jerry turned out to be everything that Gerry Cooney wasn't. His tendency to cut is what cost him just about every fight.I have many fond memories of Jerry. Vastly underrated in the big picture of heavyweight boxing.George was NOT just a big slugger !George was a great one, Jerry was a very, very good one. George would have won.

I have to agree on one thing, BIG GEORGE would have definetly been favored, about 12-5 odds,Seemed like he had a little "extra" from the punchers that were mentioned, I still say the Lyle bout was the most exciting ever,at a cookout of that FOREMAN-LYLE BOUT, in the SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY,CA.Even the ladies were into that crazy bout, and betting!!! I SURE wished JERRY AND GEORGE WOULD HAVE GOT IT ON IN 1974! It would have answered all the 30 years of questions, I wouldn't have minded Bonavena getting in there with BIG GEORGE. Besides i would have liked to see Jerry in there with GEORGE FOREMAN, rather than FRAZIER, Anyone who saw JOE INTERVIEWED BEFORE HE WENT IN THE RING WITH JERRY QUARRY KNEW HE WAS GOING TO DEFINETLY WIN THAT NIGHT, TAKE CARE! Jerry was an excellent fighter and a wonderful asset to boxing during its toughest era. However, to say he would beat George really is going a bit over the top. Foreman was desperately formidable and with Jerry's cuts and slight inconsistency, alongside Foreman's power, I really do think that there could only be one winner. Jerry at his best would have given him one hell of a fight but it simply wouldn't be enough-similar to Frazier. Outside Ali and Louis, Foreman, Frazier, Holmes make up the next category, with the likes of Holyfield, Norton, Tyson, Lewis, Bowe, Walcott, Marciano , Charles. I would put Jerry in this group along with a few others which is one hell of a complement to a tremendous fighter-but he simply was not in a higher one with George.

Jimmie D., I won 25.00 on the Quarry vs Lyle fight. I've mentioned before that I thought it was my alltime favorite fight. You say you saw it during the day. I remember watching it at night. It must be the time zone difference between Cal. and N.J. Based on that fight, I always thought the same caliber of performance from Jerry would have at least gotten him a decision over Forman. I remember Mike Nixon very well. He was a very muscular, strong fighter, but I saw him get knocked by two fighters, weirdly enough, both named Davis. The one, I think his name was Indian Red Davis, knocked Mike out twice!! I believe these fights where shown here out of New York. I can remember getting real frustrated with Mike, since in both fights he was beating the heck out of Davis, and then you caught, and KO'D.

Nixon's foes were Art Davis and Indian George Davis, as I remember. Back to Foreman, anyone who saw his fight with Lyle knows that he was slow, and that he could be counterpunched. Frazier was not a counterpuncher, and his style did not work well against Foreman. Lyle lost a lopsided decision to Quarry when he was a few years younger than when he floored Foreman twice. Lyle's problem was that he was so muscle-bound, he couldn't hold his arms up after 20 seconds of trying to finish a guy off. Jerry was a good finisher who didn't waste a lot of haymakers. Keep in mind that, in the Lyle fight, Foreman tried (for the first time) a left jab and a straight right in hopes of getting his punches home a bit faster. Didn't work at all, so he stopped doing it. I think Jerry would have beat him to the punch. George Foreman was much more than a slugger? Not in the fights I saw. No jabbing, no counterpunching, no leg movement, no ring generalship other than walking forward, pushing, forcing an opponent to the ropes, and unloading bombs. To me, that's a slugger. At least Sonny Liston had a good jab.

For the Foreman fans, he was susceptible to boxers. Gregorio Peralta boxed him twice without much trouble, but was always retreating (losing a decision, and then getting kayoed in the late rounds of a fight in which he frustrated the dickens out of Foreman). Jimmy Young also was able to evade George's bombs and win a decision. Jerry had trouble when he was drawn into slugfests at close range, but potshooting big, strong guys (even very tall ones like Buster Mathis.

I bet $5 that Lyle would knock out Quarry, and was totally humiliated that (1) I bet against him, and that (2) he completely dominated the guy I picked to beat him.

Here's a question. On the web, I keep seeing that Jerry was from Bakersfield. I remember him early in his career as the Bellflower Bomber, which is closer to Orange County. Did he ever live in Bakersfield?

Jerry was born in Bakersfield and he lived there as a young boy and later moved to Bellflower. Bellflower by the way is about halfway to Anaheim, which is in O.C. from Los Angeles. Where I am in La Habra is on the border of O.C. and Los Angeles counties about 10 miles from Anaheim and 25 miles from L.A.

The Foreman of the SECOND Frazier fight was the best heavyweight boxer/puncher I ever saw -- he had it all a wicked jab, awesome power, and decent speed. The Foreman of the FIRST Frazier fight was the hardest punching heavyweight I've ever seen -- before or since. Either way, in my book, George is #2 of all time -- right behind Ali. Foreman was very rusty in the Lyle fight and it showed and against Peralta he was just a kid. Watch him demolish Norton, Chuvalo, etc.

Hey Ramblin' Bob Bumbera, did you deliberately spell youth as "yout". If so, how dare you make fun of our Joisey accent! Just kidding. You are right on the description of Ali's house, and boy are you right about Matt Franklin! Do you know the story of how he got his name? He was found by nuns wandering on Franklin Ave. in Philly. Has only about two or three years old. The nuns took custody of him. I believe they were nuns from St. Mathews Parrish, and since he was found on Franklin Ave., they named him Mathew Franklin. He later converted to Islam and took the name Mathew Saad Mohammed. He had to have been one of the all-time most exciting light-heavy's. Yes, his fight with Marvin Johnson, or were there two, were classics. Do you remember his fights with Dwight (the Camden buzzsaw) Braxton? He also changed his name to Dwight Quawi.

I was just going to mention, all 3 of those, LIGHT HEAVYWEIGHTS recently, Franklin, Braxton, Johnson, Jerry Martin etc. GUESS WE ARE HAVING A PHILLY WINTER!! DIDN'T JOHNSON FINALLY KO GALINDEZ? FRANKLIN WAS ONE OF MY FAVORITES; I REMEMBER HIM CUTTING AROUND THE EYES ALOT IN HIS BIG BOUTS, SO DID GALINDEZ OF COURSE WHO BEAT THEM ALL, EDDIE GREGORY ETC. I KNOW GALINDEZ WAS A BRAWLER, BUT HAD BOXING ABILITY A SMART CORNER, AND COULD ALWAYS SEEM TO GO 15 ROUNDS, WONDER HOW MIKE QUARRY WOULD HAVE FARED? I CAN ALSO REMEMBER WHEN HE Fought RAY "THE BULL" ELSON. ON AN ALI UNDERCARD, SEEMS ALL THOSE GREAT ARGENTINE BOXERS DIED IN TRAGEDY, Monzon, Bonavena, Galindez, | name another fighter who achieved what George did over a period of 30 years including the Olympic Gold with these limited abilities. I love Quarry to bits and have most of the material available on him. But to say that he could have beaten Foreman is unrealistic in my opinion. True, you never can tell what can happen in the ring but statistics speak for ability in this case. For those who say George is just a slugger I say to them you have EXTREMELY LIMITED knowledge of Boxing. Watch Foreman against Jack O'Halloran and see how George outboxes the bigger man for a few rounds then destroys him.

Perhaps I'm overrating him here, but in retrospect, whenever I expected George to win, he lost (Ali, Young, Holyfield, Morrison), and whenever I expected Jerry to lose, he won (Foster, Lyle, Shavers, Mathis). And it is because he won against overwhelming power punchers. My "vision" of Jerry is not from 1974 on, but between 1967 and 1974, when he was at his prime. Some fighters are able to fight and do a credible job for 3 decades (Foreman), and some are at their peak for a relatively short time (Quarry, Frazier). I thought Frazier was unbeatable. I thought Foreman was unbeatable. I thought Tyson was unbeatable. When they lost, they lost BIG, as in humiliating defeats. Jerry was tiny by today's standards, but he packed more oomph in 200 lbs than anyone other than Dempsey and Marciano.

Jerry Quarry had the misfortune of having been born in the same era as Frazier and Ali. He was a much smarter and faster boxer than Foreman. I love George to death, but he was a bulldozer who could be avoided. He was probably at his best when he fought Boone Kirkman the first time because he didn't stop to admire his work. Two years later, he stopped not to admire his work but to catch his breath. His feet were in cement. Jerry had a field day with guys with their feet in cement.

I'm not trying to be difficult. I rehearsed Quarry versus Foreman 1,000 in my head. Jerry always won. :-)

By the way, I saw Jack O'Halloran fight many times (he became a San Diego native soon after George ate his lunch). Another truly good guy, but not a fighter. Mac Foster demolished him in one as I remember.

On this Foreman thing, Evren you certainly have right to your view, and I may be repeating my take on this, but I don't see big George your way. Foreman was runner-up for the Olympics in '68. The winner was a Quarry-like Clay Hodges, who went to Vietnam, so George could win the gold. George won that gold by being a huge intimidating kid, not by being the best, which is no discredit to Foreman. The best man cannot win if he doesn't think he can. Foreman has admitted to respecting Quarry a great deal, and dodging him. They make a great match, slugging/pursuing George vs. tough/counterpunching quicker Quarry, which was the same thing, basically as Frazier/Quarry. Only Jerry's lack of defense skills kept him from beating Joe, who he could clearly outbox. Joe had better fundamentals than George, but not his size. The Foreman I recall had flat feet, poor balance, no real jab, and poor defense, power and size being his major assets. I don't agree that George is #2, considering Louis, Marciano, Tyson, Tunney and others who dominated for long stretches with just one belt to chase. Foreman did look perhaps his best in Frazier2, but as Perielta, Lyle, Young and Ali showed, could be outboxed by guys who weren't intimidated by him. Jerry definitely fits that profile. We will never be able to truly solve this, and it's just opinion, but I see Jerry as a match for not just for Foreman, but also Norton, Holyfield and Larry Holmes, all of whom many regard pretty highly. Movement fighters with height, like Ali and Ellis, to me, gave Quarry more trouble than the Lyles and Shavers who charged him, as George undoubtedly would.

Jimmy D, I spoke to Bobby Quarry earlier in the week and he said the Battle of The Bouncers and tribute to Jerry Quarry is going to be January 4, 2003 at The Dome in Bakersfield, formally called Strongbow Stadium. It looks like it is a go this time. I hope nothing happens this time to derail the program as I am looking forward to it.

Can anyone tell me how much time elapsed between Lou Saverese's TKO of Tim Witherspoon in the fifth round, and this [fistfull of dollars] thing Witherspoon fought in?

Everyone is entitled to their views I guess. I don't agree with the Foreman was runner up tag. Anyone can pull out certain scenarios and use it against a fighter. I could say the same thing about Frazier being runner-up. When a fighter has passed all you can do is look at their achievements. Unfortunately Jerry never achieved a major title and I feel real bad for him—shame he wasn't around 8 or 9 years earlier. He was one of the great nearly men. George Foreman was one of the greats....full stop.

The gap between Witherspoon-Savarese and Witherspoon-Thunderbox was probably just about the minimum (30 days). I'm wondering if the Thunderbox was listed as an "exhibition" in the same manner as "Foreman Fights Five" in the 70's. I doubt that a boxing commission would allow someone to fight 3 times in the same night in pro fights.

Believe it or not, the Savarese-Witherspoon fight was September 23, 2002. Seems more like 3 weeks ago.

I say Foreman would have stopped Jerry in three. Too much force too much power - thunderous punches downstairs and a powerful left would have been too much for Jerry.

Just wished the danged bout would have happen, Joe had no business taking on Frazier. The public would have eventually demanded that JERRY GET HIS SHOT!, off his winning title-eliminations over Iyle, Shavers etc. I could see Foreman powering his way, Although have you ever seen Quarry get knocked out? Punchers were his roast, too tough to call, like I said FOREMANS 12-5 FAVORITE, Kent, I used to box at the DOME in BAKERS, ONLY IT WAS THEY STRELICH STADIUM, NAMED AFTER STEVE STRELICH, THAN IT WENT TO STRONGBOW, AND WAS PREDOMINATELY USED FOR wrestling, NOW ITS THE dome, it looked like a DOME!!

Did any of you see Quarry's last fight? I could swear that in his last fight, he fought an African American slugger type who knocked him down (I only recall seeing about 5 seconds of a video clip). I know he didn't get knocked out, but was wondering if I dreamed the video.

Jerry's last bout was against a fighter named Ron Cramer, I don't know Cramer's race. Reports I have heard say that although Jerry had some teeth knocked out, and he did take a lot of punishment in the bout, he also gave a lot of punishment in return, fighting like the true warrior he always was. As I understand it, Jerry lost due to three one point deductions for low blows and that he got the better of the action. Of course, they never should have let Jerry in the ring at the age of 47 after all of the tough fights he had in his life.

I HAVE ULTRA RARE ABC VERSION OF ALI VS QUARRY #2 W/H COSSELL COMMENTATING....THIS THING IS MINT AND VERY RARE........IF INTERESTED GIVE ME AN OFFER...........PS I ALSO HAVE THE BRITISH CLOSED CIRCUIT VERSION OF THIS FIGHT........ALI AND FOREMAN GET AT EACH OTHER.....BOTH COPIES ARE MINT AND RARE|

|12/8/02 05:54:04 PM|Evren|London||@||10|Just watched the disappointing fights between Mayweather and Castillo and Klitschko-McCline (zzzzzzzzz). Then I watched Kid Gavilan fight Danny 'Bang Bang' Womber...1953...oh my what a difference. Both guys fighting their hearts out (for next to nothing I guess) unafraid of each other but with consummate skill. A wholly awesome fight and a great upset - there was'nt a title on the line - it was'nt necessary! I feel the fifties and sixties were the pinnacle of boxing. It was as if the point of ascent for skill had just reached it's peak in boxers and the 'desire' that fighters had was at it's highest plateau before big money ruined most fighters appetites as their hunger waned. It's interesting to note how often the guys fought back then - Gavilan won his title in May 1951 - defending it once more that year - he also in between title fights had another 5 bouts. In 1952 he had 9 bouts (all wins) - 3 of which were title fights. 1953 there were 10 more bouts (9 wins) - 3 of which were title fights. Amongst the fighters he beat in them 3 years - Eugene Silent Hairston, Johnny Bratton (twice / 1 draw), Billy Graham (twice), Walter Cartier, Bobby Dykes, Gil Turner, Chuck Davey, Ralph Tiger Jones and Carmen Basilio !!!!! In his title winning year of 1951 he was unbeaten in 12 ! 29 wins 1 loss and 1 draw in those three magical years in the Pabst Blue Ribbon Age of Boxing of the early fifties...aaahhh! |

|12/9/02 06:08:25 PM|Jeffery Smith|New Orleans||jjs@runbox.com|||6|That heavyweight fight was a snoozer. McCline seemed to be too terrified to fight other than a few acts of bravery with grimacing and grunting. And Vladimir didn't do any more work than he had to do (almost none). I think Vlad is better than Vitali, so the Lewis fight might be interesting. Or it might be just like this one.Next week is Holyfield and Byrd. Lord, I hope you poor guys in London don't have to wait until 4:00 a.m. to see these things. Are they tape delayed?|

|12/9/02 06:39:28 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Kent I have that particular tape JERRY QUARRY VS RON CRANMER (MR. JIMMY SENT IT TO ME). Cranmer was a white boy, he looked to weigh about 190. Jerry missed a left hook, the first punch of the fight that would have koed Cranmer. I'm sure, JERRY had all the points took away and the crowd booed, they weren't that bad, But Cranmer would have won anyway, in fact they had him winning every round.|

|12/9/02 07:15:08 PM|gerry schultz|ohio||geraldschultz162@msn.com|||9|One thing about a point of view is it is always a work in progress, and I've definitely had fun and learned a few things on this site. In rethinking a few things, I can see where Jerry fighting Foreman might be much the same as his fighting Frazier. To me, Jerry had a real chance to win, and found Joe a lot in their fights, before losing in a great effort. A fight in '73 with Foreman might well have gone the same way, I just again see where Jerry could beat him. Maybe that in and of itself is enough. Holmes the boxers would give him a lot trouble with movement and jab, and probably would defeat Jerry, but again I see where Jerry could beat him. His fight with Norton did not represent Jerry's ability at all. It may sound denegrating, I don't mean for it to be. Foreman, Frazier, Holyfield, Norton, Holmes are all men of accomplishment, where Jerry must get the benefit of speculation while having not quite gotten there. I simply see where his possibilities were with these guys, which is a good compliment in itself. Also, I consider Jerry champ-caliber, though he did not actually get there. I hope that clarifies a little. |

|12/10/02 12:52:05 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Wladimir Klitschko did what he had to do to defeat McCline. McCline seemed to only have one plan, to set the tempo with his jab; and when it became apparent that he couldn't out jab Klitschko, he didn't seem to know what to do. He had some moments in the sixth round where he shook up Klitschko with some hard body shots but he seemed unable to continue this or to switch the attack to the head. When he saw that he couldn't win the battle of the jabs, he should have tried to press the attack behind the body attacks to set up head shots. McCline seemed frustrated and his performance reminded me a lot of Jerry's poor showing against Ali in their second fight. He did put on a game effort but it just wasn't enough. Klitschko looked pretty good and even though the fight wasn't exciting, he showed some excellent tools such as, defense, hand speed, and some good power shots when they were needed. |

12/10/02 03:01:27 AM|Evren|London|@||10|Good points Gerry. Yes I also feel Jerry was of championship caliber and had he been around 10 years earlier or later he may well of been champ (if he avoided Holmes)|
12/11/02 07:30:41 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10|Yes Steve I do remember Qwai. I was at the Omni in Atlanta when he lost the title to Holyfield in a 15 round give and take fight. A great thrill for me was shaking Jersey Joe Walcott's hand, he was there to give some moral support to Qwai. Even though he was in his 70's he still looked like he could step in and go a few rounds! I still don't believe Jerry could have beaten George Foreman. Foreman was just too big and strong for Jerry. Above everything else, don't forget Big George had tremendous heart. Scraping him self off the floor in his fight with Lyle, few fighters could have done that after the beating he took, then to come back and KO Lyle. Jerry may have had a chance when Foreman was young and wild but after Peralta and Frazier I don't think so. Foreman always had a punishing left jab and I think that would be Jerrys undoing. I'd like to see a 23 or 24 year old Jerry Quarry in with some of today's Crusierweights though. I think he'd run through them all. You can never take anything away from Jerry. He fought well against some of the biggest names in boxing history, and they will forget being hit by Jerry Quarry. Now that my power has finally come back on I'll spend the next few days clearing the fallen trees from my yard. So much for the "Sunny South". |
12/12/02 01:24:46 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Jerry sure handled George in a 1968, workout, I know that does not mean anything of course for 1974, although Muhammad showed "BIG GEORGE" was'nt completely invinceable. And YOU NEVER SAW JERRY GET MUSCLED AROUND all that much, and if he did it was great because he was a better boxer, when he used his true talent, LIKE THE CHUVALO DEBACKLE, WHEN CHUVALO GOT RUFF IT DIDN'T BOTHER JERRY ALL THAT MUCH, HE PRACTICLY WON EVERY ROUND although he was also a good brawler and slugger, but not quite in that FOREMAN/FRAZIER CLASS|
12/12/02 01:34:03 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|ALTHOUGH JERRY HAD JERRY'S NUMBER, WHAT WOULD "SMOKIN JOE" DO VS THAT BIG SLUGGER, LIKE MAC FOSTER, RON LYLE EARNE SHAVERS, JEFF MERRITT TYPES? IT MIGHT OF BEEN ALOT LIKE FOREMAN, HOW ABOUT SONNY LISTON??and i have they utmost respect for Frazier, and that 1974 bout with Quarry was my most disappointment of my life as far as BOXING WENT, I WAS SURE JERRY'D GET THE TITLE SHOT, OF COURSE HE HAD BILLS TO PAY.|
business, refereeing QUARRY/CHUVALO FOREMAN/ALI, and i'm not talking about a fast count or the canvas being soft or the ropes too loose!!

I've watched that Chuvalo vs Quarry bout many times and feel, sadly that Jerry got up too late. I felt Zack done a good job in that fight and he did shout the count into Jerry's ear. It was very similar to what happened to Jersey Joe in the rematch with Rocky.

Jerry lost fair and square to Chuvalo. Not because he was hurt, it was simply a mental lapse on Jerry's part. It seems to me that he forgot he had gotten back up quickly before kneeling down to take the eight count and he thought he had more time to get up than he actually had. Even Don Dunphy, the announcer, was shocked and he can be heard shouting, "Oh no!" when Jerry was counted out. I think Frazier of the second fight with Jerry would have been hard to beat by anyone. He felt he had something to prove after losses to Ali and Foreman. Frazier worked hard to get ready for that fight because he knew Jerry was capable of taking what he had wanted very much, another shot at the title. Louis was late in stopping the fight. I don't know how he didn't notice that Jerry was bleeding badly and no longer throwing many punches in return. I will say this though, I lost respect for Angelo Dundee after watching Frazier/Quarry 2 again recently because it reminded me how disrespectful he was to Joe Louis. You can hear him yelling several times in the fight to Louis, "get out of the way Joe, work the other side," in a very sarcastic tone of voice. I realize Louis may have been in the way of his line of sight or the television cameras but, the ring is the referee's territory and Dundee had no right to say these things and to treat Louis like that. Joe Louis was boxing royalty at that point and he should have been treated as such.

Joe Krause|Chicago||sadmspats@yahoo.com||12/13/02 08:42:55 AM|Joe Frazier 1968-1971 was one of the best ever. After the first Ali fight he was never the same. He always had a layer of fat in the middle and was just not as ferocious. Early Frazier is such a pleasure to watch. I sure wish Frazier-Bonavena II could be found complete. It looked like a war in the 5 rounds I do have.

|12/13/02 01:13:30 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||EVERN AND KENT: AGAIN I WAS NOT PUTTING ZACH CLAYTON DOWN FOR THE QUARRY-FOREMAN BOUTS HE OFFICIATED, I WAS PUTTING HIM DOWN FOR HIS OWN SHADINESS OUTSIDE THE RING, ANYBODY REFEREEING A QUARRY-CHUVALO WAR OR FOREMAN-ALI, IS DUE HIS RESPECT, BUT SHOULD ONLY BE PAID BY HIS OWN EMPLOYER, IF YOU KNOW WHAT I MEAN, KENT (THE CURLY Q. LINK OF OUR NON-DEFUNCT FEARLESS LEADERS CLUB) I RECENTLY WENT OVER THE RON CRANMER/QUARRY BOUT, CRANMER WAS LISTED AT 8-5-1 5 KO'S. THE SCORING WAS 56-59,53-60,54-58, BY THE JUDGES, CRANMER WOULD NOT HAVE EVER BEEN ALLOWED IN AN ARENA WITH JERRY AT ANY OTHER TIME, FOR HE WOULD HAVE BEEN PROBABLY KILLED IN THE RING, AND THEY QJ OF 1983 WOULD HAVE WON EASILY BY KNOCKOUT, JERRY WAS SUFFERING FROM DEMENTIA ALREADY, AND EVEN AT 205LBS HAD LOST ALL HIS MUSCLE TONE, IN 1983 VS GUERRA, HE DID LOOK LIKE A 195LB CRUSIERWEIGHT DESTROYER, 2 PUNCHES 2 KNOCKDOWNS-ONE FOR FULL COUNT, TAKE CARE! |

|12/15/02 01:59:45 AM|Steve |n.j. |||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||How about Tyson vs Hollyfield again? Consider their positions again. Could set up a Tua vs Byrd, the winners of these two matches might actually get to fight one of those weird, tall, Russian communists who are bent on destroying our very way of life.

|12/15/02 02:23:27 AM|Steve |N.J. |||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||A professional referee's function is first and foremost to protect the fighters and ensure a clean and fair fight. Allthough recently I have heard ref's admonishing fighters to "lets go, let's fight!!"
Phillip, What do you mean you were not impressed with what Jerry was taught? You mention he was a brilliant counter puncher. He must have learned that from somewhere. If not from Flores early on, then where? You are right, Jerry was a great guy. He was down to earth and he didn't act like he was above his fans. He was very easy to talk to. Jimmy D, I am not a fan of Clayton at all. In fact just the opposite. Our own Mr. Jimmy Q said he had questions about his integrity. This doesn't surprise me. But like I said, Jerry did lose the Chuvalo fight fair and square. Any other Ref. would have countered Jerry out too.

Clayton was not saint, but I have seen the Chuvalo-Quarry tape a few times and frankly Clayton did nothing wrong. Jerry should have gotten up and he did not. I don't for one minute think Jerry dogged it, there was no quit in him. I think the punch disoriented him to the point of either not hearing the count or not having the awareness to realize that time was running and to get up when he should have. Foreman claims that in Zaire, Dick Saddler asked him for $25,000 to give to Clayton to make sure Foreman to fight his fight. Foreman said he gave Saddler the cash but he has no idea of if it ever reached Clayton. Obviously Foreman didn't trust Saddler either, the implication being perhaps he just kept it. I don't know much about Saddler except that i believe he worked with Liston at the end of his career.

I have heard other stories that Clayton was not above taking side money also. Since I have no proof, other than my own feeling that it is true because differing sources say the same thing, I will just leave it at that, that it may be true.

I will always remember with joy the thrills Jerry gave me as a 12 year-old kid. I saw his fight with Foster in the Felt Forem in NY and it was a great night for Quarry fans. I also saw on TV his fight with Chuvalo but can't seem to remember much except for Don Dunfey's anti-Quarry bias. Can anyone help me remember this fight? Was Jerry really kicking his butt for 6 rounds. I remember Boxing Illustrated in their fight report saying that "Chuvalo was rocked back on his heels from a wicked one-two to the button in the first few moments of the fight". Chuvalo sure looked a mess after the fight. Also any recommendations on where to get Jerry's fights on tape? Sure would have liked to see Jerry fight Bonavena. I give the edge to Jerry in that one but Oscar was one tough hombre! By the way in Ring Magazine Joe Frazier was quoted as saying after the first Quarry fight " Quarry is a hard puncher but I was tagged with stiffer punches from Bonavena and Ramos" Interesting comment from Smokin' Joe.
out in round one against Charlie "Devil" Green), and Harold Valan (who gave Jimmy Ellis a win over Floyd Patterson when nobody in the world apparently saw the same fight). I liked Richard Steele. He was a good guy. As a boxer, he couldn't endure pain, and he didn't like seeing boxers in the ring enduring pain.

|12/18/02 08:14:46 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||||10|A friend of mine who used to publish a great boxing newsletter used to call Harold Valen "the best referee money can buy". Patterson whipped Ellis and got robbed. I believe the bout took place in Europe. Years ago, I was watching a really boring prelim fight that everyone was hoping would end at the Garden and someone in the crowd yelled out "Where's Richard Steele when you need him?"

|12/18/02 11:54:26 AM|Jeffery Smith|New Orleans||jls@runbox.com||||7|Patterson/Ellis was outdoors in Sweden. I remember seeing their breath.

|12/18/02 03:44:56 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|HEY!Jimmy Dorsey,Kent,and Paul Drolet,what's the deal? I've asked about that Alaska fracas about five times now with no response!Now Jimmy Dorsey goes and mentions it again.Have you guy's got a code of silence on this one? C'mon,let's round out this man's personality for everyone on this site .I need details,yous guys,details! Please don't take me too seriously.Also,what about the story that Jerry injured his back before before the Ellie fight while engaging in horseplay with brother Mike and got his back slammed into a cigarette machine? I CANNOT remember where where Iheard or read it.

|12/18/02 06:55:44 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com||||10|Steve, I don't know anything about what happened in Alaska. That is Jimmy D's department. Anybody else know what happened? The incident where Jerry injured his back happened at the family bar in Bellflower and it was Jimmy Quarry who fell into the jukebox while wrestling with Jerry, not Mike. I think Jimmy Q recounted that story here or he told me himself, I don't remember which. It was during the celebration of Jerry's win over Thad Spencer to get his title shot.
Needless to say, the boys were doing some drinking. A lot of this stuff was posted here but it was lost when the old server went down. We lost a lot of good posts but we also had some troublemakers stirring things up here also that I don't need to see their posts again, thank you.

|12/18/02 07:47:47 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@yahoo.com||||10|Steve: Steve one thing I have in common with Jerry is I never ducked anything,Okay what do you want to know, when II was younger I did not Know I could get Microfilm,On every one of QUARRY S BOUT S, I'M TALKING SPECIFICS,weights,what he was ranked,unaminousdecisions,ko's vs tko'sarena's. AND I LIVED IN EVERY TOWN THAT WOULD HAVE HAD THEM. okay-here it is, Quarry weighed about 230, he was doing they CBS Sports Spectacular, And he went to ALASKA where MIKE QUARRY WAS FIGHTING COOKIE WALLACE, I heard Jerry's buddy Fred Dryer was with him, ANYWAY after the bout. They went to a tavern where some pipeliners attacked Jerry, QUARRY DECKED THREE ASSAILANTS, but a forth pulled a 38 calibur on him, where JOSE"king" ROMAN. knocked it out of the guys hand, Jerry said the man would have definetly "shot him".On the date it would have been one day later where ever MIke decisioned Wallace. TAKE CARE!!

|12/18/02 08:07:13 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||||10|Steve and gang: I had the clipping to the oforementioned incident, when I was 16, March 24th 1977, I threw it away about 20 years ago,seems like it was LA'S own HERALD EXAMINER,or LA TIMES.It would still be on Microfilm out there!

|12/18/02 09:13:01 PM|Steve|n.j.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Kent and Jimmy Dorsey,thank's for your prompt responce.It's great to have guys to talk to at some of these odd hours.Remember,you guys,don't let's take everything too seriously.Kent,I appreciate that info on the back injury of Jerry's.Apparently I was misinformed. Jimmy Dorsey,thank you for info on the Alaska event.
YOUR welcome Steve, you have alot of boxing knowledge yourself, I think Kent and I do not take it too seriously, besides, we have our own fearless leaders club, where as JIMMY Q was our leader Moe, and you can join anytime HA HA! This particular site is great, and usually everyone conducts there self as ladies and gentleman. Its ironic how famous Jerry really was and is, and how so many people can remember him, take care!

Yes, our little club started out by us, Mr. Jimmy Q and me trying to remember where Jerry's fight with Eduardo Corletti took place. Mr. Jimmy thought at first it was at the L.A. sports arena or the L.A. convention center, while I thought it was at the Olympic auditorium. Jimmy D jumped in and said it was at the L.A. Forum. I think he turned out to right in the end but when he first said it, I told him, "OH A WISE GUY!" KNUCK! KNUCK! KNUCK! We all went back and forth a couple of times like a bunch of LUNKHEADS, just like the real Moe and his two friends used to. I realize only those in the Los Angeles, Ca area or those that have live there would know where any of these places are.

Jerry's fight with Mike Nixon in a kitchen in Bakersfield. He said "Now that was a street fight"! He said he witnessed a fight between Bobby Quarry and Mike Nixon in a kitchen in Bakersfield. He said "Now that was a street fight"!

Okay, Jimmy Dorsey and Kent, I may have gotten a sliver of info. you guys don't have. I'll get to that in another hundred words. This way I can hold your attention. When I say,"don't take things too seriously, I mean don't take ME too seriously when I kid you guys. Jimmy, you're absolutely correct about Jerry's amazing popularity after thirty some years. It goes way beyond "The Great White Hope", racial factor. This guy had so much charisma, it was as Evren said "He seemed to have an aura around him. Did you see him on the tape of the superstars competition where he was competing in the home run derby? With his shaggy blond hair, golden California tan, wearing a sleeveless, t-shirt showing off his shoulders and arms in the bright sunlight? Every time he smashed one of those pitches past the home run markers, the crowd went wild. You could tell He loved the crowd and the crowd loved him. Okay, back to the new info. I recieved it from someone whom I can only suppose does not choose to take part in these discussions. I therefore will respect his privacy. He said he witnessed a fight between Bobby Quarry and Mike Nixon in a kitchen in Bakersfield. He said "Now that was a street fight"!

Okay, Steve, I talk to Bobby Quarry on a fairly regular basis and I will try to remember to ask him the next time I talk to him, maybe this weekend, if he ever got in a fight with Mike Nixon. I had heard that Jerry had gotten in a fight with Nixon, but this is the first time I have heard anything about Bobby fighting with him. Wasn't Nixon married to Wilma Q at one time? This is true isn't it Sonia or other family members out there? I do know that Wilma Q is married to a nice man now, as I met him at Jimmy Q's memorial reception and Wilma and him were very gracious hosts. I think it is amazing also that not only is Jerry still popular with the fans, that the Quarry family is still on people's minds. There are not any families out there like them. they are unique. But in a way, I feel rather silly thinking about some of these details of things like who fought who in a street fight. I sometimes think that maybe we should get a life! NAH! What would we do if we didn't come to this board, my favorite boxing site on the
JUST WANTED TO WISH YOU ALL A VERY MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A SAFE AND HAPPY NEW YEAR...WE LOVE AND MISS YOU VERY MUCH DAD AND UNCLE JERRY AND OF COURSE OUR MOM TOO.

Yes, Kent, Mike Nixon, was married to Aunt Wilma, at one time, but that was long ago, and she's married to a real nice guy and has been for years. Have fun all.

Kent, Bobby Quarry and Mike Nixon did have a fight. Funny thing is, they were hanging out together and had gone to a concert and it started out as horseplay, hitting each other on the arms, and it got out of hand and it turned into a full fledged fight. Bobby says that they ended up being friends again the next day. On the subject of Nixon, I know nothing about him as a person and just because I say that one of the Quarry sisters, who was married to Nixon at one time, is now married to a nice man, doesn't mean I am saying that Nixon isn't a good man.
It is not my place to say, one way or the other.

Yes Steve, Bobby Quarry and Mike Nixon did have a fight. Funny thing is, they were hanging out together and had gone to a concert and it started out as horseplay, hitting each other on the arms, and it got out of hand and it turned into a full fledged fight. Bobby says that they ended up being friends again the next day. On the subject of Nixon, I know nothing about him as a person and just because I say that one of the Quarry sisters, who was married to Nixon at one time, is now married to a nice man, doesn't mean I am saying that Nixon isn't a good man.
It is not my place to say, one way or the other.

Kent Appel
La Habra, Ca
oriononside@aol.com

Welcome Rick, I have read your piece on Jerry. You have good insight on the events in Jerry's life and career. Your article is very good reading. As far as Mike goes, I met him this past summer and he seemed to be holding up pretty well. He is in excellent physical condition and is doing his best to do the work to be mentally strong as well. He has good insight on his and Jerry's careers and boxing in general.

Evren
London

Just watched Ali-Frazier 1 - A beautiful version shot in colour with the original Sound that I obtained on 16mm no commentary. Just the most amazing thing you ever saw! In my top 5 favourite fights. Perhaps no man in history would have stood up to Frazier that night - I was thinking; poor Jerry matched with these two. Watching the fighters of today he would have had a better chance. Though smaller he had a far higher workrate and level of fitness to win against these ponderous slow heavies.No matter what happens Joe Frazier can always say he won the biggest fight that ever was.

Gerry Schultz
Ventura, CA
ronnyrains@yahoo.com

thank you BOB BUMBERA, for the WORLD/INTERNATIONAL RATINGS. And I have another comment on Jerry's fracas in Alaska. I've been recently informed that one of the WORLD OR INTERNATIONAL BOXING magazines, also had the incident in it, in editorial, will see if I can locate the mag, And I heard also from an very reliable source, where NIXON fought Jerry in a bar, where both parties ended up in the hospital, And Jerry who was not expecting they attack, took care of matters very quickly, Nixon is driving a truck in VENTURA CA.

Rick Farris
Westlake Village, Cal.
rpprobox@aol.com

I was a stablemate of Jerry's in the late 60's, when he was still with Johnny Flores. I wrote a story on Jerry in the December 1999 issue of the Cyber Boxing Zone. I knew Mike real well, we fought amateur at the same time, we both traveled to Kansas City on the same team for the 1969 National Golden Gloves tournament. Rest in peace Jerry and thanks.

Evren
London

Just watched Ali-Frazier 1 - A beautiful version shot in colour with the original Sound that I obtained on 16mm no commentary. Just the most amazing thing you ever saw! In my top 5 favourite fights. Perhaps no man in history would have stood up to Frazier that night - I was thinking; poor Jerry matched with these two. Watching the fighters of today he would have had a better chance. Though smaller he had a far higher workrate and level of fitness to win against these ponderous slow heavies.No matter what happens Joe Frazier can always say he won the biggest fight that ever was.
Frazier is a great, great fight, and it was Ali himself who made Joe the monster he was in that fight with his insults for Joe, who I respect a great deal. Their third fight, though, to me, approaches the unbelievable. I've never seen anything better in boxing. They were each so great, so opposite, so equal, only Ali's height/reach made him barely better. I've read Mr. Farris' piece also, as I'm sure a lot of Jerry fans have, good writing which I really enjoyed. Happy Holidays.

In my opinion the Ali that beat Williams was the greatest heavy ever followed by the Frazier that beat Ali...followed by the Louis of the late thirties/early forties then the Tyson of the late 80's. Ali superb! A fight I would have love to have seen was Quarry vs Holyfield - that would have been a great one.

Evren: Foreman beat Frazier easily twice, but you still rate Joe higher? In my mind if A beats B, than A is the better fighter. | 12/30/02 01:36:30 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|Was no where near the same man - Frazier was never Smokin' Joe after March 1971! |

Yes, I agree that Frazier left part of his ability in the ring after Frazier/Ali one, but he still had plenty to offer after this. The Frazier who beat Jerry overwhelmingly in 1975 in Frazier/Quarry two and the Frazier of Frazier/Ali three would have been hard to beat in any era by any fighter. Frazier was always a slow starter and he got caught and hurt early in Frazier/Foreman one. He never recovered to be a factor in the fight and Frazier was a shot fighter by the time of his second fight with Foreman but I have to agree that Foreman should be rated higher as he did beat Frazier where it counts, in the ring. |

With the risk of again drawing Evren's ire, I have to disagree regarding Foreman/Frazier. Yes, George did pound him in the ring. But that is as much the product of two immovable objects, one larger than the other, as anything. They may as well have been sumo wrestlers. Ken Norton, to me, did a great job vs. an older, slower, fatter Ali. But no one I know gives Norton credit for being better. Joe was fundamentally a much better fighter than George, whose size and strength was ahead of his time. This is also why I think Jerry matches better with Foreman than Norton, who did not take a punch as well, or Joe, who fought more poorly going backward. Yet, it's not accurate to say Jerry is better than Joe/Ken just because of that matchup. In Frazier and Michael Moorer, Foreman found two champs who matched up poorly with him. I think Carl the Truth would have given George fits if it had been him instead of Moorer, or Mr. Lewis as well, the current champ. George had truly rare power, but to me he and Joe run pretty equally. Joe overcame a lot to be the courageous and successful champ he was. Don't let their fights fool you. And I don't think Foreman could ever have beaten Ali.

Good points Gerry - let's leave it as Frazier may have done better if he was his 1971 model. Carl Williams would have done well vs George until the wind from one of George's hooks blew him out the ring and shattered the crowd with China!

Hey all wanted to say "HAPPY NEW YEAR" to all. We hope you all keep coming back its great to see it still going. Dad & Uncle Jerry, would love it.

In my book, Joe Frazier was a very, very good, near great champ. You would have to look long and hard to find a champ with Joe's guts and left hook. That being said, I don't think Holmes would have given him trouble and in my book that one is too close to call. But I rate Joe as one of the best body punchers ever in the heavies.

Quarry-Holyfield, that would be a good fight. Holyfield reminds me Norton in some ways, I think a prime Quarry would have done some damage early against Holyfield, who could be hit. But I think Evander would prevail, nine round TKO. Holyfield’s package of size, intensity, and speed would be too much, despite another amazing Quarry effort. Again, as Mr. Dunphy once said, Jerry only lost to the best. I put Holyfield on very short list, not too many guys behind Frazier or Foreman, overall.

..Happy New Year!!!!!!!!!!!!! she uses one finger still. However she is very willing to try. So if anyone one has questions post them and by next week she can answer them. Thanks again for your prayers. Mike is a believer in GOD so i know he feels it is up to GOD how things will go for him. bq |

She uses one finger still. However she is very willing to try. So if anyone has questions post them and by next week she can answer them. Thanks again for your prayers. Mike is a believer in GOD so I know he feels it is up to GOD how things will go for him.

Bobby, do you remember Ray Ortega from Delano, when you played Basketball for North
high stars in BAKERSFIELD?? |

Bobby, do you remember Ray Ortega from Delano, when you played Basketball for North high stars in BAKERSFIELD??

I spoke to Mike yesterday and he seemed to be in good spirits and to be living his life as always. I made no mention that I know about his illness. After all, how do you bring a subject like this up? My feeling is he is a strong individual and like I said, with God’s help he can get through this. I live in his area and I will help him in any way I can. It is nice to be able to give something back. Some people ask me, ”what is the big deal about the Quarrys? After all, the were just fighters” The big deal is, the Quarrys have never acted like they are above their fans. They are real down to earth people and this goes beyond what they accomplished in the ring.

I spoke to Mike yesterday and he seemed to be in good spirits and to be living his life as always. I made no mention that I know about his illness. After all, how do you bring a subject like this up? My feeling is he is a strong individual and like I said, with God’s help he can get through this. I live in his area and I will help him in any way I can. It is nice to be able to give something back. Some people ask me, ”what is the big deal about the Quarrys? After all, the were just fighters” The big deal is, the Quarrys have never acted like they are above their fans. They are real down to earth people and this goes beyond what they accomplished in the ring.

Hello all, I’m writting to say I look at the letter page every day, it seems to keep me closer to James. I know he loved talking to everyone. I just wish he was here to keep all Q & A going. I know he had alot of info for all but if I can help I sure would love to. I want all to know he is still with us all, not in life, but in our hearts, and spirits. I also know he loved this Web page, and the letters. Thanks to all. Our Web page will have alot of new things shortly, so keep coming back, have things James wanted to add, but never got time. Thanks, Mrs. Q|

Hello all, I’m writting to say I look at the letter page every day, it seems to keep me closer to James. I know he loved talking to everyone. I just wish he was here to keep all Q & A going. I know he had alot of info for all but if I can help I sure would love to. I want all to know he is still with us all, not in life, but in our hearts, and spirits. I also know he loved this Web page, and the letters. Thanks to all. Our Web page will have alot of new things shortly, so keep coming back, have things James
wanted to add, but never got time. Thanks, Mrs. Q|

I have something new on the life and times of JERRY QUARRY, A bout in San Antonio TX, vs ROY CREAR,JERRY was decked in the second round of that bout by Crear, from a left hook to the face. Of course Quarry took out Crear the next round with a right to the jaw. Quarry was scheduled to fight Sonny MOORE, but Flores felt MOORE’S vast experience (Texas Champion). MIGHT HAVE BEEN A LITTLE TOO MUCH AT THE TIME. Flores said he wasn't necessarily ducking Moore, but maybe an main event in the same arena in the near future, the bout took place nov.2,1965 Quarry weighed in at 190 to 185 for Roy
Crear |

I have something new on the life and times of JERRY QUARRY, A bout in San Antonio TX, vs ROY CREAR, JERRY was decked in the second round of that bout by Crear, from a left hook to the face. Of course Quarry took out Crear the next round with a right to the jaw. Quarry was scheduled to fight Sonny MOORE, but Flores felt MOORE’S vast experience (Texas Champion). MIGHT HAVE BEEN A LITTLE TOO MUCH AT THE TIME. Flores said he wasn't necessarily ducking Moore, but maybe an main event in the same arena in the near future, the bout took place nov.2,1965 Quarry weighed in at 190 to 185 for Roy Crear.

I have something new on the life and times of JERRY QUARRY, A bout in San Antonio TX, vs ROY CREAR, JERRY was decked in the second round of that bout by Crear, from a left hook to the face. Of course Quarry took out Crear the next round with a right to the jaw. Quarry was scheduled to fight Sonny MOORE, but Flores felt MOORE’S vast experience (Texas Champion). MIGHT HAVE BEEN A LITTLE TOO MUCH AT THE TIME. Flores said he wasn't necessarily ducking Moore, but maybe an main event in the same arena in the near future, the bout took place nov.2,1965 Quarry weighed in at 190 to 185 for Roy Crear.

I wanted to let Mikes fans know that the doctors feel they got his cancer early enough, he will have treatment for two months and hopefully that will be all he needs. Thanks for your prayers.
brenda |

I wanted to let Mikes fans know that the doctors feel they got his cancer early enough, he will have treatment for two months and hopefully that will be all he needs. Thanks for your prayers.
brenda.

I remember Jerry
had a surprisingly tough time winning a 1/4 point decision over a guy named Larry Middleton over in London. Middleton also defeated Bugner. Middleton was American. |

I remember Jerry
had a surprisingly tough time winning a 1/4 point decision over a guy named Larry Middleton over in London. Middleton also defeated Bugner. Middleton was American. |

Middleton was fairly slick and rangy 6’5. Jerry would always have trouble with those types.
Middleton didn't have enough talent to press his stylistic advantage. I have

Middleton was fairly slick and rangy 6’5. Jerry would always have trouble with those types.
Middleton didn't have enough talent to press his stylistic advantage. I have Middleton vs Norton and Larry was a tough guy who came to win. Out of Baltimore.

| 1/14/03 05:55:22 PM | Evren | London || @ || || 10 | I need Quarry vs Orbillo complete live call - can anyone help? Also need Quarry vs Alongi if in good knick! |
| 1/14/03 06:34:05 PM | Evren | London || @ || || 10 | Also seen for sale is Jerry Quarry on the Phil Donohue show - never seen that before. |
| 1/14/03 07:59:56 PM | Gerry Schultz | Ohio || jgschultz@firstam.com || || 9 | Glad to here things are looking up for Mike Q., surgery-wise. I remember seeing Mike in the 70's as well, pre-Bob Foster. The Quarry boys made quite a splash in those days, good fun. Here's to hoping things continue to go the right way for you, Mike. |
| 1/14/03 08:13:21 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA || Sonia81@aol.com || || 10 | Good Luck Uncle Mike! We are all praying for you, and we're all here for you no matter what. There's no quittin now. We love you. We miss you Dad & Uncle Jerry, Mom too, and love you all. Thanks to everyone else for keeping up with this site |
| 1/14/03 10:17:35 PM | Kent | La Habra, CA || oriononside@aol.com || || 10 | Has Mike already had some surgery? I thought he was going into treatment in the next month or so but wasn't having surgery yet. Anyway, like I already said, Mike has a positive attitude and that goes along way in helping with his recovery. |
| 1/15/03 07:54:34 PM | Charles Anderson | Pine Bluff, AR || ctjjandfam@aol.com || || 10 | i wish mike the quickest recovery. best wishes to the rest of the Quarry's. what is the latest on a book or movie. James is missed very much. |
| 1/16/03 04:00:17 PM | Jimmy Dorsey | Ventura, CA || RONNYRAINS@yahoo.com || || 10 | Steve: Yes JERRY KO'D Crear for both his 12th and 13th win. I CANNOT believe Jerry was decked, so now i'm counting 7 for his whole career, remember Brassell doesn't count. (after the bell) and neither should Patterson I (a slip) but its 7 total: just researched JERRY'S other SAN ANTONIO bout. a decision over willis earls, 100-93, 99-91, 94-91 were the scores no knockdowns, (earls knocked SONNY LISTON down, his bout before).ALTHOUGH earls weighed in at 185 to Quarry's 203 1/2, he went the distance (no knockdowns). JERRY was listed as #3 contender (probably WBA). Now how many times did JQ GIVE AWAY 20 pounds?? Hang in there MIKE QUARRY LIKE YOU ALWAYS DID, WE ARE ALL PRAYING FOR YOU. |
| 1/16/03 06:19:40 PM | Steve | NJ || dmmarm@comcast.net || || 10 | I know words like honor and shame don't seem to mean much in the world of boxing. I still can't get over feeling sick every time I see the absolutely inexcusable lapses in prof. conduct by the referees in the two Quarry vs Frazier fights, and the Quarry vs Norton fights. The amount of damage he suffered in the last rounds of those three fights was horrible. To have a drug addled Joe Lewis as a referee in any fight, defies logic. |
| 1/16/03 08:07:00 PM | Forest Ward | South Carolina || waynemaggee@cs.com || || 5 | Steve, thanks for your insightful comments. The only way you can prevent these things from happening is by abolishing boxing. We must also remember how many brains did Jerry Quarry damage with his powerful fists, quite a few I am sure. Where is the sorrow for Quarry's victims? I have yet to see that written on this site. How many people did Jerry Quarry permanently injure and maim, Thad Spencer, Floyd Patterson, Mac Foster, Brian London... Was it really necessary to remind people of Joe Louis's drug problem. Jerry and Mike Quarry both had cocaine and alcohol addictions. That certainly contributed to their impairments. Folks lets not forget Jerry Quarry has the blood of a lot of boxing victims on his fists |
| 1/16/03 09:00:18 PM | Kent Appel | La Habra, CA || oriononside@aol.com || || 10 | Forest, obviously you are new to this site as one of the main purposes of it is to bring awareness to the terrible tragedy of fighters being injured from their days in the ring. With the help of Geoge Otto and James Quarry, the Quarry Foundation helped pass legislation here in the United States to make boxing safer and for betterment of the sport including, the Reciprocity act and the Muhammad Ali reform act. Sure there is more work to be done and short of banning boxing, which we don't support, there are still going to be fighters injured in the ring. What we can do is make the sport as safe as possible. So Forest, instead of being critical, what are some measures we can take to help us achieve our goal? Sure there are fighters that were injured by the powerful fists of Jerry Quarry but the point you miss is that not one person who has ever visited this site, let alone the many fine fans of the Quarrrys as well as members of the Quarry family who visit here, supports any fighter being injured. Yes, there are inhearrant dangers in the sport but I will say again, we can work to limit those dangers as much as possible.

| 1/17/03 11:31:10 AM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA
CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10 |
|---------------|
KENT: JERRY WAS OUTWEIGHED IN HIS BOUTS 20-40-1. I'M LACKING 5 BUT OF THOSE QUARRY WAS AT LEAST OUTWEIGHED 3 OF 5 I KNOW. ANYWAY BOY WAS HIS CAREER INTERESTING, EVEN THE BOUTS YOU NEVER HEARD OF HAD A LOTTA INTEREST IN THEM. FOREST WARD, ARE YOU THE HEAVYWEIGHT, THAT FOUGHT FOREMAN ON TIMES SQUARE??, JUST A LITTLE CURIOUS |

| 1/17/03 05:57:21 PM | Steve | nj | dmmr@comcast.net | 10 |
First, I was amazed and saddened to hear about Mike's health problems, it seems like no good luck has visited this strong, deserving clan lately. From thier posts, they seem to be a family of strong faith. This will bring them through anything! Kent, I think my comments where misunderstood by Forest Ward. I love the sport of Boxing! While I agree with you, Kent, that being critical of the sport without suggesting any solutions helps no one. I stand by my criticism of the referees in the Frazier and Norton vs Quarry fights. I felt it certainly was necessary to remind people of Joe's drug addiction. He was put in a position of grave responsibility, where literally, the fighter's lives were at stake! In this instance, that life was Jerry Quarry's! Joe was clearly befuddled, confused, and not really sure what to do! He continued to wave Quarry in after he'd absorbed many powerful, unanswered blows. I think the first and most obvious steps that can be taken would be to demand from our Congressional leaders and Senators that a Federally controlled boxing commission be set up. Now by that I mean a legitimate organization, manned by people who have nothing to do with the sport personally. That is, they have no conflicting interest. Second, get serious about eliminating the criminal elements from the sport. I don't mean fighters with jail records. Pete Rose was banned from baseball for gambling. Don King is a convicted numbers runner who kicked a man to death, is widely acknowledged to regularly cheat fighters out of millions of dollars, and yet is paraded around the ring after every major fight, preening and strutting for the cameras. I mean the Panama Lewis types who stripped the padding out of his fighters' gloves in the John Collins' fight of years ago. I believe John Collins committed suicide soon after that fight, his career in ruins. Now, after being banned from boxing, I see that our old friend Panama is now in the corner of Mike Tyson. Hey, Enttienne, better have your corner check Mike's gloves! Boxing is a great and noble sport. It deserves the loyal following of the very patient, long suffering fans. It could very easily be made much safer. I think a federal commission to oversee boxing could do wonders. FFFFFFIRST OF ALL, A pension plan, health insurance. This to be funded by a percentage of the profits made by all venues involved in the fight! Casinos, promoters like Don King, managers and the fighters themselves. THE IRS is quick enough to be there to collect their income tax from the purse, aren't they? Let's hear some ideas and opinions from all you regular guys on this site. Would a letter writing campaign be useful? Which Senators and congressmen would be most receptive to our cause? Remember, we all vote. |

| 1/18/03 02:05:59 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAI |
STEVE: There is no reason for either party to apologize, i do not get in these wars for i believe bickering over the internet is trivial, i am sure Forest Ward believes the same, must be at least a boxing fan, if not a fighter. Both of you made good points as far as i'm concerned, Also JQ was too tough for his own good we said that all along, i followed the man's career of course, where i grew up it was easy. I saw the Ali-Wepner bout they other day, sure brought the memories back, RIGHT Joe Louis should have stopped the bout, But Jerry was hot and maybe Joe was gonna give him every chance of winning, WHO KNOWSII KNOW the man was bleeding bad, but he was so tough and refused to go down same as Norton bout, personally i was only 14, but very against the even signing of the bout, i wanted JQ to get his entitled title shot and leave "SMOKIN" JOE FRAZIER ALONE!!!

The thing is Jimmy D, Forest comes on here and says nothing positive at all so a response is warranted. But rather than enter into an argument with him, I have tried to ask him for some positive input. I do question his statement that both Jerry and Mike had addictions to alcohol and cocaine. Maybe there was some substance use on their parts, but addiction? I think this is unfounded. As far as Joe Louis having some problem with drugs, prescription or otherwise, I don't have knowledge of this and I can't comment on it. I do agree that Joe should have stopped Jerry's second fight with Frazier sooner though. Interesting comment Ken Norton had to say in his book about Jerry's condition. Basically Norton said he had some concern that he caused some of the damage Jerry suffered from but that it just as easily could have been himself who suffered from the damage and he knew what he was getting into and so did Jerry when they entered into a dangerous sport like boxing.

JOE LOUIS WAS A GREAT CHAMPION OF BOXING AND GREAT CHAMPION OF HIS COUNTRY WHO DESERVED BETTER THAN HE GOT, BUT HE WAS IN NO CONDITION TO REFEREE ANY BOUTS IN 1974 FOR ANYONE LET ALONE JERRY AND JOE. WHAT ABOUT THE BOOK?

FOLKS IF I MAY LET ME RESPOND TO SOME OF THE QUESTIONS THAT HAVE BEEN RAISED. #1 I WAS NOT CRITICAL OF STEVE, I THOUGHT HE WAS A VERY CONSCIENTIOUS FAN, MY FEELINGS ARE SIMPLY STATED AS A BOXING HISTORIAN AND A FAN FOR OVER 40 YEARS. TRYING TO MAKE BOXING SAFER, IS COMPARABLE TO MAKING THE CIGARETTE SMOKING SAFER, IT CANNOT BE DONE. A LITTLE MORE THAN A YEAR AGO A FIGHTER WAS KILLED HERE IN NEW YORK, THAT IS ALMOST 35 YEARS AFTER JERRY QUARRY MADE HIS DEBUT THERE. I AM NOT CALLING FOR THE ABOLISHMENT OF BOXING OR CIGARETTE SMOKING, I AM SIMPLY SAYING THAT THE RESULTS WILL NOT CHANGE, AND THE JERRY AND MIKE QUARRY'S WILL MULTIPLY AND OLD FANS WILL TALK ABOUT THE QUARRY'S GLORY DAYS, AND THESE GUYS WILL BE DAMAGED FOR LIFE, AND DEPEND ON SOCIAL SECURITY AND CAREGIVERS TO CARE FOR THEM AT THE AGE OF 45. THAT DOES NOT SOUND LIKE THE AMERICAN DREAM TO ME, IT SOUND LIKE SOMETHING OUT OF DICKENS. THE OLDER I GET THE MORE I REALIZE HOW SHORT LIFE IS. DOES ANYONE REALLY BELIEVE THAT THE GOVERNMENT IS CAPABLE OF REFORMING BOXING, THE GOVERNMENT CAN'T EVEN ALLOW PRAYERS TO BE SAID IN SCHOOL.#2 JIM, I AM NOT THE FOREST WARD WHO YOU ARE REFERRING TO, IT IS A PEN NAME(ALTHOUGH MY EMAIL ADDRESS IS REAL), I WAS CURIOUS TO SEE IF ANYONE WOULD REMEMBER HIM. JIM, YOU KNOW YOUR BOXING. I WAS AT TIMES SQUARE THE DAY HE BOXED GEORGE FOREMAN. FOREMAN NAILED HIM IN THE 1ST ROUND WITH A LEFT HOOK, AND IN THE SECOND ROUND HE NAILED FOREMAN WITH A RIGHT HAND. QUARRY AND FRAZIER ALSO SPARRED THAT DAY, THAT WAS IN JUNE OF 1969. LETS SEE HOW THE FIGHTERS FROM THAT DAY ARE DOING, JERRY QUARRY IS DEAD, FOREST WARD THE LAST I HEARD IS STILL ALIVE AND HAS BEEN IN AND OUT OF JAIL, AND HAS BEEN DECLARED MENTALLY INCOMPETENT, JOE FRAZIER IS SLOWING DOWN, BUT HE MAY BE ALRIGHT I REALLY CAN'T SAY,DESPITE THE FACT HE Fought MOST OF HIS CAREER WITH ONLY ONE GOOD EYE (SO MUCH FOR BOXING PHYSICALS). AND GEORGE FOREMAN IS A NATURAL TREASURE. DIRECTLY OR INDIRECTLY 75% OF THE FIGHTERS I JUST NAMED ARE PERMANENTLY DAMAGED OR PREMATURELY DEAD AS A RESULT OF BOXING. PLEASE MAKE NO MISTAKE I LOVE THESE GUYS ESPECIALLY FOREST WARD, I FOLLOWED HIS CAREER FROM THE AMATEURS HERE IN NYC, I REMEMBER HIM BOXING IN THE THE POLICE ATHLETIC LEAGUE, AND WINNING THE GOLDEN GLOVES, AND BEATING KENNY NORTON IN THE NATIONAL AAU FINALS IN SAN DIEGO IN 1967, AND WINNING THE PAN AMERICAN GAMES IN CANADA IN 1967. WELL, HERE I AM SEMI-RETIRED AND ENJOYING GOOD HEALTH, AND REMEMBERING WELL THEIR GLORY DAYS. WHAT WAS JERRY QUARRY DOING THE LAST YEARS OF HIS LIFE, WANDERING AWAY FROM HIS CARE GIVERS AND ASKING PEOPLE IF THEY HEARD OF ALI OR FRAZIER, AND THEN TELLING THEM THAT HE FOUGHT BOTH OF THEM, AND THEN NOT REMEMBERING HIS WAY BACK TO HIS HOUSE. I NO LONGER WANT TO LIVE WITH MY MEMORIES OF THESE GUYS IN THEIR GLORY DAYS,IF IT MEANS THAT THEY HAVE TO PAY SUCH A TERRIBLE PRICE. ONE MORE PIECE OF INFORMATION. I SAW EMILE GRIFFITH FIGHT A LOT IN MADISON SQUARE GARDEN IN THE LATE 60'S AND EARLY 70'S. I USED TO SEE HIM AROUND NEW YORK A LOT, NEVER MET NICER GUY IN MY LIFE THAN EMILE. THE LAST TIME I SAW HIM WAS ABOUT 3 YEARS AGO AT THE RING 8 VETERANS BOXING CLUB HERE IN NEW YORK, HE SEEMED FINE. WELL A LOT CAN HAPPEN IN 3 YEARS. RECENTLY HE WAS AT A BOXING BENEFIT IN WASHINGTON D.C. AND A FAMOUS CUT MAN FROM NEW YORK WHO HAS KNOWN EMILE SINCE HE WAS IN THE GOLDEN GLOVES IN 1958, TELLS ME THAT EMILE DID NOT REMEMBER HIM, AND THAT EMILE NEEDS A CARE GIVER TO BE WITH HIM ALL DURING HIS WAKING HOURS, AND DURING THE TIME THE THE CUTMAN SPOKE WITH EMILE, EMILE CONSTANTLY ASKED HIM WHERE HE WAS. IT GET'S WORSE, LATER THAT NIGHT EMILE WANDERED FROM HIS HOTEL, AND COULD NOT FIND HIS WAY BACK. THE POLICE HAD TO LOOK FOR HIM AT NIGHT WITH HELICOPTERS, EMILE IS ALL OF 64 YEARS OLD. QUIZ TIME, WHAT DO EMILE GRIFFITH, FOREST WARD, AND JERRY QUARRY HAVE IN COMMON? THEY WERE ALL TRAINED AT ONE TIME OR ANOTHER BY GIL CLANCY. GIL IS OVER 80 YEARS OLD AND IN GOOD HEALTH AND WELL OFF, AND A NICE GUY, AND NONE OF HIS SONS OR DAUGHTERS EVER BOXED, ALTHOUGH ONE DAUGHTER WAS A BOXING COMMENTATOR. FLOYD PATTERSON IS IN THE LAST STAGES OF ALZHEIMERS, HE HAS GREAT TROUBLE SWALLOWING HIS FOOD, SOON HE MAY NEED A FEEDING TUBE. PERSONLLY I BELIVE IT WOULD EASIER TO MAKE CAPITAL PUNISHMENT SAFER THAN IT WOULD BE TO MAKE BOXING SAFER.#3 FINALLY WE COME TO KENT. KENT, I AM NOT NEW TO THIS SITE I'VE MADE POSTING'S OVER THE YEARS, NEVER LOOKED TO PROVOKE AN ARGUMENT, AND ALWAYS LEFT A LEGITIMATE EMAIL ADDRESS. IF YOU WANT TO LIVE IN THE WORLD OF ONE SIDED THINKING, THAT IS YOUR CHOICE, BUT REMEMBER YOU ARE NOT THE ARBITRATER OF WHAT IS ALLOWED TO BE POSTED ON THIS BOARD, OR WHAT CONSTITUTES INSIGHTFUL THOUGHTS. YOU ARE NOT JUDGE AND JURY. ONCE AGAIN IF WE ARE TO TALK ABOUT THE PAIN AND SUFFERING THE QUARRY'S SUFFERED WE CANNOT FORGET OF THE PAIN AND SUFFERING THEY INFLECTED ON OTHERS, IT TAKES 2 TO BOX, AND ONE IS GOING TO BE THE WINNER AND ONE IS GOING TO BE THE LOSER. THAT IS AS IT IS IN LIFE AND IN BOXING. SINCE YOU BROUGHT IT UP AGAIN I WILL TALK ABOUT THE SUBSTANCE ABUSE ISSUE, YES, JOE LOUIS HAD A SUBSTANCE ABUSE PROBLEM WITH COCAINE, HE STATED AS MUCH IN HIS BIOGRAPHY WITH BARNEY NAGLER. AND SO DID JERRY AND MIKE. JERRY DID TIME IN JAIL FOR DRIVING UNDER THE INFLUENCE(THAT'S PUBLIC RECORD), AND MIKE QUARRY MOVED TO NEW YORK FOR A TIME ABOUT 20 YEARS FOR THE SOLE PURPOSE OF KICKING COCAINE PROBLEM, AS PUBLICALLY STATE BY MIKE IN A NATIONAL MAGAZINE. IT WOULD NOT BE FAIR TO MIKE TO END THE STORY ON THAT NOTE, GOD BLESS HIM DID OVERCOME HIS COCAINE PROBLEM ONE DAY AT A TIME, AND FOR THAT REASON HE IS A HERO OF MINE.
KENT, ONE MORE TIME I GIVE YOU MY FEELINGS ABOUT MAKING BOXING SAFER, IT CANNOT BE DONE. END OF STORY|

|1/19/03 04:55:27 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com||||10|Forest, I in no way ever want to censor anyone's options. I was just stating mine in return and yours are very welcome by all of us here. I disagree that nothing can be done to make boxing safer. One of the things the Quarry foundation has pushed for is a test to show the presence of a gene that shows whether a person is more likely to have the symptoms of pugilistica dementia if they enter into boxing or other contact sports. The last I heard is that a company owns the patent to this test and they have not made the test available at an affordable price so that it can be widely used. If a test like this is available, then people who want to enter into sports like boxing can make a more informed decision about if they should compete or not. Ever notice that fighters like George Foreman and George Chuvalo don't have signs of damage from the ring while others like Jerry did have damage. The test would have shown that Jerry was more at risk than either of these two fighters. Someone asked about any senators or congressmen who are helpful in trying to make contact sports as safe as they can be and one in particular stands out, Senator John McCain of Arizona. Sen. McCain was very helpful in helping pass legislation supported by the Quarry Foundation so far.
As far as Mike's substance abuse problems in the past, I don't have knowledge that his problem was severe. It doesn't mean it couldn't be possible, and I guess we could ask him, but it wouldn't be a good time to bring this up as he is battling an illness, not boxing related, that needs his attention at the moment. All I know is I don't think he drinks or takes any kind of illicit drugs now. That Jerry was arrested at one time for an alcohol related offense doesn't mean he had a substance abuse problem. It means he made a mistake. He too may have had a problem but why bring that up now? Oh by the way, was the cutman you spoke about Mr. Chuck Bodak? I met Mr. Bodak last year at a fight card and if Emile Griffith didn't remember him, then Griffith does have a major problem as Mr. Bodak is quite a colorful individual. |

|1/19/03 10:11:37 AM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|'Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia81@aol.com||||10|You know I am not saying they did or not saying they didn't, but you know people are human and allowed to make mistakes and most of us learn or have learned from them. That was the past this is now, and we need to all realize that, cause right now its not what needs to keep being brought up. Keep fighting Uncle Mike, and yes "There's No Quit In A Quarry" and in my whole life thats the way we've all really lived. Cause all that we've been through losing family members, and illnesses happening, NONE OF US ARE QUITTING.
To bad everyone isn't this way. Keep up with the site, its great to see what people have to say about our family, good or bad, everyone is human. We love &
miss you very much Dad, Uncle Jerry, Uncle Mike, and the rest of the clan.|

|1/19/03 06:11:24 PM|EV|LONDON||@|||10|Very interesting goings on here. It is extremely sad to hear the stories of past greats in such a bad way. It breaks my heart. Boxers essentially damage one another so all are to blame(as we are). You can make measures to protect a boxer to a limited extent.i.e less rounds, weight checking etc but in the end that does not stop the object of a man's fist striking an opponents skull and causing damage, both temporary and permanent.A very sad story I heard was from the latter years of Sugar Ray Robinson's life.
Whilst attending the Hagler-Hearns bout in Las Vegas he asked one of his journalist companions if he had ever fought either Marvin or Tommy.Yes the Quarry's are as guilty as anyone when it comes to damaging another fighter in the ring but obviously being on this site we devote our feelings to them as this is their 'fanclub' in effect. Mr Ward makes some very good points that are very valid and seems very much bitter towards the game since seeing his heroes ravaged by brain damage.

I have read about Joe Louis' drug habit from several sources, one being from the Liston biography by Nick Tosches. That journalistic piece went as far as to say that Louis introduced Sonny to drugs which led to his eventual demise. Whether this is true is subject to debate. Boxers are victims of boxing with very few making out with all faculties in tact. The only way to fully protect them would be to ban the game. This of course will not happen. All boxers know the risks so, I guess the cause of their injuries lie with themselves. They are victims of their own 'habit'.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/19/03 06:51:21 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>oriononside@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Evren, the only way we can eliminate boxers from getting permanently injured in the ring would be if boxing matches never happen again. But this is not going to happen. If boxing were banned, then it would go underground and these illegal matches would put the contestants at even greater risk as there would be no regulation of the sport. American football, rugby, and similar sports also cause a lot of permanent head trauma. Does that mean these sports should be banned also? This is one of the times where James Quarry is sorely missed as he had some good insight on the very subjects we are discussing now. The choice we have is to sit and do nothing to improve boxing or we can do the best we can to try and limit injuries as much as possible. Since boxing is not going away, then I choose the second course of action over inaction. Forest may not believe this, but I am glad he posted here as he made things a little more lively here again.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/19/03 07:02:05 PM</th>
<th>Evren</th>
<th>London</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

There has been some positive measures to improve safety in boxing in recent years. This may help but you can't guage long term affects by rules that are being administered now. Boxers still take punches to the head day in and day out. The intention of a boxer is to strike the opponent about the body or head to inflict damage. This is where it seperates itself from other sports. I love boxing and am the biggest fan but I guess hide myself from the real dangers. I don't have to take the punches or bleed like they do. That the boxers are doing this sport voluntarily makes me bear it. It is barbaric but it is the boxers choice to duel. There are both sides to this argument but as long as there are boxers and money the game will go on. We can only try to improve on making retirment and health funds for ex boxers.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/20/03 04:12:26 PM</th>
<th>Steve</th>
<th>nj</th>
<th>dmmsrm@comcast.net</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Hi, Evren, why don't you consider using your organizational and motivational skills in starting a new tournament for alltime greatest Light heavyweight and or middleweight fighters, including crossovers! You did a great job on the heavyweight tournament! There are surely enough candidates over the years to come up with a lot of dream fights! Charles Anderson, you keep asking about a book on "The Quarry's", and I believe me, I share your interest. I now am aware of at least two, and possibly three people, who are interested in developing a story. Kent, I disagree with your assessment of Norton's statements and attitude towards Jerry Quarry in his book, "Going The Distance". Basically, Norton said he was concerned that he had caused some of the damage Jerry suffered! Based on some of his later comments in his book, this sounds distinctly like gloating. He qualifies his brief sense of guilt by saying that it could just as easily have been himself who suffered from the damage. Once again, however, He fails to mention that Quarry was only carefully selected as an opponent after the fearful, career ending beating he took at the hands of Joe Frazier only a few months earlier. Quarry at that time was a shot fighter, he was ripe for a beating, and Norton's people knew it. In his book, Norton states "I freely admit that I did not like Quarry." "Quarry was the only man whom I fought in anger." "I went in to punish him." "I wanted Quarry to be carried out on a stretcher." "My point is, Quarry, who by all accounts I have heard, was a pretty nice guy, seems to have been hand picked, an acknowledged shot fighter, to be a whipping boy for Norton. I guess Norton's hard feelings for Quarry did dissipate after he nearly killed him in the ring. Norton still comes of to me as a guy who, in that fight with Forman, was looking for a place to lay down.|
| 1/20/03 06:05:57 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|I would like to do a competition but am really pushed for time at the moment. Will consider it later in the year. Just watched Quarry-Spencer... again. I guess no one has the Quarry-Orbillo complete. Shame. I have to hunt for that now! |
| 1/21/03 12:30:36 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|I don't think Norton laydown for Foreman. He always froze against big punchers like Foreman, Shavers, and Cooney. |

| 1/21/03 02:30:54 PM|Joe Krause|Chicago||sadmspats@yahoo.com|||10|I have Quarry-Orbillo, but one of my VCR's crapped out on me and I can't duplicate anything right now. I did pay close to $50 dollars for that fight, Quarry-London, Chuvalo-Ellis and Machen-Johansson from Kurt Noltimier. He's on the web and has that one and Quarry-ALongi I in bad condition he says. Pat Merrick also has Quarry-Orbillo I believe. He is cheaper as well. |
| 1/21/03 02:56:30 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|Is the Orbillo fight the live broadcast - what is the quality like? I'm very interested in getting this fight in perfect quality if possible. |

| 1/21/03 03:08:38 PM|Sabrina Quarry-Porter|Florida||SabrinaLPorter@aol.com|||10|The new home page looks great... and it really means alot.....Thank You!!!!! |
| 1/21/03 03:37:22 PM|j.krause|chitown||sadmspats|||10|It is no where as good as the clip you have which I have as well. It is the live broadcast, I would rate it fair-good quality |
| 1/21/03 04:02:03 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|I may still be interested... when your video is okay - maybe I can purchase from you. EvrenIt looks a fabulous fight. |
| 1/21/03 06:57:46 PM|charles anderson|pine bluff arkansas||ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|thanks, steve. i thought i was the only one interested in a book. i know the quarry's have had a lot more on their minds lately than a book and my hearts go out to them. i still think it would be a great read. |
| 1/22/03 05:23:40 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|I think rather than maybe starting a big tournament at the moment we could create some Jerry Quarry fantasy fights. I'd select say ten separate opponents from a random draw one by one and 'poster's' could give their view of the outcome. |

| 1/22/03 05:59:29 PM|Carl Weingarten|TJQF||TJQF|||10|Sonia, Sabrina and family,I am very happy that you like the new home page. Before James passed, he had asked me to use that photo of him and Jerry. Brandi had also asked about that photo, which I thought would be great for the cover, and a perfect tribute to both Jerry and James. There are additional design changes on other pages, which I hope makes the web site more professional and attractive. New video clips will be added as I have time. James had sent me all kinds of footage that I never see anywhere else - mostly rare interviews and sparring sessions. Anyway, it's my pleasure to work on the site and help the foundation. It's been and honor as well, to have known James, and having followed Jerry and Mike since the early 1970s, when I was growing up in St. Louis. I spent many late and anxious school nights with my ear glued to the radio, waiting for fight results. |
| 1/23/03 12:50:02 AM|Daryl Breese|Bakersfield||CALBREESE@aol.com|||10|The book is progressing nicely, Paul Drolet is co-authoring. Very talented. As more and more material pour in, it has to be sorted, edited and verified. I have to tell you straight up this book needs to (will) be as comprehensive and interesting as possible. A complete story. That being said, everyone and anyone with firsthand knowledge of Quarry Family Stories, please call me for a SASE that I will mail to you so you may include those thoughts in the book. Keep it positive and upbeat! I will interview you if you would like. I do need a couple of volunteers to submit (handwritten) the complete Quarry Family Tree with birth years, connecting as many dots as you can...we love the duplicity of multiple sources. Also, Carl, TJQF please call me at your convenience. cellular 661.703.4444 Contributors, if I don't answer, please leave a message on my voice mail with your address for your SASE. Thanks Paul, Kent, Steve and Jimmy! No Quit until it is on the bookshelves! Daryl|
|1/23/03 08:18:53 PM|charles anderson|pine bluff ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|thanks for the update on the book, d. after the books a hit they can make a movie. matt damon would be cast as jerry and brad pitt as mike. what do you think?|
|1/24/03 07:27:58 AM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia81@aol.com|||10|Whoever is doing this book, hopefully it was cleared before my Father died, and not just ramblings on about thing when some don't have a clue. It needs to be done through the proper channels, and all done legally.|
|1/25/03 03:53:42 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PIMls4@aol.com.au|||10|In regard to the poster calling for the abolition of boxing, I must say that such a call is analgous to saying that life should be banned simply because people eventually become ill and die. People are seriously injured or killed from a broad raft of sports - football, water skiing, sky diving, horse riding, motor racing, etc - and injuries and deaths also result from lifestyle choices (alcohol, drugs, cigarettes, eating MacDonalds, etc). Boxers enter the sport aspiring to better themselves and for every death there are literally thousands of successes that otherwise save people from living in the gutters from poverty or stopping then from ending up in the morgues from drug overdoses. The Quarrys - because of all the family trials and tribulations - are far better placed than the rest of us to make a call on the viability of boxing, and even Jerry Quarry, despite what happened to him, would probably have not changed even one second of his courageous career. If people really want to ban dangerous sports and lifestyle choices, then medicines and anti-biotics must also be legislated against. After all, for every thousand people these medicines save, there is one in ten thousand that are killed from allergies to those drugs. |
|1/25/03 09:19:02 AM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia81@aol.com|||10|You are right Paul! Couldn't have said it better. Thanks!|
|1/25/03 07:13:25 PM|Forest Ward|South Carolina||joekevin@cs.com|||8|Hello folks this is in response to Paul from Sydney. I did not call for the abolition of boxing, I merely said that trying to make boxing safer is comparable to making cigarettes safer. I further stated that it would be easier to make capital punishment safer than to try making boxing safer. Paul you said there are literally thousands of success stories in boxing for every death. Okay, name just 50 success stories. That's all just 50 names from your list of thousands. Your suggestion that the Quarry family because of the brain injuries suffered by Jerry and Mike makes them the most qualified persons to decide the merits of boxing, defies all logic. My intention is not to upset the Quarry family, or Quarry fans (which I consider myself one). But folks, I am not going to stick my head in the sand and pretend things aren't that bad with boxing, it's a terrible corrupt sport beyond redemption. And I will say it again, it would be easier to make the death penalty safer, than it would be to make boxing safer.|
|1/27/03 03:14:00 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PIMls4@aol.com.au|||10|Forest, sorry for misquoting you calling for the abolition of boxing, but you were so negative about the sport that the bit about you being a fan and a historian somehow snuck past me. With all due respect, I am not going to waste space on this site listing all boxing's success stories as I am sure that most of the posters already know who they are. All you need to do is run your finger down the index of any good boxing book and the successes are there alphabetically listed. Even over here in Australia where boxing is a tiny sport, we have had many successes such as Jeff Fenech who readily admits that the alternative to boxing was gaol. He won three world titles, is now fabulously wealthy, and is training kids trying to give them the same chance in life boxing gave him. Other successes here include Barry Michael, Lester Ellis, Rocky Mattioli, Hector Thompson, Tony Mundine (senior), Johnny Famechon, Jeff Harding, George Barnes, Jimmy Carruthers, Fred Henneberry, Ambrose Palmer, Les Darcy et al. The simple fact is that most if not all boxers come from the poorer side of life and in lieu of NASA offering them fabulous careers as rocket scientists or astronauts, boxing lends them their only viable opportunities in life. You talk about deaths in boxing. There are deaths in all sports. Over the last decade in Australia more jockeys have been killed than boxers. Everything has its inherent risks.....even walking out the front door or playing golf in a storm. People who never boxed get dementia-related conditions, and non-smokers get lung cancer. Those who enter boxing know the risks and the choice is theirs, not the 'kill joys' who generally don't like things that they are not good at (and I am not suggesting that in your case). As far as the Quarry family is concerned, I stand by my belief that they are far better placed than the rest of us to judge. They rode the thrills and spills of Jerry's career and they were also the ones who had to confront on a daily basis the sad aftermath to his courageous career. I don't know about you, Forest, but they are certainly more qualified to judge than me, as well as all those fat senators who like to call inquiries about anything and everything. I don't know how corruption entered the debate, but anything that generates money also breeds dishonesty in any walk of life. Anyway, Forest, if I'm wrong then it wouldn't be the first time and I wish you all the best.

I hope members of this site will share sympathy with the plight of Riddick Bowe who was jailed last week. Although deservedly in prison for the crime he committed, I can't help feel sorry for the man who had everything and let it all slip through his fingers.In many ways Bowe was the best fighter since Holmes. At his peak he had remarkable skill, speed and footwork for such a big man. Combined with a lot of power and a very good and brave chin, he was a wonderful fighter. He beat Hoyfield twice, being the only man to knock out him out in his career, and in their first fight, the best since Holmes-Norton and the years following, outboxed a very courageous Holyfield to a comprehensive decision. Although his reign was short, he continued to beat handily a number of decent fighters, but will always be remembered for the fights against Holyfield.His decision not to fight Lewis was disastrous for both men as it undermined each other's claim to be fighter of the 90s. Although deemed to be cowardice on his parts, the punishment he took from Golota, particularly in the second fight in which he staged great comeback rallies and some of the most devastating shots I have ever seen, show that he had a heart as good as anyone. It was just in his mind, and advice from others and the behaviour of his entourage that made him look like a thug. In reality, even during his horrendous period of growing up, he was acknowledged to be a decent and funny man. I sincerely hope that he pulls through this nightmare, one of many that boxers go through, and comes out ok.

Of course Mark, we have concern for what Riddick Bowe is going through. I was not aware of the latest trouble he is in. He was a great champion, one of the best of all time, and I wish him the best for his life.

I restored the Letters Archives dating back to the early days of the web site in 1998, up through 2001. See the links above. As some of you know, many letters and messages were lost due to ISP serves failures. I saved as many as I could and archived them according to each individual year. There's some great history here, from fans, There's also George Foreman's gracious visit in 2000. The information contained in these letters is public record, but The Jerry Quarry Foundation owns the letters themselves and their content.

FOREST WARD|SOUTH CAROLINA||JOEKEVIN@CS.COM|||6|DEAR KENT AND MARK, WHAT DO MICHAEL DOKES, RIDDICK BOWE, MIKE TYSON, TONY AYALA, JAKE LAMOTTA, ALL HAVE IN COMMON? ANSWER: THEY BEAT WOMAN! AND YOU GUYS FEEL SYMPATHY FOR RIDDICK BOWE. WHAT ABOUT THE VICTIMS? IS THERE ANY SYMPATHY FOR BOWES WIFE, THE MOTHER OF HIS CHILDREN? PLEASE REMEMBER FOLKS, I DIDN'T START THIS ONE. MARK FEELS SORRY FOR RIDDICK BOWE, AND KENT AGREES. I FEEL LIKE VOMITTING.

Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Forest, I wasn't aware that Bowe beat his wife. As you know, if that is what he is in trouble for now, I said I didn't know the circumstances of what he did. Yes, beating one's spouse is a terrible thing but to stereotype boxers as being more likely to do this is just stretching the truth. Are there some boxers who do this, of course there are however, it is a problem that rears its ugly head in all professions, social economic status, and race. All in all, I would bet my bottom dollar that the overwhelming majority of boxers do not beat their spouses. CARL, YOU BROUGHT THAT STUFF BACK?! OH MY GOD! I AM GOING TO GET A BELLY LAUGH OUT OF A LOT OF THAT STUFF.

Evren|London||@|||10|Forrest. You seem anti everything boxing. Why do you have an interest in this site? You seem to like shooting everyone down in flames.

FOREST WARD|SOUTH CAROLINA||JOEKEVIN@CS.COM|||7|EVREN, I HAVE AN INTEREST IN THIS SITE BECAUSE I AM A JERRY AND MIKE QUARRY ADMIRER, AND BECAUSE I AM A BOXING HISTORIAN. THOSE RECENT REMARKS BY MARK AND KENT ABOUT FEELING SORRY FOR RIDDICK BOWE BECAUSE HE IS GOING TO PRISON;IGNORE THE FACT THAT HE IS GOING TO PRISON FOR COMMITTING A VIOLENT CRIME AND BEING FOUND GUILTY. AND THIS IS NOT THE 1ST TIME HE HAS BEEN FOUND GUILTY OF A VIOLENT CRIME AGAINST A WOMAN. BUT BECAUSE OF HIS CELEBRITY STATUS HE IS GIVEN A FREE PASS TO GO OUT AND COMMIT MORE VIOLENT CRIMES, AND PEOPLE ON THIS BOARD FEEL SORRY FOR HIM, AND NOT A WORD IS MENTIONED ABOUT HIS VICTIMS. EVREN, I WILL ASK YOU, WHAT DOES FEELING SORRY FOR RIDDICK BOWE A FEMALE PREDATOR HAVE TO DO WITH THIS SITE? I THOUGHT IT WAS DEDICATED TO IMPROVING BOXING; AND REMEMBERING THE FIGHTING QUARRY'S. WELL, AS LONG AS OTHER PEOPLE ARE GOING TO BRING UP OTHER TOPICS, WELL THEN I WILL RESPOND TO THEM ACCORDINGLY. ONE MORE ITEM, I AM NOT ANTI-EVERYTHING IN BOXING. RECENTLY I SUBMITTED THAT MIKE QUARRY IS A HEROE OF MINE. AND THAT IS NOT BECAUSE OF ANYTHING HE DID IN THE RING. IT IS BECAUSE HE OVERCAME A SUBSTANCE ABUSE PROBLEM ONE DAY AT A TIME. AND HE HELPS OTHERS.

JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|FINALLY: Got to see some great footage of ESPN "Classic". Too bad no one could find a Quarry-Mathis tape. I'd seen the Foreman-Roman bout "live". and QUARRY-WOODY was they undercard from Las Vegas. I'd have to say Foreman was the hardest puncher. Mike QUARRY BEAT ROMAN, ROMAN Also saved JERRY'S LIFE IN ALASKA, does anyone have any old world or international boxing mags from 1976-77, Was told that Alaska incident is in one of them on a Thomas J. Thornton post. Also are very concerned how Roman is faring today.

Evren|London||@|||10|Riddick Bowe ran an anti-gun programme in Washington. Should we remember people for just their downpoints? I personally do not feel sorry for Riddick Bowe. With that I agree with you. It is however sad to see the plight of this former great fighter follow the footseps of far too many a former champion. BY THE WAY..IF PEOPLE ON THIS SITE FEEL SORRY FOR HIM THEN WHAT IS IT YOU...?IT IS THEIR CHOICE. I feel you are over scrutinizing what people are saying and being harsh on them. You seem like a real contradiction to me.. you say you are a boxing historian. Do you study boxing's past but are opposed to it's morals? Do you study all things negative in Boxing and have an interest that way? Explain yourself!!

Historians can't see the forest for the trees!

Forest, you make it sound like we support men beating up their wives. This couldn't be further from the truth! Again, I wasn't aware that Bowe beat his wife and also even if I did know this, by saying I have concern for what has happened to him is not the same thing as supporting what he did. Of course I feel for the victims of spousal abuse. Forest you seem to pick and choose what to respond to. Once more, why pick on boxers only when other people, even so called professional white collar men, such as doctors and lawyers also beat up their wives. Everything I have ever seen on the subject shows that the abuse knows no racial, social economic, or other boundaries. Anyway, I am glad Forest comes here and shakes things up as things have been getting a little dull around here. SURE WISH MR. JIMMY WAS HERE TO GIVE HIS INPUT. HE IS SORELY MISSED!

I just wanted to say first, I really like the look of the site now, really good job... On Riddick Bowe, it's easy to jeer the guy for the choices he made after becoming champ, I especially enjoyed his very short stint in the Marines. But there is more at work here, and I don't find much humor in it. Bowe is like alot of athletes, particularly black athletes, who see themselves pretty one-dimensionally. They find a talent very young in life and build themselves and their identity around it. Once they get the holy grail in their chosen sport, their frontier ends. Self-parody soon follows. The money they've earned slips away, unless they have the benefit of college education or business acumen, a lot of great athletes are little else than that. Micheal Dokes did the same thing Bowe has done. Promising stars like Jimmy Young, Greg Page, Duane Bobick, all fell far from their path. Remember Aaron Pryor? What Bowe is experiencing is not much different than O.J.Simpson, that huge sense of loss that follows fame when it leaves, pretty bleak stuff. It's why Ali fought so long, and maybe Jerry as well. Gerry Cooney has an amazing site dedicated to returning former fighters to mainstream real-world work activities. It's sounds bizarre at first, but there are plenty of wandering souls out there, former stars like Bowe who don't know what is left to pursue. There's nothing funny about that, and he has my sympathies.

I've just finished reading the the posts in the archives. As you say, Kent, what a hoot! I've got to give you and Evren credit for your single mindedness in trying to get your point across in the face of personal attacks from some of the idiots who used to post here. I personally feel that anyone who has a legitimate point, or even an argument to make, has a right to post his views on this website. However, let me qualify that by writing that anyone should express their opinion without fear of being ridiculed or insulted. After all, I would assume that anyone who is attracted to this site would have an interest in heavyweight boxers from the sixties to today. Otherwise, why bother posting on this site? This site's primary function is trying to bring Pugilistical Dementia to the attention of the greater public and the politicians who are empowered to make changes. It's also here for boxing historians. I was frustrated by some of the more exotic characters in the archives and their mostly worthless, idiotic posts. They set a tone of distinct hostility towards anyone who dared to disagree with their seemingly "written-in-stone" views and opinions. One of the big attractions of this site is that everyone respects all opinions. I love the sport of boxing. I'm not here to make moral judgements on any anyone. Actually, I think if Jerry had a drinking or drug problem and he overcame it, it would have made his life even more fascinating! It's too easy to get nasty over an anonamous web site! For one don't want to have to read posts from serious people who are apologizing to the troublemakers for daring to have a conflicting view. What's next, we'll start exchanging "M---- F----er's with some angry teenage boys?!
I just spoke to Mike Quarry and I told him his fans have been praying for his recovery from cancer and that his fans have not forgotten him. He was very happy to hear this. Hang in there champ (and yes he has earned that title regardless if he won it in the ring) we are in your corner always. Steve, yes those characters were quite a hoot! It was even worse over at the old Joe Frazier's gym site. In some way, I kind of miss some of my old friends who were always sending snide comments my way. Oh by the way, I ran across our old pal Brother DKS a few months ago on another site and he seemed very concerned that I had found him. He said something like, "oh no, you found me! Can't I get any peace?!" He also asked me not to tell any of the Quarry people where he was hanging out on the internet. As if they would follow me just to bug him! Of course I didn't let on I had found him to anyone and I still haven't said where he posts at.

I just found out a few weeks back that we'd lost James Quarry. It was particularly sad news, as I'd spoken to him on occasion over the phone and written him, but never met him face to face. I was looking forward to that possibility, but it wasn't meant to be. Just weeks before this tragic news, I'd written this poem, "The Voice". Since his beloved brother Jerry was a poet, perhaps it belongs here as a tribute to James. As I recall, his voice was deep and gravelly, unique and truly impressive. We may never hear it again this lifetime except on tape, but along with Jerry's, it will continue to be wonderfully audible just the same - as he guides us all as forcefully as ever - as to where to take this gift of their Foundation for the greatest possible good.

"Aren't renewed friendships just THE BEST ??!! They come complete with melodies - like those favourite tunes that resonate in your memory long after the evening has passed. They always come back to comfort - and to bring THE FEELING back alive. And if they have words - the "JUST RIGHT" words - the ones that touch you more deeply than you ever dared dream of being touched - well, they're all the better still, no? On the other hand, if the tune happens to be from Beethoven, no words could possibly enhance."
"IBAR" URTAIN had killed himself. Can you give me the details? I always thought Urtain was overrated, and Nat Fleicher "RING MAGAZINE". Really took interest in him, saying only BONAVENA could match him in strength. To me that was one of the few times, RING MAGS RATINGS WERE INACCURATE, how could you have rated ROMAN OVER NORTON IN 1973? Or even any other time, from sept. 1967 to May 1975, only 37 heavyweights graced RING MAGAZINES TOP TEN LISTINGS, NOW THAT TO ME IS ACCURATE.

1/30/03 09:37:12 PM | FOREST WARD | SOUTH CAROLINA | JOEKEVIN@CS.COM | 8 | JIMMY DORSEY, SADLY A TAPE DOES NOT EXIST OF THE QUARRY-MATHIS FIGHT. I WAS AT THAT FIGHT. MATHIS WAS A HEAVY FAVORITE. JERRY TAGGED HIM WITH A LEFT HOOK HIGH ON THE HEAD IN THE SECOND ROUND AND MATHIS SUFFERED A DELAYED REACTION AND WENT DOWN ON ONE KNEE AND TOOK A MANDATORY 8 COUNT. IT WAS OBVIOUS TO EVERYONE AT MSG THAT NIGHT THAT BUSTER WAS SCARED STIFF OF JERRY. WHAT WAS NOT WELL KNOWN AT THE TIME WAS THAT MATHIS AND HIS HANDLERS WENT TO JERRY'S CAMP AT GROSSINGERS 3 WEEKS BEFORE THE FIGHT FOR A PRE-FIGHT PHYSICAL. MATHIS TRIED TO PULL AN "ALI" BY BOASTING AND THREATENING JERRY. IMMEDIATELY ON THE SPOT QUARRY TOLD MATHIS TO "GET THE F..K OUT OF MY CAMP OR I WILL KICK THE SH..T OUT YOU RIGHT NOW."

MANY PEOPLE INCLUDING MATHIS'S TRAINER THE LATE JOEY FARIELLO SAID THE FIGHT WAS DECIDED THEN AND THERE. AFTER THAT MOMENT MATHIS WAS TERRIFIED OF QUARRY.

DURING THE FIGHT, JERRY WOULD WALK IN AND LEFT HOOKED MATHIS TO STOMACHE, MATHIS WOULD GRUNT AND CLINCH. THIS CONTINUED FOR THE WHOLE 12 ROUNDS, EVEN SO IT WAS STILL AN EXITING FIGHT. JERRY WON EASILY 10 OF THE 12 ROUNDS. ADDING INSULT TO INJURY MATHIS SPLIT THE SEAM IN HIS TRUNKS IN THE 12TH ROUND, AND BETWEEN ROUNDS HE HAD TO SLIP ON ANOTHER PAIR OVER THE RIPPED TRUNKS.

DURING THE PRE-FIGHT INTRODUCTIONS THEY INTRODUCED ROCKY MARCIANO, AND HE WALKED TO JERRY'S CORNER AND WISHED HIM LUCK (OR SO I IMAGINE), AND THEN ROCKY WALKED OUT OF THE RING WITHOUT GOING OVER TO BUSTER'S CORNER, AND WISHING HIM LUCK. EVERYONE IN THE CROWD NOTICED THE SNUB. AFTER THE FIGHT I AM IN THE SUBWAY AND WHO DO I SEE BUT JOE FRAZIER AND YANK DURHAM. I ASK JOE HOW HE WILL HANDLE QUARRY (AT THAT MOMENT I AM CONVINCED JERRY WILL KO FRAZIER WHEN THEY MEET), JOE REPLIES, "I AIN'T GOING TO RUN FROM HIM." IT WAS A GREAT NIGHT I WAS ALL OF 15 YEARS OLD.

1/31/03 10:19:20 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 | ON JOSE URTAIN: yes, I read a few articles about his death. It was revealed that most of his fights were fixed. They even interviewed one of the guys who lay down for him in the 1970's. Ring Magazine made a big deal of him because he reminded them of Paulino Uzcudon the other Basque heavyweight and Fleisher was forever stuck in past. If I find the exact article on his suicide, I will let you know.

1/31/03 12:34:12 PM | Carl Weingarten | TJQF | TJQF | 10 | Thanks for the great story on the Mathis fight. According to Mr. Jimmy, the Quarry-Mathis fight video does exist, and the Mathis family claimed to have a copy. James told me that he had contacted the Mathis family at one point to negotiate getting a copy, but they refused. James did acquire a number of videos directly from Bill Cayton, and I was also able to get several second-generation videos from private collectors, but the Mathis video never surfaced. This is definitely a lost classic. Buster was a great fighter. He beat Frazier twice in the amateurs, and through the first half of his professional fight with Frazier, he outmaneuvered and outbox Joe more successfully than Ali did. Buster was very skillful, and had amazing speed for a man his size. Hopefully there will be a change of heart with the Mathis family, and both fans of Buster and Jerry can see the video. I'm glad you guys like the new site. --Carl

1/31/03 01:48:40 PM | Mark Sargeant | uk | lpu00omts@reading.ac.uk | 10 | thanks for the replies to my earlier post about Riddick Bowe. Firstly, I had absolutely NO idea that Bowe had beaten his wife. I had to search a lot of material for this but you were right. I absolutely detest this and as a result my opinion on Bowe the man has plummeted. Such an act is only done by real scum and if I had known about this I would not have made such positive comments. Sorry. I maintain my admiration for Bowe the boxer though. Thanks

1/31/03 01:56:42 PM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 | JIMMY DORSEY: I checked around -- Jose Urtain was 49 when he killed himself in Madrid.

I read somewhere, I forget where, a story in which Joe Farris stated that Ike Cayton and himself saw Jerry Quarry knock Norton out in a training session. Anyone have more info. on that? Hey Evren, What I meant by single mindedness is being able to stick to your opinion or the facts if you know your correct. Forest, that's a great story on the Mathis fight. I enjoy getting that kind of information, even with pay-per-view, nothing beats the excitement of being at ringside at a live fight! I don't think anyone condones wife beating, and I agree that guys like Mike Tyson, Bowe, and Tony Ayala are little better than thugs. However, I don't care! All I care about is how they perform in the ring. I'm sure Ron Lyle must have done something wrong to serve all those years in prison. He was, however, a very exciting fighter to watch. Boxing is a brutal business. Most participants are not angels.

I recently watched Urtain's bout with Henry Cooper and felt he was very limited. He was also very very rough, but when Henry returned the favour he lost heart. That was his first loss other than an earlier DQ to Alfredo Vogrig. Other notable fighter he met were: Jurgen Blin (WPTS15, LPTS15,), Greg Peralta (LKO8), Jack Bodeill (WKO2), Jose Roman (LPTS10, DPTS8), Richard Dunn (WKO4), Vincente Rondon (WPTS8), Alfredo Evangelista (LK05), Jean-Pierre Coopman (LK04). He died by throwing himself from a 10th floor window. Not sure if anyone heard but James Broad the 80's contender died penniless a few months back. Also recently we have lost Chuck Davey, Paul Pender and Vince Martinez.

I am somewhat surprised about the interest in Urtain. It was reported a few years ago shortly after Urtain committed suicide; that he was very depressed over the fact that his career was a sham and that he was a homosexual. And as a result he killed himself. I am sure as is the cases with most suicides the truth lies somewhere in the middle and we will never know the reason why.

Very sad story about Jose Urtain. It seems his whole life was surrounded by lies. About his prowess as a boxer and apparently also about his personal life. However, I hope some people don't read into it that boxing was a source of his problems. Anybody who commits suicide usually has deep rooted problems that would be there regardless if he was involved in boxing or not.

Anyone have more on the death of Eddie Machen? I'm a real fan of his and really admired his ability.

Cleveland Williams also passed away about two years ago. He was struck by a car and died from internal injuries.

Machen fell out of a window I heard. I have no idea how it happened. He trained Spencer for the Quarry fight of course then ?? Good fighter, under appreciated to be sure.

Leotis Martin who kayoed Liston also died as did Ted Gullick who was once an up and coming heavyweight in the Cleveland area I believe. He fought Foreman and went out in 2.

Thank you MR. GERARD AND MR. WARD, on they info. Evren I have an article on Machen, I'll have to find it, going back to the world ratings on Quarry, they ring magazine actually did Jerry they best although they gave him they #1 grudgingly for 4 months of 1970 (hell, he earned it). W.B.A, A CLOSE SECOND, (they were they official committee). And the W.B.C WAS completely political of there snubbing of Jerry, they had him unranked when he fought Ali in 1970, what a sham job.
Yes, it is ridiculous how politics play such an important part in ratings by the governing bodies. Before the 1968 WBA tournament, Joe Frazier was the number one contender. But because he refused an invitation to their tournament to crown a new champion after Ali's forced retirement, he suddenly was ranked number nine, without ever losing in the ring! He later fought and defeated Buster Mathis for a heavyweight title recognized by the New York state athletic commission, several other U.S. states, as well as some other countries. Part of this grouping would later be called the WBC. Frazier would unify the title by defeating Jimmy Ellis, the winner of the WBA tournament but Frazier would not truly be recognized as undisputed champion until he defeated a comebacking Ali in 1971.

Has anyone else noticed the sad trend of great boxers who died in the late 60s through to the early 70s? Marciano (1969), Liston, Polley and Machen (all early 1970s), Charles (1975), Bonavena (1976).

I recently read that footage exists of George Foreman sparring Sonny Liston. I am searching for a first generation copy.

ON LISTON-FOREMAN SPARRING -- yea, I saw films of them sparring years ago, I think when Liston died. Liston and Foreman were stablemates briefly when they were both managed by Dick Saddler. Liston and Joe Bugner also sparr ed back in the 1970's.

For a time in the 70's Jimmy Young was an very good fighter. He beat Ron Lyle twice, beat George Foreman, lost a close decision to Kenny Norton (which easily could have won the other way for Young). A lot of people thought he beat Ali in 1976. I don't agree. Jimmy made the fight interesting; but you don't win the Heavyweight Championship of the World by sticking your head out between the ropes during a fight. Jimmy became discouraged after he lost to Ken Norton, and he stopped training the way a contender is supposed to train. He was a talent, but he was only a talent when he was in top shape. He started drinking more and training less. The really Good and Great fighters could accept setbacks and come back. It's a matter of Heart, Jimmy Young had Heart sometimes but not all the times. The Jimmy Young who beat George Foreman fights the Jerry Quarry who beat Thad Spencer, Mac Foster, or even the Jerry Quarry who lost the 1st fight to Frazier. Quarry stops him late in the fight. Like I said it's a matter of Heart.

Gil Clancy once said, Jerry Quarry used fighters of the caliber of Jimmy Young for sparring partners. Clancy said Jerry was the best gym fighter he ever saw. Jerry at his best stops Young by mid to late round stoppage.

What the heck are you doing up this early? This reminds me of the joke about the two golfers who are standing on the tee at number 13 overlooking the Kern River and one says to the other, "Look at those stupid fisherman fishing in the rain." Quarry can't be hurt by Young, presses the fight, displays superior counterpunching, and ends it within seven rounds. Jimmy Dorsey, what do you think?
didn't get to see the two Quarry vs Patterson fights. I've never seen either fight in its entirety. I've seen snippits of rounds and seen the knockdowns on the Quarry tape, short version. I noticed that in round two, Quarry had two pretty solid knockdowns. I also noticed that in the final scoring, he was given a 3-0 round, for round two! Combining the other parts of the fight I saw where Quarry looked a little lethargic but clearly landing the harder, more effective blows. Not having seen the whole fight, and constantly reading how Jerry got a "disputed decision". I can only assume Jerry blew the fight. I have never before seen a 3-0 round, even with two knockdowns.

Actually Daryl, what were you doing being up that late? I was up all night working on a couple of pieces for some other websites. Just got over being sick for almost two weeks. Have not talked to the person we spoke about visiting. Have you been in contact with him? Also haven't talked to our pal, his brother. It doesn't matter if anyone else knows who I am talking about as it is not something secret by any means but I know you will understand what I am talking about.

2/16/03 05:18:44 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|YES, I MAY BE A LITTLE BIASED, QUARRY AND FRAZIER OWNED JIMMY WHEN THEY SPARRED, SO I WOULD PREDICT MAYBE A 10 ROUND DECISION, ON JERRY'S BEHALF, WE ARE TALKING AT THEIR BEST, I KNOW JERRY WAS ONE OF THE BEST STREET FIGHTER's TO EVER WALK DOWN THE STREET HA HA! AND HAD ONE HELL OF A PUNCH, BUT LET'S FACE IT, 21 OF 35 WENT THE DISTANCE WITH JERRY, I CAME ACROSS SOME OTHER THINGS LATELY OF A MAN WHO KNEW QUARRY IN BAKERSFIELD I WILL SHARE ON THE NEXT POST.

2/17/03 07:37:00 PM|steve|nj||dmmsrm|||10|I just watched a Showtime Special entitled "When We Were Kings". I had forgotten how well Ali actually fought back against Forman. He landed hard right hand leads, which George Plimpton said was a kind of insult to another professional fighter. He landed alot more hard combinations of jabs, left hooks, and very hard rights than I remembered. I'm not an Ali fan. It paines me to say it, but I think Ali actually outfought Forman that night. My previous impression of this fight was of Ali laying on the ropes, doing nothing, just letting Forman wear himself out. I still wan't to know about that 3-0 round in the Quarry vs Patterson fight.

2/17/03 02:08:41 PM|Max Hord|fernandina Bch, Fla||rasluc@msn.com|||10|Used to train at Pete Ashlocks gym in the 70s. Mike would just toy with the BEST Pete had. Always wondered if they they new it. Mike was a #1 class act all the way. Wishing him luck with his medical condition.

2/17/03 09:57:37 PM|Kent Appel|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Hello Max. I hope you share more of your experiences with us, the fans of the Quarrys. Mike still is a class act and I think he will beat his latest ailment.

2/18/03 07:37:19 AM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Max HORD: I can just see Mike at Pete's gym, I'll bet he did toy with those guys, too bad he didn't have a punch comparable to Jerry's punch, or even like Mike Nixon's. He would have definately been an Light HEAVYWEIGHT Champion. Steve i know Patterson would have lost the first bout with Quarry, had he not gotten a 2-point gift knock down in the 7th round, at the coliseum.

2/18/03 05:43:03 PM|max hord|fernandina, bch, fla||rasluc@msn.com|||10|Kent here you go... I fought on an undercard in Miami back in 76 I believe, when Mike Quarry fought some local guy named Tony Greene. Mike had him out several times but the ref kept making a big production over a small cut over Mike's left eye. Anyway the fight went 10 and they gave Greene the best present he will ever get.. A DRAW!! I hated Miami boxing then and still do. Mike said after the fight that he just got tired of hitting the guy. Don't get me wrong Greene was tough but really he didn't win one round.
Thanks Max, yes it seems Mike was on the short end of the stick as far as decisions go. He may have won the fight with Yaqui Lopez and they gave Lopez the decision and he also may have won the second fight with Mike Rossman but Rossman got the verdict. It seems the Quarrys had to earn everything they got and sometimes even that was not enough. Wins in either of these two fights could have sent Mike's career in a different direction, maybe another title shot.

A lot of people do not remember that MIKE QUARRY was going to fight MICHAEL SPINKS, But in a tune up bout with Pete Moyintre was upset by knockout in San Diego. MIKE would have made i think at least $40 or $50 GRAND.

PLEASE ANYBODY OUT THEIR GOT THE ADDRESS OF THE JOE FRAZIER WEBSITE YOU ALL WERE TALKING ABOUT.IN THE PAST. I WOULD LOVE TO READ WHAT THE FRAZIERFANATICS HAVE TO SAY AS JOE AND JERRY QUARRYARE MY 2 ALLTIME FAVORITE FIGHTERS. THANKS

I did a search for Joe's site when I was updating the TJQF home page. Looks like the old (green) Frazier's Gym site is gone, but now his daughter has a site. I put a link under "Warriors" on the home page. There's some good information, and there's a page for Joe on the site. No guestbook that I could find, and it unfortunately looks like Joe is having some legal problems. Look for a newly upgraded Frazier-Quarry I clip over the next week. Thanks. --Carl

Yes, I miss the old green background for the Frazier's gym site. We had some wild posting over there and even though some of the posters were not too kind to me at times, I kind of miss some of those characters. Koo Koo Klock, Foolface, Gorilla, and the zany one, the one and only Brother DKS. Where are you guys? Come to think of it, where are Angelo, JP, and my pal (no pun intended), Paul Maduros? Some of the old Quarry site regulars.

Just alittle update on Mike he has only about ten more treatments and then more test to find out where he is. He seems to be handling it very well just a little more tired. He has a very good tude about everthing. His birthday is coming up and we are going to have a party for him in bakersfield he will be 52 can you believe it? Mike is a Gpd fearing man and puts his trust where it belongs with God. Thank you all for you prayers and God bless you. The Website looks good, keep up the good work everyone. Dad, and Uncle Jerry would love it. Thanks!!

Go Uncle Mike, we're all pullin for you, and we love

Please? My friend says that Jimmy Dupree was easily handling Mike Quarry until he (Dupree) was disqualified to save Mike. I never saw the fight. Is this true?

To those who visit this site, I want to thank you for your comments. I enjoy them immensely. Secondly, I urge all of you to read my remarks regarding U.S. Senate Bill 275 on the initial page of this website and write letters or send emails to your U.S. Senators urging the passage of this bill. The approval of this legislation in its present form would dramatically reform professional boxing in terms of making it safer and more equitable for the boxers, ensure that the rankings of the fighters be fairer, and produce fewer less sided matches. Please support the AAIB and TJQF in this effort !!!!!!! THANKS !!!!!!!!!!!!!

For those who think that the heavyweights of yesterday would be too small for today's oafs then think again. Roy Jones proved that skill rides above all. Imagine a natural 160lb 'er beating a 230lb 'er. Guys like Walcott and Charles were 185-200lbs they could easily put on 15lb's and still be effective..they just did'nt need to in their day. Heavyweight boxing is a different game now - big and slow punchers rule the roost as their are'nt many 'smaller' guys with skill about.Holyfield and Tyson are exceptions.Look how great they were !

I want to address these comments to anyone who has a heart and hope that I can appeal to your humanitarianism. I am one of eight children of Jack and Arwanda Quarry, which yielded close to 40 grandchildren and great grandchildren combined. Now that is a lot of personalities, love, conflict, mishaps and miscommunications. No matter how close a family can be there is love happiness and grief. Today was the second time I have ever allowed information from this site to cross my ears or eyes, as people who call themselves family, friends of the family and strangers evaluate the inner most being of who the Quarrys are. We are just like your family, trying to make it through conflict and happiness to find our place in the SON and sun. On the most part, my family, although sometimes falling way short of the mark, strive to become better people and better Christians. But today I was informed of a letter signed from anyone anywhere, commenting about my mom and sister saying some of the most horrific and harsh words that could be written about anyone whom in the last 3 years has lost her 2 eldest sons. With Jerry no one on earth should ever have to watch a gladiator of such great strength and depth be taken so slowly while the world watched. Shame on you the ones whom spoke as though you had all the knowledge and information to say it was drugs and alcohol and not the blunt force trauma that was received from a child to an adult. That boy and that man strove for one thing... the crown he said he would have fought for free to receive. That coveted crown, said to say, he himself never felt the honor of his own triumphs and I quote, "I was always the bridesmaid and never the bride." you as a people have all the right in the world to have all the opinions you want about his career but do you really have the right to delve into our innermost being and convince yourselves that you could truly know our innermost workings by everything the media or people say? How many conflicts in your own world have you had to clear up, and set straight unfortunately we can't address all the misgivings. To today I am trying to say, have an open heart about a family to which is trying to pass through this life with as little grief and as much friendship as we can find along the way. To those of you that write because you loved Jerry and the gift of entertainment that this fantastic world allowed him to share, thank you, he exposed his soul to you treat it kind as kind as you would hope to be treated. To the person whom would not sign his name speaks to me as a person whom lacks integrity and I hope this doesn't sound harsh but my dad taught me that a person is only as good as his word. Your words even if they were true your own conflict within yourself did not want to deal with the repercussions of your own expressions. My mom and sister are not the gross names you spoke and I will give no credence to repeat them but to say my brothers Jerry and Jimmy are not better off dead than to be around their mom and sister. I believe that is one of the coldest and most hurtful things I have heard, may GOD reach your heart, as you let your tongue cut like a knife. I pray that the Lord, the God of my family, Jesus Christ may temper your spirit. I also, ask that you read James 3; verses 5 and 6. Signed hurt but not vengeful, Jerry Quarry's little sister as I am and will always be proud to be Jack and Arwandas' daughter. Wilma |
LEFT, THE MAIN EVENT, GEORGE FOREMAN AGAINST ROBERTO DAVILLA. THE FANS WANTED TO SEE THE MAIN EVENT SO THEY DID NOT RIOT. NO THANKS TO MUHAMMAD ALI. SORRY FOR BEING SO LONG WINED BUT SEEING WILLIE BURTONS NAME BROUGHT BACK LONG LOST MEMORIES.

3/6/03 02:12:29 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||||10|FOREST: Thanks so much for all that info on Willie Burton. I am glad Willie got out when it was time to. I hope he is doing very well and is aware of how many good memories he gave the fans. Another guy who I thought was going places but never did was the Florida giant Al Jones (not Memphis Al Jones) who fought in the Miami area in the late 60's under Chris and Angelo Dundee. He was a 6'6" southpaw and looked pretty good for a while.

3/6/03 07:22:45 PM|FOREST WARD|SOUTH CAROLINA||JOEKEVIN8CS.COM||||6|JOHN, WHEN I READ YOUR POSTS I FEEL LIKE I AM LOOKING IN A MIRROR. I OFTEN WONDERED ABOUT AL JONES MYSELF. TEN YEARS AGO BUMPED INTO BOXING HISTORIAN HANK KAPLAN OF MIAMI, AND I ASKED HIM ABOUT AL JONES, AND WHAT HAPPENED? WELL, THE 1ST THING YOU MUST KNOW ABOUT HANK KAPLAN IS THAT HE IS A GENTLEMAN, AND HE DOES NOT TALK BAD ABOUT ANYONE. THAT BEING THE CASE, I DID NOT LEARN TOO MUCH! ALTHOUGH HANK SAID, THAT AT ONE POINT IN AL JONES CAREER HE WON A SETTLEMENT IN A CAR ACCIDENT, AND THIS MAY HAVE DULLED HIS AMBITION. READING BETWEEN THE LINES IF YOU LOOK CLOSELY AT AL JONES RECORD YOU SEE THAT HE Fought A LOT OF JOURNEY MEN, AND ALMOST ALWAYS IN MIAMI BEACH. INCLUDING A DRAW WITH ZORA FOLLEY IN 1968 (FOLLEY HAD TO BE CLOSE 40 AT THE TIME); AND A DRAW WITH LOUIS PIREZ (WILLIE BURTONS CONQUERER) IN 1970. IF HE GOT A DRAW IN HIS HOMETOWN WITH THESE GUYS HE PROBABLY LOST THE FIGHT. HE WAS ALSO A SOUTHPAW, THAT OF COURSE DID NOT HELP HIS CAREER.

3/6/03 07:23:02 PM|FOREST WARD|SOUTH CAROLINA||JOEKEVIN8CS.COM||||6|JOHN, WHEN I READ YOUR POSTS I FEEL LIKE I AM LOOKING IN A MIRROR. I OFTEN WONDERED ABOUT AL JONES MYSELF. TEN YEARS AGO BUMPED INTO BOXING HISTORIAN HANK KAPLAN OF MIAMI, AND I ASKED HIM ABOUT AL JONES, AND WHAT HAPPENED? WELL, THE 1ST THING YOU MUST KNOW ABOUT HANK KAPLAN IS THAT HE IS A GENTLEMAN, AND HE DOES NOT TALK BAD ABOUT ANYONE. THAT BEING THE CASE, I DID NOT LEARN TOO MUCH! ALTHOUGH HANK SAID, THAT AT ONE POINT IN AL JONES CAREER HE WON A SETTLEMENT IN A CAR ACCIDENT, AND THIS MAY HAVE DULLED HIS AMBITION. READING BETWEEN THE LINES IF YOU LOOK CLOSELY AT AL JONES RECORD YOU SEE THAT HE Fought A LOT OF JOURNEY MEN, AND ALMOST ALWAYS IN MIAMI BEACH. INCLUDING A DRAW WITH ZORA FOLLEY IN 1968 (FOLLEY HAD TO BE CLOSE 40 AT THE TIME); AND A DRAW WITH LOUIS PIREZ (WILLIE BURTONS CONQUERER) IN 1970. IF HE GOT A DRAW IN HIS HOMETOWN WITH THESE GUYS HE PROBABLY LOST THE FIGHT. HE WAS ALSO A SOUTHPAW, THAT OF COURSE DID NOT HELP HIS CAREER.

3/6/03 10:04:49 PM|FOREST WARD|SOUTH CAROLINA||JOEKEVIN8CS.COM||||10|HI, SORRY I MEANT TO RATE THE SITE A 10 IN MY LAST 2 POSTINGS, I DON'T KNOW WHAT HAPPENED, BUT I APOLOGIZE FOR THE MISTAKES.

3/7/03 06:55:25 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||||10|FOREST; Thanks so much for the update. Do you remember Blue Lewis and Jeff Merritt? Lewis was beating the heck out of Bonavena in Argentina and the ref just disqualified him for no reason. Merrit hit Ron Stander with a left hook that put him flat on his back and Stander could take a punch. Also a Rocky Graziano clone middleweight out of Chicago named Rocky DiFazio. A very exciting kid who fought in Chicago and Vegas. I think he quit when Denny Moyer beat him on decision. Thanks for the memories!

3/7/03 11:53:37 AM|FOREST WARD|SOUTH CAROLINA||JOEKEVIN8CS.COM||||10|HI JOHN, I REMEMBER BOTH JEFF MERRITT AND BLUE LEWIS, VERY WELL. BOTH WERE EX-JAILBIRDS LOOKING FOR A NEW START IN LIFE THROUGH BOXING. I DID NOT KNOW MUCH ABOUT ROCKY DIFAZIO, EXCEPT FOR WHAT I SAW IN RING MAGAZINE. I REMEMBER WHEN JEFF MERRITT STARTED FIGHTING, BOY COULD HE PUNCH; ESPECIALLY WITH HIS LEFT HOOK. HE Began FIGHTING IN THE LATE 60'S IN NEW YORK CITY. MERRITT WAS TRAINED AT THAT TIME BY SANDY SADDLER. AT THE TIME HE WAS A RECOVERING DOPE ADDICT, WHO DID TIME
MERRITT AND FOREST WARD WERE RISING PROSPECTS ON THE HEAVYWEIGHT SCENE IN THE LATE 60’S IN NYC. MERRITT KEPT YELLING FOR A FIGHT WITH WARD, AND CLAIMED WARD WAS DUCKING HIM. HE MAY HAVE BEEN RIGHT. IF THEY Fought AT THE TIME SOMEONE DEFINITELY WOULD HAVE BEEN KNOCKED. BOTH OF THEM AS IT TURNS OUT HAD GLASS JAWS. IRONICALLY, I SAW THEM BOTH KNOCKED OUT ON THE SAME NIGHT IN MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, IN SEPTEMBER 1968. MERRITT WAS KNOCKED OUT IN THE 3RD ROUND BY JOHNNY GAUSE OF PHILA., AFTER KNOCKING DOWN GAUSE A COUPLE OF TIMES IN THE SAME ROUND, IT WAS A SENSATIONAL FIGHT. FOREST WARD WAS KNOCKED OUT IN THE 7TH ROUND BY CHUCK WEPNER, IN A BEAUTIFUL COME FROM BEHIND VICTORY BY WEPNER. WEPNER FLOORED WARD IN THE 2ND ROUND; BY THE 4TH ROUND WARD FUMELLING WEPNER SO BAD THE REFEREE ASKED WEPNER IF HE WANTED TO CONTINUE, THERE WAS NO QUIT IN CHUCK WEPNER. YEARS LATER I GOT TO KNOW WEPNER AND I TOLD HIM I ALWAYS THOUGHT THAT THE WARD FIGHT WAS HIS BEST FIGHT, HE TOLD ME HIS FAVORITE WAS HIS WIN OVER MANUEL RAMOS.

In 1970 he moved away from NYC and fought out of Miami, with Angelo Dundee. Here is where it gets interesting. After Muhammad Ali fought Quarry in Atlanta, Ali sued for a license in NYC. In Ali’s law suit it stated that the New York State Boxing Commission Licensed felons to box, and as a result he was entitled to a license until his court appeal was decided, and guess who’s name was given as an example? Jeff Merritt! Ali got the license and fought Bonavena 5 weeks later. Fast forward, a few years later, during a traffic stop the police checked the trunk of Jeff Merritt’s car and found a dead body. He was sent back to prison. I can only guess, but I think it was about 10 years ago I heard he was out of jail, and a crack addict begging in the streets of Las Vegas. Blue Lewis, was a good fighter, most fighters ducked him, most notably Buster Mathis. The Detroit Boxing Commission suspended Mathis for not honoring a contract to fight Lewis. Lewis fought a pretty good fight against Ali in Dublin. No question about it Lewis was a capable and good fighter. Before turning pro, Lewis did time in jail for manslaughter, I understand he learned how to box in prison.

About 2 years ago someone told me that Lewis was destitute in Detroit.

John, I was looking at past post and I saw one you made about Ted Gullick. I wanted to say something about that at the time but I forgot. But you raised a good point and I will go into the next time.
IS WHERE IT GETS INTERESTING. AFTER MUHAMMAD ALI FOUGHT QUARRY IN ALANTA, ALI SUED FOR A LICENSE IN NYC. IN ALI’S LAW SUIT IT STATED THAT THE NEW YORK STATE BOXING COMMISSION LICENSED FELONS TO BOX, AND AS A RESULT HE WAS ENTITLED TO A LICENSE UNTIL HIS COURT APPEAL WAS DECIDED, AND GUESS WHO’S NAME WAS GIVEN AS AN EXAMPLE? JEFF MERRITT! ALI GOT THE LICENSE AND FOUGHT BONAVENA 5 WEEKS LATER.

FAST FORWARD, A FEW YEARS LATER, DURING A TRAFFIC STOP THE POLICE CHECKED THE TRUNK OF JEFF MERRITT’S CAR AND FOUND A DEAD BODY. HE WAS SENT BACK TO PRISON. I CAN ONLY GUESS, BUT I THINK IT WAS ABOUT 10 YEARS AGO I HEARD HE WAS OUT OF JAIL, AND A CRACK ADDICT BEGGING IN THE STREETS OF LAS VEGAS. BLUE LEWIS, WAS A GOOD FIGHTER, MOST FIGHTERS DUCKED HIM, MOST NOTABLY BUSTER MATHIS. THE DETROIT BOXING COMMISSION SUSPENDED MATHIS FOR NOT HONORING A CONTRACT TO FIGHT LEWIS. LEWIS FOUGHT A PRETTY GOOD FIGHT AGAINST ALI IN DUBLIN. NO QUESTION ABOUT IT LEWIS WAS A CAPABLE AND GOOD FIGHTER. BEFORE TURNING PRO, LEWIS DID TIME IN JAIL FOR MANSLAUGHTER, I UNDERSTAND HE LEARNED HOW TO BOX IN PRISON.

ABOUT 2 YEARS AGO SOMEONE TOLD ME THAT LEWIS WAS DESTITUTE IN DETROIT. JOHN, I WAS LOOKING AT PAST POST AND I SAW ONE YOU MADE ABOUT GULICK. I WANTED TO SAY SOMETHING ABOUT THAT AT THE TIME BUT I FORGOT. BUT YOU RAISED A GOOD POINT AND I WILL GO INTO THE NEXT TIME.

BLUE LEWIS, WAS A GOOD FIGHTER, MOST FIGHTERS DUCKED HIM, MOST NOTABLY BUSTER MATHIS. THE DETROIT BOXING COMMISSION SUSPENDED MATHIS FOR NOT HONORING A CONTRACT TO FIGHT LEWIS. LEWIS FOUGHT A PRETTY GOOD FIGHT AGAINST ALI IN DUBLIN. NO QUESTION ABOUT IT LEWIS WAS A CAPABLE AND GOOD FIGHTER. BEFORE TURNING PRO, LEWIS DID TIME IN JAIL FOR MANSLAUGHTER, I UNDERSTAND HE LEARNED HOW TO BOX IN PRISON.

ABOUT 2 YEARS AGO SOMEONE TOLD ME THAT LEWIS WAS DESTITUTE IN DETROIT. JOHN, I WAS LOOKING AT PAST POST AND I SAW ONE YOU MADE ABOUT GULICK. I WANTED TO SAY SOMETHING ABOUT THAT AT THE TIME BUT I FORGOT. BUT YOU RAISED A GOOD POINT AND I WILL GO INTO THE NEXT TIME.
personal business as much as possible. As someone pointed out, most families have similar circumstances of conflict but the Quarrys have been more in the public eye than most others. |

I remember John Clohessey very well, I saw every fight he had in the Golden Gloves. He won the heavyweight sub novice division in 1970.
Tough durable good looking (handsome) guy. I saw Bill Sharkey fight in the prelims in the Golden Gloves as a lightweight. Bill also was an alumni of the Grayrock College |

Hey Jimmy Dorsey, thanks for the honor of being considered a newbie "Stooge", as I haven't really been here anywhere near as long as you and Kent or Bob and Paul. Bye the way, "The Three Stooges" [with Curley], just happens to be my all time favorites of days gone by. Laurel and Hardy are next. Guess I'm showing my age.
Kent, Jimmy, Bob, Paul, John, Evren, and everyone else on this site, "Aint It Great !!"
This boxing site has more intelligent, experienced, and carefully considered comments than any boxing site I've come across. The amount of memories and experiences of boxing from my era and before is amazing. I especially value the tidbits about the Quarry family from people who grew up around them or where involved with them through the sport of boxing. I only regret that since I've moved into my trailer here in the outback I can only make brilliant comments on this site once a week, due to atmospheric conditions and the alignment of global telecommunications satellites. Does anyone have the Boxing Illustrated issue with a cover showing a smiling Jerry and his wife Charlie? The caption on the cover read, "What power is driving Jerry Quarry to the heavyweight crown?" It was published during his last comeback. I think sometimes between the Shavers and Joe Alexander fight. |

Steve, I've only recently begun tuning in to this site but, reading through the archives, it seems to me that all of the long-term posters are genuine boxing fans who enjoy relishing memories of the sport and, in particular, the Quarrys. I don't understand the point you are making in your messages and I am not sure whether you are ridiculing me by mentioning Australia and flies and trailers and beers and the rest of the stuff you brought up in your last couple of posts. That sort of comment doesn't worry me because if you are really in Australia (like you say) then you wouldn't have time to be leaving posts on this site (given that Kent correctly indicated to you that women outnumber men 8 to 1 over here). I am not even sure whether you are criticizing the Quarrys in your last posting, so you should enlighten us with your unambiguous point of view. My view is that the Quarrys always answered the bugle and that few were more courageous. The only thing I agree with you about is that The Three Stooges were very, very funny. Go give yourself an upper cut. | all day. His humor was very self-deprecating. He said his screen door had a rip in it which he might fix after he finished his beer. Since the old Frazier site has been a topic here recently, I just thought I'd run this spoof at Kent. I thought he might get a chuckle out of it as he used to post at that site. I surely didn't mean to offend anyone from Australia. I didn't think anyone would actually believe I moved to Australia. I apologize if I offended you. I will, however, give myself an upper cut and an eye gouge! P.S. Do women really outnumber men in Australia 8 to 1, or are you just bragging? Yuck, Yuck, Yuck.

Steve, The thing about 8 to 1 women over men in Australia was wishful thinking and a lie. When Kent first gave that figure it sounded too good for me to refute. If I misinterpreted the comment you made then my mistake and I apologize. I remember Toby's postings at the old Frazier site and I found them to be funny. I am about to give myself two uppercuts and a poke in the eye.

Hey! Let's have a fantasy fight between now HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION Roy Jones Junior and Jerry, both upper 190's; wow, I could dream about this all week long.

A fight between Jerry and Roy Jones Jr. would be fascinating! The Jerry who stood toe to toe with Joe Frazier in their first fight, I think he weighed 197 lbs. would have no trouble walking through Jones's punches. I think he'd solve that weird, freezing in the middle of the ring, style that Jones likes to use against guys that he knows can't catch or hurt him. I'm sure Jerry hit much harder than Ruiz. I honestly don't think Jones could take a Quarry punch. Jerry, however, took punches from most of the hardest hitting heavyweights of all time and usually walked through them. I doubt that Jones's best shots would effect Jerry. I think Jones would beat Jerry to the punch for 5 or 6 rounds, but as soon as he got caught with a legitimate, heavyweight punch from a Quarry who, [if you will remember, actually hurt Joe Frazier in that amazing first fight,] I think Jones would get knocked out. I pick Quarry by a knockout in the sixth round.

John Gerard, you mentioned a lot of names. I saw them all fight in person at one time or another in NYC, except for the Englishman Dan Mc. ... I already spoke about Clohessy in another post. I remember Pete Muller very well. He was a tough son of gun, anyone who fought Pete Muller knew he was in a fight. I saw him win the NYC Golden Gloves in 1968. He fought for trainer Johnny Reid (a real nice guy) of The Department of Parks, I believe out of the Red Hook gym in Brooklyn. He was a very aggressive fighter, who did not give an inch. I saw him punch the crap out of Randy Neuman in the semi-finals of the Golden Gloves. Neuman was scared stiff of Muller, all Neuman was concerned about was going the distance and not getting hurt, Muller won a 3 round decision. Throughout Neuman's professional career, I could never take him seriously as a fighter, because I remember how he wilted against Muller. Nick Wells was a good and successful amateur. I saw him fight as a pro in MSG in a prelim, and was disappointed, he was fat and out of shape. Talk about the other guys later.
fitting to compare him to real fighters who beat real heavies with real skill.

I haven't been to the site lately so I hope everyone is well. Steve! I see you moved to Australia. I here it's a blast down there. I had a girl friend whose dad moved there to pan for gold in the '80's. He lived on a campground in a tent. He was a real nut bag but he said the woman were great. I just saw the re-play of the Jones-Ruiz fight. Did anybody believe Jones would lose? Ruiz has nothing. He should take his money and retire before he gets crushed. And how about Corrie Sanders! It reminded me of the first Johannson-Patterson fight. (I might be a nut bag for that comment). Anyway, the Jones fight proved nothing to me about Jones that I didn't already know. He is the best fighter I've ever seen. There is nobody at Supermiddle, Light-heavy or Cruiserweight that can take him. At Heavy he would be a longshot with any of the top five or six. I heard Max Kellerman say he would beat Marciano. At 195 and the Rock at 188 I still think Roy would have a hard time. Rocky would not stand there and beg to be hit like Ruiz did. Nor would Joe Frazier or Jerry. And the fighters of old vs today? I think if you were great or near great you would also be the today. And it is also my be belief that if Louis or Dempsey were 25 or 30 today they would be as big as any heavy out there, Call me crazy. It's good to be back.

The sixties and seventies were the best era for heavies in my mind. It is where size matched skill. Leading up to that point you had skillfull fighters - Walcott, Charles, Patterson etc but they perhaps did'n't have the size. Then the guys got bigger in the late fifties on to the sixties and they still carried that skill but brought the element of size with it. After the seventies the fighters got even bigger (especially 'round the waist) but the skill lessened. The sixties and seventies; the pinnacle of Heavyweight boxing.

Everen: My own personal opinion is that once fighters go over 225 lbs or so, it is at the expense of some other essential quality: skill, speed, or stamina. George Foreman in his prime weighted about 220 and his power has yet to be equalled by those forty pounds heavier. He was no Fred Astaire but he moved pretty well and had surprisingly quick hands. I also don't know many guys who were stronger than Liston and Tyson and they weighted less than 220 in their prime. Ditto Ron Lyle and Earnie Shavers.

Let me write this carefully because I recognize that everyone is entitled to their opinion. If Max Kellerman thinks Roy Jones could beat Rocky Marciano, he is full of it... just finished reading a good book about Marciano and have watched many tapes of him. NO ONE trained harder or was in better shape than Rocky, he could take a punch, THREW more punches per round than any heavyweight and NO ONE punched harder....it was a natural gift he had... 49 fights, 49 wins and 43 knockouts including two wins over Walcott, two over Charles, Archie Moore, etc. A truly GREAT fighter during a highly competitive era...these guys actually trained for fights and were not overblown blobs....

Following from the last post I have to agree - Marciano was one of the fittest, hardest and cleverest champions there was. He is not given credit for his ring brain but he certainly knew styles and how to beat an opponent! Talking of the training, I once read a fascinating article on how Rocky would hide himself away from the outside world when he was in training. He went (and his trainers) as far as to not read any newspaper articles about the fight in the weeks leading up to the match as to reduce any negativity being fed into his mindset! That is what you call dedication. A lot of fighters from the eighties, nineties and 00's seem to train in burger joints or with heavy weights. Watching a lot of old time 40's, 50's, 60's and 70's fights I notice how little fat the fighters carried. Especially from the fifties. Top contenders were lean and didn't want or need to be 250lbs.
They were lithe and fit and conditioned to combat. I recently watched a bout between Zora Folley and Henry Cooper and both guys were in supreme condition. They were between 185 (Cooper) to 205 (Folley) roughly and both looked great.

Mike Stevens, pardon my language, but Max Kellerman no jacks...t about boxing. He actually picked Ruiz to win the fight. The only person who knows less about boxing is Mike Katz a broken down ex-sports writer, who peddles his garbage on the internet.

I hate to admit it but I too picked Ruiz to win. The reason I thought so was because I expected Ruiz to use his weight to his advantage by roughing him up against the ropes and wearing him down. But in the actual fight, every time he got Jones cornered, he let him move to keep the fight in the center of the ring. The referee did break the fighters quickly but Ruiz never once tried to force Jones back into the ropes. So Ruiz's excuse that the ref. didn't let him fight his fight doesn't hold water. In hindsight, I see that even if Ruiz had kept the fight away from the center of the ring, he probably still would have lost a decision but he would have made a better account of himself. One of the aspects that led to the downfall of Ruiz against Jones was mental. Ruiz didn't have his usual fire because he has been hit with hard punches before but he always fought back hard. Against Jones, he didn't do this.

Max Kellerman is what I call a "flavor of the week" kind of thinker. Whomever happens to be on top of the heap at the point in time he is asked a question is automatically the all-time greatest in his mind. He lacks the capacity to look at the overall picture in the context of time and is far too impressed by size and physique. He proves that just knowing a lot of facts is not enough to draw correct conclusions. Toughness is not something you can measure or weigh -- it has to be seen by experienced eyes to appreciate. But I do like Max and he gave boxing announcing a breath of fresh, young air. And I admire his obvious love of the sport. Too many sports casters cover boxing with apologies.

EVEN: You asked about tapes of Liston-Foreman sparring. I am told collector Kurt Noltimier has those tapes.

Don't get me wrong about Kellerman. I agree with John on this one. He's young and really has a passion for the sport. Boxing needs more young people to support it. As far as Marciano, I think there are few athletes in history who did as much with so little. I think he knew himself very well. He knew with his limited physical abilities he might not be able to beat a guy to the punch, he just had to out punch him. That's where his intense devotion to training came into play. He trained himself to work harder than anybody else and he knew he could go the distance and still be fresh. I also think his punching power is a little over rated. Foreman, Dempsey and Louis, (from what I've seen on film and TV.), were much harder punchers. And his defense was vastly underrated. He was an extremely smart fighter that knew how to set traps. I'll always rate him high on my all-time list.
You guys are right about Kellerman on the whole he is a plus for boxing. I am told by people who know him that he is a nice guy. It's just that some of his remarks are so unfounded and said with such authority that I have difficulty listening to him. So I rarely do.

All right fans since we are discussing Rocky Marciano prowess. Let me ask a question. Who do you think punched harder, Rocky Marciano, or Cleveland "Big Cat Williams?" Well, I asked the only man who fought both of them, Keene Simmons, that question, and guess what he told me? Rocky Marciano. I asked Keene this question about 3 years ago at Ring 8 in NYC. At the time Keene was about 80 years old of sound mind and good health.

I once did a poll to see if fans at another website liked Max Kellerman as an announcer or not. Over 80% of the people who responded said they didn't like Kellerman. Usually a commentator or writer has some people who like his work and others who don't like his work. I have never known about a commentator or writer that is so disliked before Kellerman. I am a regular at this other site and I visit other sites as well that I don't post at and the prevailing feeling seems to be that boxing fans in general don't like Kellerman as a commentator.

MY TAKE ON MARCIANO: First let me say, I never saw Rocky fight in person. I was born in 1955. Anyone that says Marciano was overrated was never hit by him. Any of the guys he fought, including Archie Moore and Joe Walcott had nothing but praise and respect for him. And Archie Moore was not a guy who threw roses at anyone. I don't think there was ever a better conditioned or more dedicated heavyweight champ then the rock, but I don't think he was the hardest puncher either.

Foreman, Tyson, and maybe Liston and Louis hit harder. But the fact is -- no one in the pros ever walked out of the ring a winner over the guy 49 times. and that's got to count for something on a resume. I personally would not know who to pick on Rocky vs. Dempsey. I think Jack had faster hands, tougher skin, but not the stamina. About 15 years ago, my wife and I met Sandy Saddler at the Elks Club in Queens, the great ex-champ who also helped Dick Saddler train George Foremen. I asked Sandy who he thought hit harder Foreman or Marciano and who he thought would have won. He picked Marciano on both counts.

TO BOB: to be honest with you I was shocked when Sandy Saddler said the thought Marciano hit harder than Foreman. Maybe Sandy at that point in time was on the outs with George and didn't want to give him credit. I don't know, he did not seem bitter. I do remember him saying something about both men would have gone down, but Rocky would have gotten up and George would not have. or something like that.
This was about 15 years ago. I remember he also said that lifting weights will not help punching power in his opinion. He also spoke highly of Jake LaMotta who was also in the audience that night.

No bigger than he was, Rocky was a one in a million fighter. Despite the fact that he was a cruiserweight doesn't diminish the fact that he was truly great. All the positive things you folks say about him is true. I believe that he had a puncher's chance to beat anyone that has ever entered the ring. He wasn't lazy, he kept punching and was determined to win. You got to admire Roy Jones jr. for stepping up to the plate and giving it a shot. As for Kellerman I think he's done a lot of reading but really knows nothing genuine about our sport. I wish he wouldn't holler so much either.

Hey Forest if you were at Ring 8 you would know Sal Rappa then.

I found your comments about Marciano interesting, especially Sandy Saddler's insights. I have a friend who is a boxing writer, and he constantly doubts Marciano's credentials as an all-time great. And while he is not desparaging of Marciano, he still cannot imagine Marciano beating a lot of the current fighters of the past 30 years. I tell him his logic is good, but the fact is Marciano never lost. And that should never be overlooked. And the times when the fight hung in the balance he pulled it out. That does count for something. Personally, while I would have doubts about Marciano winning against some fighters, I would never bet against Rocky. Marciano was often criticized for fighting old men past their primes, and there is some truth to that. But, I really believe that with the exception of Ali, no other Heavyweight Champ defended his title successfully against better opponents. As old as Walcott, Charles, Moore were, and even past their primes, they were still better than most other challengers who fought for the title. Compare those 3 guys to the guys Dempsey, Louis, and and Frazier beat while they were champions, and they stand up pretty well. Saddler's feeling about Marciano's punching power vs. Foreman's surprised me too, for a moment, but then again Saddler was a Archie Moore's stablemate so I am sure Saddler would be very familiar with Marciano's dynamite. When Keene Simmons told me that Marciano punched harder than Cleveland Williams I was surprised then to. But I guess because Marciano was smaller and these guys were so much bigger, we assume they had greater firepower. But in this case one opponent who fought both Marciano and Williams, Keene Simmons, and eye witness Sandy Saddler both go with Marciano. Marciano and Dempsey would be interesting. The Dempsey that fought Willard or Pirpo, fights the Marciano that fought Walcott for the title. Logic tells me Dempsey, history tells me Marciano never lost. I just can't pick against Marciano for that reason, he always found a way to win.

What Saddler said about LaMotta speaks well of LaMotta. LaMotta was another guy who did not look spectacular, but all of his contemporaries marvelled about him. Ray Robinson in his book said that Jake, "was a gladiator, too, when he wanted to be," and when Robinson won the title, he said, "Jake LaMotta hadn't lost. Something had happened to keep him from winning." This is how most of Jake's contemporaries felt about him. Another reason for their admiration of Jake is because he never ducked another fighter, including all the feared black fighters of that era (which is something even Robinson can't claim as a middleweight champ). Evren, I haven't been to Ring 8 in about 2 years. But I've met Sal Rappa there. He has a great film collection. About 3 years ago I asked him if he would sell me a copy of the Giardello-Carter fight, he wouldn't sell he wanted to trade. He is a true fan and a nice guy, I believe he also told me he is Giardello's cousin. I've since got a copy of the fight.

In watching films of Jake LaMotta's fights I was surprised to see that he was not a big one punch fighter but he was still very aggressive. Jake had a lot of heart as did Rocky M. A lot of fighters these days could learn a lot about boxing by watching those guys and they could see what determination can do for them, something that is lacking in a lot today's fighters. Another surprising thing about LaMotta was he really did have great defense the way he bobbed and weaved, he was difficult to hit and he had very good boxing skills. I guess the image I had of him was as a slugger but part of that may have been because of the movie about him, "Raging Bull," and I didn't see any films of the real LaMotta until after I saw the movie. SABRINA, WE MISS YOUR DAD TOO! MR. JIMMY WAS OUR PAL AND HIS INPUT ON THIS BOARD IS MISSED!

[3/14/03 09:43:41 PM] Sonia Hathaway(Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com ||| 10 | Yes, Sabrina, Dad, is missed, and is noticeable on the board, he'd have some good stuff to say as he always did. |

3/15/03 12:50:48 PM| JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM ||| 10 | Can't agree you more KENT, Jimmy was one class guy, a lotta people did not know THAT JIMMY Q. fought professional in a bout on the "vegas strip" series promoted by BILL MILLER IN 1966. About the time Jerry had a bout with ED LAND. I WROTE to him a write up about it, i wonder in modern history, had there ever been 4 brothers fight pro, Jimmy also worked Jerry and Mike's corner. when they took on the "soul brothers" i have a tape of that. I have to admit, personally haven't shown a whole lot of respect for Marciano, When you're the champion of the whole wide world and 49-0. kinda hard to argue that point, lets put it this way, Ali, Frazier, Foreman, Louis, Dempsey had been 49-0. they would be unopposed "greatest" WITH ROCK its like why pick that guy?? as far as MAXIE 'pad' Kellerman goes, Forest Ward is right he acts like he's some kinda badass on TV with the black shirt, and "pencil neck". he really disrespected Quarry once, said he was a soft touch!!? But thats not my opinion's on his fight knowledge, VERY VERY OVERPAID!! and not a stooge like our respected and friend moe (MR. JIMMY). |

3/15/03 12:51:22 PM| JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM ||| 10 | CAN't agree you more KENT, Jimmy was one class guy, a lotta people did not know THAT JIMMY Q. fought professional in a bout on the "vegas strip" series promoted by BILL MILLER IN 1966. About the time Jerry had a bout with ED LAND. I WROTE to him a write up about it, i wonder in modern history, had there ever been 4 brothers fight pro, Jimmy also worked Jerry and Mike's corner. when they took on the "soul brothers" i have a tape of that. I have to admit, personally haven't shown a whole lot of respect for Marciano, When your the champion of the whole wide world and 49-0. kinda hard to argue that point, lets put it this way, Ali, Frazier, Foreman, Louis, Dempsey had been 49-0. they would be unopposed "greatest" WITH ROCK its like why pick that guy?? as far as MAXIE 'pad' Kellerman goes, Forest Ward is right he acts like he's some kinda badass on TV with the black shirt, and "pencil neck". he really disrespected Quarry once, said he was a soft touch!!? But thats not my opinion's on his fight knowledge, VERY VERY OVERPAID!! and not a stooge like our respected and friend moe (MR. JIMMY). |

3/15/03 02:49:03 PM| JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM ||| 10 | HERE'S A BLAST FROM STOOGES PAST, DOES ANYONE REMEMBER, WHEN THE WELTER'S WERE GOING STRONG, JOHNNY "the heat" VERDEROSA?? THE HEAT WAS HOT!! UNTIL HE RAN INTO BOZA EDWARDS, AND GOT HIS FLAME EXTINGUISHED, AS WELL AS HIS LIGHTS? |

3/15/03 05:16:24 PM| Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net ||| 10 | Jimmy Dorsey, did Kellerman actually say Jerry Quarry was a soft touch? How does this loudmouth kid stay on TV? He seems to have a perspective on boxing history that is at best strange, at worst uninformed. I know he reads a lot and watches films on boxing history. He lacks , whoever, the experience of having been alive and watching or discussing these fights when they occurred. This kid can't even make an educated guess on today's fighters! I enjoy the way Teddy Atlas sort of snickers and smirks at Kellerman's remarks on Friday night fights. Based on old time films, I've seen, didn't Dempsey have a distinct advantage over Marciano in that he could hover over a fallen opponent, and hit him as soon as he tried to get up, with no neutral corner rule?

[3/15/03 05:35:02 PM] JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA
CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | |||| 10 | STEVE: BEFORE JERRY'S UNTIMELY DEATH AND RIGHT BEFORE THE FOUNDATION, HE SAID THEY QUARRY-ALI FIGHT, WAS THE SOFTEST TOUCH IN BOXING HISTORY FOR ALI, WE ARE TALKING THE FIRST BOUT, SOMEONE SHOULD HAVE TOLD HIM, HE WAS VIEWING THE SECOND BOUT, THAT THE FIRST BOUT WAS STOPPED ON THAT BAD CUT, HE WAS GOING BY THE LAS VEGAS BOUT, THAT ESPN SHOWD OVER AND OVER AND OVER AGAIN, JUST HAPPENED TO BE HIS WORST PERFORMANCE, SLAPSIE MAXIE, COULDN'T EVEN GET HIS BOUTS STRAIGHT, AND MAKES BIG BUCKS $ FOR HIS LACK OF EFFORT, FOR YEARS!!! THEN ON THE SAME PROGRAM, HE SAID BONAVENA WAS THE "REAL" fighter, over Quarry and his bout with Ali. I'D SAY JERRY WOULD HAVE BEATEN BONAVENA HANDILY, AND MAYBE EVEN A KNOCKOUT!!!

[3/15/03 06:37:26 PM] Paul | Australia | || PlMls | |||| 10 | Just a few comments on Marciano. We can question the quality of his opponents, but as everyone knows he can only beat whoever is put in front of him. Probably a more debatable issue is whether the legend of Marciano would ever have begun had he been fighting under today's 12 round championship rule? Was he doing enough at the end of the 12th round of his fight with Walcott to justify him taking the title from the champion on points? Probably not. And would he have won his first fight with Charles had it also been over 12 rounds? Probably, but it was close, and under today's rules that fight might have been stopped much earlier because of that wicked cut on Rocky's left eye. Also, Marciano weighed 184 pounds and would be a midget by today's standards and his short frame probably couldn't fit any more bulk on it even with today's improved training techniques, diet, etc. However, imagine how easily Marciano would have dominated the cruiserweights of today with his devastating power. But the real measure of Marciano's greatness was that no fighter was ever the same again after they fought him. |

[3/15/03 07:48:12 PM] Bob Bumbera | NC | || renfbera@aol.com | |||| 10 | Do any of you guy's know if Marciano was going to buy Jerry's contract or at least a piece of it. I read he dropped the idea after Jerry lost to Machen or after the first Patterson fight. I don't know anybody who knows boxing that would call Jerry a "soft touch". Like I said Maxie is young. |

[3/15/03 10:08:16 PM] Steve | N.J. | || dmmmsrm@comcast.net | |||| 10 | I don't think that even Ali considered Jerry a "soft touch" in either of their fights. I think Jerry on a good night would have easily outboxed Bonevena. After absorbing some hard shots. I still have a problem with comparisons of Jack Dempsey and most modern day champions. Again I refer to the old films where Dempsey is standing over his opponent, and clubbing him when he starts to get up. |

[3/16/03 02:37:25 PM] JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA
CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | |||| 10 | YOU SEE FELLOW STOOGES!! (AND I SAY THAT WITH THEY UTMOST RESPECT KNUCK! KNUCK KNUCK!). IF MAX CONSIDERED JERRY A "SOFT TOUCH", I HAVE NO QUALMS IN CONSIDERING HIM "MAXIE PAD", THATS HOW HE WOULD FARE AGAINST JERRY, AND ESPECIALLY AS AN ANALYST, PEOPLE FORGET JERRY WON AWARDS OVER HOWARD COSELL, HIS VERY FIRST YEAR FOR CBS SPORTS SPECTACULAR, WITH TOM BROOKSHIER, USED TO LOVE THEIR OPENING THEME AND MUSIC, (THEY MADE IT EXCITING). MAXIE COULDN'T EVEN BEAT JERRY AS AN ANALYST. AND HE'S BEEN DOING IT AT LEAST SINCE 1992 (YOU HAVE TO GROW UP SOMETIME, MAYBE THE BIG BUCKS FOGS HIS BRAIN. OKAY ENOUGH OF "maxie pad" (SORRY LADIES). TO BOB: YES MARCIANO HAD A BIG INTEREST IN BUYING THE QUARRY CONTRACT. AND RENEGED AFTER HIS DEFEAT TO MACHEN. |

[3/17/03 02:44:25 AM] Evren | London | || evren@btinternet.com | |||| 10 | Jerry was never a soft touch for anyone. He had 2 one sided losses to Frazier 2nd and Ali 2nd. Are we to say the Tyson is a soft touch as he lost so onedish to Lewis? I don't think so! When you see who Jerry beat and also who he lost to there is no shame at all, other than I wished he could have been champion. Beating Ellis would have been his best chance.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/17/03 03:37:45 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>oriononside@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

I agree that Max Kellerman has a long way to go to be as good of a commentator as Jerry was. I had a couple of friends who were convinced that Jerry was a second rate fighter because they remembered his performances against Ali in their second meeting and in the Norton fight. I played them round one of the first Frazier/Quarry fight, round six of the Mac Foster fight, round one of the Shavers fight, and round twelve of the Spencer fight. They were speechless for at least a minute afterwards until one of them said, "that Quarry was a bad ass motherfer!" My other buddy just nodded his head in agreement, still shocked by what I had shown him. They now know how good Jerry really was!

| 3/17/03 07:31:02 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 |

FOREST: I personally rate Jake LaMotta as one of the ruggest, most fearless fighters who ever lived. He is one of the few oldtime white fighters whom the old African American boxers speak very respectfully of today. He fought all comers and took alot of tough guys out of Graziano's way. What really makes me laugh is last week on the classic sports cable channel they did a pretty good special on the histor of African American boxers. They mentioned they great Sugar Ray with a comment something like "whom Jake LaMotta had been ducking" Ducking!! they fought SIX TIMES. That's ducking? I think Graziano hit harder than LaMotta but I would have picked LaMotta in 8 or 9 rounds. The signed to fight twice and both times Graziano pulled out. Supposedly Graziano's "friends and backers" did not want to give LaMotta a big pay day.

| 3/17/03 07:47:01 AM | Sonia Hathaway | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 |

All, we wanted to say "HAPPY ST. PATRICK'S DAY" to all. Don't forget to wear your green. WE love & miss you Dad, & Uncle Jerry, Mom too.

| 3/17/03 09:57:07 AM | Jimmy Dorsey | Ventura California | ronnyrains@yahoo.com | 10 |

Kent:(THE CURLY Q. LINK,OF OUR FEARLESS LEADER'S CLUB).Kent what really does not help matters as far as JQ IS CONCERNED,IS ESPN'S SHOWING ALI-QUARRY II.(5-THOUSAND TIMES),MY FRIENDS DO THE SAME THING TO ME,OH I SAW YOUR QUARRY AGAINST ALI THEY OTHER DAY(ON CLASSIC'S).THEN THEY GIVE ME A ROUTINE OF SOMEONE NOT BEING ABLE TO HIT ANYTHING.LIKE A BAD VAUDVILLE ACT!SO I TOO,HAVE TO GET THE TAPES OUT,THEN THEY SHOW THEIR RESPECT.WE ARE TALKING,USUALLY NON-FANS ANYWAY.EVREN MADE A STRONG POINT,IF QUARRY'S PERFORMANCE IN ALI II,was his worst,he had absolutely nothing to be ashamed of.HAPPY THANKS PATRICKS DAY TO ALL,I'M DREADING TOMORROW MORNING ,FOR THE GREEN BEER TONIGHT!!

| 3/17/03 10:10:41 AM | Jimmy Dorsey | Ventura California | ronnyrains@yahoo.com | 10 |

EVREN: did kent I,ever give you your diploma to stoogeville,(fearless leader's club).I Think we missed you and Bob Bumbera. no sign-ups,no hassle's,(just be yourself,like us ).SINCERELY JIM,DON'T MIND ME EVREN, I'M GETTING A HEADSTART ON THAT "GREEN BEER"

| 3/17/03 11:20:49 AM | Forest Ward | South Carolina | jophekevin@cs.com | 10 |

it's remarkable, I've said it before when I see your comments, fell like I am looking in a mirror. I agree with your post about LaMotta a 100%. A lot of people don't realize he was not a hard puncher, and did not knock out many people. The same is true for Fritzie Zivic, and Jack Sharkey!

| 3/17/03 11:53:46 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 |

FOREST: I agree, LaMotta was not a particularly hard puncher, but he was an awkwardly clever swarmer who hit both the head and body. Aside from a great chin, he had excellent stamina in spite of the fact he often had to lose 30 pounds to make the middleweight limit. LaMotta and Zale would have been a good fight also. Both men were iron men, but I think Zale had a better punch. And when Jake won one, he won it on the level. Nobody ever fought him "with handcuffs on". I believe he was the number one ranked middleweight for six years without a title shot.
Saw a clip of LaMotta as an amateur the other day. He was really podgy looking. I think he fought as an amateur at Light-Heavyweight.

It is official, Evren and Bob are a couple of "WISEGUYS" AND "LUNKHEADS," KNUCK! KNUCK! KNUCK! Stooges, something Max Kellerman will never be here in Quarryville!

John, thats a hard one to pick Zale-LaMotta. Another hard one to pick would be Dick Tiger and LaMotta, or Tiger-Zale. LaMotta was very cute with the head, shoulders, crouching (a lot like Marciano, except no great punch), but still anyone who goes straight in on Dick Tiger. Wow! Then again it could be a boring fight a lot of clinches. Who knows? Styles make a fight.

John, about 2 years ago I studied some films of Oscar Bonavena, and I was surprised. Oscar was not the crude slugger I mistakenly remembered from years gone past. He actually jabbed, and hooked off the jab, albeit he was clumsy, but he knew the fundamentals of boxing. He had good stamina, and a lot of balls, and he didn't cut. He lost to Ellis pretty easily. But most other guys had a hard time with him, including, Ali, Lyle, Frazier twice. I think Jerry Quarry would have his hands full with Bonavena. Jerry would not knock him out, and Oscar had a style that discouraged a lot of opponents. Like I was saying styles make a fight, and Bonavena was all wrong for Jerry. Once again because of their styles it may have been a boring fight. Oscar was much better than Chuvalo. I still believe Jerry Q lost to Chuvala because Zack Clayton gave him a fast count (he did the same to Foreman against Ali, although it made no difference, the result was inevitable). Jerry was getting discouraged against Chuvala, and there was still 3 rounds left in the fight. Jerry may have stopped him in the next round on cuts but, that's only conjecture. God bless Chuvala, he always came to fight, and gave 100%. One more note about Bonavena and Chuvalo. I have the film of their fight, Bonavena knocked Chuvala down but the ref called it a slip.

Then again Forest, Quarry-Bonavena might be a classic, I still think it would be a Jerry Win, for you see their intangibles, Jerry was 7-0 vs the top ten whom never wore a belt, (albeit Chuvala was not in they official top ten at the time he took on Jerry). Spencer #1, Mathis #6, Foster #1, BoDell #8, Middleton #7, Lyle #3, Shavers #6. I think Jerry would have approached this particular bout differently, and counter punched Oscar to death, like he should have done to Frazier, don't get me wrong I have all the respect for RINGO in the WORLD, YR RIGHT HE WAS DAMN CRAFTY IN AN AWKWARD SORT OF WAY, AND COULD NEVER BEAT ANYONE FROM THE TOP 5 UP. THEY WERE SIGNED IN 73 FOR THE GARDEN, AND RINGO PULLED OUT, SOMEONE AT THE TIME SAID HE WAS DUCKING Quarry, I THINK THE REAL REASON, HE NEEDED MORE TIME TO TRAIN.

Then again Jerry Quarry in his prime KO the Mike Tyson of the last ten years???? I think Jerry in his prime (Lyle, Shavers, Alexander wins) would paste a Tyson of the last ten years.... Jerry loved it when punchers would go into him with average defenses.... This is why big George Foreman didn't want anything to do with Jerry.

In all honestly, I find Quarry-Bonavena too close to call, but if I had to bet, I would have bet on Jerry. But I do remember Oscar koing German champ Karl Mildenburger who was pretty good. I think the worst Oscar looked was against Ellis where he went down twice. Oscar's best fight was his loss to Frazier in their first fight. It really could have been called a draw. Oscar was also having a hard time with Blue Lewis in Argentina until the ref came to his rescue and disqualified Al for some occult reason. I rate Dick Tiger as one of the strongest non-heavyys of all time. A real tough workman and a class guy. I believe the reason why Quarry-Bonavena was cancelled was because Oscar broke his left hand. After the operation he fought Patterson instead at the Garden (and lost).

Patterson had just turned down a fight with Kirkman in Seattle promoted by Jack Hurley.

Tyson would stop Quarry in the manner Frazier did. Too quick and too good is Mr. Tyson. Definitely in my top ten (of which there are fifteen!!)

Jerry was a very good, gutsy fighter, but Tyson would have been too much for him. Too fast, too strong. Shavers, Lyle, and Foster did not have Tyson's hand speed or ability to throw combinations from all angles.

The question was could Jerry beat the Tyson of the last ten years, not an in prime Tyson. I think Jerry at his best may have been able to take a past his prime but a still very dangerous Tyson but an in prime Tyson, I don't think Jerry could beat that version.

I DON'T KNOW I'D RATHER SEE JERRY IN THERE WITH TYSON, THEN EITHER HOLYFIELD OR LENNOX LEWIS, TO ME TYSON'S THEY MOST OVERRATED CHAMP IN HISTORY, AND LARRY HOLMES PROBABLY THEY MOST UNDERRATED, I KNOW ONE THING YOU ALL MIGHT AGREE WITH, WHOEVER FOUGHT JERRY (SAY TOP 20). FROM 1965 TONY DOYLE TO 1977 LORENZO ZANON, AND EVERYONE IN BETWEEN ALI, FRAZIER, NORTON, LYLE SHAVERS, FOSTER, CHUVALO, ETC, WHERE ALL IN TIP TOP SHAPE, THAT TELLS YOU SOMETHING ABOUT MR. QUARRY, I'LL DIG FOR THAT ARTICLE ON BONAVENA-QUARRY AND WHY IT WAS POSTPONED !

John, you are probably right about Tyson vs. Quarry. The one wild card in that fight would be if Jerry intimidated Tyson by not fearing him. As we saw when Tyson fought Holyfield. When Tyson could not intimidate someone he became an ordinary fighter. Where as Quarry when he thought he could beat someone he became next to unbeatable. It would be a long shot. Strangely enough, I think Bonavena would have given Jerry fits, and probably have beaten Tyson. Simply because Bonavena did not fear anyone. He could bang, he didn't cut, and he was as strong as an ox. Tyson would have become discouraged; and probably quit. Did you know Bonavena was born in Argentina, but his parents were born in Italy (shades of Jake LaMotta).

Could the George Foreman that bombed out Joe Frazier in 2 rounds (1973) beat the Mike Tyson of the last 10 years???? And MAYBE the Tyson in his prime???? Did you guys know that the only fighter that big George Foreman EVER ducked was Jerry Quarry? Unbelievable! It was obvious to the world at the time (1973-74) that Jerry REALLY deserved and earned a title shot with big George.... George Foreman announced at the Quarry-Shavers fight that he was going to fight the winner of that bout; he backed out.... Would have a Mike Tyson of the last 10 years feared Jerry right after his stunning KO of Shavers just like big George Foreman did? When Jerry Quarry was in his prime he had the awesome ability to combine punching speed AND power with great footwork and counter-punching skills....

Forest, you are right about Tyson and Holyfield. I think Holyfield spooked Tyson when he looked him directly in the eye at the weigh-in and said: "You don’t bother me one bit." Holyfield won the mind games and therefore the fight right there and then. I recall reading something Teddy Atlas said years ago when asked about the outcome of a hypothetical fight between Ali and Tyson. Atlas said that Ali would have played mind games with Tyson in the first six rounds and then knocked him out in the seventh. Many in boxing realised at an early stage that Tyson was mentally fragile. Regarding Bonavena, he was definitely one tough nut and he pushed Ali all the way in the fight they had immediately before Ali had the first Frazier fight. From memory, Bonavena teased Ali pre-fight by calling him a chicken (it sounded funny because he used the Argentinian word for chicken and it drove Ali to despair) as a result of the draft-dodging. If I recall rightly, it was only in the 15th that Bonavena went down and to his great credit he kept trying to get up. Oscar was no quitter. Joe Frazier, in his book, praised Bonavena's toughness. He also told an amusing story about Oscar at their pre-fight press conference. Every time he got near Joe, Oscar would point his nose up in the air and animatedly start sniffing like there was a rotten smell near him. Also, years after their careers were long finished, Frazier ran into Oscar at a Las Vegas casino. Oscar's first words were: "Where are all the hookers?" He was one rough cut and it eventually took a bullet to stop him. Finally, I must say that I find your postings about fighters of yesterday-year very informative reading and I hope you and the other guys who actually boxed keep writing about your experiences. This is a very good site. Regards.|
[3/19/03 06:57:31 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|10|FOREST: Ron Stander, a pretty tough nut of the 70's was also mostly Italian even though he got a German name. A little trivia regarding Bonavena: according to Jose Torres, in his book Sting Like a Bee, he mentions that Charlie Goldman, Marciano's old trainer worked very briefly with Bonavena. That did not work out. I would say the closest I've seen to Marciano's physique (but NOT his skill) was Jose Urtain, the late European champ from Spain. He looked like rock but could not fight like him.|
[3/19/03 12:27:01 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|10|LISTON TRIVIA:
Sonny Liston turned down a fight with Boone Kirkman is Seattle due to the fact that he was filming a movie which I believed was called Moonfire. Kirkman really got lucky.|
[3/19/03 02:05:14 PM|Gerry Schultz|Ohio||jgschultz11@msn.com|10|What was it that made me think of this sight on St. Patrick's Day? Oh yeah, the cool Irish thing! I'm sort of playing catch up... On Max K. ( of which much has been already said ), I have to follow the crowd here on that one, his comments regarding Jerry and Oscar B. NOT being true heavies in today's game turned me off totally. A lot has been correctly said of the conditioning, and emphasis on skill --- which may be missing today in all sports --- of Rocky and others of the 50s-70's vs. size, which is given too much "weight" in today's game. Jerry at 200lbs or less is a great example. He would give any of today's guys a great fight. Ruiz did not look that aggressive vs. Jones, appeared to me to be intimidated by his speed. I doubt Jerry would've been at all. As has been said, Jerry vs. Oscar would be a great match. I give Jerry the edge on speed, counterpunching. Oscar did not appear to have good balance, but was very game, very strong, and was leading Ellis when he got caught. I rate Rocky a top Ten guy, but I also rate Tyson there as well, his rare speed and strength would beat Jerry, I think, clearly. Holyfield I do not rate nearly as high or Bowe or Lewis, all three of which are not that far from Jerry, in my opinion. Tyson, to me, is the last "legend" I've seen since the 70s, which I agree was the best era for Heavies. Rock vs. Dempsey, I pick Rocky, but only after a brutal beating and a couple of trips to the canvas. It's good people still consider these classic greats in today's Max K. right-now world. Another fighter from that era I rate top Ten is Gene Tunney, who also retired on top with a great record. Happy belated St. Pat's Day to the Quarrys and their fans at this site. |
last thing I remember was Foreman "knocking out" Jimmy Young in the 7th round. Well, I wake up the next day, and hear on the radio about the big upset of Young over Foreman. I couldn't believe it, I went to sleep thinking he was knocked out, I didn't remember a damn thing after the 7th round. I had to go out and buy a newspaper to find out what happened.Young could have been a successful fighter but he became discouraged after a few close losses and drank and drugged himself out of the picture. Unfortunately he kept on fighting for too many years I met him in Philly about 5 years ago outside the Blue Horizon. I was told before hand, that he will be outside the arena before the fight selling the free tickets Russell Peltz, gives former fighters, sure enough there he was. Friendly and talkative and obviously soft in the head. I don't blame this one on boxing, Young had opportunity and he threw it away. I really, really liked him too.|
Forest, yes I liked Bonavena too, I could see Jerry Quarry getting frustrated, I could also see Jerry maybe even stopping, Oscar (He should have only been the third fighter in history to stop Chuvalo) Although we will never know. Ross Brimer the thug guard, who shot Bonavena—mysteriously is also dead, Jimmy Ellis, for sure was good, if not great fighter for certain. He headlined everywhere, and didn’t disappoint, like so many other fighter’s, he evitably stayed around to long.

Ellis was a very good fighter. He really was a blown-up middleweight who beat some very tough heavies. He put Bonavena on the deck twice which is very hard to do. Ellis starting going downhill after Shavers koyed him in 1. After that he stated loosing to guys like Kirkman. Ellis had a good sneaky right that hurt Frazier for a second in their first fight. He was also Ali's sparring partner for years.

Does anyone remember Roy Tiger Williams? He was pretty tough. Not many guys wanted to mess with Roy. Also, Manual Ramos, the Mexican heavy of the 60's died a few years ago I just learned.

John, You are right Kirkman is lucky he never fought Liston, even if Liston was 70 years old. In fairness to Kirkman most fighters should be considered lucky if they didn’t have to fight Liston. I was at the Liston-Wepner fight. Besides the fight itself, what I remember was Muhammad Ali was at the fight.

Roy Williams, there is a name from the past! I still remember his fight with Earnie Shavers. I guess anyone who saw it still remembers it! Larry Holmes in his biography gives a good detailed look at the career of Roy Williams, Holmes freely admits he did not want to fight him (although he did), and further states that Williams was a good fighter who did not get the breaks. Roy Williams is another example of my belief that a fighter’s record alone does not always tell the whole story of a fighter’s ability. He did a stretch in prison for killing someone, sorry but I don’t know the details. I heard he was released from prison a few years ago. John, Roy Williams won the NYC Golden Gloves Heavyweight Open Division in 1966.

He was a protege of Joe Louis if I remember correctly. Peace.

Does anyone know the wherabouts of Bob Satterfield? Is he still alive? He would be around 80 now I guess. He beat among others: Nick Barone (PTS10) Lee Oma (KO6) Harold Johnson (PTS10) Bob Baker (WKO1) Julio Mederos (WKO2) (WPTS10) John Holman (WKO1) Nino Valdes (WPTS10) Johnny Summerlin (WPTS10) Cleveland Williams (WKO3) What a puncher he was — a Light-Heavy that could bomb out the big boys. He was a bit chinny however! Curtis 'Hatchetman' Sheppard is another from that era — he once knocked out Joey Maxim in one round. A real mean dude!

John, funny thing, I was thinking earlier today about other fighters who were good (in the Roy Williams category), but never quite got over the hump. One of the guys I thought of was Larry Middleton, and just a few seconds ago reviewing old posts I see his name in one of your earlier posts. Middleton was another fighter who had trouble getting fights, usually he had to take them on short notice or he was put in against guys over his head. I only saw him fight once and he lost to Dwayne Bobbick. I am sure Middleton was either, A. at the end of his career, or B. he had 'handcuffs' on. What I remember reading about Middleton years ago was that he was a good boxer, not much of a puncher. I was alway feel for fighters like him. I wonder if 30 years later Middleton wonders about, "what might have been." if got a couple of breaks along the way. That's what saddens me when I think about Jimmy Young, he got the break and let it slip away (I still like him just the same). That's why I treasure a Marciano, or a Frazier. They had talent sure, but maybe even more importantly they had the drive and determination. They had to sacrifice and pay the price, and God Bless them they did.

3/22/03 02:12:45 PM|Gerry Schultz|Ohio||jgschultz11@msn.com||||10|I agree that Jimmy Ellis was a very good, underrated heavy, who gave Joe Frazier a good fight. Even healthy and ready, Jerry Q would have had to work very hard to beat him, though I think he would have. Rock and Joe to me personify truly courageous fighters who overcame clear disadvantages with heart and power to be remarkable champions. Archie Moore is another to be considered in this light. Previous posts mention 'breaks' going against good fighters, How about how long Ken Norton, who did not get to really contend until his 6th year despite a great record? I think even Muhammed Ali realized that without a real public persona to draw the public, he too would be on the outside looking in. Joe F. was very aware that if he ever lost prior to his fight with Ali, he might be dropped by his management, pretty motivational stuff I think. Meanwhile some guys like Jerry had the red carpet for much of their career right from the start. Jimmy Young did throw it away. I think an even better guy who blew it that way was Greg Page. Thanks. P.S. I don't think Jerry's accomplishment in '65 at the Golden Gloves is yet given it's proper due. All KOs, wow! Almost like a Hollywood movie.

3/22/03 04:41:22 PM|Keith White|Seattle, WA||QUARRYJKW74@AOL.COM||||10|Could Jerry Quarry have beaten ANYBODY in the history of heavyweight boxing the night he beat undefeated Ron Lyle in Madison Square Garden???? Was this the "perfect shape and in tune Jerry" this particular night?

3/22/03 06:21:13 PM|Evren|London||@||||10|No

3/22/03 07:55:53 PM|Forest Ward|South Carolina||joekevin@cs.com||||10|Gerry, you are right about Greg Page what a waste of talent. Page had more talent in his thumb nail than most Hall of Fame Fighters have in a life time. The last time I saw him fight was in Nov. or Dec of 1976. Ten american heavyweights were matched against 10 russian heavyweights, at Madison Square Garden. At the time Page was unknown (at least to me anyway). He was 17 or 18 weighed approx. 212 and had a perfect build. He got knocked down in the fight, got up and lost a decision. I thought Page won the fight, but more importantly I thought I was looking at "Greatness." Page showed so much in that fight, speed of foot, quick hands a good jab, good right hand... But for some reason he never applied himself. Strangely even fighting at half speed Page had some sucess in the pro's. Tony Tubbs also fought that night and I was impressed with him too (although no where near the degree Page impressed me). He had a "soft body," but he was quick of hand and foot too.  A lot of those young heavyweights in the late 70's and early 80's, Page, Tubb, Dokes... They seemed to want to emulate Muhammad Ali. The Ali of the middle to late 70's, who many times would not train seriously for a fight. And as a result appeared fat and almost lazy on occasion. Instead, they should have emulated the Clay/Ali of thr 60's and early 70's, who even when he fought an inferior foe still came into the ring in top shape. Witherspoon, Page and those other guys behaved as if they were on "scholarships." The fans owed them a living. That is why even though there are a lot of things I didn't like about Ray Leonard, I always admired him as a fighter. He was a gladiator. He was willing to be knocked down, cut ... whatever but he would still give a 100% and fight to the end. I feel thayt way about Oscar Del A Hoya too.Please I hope no one misunderstands me, I feel for Greg Page in his present condition, and I could go on about what I think needs to be done with boxing. But I've already done that enough on this site.

3/24/03 07:14:37 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||||10|JIMMY DORSEY: No,
I do not know the full circumstances regarding the death of Manual Ramos, except that it was due to "natural causes". He died at least a year ago, maybe more. Cleve Williams was struck by a car and killed in Texas at least two years ago also. On Kirkman-Bonavena. Oscar probably would have taken him out in about four rounds. Kirkman has a very smart manager in Jack Hurley. To this day, I don't know why Hurley agreed to a Foreman fight so early in Boone's career. He never recovered from that humiliation. Kirkman was an excellent club fighter who was always in good shape and could punch a bit. He also resembled Dempsey and Schemling in looks. I understand he is in perfect health and has done well since hanging up the gloves. He said the only man he fought and did not like personally was Norton.

Just a quick note to let everyone know about the revised clip of Frazier-Quarry I on the home page, as well as in the Video Scrapbook. The new clip includes the ring introductions as well as an uncut version of Round 1. The video can be viewed, depending on your connection speed, at 56k dialup or DSL quality. I did my best to improve the picture. The original was very dark and there was some generation loss, but the overall quality is very good considering it was taped off broadcast in 1969. Enjoy the fight. --Carl Hey Forest, thanks for the great picture! That was thoughtful of you, and your right, I really did enjoy adding it to my collection. I see you were at the Blue Horizon in Philly during the late 60's and early 70's. I was there the night EUGENE (CYLONE) Hart and Joey Archer went out of the ring together and landed on a table. The place was filled with cigar smoke, and no one sat in their seats. I loved that place! I only live about 15 Min. away on the Jersey side of the Ben Franklin bridge. Did you ever see any fights on closed circuit at the Cherry Hill Arena? I saw Jerry knock out Ernie Shavers their. Do you remember Boogaloo Watts? Marvin Franklin, Dwight (the camden buzzsaw) Braxton? They were all highly popular fighters in Philly and Camden at that time. Gypsy Joe Harris, a welterweight who had only one eye, and trained on Scotch and milk! He got all the way to a title fight with Emile Griffith, which he lost. It was only afterwards the boxing commission discovered he had only one eye! He had the strangest moves and style I've ever seen. He reminded me of Joe Walcott, with that ability to change direction and angle of attack on a dime.

Does anyone remember the great weekly newsletter Malcolm "Flash" Gordon used to put out in the 80's? I believe Flash still lives in Sunnyside, Queens.

I remember Flash Gordons deal. He was an outspoken, very knowledgeable boxing writer. He always had time to support the little guys that were trying to promote and keep boxing alive. I subscribed to the TBP. Wish he was still putting it out. When I boxed Tony Danza in New York he told me to watch his right hand. I should have taken his advice. Flash was an o.k. dude. Knowing him he's probably reading this. Hi Flasher!!!

Mr. Dorsey, I hope I am remembering right. I know Carter was favored and Jerry SMACKEDHIM RIGHT OFF THE BAT AND I HAVE NEVER FORGOTTENIT. I WAS REAL CLOSE RINGSIDE AND MR. QUARRY JUST DRILLED HIM BIG TIME|

The International Boxing Hall of Fame recently inducted George Foreman, who admits to having ducked Jerry intentionally. Gerry Cooney was at the Golf Tournament and Ernie Shavers was in the Parade of Champions. Patterson is in the hall. Still, sadly, Jerry is not. Their website is www.IBHOF.com. Their induction criteria appears to be in a state of flux, and possibly now is the correct time to petition for Jerry's entry. He did more for boxing than possibly, what seems like just a handful of people, when considering his pugilistic dementia was a catalyst that spawned federal legislation that will be his legacy for generations to come. |

Why would George Foreman avoid Jerry Quarry when he took on Joe Frazier, Ken Norton and Muhammad Ali? All of whom beat Jerry handily. I love Jerry and I feel the same way about George. Foreman has a habit of putting himself down to enlarge the standing of former opponents.|

Evren, we have discussed this subject before but here goes again. George was in the audience the night Jerry destroyed Earnie Shavers and he told Jerry right after the fight, "you just blew your title shot." The way I understand it, George sounded like he was joking but there was clearly some truth to his statement as he never fought Jerry. Jerry had the ability, because of his counter punching style and his ability to take a punch, to handle big strong punchers. Jerry had knocked out Shavers quickly, had taken some very hard shots from Ron Lyle but he still outboxed Lyle for a decision victory, and Jerry had taken every thing Mac Foster had to give and came back to knock Foster out. Could Jerry had done the same thing to Foreman? I don't know but he had a better chance of beating Foreman, because of Jerry's style, than either Norton or Frazier because Jerry could fight more effectively backing up than either of these two fighters, who both were good at moving into their opponents, which played right into Foreman's strength. Another factor was money as Foreman went where the bigger money was by taking on Ali instead of Jerry. Foreman may have thought that fighting Jerry could at least risk somewhat his chance later of making more money against Ali.

I agree 100% that Jerry should have gotten a title shot after Shavers and Lyle. I disagree however when people say he would have beaten Foreman. Lyle was much slower than Foreman and Shaver's jaw did not match his power. If you look at the tape of Quarry-Norton carefully you will see that Norton did not just outbox Jerry, he out slugged him too. And Norton was about 1/2 the puncher George was. I think Bonavena and Jerry would have been a much more competitive fight. I shudder to think what George's jab would have done to the skin around Jerry's eyes. Jerry was a very, very good one, George was a great one. And I respect them both tremendously.

Foreman was really easy to hit. Most of his opponents, not all would back or stay away from him, with good reason. However, somebody like Quarry who could really punch hard may have had a chance against George. Remember the old Foreman was not in that good a shape when Quarry was in his prime. The most recent George would have been harder to beat. I'll just say this. The day Foreman took on three at one time was pathetic. But that represented his conditioning during that era. He should be glad one of them wasn't Quarry.

The problem with the comparison between Foreman and Quarry is that Jerry's fans have a habit of extrapolating three fights in Jerry's entire career (Lyle, Shavers, and Foster) and using them as the performance norm and thus the comparison point. And they naturally compare them to Foreman's weakest showings such as his "Foreman vs. Five Men" stunt or the Young fight. This would be the same as comparing the Jerry of the Norton fight or the Middleton fight (Jerry won by a quarter of a point) to the Foreman of the Norton fight. A fair, unbiased comparison doesn't work that way. You look at both men's complete records, the low points as well as the highpoints. A guess using the highpoint vs. highpoint would be the Quarry of the Lyle fight vs. the Foreman of either Frazier fight or the Norton fight. Common opponents such as Frazier, Chuvalo, Norton, Lyle, and Ali should also be considered. But in summary, it is misleading to compare Jerry at his best to George as his worst. Has anyone ever asked Gil Clancy his opinion? He trained them both. Someone should interview Gil and get his input.

I once read that Clancy said that Quarry was a harder puncher! Maybe George should have given him a clump to prove him wrong. John, you speak an awful lot of sense! I do not understand the comment that Foreman wasn't in good shape when Jerry was in his prime - I think that is utter rubbish. A great one vs a good one.

I respect your opinions a lot but I have to point out that you were using the reasoning that because Frazier, Ali, and Norton beat Jerry, why would Foreman be concerned about fighting Jerry. The reason is styles and that is the reason I use for Jerry having a better chance (remember, I said I don't know if Jerry could have handled Foreman) against Foreman. I use the Lyle, Shavers, and Foster fights because of their similar styles to Foreman's style. John, you make a point that Norton not only out boxed Jerry but he also out punched Jerry. The Jerry that fought Norton was well past his best and he took the Norton fight on only three weeks notice because he needed the money, while Norton was near his prime. Even so, for the first three rounds he was very competitive and he punched himself out trying to knock Norton out in the third round after he was badly cut. That is still one of the best heavyweight rounds I have ever seen! I see Jerry and Norton to be a "pick em" fight, hard to pick a winner, prime against prime.

No disrespect intended on Jerry. I want to make that absolutely clear.

I disagree with you on this one. I can see the logic of your thinking. Jerry was an "anything can happen" type of fighter and that's one reason why we all liked him so much.

I SURE FEEL JERRY SHOULD HAVE GOT THE CHANCE, LIKE THE NIGHT OF 8/31/73 FOREMAN-ROMAN QUARRY-WOODY. THE SHAPE BOTH WERE IN THAT NIGHT WOULD HAVE SETTLED EVERYTHING. WIN OR LOSE, AND JERRY WOULD HAVE DEFINETLY BEEN THEY UNDERDOG, I WOULD HAVE LIKED TO HAVE SEEN HIM IN THERE WITH GEORGE AND HIS STYLE, THEN THEY ILL-ADEVD BATTERING HE TOOK FROM JOE FRAZIER IN 74'.
Evren and John,

Notice I said I wasn't sure if Jerry could handle Foreman but he would have a better chance of beating him than Frazier or Norton because styles make fights. Foreman may have stopped Jerry in the mid rounds, or maybe on cuts, but Jerry probably would have been standing fighting his heart out. He would not have been bombed out in one or two rounds and if he got past the sixth round, who knows? John, you didn't comment on the fact that Norton caught Jerry very late in Jerry's career and he clearly wasn't the fighter he was even two years before this. I feel it would be hard to pick a winner between Jerry and Norton, prime agasing prime. How do think this fight would have gone?

John, you didn't comment on the fact that Norton caught Jerry very late in Jerry's career and he clearly wasn't the fighter he was even two years before this. I feel it would be hard to pick a winner between Jerry and Norton, prime agasing prime. How do think this fight would have gone?

Evren: Because I'm a "STOOGE", Tat will explain my lack of "the" opposed to the "THEY". I'm stuck in the "FEARLESS LEADERS CLUB". Everyone that knows sports, have said I look like Lee Mazzilli (Yankees first base coach). That worked great with the girls, when I was younger, but once a "stooge". Always a "stooge".

TO MAX HORDE: Yes, Max, it was billed as Foreman vs. Fivemen -- I believe it took place in Toronto. The only decent fighter on the list was Kirkman who wanted a second chance at Foreman. Kirkman had been demolished in two rounds years earlier. He was the only one who lasted the full three rounds, I believe.

Evren: Because I'm a "STOOGE", Tat will explain my lack of "the" opposed to the "THEY". I'm stuck in the "FEARLESS LEADERS CLUB". Everyone that knows sports, have said I look like Lee Mazzilli (Yankees first base coach). That worked great with the girls, when I was younger, but once a "stooge". Always a "stooge".

Alonzo Johnson really made JQ MAD at the first Ali weigh in, saying Ali might have them carry Jerry out on a slab. I guess Ali figured he needed the backup. Jerry lit both their ears up with some expletives. Cannot believe I guessed it right Kent (the CURLY Q. LINK OF OUR FEARLESS LEADERS CLUB). ALONZO if I remember correctly, was a last minute replacement for another fighter, also from a very reliable source, JQ NEARLY RUINED JERRY JUDGE SPARRING, also judge was allegedly a great street fighter from PHILLY. TAKE CARE!

As I remember this event, Foreman was having something of a mental breakdown. He was trying to put on to the media that he was still the unbeatable monster, only it wasn't working. Even Cosell said there was something wrong with George. Foreman was getting tired toward the end, and Charlie Polite proudly went the full three rounds. Interesting that Jimmy mentioned that Jerry Judge was a respected street fighter. It makes sense now, as he had that look and attitude. Even though George clobbered him, I do remember Judge slamming Foreman with a hell of a right. What boxing needs is a night of Tyson vs The Vegas Five. Considering how often he fights and how long the bouts tend to go, we'd get about three years worth of Tyson for one price.

4/8/03 03:18:33 PM|Steve|N.J.|dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Jimmy Dorsey, did you get that great information on the Ali-Jerry Quarry weigh in for their first fight from an old boxing magazine or someone who was there? If from a boxing magazine, please let me know what mag., what year and what issue. I get a kick out of this kind of stuff. I think that's hilarious about Jerry "lighting Ali up", with a few well chosen expletives. I've never heard of Jerry Judge being a badass street fighter from Philly. That's interesting and I will have fun asking my friends and people from around Philly about him. John Gerard, I have read that Gil Clancy said "Jerry was the most talented heavyweight I've trained" Clancy also said that Jerry didn't take corner advice during a fight, and seemed to feel a need to beat an opponent at his strength. However, I agree that common opponent comparisons are not a good way to predict the outcome of any Jerry Quarry fight. I think Jerry's chaotic personal life made a distinct effect on his inconsistent performances in the ring. However, I still believe he would have had a better chance against Forman than Norton, Lyle, or Frazier did! As you say, styles make fights. Jerry's boxer, counter puncher, knockout artist style was somewhat unique during his era. When he was at the top of his game, this rare combination of skills made him hard to defeat.

4/8/03 03:36:09 PM|Steve|N.J.|dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Hey Jimmy Dorsey, if Kent is "Curley" in the "Fearless Leaders Club" does that mean he has a round head and no hair? Which stooge are you?

4/8/03 06:30:52 PM|Steve|N.J.|dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Hey Jimmy Dorsey, if Kent is "Curley" in the "Fearless Leaders Club" does that mean he has a round head and no hair? Which stooge are you? I DO have a best friend who is dead-on Larry. I'd have to sum it up as being maybe a special-guest-villian-stooge. There were alotta those, I think I might have heard of Jerry Judge STREET CAREER ON THIS POST. And I will get that one with Quarry/Ali I with Alonzo Johnson tomorrow, I believe from the New York Times, I'm giving myself a double-eye poke and a pie in the face, Just for Lee Mazzilli's Pirates career, where he was paid a $ million for every Home Run, But Steve he had to make it up with the ladies, Take Care!

4/8/03 07:18:50 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca|oriononside@aol.com|||10|The original stooges here were, me, Jimmy Dorsey, and Mr. Jimmy (aka James Quarry). Mr. Jimmy was Moe because he was the head honcho around here and I if am Curley, then I guess Jimmy D is Larry by default. Who would be Shemp then? No Steve I don't have a bald head in fact, I am happy to say I have a full head of dark brown, almost black hair at the age of 44 years old and it is starting to get long. Jimmy D, just think, if there was no Corletti fight, then we wouldn't have our stooges club, remember? Oh by the way, if I didn't ever concede you were right about it being at the forum, I am doing so now.

Regarding Henry Cooper: cb>Cooper made it a lifelong effort to avoid having to defend his British Commonwealth Championship against Canadian George Chuvalo. He ducked the guy for almost a decade and got away with it. Chuvalo agree to fight him in London and still got the no go.

Kent: ITS TOO BAD I got stuck with larry,for I have a buddy in DELANO CALIFORNIA,WHOM is a LARRY FINE replica,(are you sure I can'T BE JOHNSON?!).My friends have called me MAZZ SINCE 1982,too BAD LEE HIT HIS HOMERS,off the field!Howard Cosell is no longer a stooge, if we even ever made him one,Been watching some great old heavyweight tapes,HE classified LYLE AS not a great fighter,well one things for sure he had a champions heart,said losing to QUARRY WAS HARD TO DO,IF YOU WEREN'T HIS BABY (ALI) OR Joe Namath,you just did'n rate with HOWIE.

Kent: Mr. Jimmy did comment on the stooge entries but not on the letters page. I talked to him about it during one of my phone conversations with him. He got a laugh out of it.

Max, it is not fair that someone like Bob Foster never had a problem making weight, even apparently when he would drink beer. He had a hard time packing on ten extra pounds to try and compete against heavies. I on the other hand having dabbled in boxing when I was younger weighed around the light heavyweight limit in my late teens and would have been about cruiserweight in my early twenties but am now a full blown heavyweight and then some. If I would have ever had to make weight, once I matured, I would have had to watch every calorie no matter how hard I trained. I bet Foster never had to worry about what he ate either.
I read a Ken Norton interview where he stated that Ali was an incredibly strong man in their fights. I don't think fight fans give Ali enough credit in that department. He may not have been a one punch knockout artist. He did, however, manage to grab most of his opponents behind the neck, and pull their head down to waist level. He also managed to tko George Forman and Joe Frazier. The only guys he couldn't seem to hurt at will were Ken Norton and George Chuvalo.

George had his eye socket smashed by Frazier. He required surgery for them to repair the cheekbone and eye socket. George said it was the most painful thing ever. Hey! Less of the bad mouthing of Henry Cooper! He wasn't a bad fighter!

George Chuvalo probably compares to Ali for having the best chin in heavyweight history. Over 90 fights and not knocked down once is an incredible achievement when you consider the calibre of fighters he faced from Ali, Foreman, Frazier and Quarry to Patterson, Folley, Williams, Ellis, Bonavena etc. He had incredible reserve and strength in the ring and was a good fighter. His reaction to events outside of the ring in his personal life make the man all the more extraordinary. A good fighter and an excellent man, boxing will rarely see his like again. As for Henry Cooper, he really only had one notable win in his career and that was an excellent victory over a prime Zoro Folley. Over than that he was easily beaten by the other top fighters he faced, but continued to dominate the European circuit for over 10 years. Joe Bugner was a better fighter with a lot of durability. In a different era Cooper could have made a much bigger impression with that awesome left hook, the best I've seen apart from Tyson and Frazier, a very decent weapon, as a certain Ali found out.

Gang: I definitely would have to bet on Chuvalo for sure. Cooper was a good fighter, and a great gentleman, whom, was the victim of a "bad" decision vs Bugner, but man I'd have to say bet the house on GEORGE CHUVALO! Just witnessed the entire Norton-Quarry bout, what a war!! Jerry's last great bout. if he had quit for sure then, and stayed with the CBS sports spectacular thing, and not sparred with Bobby (AND TRY TO KILL EACH OTHER EVERYDAY). WE'd still have the articulate Irishman around, but there's no quit in a Quarry, TAKE CARE!

Hey, Jimmy Dorsey, SORRY FEARLESS LEADER LARRY, but I don't think Jerry had anything left to prove by the time he was exploited by Norton. I think Norton waited till he knew Quarry was thoroughly used up as a fighter before he dared to fight him. Jerry Quarry standing toe to toe with Frazier in their second fight was his greatest accomplishment. On that day, no one else but Quarry would have lasted as long. Not even Ali!! Joe Frazier would have KO'D Ali on that night! |

You have mentioned that Jerry sparred with brother Bobby during Bobby's career, well past the time when Jerry should have been doing any kind of heavy sparring. I am going to try and remember to ask Bobby about their sparring sessions the next time I talk to him. I would like to think that the sessions were not that intense but we all know Jerry's competitive spirit and I can see how he would not want "little brother," though not so little by that time, to get the better of him. I can also see how Jerry would have fought hard so that his brother would become a better fighter. Boxers are by nature very competitive people. |

Hi All! Just thought I'd let you know Wednesday is our Father's Birthday, he would have been only 59, what a youngster. We love you Dad, and miss you very much. |

Irish Jerry Quarry was the BEST it ever was. They were all too scared to get in the ring with the king.Happy Birthday Jerry!! |

I am a former boxer who fought out of the Tomez A.C. in Youngstown, Ohio in the early sixties. I trained and boxed in the Golden Gloves with Ted Gullick, who was a great guy. I read on your site that a tragedy had befallen him , If anyone could tell me what happened to my old friend I would appreciate it. I always admired Jerry Quarry I thought he was the best counterpuncher I ever saw |

In the recent issue of Ring magazine, George Foreman talks about the time he fought the five opponents. In the interview, he says he realized he may have taken on more than he was ready for when Alonzo Johnson hit him with a body shot. He also says that Boone Kirkman also hit him with a hard body shot and he felt some ribs crack. Something I didn't know about the event that Foreman mentions is that Mac Foster was supposed to participate but backed out at the last moment. Foreman says he was lucky Foster wasn't part of the event. Foreman had picked fighters who were friends of his and he thought of it as just what it was supposed to be, an exhibition, but these guys took it seriously and they all came to fight. |

Just wanted to wish you all a very happy Easter... |

| 4/12/03 04:01:45 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/14/03 10:09:25 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/14/03 07:34:47 AM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | sabrinaquarry-porter@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/16/03 06:29:30 AM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | sabrinaquarry-porter@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/16/03 07:15:41 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/16/03 07:54:46 AM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | sabrinaquarry-porter@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/16/03 09:57:33 PM | Danny Layton | Boones Mill, Va | Djangoman@excite.com | 10 |
| 4/18/03 10:51:42 PM | Harley Shoaff | Lancaster, Pa | boxer0213@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/19/03 07:15:48 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononiside@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/20/03 07:56:37 AM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | sabrinaquarry-porter@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/20/03 08:47:54 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/24/03 08:49:01 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 |
| 4/24/03 11:03:57 AM | Mark Sargeant | UK | lpu00mts@reading.ac.uk | 10 |
| 4/18/03 10:51:42 PM | Harley Shoaff | Lancaster, Pa | boxer0213@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/16/03 07:15:41 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/16/03 07:54:46 AM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | sabrinaquarry-porter@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/16/03 09:57:33 PM | Danny Layton | Boones Mill, Va | Djangoman@excite.com | 10 |
| 4/18/03 10:51:42 PM | Harley Shoaff | Lancaster, Pa | boxer0213@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/19/03 07:15:48 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononiside@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/20/03 07:56:37 AM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | sabrinaquarry-porter@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/20/03 08:47:54 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 |
| 4/24/03 08:49:01 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 |
| 4/24/03 11:03:57 AM | Mark Sargeant | UK | lpu00mts@reading.ac.uk | 10 |
someone who rates Joe Bugner! In my view Bugner was the best British fighter between Farr and Lewis, better than Cooper. He had size, skill and a very durable chin, going the distance with Ali twice, Frazier and Lyle (that's durability!), as well as beating a number of good fighters including Ellis, Bonavena, Mac Foster and Cooper (did he beat Mathis as well). Certainly would hold a version of the world title today, but rather ruined his reputation by continuing with his career for so long. As for a fight with Quarry, I think that Jerry would have the edge. Superior skill, particularly when he's on fire, would give him a unanimous but close points victory-Bugner would certainly take a few rounds and with his great chin and ability to take Frazier's shots I don't think Jerry could have knocked him out. Sad to think that this fight never came off.|

4/24/03 02:30:33 PM|Carl Weingarten|TJQF||TJQF|||10|Mark - Funny, I was looking at Bugner's record the other day and amazed to see him fighting as late as 1999. He's got to be the last great holdout from the era. As far as Bugner vs Jerry, they actually did meet in the ring. James Quarry told me how he went with Jerry to England for his fight with Larry Middleton. Once the Quarry's were in London, they hooked up with Bugner and trained at a gym there. Joe and Jerry sparred and worked out together. James said the meeting was very friendly, with Jerry giving Joe some lessons on fighting off the ropes. You can see the Jerry-like counterpunching tactics Bugner uses in the Bugner-Frazier fight. Anyway, for whatever it's worth, James made a point to tell me that during sparring, "Jerry had the edge."

4/24/03 08:17:52 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|MARK: I have also heard of Jerry's superior sparring over Joe Bugner, although Joe really improved by 1975. Jerry's sheer aggressive style, made him a better fighter than Bugner, plus experience, Bugner also, never fought Bonavena (and my money would have been on Oscar) or Mathis.

4/25/03 12:11:49 AM|Kert Appel|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Bobby Quarry's event that was supposed to take place late last year, "battle of the bouncers and tribute to Jerry Quarry," featuring a biographical film narrated by Burt Randolph Sugar that chronicles Jerry's life and career, is going to take place Saturday, May 17, at the Dome in Bakersfield, Ca, formally known as Strongbow Stadium. More information will be posted in weeks leading up to the event.

4/25/03 12:17:28 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|One more thing, Carl and Mark. I remember Mr. Jimmy saying that not only did Jerry have an edge over Bugner in their sparring sessions, he was dominate over Bugner. I also remember reading where Gil Clancy said Jerry was able to have an advantage in sparring over contenders like Jimmy Young and that Jerry was the best gym fighter he ever saw.

4/25/03 06:21:25 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|I also remember Bugner freely admitting that Liston handled him easily in sparring as did Frazier. But this was very early in his career and he was somewhat of a late bloomer. They guy was good. Very underrated.

4/25/03 01:29:51 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|TALK ABOUT BUGNER BEING UNDERRATED, how about RON LYLE?! I've never seen anyone including "BIG GEORGE" HURT Lyle, the way Ernie Shavers did, yet Lyle came back to Ko SHAVERS, He also beat Bugner, the reason Bugner could survive Ali, and Frazier, was his 6'4" size and reach, and lack of aggression, he wouldn't have stayed up under the fusilage, Frazier dished out to Q! He just didn't get hit, his unaggressive 15-round performance vs Ali, was one of the worst in history at KULA LUMPER, people talk about Quarry's no-hitter vs Ali in Vegas, should watch Bugner's title showing vs Muhammad, Don't get me wrong BUGNER was okay, Lack of a major league punch also hindered him, and say if he ever BEAT QUARRY, BONAVENA OR MATHIS, would have been Britains best up to LEWIS, TAKE CARE.
Yes, Lyle was very good. He was almost muscle bound and pretty old in years when he began his career, but he was one very rough guy. As the joke went "Ron has a Masters Degree in Violence". He also defeated Bonavena via decision I recall and I was told Norton refused to fight him.

Hi just wanted to say am enjoying the site, jerry quarry has always been one of my favorites, the best white heavyweight since marciano and if a crusierweight division had existed in the early 70's jerry would have been a champion no doubt. I also workout and spar even though I have mild cerebral palsy, i have loved boxing ever i was little (i'm now 32). One last thing: fighters must know when to quit, its so easy to say i know but if JQ had retired in '75 or 77' he would be still be with us today.

take care, Gary Chapman

Yes, Ron Lyle was very good. I thought Lyle won at least one of the fights with Jimmy Young. I believe it was the first one where he pounded on Young's sides with hard body shots all through the fight only to lose a decision on the judges scorecards. Lyle's body attack brought out red welts on Young's sides. Lyle, in both bouts, landed the harder punches but I guess the judges were more impressed with Young's quantity over Lyle's quality of punches. I read an interview with Lyle where he said he believes he won both fights against Young.

Lyle was an excellent fighter who made the era of the 70s so good. If had been a professional in his early 20s he could have been up in the Liston, Frazier and Foreman class rather than the one just below with Quarry, Young and Shavers. Beat Shavers in a fantastic performance, particularly after being floored, and beat very good fighters like Ellis, Bonavena, Bugner and Mathis to improve his CV further. Fairly unlucky in his defeats to Young (who I thought is another fighter very underated, could have won Ali and Norton fights) and boxed superbly against Ali before being stopped by some unique magic, and fought in the most brutal fight with Foreman where bravery and guts were called for. A fight with Norton and Holmes would have been desperately close-all 3 were great fighters. The fact that Quarry beat Lyle most convincingly out of a list including Ali, Foreman and the guys previously mentioned is perhaps the greatest compliment I can give to Jerry- a simply magnificent performance.

Where can I get a copy of the 1974 fight of George Foreman VS Joe "King" Roman'? I'd love to see that fight again, even though it was a very short one? Thanks.....L Ramos

In continuing to represent the legislative interests of The Jerry Quarry Foundation and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, I am lobbying for the passage of Senate Bill 275. If this goes through Congress, boxing will finally have a badly needed national commission to protect the fighters and the fans. Email or call Democratic Senator Harry Reid of Nevada and state your support for this legislation, as his interest is very vital in terms of getting this bill approved. Thanks !!

Does anyone remember NYC heavyweight? The Garden loved they guy but Scott Ledeaux exposed the guy once and for all. I think Sid Martin trained him, not sure. Also, little known fact: Charlie Goldman was in Bonavana's corner in his very early fights.

The Foreman-Roman fight was included on a videotape called Great Fights of the Seventies, back when VHS was just getting underway. It would be hard to find now, but that tape also included Foreman's fights with Frazier, Norton, Chuvalo and Peralta. Also included were highlights from Ali's fights with Norton (number 2), Bob Foster, Quarry (number 1) and Bonavena. I think the only non-heavyweight fight on the tape was Duran-Buchanan.

Kent: and fellow stooges (of the fearless leaders club). I'VE FINALLY DID IT, Jerry Quarry finished 4th in the 1974 "BATTLE OF THE SUPERSTARS COMPETETION" he also received more points(28)that year(better than any other boxer). 1)O. J. SIMPSON 47-POINTS 2)DICK ANDERSON 42-POINTS 3)FRANCO HARRIS 37-POINTS 4)JERRY QUARRY 28-POINTS 5)ROGER STAUBACH 21-POINTS
6)CARL ELLER 19-POINTS 7) JODY SHECTER 17-POINTS 8)BILL TOOMEY(DECATHLON) 16-POINTS 9)CRAIG BREELOVE 6-POINTS 10)EMERSON FITTIPALDI 4-POINTS 11)BOBBY ALLISON 2-POINTS 12)BOB FOSTER 1-POINT. too bad we can only get the 1975 version were JQ finished 11th, He really made that 74'year exciting, he was listed the #2 contender for the heavyweight title. He sure did great, MR. JIMMY (MOE) SAID JERRY WOULD HAVE WON IT OUTRIGHT HAD THEY HAD THE COMPETETION IN 1969.

Mr. JIMMY (MOE) said Jerry Quarry would have won it outright had they had the competition in 1969.

There was an excellent article the other day in the English Daily Telegraph on Jimmy Ellis.
It's 35 years since he won the title and there was a long and very worthwhile dedication to him. Great to see contributions from journalists on boxers from the 60s and 70s and I agree with the article's view that Jimmy would be champion today if Lewis wasn't around. He beat Quarry, Patterson, Bonavena and Chuvalo, and went toe to toe with Ali, Frazier, Shavers, Lyle and Bugner. Considering that he was a natural middleweight his achievements, good as they are, are exemplified. A very fine fighter with speed, skill and no little guts—the strength in depth really made this era. Sadly his eyesight is very poor but still speaks to Ali once a week. Apparently the Frazier camp were wary of a rematch because Jimmy was 'so damn unpredictable' whilst even the Foreman camp were said to nervous of taking on someone 'so quick and skillful'. Not the greatest by any means, but nice contributions to a great fighter and a good man.

Yes, Ellis was a pretty good fighter. He really surprised me when he floored Bonavena twice. His career really ended for all intents and purposes when Shavers got rid of him in one round. He was a smart, tricky, boxer with a good sneaky right hand. I do think think however that Patterson was robbed against him in Sweeden. I am sorry to hear he has eye problems and I wish him well.

I saw an interview with Ellis where he said he didn't know he had been knocked down by Frazier twice until he saw the replay. He also said he still doesn't remember the second knockdown. I don't think Jimmy would figure in today's heavy picture but as a cruisierweight not many would give him a tough fight. Pedro Soto? He fought Mike Q twice, lost an 8 rounder and won a 10 rounder in 76' or 77'.
Another slick, fast boxer I saw him fight on TV a couple of times and thought he was a great Lt. heavy prospect. As a heavy he fought at around 185 or 190.
I don't know what happened to him. anybody have info on him?

I agree with your evaluation of Ellis. Met him in Daytona Bch, back in the day. What gentleman and a solid fighter. Sometimes it's not the pure power of the punch but the quickness of delivery that causes a lot of knockdowns as was with Bonavena. Great assessment of a true "champion".

I would like to write a Quarry book. Could you help? I would like to write Jerry's true story with all its glory and pain. I am a careful and compassionate guy--a Methodist minister with one book under my belt.
Please advise.

I would like to write a Quarry book. Could you help? I would like to write Jerry's true story with all it's glory and pain. I am a careful and compassionate guy--a Methodist minister with one book under my belt.
Please advise. |

[5/8/03 03:25:39 PM] Steve [N.J.] | dmmsrm@comcast.net | 10
Hey Jimmy Dorsey, I still want to have a conversation with you about Jerry's fight with Ken Norton. I agree with you it was a fantastic performance by Jerry. I am still bothered, to this day, by the fact that this fight took place so late in Jerry's career. Ken Norton was considered one of the four fighters who dominated the 70's era, and yet he didn't fight Frazier, and didn't fight Quarry until Jerry was a shot fighter!

[5/8/03 04:46:01 PM] Jimmy Dorsey [VENTURA CALIFORNIA] | ronnyrains@yahoo.com | 10
Hi Steve (the "SHEMP!" OF OUR NEW MILLINIUM). Yes I've seen that Quarry-Norton bout, a week after it happened on the CBS sports spectacular, Ali actually commentated it, I gave JERRY the 2nd, 3rd rounds. Someone said on this post a while back, that QUARRY KO'D NORTON sparring in 1970. It was another gutsy, action packed performance. Where just about any other fighter born, would have thrown in the towel, both eyes in such bad condition and one closed, Norton actually accidentally butted Jerry at the start of the second round when they touched gloves of all things (I wonder if it could have helped close his eye?). AND like CURLY Q. LINK SAID (KENT). Jerry should have never took the bout on such short notice. $185,000 and a potential title bout (is hard to say no to). WBA STARTLED ME WHEN THEY HAD NORTON #8 AND QUARRY #10 CONTENDERS AFTER THE BOUT!! THE RING MAGAZINE HAD KENNY WHERE HE SHOULD HAVE BEEN #3. THEY HAD HENRY CLARK, AND BROKEN HANDED BONAVENA (WHOM QUARRY REPLACED VS NORTON). RATED OVER BOTH!!!

[5/8/03 07:08:06 PM] Gerry Schultz [Cleveland, Ohio] | jgschultz@msn.com | 10
Just got back from Niagara Falls, was married 5/04, and decided to check my favorite boxing website. Interesting that some of the classic discussions are still being passed around. I remember getting a little singed by Evren the last time I got in on the prospects of Foreman-Quarry (just kidding, Evren) I agree Jerry, by style, would have performed better than Frazier or Norton vs. Big George. But JQ, who gave Frazier two great battles but came up short, would fall to Foreman as well after taking a few rounds from him. Why? They were 25 pounds apart! Foreman did have a real phobia about Quarry and it had to do with Clay Hodges, an amateur fighter Foreman never defeated in three tries. Quarry was a lot like him, only better, and Jerry beat Hodges, so it's not just smoke. Jerry was a much better boxer than George, and George knew it. But Jerry would not have beaten him, just embarrassed him as he did Frazier, Norton, and Ali. Quarry-Norton will always be a good matchup, to me. Best vs. best I still give JQ the edge. They were the same age when they met, yet had completely different careers, with JQ well-used by then and Norton just coming on. People forget, many fighters lasted longer against the champs of the 70's than Jerry, but how many of them really backed up these guys and pounded on them like Jerry? How many took rounds from these guys besides Jerry? JQ's fights were wars, and he brought the best out of all these guys, except Ali, who had too many advantages for Jerry to seriously challenge. Well, it is just opinions, and that is what makes this site so "cool". As tough as JQ was, and he's one of the very toughest I ever saw, I give Chuvalo the edge on chin, though JQ would have clearly defeated George in their bizarre fight. OOPS, opened up another classic issue... P.S. I thought Henry Cooper was a very good fighter for the era also, he did gain Ali's respect, as did Mildenberger, Bonavena and Bugnar. Thanks.|

5/8/03 10:05:11 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com||||10|Thanks Steve for your compliments on my article. For those who don't know, the piece is about the poor service I got in a recent pay for view event, Jones verses Ruiz, when there were technical difficulties and the fights didn't come on until the third round of the main event, in progress. They charged me full price, my fault as I didn't call and complain that I should have gotten at least a partial refund because I ordered a service and they didn't, for whatever reason, provide the full service I ordered. CONGRATULATIONS TO GERRY SCHULTZ ON YOUR RECENT WEDDING!|

5/9/03 03:10:25 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@yahoo.com||||10|ONE THING, I know for sure, everyone Jerry fought (ALL THE BIG GUNS AND MORE) WHERE ALL IN GREAT CONDITION VS JQ. Although I agree on the good points Gerry brought up, I have to disagree on one. MR. SCHULZ, Jerry did bring out the best in Ali (both fights). even the bout in Vegas, Ali was in the same shape (217-LBS) AS he was for FOREMAN! QUARRY brought out the best in him, before they even climbed thru the ropes! Everyone was in great shape, when they took on MR. JERRY QUARRY, ANOTHER point, is I doubt if Bugner or Cooper, could have beaten Jerry at any point of his career from late 1966 to early 1975. Here I LOOK UP WHERE JERRY FINISHED 4TH VS NFL FOOTBALLERS, IN 1974 "SUPERSTARS" BEATING STAUBACH, AND CARL ELLER, (GUYS WE'VE BEEN TRYING TO FIND OUT FOR 4 YEARS!!). TAKE CARE!!

5/10/03 01:53:41 AM|George Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com||||10|For all of us who closely follow the comings and goings on of boxing, I feel that the sport may change in important ways during the next 12 months. The reasons for this opinion are as follows: 1) one of the most significant sanctioning bodies, the WBC, has declared bankruptcy; 2) it appears that Mike Tyson will win his $100 million lawsuit against Don King for a large sum of money; 3) an apparently serious attempt is being made to establish a union for boxers (Larry Holmes, among many others, strongly supports this); 4) Congress may approve Senate bill 275, legislation that, if passed and implemented, would establish a federal boxing commission; and 5) the New York State Athletic Commission may soon undergo major reform in terms of improving the quantity and quality of its matches. |

5/10/03 03:03:16 AM|Edward M|Cicero n y||mooseygoop@aol.com||||10|Glad I stumbled onto this site, it brings back many memories of 1 of my favorite fighters..I think my favorite memories of Jerry are the Thad Spencer fight (remember how cocky Spencer was before fight? All pumped up cause he knocked off tournament favorite E. Terrell) and when he knocked off Mac Foster...I always thought how brutal it must have been to fight Jerry because his left hook reminded me of a coiled spring ready to explode at any second and he was totally fearless. I know he had numerous injuries (broken back, broken hands, but I never remember him cancelling a fight) and I am sure he went into some fights less than 100%.I often wonder how he would have done against Gerry Cooney and Tommy Morrison?...My guess would be Cooney might have too much size on Jerry so Cooney would be slight favorite and Morrison's chin wouldn't have stood up against Jerry's jaw breaking power. |

5/10/03 10:58:45 AM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||||10|HI EDWARD: That was some interesting points, I would favor Morrison over Cooney vs JQ. Although JERRY will be favored ALLTIME HEAVYWEIGHT RATINGS OVER BOTH! How did our own MR. TYSON miss WITHERSPON, MERCER, MORRISON, FOREMAN, BOWE, And just about every other contender, that could punch in that time??|

5/10/03 01:03:24 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Hi Jimmy Dorsey, your
last post made me stop and think ;Mike Tyson did seem to miss an awful lot of interesting matchups.Even allowing for his three years in prison.Foreman and Bowe,Ray Mercer and ,yes,even Tommy Morrison were all still active fighters during Tyson's tenure.|

| 5/10/03 03:01:47 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | |||10 | To George Otto;Let me start by saying that I greatly respect you and your efforts to reform boxing.At the risk of sounding overly pessimistic I would like to respond to your five points. 1.Won't the corrupt officials of the W.B.C. ,now that they have fully plundered their organization, just reorganize ?? 2.Seems like Mike Tyson has once again been hypnotized by Don King.He's pulled out of his fight with Maskaeov.King apparently doesn't want him fighting on an undercard.Probably a pretty good idea , making wise. 3.I wonder if a boxer's union would be effective.Since the sport , by it's very nature, highly individualistic.After all,when fighters ply their trade,they are mortal enemies.What about all the other"tradesman"associated with the business?What about the managers,trainers,promoters,and "sparring partners"? 4.This is the one good idea I think would be effective.Especially if it resulted in the implemention of some actual fed. laws with some teeth to protect fighters.5. I'd really like to know more about the reform of the N.Y.State Athletic Commission.I don't know how effective the changes would be without the Senate bill #275 passing.How would they improve the quantity of matches?Would all these new matches be televised?How would they improve the quality if they can't control the manipulators like Don King and Bob Arum? People just paid $40.00 on P-P-V to watch DeLaHoya beat up Yori boy Campas!!|

| 5/10/03 05:18:35 PM | Kent Appel | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | |||10 | I would pick Jerry over Morrison and Cooney. Cooney had a disadvantage in the speed department and Morrison had a stamina problem and both didn't take a punch well. Jerry would use his speed advantage and move in and out counter punching all of the time like he did against Ron Lyle. He would also have enough power to hurt either of them. Remember how 197 pound Michael Spinks out speeded and chopped down Cooney on way to a fifth round knockout? Jerry could have done the same thing to Cooney. Jerry would have to survive the early onslaughts of both Morrison and Cooney and assuming Jerry was not cut in either fight, as that was always a possibility with Jerry, he would cruise to a mid to late round stoppage or decision win over either fighter. |

| 5/10/03 11:30:16 PM | George Otto | Youngstown, Ohio | ehnbsa@aol.com | |||10 | Steve, thanks for your words of praise and feedback. Regarding the WBC, it could reorganize, but that can be difficult with at best limited financial resources. Mike Tyson may have pulled out of that fight due to Don King's efforts, but he also has rejected an out of court settlement of $20 million from DK in order to proceed with the September case. Word has it that DK is rather uncomfortable with all of this as I send you this reply, and, given the presence of Shelley Finkel and John Branca on Team Tyson as of this writing, this litigation may go to trial and result in a easy victory for Iron Mike. On this issue, keep in mind that most of the fighters who have sued in this type of situation and who have retained adequate counsel in such matters have won their cases. Tex Cobb, Oscar de la Hoya, and Bernard Hopkins all have won these types of cases in civil court. Regarding the union, you have brought out some very important issues. The passage of Senate Bill 275 would certainly make it easier to set up such an organization. Actually, any organizational efforts must somehow occur on an international, rather than national level, given the tendency to recruit fighters from all over the world. Finally, please email all of the US Senators you can in support of Senate Bill 275, especially The Honorable Harry Reid of Nevada. As the late Paul Pender (former middleweight champion) and Teddy Atlas and Bernard Hopkins and many others have said, boxing needs a new start and federal oversight. Thanks again for your concern !!!|

| 5/11/03 12:54:53 AM | Edward M | Cicero N Y | mooseygoop@aol.com | |||9 | >>How did our own Mr. Tyson miss Witherspoon, Mercer, Morrison, Foreman, Bowe, and just about every other contender, that could punch in that time? J.Jimmy, I really think the "pre prison" Mike Tyson would have fought anyone, in fact would have welcomed the challenge. He came out of jail a much diminished fighter (too much weight lifting?).... My thoughts on why the fights never came off.... Bowe's management never wanted to match him with punchers, look what happened when he fought Golata... A Tyson fight would have been suicide for Morrison... and I think Mike always thought a Foreman fight was beneath him considering Georges age. A Mercer fight would be a great match even now and I'd give Ray an excellent chance providing the Klitschko fight didn't take too much out of him. Trent... True Cooney looked terrible against Spinks but it was long after Gerry's prime. Cooney more than held his own for 13 rounds with Larry Holmes and blasted out an aged Ron Lyle and Ken Norton in 1 round... Its true though that he fought nowhere near the caliber of fighters that Jerry did but I was always kind of impressed with Cooney.

"Jerry Quarry, the best fighter that never won a championship." George Foreman

---

I apologize for not responding earlier to your questions regarding the New York State Athletic Commission. In regard to this organization's ability to work with Don King and Bob Arum, I am not sure whether or not the organization has had any problems with those 2 individuals. However, I am aware of 3 huge issues that have occurred in that state which have involved internal difficulties. First of all, Bob Duffy, an outstanding boxing official, resigned from the Commission, stating that its politics prevented him from doing his job properly. Secondly, the Commission must now carry out its operations while enforcing the strictest rules in the country regarding pre-fight physicals. As you may know, it is very difficult to attract promoters to a state that makes such health demands upon the fighters and their promoters. Finally, the NYSC has had to compete for big fights without the benefits of having casinos in its vicinity. Yes, NYC and its outlying areas have many outstanding and knowledgable fans wanting to attend important fights, but it does not have the lure of the gambling to attract many of the high rollers. All of these above listed challenges will not necessarily be resolved by the passage of Senate Bill 275; some of the solutions to them reside within the state itself-- at least in my opinion. Again, thanks for your interest in all these observations!!

---

Jerry Cooney was the most duplicitous Heavyweight contender since the creation of Primo Carnera. The only name fighters he beat were "setups," years past their prime, who had no talent left, just there "names". He is revered for giving Holmes a good fight (what about Snipes, Truth Williams, Witherspoon, Spinks). Hey, Cooney was knocked down and stopped by Holmes, when does that type of loss qualify someone for sainthood, and he never sought a rematch. He was knocked out by a lightheavyweight, knocked out by a fat middle aged fighter... Cooney had a glass jaw and did not like to fight, and when he fought some one who could fight (which was rare) these weaknesses became apparent. It is a sin to speak of Cooney in the same breath as Jerry Quarry. One more thing about Cooney, all I hear is what a great job Cooney is doing for broken down ex-fighters. Well, this is just another part of the Conney myth. If he ever made his Fist expense books public, the public will be shocked to see how little of the contributions he receives for FIST actually goes to help fighters, and how much goes for expenses. His wife and his lawyer make out like bandits, and the FIST staff live like Kings. Cooney is comparable to Jimmy Carter, they were bad in their prime, and they are even worse in old age trying to reinvent themselves.
that Duane Bobick buildup, and made a lotta money ducking contenders, As I believe with Tyson.

| 5/11/03 02:05:13 PM | Evren | London || || || 10 | Tyson of the late eighties was perhaps the greatest fighter who ever lived..in my opinion. Just awesome! |

| 5/12/03 01:36:44 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | || 10 | Steve: I'm going to try my hand at S.T.O.O.G.E Promotions (socked, totally, on, our, Geraldo, editions) for the 70's (DEDICATED TO ME!! Here is some of the matches WE missed for the 70's (and their weren't much). 1- FOREMAN/QUARRY 2- FOREMAN/BONAVENA 3- FRAZIER/LYLE 4- FRAZIER/NORTON 5- FRAZIER/SHAVERS 6- FRAZIER/SHAVERS 7- NORTON/LYLE 8- NORTON/BONAVENA 9- QUARRY/BONAVENA 10- JEFF MERRITT ("candy slim" vs any top ten contender of that time) 11- BOBICK/BUGNER (how about that one). 12- COMMONWEALTH 4- MAN TOURNAMENT, BUGNER, CHUVALO, McALINDON, BUNNY JOHNSON. 13- LATIN TOURNAMENT, composed of, BONAVENA, PEDRO LOVELL, JOSE LUIS GARCIA, and Peralta. 14- BOBICK/KIRKMAN 15- CHUVALO/RO STANDER, 16- CHUVALO/MAC FOSTER, 17- LOVELL/FOSTER 18- MERRITT/SHAVERS (grudge match—after the broken jaw). 19- FOREST WARD/KENT APPEL (JUST KIDDING CURLY Q). 20- MERRITT/WEPPNER. NOTICE I DID NOT MENTION MUHAMMAD ALI—SIMPLE: EVERYONE HAD AT LEAST ONE OR TWO SHOTS AT MUHAMMAD, AND THAT I MUST SAY IS A TRUE MARK OF GREATNESS, WHETHER REAL BOUTS OR EVEN SPARRING, (ALI EVEN KO'D MERRITT IN SPARRING, WHICH WAS A BET MERRITT COULD KAYO ALI). |

| 5/12/03 03:36:51 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | || 10 | Oh Jimmy Dorsey and Kent, you two wild and crazy stooges! Your last two posts where good stuff! Jimmy D, those fights you listed are practically the same ones I've been thinking about for years! We could have a tournament! Let everyone vote once a week on these matchups you listed. Pick the matchups and count the votes. Oh, by the way, Jimmy, not to start any trouble here in Quarryville, but I have a few friends and relatives in Cali. I've heard that Kent used to be a rompin', stompin', badd ass in his younger, athletic days before he became a wealthy, sedentary sports writer who doesn't even care how poorly his cable co. performs. I'm not sure if Foolface or Forest Ward really want to mess with him. Hey Kent, just kidding! You really did have a pretty good dialogue going with that strange, angry dual personality who used to haunt this and the Frazier site. You handled it with good grace and humor. Although I do think that guy often went to far. My athletic days are far, far behind me. I turned 21 in Vietnam in 1968. After that I specialized in bar fights. I didn't tangle with guys who laced on gloves and actually knew how to box. That's why I love this site. You are indeed correct, their are no grudges here. Everyone gets treated with respect. However, if you are really determined to beat up Forest Ward and Foolface, then I will gladly hold your coat! |

| 5/12/03 05:27:50 PM | Ben Swaab | Seattle | ben.swaab@nordstrom.com | || 10 | On ESPN
Classic Tuesday May 13th at 6:30pm They will be showing The Forgotten Heavyweight Jerry Quarry.I had emailed ESPN Classic to see if they could show the first Frazier Quarry fight! Let's hope! Thank you all for keeping Jerry Quarry's memory alive. Ben |

| 5/12/03 05:56:53 PM | Gerry Schultz | Ohio || jgschultz11@msn.com | |||| 11 |

Thanks, Kent for the wedding congrats. Had to respond to a couple of things since posted. I agree regarding Tyson, he had (has ?) tremendous two-handed power and hand speed prior to prison and the fact that he missed some of the suggested matchups, to me, takes nothing from him. I have him at least Top 10-12 all time. Morrison had, I think, a similar standing with the best heavies of his day (Tyson, Bowe, Holyfield ) that JQ had in his. His career ended at only 29, and people forget he was leading Mercer when he got caught finishing him. I rate him a little better than Cooney, who had a lot of talent but came up short on heart in key fights. Bobick, from what I read, did not follow up on his amateur success and was very cocky. He did get the nod over Larry Holmes and Teofilo Stevenson as an amateur, though. Speaking of Holmes, some of his weaker performances were listed again in regard to fighters who took him deep in his defenses. I still feel that JQ- Holmes would be a very good match, and not as lopsided for Holmes as some think. Finally, Mr. Ward, whose postings have been interesting reads, I have to respond to your swipe at Jimmy Carter. This may not be the place to say, but Carter has more respect around the world today than any American since Kennedy, and was long overdue for the Nobel Prize he just received. I would hardly compare someone who was a Captain in the U.S. Navy, a Ph. laureate, and a former U.S. President (among other things ) with a very good but not great heavyweight boxer. Let's keep this inside the ropes, gentleman, ok?. |

| 5/12/03 08:29:34 PM | Forest Ward | South Carolina || Joekevin@cs.com | |||| 10 |

Gerry, I knew Jimmy Carter was born here in South Carolina, and fought out of New York. Jimmy Carter was considered to be the all-time champion of the "lend-lease" champions of the Carbo, Palermo era. Jimmy Carter won the Lightweight Championship 3 times, and was managed by mob front man Willie (Friedman) Ketchum. Ketchum was from the Bronx, and moved to California during the Boxing Investigations in New York in the late 50's. I stand corrected, I was not aware that Jimmy Carter accomplished so much after he retired from the ring. |

| 5/12/03 09:32:22 PM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | |||| 10 |

Hey Forest Ward, you are very good! You kept your response "within the ring". What was Jimmy Carters's career record ? |

| 5/12/03 10:44:31 PM | Rick Spolato | S F Ca | bigingo243@aol.com | |||| 10 |

Hey Slimebag "Ward". where do u get of dissing a fighter? any fighter! Your a little man sitting in front of a computer screen poking fun at people that make u look like an ant by comparison. I am no fan of Mr cooney infact i didnt even remember him till reading this but he deserves respect like any other fighter whether they be a 4 round prelim or heavyweight champ. I know you've never been a pro and probably never even an amateur because someone retired from this brutal sport would never talk about another fighter like you do. You think JQ would diss a fighter like u did?Never! Any fighter can be criticized. Some idiot like you could say JQ lost to a built up middleweight, lost to an old Eddie Machen, gave a fight to Chuvalo, etc and what would it prove, that the writer of such remarks is an idiot. So Cooney didn't fight a lot of tough guys and found a short way to a title shot. Good for him, its a murderous game and he played it that way and if makes small minded people like you jealous thats great too. As far as your other accusations go, are they a result of your investigation or something you "read". If theres any truth to it bring it to the proper authorities not on a message board where you like to spew your kiddie vomit. OOOH and gee you got a political comment too! They're so rare! Only thing that shows about you is that you're an old man. Have a good day you Nobody!!

| 5/12/03 10:58:28 PM | Gerry Schultz | Ohio || jgschultz11@msn.com | |||| 10 |

It would seem we are discussing different Jimmy Carters, Forest. Hopefully, you don't know any fighters named, say, Richard Nixon. My mistake I guess. | 5/12/03 10:59:50 PM| Gerry Schultz| Ohio| jgschultz11@msn.com | 10 |

It would seem we are discussing different Jimmy Carters, Forest. Hopefully, you don't know any fighters named, say, Richard Nixon. My mistake I guess. | 5/12/03 11:57:13 PM| Forest Ward| South Carolina| joekevin@cs.com | 10 |

Rick, it's against the law to drink and write in some towns, so be careful with your writing. Rick, I don't attack broken down 3 round fighters, so you are safe. I have never said a bad word about Jerry Quarry on this site, I have written repeatedly that he was a genuine fighter, a gladiator. My feelings about Cooney can't be denied, put down the bottle and look at the ring record book. As far as reporting Cooney to the authorities, there is no point in that. What he is doing is not illegal, but it is certainly unethical. | 5/13/03 07:38:23 AM| John Gerard| NYC| rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 |

MY TAKE ON COONEY: I have nothing against Gerry Cooney. He was one of the few fighters who used the system rather then allow himself to get used. The only problem with that was sometimes the fans got screwed in the process. How? By paying good money to see jokes like his fights against Norton and Lyle. But I guess you pay your money and take your chances. I would rate Cooney a good puncher with his left hand, a glass jaw, average technical skills, and no desire. He was a financial success but not a artistic one but that seemed to suit him fine. The best way to describe him comes from the lead line of an article covering his KO at the hands of George Foreman. It read "Gerry Cooney finally met the washed up old man he couldn't knock out" that about says it all in my mind. | 5/13/03 11:18:17 AM| Steve| N.J. | dmmrsrm@comcast.net | 10 |

Jimmy Dorsey, there are at least ten fights on your list that I would gladly spend $49.95 to see. I really wonder how a Frazier vs Norton fight would have gone. I never bought into that, "we'll never fight each other because we're such good friends" baloney. I think Norton's carefully arranged career did not include a Joe Frazier, or a Ron Lyle. | 5/13/03 12:04:11 PM| Carl Weingarten| TJQF | 10 |

I'm looking forward to seeing ESPNCL "The Forgotten Heavyweight: Jerry Quarry", but I believe this is a repeat, and they only show Jerry's fights with Ali and Frazier. I hope I'm wrong. In any case, though Jerry was courageous in these fights, he did loose them, so I can't consider the program much of a tribute to Jerry. By not showing Jerry's fights with Foster, Shavers, Lyle, Spencer or the many exciting fights Jerry did win, is to ignore why Jerry was a contender worthy of Ali and Frazier in the first place. Hey Ben, please post the email to ESPN Classic so we can help "educate" them. Thanks, --Carl | 5/13/03 12:34:29 PM| Kent| La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10 |

Wow, just when I said there are no bad feelings around here, a newcomer, who's opinions are very welcome, shows up and really gives it to Forest. Forest handled it well by not attacking back in spite of a fairly provocative post directed towards him. I think it is good when someone comes here and shakes things up a little bit every now and then. I hope our new friend drops back in a few more times. Steve, what makes you think I am wealthy? Actually, I may or may not be and depending on what happens in the next few months, I could getting a lot of money or have to start over again, not sure yet. Gerry Cooney was a very hard puncher who had some flaws as a fighter he is one of the few who got out intact and financially secure. I don't know anything about the financial dealings regarding his foundation so I can't comment on this. | 5/13/03 12:46:07 PM| Jimmy Dorsey| Ventura California | ronnyrains@yahoo.com | 10 |

SHEMP (STEVE): I KNOW it would only be a preliminary, to the top ten bouts, I mentioned we missed, but that DUANE BOBICK / JOE BUGNER matchup would have been huge, about the same size, speed, etc. a real britain / USA old fashioned matchup, they only time I ever saw Bugner RALLY, (besides his own country). was one very good round vs Lyle, and that great, ALMOST DESPERATION right TO THE JAW OF JOE FRAZIER (that really stunned Joe). Although Bobick never really beat a pro of even Bugner's stature, I would make Duane, a 6-5 "PICK EM" IN LONDON. AND 8-5 MSG. Bugner obviously took a better shot! PREDICTION Bobick 10 round decision, much in the same style as his LeDOUX WINS.

5/13/03 12:46:18 PM| Kent| La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com| ||| | 10 | It looks like Bobby Quarry's event, The battle of the Bouncers and tribute to Jerry Quarry is a go for this Saturday, May 17, 2003. It is going to be held at the Dome, formerly Strongbow Stadium, in Bakersfield, Ca. The Dome is located at 2201 V Street in Bakersfield. Doors open at 6 pm and the event is slated for 7 pm to 10 pm. Ticket price is $12.00. Hope to see some of the locals there this Saturday.

5/13/03 03:09:00 PM| John Gerard| NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com| ||| | 10 | I think Bugner would have handled Bobick rather easily. Neither man was a great puncher but Bugner could really take a punch, was a good boxer, and had good stamina. What exactly could Bobick do well? I saw him fight John Tate and go out in one round.

5/13/03 07:02:49 PM| Rick Spolato| S F Ca||bigingo243@aol.com| ||| | 10 | The best way to describe him comes from the lead line of an article covering his KO at the hands of George Foreman. It read "Gerry Cooney finally met the washed up old man he couldn't knock out" that about says it all in my mind. Humm yea Foreman was really washed up. What was it like 5 years LATER that he won world heavyweight championship from Michael Moorer. A typical sportswriter's "expert" opinion on a sport he most likely has gained knowledge of, from the safe confines of the ring side seats or his television set. That was an exciting 2 rounds though...I sometimes wonder how Foreman 1990's would have done against Foreman 1970's. He sure learned how to pace himself much better.

5/14/03 01:17:15 AM| Gerry Schultz| Ohio||jgschultz211@msn.com| ||| | 9 | Sorry, Forest, we seem to have our Jimmy Carters crossed. Hope you didn't know a fighter named Richard Nixon. My mistake, a lot of politics in the air lately. Rich in SF, you also need to lighten up. We're just having fun with opinion here. Also, good work, Mr. Otto. A union would be a very difficult thing to assemble in this sport, but not impossible. I also feel headgear should be mandatory, as well as federal leadership. Boxing has hope yet. Did anyone see Sanders KO Klitchko? I was surprised by that.

5/14/03 05:11:48 AM| Paul| Australia||PlMls4@aol.com.au| ||| | 10 | Cooney's only weapons were his left hook, size, and accountant. When they failed him, he had nothing else. He didn't have Ali's speed, tactical sense or jaw; Marciano's will-to-win; Liston's intimidation; Patterson's boxing skills; Louis's punching power; Foreman's glare; Tyson's head movement (pre-jail); Evander's faith; Corbett's intelligence; Holmes's longevity (and jock straps); Michael Spinks's luck; Johnson's flair; Rahman's promoter; or even Jerry Q's toughness. Cooney's left hook wasn't as good as Smokin' Joe's or even Ol' Henry's (Cooper) 'hammer'. In short, Cooney was a poor man's Primo Carnera!

5/14/03 10:58:32 AM| max hord| fernandina bch, fl||rasluc@msn.com| ||| | 10 | The Foreman of the 70s would have gone out in about 8 against the Foreman of the 90s. Like I said before, Foreman was a punk in the 70s and didn't realize what he had. The best thing that happened to him was what happened to him. If he had stayed around the game much longer after Ali beat him, he probably would have been dead now or in the joint. Foreman is one of my favorites, (that is the Foreman of the 90s and today). Respectfully, Max.

5/14/03 04:41:53 PM| Evren| London||@||| | 10 | One of my favourite heavies from that period who is sometimes overlooked is Eddie Machen - superb fighter - beat Howard King, Julio Mederos (twice), Nino Valdes (twice), Johnny Holman, Johnny Summerlin, Joey Maxim (twice), Bob Baker, Hurricane Jackson, Wayne Bethea, Willie Besmanoff, Doug Jones, Brian London, Mike DeJohn (twice) and Jerry Quarry. He also drew with Folley and Cleveland Williams and gave Liston a great bout! Wow - what a resume. A master boxer with a fair punch. Clever with lots of savvy. Wish he made it to the top - unbelievable even at the end of his career he beat Quarry and gave Smokin' Joe a go of it. He will not be forgotten. A great fighter!

| 5/14/03 05:14:21 PM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | SabrinaPorter@aol.com | 10 |

| 5/14/03 07:22:39 PM | MIKE M. | PHILLY | COALCRACKER53PA@aol.com | 10 |

| 5/14/03 10:32:40 PM | Ed | Cicero N Y | mooseygoop@aol.com | 10 |

| 5/14/03 10:36:03 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10 |

| 5/15/03 07:19:59 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 |

| 5/15/03 07:59:14 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 |

| 5/15/03 12:20:19 PM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 |
John Gerard: Big John, I've heard Jerry handled Merritt pretty good in sparring, although JQ pretty much did in all his sparringmates. "Windmill White" comes to mind when he was a heavy, for some reason Jerry took it easy, then the "Windmill" started his punches behind the back routine, which then Jerry cornered him and broke his ribs, also John, Machen never beat Boone Kirkman, it was Doug Jones, whom Boone knocked out in a rematch, I think Boone retired 35-6, I knew he beat Ellis, but never beat a top ten fighter, who was world ranked at the time, take care!

I also heard the "CLASSICS" the other night, by the way happy birthday, JQ, the WBA had JQ #2, Oscar Bonavena was listed #1 (and this is after a draw with Peralta and a DQ loss to Paez). Ring magazine of course had JQ #1 contender for the first Ali bout, after he knocked out Mac Foster, as far as they other, ESPN BOUTS Frazier I and Ali II, Quarry was the No. 2 Contender.

I also witnessed the "CLASSICS" they other night, by the way happy birthday, JQ, the WBA had JQ #2, Oscar Bonavena was listed #1 (and this is after a draw with Peralta and a DQ loss to Paez). Ring magazine of course had JQ #1 contender for the first Ali bout, after he knocked out Mac Foster, as far as they other, ESPN BOUTS Frazier I and Ali II, Quarry was the No. 2 Contender.

I forgot my point (what a stooge!!). Al Bernstein, (and he need a history lesson) said Quarry was world rated for 6 years, AL JQ was rated in the World Boxing Association from #1 to #10 for 9 years, 1967-75. (A TOTAL OF 90 MONTHS). And the "Ring Magazine" #1 TO #8 CONTENDER. (87 MONTHS) boxing as good as it can be. I have spoken with Alex a couple of times and he seems like a very fine, dedicated gentleman. Keep up the good work!

| 5/17/03 02:41:11 AM | tunaman | canada | jjabboxing@yahoo.com | 10 |
|i have tons of mint /complete fights on jerry quarryanybody lookin for mint quality fights on vhs email me or call 1 604 517 1558 pacific time |

| 5/17/03 02:39:14 PM | George Otto | Youngstown, Ohio | ehnpbsa@aol.com | 10 |
|Kent-- Thanks for your kind words. As I have stated in the past it is important that we work together to get Senate Bill 275, which is posted on this site, passed. The best way to do this is for all of us to contact our U.S. Senators and especially Senator Harry Reid of Arizona to express your support for the passage of this legislation. Thanks again for your interest !!!! |

| 5/17/03 02:57:44 PM | EVREN | LONDON | evren@btinternet.com | 10 |
|WANTED : MINT COPY OF QUARRY VS ORBILLO - COMPLETE - SOMEONE HELP. |

| 5/19/03 02:19:11 AM | Ed | Cicero N Y | mooseygoop@aol.com | 10 |
|Is it just me or does boxing seem to really suck lately? I mean when the last time there was a really interesting fight in any weight division not to mention the totally stagnant heavy weight division. Plus there's not a hot heavy prospect in sight! Granted Lewis is a great fighter but when there is almost 38 year old champion been so dominant that there is no single challenger that has a chance against him?? |

| 5/19/03 03:01:21 AM | Kent | La Habra, CA | oriononside@aol.com | 10 |
|Ed, there are still good fights happening but I agree lately they are few and far between. The recent James Toney verses Vassily Jirov fight for the cruiserweight title was a good fight. What was ironic about that fight is the HBO announcers thought it was up for grabs going into the last round and even Toney's trainer, Freddie Roach, told Toney he needed at least a knockdown in the last round to win the fight. Toney did just that, he knocked Jirov down but when the judges scores were announced, Toney had won by at least 6 points on all three judges scorecards. Jirov did lose a point earlier in the fight for low blows but most people who watched the fight didn't agree that Toney had won by at least five points (without the one point deduction). Sometimes I wonder what fights judges are watching. |

| 5/19/03 12:14:27 PM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z | 10 |
|I don't think boxing sucks, I think the heavyweight division does. Tyson is an exciting fighter but past his prime. Roy Jones is a great one, but is so selective about whom he fights, I wish he would just stay in the light heavy division. Klitchko was exposed recently and as fine a champ Lennox Lewis is, he is near 38. For his own health, Holyfield should have quite quite five years ago. Michael Grant is a ko waiting to happen and Joe Mesi seems to be content to be the terror of the hinterlands. I like David Tua and I wish more top guys would agree to fight him. |

| 5/19/03 03:59:29 PM | Mark Sargeant | uk | lpu00mts@reading.ac.uk | 10 |
|Heavyweights should be fighting three or four times a year and against top ten or twelve contenders-makes it far better! Tua vs Klitschko, Rahman vs Tyson, Byrd vs Grant |

| 5/20/03 12:33:53 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA
CALIFORNIA | ronnyrains@yahoo.com | 10 |
|ONE THING,that always bothered me during Jerry Quarry's career,When the man beat a top contender,they would downgrade the opponent(Spencer,Mathis,Foster,Lyle,Shavers).Rather than build up JQ,although he did get 4 bouts with ALL,JOE FRAZIER.The Jack Bodell,really backs what I'm saying,EVERYONE had Bodell in the top ten,WBA,WBC,RING MAGAZINE.So Jerry KO'S him in 64 seconds,now he's a bum.European,Commonwealth Champ).I do not recall everyone in a hurry to get in the ring With,Foster,Lyle, And Shavers. Before JQ BEAT THEM,AND Larry Middleton was ranked as high as third by the WBA,Even Zanon, was EUROPE'S best heavyweight, When he fought JERRY. |

| 5/21/03 09:59:13 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10 |
|I looked up the records of the following fighters when they fought Jerry. Buster Mathis 29-1 Mac Foster 24-0 Ernie Shavers 45-2 Buster Mathis 29-1 Mac Foster 24-0 Ron Lyle
Larry Middleton 20-1-1
Lorenzo Zanon 20-3-1
Thad Spencer 32-5
Jack Bodell 58-10

As a group they had a record of 247-22-2 when they fought Jerry. For an average record of about 30-3. So it looks like they earned their high rankings and that it was quite an accomplishment that Jerry beat all of these fighters.

5/22/03 02:26:25 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y|Moosygoop@aol.com||10|Quite a list Kent..I remember seeing the Shavers fight on espn classic and they introduced a lot of famous fighters before the fight, so it was good to c Jerry impressive in that one (1 round ko for Jerry). Ali put on a big show in ring before fight...Any idea when that custom of having famous fighters in audience introduced ended? My thinking is when the alphabet champions watered down the meaning of champions and left the public confused about who the champ is, might have had something to do with it...this last espn classic (Moore vs Marciano) had Jack Dempsey, Joe Louis, Max Baer, Jim Braddock, Mickey Walker among others introduced..Talk about having fight legends all together at once!..Another thing, the Moore/Marciano fight was broadcast to theaters, (TNT closed circuit I think), I had no idea they did that that early (1955).

5/22/03 01:29:59 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA|RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||10|KENT: thanks for looking up the records, and backing up what WE were trying to say (STOOGES STICK TOGETHER IN THE FEARLESS LEADERS CLUB). Howard Cosell, Although he seemed to like Jerry, Is about as far weather as a columnist can get, He said Lyle losing to Jerry was hard to do, "NOT VERY MANY CAN LAY CLAIM TO THAT!" WELL howie, JQ beat more contenders (8) than any non-Champion in the 60's and 70's.53 wins -pretty impressive, His Baby had 56 (ALI). Sorry JQ was not Namath!! Getting back to Bodell, The British press were grooming him for a possible title shot at "smokin JOE", Had he beat JERRY, It was the first southpaw that Quarry ever fought professionally, Bodell was ranked no. 8 in the world at the time, Its safe to say he didn't really bother Jerry! QUARRY WAS asked if he was awkward to fight, and he replied "he fell awkwardly!" ED very good point for the introductions, I REMEMBER THE BIRTHDAY BASH FOR JACK DEMPSEY, ON THE M.S.G QUARRY-FOSTER BOUT IN 1970. I'D LIKE TO SEE THE INTROS TO QUARRY-SHAVERS. WITH ALI, FOREMAN, FRAZIER, NORTON.

5/23/03 12:05:21 PM|John Gerard|NYC|rock289z@yahoo.com||10|I was always surprised that Mac Foster did not bounce back after his loss to Jerry. I saw his losing effort against Ali and he took Ali the full 15 rounds and looked pretty good. I remember he took a long layoff after that fight and came back against Zora Foley (I think) who he ko'd in 1. I remember that Foster fought out of Fresno.

5/23/03 12:35:59 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA|RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||10|Some young fighter's like Mac Foster, Can really get their career's ruined, by taking on a fighter of Jerry's stature, Quarry was truley in the purgatory of boxing. But no one would fight Foster and his rep. Eddie Futch kept Young "SMOKIN JOE" and JQ Apart in 1967, figuring it might hinder one or the other 'career for the same reason, Top FIGHTER'S like Mathis, Spencer, Foster, WERE NEVER quite the same after their Quarry fights, although Lyle and Shavers really made themselves quite a career, (could you imagine had Lyle been Foreman's age). John G. Its a shame Foster did not quite live up to his potential, BUBBA ("heat of the night" was Fresno's own mayor, last I heard).

5/23/03 05:17:15 PM|Forest Ward|South Carolina|Joekevin@cs.com||10|Attention: Evren, and John G. Evren, I agree with you about your assement of Eddie Machen. I have scrapbooks from the 1950's and Machen was a pro for about a year when he made the Ring's top 10 rating, which was quite a feat back then. When Patterson beat Moore for the title in Nov. of 1956, all the experts felt that the man on the horizon for Patterson was Eddie Machen. At the time Machen seemed to have it all. A lot of people felt that after Machen was knocked out by Ingo, Machen became punch shy. Although, they be right, I am not sure. He had a few fights before Ingo where he seemed a little over cautious, I have some of the films of his early fights, but I can't recall the fight I am referring to. Either way he was a remarkable fighter who just had a case of bad luck.

John G. I agree with you about confusing Machen, Jones, Williams, Folley and I may add Terrell. When I was a kid it seemed like these guys were in the top 10 forever. And because they were so interchangeable as opponents, it almost seemed like incest. John, I tried to Email you a while back. If you can Email me I have some images that I think you may like.

I just wanted to say that I'm trying to collect every Boxing magazine with Jerry on the cover. E-bay has been a great place to look. A word to the wise, don't bid against me.) Hey Linda is there pictures of Jerry I can buy? Let me know, thanks.

By the way: folks I am trying to put together month to month W.B.A. World Boxing Association TOP TEN heavyweight ratings, For JQ'S TIME 1967 TO 1975 MONTH TO MONTH, if anyone could help, They would be in old BOXING ILLUSTRATEDS, I did an entire segment of THE RING MAGAZINE where JQ was anywhere from # 1 contender to # 8 in an 87 month span.

I haven't posted in a while, but I do visit frequently to read all the letters. Lots of good stuff here. Regarding matchups that never happened: JQ vs. Jimmy Young, mid-70's. This one could go either way. We all know what Jerry could do when he was inspired, and Jimmy Young proved himself to be quite capable when he trained hard and was focused. He took Ali 15 rounds and while awkward, still fought decently. His upset of George Foreman was his greatest moment and he also had a nice win over Ron Lyle. In my opinion, his fight against Norton was too close to call---Norton got the decision but I think it should have gone Young's way, or should have been called a draw. Another interesting fight would have been Leroy Jones against Jerry. Unfortunately, Jerry was well on the downside when Jones became a contender. At this point, I think Jones would have won by decision or by stopping Jerry on cuts. But a 1974 Quarry against a 1979 Jones would have been much more interesting to watch. Jones had remarkable hand speed for a man of his large size, and good defense. I don't think he could KO Jerry, but the strategic battle would be amazing boxing. Jerry might out-hustle/outwork Jones. By the way, Jeff Merrit did take on an up and coming contender, Stan Ward. Ward KOed him early in the fight. This was the mid-70's and Merritt's better years were behind him. |
Wow. I have no recollection of a heavy named Leroy Jones back in the 70's. Who did he ever beat? I do remember Al Blue Lewis. A very good heavy who got robbed against Bonavena in Buenos Aires. |
Leroy Jones was a huge heavyweight, 6'5" over 250 pounds who fought Larry Holmes in the early 80's for the title and lost by eighth round TKO. He was undefeated when he got his title shot with his biggest win a decision over Mike Weaver. He only had one or two more fights after his loss to Holmes and he retired. Kind of an enigma in that he was very quick for his size and he showed some promise but he often battled a weight problem, weighing at times as much as 275 pounds. He just disappeared from the scene not long after his loss to Holmes. |
Leroy Jones was thumbed in the eye in the Holmes fight and retired and never fought again because of a detached retina. Jones was a poor man's Buster Mathis. Prime Quarry would have walked right through him, mid-70's Quarry probably still wins pretty easily. Florida Al Jones tore his rotator cuff against Luis Pires and still fought to draw. Tough awkward southpaw who could punch a little. Liked to hold and grab and punch at the same time. Was in the top 10 when he tore the shoulder and was never the same. Take care. |
Joe K., that was the perfect way to describe Leroy Jones from Denver, (A POOR MAN'S BUSTER MATHIS). I Agree totally, He beat the inexperienced Weaver. And that was probably his biggest win, lack of a major league wallop like Bugner hinderd his career. Bunny Johnson from England was around in that time. I first met MIKE QUARRY in bakersfield, right after his bout with Johnson in Australia. (Mike lost on a cut in the 7th). Johnson also was ranked # 3 for a while, And just about won every round against Duane Bobick in Munich, then suddenly quit on his stool for the 9th round mysteriously, what about Bugner-Johnson?? Even? |
Jerry Quarry's career was so interesting: For it seemed every bout he had, there was a little controversy, I never knew he hit the deck momentarily until I sent off for a microfilm listing of his bout with Roy Crear in Texas, The George Chuvalo ending, decked after the bell vs Rufus Brassell, koung Brian London, only after the timer's made a mistake and ended the round a minute to early in Oakland, Had 10 great MSG BOUTS. His family engaging in the war in Vegas and ALI II. Frazier and TEDDY BRENNER almost having heart failure, when Jerry took on the hard punching lefthooker JOE ALEXANDER FOR A TUNEUP! Coming from behind to finish highly touted Mac Foster with a Major league assortment of punches, There just always seemed like something controversial was going on with Jerry, it sure would make for a great movie, I HAVE A FRIEND THAT IS THE SPITING IMAGE OF A 1970 JQ, BUILD THE WAY HE TALKED EVERYTHING!

Is this the same Randy Neumann who is now a big fight referee?

yes, its the same Neuman who is now a ref in New Jersey.JIMMY D. -- thanks for those great sidenotes and details. I guess JQ's best weight was around 198 or so?

After Jerry Quarry beat Earnie Shavers (it was an elimination bout scheduled for 12 rounds) the winner was supposed to fight George Foreman for the heavyweight championship. The fight never materialized. Does anyone know the answer? I've heard and read George wanted no part of Jerry and decided to fight Ali in Zaire. It is my opinion that George wasn't really knocked out but was totally exhausted. My most memorable Quarry fight was against Thad Spencer. I remember in one of the early rounds Jerry dropped Thad in the middle of the ring and Thad's butt landed right in the a circle of a bulls-eye painted on the ring's canvas. I still get a chuckle when I think about it.  It seems to me ESPN Classic shows Jerry in his losing efforts. I have e-mailed Classic and asked them to do a show on Jerry's winning efforts instead of his losses. I would love to see Jerry's fights with Buster Mathis, Thad Spencer, Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers, and even his draw with Floyd Patterson. I would also love to see Jerry's bizarre loss to George Chuvalo. I have never received a reply. Does anyone else agree? On a different topic, I think it is great that Al Bernstein (a true class act) is leaving ESPN and will be doing color commentary for Showtime Boxing. Couldn't happen to a better guy.

YES JERRY HAD 2 WINNING TITLE ELIMINATIONS, that year 1973. (the other was Lyle of course). I followed JQ'S career very closely in those days. He could have been fighting George Aug.31 of that year instead of Roman, then we all would have been satisfied, But George is human, he did not do with the title that 90 % of the other champs did, I have alot of respect, and always will have for our MR. FOREMAN, I've really been singing Lyles praises on these posts lately, saying everyone's lucky Lyle started so late in his career, Big George had every bit as much heart, i'll never forget their great brawl, But George, WHY DIDN'T YOU GIVE "Irish Jerry Quarry a shot?!

I am a huge Jerry Quarry fan. Growing up in the 60's and 70's, those were the days. I used to fight and trained at Frazier's Cloverlay Gym. I spoke with Frazier many times about Quarry and he had nothing but the ut-most respect for him. I also am a fight collector, have many of Jerry's fights, except for Machen and Mathis. Quarry-Foreman would've been interesting because Quarry wouldn't have went to Foreman like Frazier did. Jerry's biggest problem was he was vulnerable to guys with good jabs. Jerry Quarry had the best saying, "there all tought til I punch them back" God Bless Jerry Quarry!!

I am a huge Jerry Quarry fan. Growing up in the 60's and 70's, those were the days. I used to fight and trained at Frazier's Cloverlay Gym. I spoke with Frazier many times about Quarry and he had nothing but the ut-most respect for him. I also am a fight collector, have many of Jerry's fights, except for Machen and Mathis. Quarry-Foreman would've been interesting because Quarry wouldn't have went to Foreman like Frazier did. Jerry's biggest problem was he was vulnerable to guys with good jabs. Jerry Quarry had the best saying, "there all tought til I punch them back" God Bless Jerry Quarry!!

This is a new feature on the TJQF Letters page. Video clips are posted here when they apply to comments regarding fighters or fights discussed in this forum. The clips are posted for
Duane Bobick gets little mercy in this forum, for a variety of reasons other than the fact he was over-hyped as a professional, and had the misfortune of being humiliated on prime-time national television. Despite what happened to him as a professional, Bobick was briefly the best amateur heavyweight in the world. This fight with Larry Holmes is rarely mentioned, but is of historical interest for obvious reasons. Bobick decked Larry in the first round, and though Holmes had some good Ali-ish moves, he was overpowered by Bobick anyway. Larry kept holding and was eventually disqualified in the third round. This was a young and green Holmes for sure, so there's nothing against Larry, who would have beaten Bobick as a pro. However, this 1972 bout was for the national finals, which says a lot of anyone in that competition. Here's the clip >> <A HREF="http://www.jerryquarry.com/media/bobick56k.ram">CLICK HERE for 56K or for <A HREF="http://www.jerryquarry.com/media/bobick150k.ram">DSL quality. For all the post-career Bobick bashing, it's easy to see why he was such a prospect in 1972. He moved well for a big guy, had a good jab and hit hard. Bobick was cool in the ring, and fought with a seasoned style unusual for an amateur. He could handle both the international boxers, as well as the street-swinging U.S. amateurs. Some boxers are great amateur fighters, but they don't have the right stuff for the pros, and vice verse. Bobick was just one of those guys. Ali, Louis, Marciano and Tyson all lost in the amateurs to guys that never made it big professionally. |

Bobick was a good fighter who had some flaws which were exposed at the upper levels of the sport. He had poor defense and he could not take a punch well. He in no way deserves the ridicule that is sometimes sent his way. He worked his way up to a deserved top 20 world ranking by beating many of the same trial horse opponents that are on most of the contenders and champions resumes coming up. How many people on most boxing boards can say they were good enough to even be rated that high? We all know the answer, none! and unless Mike Quarry happens to write in and I happen to know Mike is not on line, the answer will stay none. I will say this though, people on this board have been better in their treatment of Bobick than some of the others I visit. |

Ironic in that Ken Norton himself was on the receiving end of several early round knockouts, including, a first round knockout loss to Gerry Cooney, a first round knockout loss to Earnie Shavers, and a second round knockout loss to George Foreman. Shavers himself was a first round knockout victim to our own Jerry Quarry. But when people think of first round knockout losses, Bobick's loss to Norton is what comes to their minds. This is unfair to Bobick.
anyone a good fight,and caught Bobick with a very harsh uppercut coming in,John Tate was a little underrated,He would stand-out on mr.Tyson's record!But Kent would Bobick know Quarry ko'd corletti at the Fabulous Forum?!|
|6/10/03 09:27:48 AM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|One more final thought on Duane,between his amateur loss to TEOPILIO STEVENSON,AND NORTON,Bobick was 100-1,counting his 62-bout win streak,as the nations top amateur,and 38-0 pro record,there's not a whole lot of room for humility,when you have a record like that,yet Bobick,who was a gentleman 90 %of the time,did have!(who in the world can say they won 100 of 101-bouts,DUANE BOBICK).THAT amateur record of his,had few slouches at the end,before that he was ko'd by his later stablemate RON LYLE,iF i COULD WIN 100 OF 101 BOUTS AT THAT LEVEL,I'D FEEL LIKE THE SECOND COMING!!|
|6/10/03 11:49:04 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|Bobick wasn't that bad a fighter but when you're built up like he was and then go out in the first round against Norton, you've got a long way to fall. In no way did he ever deserve to be rated in the top five or six. Based on what? He had the bad luck that two of his one round kos were shown live on home tv and seen by millions. White heavyweights today are still suffering from the Bobick Stigma.| |6/10/03 03:33:44 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Jimmy D, I know Bobick was rated higher than the top twenty but I was making a point that while he didn't deserve a top five ranking, he did earn at least a top twenty ranking and that is much better the wannabes on the various boxing boards who talk trash against him. Also, note I wasn't talking about the people who post here as they treat him better than some of the other boards out there.YA KNUCKLEHEAD! I ALREADY CONCEDED THAT JERRY FOUGHT CORLETTI AT THE FORUM. MULTIPLE EYE POKES FOR YOU THIS TIME!!
|6/11/03 01:56:16 AM|ED|Cicero N Y||mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|Lewis vs Klitschko! Anybody interested? Personally I think Johnson would have had a better chance but who knows, it might be a good fight. Its on HBO...certainly not worth ppv. | |6/11/03 07:18:48 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|I don't think Klitschko is ready for this one, unless Lewis's slip has really begun to show and he is ready to be taken. I would have rather seen Klitschko fight David Tua or even Evander Holyfield or Tyson. He needs more experience against really skilled fighters.| |6/11/03 10:55:29 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|The Klitschkos are an enigma. One minute they can look great and the next minute lousy. Vitali Klitschko fought very well against Chris Byrd, winning almost every round, before he suffered a shoulder injury, forcing him to not be able to continue in about the ninth round. His most recent bout against Larry Donald, he looked very clumsy in scoring a tenth round KO. I was waiting for someone to put the pressure on his brother, Wladimir, who was looking like the next big thing and the first fighter that came out aggressively taking the fight to him, Corrie Sanders (of South Africa), flattened him in less than two rounds. Hats off to Lewis for taking this fight as they may have been able to sell this as pay for view later. I am picking Lewis by decision. Too bad for Kirk Johnson, who I thought had a good shot. | |6/11/03 01:09:53 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|I pick Lewis by KO somewhere inbetweensix and eighth round. |
|6/11/03 01:15:32 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Just went thru all my archives on Quarry,In 16 MAJOR bouts,he was the underdog 11 of them, and his record was 6-8-2,that means 8 of his defeats,where "big" enough to make the sports book,Even Alongi in MSG was an 7-5 favorite(probably his 38-2 record,experience and reach plus 6'5""). in these bouts,Alongi,Machen,Patterson (twice)Spencer,Ellis,Mathis,Frazier (twice)Chuvalo,Foster,Ali (twice) Lyle,Shavers And Norton,he had a 10-3 plus knockdown rate,thats amazing!!|
|6/11/03 02:54:27 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
Also, on Quarry-Norton, they official odds were 7-5 Norton, but elsewhere around the country, it was 6-5 "pick em". That particular bout was signed March 6, 1975, so Jerry had all of 18 days to train, it was originally Norton-Bonavena, then surprisingly was Ken Norton-Jimmy Young, (who'd just decisioned Lyle). Then they thru $175,000 at Jerry and that was it. I was really apprehensive for JQ when he signed for Frazier II, especially on May 30, 1974, when Joe sent two of his sparring partners to the hospital, one was none other than Mr. Jimmy Young at his Philadelphia Gym!

I agree Bobick was a good '70s heavy, following his high amateur profile. Did beat LeDoux twice as mentioned, also I believe he beat Mike Weaver very early on for both. He does getDismissed by many for his skin color and hype, but had a very respectable career. Not as good as Cooney or quite a few others, but a lot of guys were intimidated by Norton back in the mid '70s, when Bobick met him. Not much in today's heavyweight division, true. I like Lewis to outbox Klitschko, but feel the smaller Klitschko (the one who can box) has a real chance to be champ someday. It's good that someone recently again made note of all the very good contenders JQ beat during his career. Just because a top fighter (someone else mentioned the very good Machen) doesn't get to hold the belt does not mean their career is a failure. Only one guy can be champ, even in today's bowl of alphabet soup. Jerry was a huge star and a great draw for boxing in his prime, and has the verbal respect of Ali, Frazier, Foreman, and even Norton among others he fought. To me, the fact he never won the big one, as some deride him for, takes nothing from the guy, and I think similar things could be said about some other very good non-champs. I do have two questions for you guys though, 1) Did JQ beat anyone of note when he won the Golden Gloves, that is another fighter who went on to some success? 2) In comparing JQ to guys who were champ, how do you feel Jerry would fare prime-prime vs. Micheal Spinks, who was excellent at about Jerry's weight. Thanks.
[6/16/03 11:52:34 AM] John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com ||| 10 | GARY: ON JG VS. SPINKS:Spinks was a good, smart boxer with a sneaky right and an awkward, defensive style. I don't think he was as strong as JQ and let's remember, Spinks had the benefit of strength training - something Jerry never really had access to. He did considerable weight training prior to his first fight with Holmes. All that being said, I think Jerry would have won a decision. Spinks did not have the cutting power in his jab that Ali did and he could be trapped on the ropes as Tyson proved. |

[6/18/03 05:45:07 AM] Troy Porter | Florida | tjspudjr@aol.com ||| 10 | i love you uncle Jerry and grndpa Jim happy fathers day grandpa i love you and miss you bothlove TJ |

[6/20/03 09:56:22 AM] BOB ROBERTS | UP STATE N.Y. | papertrp@borg.com ||| 10 | HELLO TO ALL OF THE QUIRNY'S AND THERE MANY FANS.I WAS NEVER A FIGHT FAN UNTILL I SEEN JERRY FIGHT ON T.V. ,AND THEN I WAS HOOK FOREVER.GOOD LUCK WAS MINE, WHEN JERRY WHO WAS WORKING FOR CBS AND COVERING A GEORGE FOREMAN FIGHT CAME TO UTICA N.Y., ONLY 10 MILES FROM ME.I WAS AT RING SIDE AND ENJOYED THE FIGHT BUT SEEING JERRY WAS WHAT I WAS AFTER. AFTER THE FIGHT I GOT JERRY'S AUTOGRAPH AND ASK ABOUT A COME BACK ,JERRY HAD A WAY TO MAKE A FAN WHO HE DID'T KNOW AND WOULD NEVER SEE AGAIN ,LIKE THEY WERE IMPORTANT. JERRY WAS A DOWN TO EARTH AND REAL MAN. I HAVE BEEN LOOKING IN ON THIS SITE FORE 2 YEARS AND ENJOYED IT VERY MUCH.THANKS FOR LETTING ME ADD ON TO THE JERRY QUIRNNY STORY. WIN ,LOSE OR DRAW JERRY WAS ALLWAYS A CHAMP.-----------BOB |

[6/21/03 02:59:28 AM] Evren | London | ||| 10 | Klitschko to Ko Lewis in the third round!! |

[6/21/03 08:45:10 AM] Jeffery Smith | New Orleans | jls@runbox.com ||| 10 | I would have disagreed on the result, but yesterday I discovered that Lewis is fatter than any previous fight. When he doesn't train, he loses. |

[6/22/03 08:26:22 AM] Kent | La Habra, Ca | orionosnside@aol.com ||| 10 | Lewis verses Vitali Klitschko was a good one. Lewis was a little sluggish but both fighters showed a lot of heart. For those that don't know, Lennox Lewis retained his heavyweight title by sixth round TKO due to a bad cut over Klitschko's left eye. Klitschko led on all three judges' scorecards by scores of 58 to 56 at the time of the stoppage but it was a tough fight. Worth a look when HBO shows it again. |

[6/22/03 09:14:19 AM] Jeffery Smith | New Orleans, LA | jls@runbox.com ||| 10 | It was odd seeing Lewis looking so small in the ring. I think he was totally out of gas in the 6th. Had Vitali not been cut, I think he would have stopped Lewis. Don't get me wrong, though; Vitali was tired too. Time for Lewis to retire. I wouldn't pay for a pay-for-view fight with him in the future based on this performance. |

[6/23/03 06:51:27 PM] Jimmy Dorsey | Ventura California | ronnyrains@yahoo.com ||| 10 | Klitschko's cut reminded me of the bad one, Jerry received vs Ali I in 70' (which referee Perez said was the worst he'd ever seen). Looked up some more NY Times microfilm and found Jerry and Mike Q. sparring at the felt forum. Before Mike's bout with Tommy Hicks, the article had both Brothers Ranked NO. 2 in the World, for their respective division's dated March 8, 1972, I'd predicted an 8th round Tko for Lennox Lewis, But it was a good bout, seemed both acted liked 't'd ran a marathon, before they even got in the ring, both would have passed out, had they thrown the punches Joe Frazier, AND JQ did in 69' |

[6/23/03 09:41:54 PM] Forest Ward | South Carolina | joekevin@cs.com ||| 10 | Hi folks, it right about 34 years ago a this very moment, Jerry Quarry was stopped by Joe Frazier at MSG in NYC. I was there that night. Joe Frazier and Jerry Quarry were brave gladiators that night, I am sorry someone had to lose. Sadly, Jerry and all the men who worked his corner that night have gone to the great beyond. Let us not forget, but also cherish Joe Frazier for still being with us |

[6/24/03 01:26:31 PM] Jimmy Dorsey | Ventura California | ronnyrains@yahoo.com ||| 10 | HI FOREST, glad to see your still out there, wished i'd been to half the fights you have been to in your life, one of the few Jerry Quarry fights I've seen live was James J. Woody in Vegas' and what an exciting 2 rounds that was, James J. really was in good shape, and throwing bombs before Jerry just overwhelmed him, Jerry'd just married "charlie" 2 days before, wasn't gonna let anyone beat him, I'm glad you picked up on last nights post and Quarry-Frazier 34 years ago to the day, but Forrest, not everyone in Jerry's corner has gone to the great beyond, Gil Clancy was also in Jerry's corner in the 69' bout, he's still alive isn't he? also worked Mac Foster's corner in 70' vs JERRY, AND QUARRY had Chickie Ferrara, then Chickie was in Ali's corner vs JQ, THIS IS GETTING CONFUSING!

Hi Jim, it's nice to hear from you. The night of Frazier-Quarry I, in Jerry's corner were Johnny Flores and Teddy Bentham, sadly all 3 are gone. Gil Clancy was actually assisting Joe Frazier that night. He was not actually in the corner, but on the fringes. Yank Durham and Gil Clancy were friends. Joe Frazier and Emile Griffith both trained together at the Concord Hotel for their March 1968 fight in the then new MSG, for their double header against Mathis and Benvenuti.
Durham, used Clancy the night of the Quarry fight for "insurance". Clancy was a MSG "insider" and a little "insurance" against Jerry was welcome, but it was not necessary that night. Jim, interesting enough that night the walkout that night was Forest Ward against Charley "Emperor" Harris. Ward got a gift 4 round decision. If the fight went one more round Harris would have knocked Ward out.
Clancy was in Ward's corner as his manager and trainer.

Jim, interesting enough that night the walkout that night was Forest Ward against Charley "Emperor" Harris. Ward got a gift 4 round decision. If the fight went one more round Harris would have knocked Ward out.
Clancy was in Ward's corner as his manager and trainer.

Sorry Jim, my mistake.

Leomnox Lewis proved once again why he doesn't belong in the same category with Ali, Joe Louis, Mariano, Larry Holmes, Joe Frazier, George Foreman, etc. Don't get me wrong---I think he's been a fine Champion and has represented the sport well.
He's had the belt a long time. But it just seems as though he's missing some important ingredient that keeps him in the "very good" class and prevents him from graduating to the "GREAT" class. Too often, he's lost or looked very average in victory. Sure, a guy like Larry Holmes got knocked down by Shavers or had trouble with Renaldo Snipes---but would find a way to turn the tide.
Again, as an example, Holmes had his hands full with Mike Weaver, but reached for the wildcard uppercut to win by KO and turn a spotty performance into a memorable classic. This is what GREAT Champions are made of. Lewis has lost fights, and plodded his way to dull wins against opponents he should have outclassed easily. Simply, I don't think you can mention him with the all-time greats. He leads the pack of the second tier.

On another note, I love reading this board to see everybody's recall of the super fights and fighters of the 60's and 70's. It seems amazing to call the 60's and 70's a "simpler time" because of all the social commotion that was going on---but part of me thinks that we all love to go back in our minds to a time when we were younger---and watching the Jerry Quarry video accomplishes that! Wow, it's Jerry in his 20's and 30's, in his prime, taking me back to a time when I was a young kid enjoying boxing on TV. Some of the older people who write on this board might have been about Jerry's age at the time, in the prime of their lives. Sorry to bore everyone! But I do have a question for all of you: Who would win Norton vs. Lennox Lewis? If both were in their primes, I think this would be an interesting fight. Mr. Norton was the arch nemesis of my favorite, Ali (Well, maybe Frazier was the ARCH nemesis, but Norton was right up there!). Norton certainly earned my respect by beating Ali in their first fight, winning on points against a prime Jimmy Young, the devastating KO of Bobick, KO of Lorenzo Zanon and even the win over JQ, as well as the loss to Holmes. The irony is that Norton showed how much heart he had in that loss more than in most of his wins. He had trouble against the larger guys like Foreman and (late in his career) Cooney. To me, this one might be too close to call. I don't think it would go the distance---but then again, Norton-Holmes went the full 15. But against Lennox Lewis, I would think that either Lewis would back him up like Foreman and Shavers did, landing the heavy leather to take Norton out early---or Norton would find his groove, wear Lewis down, and win by middle round KO or TKO. What does everyone else think?

---

 rock289z@yahoo.com

6/26/03 07:35:04 AM | John Gerard | NYC | 10 |

ON NORTON VS. LEWIS: Norton was a hard guy to evaluate. He looked great in all of his fights against Ali (in my opinion he easily won the third one) and against Quarry and Young. He looked really bad against Shavers and Foreman. I don't count the Cooney fight as he was so old at the time. He did have excellent stamina and good punch and was a thinking man in the ring. If Lewis went out there headhunting and throwing power shots he would probably ko Norton. If Lewis fought his usual tentative style he would lose a decision or be kayoed in a late round. Too close to call both me were good, both had flaws that could be exploited by an expert.

6/26/03 12:23:08 PM | Dan Cunningham | San Francisco | DGCSOCCER@AOL.COM | 10 |

Having looked through some of the comments made in the past from certain individuals. I would have to disagree with them about the quality of Gerry Cooneys fighting ability. Cooney may not have given us the match-ups that we wanted to see but I can say that Cooneys left hook was devastatingly lethal. I have watched several of his fights and several hours in sparring as well as reading how foes rated him. Sure he lacked good training, jab, right hand but there were a lot of champions who did not have certain tools required but who made up for it(tried to) with the ones they had. Cooney could bang with the left. Ask Jimmy Young, Ron Lyle or Ken Norton. Whether he fought them when they were 37 or 27, I think they could rate his punch better than some of the people downplaying Cooney in this arena!

6/30/03 02:26:25 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10 |

One thing I DO know Dan IS Cooney did have a good left hook, wether he'd have beaten a younger lyle,Norton,is questionable, another thing We know for sure in NEVADA, when he fought Foreman, we were rooting big time for George, and very concerned about Big GEORGE'S SAFETY!

6/30/03 10:48:46 PM | Kent Appel | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10 |

Dan. you are right, Cooney had a great left hook and he was a good fighter. The left hook he hit Foreman with in the first round of their fight shook up big George, big time and George's corner was very concerned. Foreman himself said the reason he stepped things up in the second round to get Cooney out of there was because he was in real danger and he had to get to Cooney before Cooney got to him.

His right hand was good too, better than he has been given credit for and he used it effectively against Holmes.

It was one of Holmes' tougher title defenses and it was when Holmes was still near his prime.

However, just because we say that our own Jerry Quarry would have had a good chance of beating Cooney because of Quarry's counter punching and boxing style and his ability to take a punch, does not mean we are downplaying Cooney at all.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/1/03 10:19:12 AM</th>
<th>JIMMY DORSEY</th>
<th>VENTURA</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I Can remember when Quarry interviwed Gerry Cooney, after a victory on St. Patty's day. And either Cooney was too shy, or to intimidated by Jerry to even speak, JERRY DID LOOK LIKE DICK BUTKUS IN A TUX, I do not know, and Jerry had a really hard time with that interview, Cooney's career, and opposition, cannot begin to compare to Jerry's great career. One thing I did want to tell my buddy Forest WARD, IS everyone, whom ever fought Jerry was at the peak of their condition, that tells you something about Mr. Quarry, Jerry probably could not beat everyone, that we've said he could on these posts, (he would have gave it a hell of a try). but the fact remains, that his career should go down as 20 to 30 of the top heavyweights of all time. On the subject of Cooney, he also had his jab working pretty good against &quot;big George&quot; and clearly won the first round, sorry he was hurt so bad, but like I said, we were worried for Foreman, TAKE CARE!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/1/03 12:47:57 PM</th>
<th>Paul Maduros</th>
<th>midwest</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I don't think that we should compare the heavys of the 60's with now a day fighters. Spencer/Quarry, Patterson/Quarry all these fights were very good because there was not much difference in size. It was a testament to Jerry that he could beat someone like Ron Lyle, It's like a lightweight beating a middleweight. I like it better back then. Now everybody's a monster in size. Hey, I'll say one thing Jerry was a cooler looking guy than all of them anyway!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/1/03 01:31:49 PM</th>
<th>Carl Weingarten</th>
<th>TJQF</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hello! There was a post some time back regarding a video of Jerry interviewing Muhammad before a (Norton III?) fight. If the quality is good, can we get a copy of this to show on the web site? Please post your email and I'll contact you. Thanks, --Carl</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/1/03 03:49:17 PM</th>
<th>Forest Ward</th>
<th>South Carolina</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Jimmy D., we have always been in agreement that Jerry Quarry was a super fighter, and I agree he fought and beat many good fighters at their peaks. I have also said repeatedly on this sight that Cooney was an overated fighter. He beat old men, long past their primes. He got knocked out by an old man, George Foreman, got knocked out by a lightheavyweight, Michael Spinks, and knocked out by Larry Holmes. Maybe he had the potential to beat good fighters, but if he had it, he never demonstrated it. Potential is great, but results are better. The record book shows that Cooney never beat a viable contender. He was the biggest hoax since Primo Carnera, George Chuvalo, and Henry Cooper beat good fighters who were in their prime, Cooney never did. Yet Chuvalo and Cooper are never mentioned on this site. People look at the record book!!!!!!!!!!!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/1/03 11:38:39 PM</th>
<th>Dan Cunningham</th>
<th>San Francisco</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| FYI: There were several top ten contenders in the 80's, notably future champions such as Trevor Berbick and Pinklon Thomas who were offered fights with Cooney but choose to skate around him as did Foreman to Quarry circa 1971-1974. This is a fact. It didn't help either that Don King was in control of 98% of the top heavyweights of this time. I have seen Cooneys left hook up close as I have also observed Foreman sparring sessions. Cooney could hit harder than Foreman with that hook. Cooney by the way KO'd a Russian at MSG who had defeated Stevenson (Cuban). Cooney nailed him with one left hook and ended the contest.
after having gotten tagged himself earlier. A lot of fighters avoided Cooney. The fighters he had problems with were the good Greg Page (Tim Witherspoon) like-fighters (boxer-puncher). He would destroy most other sluggers, so/so boxer punchers. He would have eaten up Chuvalo, Kirkman, etc. Quarry and Cooney would have been interesting. I could see Quarry winning. Cooney was a formidable contender. To be politically correct and say otherwise is ignorant and shows your lack of boxing knowledge. Cooney was never the same fighter after his noble attempt to take the title from Holmes who has to be one of the best boxers of all time.

Sure Cooney could bang with his left hook -- but only against guys whose legs were gone and who gave him a sitting duck target. Part of the trick is the land that kind of punch against a man who moves well and whose legs are not shot. And Cooney could not do that. Guys like Frazier and Foreman landed those type of punches on live bodies, not dead men with famous names. Also those left hook/uppercuts that Foreman landed in the first Frazier fight were harder than ANYTHING Cooney ever threw. Quarry would have disposed of Cooney in about six rounds or less, ditto a young Ron Lyle. I do respect Cooney's performance in the Holmes fight.

Cooney was a good fighter no question. I think his gutsy performance against Holmes where he took a lot of punishment is proof of this and demonstrates his skill as well as in his victories against faded stars like Norton, Lyle and Young. He really couldn't have bbeen in shape against Spinks or Foreman so we can't judge that accurately on those performances. What is impressive was his ability to not only kick his drug habit but to come out of it a very decent man who has made worthwhile contributions to society since. Not a great boxer but a good one, and a top man. Puts Tyson to shame.

I know on these posts, I'm always pro-Lyle, And I see Ron Lyle as just the opposite of Howie Cosells, appraisal, to me Lyle was a crowd pleasing dedicated fighter, who got the breaks a little too late in the fight game, not to say he did not have a great career, and not the "Thug" which is usually how he's portrayed, Anyone who saw him against Shavers can attest his courage, One other note for everybody, Can anyone tell me whom the third man IN Quarry's corner was when he fought Lyle, I know Albert and Clancy, but who was the younger guy there? It really does not matter, but I know it was not MOE (mr. JIMMY). And looks alot like Jerry's brother in law and Mike ROSSMANS FIRST LOSS in the person of Middleweight Mike NIXON, and am sure it probably was not.

I had never seen the Cooney/Lyle fight. But after watching the clip here, regardless of age, if Lyle is hit with that body shot, he would be unable to continue due to broken ribs. The difference youth may have made is that Lyle would have been less likely maneuvered into taking that shot and he may have hit Cooney with some significant punches of his own. Something he didn't do in the fight.

Hi folks, one more time, Gerry Cooney had a glass jaw, he could not take a punch. In his entire career he was never able to get off the canvass and win a fight after being knocked down. Cooney never had that fire in his belly, which all great fighters have, and most good ones too. I know a lot of people say he made a good showing against Larry Holmes. Good compared to what? Mike Weaver staggered Holmes more than once in their fight. Truth Williams, lost a disputed decision, many thought Williams won. Witherspoon, lost a close decision, many people thought Witherspoon won. Renaudo Snipes knocked Holmes down and almost out. Michael Spinks, won 2 decisions over Holmes. Comparing Cooney's fight with Holmes, to these fights, and quite frankly Cooney's loss is not that impressive.Make no mistake, Larry Holmes was a great fighter. HE HAD THAT FIRE IN HIS BELLY. |

7/3/03 01:39:53 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||||10|TO DAN CUNNINGHAM: Dan, believe me, Cooney would NOT have "eaten up" Chuvalo.Make no mistake, Larry Holmes was a great fighter. HE HAD THAT FIRE IN HIS BELLY. |

7/3/03 04:25:02 PM|Malcolm Donaldson|England||mjdonaldson1955@aol.com||||10|Jerry was my all time favorite fighter - great to watch - great to listen to... so sad to how the great man went down hill. Very nice to read all the comments about him. |

7/3/03 05:51:02 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|I agree Chuvalo would have stopped Cooney late or Cooney would grab onto a decision - 'grab' being the optimum word - so many done this against George. |

7/4/03 02:04:09 PM|Kent|La Habra. Ca||oriononside@aol.com||||10|I recently read that Chuvalo's mind is still sharp as a tack and that he has an excellent memory and everything, which in itself is amazing considering how much punches to stun about 3 elephants. Has to be one of the toughest heavys of all time. |

7/4/03 02:10:56 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||mooseygoop@aol.com||||10|I remember Mr. Jimmy (James Quarry) saying that there was a gene present in the body that shows whether or not Puglistic Dementia (Punch Drunk Syndrome), shows up in a fighter. He also said there was a test available to see if a fighter is likely to become damaged later but a company owns the patent to it and they are not letting it out for a reasonable price. This is too bad because a potential fighter could make a more informed decision to go into boxing or not. Punch Drunk Syndrome usually takes one of two forms, one has symptoms like Alzheimer's disease, which Jerry had and the other has symptoms like Parkinson's disease, which Muhammed Ali appears to have. Georg Chuvalo apparently doesn't have the gene that causes those afflictions. |

7/5/03 05:12:00 PM|R. U. Kidding|Never Never Land||Get real .com|||10|Mr. Cunningham, until I read your post I did not realize what a great fighter Gerry Cooney was. What really sold me was the lineage shared between Cooney and the great fighters Jimmy Young beat after losing to Cooney. Mr. Cunningham, you have convinced me that not only Gerry Cooney belongs in the Hall of Fame, but also Jimmy Young too! Boy oh boy, what man eating tigers Jimmy Young whipped after the Cooney fight! |

7/6/03 03:26:12 AM|Evren|London||@|||10|Jimmy Young also lost to Ossie Ocasio twice before losing to Cooney. He did however beat Donald Halpin ! |

7/6/03 02:27:41 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Evren: TALK about people holding Chuvalo, George was the "best ever "at the hold and hit, I can remember referee Zach Clayton's instructions for QUARRY-CHUVAL, "I WILL NOT TOLERATE ANY HOLDING AND HITTING!" then watched as George's entire offense was clinching and hitting
JQ, HEAD LOCKS ETC, could have easily been DQ'ed in today's standards. I have as much respect for Chuvalo as anyone, especially how he's cope[d] with everything! Although all he really did was get Jerry's "IRISH" going. Looked up some old magazines, and the WBC 4/15/71 they had Foreman rated over Ali, and 1/28/73 had Ellis rated over Frazier? "THE RING MAGAZINE WILL ALWAYS BE BEST!!"

CALIFORNIA | RonnyRains@yahoo.com | 10 | Dan Cunningham, Dan DUANE BOBICK, AND GERRY COONEY DO NOT GET A WHOLE LOT OF LEE-WAY ON THESE POSTS, Bobick between his Olympic loss to TEOFILO STEVENSON and KENNY NORTON won 100 of 101 bouts!!|

7/6/03 10:47:15 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | 10 | Hi All, tomorrow is 1 yr ago we lost our Father, and as some knew him Mr. Jimmy. So just remember the man who was loved, funny, good natured, and Daddy Cool. We all love & miss him very much. So please think about him. Thanks a bunch. |

7/7/03 02:15:34 AM | Kent Appel | La Habra, CA | oriononside@aol.com | 10 | It is hard to believe it has been a year since we lost Mr. Jimmy. There are often times when I wonder what he would think about "this or that" when discussions get going on the message board as he would often join in on the various topics. I miss his warm gravally voice as he recounted his views on his brothers' careers and boxing in general in our conversations on the telephone.

As some of you know, I write for some other websites and Jimmy always was very supportive of what I was doing and he encouraged me to sometimes post to plug what I was up to. He also went to bat for me on occasion when some of my "friends" were less than friendly on this and my other favorite message board, the old Joe Frazier's gym site. He also went to bat for Jerry when some people would post not so kind posts about Jerry, but he did so with the attitude of letting people have their say so. My favorite comment of his was, "if someone buys a computer it is the same as a fan buying a ticket to a fight. If they want to boo, then let them boo." He would not let them push him around too much and he would sometimes lash back but he did so with an air of dignity.

YES, HE IS MISSED! |

7/7/03 06:23:03 AM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Sunny Florida | sabrinaquarryporter@aol.com | 9 | Well Dad it's hard to believe that it's been a year already, and I still miss you sooooo much. Then I find out yesterday that Uncle Mike and Grandpa aren't doing to well at this point. I just wanted to say I LOVE & MISS YOU ALWAYS IN MY HEART FOREVER!!!!!!!!!! |

7/7/03 07:23:49 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 | ON COONEY VS CHUVALO. George Chuvalo went 30 rounds against Ali, was the only man to ever put Jerry Quarry down and out, and as far as I can recall, was the only man who took George Foreman's biggest bombs and stayed on his feet. Does anyone honestly think Gerry Cooney could have done ONE of those achievements? George Chuvalo lasted four rounds against a 24 year old Foreman and finished on his feet, Cooney was kayoed cleanly in two rounds and hit the deck twice against a fat, balding, forty two year old Foreman. God only knows what would have happened to him had he faced the Foreman that Chuvalo did. Chuvalo would have played the national anthem on Gerry's rib cage. |

7/7/03 08:09:41 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 | DAD, YOU ARE VERY LOVED, AND MISSED! ALWAYS WILL BE. |

7/7/03 12:13:35 PM | Joe Krause | Chicago | sadmspats@yahoo.com | 10 | James was a good guy, always was positive in his approach to people here on this website. Still see him sometimes in that old Mac Foster fight footage. Cheers James. |

7/7/03 01:45:55 PM | Dan Cunningham | San Francisco | DCsooccer@aol.com | 10 | I don't know what some of the people on this websites relationship to George Chuvalo is but both Quarry and Cooney would have defeated him 9 out of 10 times. If my memory serves me correctly, the referee of the Quarry/Chuvalo fight was about to stop the bout in favor of Quarry before Quarry was knocked down, arose and went back to his knees in an odd ko and mistake on Quarray's part on the count. Cooney would have chopped up Chuvalo and you would have said "so, Chuvalo was too old" etc.... I'm not trying to convince anybody anything, just stating opinions. Taking the generic assumption of Cooneys ability is apparently yours and is not based on anything other than lack of boxing knowledge/ignorance. By the way, Young should have been given the decesion over Ali, 4 yrs. prior to his match with Cooney and yes Young was a brilliant boxer. Who did Chuvalo defeat in the top ten of any substance besides Quarry on a fluke ko?

I agree, Young was robbed against Ali and he should have gotten a rematch. Also just because some posters don't agree with you please don't question their knowledge of boxing or imply ignorance-- believe it or not some people can disagree with you and still be in the know. One of the things I always liked about this board is the respect shown to differing opinions and I hope we can maintain it.

I feel George Chuvalo's best victory was against Doug Jones - a real good performance. His showing against DeJohn was a good one also not to mention savage.

To John Gerard: I hope that your admonishment of me was not selective. Since you took the opportunity to scold me as to my opinions, I hope by the same token that upon looking at other opinions posted on this website that you admonish others who have posted sarcastic/irresponsible posts. In addition: Having been to Gleasons Gym in NYC where you apparently use as your home city on this site, I've heard nothing but good things about Cooneys career and potential, from Iran Barkley to average Joes who still talk about his legendary sparring sessions to this day. As a matter of fact, noted trainer Eddie Futch, shortly before he died said that Cooney would have been heavyweight champion of the world if he had trained him. By the way, who did Chuvalo beat again in the top ten to make him a very good fighter other than his fluke win over Quarry?

Big fight this Sat. V Forrest vs R Mayorga. Should be a good one. That Mayoraga is a real character, he smokes 2 packs a day between fights and even a couple cigarettes a day while training plus hes willing to put up a $100 000 bet to any sportswriters that want to bet he'll lose. My pick is Forrest, I think Vernon underestimated him the first time and was a little over confident after 2 wins against Sugar Shane...Should be a pier 6 brawl.

To John Gerard: If asking a simple question to establish facts is arrogant then you are correct about me. I like to talk in terms of facts not fantasy or political correctness. I respect everyones opinion if they are making a point that is based on fact/logic as opposed to wishful thinking or general stereotyping.
because of common misconceptions about fighters from people who don't know better. Read some of your posts. You write with emotion, not facts. I thought this dialogue was a healthy one. I asked if you could justify Chuvalo as "a very good fighter" by beating other top ten fighter other than Quarry. (in a fight, Chuvalo was really lucky to win. Have you ever seen or read about this bout?) Chuvalo was a good fighter who dominated fighters outside of the top twenty in the world. As far as boring anyone, your lack of facts is boring me. Speak for yourself when you state that "we" are boring anyone on this website. I thought this dialogue was a healthy one. I asked if you could justify Chuvalo as "a very good fighter" by beating other top ten fighter other than Quarry. (in a fight, Chuvalo was really lucky to win. Have you ever seen or read about this bout?) Chuvalo was a good fighter who dominated fighters outside of the top twenty in the world. As far as boring anyone, your lack of facts is boring me. Speak for yourself when you state that "we" are boring anyone on this website. | 7/8/03 03:18:23 PM|Evren|London||0||10|I think this row is interesting – keep it up guys! | 7/8/03 09:50:29 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|This supposed conflict is mild compared to how it used to be around here. Keep the debate going, it is interesting. It gets boring when everyone here agrees all of the time.Evren, I was at the last Mayorga verses Forrest bout. I could have been at this one coming up this week but I didn't pursue the opportunity. The first fight was quite a shocker to those in attendance. But I wasn't surprised as I was at the weigh in too the day before the fight and there was something about the way he moved and his attitude that told me he had an excellent shot at winning. Something I just couldn't put my finger on, the "eye of the tiger" sort of thing. I am not going to pick a winner in this one as frankly, I don't know who is going to win. | 7/9/03 02:57:08 AM|Evren|London||0|0|10|Kent you are an 'iliterate' fool! Your opinions are worth about 2 cents.| 7/9/03 05:03:37 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlM1s4@aol.com|||10|Kent and John: sounds like you guys are having a battle of wits against a couple of unarmed men in Evren and Dan! Down here we call guys like them 'Boofheads'. On a more serious note - American middleweight Antwun Echols is coming down here next month to fight an unpopular Australian named Anthony Mundine. I'm told that Echols is a big puncher. Do you know much about him? | 7/9/03 06:52:02 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|INGO JOHANSON HAS ALZHEIMERS. Sorry to say, last night on cable news, Ingo's wife said that the former champ has Alzheimers. They did not relate it to boxing or go in depth. | 7/9/03 10:34:29 AM|Kent|not from jolly old England||orion@etc.|0|10|My old friend Evren attacks me? Et Tu Brute? Should I be beware of the Ides of March as well? Just trying to show that if I am a fool, that at least I am a literate fool! I now see the truth, Evren was Foolface and Koo Koo Klock after all! Paul, I didn't realize I was on anyone's side but I do believe I was saying Cooney gave Holmes one of his tougher battles, so Dan would be in agreement on this, not John.This is where Mr. Jimmy is missed. He always seemed to refereee things around here when the natives started getting a little restless. | 7/9/03 11:05:55 AM|Evren|London||0|0|10|Who said I was a friend. I do not mean to be rude but your comments are generally nonsensical. You always seem to think what you post is correct and leave little room for other posters opinions. Sorry do not mean to start another fight on here but have always wanted to say that! England is't very funny from where I'm standing...comedian! | 7/9/03 11:07:49 AM|Forest Ward|South Carolina||joekevin@cs.com|||10|Hi folks, regarding the tiff involving John Gerald and Dan Cunningham, I feel compelled to weigh in with my thoughts on the subject. I've always found John Gerald to be among the most knowlegdable and reasonable person on this site. I've never read any of his posts where he was sarcastic or rude to anyone, many times I ask myself why can't I be more like him when I make my posts. Sadly Mr. Cunningham leaves a lot to be desired when it comes to both being knowlegable, and reeasonable.| 7/9/03 10:36:01 PM|Dan Cunningham|San Francisco, Ca.|||DGCSOCCER@AOL.COM|||10|Mr. Ward: Upon viewing your prior posts I have to giggle as to your confirmation of John Gerard as a knowlegible and reasonable person of boxing. I disagree especially in regards to the ability/lack of ability of one Gerry Cooney. Is it possible that you feel this way about John Gerard because of the fact that you share the same views? Sir, maybe you can tell me how many top ten contenders Chuvalo defeated while they were in the top 10? You wrote how you would like to be more like John Gerard in the posts. Sir, right now, you have an opportunity to be more like John Gerard and stop responding to something you have little knowledge about. | 7/9/03 11:14:25 PM|Dan Cunningham|San Francisco, Ca.||DGCSOCCER@aol.com||||10|To Paul in Sydney: 1) I never once called you a name. (I wonder if John Gerard/Forest reprimanded you for your public name calling of me?) 2) I asked John Gerard/Forest for facts to support their claim which I never received as of yet 3)I established facts as to my beliefs. How does that make me unarmed? PS: I hope you don't rely on some of the posters on this site for your boxing information as I see you asked as to the ability of Echols. I would suggest, reading boxing magazines, watching it on tv, go to a boxing gym and talk to people in the sport, trainers, boxers etc.... That way you won't be unarmed in your boxing knowledge. (just a suggestion). In addition: We have a name for people like you who throw their 2 cents worth in while trying to appear witty to certain people. However, unlike you I will not get personal and stick to boxing facts and not personalities. Maybe you can do the same! |

7/10/03 12:03:25 AM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia81@aol.com||||10|Ok boys and girls lets not start this petty fighting again, Dad's watching from above and shakin his head. Let's keep this all positive and good, not negative and bad. PLEASE! FOR DAD, AND UNCLE JERRY!!|

7/10/03 08:29:12 AM|Forest Ward|South Carolina||Joekevin@cs.com||||10|ATTENTION DAN CUNNINGHAM: apparently you do not read my posts carefully. Gerry Cooney was stopped by Larry Holmes. The same Larry Holmes who was repeatedly staggered by Mike Weaver, Holmes was dropped and almost knocked out by Renauldo Snipes, and Earnie Shavers. Holmes won disputed decisions over Tim Witherspoon, and Carl Williams; and lost to disputed decisions to Michael Spinks. Comparing Cooney's fight against Holmes to these fights against Holmes, and you see that Cooneys LOSING effort was not all that impressive. Gerry Cooney was knocked out by a overblown lightheavyweight, Michael Spinks. Gerry Cooney, was knocked out by a fat old man named George Foreman.Gerry had a glass jaw, and NO FIRE IN HIS BELLY. Almost all great fighter get knocked down in fights, but they climb off the canvass to win the fight. Cooney never did this, NOT EVEN ONCE IN HIS CAREER. It's called HEART, and Cooney never demonstrated. Holmes was a great fighter, and he had that FIRE IN HIS BELLY! I said it before and I will say it again, Cooney was the biggest hoax since Primo CarneraContenders Chuvalo beat whil they were still contenders: Doug Jones, Manuel Ramos, Jerry Quarry.This is my last reply to Mr. Cunningham.|

7/10/03 09:03:34 PM|Dan Cunningham|San Francisco,Ca.||DGCSOCCER@aol.com||||10|Forest: George Chuvalo being a near 30 fight veteran lost to Pete Rademacher who was 7-3-1 at the time. Bobick would have destroyed Rademacher. Chuvalo did beat Jones who was freshly defeated by Billy Daniels who Quarry would destroy in 1 rnd. 3 yrs. later. Chuvalo did beat Ramos who had already started to slide after being ko'd by Frazier. Ramos descend merited him a 26-29 record. Perhaps not a name you would want to use to add for credibility to your case for Chuvalo. One fighter and one fighter only do I see as being a credible contender and that was Quarry. Chuvalo got the gift of his life that night. Cooney on the other hand had a crossroads fight with another winning fighter, Eddie Lopez which Cooney won. Cooney fought (tried) to fight ST Gordon who ran away from Cooneys left hooks and was disqualified. Gordon later was cruiserweight champion defeating a great warrior named Yaqui Lopez, Carlos Deleon, Jesse Burnett and Trevor Berbick. Cooney also fought a 35-2 Dino Dennis who he destroyed as well as Norton,Lyle and Young. Yes Weaver gave Holmes a competitive fight as did Snipes but to think it was a Gatti-Ward fight would be misleading. Your prior posts demonstrate a lot of anger toward Cooney and I'm not quite sure where its coming from. In the Holmes fight, I wish Cooney had came out and forgot about the 15 rnds and made it into a fight as opposed to a chess match which he lost. I believe Cooney was never the same fighter again although he did defeat a 23-1 Eddie Gregg, a 22-6 George Chaplin and a 22-0 Phil Brown. Cooney was unstable and never the same fighter when he fought Spinks and Foreman although Foreman states that Cooney had him out but he didn't follow up. I believe Foreman also became heavyweight champion after his Cooney fight, ko'ing Moorer. If Eddie Futch stated to Cooney before he died that if Cooney had let Futch be his trainer, he would have been heavyweight champion of the world. That I believe. As I believe that if Clancy had had him earlier, Cooney would have been a better fighter. I believe that Mike Tyson was a great fighter but he never once got off the canvas to win a fight. Continuing your career after being ko'd and trying to improve on your mistakes against the same/similar/better competition as opposed to weaker competition also shows heart! I don't see Chuvalo fighting comparative fighters to Cooney after his losses to good fighters. Chuvalo fought many average .500 fighters and worse to pad his stats.

7/10/03 10:16:37 PM|Paul Maduros|midwest||pama42@yahoo.com||||10|Lets see now gentlemen, Cooney vs Chuvalo. I guess Chuvalo is a heavy since he was about 208 to 217. Because of the reach and power difference I would choose Cooney. He could get the punches in first. We miss you James, I never was lucky enough to meet you. God bless.

7/11/03 04:15:34 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com||||10|Dan: the reason I asked for opinions on the Mundine v Echols fight in Australia next month was because I respect the knowledge of posters on this site. You should too because it can be a forum for learning as well as debate. You mentioned gleaning knowledge from magazines, trainers, boxers, gyms etc. That's a bit hard down here as American boxing magazines cost over $20 and none of our gyms have American fighters who'd know anything about Echols. Anyway, one of the posters to this site contributes articles to a boxing website and another actually got into the ring and has practical experience. There is nothing wrong in seeking their views, is there Dan? Sometimes it's better to ask and then listen. As far as Cooney is concerned, while he was fun to watch, he didn't have much substance. But that is just my opinion.

7/11/03 09:53:35 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||||10|Both Victor Valle and Gil Clancy were fine trainers, but even the most skilless trainer cannot compensate for a glassjaw (except through careful matchmaking, which Valle insisted on). Gil Clancy did work wonders with Cooney from a technical standpoint. He never in his career looked better than in his first round against Foreman and that incudes the Holmes fight. Alas for Gerry, George started to connect in round two and that was all she wrote. Chuvalo lasted 15 rounds against Ali in his prime (twice) does anyone honestly think Cooney could have? Yes, I am sure Cooney would have landed some good shots early, but when they had no effect, he would have faded and gone out in about 8 or 9 rounds. He knew nothing about infighting, something Chuvalo was very good at, nor could he fight in a clinch. I also wonder how well he would have taken Chuvalo's body punches. Lyle and Norton were both in their 40's when they fought Cooney. He lost to Foreman and Spinks and Holmes. He really defeated only one top fighter who was still near his prime and that was Jimmy Young. So the whole myth is based on ONE victory and a lot of nonsense spread by master promoters Rappaport and Jones. Valle was the only honest one in the group. After Foreman ko'd Cooney, he publicly criticised Gil Clancy for not protecting Gerry better. Cooney fought a pretty durable C-grade jouryman fighter named Eddie "The Animal" Lopez and could not knock him out, so to think he would ko ironman Chuvalo is a great leap of faith indeed. Angelo Dundee said it best regarding what a trainer can and cannot do "I can't give a guy starch, he's gotta be born with it." Dan, I have a tape of Foreman vs. Cooney and I would be happy to mail it to you for free if you were to email me your mailing address. If you didn't see it, you really should. I agree that nine out of ten times, Quarry would have beaten Chuvalo, but the fact, not supposition, is that they only met once and George ko'd him. I agree it was fluky, but just scoring a legitimate knock down (as even Quarry admitted it was) over a rugged guy like Jerry is in my mind for more of an accomplishment than anything Cooney ever did in his entire career.

I have to hand Mr. Dan C. His due on one thing! He really does stick by a fighter he believes in, as I have had to do growing up in Quarry-Country, Gerry Cooney was in the major leagues of course, And I believe the real appraisal of a bout with COONEY/Chuvalo, is that Cooney was a pitcher and Chuvalo a catcher! And would have been one of the "better" heavyweight encounters!

I have to hand Mr. Dan C. His due on one thing! He really does stick by a fighter he believes in, as I have had to do growing up in Quarry-Country, Gerry Cooney was in the major leagues of course, And I believe the real appraisal of a bout with COONEY/Chuvalo, is that Cooney was a pitcher and Chuvalo a catcher! And would have been one of the "better" heavyweight encounters!

We can look at Cooney two ways. Either he was a flawed fighter who was protected by management who knew his flaws, or he was a fighter who really had the potential to go far but was mismanaged. I tend to think Cooney had some talent but his flaws would have eventually overshadowed his talents, regardless of how he was handled. One thing most people would agree with is he did have one powerful left hook and he was one punch away from victory in any fight.

I certainly think he was better than Duane Bobick and Primo Carnera. But he was not better than our Jerry. I do think that although Holmes had some other fights that were as tough or tougher than his defense against Cooney, the ones that stand out the most happened when Holmes was at his very best, the time period between 1978 to 1982 and Cooney's fight with Holmes was during that period. Saying Cooney had one good fight, his valiant losing effort against Holmes, does not diminish Holmes' standing as an all time great any more than Buster Douglas' victory over Mike Tyson diminishes Tyson's standing. Tyson still is ranked higher than Douglas in any all time ranking and even if Cooney had pulled off an upset over Holmes, Holmes would most likely still be rated higher than Cooney in such rankings. Yes, Cooney and Douglas could never duplicate their one good fight again but those fights still happened.

Hey, does anyone remember the middleweight Mike Nixon who fought in the 70's. I remember when I was bored, I used to watch the fights on the tube. Most of the fighters were pretty boring, but one night Mike Nixon was fighting. Jesus, was that guy good. I remember the first fight I watched with him in it, both fighters looked like they were being cautious and measuring each other when - faster than you could believe - Nixon fired a combination that caught the other guy completely unawares. The other guy toppled over backwards, and that was pretty much the end of the fight. I saw Nixon on the tube several times after that, and his hand speed was so much faster than any of his opponents that I was positive that nobody would ever be able to beat him. Eventually, he was apparently beaten by two fighters with the last name of Davis. I remember the ring announcer called it "the Davis jinx". I remember seeing Nixon in the top ten in one of the boxing magazines at one point, but I don't think he was ever a world champion. I guess Nixon probably wasn't as good as, say, Marvin Hagler or Ray Leonard, but I never saw Hagler or Leonard shoot out the lightning-fast combinations that Nixon could. Well, I just thought I'd give Nixon his due. As a boxing fan in the 70's I was duly impressed.

Wow Mike Nixon, isn't a name we've heard for a while, years ago, he married into the family.

Art Davis and Indian George Davis were the two fighters who beat him. Mike was a game scraper who had the Quarry fighting spirit. I thought he married one of the Quarry sisters or cousins. When Art Davis knocked Mike out, Davis was running around boasting and acting like a fool, and Jerry got in the ring and said a few words to cool him down. The Ring magazine quoted him as saying someting about "knocking his shorts off", but I think it might have been a bit saltier. :-)

Yes I also followed Mike Nixon's career, they only time he was ever in the top ten was as a junior middleweight for World Boxing after a KO win over Gert Steyn, in 1977. Ring Magazine had him in their U.S. ratings when he beat Mike Rossman, at the time World Boxing rated him #14. He had everything but a chin and frequently sparred with Sugar Ray Robinson in 1971-72, also managed by Jerry Quarry, between his contract riff with veteran pilot Mel Epstein, he was 27-8-1 10 knockouts and ko'd 6 times, last bout a ko loss in Madison Square Garden to Vito Antufermo on the Ali-Shavers Undercard.

On Nixon: Mike's Career took a turn for the better, when he got away from Epstein, and had Ralph Gambina, and started throwing his punches better, and turning them over, AFTER THE DAVIS DISASTER'S. From 1973 on he only lost to the very best of middleweight's "Sugar Ray Seales, Tony Licata, Mike "Jewish Bomber" Rossman (A nationally televised rematch). And of course Antufermo, he was robbed in a Draw with Rico Dinerous, at the Olympic, (won every damn round). And also highway robbery vs Dave "SUGAR" Love, winning every round then decking Love with a body blow, whom Love said was low and could not continue, resulting in a 9th-round no decision, THE DAVIS DEBACKLES REALLY HINDERED HIS CAREER!

I remember a pretty good lightheavy named Eddie Bossman Jones. I wonder whatever became of him. I believe he was Foreman's sparring partner. Also Jimmy The Cat Durpree another tough guy who no one was dying to fight either.

Jerry Quarry was a terrific fighter, and my favorite heavyweight, being a homeboy from LA, if not Bellflower. When I met him in person, he was gracious and friendly. I was surprised not only at how short he seemed for a heavyweight, but how broad and powerful he was. I was sad at his passing, and heartbroken to discover how tragic his last years were. I will remember him as a great warrior with a huge heart- and a fine gentleman.

And, oh yeah, he whipped Jimmy Ellis's butt. Seth, you hit the nail on the head about Jerry being down to earth and easy to talk to. He always had a way of making his fans feel important. He didn't act like he was above us. I will always remember him for not only being a fine fighter, but also a very fine gentleman. The sporting world could use a few more like Jerry Quarry.
Jerry? He is listed at 6'.

I stood next to Tsyon on the street and he is about 5'9".

John Gerard: Styles make fights. In addition there is not always rhyme or reason many times in justifying how a fight turns out by comparing the fighters to other results in other fights. There are sometimes too many variables involved that the fight fan does not know about. For instance, Quarry sparred Norton several times. Quarry had his way with him allegedly ko'ing him with 16 oz gloves on. But, when Quarry finally fought Norton, Norton got the better of Quarry. Why? Because Jerry was not in shape and had been partying in Hawaii. The promoter and manager for Norton knew this. Did we? No! Alas, Cooney was promoting fights, smoking, drinking and partying when the Foreman fight came up. Clancy liked Cooneys chances because of the power in the left hook. There was not that much preparation made for Cooney in this fight and Clancy did not do anything technically to improve Cooneys skills/lack of. The plan was to turn this fight into a donnybrook with Clancy performing a Phil Jackson like support for Gerry hoping that the left hook would win it. Final note: Eddie Animal Lopez fought Cooney in a crossroads collision fight of two heavyweight prospects not of a C rated journeyman fighting a heavyweight prospect. That was why it was broadcast on national TV. Two good winning fighters trying to make the next level. To ask me to re-view the Cooney-Foreman fight to justify your point is like me asking you to view the Quarry-Norton fight as to justify why Quarry was not a great fighter. I won't because I know its not true, there are more factors to be considered in the bigger picture of things.

Dan: actually, Dan, Clancy made a point of saying he wanted to work on Gerry's balance and ability to punch while going backwards. And he did a good job. Like I said, in the first round, Cooney, to my mind, looked the best he ever looked -- at least the most well rounded. He showed boxing skills he never showed before and the ability to fight on the run. Clancy did a very good job. That's why I wanted to show you the tape. No other reason except that it was a fun fight to watch and it shows how different a given fighter can be in the hands of other trainers.

John Gerard, strangely enough Bossman Jones was Jerry Quarry's sparring before the Mac Foster fight; and Jerry gave the Bossman considerable credit for his victory over Foster. Then when Jerry fought Ali in Oct of 70, the Bossman was in Ali's camp, and Quarry said something to the effect, "yeah, the Bossman used to work with me, and if he shows his head around here I will break his neck." I think the Bossman may have been working in the Foreman camp before George fought Ali, in the movie the "Greatest," I think it portrayed the Bossman as a spy for Ali in Foreman's camp. I think I remember him as a cornerman for Norton in the 3rd Ali Norton fight. A few years ago I saw a boxing story on the internet about the Bossman, he was working as a clerk/deliveryman in a liquor store. The impression I got from the story was that he was not doing too well. I saw Jimmy Dupree fight a draw with Willie Burton in the semifinal to the Dick Tiger-Frankie Depaula fight in the Garden Oct 68. It was a dull, but interesting fight, neither deserved to win, they both had to much respect for each other, to take a chance, it was like a chess match. Where as the Tiger-Depaula fight was one of the best fights I ever saw. The first five rounds were comparable to the Foreman-Lyle fight. The last five rounds were nothing to write home about, Depaula was shot, but he didn't quit. Tiger won a 10 round decision. I met Jerry Quarry once, I am 5' 9" and Jerry had me by maybe 2", but he was very broad. Big shoulders and forearms. He was built along similar lines to Mickey Mantle.
heck of a Light-heavyweight, Also despite Jerry's 72-inch reach, he had 17 1/2 inch guns, about 2 1/2 inches bigger than the normal heavyweight Ali and FRAZIER ETC. I'll admit they sure didn't look that big! but looks are deceiving!

By the way does anyone know if New Jersey heavyweight Tony Alongi was ever in the top ten world rankings (say The Ring Magazine?) in the early to mid-60's. if so, Jerry Quarry was 1-6-1 vs PAST-PRESENT-FUTURE World Champions, 7-0 vs top ten contenders, 7-2-2 6 knockouts vs past/future top ten contenders, and 38-1-1 vs the rest. (including ill-advised Cranmer). In case anyone is confused (like me). This was of course during Jerry's career, I've been informed Alongi did break the top ten during his career, but they did not know when, with a 38-2-1 record against JQ. It's easy to believe, they others who where ranked contenders (but not when JERRY FOUGHT THEM) Where, Daniels Machen, Chuvalo, Zanone, Neumann, Miteff, London, and Corletti (at THE FABULOUS FORUM Curly).

Alongi was never in the top 10 of Ring at the end of the year. He might have been ranked during the middle of the year after the draw with Chuvalo. That was a robbery, George ate him alive. Also add Oscar Bonavena to the ledger of win for Chuvalo. That was terrible decision for Oscar!!

I met and saw Jerry several times in the 1980s and he seemed about the same height as me, I am just over 5'11" in height. Of course he could have been six feet tall as I am almost that tall. I have seen Jerry listed at six feet and a half inch tall. Jerry looks taller in the tapes than Joe Frazier, who is listed at 5'11" but I think Joe is actually shorter than this.

Very much so John G, the Rock came down from Massachusetts, to see Jerry's bout with Eddie Machen, but went home alone after JQ's loss; I've heard a lot of stories about it, some said Rocky left before the bout was over!! He was prepared to pay $100,000 FOR THE QUARRY CONTRACT!!

That Rocky didn't think that Jerry was enough of a prospect was not fair to Jerry. He was only 21 when he lost to Machen, hardly a career ender as Machen had much more experience. Floyd Patterson lost to Joey Maxim while coming up and nobody considered Patterson at the end of the road. He was just an inexperienced fighter verses a skilled veteran, same as Jerry verses Machen.

Another example, did everyone think Joe Louis was washed up because he lost to Max Schmeling the first time. No way! That's surprising about Rocky. I thought he would notice and appreciate Jerry's ruggedness and take his youth into consideration. I know Rocky approached Ali after he won the Olympic gold and wanted to manage him.
CALIFORNIA| RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10 | KENT: (the famed CURLY Q.LINK of our FEARLESS LEADERS CLUB). Very good observation, did Boxing people think Ron Lyle was thru after JQ? or "SUGAR RAY LEONARD" after DURAN? Saw the Tyson story last night, the jury is still out on the quality of Mike's opponents and he did miss at least 6 top punchers, in BOWE, WITHERSPOON, FOREMAN, MERCER, MORRISON, AND MOORER, how many contenders did Ali miss?? I haveta say "IRON MIKE" had GREAT PUNCH SPEED AND POWER!! (just kill ya!!).

| 7/17/03 03:19:31 PM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 | ON BONAVENA-CHUVALO. It must have been a hard fight to score as lots of people tell me Chuvalo got robbed and others tell me that Bonavena should have gotten credit for scoring a knockdown which apparently was ruled a slip. I never saw a film so I have no opinion. Sounds like a good match up though. Two iron men. One thing which I universally hear is that Chuvalo got robbed in his "draw" against Alongi.

| 7/17/03 07:36:37 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA
CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10 | HERE'S MY LIST OF JQ'S TOUGHEST OPPONENTS
"THE DIRTY DOZEN" 1-MUHAMMAD ALI 2-JOE FRAZIER 3-KEN NORTON 4-FLOYD PATTERSON 5- RON LYLE 6-EARNIE SHAVERS 7-JIMMY ELLIS 8-EDDIE MACHEN 9-THAD SPENCER 10-MAC FOSTER 11-BUSTER MATHIS 12-GEORGE CHUVALO

| 7/18/03 07:50:30 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 | JIMMY D: Actually Larry Middleton gave Jerry a pretty tough fight over in London. I think Jerry just won by a quarter of a point decision. |

| 7/18/03 08:20:31 AM | Forest Ward | South Carolina | joekevin@cs.com | 10 | John Gerard, I have a tape of the Bonavena-Chuvalo fight. And it was a very hard fight to score. It is not an exciting fight, over the years I've watched it twice. I could easily understand how someone could vote for Chuvalo, or Oscar, or even make it a draw. There was a lot of clinching and shoving. Although they both staggered each other at different times. And Chuvalo went down once and the referee ruled it a slip, or a push. Actually, I thought Oscar knocked him down. Either one of them stops Cooney in the late rounds. |

| 7/18/03 08:35:16 PM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 | Oscar Bonavena was a tough guy. Hard puncher and from what I hear a hard partyer too. I know in his early fights he had Charlie Goldman training him. I always thought he and JQ would have made a good fight. I believe they signed but Oscar broke his left hand and had to pull out. No one ever fought Oscar and had an easy time of it. Not Frazier, Lyle, Ali, or anyone else. I think his lowpoint was loosing to Ellis and actually getting floored twice. That really surprised me. |

| 7/18/03 10:42:37 AM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA
CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10 | JOHN GERARD: Yes I know BIG JOHN, When I rated these 12, it was more or less by there overall stature, and how I think they would or did line up against each other, not necessarily there bouts with JQ. I've always said that 1972 MIDDLETON was a little underrated, Jerry won more like 6 Or 7 rounds, Writer's at ringside said it shouldnt have been that close, like the NEW YORK TIMES, W.B.A. RANKED Middleton fourth, when Lyle took him out. |

| 7/18/03 11:47:26 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 | I wonder how Jerry would have done against Henry Cooper? Since Cooper had been kayoed by Ingo and Patterson, I would have to bet on Jerry. Cooper did have a good left jab and hook though. |

| 7/18/03 03:34:18 PM | Paul Maduros | midwest | pama42@yahoo.com | 10 | To his credit Jerry was able to compete w/fighters much bigger than himself. Jerry's training habits are in question. Like his brother James told me, when he was in top shape, he stood a chance against anybody. I carry a picture of Jerry in my wallet, anytime someone wants to bring up great fighters I tell them about Jerry. I don't see my self carrying around a picture of Gerry Cooney, Jerry was way cooler than him. |

| 7/19/03 12:54:23 PM | George L. Otto | Youngstown, Ohio | ehnpbsa@aol.com | 10 | To the visitors of this site: To date, as the Chief Counsel/Legislative Director of the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing and TJQF, I have written and mailed four letters to many individuals expressing support for the passage of Senate Bill 275, The Professional Boxing Amendments Act of 2003. If passed and implemented, this bill would establish a federal boxing commission—a badly needed organization. Boxing needs this—especially to protect the fighters. Please email your U.S. Senators to express your support for it.

Thanks

[7/20/03 08:22:09 PM] Dan Cunningham| San Francisco| DGCSOCCER@AOL.COM

Concerning carrying boxers photos in wallets:

First: I would never carry a photo of any fighter in my wallet because boxing is what they do as a living and that does not make them better than the common man outside of the ropes (although I would have to say that as a lot, boxers are a lot more spiritual than other athletes). Secondly, John Gerard: Are you for real or are you kidding me about your analogies of Cooney in the Foreman fight? You could tell that much in one round? Guess what? it doesn't stand up! Cooney threw the big left and hurt George in the first round. Nothing new! If anything Cooney of the late 70's early 80's would have jumped all over George. Is that what you mean by Cooney being more technical in this fight? Not finishing his man when he had him in deep dog doo? Team Cooney should have had some code word or message to Cooney to let him know that George was ready to go instead of waiting to get out the info at the end of the round. I guess Cooney forgot to be technically sound from Clancy in the 2nd rnd when he got ko'd! Even though it is common knowledge from Clancy himself that Cooney's strategy was that he was going to throw the big left on George early, fast and often. Cooney chose to fight tactically when he should have fought his fight and followed up on his left hook! That was the difference in this fight! That was Cooneys "tactic", not Clancy's!

[7/21/03 08:59:10 AM] Kent| La Habra, Ca| oriononside@aol.com

Dan, while I never have carried a picture of an athlete in my wallet I understand wanting to have a hero. We are in a different era now where all of the faults of a performer are pointed out. Say for example, if basketball star Kobie Bryant is proven innocent of his sexual assault charges, the media will still keep reporting how he cheated on his wife. Years ago, this sort of thing would not have been reported, assuming he is not proven guilty. When I was a small boy, my heroes were baseball players Willie Mays and Mickey Mantle, I know now that Mantle was a real playboy drunk who had affairs with women often. As a boy, I would not have wanted to know about this as I looked up to him. Mantle was larger than life to me and there was nothing wrong with this kind of innocence. Now the innocence is gone and I don't know if that is good or bad, it was just different. Another example is recently President Bill Clinton was considered a piece of crap for having well publicised affairs while in the past, President John F. Kennedy did the same thing but Kennedy was looked up to because the press didn't report his shortcomings. One of things about Jerry Quarry that makes it easy to look up to him is he was real down to earth and he never acted like he was above his fans.

[7/21/03 01:04:58 PM] Jimmy Dorsey| Ventura California| RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM

I would hardly say "BIG GEORGE" WAS READY TO "GO" VS COONEY in that first round, I'm not very sure Cooney would have beaten Foreman in any era, Foreman nearly decapitated the man! Foreman was suffering more from exhaustion, rather than Muhammad Ali's punches in Zaire, other than that the man's never been kayoed, Just watch his Lyle fight, Foreman could have laid down and played dead at anytime of that bout, and got more money for a rematch!! Man did he take some power shots! Dan Cunningham one thing you really impress me with, is you do stick by your fighter, something I've had to do to detractors, concerning a man nicknamed "the Bellflower Bomber!"

Mr. Cunningham do you ever run out of excuses for Gerri Cooney. Once you offered the excuse that Cooney lost to Foreman because of Gerri's drinking and drugging. This despite the fact repeatedly for the record Gerri claims that he was through with drinking and drugging by that time. Gerri uses the drinking and drugging excuse for the losses to Spinks and Holmes, although apparently the drinking and the drugging did not interfere with his performances when he was beating broken down old fighters. Now the excuse of the day for Gerri's loss to Foreman is that his corner did not have a "code word", to let him know Foreman was in trouble. A "code word", are you real?And finally it is your opinion that Jimmy Young actually defeated Ali when they fought. Mr. Cunningham, tell me how does a challenger win the heavyweight championship of the world, when he repeatedly sticks his head out between the ropes so he won't get hit. As Young did when he fought Ali.Mr Cunningham get your head out of Gerri's ass.|

| 7/21/03 04:35:37 PM| Joe Krause| Chicago|| sadmspats@yahoo.com||10| Gerry Cooney was a fine fighter. He was never a great fighter. Neither was Chuvalo, both could give the best guys trouble, but they weren't championship caliber. Cooney could have snuck a title from a Mike Weaver or John Tate, but would never have a chance against the top guys of the 70's, except maybe Norton.| |

| 7/21/03 05:39:28 PM| Angelo| Washington, DC|| funktron@yahoo.com||10| On an earlier post, someone was attacked for making reference to Cooney's win over Jimmy Young, and pointing out that Young won some fights after that loss, against decent fighters. Fact of the matter is, there are a few categories of boxers, including "stepping stones," "trial horses," "live fighters," "contenders," and "Champions," and maybe even one or two groups I missed. Basically, when Cooney won that fight, by TKO, in I believe, round 4 (might have stopped Young on cuts), Jimmy Young was NOT a shot fighter. The guy who posted only pointed out that Young still had something left by beating a couple up and comers or at least decent quality competition after losing to Cooney. No one has a record of only fighting the top 10 boxers---everyone has some lesser known opponents. The guys on that list of Young's wins post Cooney are recognizable to real boxing fans of that era. I remember these guys as tough outs. I'm not a big Cooney fan and was actually happy to see Holmes stop the Cooney hype machine. But the fact remains that Cooney was impressive against some decent competition---people that real fans know and remember as tough guys. And Young was not washed up, could still box, and in fact have Cooney a good fight were it not for the cut. Believe me, when Cooney knocked out Norton and Lyle, these guys were past their prime, but still dangerous. My guess is that both Norton and Lyle could have beaten most heavyweights at that time, including those ranked between 10 and 20. That's world class. When Larry Holmes beat Ray Mercer, he proved that a former great old man could beat a good up and coming fighter on a good day. If you're a Cooney basher, fine. But don't show your ignorance by ignoring the fact that he had some nice wins against good fighters. |

| 7/21/03 06:27:07 PM| Evren| London||@||10| Norton could'nt even beat LeDoux before he got beat by Cooney and was almost knocked out by him. Norton was shot - big time. Lyle had been knocked out by Lyn Ball if I remember correctly before his fight with Cooney. However, I do feel Cooney was a decent fighter BUT should have been better.I do feel he would have been very sucessful in todays environment of poor heavies. Hey Guys - Lay off Mr Cunningham ! Oh, by the way. Lennox Lewis is the best he lays all the Americans to rest ! |

| 7/21/03 08:39:57 PM| Forest Ward| South Carolina||joekevin@cs.com||10| Angelo, permit me to display my ignorance about boxing, since by your definition I am not a real fight fan. After Young lost to Norton in Nov 77, and prior to fighting Cooney 2 1/2 years later in May of 80. Young had 6 fights and he lost 3 of them. By no defintion can a victory over Young at this point in Young's career be considered note worthy. Even so Cooney stopped him on a cut, a very bad cut. Strangely, Cooney the great left hooker could not even knock down a man who was half blind and drowning in his own blood. |
Cooney's "great" loss to Larry Holmes. As ignorant as I am about boxing, Angelo, I remember Kenny Norton losing a close decision to Holmes (some people thought Norton won). I remember Mike Weaver staggering Larry Holmes and almost dropping him a few times, before he lost. Renaldo Snipes came close, he dropped Holmes and almost stopped him. Ernie Shavers, dropped Holmes and almost stopped him. Michael Spinks won 2 questionable decisions over Holmes. When I compare Cooney's fight with Holmes to the ones I just mentioned, Cooney's LOSS does not impress me. I remember Larry Holmes saying something to the effect before his fight with Cooney that, "Cooney was the great white Hope for a lot of dopes". Ironically, there are still a lot of dopes around. What made Holmes a great fighter was the hunger in his belly, he would rather die than lose. Cooney never had this hunger. He preferred the soft easy way. Fight a lightheavyweight (Spinks), so he gets knocked out. Fight a fat old man (Foreman) so he gets knocked out. Cooney had a glass jaw, his handlers knew this and they covered it up by creating the biggest hype job on the public since Primo Carnera was fighting. I have yet to read any of the Cooney defenders on this site write about how Cooney ripped off the public and his "loyal" fans. Cooney admits throughout his career he was drinking and drugging, that being the case he never gave 100% of himself. Yet many people on this site pretend as if he did. He was never in shape for a fight that went beyond 8 rounds. I remember Cooney's early fights when he had "Mom-Dad", written on his trunks. Then for many years afterwards he blames his father for his "cruel" up bringing. I remember early in Cooneys career he used to come into the ring before his fights with a midget dressed as a leprechaun. And you expect me to take him serious. One more note Angelo, if you and Cunningham chose to be rude to people on this site by talking about a persons ignorance... Fine, but I for one will respond in kind.

Forest got it right. To me, Cooney was a lot like Frank Bruno in that neither was a warrior in the sense of a Frazier, Ali, Holmes, Jerry Quarry, or even Oscar Bonavena. Watching Cooney and Bruno fight, I often got the impression that they never really wanted to be in the ring. I think that boxing was the means to a good financial future for them, where as Ali and the others craved boxing greatness, lived to fight other great boxers, and craved the adulation and excitement that being in the ring brought them. And even if Cooney and Bruno had the will to win that the others had, I still don't think that they had the skills to rise to a champion's level. Additionally, in Cooney's case, he lacked athleticism and was too awkward to have the superb timing and balance of a great fighter. I think that Cooney and Bruno were happy enough just to be contenders. They were undoubtedly very good contenders, but nothing more.
"PRIME" RIDDICK BOWE, Ali the true "GREAT" Wether you liked him or not, Did not miss the top 50!! And a lot had returns! He also was a little chastised for not giving Foreman a return (CAN YOU BLAME HIM?) I still have a clip of him Grabbing Wepner and returning 30 rabbit punches!! When things get to bad here, I put that tape in, and all the sudden, everything is "all better" take care!!

7/22/03 03:52:06 PM| Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10
In response to Forest---Jimmy Young's fights AFTER he lost to Cooney were what I was referring to. I'm not saying Young was near the top of his game, or that Cooney was ever a great fighter---only that Young's post-Cooney record and opponents show that he had a little gas left in the tank. You're right---before the Cooney fight, Young lost to Ossie Ocasio twice, which was a joke that ended his chances to ever be a contender again. Also, I think your knowledge is good and I apologize for the "ignorance" comment! It's a difference of opinion that's been kicked around on this site---but I'm still in the camp that takes Gerrie Cooney for what he was: A big guy with a good punch who won some fights impressively. I totally buy into Larry Holmes' comments that Cooney moved up the food chain faster because he was white---hey, like it or not, in the few years after the "Rocky" movie era, there was hunger for a good white heavyweight. Cooney was the closest thing out there to challenge effectively for the title. And people like Holmes made good paydays on this basis! I was an Ali fan, then a Holmes fan, so the color issue was never important to me---but a lot of fans gravitated to the contending white heavies. The record and opponents speak loudly: Jerry Quarry was the best of the group, but Cooney was better than Bobick. And Forest, I never said that Cooney gave Holmes a great fight---you pointed out guys who were bigger threats to his title (and you missed Leroy Jones, who was giving Holmes a good fight for a few rounds before his eye closed and Holmes won by TKO in Round 8). But Holmes also had a lot of easy title defenses, like Leon Spinks, Marvis Frazier and I think Alfredo Evangelista might have even been on the list. Gerrie Cooney showed some heart in his loss to Holmes, taking it to the 13th round. Holmes had the fire that Cooney didn't, and a lot more skills too. As I see it, it works both ways: Yes, Cooney and Bobick got breaks because they were white. But it also seems to me that they are judged more harshly now for the same reason. Why is it that Bobick was a joke when he was knocked out in the first round by Norton and Tate, but nobody laughed at Norton when Shavers and Cooney K0ed him in one. Also, when Quarry knocked out Shavers in one round, it wasn't fodder for late night comedians like it was for Bobick. I remember the little jackass host of Family Feud, Richard Dawson, making fun of Bobick after that loss. I'd love to see him get in the ring with anyone. Having done a little boxing (very little), I admire the fact that any of these guys do it for a living---it's not as easy as they make it look. As for Cooney: Big heavyweight with a good punch, some exciting moments and I think at his peak, he deserved the Top 10 rating, though probably not a #1 Contender status.

7/22/03 06:16:55 PM| Kent Appel | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10
Bob, I sent you an E mail regarding contacting Robert Quarry. EVREN, LENNOX LEWIS ESCAPED WITH THE TITLE. HE WAS IN REAL DANGER OF LOSING IF THE KLITSCHKO FIGHT HADN'T BEEN STOPPED DUE TO A SEVERE CUT. I THINK LENNOX IS ON THE WAY DOWN.

7/22/03 06:52:32 PM| Forest Ward | South Carolina | joekevin@cs.com | 10
Angelo, your the best. You made a lot of good points, many which never occurred to me until I read your post. Are you the same Angelo who used write regularly on this site a few years ago? If so it's great to have you back, you always wrote candid posts. If you are a different Angelo, it's great to have you aboard, you have a lot of insight!

7/23/03 02:32:55 AM| Evren | London | 10
For Kent: Wake up and smell the coffee pal. Lewis had an off night that night - was overconfident and still splattered Klitscko's face. One thing I regret is that Lewis did'nt have the chance to do the same to Larry Merchant who was very hostile to Lennox in the afterfight interview. I find the Americans very anti-Lewis (the reporters, commentators etc) and I think this is down to the fact that they cannot get a fighter to cope with our 'British Champion'. Kent - he was'n't lucky he just attained victory in a different way. I do agree that it was disappointing that the fight was stopped on those terms but it makes for a great rematch I guess. In my opinion I feel that Jimmy Young was never the same fighter after his close decision loss to Ken Norton. He was still a good fighter to beat in '81, '82 but not the force he once was. The same applies moreso to Norton and Lyle at the time they met Mr Cooney.

Evren, I don't think Lewis had an off night. I think he is starting to show his age and should seriously consider quitting and going out a winner. At first I thought I fight between him and Roy Jones would be a horrible mismatch because of the size factor, but now I am not so sure.

I agree about Merchant, (hasn't he made enough money? does he have a pension? Him And Lampley and Kellerman have a new team "STOOGES 2003" I take that back the stooges knew more about boxing!!Yes he was rude to Lewis, but consider the source! Lennox handles himself with class at least 90% of the time, that's a champion's trait, and a lot of NATURAL ability. I have some articles on JQ Merchant wrote: how he was too "IRISH" VS Frazier, in 69' And how he was worried for Chuvalo's safety! When he signed for Jerry Quarry!!

Evren, I have to agree with John that Lewis may be showing his age and should consider stepping down while he is on top. Yes, we Americans were happy when Americans, Hasim Rahman and Oliver McCall beat Lewis, the only fighters to ever beat him. The same way you like it that he is champion because you are from England. Yes, he did win the rematches but the fact remains that two American fighters beat him.

Evren, I agree with you about Lennox. In my opinion he'd have an excellent chance against any heavyweight in history...his 2 loses were by 2 guys weighting about 240 and hitting him flush on the jaw and one of them (the McCall fight) he might have even won if given the chance to continue and like a true champion, he totally wiped the guys out in the rematches. About the Klitschko fight. He found a way to win. Wiping a man's eye out like he did took a lot of punching power (what difference does it make if u take the guy out by concussing the brain or cutting an eye?) and i dont think he was on the verge of collapse either, hes fought through those conditions a few times in the past. The man sure impresses me, being 38 years old and still dominating the division. About Larry Merchant.. I think he tries to get an interesting interview from fighters but comes off as insulting..as obnoxious as Howard Cosell could be at times he had a way of approaching fighters and gettin good interviews from them.

The thing is with Merchant is that he talks as if he is speaking for a whole nation. He is talking for America. While I admire Lewis greatly - he grew up about 2 miles from where I live and in the same town as I work now, I do not make him an all time top tenner! I also rate Tyson above him. I remember when Lewis won the Gold Medal in 1988 I was 13 years old. When he returned to England I remember running with him when he used to jog along a park near where he moved to called Danson(about three miles from where I live now). People used to really stop and stare and toot their horns etc - seems so long ago now....I guess I was in the prescence of greatness..for a while.

Yes, Lewis is one of the best of his era and he deserves a spot in anybody's top all time heavyweights. But for whatever reason, he missed fighting Riddick Bowe, who for a short time was a very dominant fighter in the division. He also caught Tyson and Holyfield on the way down. Is he the most dominant of his era? I have some doubts about this. He could be, and there are strong arguments supporting this, but I don't know for sure. There is nothing wrong with us Americans rooting for one of our countrymen to become heavyweight champion again. There is also nothing wrong with Brits celebrating Lewis' accomplishments. Fans from various countries supporting their favorite fighters is good for the sport.

Kent, your such a nice guy. Well put.

While I didn't mean to go overboard about Jerry, I know that he was human , like all of us. All I can say is I wish that hollywood could have picked up on Jerry. Who knows what would have happened. Just a heck of guy , what can I say.

I agree Lewis is a fine champion. I don't think I would rate in the top all time ten, but he certainly would be in my top 15 list. He had size, speed, and punch. The fact that he was kayoed by two not so great fighters prevents me from calling him great. Of relatively recent fighters, I would rate Ali, Frazier, Foreman, and Holmes higher. It's true that he fought a washed up Tyson, but If I am not mistaken, Tyson paid him a large sum of money to waive the mandatory defense against him. So even the management of a young Tyson obviously wasn't dying to cross paths with Lewis. I do think his slip is starting to show, and he should go out a winner. I would hate to see his skills erode to say 60% of what they once were and someone like Joe Messi come along at the right time and undo all the respect Lewis built up.

I don't mean to sound negative but, Lennox Lewis will find out soon how quick his skills will erode now. He's good but, he like 37 now. Very few fighters can box much longer. They all seem to try and hang on too long, it's a shame.

Well it seems as though George Foreman is coming back. Any thoughts gentleman?

ON FOREMAN COMEBACK: George is one of the very few who left the sport with all his money and all his marbles. Why tempt fate? I can see old fighters coming back if the wolf is at the door and they have no other way to survive, but George should stay home and count his grill money. Look at Ali, Patterson, JG, and so many George is a freak—he probably CAN comeback and win! But I agree that there isn't a good reason for it. He has a lot to offer right now (selling the grills and doing fight analysis), and even though he's big and strong, all it takes is a split second to cause irreversible physical damage, and for what? I think some guys who tarnished their greatness by staying around too long include Sugar Ray Leonard, Evander Holyfield and even my favorite, Muhammad Ali. Ali should have quit after the third Frazier fight, 1975. Maybe after Norton III, 1976. Or even after his last KO win against Richard Dunn. To me, even worse than his loss to Holmes was the decision loss to Trevor Berbick. That was a terrible way for the greatest heavyweight of all time to go out—losing to an also-ran.

As for Lennox Lewis: He's been a very good Champion in and out of the ring and the most consistent winner of his era. But I agree with an earlier post that his losses—both WHO he lost to and HOW he lost, prevent him from joining the class of all-time greats like Ali, Frazier, Foreman, Holmes, Marciano, Joe Louis, etc. But because of how long he's been on top, and the fact that he's beaten the guys they've put in front of him, I look at his overall career and rank him higher than Tyson. Look, the world is full of people who COULD HAVE been great—but Tyson's assorted problems and lack of control and good management stopped him from achieving what he should have. He COULD HAVE beaten Lewis when he was younger, but through his own doing, we'll never know.

Lewis is an incredible talent who has a so-so chin. Lewis has had more talent than any man he has ever fought. He is the most dominant heavy since 1995 easily. He would have been a favorite over Muhammad Ali 1970's in my opinion. The only guys that would beat Lewis in history were sluggers, no boxer would have except for 1960's Ali and that would have been a close fight. It's all about styles. Foreman would have knocked him out, Frazier 50-50 fight. Lewis would have beaten Holmes. Unless you had serious one punch knockout power you didn't beat Lewis. We have watched a great fighter, but it seems that not a lot of people realize it sometimes....I ain't from England, but Cheers to Lewis!

I believe George is coming back when i see it..He's a real shrewd fellow and knows the value of keeping his name in the lights ( by claiming hes coming back) and he knows the dangers of getting hit in the head.

Regarding Joe K's post: I have to disagree with the Lewis-Holmes opinion. Taking these two guys on their best nights, I believe Holmes would handle Lewis rather easily. Larry Holmes had a good defense, one of the best left jabs ever and decent power stats. He wasn't a one-punch KO artist, but ask Mike Weaver about the damage one Holmes uppercut could do. I think Holmes would defeat Lewis either by unanimous decision or possibly later round TKO. Lewis is a good technician---and it's true that Holmes handled sluggers more frequently than boxers---but watching the great Holmes wins: Shavers I and II, Norton, Cooney, Jones, etc., I have to believe he would dispatch of Lewis.

I think Holmes would defeat Lewis either by unanimous decision or possibly later round TKO. Lewis is a good technician---and it's true that Holmes handled sluggers more frequently than boxers---but watching the great Holmes wins: Shavers I and II, Norton, Cooney, Jones, etc., I have to believe he would dispatch of Lewis.

| 7/29/03 01:31:51 AM | Ed | Cicero N Y | mooseygoo@aol.com | |
| 7/29/03 01:31:51 AM | Ed | Cicero N Y | mooseygoo@aol.com | |

Angelo Good points but my money would be on Lewis. His size and skills would be too much for Larry in my opinion, but most of all his power. Lewis has blasted out some pretty decent fighters very quickly. The fact that Tyson sidestepped him a few years ago and that Riddick Bowe wouldn't fight him (remember Lennox calling Bowe "Chicken Bowe", trying to goad him into fighting him, but Bowe's manager threw away that version of the title belt rather than fighting Lennox) indicates just how feared Lewis is/was.

| 7/29/03 03:13:54 AM | Evren | London |  |
| 7/29/03 03:13:54 AM | Evren | London |  |

I would have to side with Angelo on this one. Holmes was a master. He really knew his stuff and knew how to win. It wouldn't be an easy fight by any means but a prime Holmes would out jab Lewis and outwork him. Lennox may be pretty busted up by the end where he falls from the beating or lose a close'ish decision. Larry was a top tenner!

| 7/29/03 04:26:09 AM | Massimo | Rome | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | |
| 7/29/03 04:26:09 AM | Massimo | Rome | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | |

I'm an Italian boxing fan and I would like to watch a Primo Carnera video clip; he beat Uczudun twice, Tommy Loughran, Jack Sharkey, the young star Walter Neusel...So, I don't understand why everybody keep saying he was so weak! Have a nice time and sorry for my English!!

| 7/29/03 07:02:36 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock2892@yahoo.com | |
| 7/29/03 07:02:36 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock2892@yahoo.com | |

I would bet the ranch on Holmes over Lewis. Holmes got off the floor against Shavers, I doubt Lewis would have.

| 7/29/03 04:15:51 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | |
| 7/29/03 04:15:51 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | |

I agree---Holmes got off the floor against Shavers and in my mind, Shavers was a harder hitter than Lewis. In fact, I believe Shavers was the hardest hitting heavyweight ever. Foreman at his peak might have been a better KO artist, using combinations to take out opponents, but Shavers pure, hard punch might have been the hardest to this point. The second Holmes-Shavers fight (when Holmes was Champion) was a defining moment for Larry Holmes. He was clocked by a punch that would have knocked out a mule, and climbed up to clear the cobwebs and go on to win. This was a vintage performance by a true champion. Holmes instincts to survive, his heart to continue and his skills to turn the fight around made him a top five all-time heavyweight in my opinion. Also, his first fight against Shavers thrust him into the spotlight. He proved to have great boxing skills and winning that elimination gave him the opportunity to defeat Norton in another classic---one that I've expressed opinions about previously. I truly believe that loss cemented Norton's greatness because of the heart and determination he showed in defeat.

| 7/29/03 05:01:50 PM | Massimo | Rome | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | |
| 7/29/03 05:01:50 PM | Massimo | Rome | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | |

How tall was Cleveland "Big Cat" Williams? The official height was 6'3 but he looked twice taller than Sonny Liston in their fights!! He was famous for his punching power. I saw him against Ali' and in the second Liston fight and he could'nt show his punch. Is it true that he was one of the hardest punchers in the history of boxing? Please, don't neglect my preceding message about Primo Carnera!!

one here has said Carnera was weak. In fact he was very strong. But being strong does not make someone a good boxer. He just didn't have the skills to compete with Joe Louis, Max Baer, and probably Max Schmeling, if the two of them ever fought. I feel he got lucky against Jack Sharkey when he won the title. I have that knockout on a tape and the final punch looks like an elbow or a forearm, not an uppercut he is credited with. Apparently the referee didn't see the illegal punch when he counted Sharkey out. Sharkey would have beaten Canera most of the time and he did defeat Canera once before the title bout.

Don't worry about your english writing skills. You write very well in english.

One thing that can't be argued is that Carnera was a brave fighter. He showed a lot of courage in his losses to Baer and Louis.

Sharkey would have beaten Canera most of the time and he did defeat Canera once before the title bout. I know he wasn't a great champion but maybe he was a top ten contender ( top twenty ?). I read you come from California! I wanna say that I am a huge Los Angeles Lakers fan !!!!

Cleveland Williams was a little over 6'2" tall. Liston was a little under 6'1. Williams was a very good puncher especially with his left hand. Liston beat him twice and said that Williams hit as hard as he (Liston) did, but could not take a punch like he could. Williams was hit by a car and killed about two years ago. He was a very tough guy, never a champion but an outstanding contender. He was all washed up by the time he fought Ali.

I'm surprised! Wasn't Williams taller than Ali? Ali is 6'2" 1/2, I think. In the second Liston fight he looked about 6'6. I'd love to watch his first fight with Ernie Terrell, for comparison! Therefore, I guess, Liston was 1.84. But I'm sure that Andre' the Giant wasn't 7'5!!!!!!!

Masimo: I don't know the exact scoring of the Ali-Bonavena fight but Ali was comfortably ahead at the time of the TKO if my memory serves me right. Bonavena was a tough rugged fighter and he was a little under 6' tall. I believe Ernie Terrel was the tallest of the bunch at about 6'5". Terrell was no where near the hitter that Williams was. Although Bonavena was from Argentina, he was of Italian decent. His original trainer was Charlie Goldman who trained Marciano. Cleveland Williams was a hard puncher, but I personally don't think he could bang like Foreman or Shavers. But he was definitely one of the sports hardmen.

I have just read the biography of Primo Carnera and was very intrigued. The book was called 'The Story of Man Mountain' Carnera. I tend to respect him a little more than he is given credit for. I have watched quite a few of his fights and I feel he was a good boxer, obviously manafactured who did not punch with his full weight. Whether this was due to lack of skill or the fact that he did not want to hurt the other guy is open to debate. He had decent speed for his size and good reflexes. He was probably as good as he could have possibly been his size in that generation. For your information I have the following Carnera fights: - Joe
Louis, Max Baer, Ernie Schaff, George Godfrey, Jack Sharkey 1 (complete), Jack Sharkey 2, Jim Maloney 1, Ray Impelletiere, Tommy Loughran and Vittorio Campolo.

| 7/30/03 09:44:11 AM | Kent | La Habra, CA | oriononside@aol.com | 10 |
Louis, Max Baer, Ernie Schaff, George Godfrey, Jack Sharkey 1 (complete), Jack Sharkey 2, Jim Maloney 1, Ray Impelletiere, Tommy Loughran and Vittorio Campolo.

I believe Canera beat Loughran because of his size advantage, not skill. Over six inches in height and 100 pounds in weight is too much for most fighters to overcome. There is a reason there are weight classes in boxing. The bigger man usually has an advantage.

I agree with Evren, I have a lot of respect for Canera, not because he was a great boxer, but because he had, as I mentioned in my other post, a lot of courage.

I am from the Southern California area and the Lakers are my team. But for now I won't say go Kobe because he is facing some serious legal charges. As a fan, I hope he is innocent but if he is guilty, then he needs to go to jail like anyone else. The law needs to treat him the same as other people and just because he is a great basketball player makes no difference.

| 7/30/03 11:37:30 AM | Massimo | Rome | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | 10 |
| 7/30/03 11:44:12 AM | Massimo | Rome | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | 10 |
| 7/30/03 11:44:12 AM | Massimo | Rome | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | 10 |

Kind mister Evren,

for me watching that Carnera's fights would be a great joy! If you can make me see that fights on video clips or in any other way, you'll make me happy! Thanks!

| 7/30/03 11:44:12 AM | Massimo | Rome | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | 10 |
| 7/30/03 11:44:12 AM | Massimo | Rome | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | 10 |
| 7/30/03 11:44:12 AM | Massimo | Rome | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | 10 |

Kind mister Kent,

no doubt in my mind that if Kobe is guilty he must go in jail! No doubt in my mind at all!! The fact that he is a genius in basketball is insignificant!! But I keep saying: SEMPRE FORZA SHAQ!!

Another thing: how big are Shaq's hands in inches. Are Shaq's hands bigger than Sonny Liston's hands. A PRESTO!!!!!

| 7/31/03 02:42:11 AM | Ed | Cicero N Y | mooseygoop@aol.com | 10 |

Yea Primo was a very sad spot in boxing history. He was a mob controlled fighter (by all accounts I read, the Sharkey fight was fixed) and didn't even realize his fights were fixed, then when he fought Baer the fight was real (for the first time) and poor Primo was slaughtered. They did everything to promote him even saying he had some kind of super punch after a fighter died from a light blow from him. Actually the fighter died from a blow from his previous fight. Primo wasn't championship material but i agree he was all heart. He also wasn't as bad as magazine accounts made him out to be. Seeing him on espn classic's showed me he did have skills.

One interesting thing I remember about him is he kept himself in shape even into his old age. The sports writer asked him how he stayed at his fighting weight (i think he was in his 60's) and Primo said "I puuush" "I puush the food away from me at the table".

| 7/31/03 10:08:11 AM | Dan Cunningham | San Francisco | DGCSOCCE@AOL.COM | 10 |

Ward: Having taken a short break from this site I once again need a laugh so I decided to check your posts. I like how you make yourself better than me by stating "I will respond in kind". Do you ever review what you post? What is your definition of this statement when you have angrily/verbally assaulted a prizefighter who made millions who you felt was not deserving! Do you really think that Holmes/Spinks would have made the same money against another top ten fighter? They would have to be fools to be mad at Cooney. If you had more than a generic understanding of the fighters in that time period you would have a greater appreciation for Cooney especially considering that there were top 10 fighters who avoided him. Is there a 12 step group out there somewhere for people who can't deal with Cooney being a legitimate contender? Maybe someone on this web site knows considering the amount of trumped up half truths about Cooney presented here. By the way, the great champion, Lennox Lewis has a GLASS JAW. Several of the heavys of the 1970's would have destroyed him, not once but every time! PS One fighter who Lewis would have defeated every time would be Chuvalo. What top ten fighters did Chuvalo defeat again? Oh yeah, Ramos!

| 7/31/03 10:56:58 AM | Jimmy Dorsey | Ventura California | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10 |

AT times I send off for Microfilm to cities where they had JERRY QUARRY BOUTS, to get an authentic recollection of his record. Although they seem like it takes forever, I'm seldom disappointed. My new findings is the 1965 KANSAS CITY GOLDEN GLOVES, where Quarry scored 5 knockouts in 18 minutes and 32 seconds! Breaking the jaws of his last 2 opponents, the longest one of his bouts went 38 seconds of the third round, he weighed in at 185-lbs! fighting guys 215, 228 etc. Also one pro bout vs Melvin Manley was not October 13, 1965 but rather Oct 18th, I've found a lot of his early bouts did not have the correct dates, on a bad note: not one KC WRITE-UP had Quarry's picture, here he breaks an amateur record that can only be equalled, and they did not show him in a bout, they did show a very nervous Kathy Quarry.

7/31/03 11:22:19 AM| Video Post | The Jerry Quarry Foundation | | TJQF | | | | | 10

---

7/31/03 12:04:06 PM| John Gerard | NYC | | rock289z@yahoo.com | | | | | 10

DAN CUNNINGHAM:

Let me get this straight:
Lennox Lewis DOES have a glass jaw but Cooney did NOT???????? I marvel at the eloquence of your thinking. Pass the napalm please.

7/31/03 12:37:13 PM| Massimo | Rome | | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | | | | | 10

Thanks!! I enjoyed the VIDEO POST very much!! I have some question for Evren:

LOUIS vs CARNERA was a one-sided bout or not? How would you score the rounds? Is it true that Primo did'nt deserve to lose in the first fight against Maloney? Is it true that he won just a couple of rounds in the fourth fight against Sharkey and that hit the canvas twice in the fourth round? About Cooney I think he was a very good boxer. If you beat a guy like Ron Lyle (a little old, but in good shape) in that way, you surely are a very good fighter. I think a prime Ali (surely one of the greatest champions), never would be able to do that, not even neither was 97 years old.

7/31/03 04:16:35 PM| Paul Maduros | Midwest | | pama42@yahoo.com | | | | | 10

Hey, I think that Thad Spencer fought a lot like Joe Louis in the way he moved in on someone. The big difference being power and toughness. This is why I also think that Joe Louis would never beat Ali. Only a lucky punch could do it. As we all know though, Ali had the best chin in boxing. Hey boxing fans, please visit eastsideboxing for some great conversation about Jerry and many others from the past. Take care.

7/31/03 06:23:33 PM| Massimo | Rome | | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | | | | | 10

Ali' showed a great chin in the second part of his career, against Shavers, Foreman, Norton etc. but he had troubles in the first part against Sonny Banks and Henry Cooper... He surely had a very, very good chin but maybe, not the best of all times.

Hey, I have'nt seen those fights in a while so cannot comment. Evren

7/31/03 05:59:01 AM| Paul | Sydney | | PlMls4@aol.com | | | | | 10

Hey Dan, maybe you should stop getting testy everytime someone has a different opinion to yours. Reading your posts proves that you don't need a long neck to be a goose.

8/1/03 03:51:01 AM| Evren | London | | @ | | | | | 10

Massimo your English has improved ten fold in your last few posts! Anyway, I have'nt seen those fights in a while so cannot comment. Evren

8/1/03 05:59:01 AM| Massimo | Rome, non Rome | | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | | | | | 10

You must watch that fights again within tomorrow!! I'm joking ! You are very kind, Evren ! ! I am particularly interested about LOUIS vs CARNERA. I would sell my mother for that fight ! ( I'm m joking again ! ! !)

---

7/31/03 11:22:19 AM| Video Post | The Jerry Quarry Foundation | | TJQF | | | | | 10

---

---
I'm very serious !!)

I sure wished everyone here, could have seen JERRY QUARRY in the 1974 "superstars competition" where Jerry took on mostly N.F.L. Players after he beat Shavers. and finished 4th over people like roger staubach, and CARL ELLER,He really made every event he was in exciting!and finished behind O.J.simpson,Dick Anderson and Franco Harris in that order,he was tanned and in shape and there to win some points,and some moolah! He has the boxer's record for 28 total points,non other is even close,a few years later Shavers ran a 10.5 100 yard dash,his next bout was a FIRST ROUND KAYO of NORTON,no one seems to have the tape of that 1974 "version"

It would be fun to go back and watch those old Superstars shows. No doubt, Jerry was a fierce competitor, whether it be boxing or any other endeavor. It doesn't surprise me that he did so well---and he was matched against some pretty tough company.As for Lennox Lewis having a glass jaw---I don't think so. The times he's been put out, the punches have been extraordinary. But on the other hand, the "heart of a champion" makes some guys climb up off the canvas when they're clocked and fall down. You saw Ali get up after getting blasted by Frazier in the first fight, and it was in the 14th round I believe, after both guys were punished and spent. As I said before, you saw Holmes get up to win after Shavers dropped a major bomb on him. Lewis falls short of joining that elite group, but I don't think it's fair to put him in the glass jaw category either.

I have never seen Jerry on the superstar in 1974. I saw the 1975 version and he didn't fare as well. He wasn't in good shapy then and it showed in his poor performance.

You would not believe how Jerry competed in the first one he was in (1974-superstars).There is no comparison,You being a big JQ Fan Kent,it would be worth trying to find,he set the records in baseball hitting and bowling,second in bike race and golf,went out at 220 lbs rather than 200 in 75'weight lifting,And he was all business,he was in only 6 events in 1975, he missed the bowling, in which i'm sure he would have finished higher, although I don't think he did that poorly it was after his loss to Frazier and a couple weeks before his bout with "SCRAP IRON" He had fun hanging with Rollie Fingers And Bobby Murcer(Bobby took on Jerry!).But I can Remember James(Moe),Sying Jerry told him there were alotta fragile ego's there,(i will not mention names)

Uncle Jerry was great at everything he did...Just like my father James...Because "There's no quit in a Quarry"

Ironically, it seems like you're disturbed by other peoples opinions that are different than your two boxing gurus. Why do you feel you need to place the stagecoaches in a circle and defend any attacks? Does this make you feel part of something big? John Gerard: Did I once ever, check my posts please, suggest that Cooney had an iron chin? Why do you go off on different tandems? Maybe its because it helps you divert the real facts. Who did Chuvalo beat again in a 20 yr carrer that was in the top ten other than Quarry? Ramos, Jones? I give Cooney credit for getting in the ring as I do Chuvalo, but to be a Cooney hater with half truths merits a challenge every time. PS;Lewis is a good boxer but he does have a glass jaw

Hey look, if Jerry Quarry had the reach and size of Cooney he would at least be in the top 3 in the world. That's 90% of what Lewis has going for him. He uses his righthand like a jab. George Chavalo a super tough, nice guy also. Nuff said!
TuavsMike Tyson: this one would be a war !!!!! But, at the end of the night, the winner would be David (KO 4). Tua can hit every bit as hard as Tyson and when he does it you have no choice.... You have to go !!!!! This one would be like Foreman-Lyle !!!!!

hey dan, cooney had a glass jaw and lewis a not so stong chin, the shot he got with ,against rahman and macall would have taken down whole house down , never mind the fact that rahamn and macalls skills are a little bit limited in there arsenal!

Neither Ward or John need me supporting them,particularly when it only involves a battle of wits with you. The reason I posted about you is because your attitude is offensive. Because Ward had the gall to disagree with you, you told him that you only read his post because you "once again need a laugh." You said something similar to John. And then you demeaned the rest of us when you commented about the "trumped up truth presented here" on this site. Further, Dan, your use of words suggests that you have a superior intellect to the rest of us (for example, you accused Ward of not having a "generic understanding" of boxing). Frankly, people that have the need to demean others by writing in the superior tone that you use are usually insecure little upstarts.

TO DAN: I am not a "Cooney hater". I respect any man who gets in the ring and gives it his all. I just can't understand why we can't assess Cooney for what he was: a big strong guy with a very good left hook , mediocre technical skills and a glass jaw. I never once claimed Chuvalo was great or even near great. I respect him for what he was: a very game, strong, incredible durable and brave guy who fought some of the best ever. Neither man was championship material. As for Lewis having a glass jaw, I must disagree. It is his weakest point as a fighter, but I never said Lewis was a great one. He would be in the bottom of my top 15 list (if I had one). I think Holmes would have taken Lewis to shool. He was a shade faster, I think hit harder, and was a lot meaner.

Chuvalo was an excellent fighter ! He had good power, the best chin of all times and gave Ali' two tough fights. Just for this he deserves a lot of respect !!!!!!!!!!!

You got to admit, Dan sticks by his fighter. He is a dedicated Cooney fan just as most of us are dedicated Jerry Quarry fans.

I agree that Cooney was a good if flawed fighter and I agree he was a bonafide contender, but flawed he was. He did have a monster left hook and he was one punch away from victory in any fight.

I disagree with whoever said Cooney's fight with Holmes was not one of Holmes' tougher defenses. He gave an in prime Holmes a good fight. Someone lists a lot of Holmes tougher defenses but I think the ones that came between 1978 to 1982 deserve more credit as that was Holmes at his best. For example, Michael Spinks fought Holmes in 1985 the first time and 1986 the second time. Those were close fights and although Spinks was given decisions both times, there is some disagreement about the verdicts, especially the second fight. I thought Spinks won a narrow victory in the first fight but Holmes won the second one. Still, Spinks caught Holmes on the way down and I doubt he would have been as competitive with an in prime Larry Holmes.

Hey Dano, Cooney was protected.He did have a good left hook and was strong.I disagree with the others that say he had a glass jaw.If he did,Holmes can't punch a lick and we all know better than that.Gerry stood up to Holmes and landed some good shots too.Cooneys idiot managers just didn't bring him along right. He should've been with Dundee. At least he would have learned something and probably would have done a little better. |

8/6/03 01:11:48 PM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 | TO KENT: I personally thought Holmes won both of the Spinks fights. Especially the second one. I also thought Norton got robbed against Holmes in what was a very good fight. |

8/6/03 01:46:23 PM | Dan | San Francisco | DGCSOCCER@AOL.COM | 10 | John Gerard: For once we agree on something. I believe that Holmes won both times vs. Spinks. By the way the fighter who won the most rounds in a fight against Holmes up to the Spinks fight was Cooney. To Paul in Australia: get out of the sun! you have a selective memory as do a few others on this site who become upset with differing opinions like mine! Maybe you are one of the persons using this site to work out other issues you have with yourself? Sure Chuvalo was a good fighter but can anyone on this site tell me who Chuvalo beat in the top ten other than Quarry (fluke), Ramos, Jones in a 20 yr. career? |

8/6/03 03:03:14 PM | Max Hord | Fernandina Bch, Fla | rasluc@msn.com | 10 | To Kent: What flaws did Cooney have? |

8/6/03 08:10:16 PM | Kent Appel | La Habra, Ca | oriononside@aol.com | 10 | Max, Cooney didn't take a punch well and he didn't have good defense, he was very hittable. He also relied on his big left hook too much.

He reminds me of another left hooker from another division, late 70s and early 80s welterweight, Pipino Cuevas. Cuevas was devastating if he landed his hook. He had 10 or so defenses of the WBA title, most of those he won by early knockout. But when he was faced with an opponent who stayed away from his hook, Thomas Hearns, who negated Cuevas' power by keeping Cuevas at the end of his long left jab before lowering the boom with Hearns' own power punches, Cuevas didn't know how to cope with it. But was Cuevas a legitimate contender in his division, he was more than that as he held a major title for quite some time. In the end though Cuevas had nothing but the big left hook.

Cooney did deserve a top ten ranking because he beat some faded but still dangerous fighters in Young, Lyle, and Norton. That left hook he landed on Lyle that broke Lyle's ribs would have done so at any point in Lyle's career. Lyle made the mistake of trying to box Cooney. He should have come out to make it a slugfest and even at that advanced age, he could have landed his own bombs and won the fight. Norton was susceptible to big punchers at any point in his career and he too could have lost to Cooney if the two of them had met earlier. While Young still had some fine boxing skills and probably knew the Cooney fight was his big chance to climb the ratings again. In fact Young boxed well until he was caught and cut up in the fourth round. I thought Young was winning up to the time of the stoppage.

I don't think Cooney should have rated higher than number about number six or seven at the time of his fight with Holmes though. He should have beaten a couple of other top ten fighters before fighting Holmes such as Mike Weaver, Pinklon Thomas, Michael Dokes, or Gerrie Coetzee.

I am kind of torn between Cooney being handled poorly, by not taking risks that would have made him a better fighter or that Cooney's management knew his flaws and marketed his power punching effectively and his race to earn him (and Holmes also), a lot of money. |

8/6/03 11:44:00 PM | Dan | San Francisco | DGCSOCCER@AOL.COM | 10 | To Kent: By my own admission, Cooney had problems with boxer/punchers ALA Page/Witherspoon. To say Cooney was not a legit contender circa 1980-1982 would be a falsehood. His big left was a weapon that bothered many top contenders. As far as Cooney being deserving at the time, there were several less deserving/similar fighters who got fights with Holmes who gave him a good fight, such as Snipes, Witherspoon, Truth Williams, Leroy Jones, Weaver etc... for the most part they gained prestige by their fight with Holmes when they were possibly lower top ten fighters (if that). |

8/7/03 04:10:25 AM | Massimo | Rome | Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it | 10 | All the fighters have flaws !!!! Who lacks power,who hand speed, who has a glass jaw....Even Louis, the perfect fighting machine, surely couldn't take a punch like Chuvalo !! Tyson, at the beginning, was very close to perfection but then he forgot the head movements.... What flaws did Tyson have at the beginning of his career ? Just the short reach !! I never watched the Ali-Zora Folley fight. Is it true that it was one of the Ali's best fights ?

Do you remember that fight ?

I remember reading that Cus D'Amato was asked to train Cooney and he refused. This may have been because he was busy not because he didn't think Cooney had potential. Not sure.

After all, Cooney was a tall fighter and Cuevas, in his weight class, was a short fighter who had to move in to be effective. At the time, a lot of people were saying Sugar Ray Leonard was avoiding Cuevas, who was knocking everyone out in site, but I think Leonard would have boxed circles around Cuevas but if Cuevas would have landed that hook, then Ray may have been some major trouble. If people remember Cuevas, I am sure they will remember that at times he was very devastating.

My opinion is that Lewis in best shape is slightly better than Vitali Klitschko (in best shape). But I don't think Lennox can come back in top shape at this point of his career, Vitali Klitschko is THE REAL HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION OF THE WORLD !

My friend Mike is getting along !!!!! size and better punch in my opinion. Mike Tyson continues to be an easy target for negative opinion, the guy has my sympathy as being one of the most used athletes I've ever seen. I rate him ahead of both Lewis and Holmes as a Top Ten guy, prime vs. prime. I don't consider Holmes or Lewis Top Ten. I'd take Quarry over Henry Cooper, and it's good to see people talking about heavies like Cooper and Bonavena as the '60-70's period was so full of talent, a very interesting time. JQ'S accomplishments in that era are tremendous, given he fought nearly every top guy available. I do think Lewis overlooked Klitschko, but he should hang 'em up anyway as he clearly looks on the downside. Klitschko took everything he had and would have stopped him without the cut. I don't think Lewis can knock him out at this point. How about Corrie Sanders? Thanks again.

Corrie Sanders deserves a fight for the title after his great win against Wladimir Klitschko, a top 5 in my opinion! I think that the Lewis fight was stopped too soon!! Two more rounds would have been enough!! I just finished to rewatch Ali-Frazier III. That fight is a gift to humanity!! It's the most beautiful heavyweight fight of all times!!! I love that fight !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Hey Sean Caddle, if I am to use your logic regarding Gerry Cooney, and not consider his fights against Foreman and Spinks because Cooney was a drug user. Then I am not going to consider Sonny Liston's fights against Muhammad Ali, Because in the first fight Liston did not take Ali serious, and in the second fight the referee Joe Walcott lost control of the fight. I am not going to consider Roberto Duran's second fight against Ray Leonard, because Duran had an upset stomach, and we did not see the real Duran against Leonard. I can on and on. I wish some one could explain to me why Cooney is considered to have made a "good" fight against Holmes. Cooney was stopped in the 13th round. Carl "The Truth" Williams, and Tim Witherspoon lost disputed decisions to Holmes. They certainly made better showings than Cooney. Mike Weaver made a better showing against Holmes than Cooney did. Cooney claims that when he fought Foreman he was clean and sober. I've heard him claim repeatedly that he lost to Foreman, because, "he [Cooney] got his Irish up." Whatever that is suppose to mean. I can't rate Cooney's boxing abilities very high for the obvious reasons which are very clear. Conny had a glass jaw. Cooney had little or no stamina, he never won a fight that went beyond 8 rounds. Now just because Cooney was a drug user and did not give a 100% in training, does not entitled him to a free pass. By a free pass I mean, well, if he was not a drug user, if he was not an alcoholic, he would have trained harder and done better. The fact is every time he was training for a fight and he used drugs or alcohol he was lacking heart and copping out. Plainly he could not cope with the pressure. Look how infrequently he fought. And I might add he was cheating every fan of his and every paying customer by accepting millions of dollars in payment and not giving a 100%. Cooney never ONCE in his career got up off the canvas after being knocked down and won a fight. Every time he was knocked down he lost. Cooney, never once in his career won a fight with a come from behind victory. There was no fire in Cooney's heart. No Sir, Cooney had a formidable punch, God given, but nothing else to offer. Except excuses given by himself and others.

I think Ali'-Liston II was fixed (Ali probably didn't know it, like Carnera...). Ali' wasn't a devastating puncher! How many fights did Ali' win within the first round? Two! Liston II and Jim Robinson (an unknown!). Anyway, I think the first fight was regular because Liston did everything to win (regular and not) but he simply couldn't. I'm not sure of all this things, that's just my impression. What do you think about, friends? My greetings to Shaq!!
HEY Forest how you doing? i'll tell you my man JQ sure could come off the canvas to score knockouts, Joe Alexander, AL "Memphis" Jones (and a broken jaw and 4 lost teeth). Alexander said Jerry was the only one he ever fought, that got up to win, you can also throw in Rufus Brassell, although Quarry was decked after the bell. Jerry even got off the canvas to kayo Roy Crear in San Antonio.

FOREST: As always "SMOKIN" JOE FRAZIER always had that fire, you are talking about, only Foreman bounced him out, (of course never fought Lyle, Shavers) I was 14 when he fought Jerry in '74. I'd already been fighting amateur at a place now called the Dome, and lived boxing, already had over a hundred boxing mags etc. Anyway the day Jerry signed for FRAZIER, my uncle had the names wrong, and told me "HEY YOUR BOY'S FIGHTING FOR THE TITLE VS FOREMAN" I was elated, then found out it was Frazier, bummed out, my uncle said "Why you so down in the dumps, I said Jerry needed to be fighting Bonavena, or Bugner or Henry Clark. Anybody but JOE (he needed Joe like a hole in the head). One of the few times I'd wished I WAS WRONG!! TAKE CARE.

Hi Kent I did not write that it was illogical to say that one of Holmes's tougher defenses was against Cooney. I wrote that it is illogical to give Cooney a pass on the Spinks and Foreman fights because Cooney had a drug habit. It is not fair to Spinks or Foreman to cheapen their victory over Cooney just because Cooney did not train as he should have. Spinks and Foreman were dedicated fighters. Cooney was partying and getting high, they wanted it more, and they deserve the credit for their victories. Kent, come on is really fair to Foreman and Spinks not to count their victories, because Cooney was hooked on drugs and alcohol?

Kent, I have a problem with saying Cooney had a "good" fight against Holmes. Good compared to what: Scot Frank, Ossie Ocasio... If that is your barometer fine. It's not mine. Cooney was knocked down in the second round. Cooney was exhausted after the 10th round; and stopped in the 13th round. I don't see that as good. Holmes played Cooney like a violin. I have no doubts Holmes could have stopped him sooner if Holmes so desired. Kent, to look at my philosophy from a different perspective, lets look at Jerry Quarry. Jerry is highly regarded on this site for many reasons. Most notably for beating good fighters resoundingly in their primes, or damn near close to their primes: Spencer, Mathis, Foster, Lyle, Shavers, among others. All #1 fighters at the time of their defeats by Jerry Quarry. If "all" we had to judge Jerry Quarry was his noble loss to Frazier in their 1st fight would we be singing his praises as many (not you Kent) on this site do for Cooney. I think not. Granted Cooney had a good left hook, but that's it. He did not have the drive and courage it takes to be a genuine good or great fighter. When one looks at Cooney's career, it's all in many peoples eyes a great "oh what might have been, if..." I don't buy that, either you have the results or you don't. Darryl Strawberry might have been another Ted Williams but he chose drugs and alcohol. Are we say that if we discount the years strawberry did drugs and alcohol, he deserves to be in the Hall of Fame. Maybe we should create a Hall of Fame for all those who threw away careers for whatever reason. We can call it the "Hall of Fame of Excuse's," or the "Hall of Fame of What Might Have Been." Personally, I still would not include Cooney even in this Hall of Fame. He had a glass jaw, no stamina, and most importantly of all NO FIRE IN HIS HEART

Hey Forest, I would like to make a statement retraction on the little that i wrote about Cooney. I in know way wanted to take away from the victories that Spinks and Foreman had over Cooney, wrong choice of words when i said you should not count those. The point I was trying to make was when you look at a fighter and you rate and compare you should look at them at there best, and for Cooney his best was a loss. I was in know way trying to make him out to be something he is not.

The reason why I say it was still a very tough fight for Holmes in spite of the knockdown, the near knockdown, and the eventual knockout was because it was very competitive the rest of the time and I gave Cooney at least five of the twelve rounds before the knockout, maybe even six rounds, which without the points deducted for his low blows, would have had it a draw on my card going into the ending round of the fight. Cooney rallied back from near defeat at those times to make a good showing for himself. At least in this fight, Cooney had a lot of heart. When I saw the fight as it happened I thought Holmes was very dominant throughout the fight but after seeing it again recently and taping it and rewatching it a couple of times, my opinion has changed and I now think it was much closer than I initially thought it was.

Hi Sean thanks for your clarification. I agree with you about rating fighters. When I rate a champion I try and look at him on his best night and wonder how he would do against someone else on their best night. There are other factors that of course come into play when I use this method. The champions I rate must have longevity and great fights behind them. For example, I could not rate an Ingomar Johanssen, or a Buster Douglas on the basis of their greatest fight, since that incorporated just one night, and involves no longevity of greatness.

Anonymous, I am not sure why you wouldn't want to be known just because you asked a simple question, but Max, of course, is talking about Mike Quarry. I do have some information about Mike, I am not saying it is good or bad, but I will leave it to the Quarry family to comment.

Max, who is your friend Mike?

Anonymous, I am not sure why you wouldn't want to be known just because you asked a simple question, but Max, of course, is talking about Mike Quarry. I do have some information about Mike, I am not saying it is good or bad, but I will leave it to the Quarry family to comment. Also, are we done with the Cooney debate yet? I think it is getting a bit old.

Gerry Cooney, at his best, was a great fighter! He fought toe to toe with the champion of the world and he destroyed Lyle and Norton within a round!! He did not lose against my aunt, but against Holmes, Spinks and Foreman, three Hall of Famers! Everybody says that, after the layoff, Ali wasn't the same fighter, but it seems to me that maybe he had his best victories after his comeback (Foreman, Frazier III). Which is Ali's best night in your opinion? Ali-Foreman, Ali-Frazier 3 or Ali-Cleveland Williams (a masterpiece but against a fighter a little over the hill). Which was the best Ali? I doubt that the Ali who beat Doug Jones could beat a monster like Foreman... Another question: was the Ali-Bonavena fight beautiful? How much beautiful? Is the beauty of that fight comparable with the Ali-Frazier I-II-III sublime? I know for sure that Shaq is great!!

Please let's leave the word great for fighters like Ali, Frazier, Marciano etc, not Cooney who was a good unfulfilled fighter.

On another note I have just finished watching Foreman vs Dino Dennis - a great fight. Jerry Quarry is the second commentator on that fight alongside, I believe, Tom Brookshire. In the commentary he mentioned that he had sparred with Foreman and that George was the strongest human he had ever met. He also mentioned that George was the most awesome specimen he had ever seen in the ring. Also I just watched the fight George had against LeDoux and it is interesting to hear Jerry commenting again. He states that they way to fight Foreman was to go at him, et within his reach but not to go at him in a straight line - but come forward side to side.

I am not trying to open up the Foreman-Quarry can of worms again!

When will it be possible ordering boxing videos? If I try now I read: THIS PAGE IS TEMPORARILY... And how much it costs for a guy like me living in Rome? Between which fights can I choose? Thank you very much!

Alright Kent, get something going..........
Kent: I sent off for 8 more Quarry bouts from Newspapers, Seattle, Albuquerque, Canton Ohio, Denver, St. Paul, Kansas City, and now I know who was the biggest pro JQ fought, non-other than you guessed it, Charley Reno! All 251 pounds of him, and had 50 pounds on the 201 1/4 lb Quarry. I've figured for a long time Ring Magazine had made a mistake on the weights Quarry 212 to Reno's 221, just did not seem right to me, especially since Jerry never came into the ring at even 210 pounds, 209 3/4 vs "Scrap Iron" In Hawi, Was Jerry's heaviest. take care!

8/14/03 04:00:30 PM|Massimo|Rome||uffa !|||10|Buster Mathis was an incredible guy! He fought his first pro fight in 1965 at 300 lb against Bob Maynard and three years later fought against James J. Beattie at 229. I think his weight was about 231 lb against Jerry Quarry and about 330 against Ali' !!!!!!! Anyway, he had a good career!! |

8/14/03 07:21:19 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA

Yu are very well right, Big Buster had nothing to be ashamed of 35-4 at least 23 knockouts or so, Bonavena was good, But to me a little overly ranked, case in point, he won outright robberies vs Leotis Martin, Al "Blue" Lewis, and Zora Folley, and Folley's Boxing lesson he dished out to Oscar, would have been his second win over RINGO, I remember the W.B.A. was they only one to rank Oscar over JQ, for the number 1 contender spot in late 1970, after Bonavena's DQ Loss to Paez, and Jerry had just KO'D 24-0 MAC FOSTER.

8/15/03 04:42:48 AM|Massimo|Rome||shaq.com|||10|Zora Folley!! I think Zora was a master of boxing (or boxing's master?)! Anyway, Bob Foster, one of the greatest boxing's champions of all times, said "he taught me how to box". I think that Sonny (or I think Sonny?) was great when beat him in 1960 (unfortunately I never could watch the fight but I have read about it) within 3 rounds. I think Sonny Liston (or I think that Sonny Liston) of the period 1958-1962 was a real champion and would have beaten even a prime Mike Tyson because he had the same power and reach twice longer...

Yu are very well right, Big Buster had nothing to be ashamed of 35-4 at least 23 knockouts or so, Bonavena was good, But to me a little overly ranked, case in point, he won outright robberies vs Leotis Martin, Al "Blue" Lewis, and Zora Folley, and Folley's Boxing lesson he dished out to Oscar, would have been his second win over RINGO, I remember the W.B.A. was they only one to rank Oscar over JQ, for the number 1 contender spot in late 1970, after Bonavena's DQ Loss to Paez, and Jerry had just KO'D 24-0 MAC FOSTER.

8/15/03 11:00:24 AM|anonymous|usa||anonymous|||8|Kent, never can be too careful on the internet, so I will remain anonymous. Even though my question was not directed to you, thanks for the answer |

8/17/03 10:51:41 AM|Massimo|Rome||shaqbetterthanchamberlain.com|||10|I have just discovered that in the Clay-Sabedong fight the weights were exactly: Clay: 194 1/2  Sabedong:225 I give you this information freely (what a great person I am!). |

Bob, thanks for the answer! I don't think Carnera (thanks for the free English lesson...) wore the same shoes size (or shoes's size, bah!) of Shaq. I don't know the American sistem for shoes measure but in the Italian sistem Shaq wears 56 or 59 (sorry, but I'm not sure) and Carnera just 52 (poor Primo!).
The Primo's measures were exaggerated by the despicable fascism! They told he was 6'7"/1/2 tall or more, but we know he was just a little over 6'5". Shaq is 7'1" (I don't know if with the Reebok or without) and weights about 335... Twice bigger! I'm twice bigger than Shaq! Everybody call me "the Italian giant" but this is another story and we'll talk about another time (I hear the question: how tall are you 1000 times a day!). I suspected Primo wasn't the greatest boxer (pound for pound) of all times, I don't think I could become heavyweight champion of the world! Maybe Primo was better than me!
Primo is not comparable with Shaq. No way! Shaq is a SUPERCHAMPION!!!
Probably the greatest center of all times, surely one of the best three
!!!!!!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>8/18/03 05:12:37 PM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Rome</th>
<th>34.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I forgot! I have a question for Bob. Jerry beat Lyle and Shavers... Why don't you give him a chance to beat Foreman? I think Foreman would have been largely favorite (maybe 5-1) but... Give Quarry a chance!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>8/18/03 08:56:48 PM</th>
<th>steve</th>
<th>n.j.</th>
<th>dmmsrm@comcast.net</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Does anyone on this site who is old enough to remember the 70's heavyweight</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

( Foreman, Frazier, Ali, Quarry, Liston, Patterson, Norton, Lyle, Shavers, to name some of the best, really think the guys from the 80's are as good? I'm getting real tired of this Cooney debate! Larry Holmes beat a very well worn Ken Norton. He made Mike Weaver look like he could soon be hall-of-fame material. He got past Shavers on sheer, (I don't know what to call it) He lost to Michael Spinks, Twice! He allowed Gerry Cooney to extend him into the eleventh round. Michael Spinks KO, D Cooney. Spinks was crushed by Mike Tyson, another heavyweight of some repute. My point is (and I do have one,) that the Jerry Quarry who lost to Frazier, even in their second fight, would have walked through Michael Spinks. Quarry would have given Cooney a systematic beating. Much like the one he gave Lyle. Comparing the opponents Holmes faced to the guys Quarry faced just ain't realistic! Mike Weaver and Pinklin Thomas don't measure up well against Ali or Frazier. |

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>8/18/03 09:23:47 PM</th>
<th>steve</th>
<th>N.J.</th>
<th>dmmsrm@comcast.net</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>If you were to take Ali, Frazier, Foreman, and Quarry, and juxtapose (is that a real word) them against Holmes, Tyson, and Hollyfield, what would be your conclusion about the difference between the 80's and the 70's?</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

| 8/19/03 05:25:35 AM | EVREN | LONDON | @ | 10 |
|---------------------|-------|--------|----|
| A man I very much respect - the editor of Britain's Boxing News wrote recently after watching the Ali-Bonavena match that both Chris Byrd and Roy Jones would'nt have had as much trouble with Bonavena as Ali did. They would have been too quick and good for him. Opinions? |

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>8/19/03 07:16:17 AM</th>
<th>John Gerard</th>
<th>NYC</th>
<th>rock289@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>EVREN: The Ali-Bonavena fight was scheduled for 15 rounds. It was a hard, rough fight. I don't know how Bryd or RJ would be after going 15 rounds against a bruiser like Bonavena. Bonavena was what I call awkwardly clever, not great by any means but a hard guy to count out and who never should be taken lightly. Also the odds of reluctant Roy getting into the ring with someone like Oscar is slim indeed.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>8/19/03 11:53:07 AM</th>
<th>Gerry Schultz</th>
<th>Cleveland, Ohio</th>
<th>jgschultz11@msn.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Wow, a lot on Cooney. I agree with Bob B.'s assessment of him, and will add that Gerry was one of more than a few substance-abusing underachievers from the late 70's- early 80's. I don't see you guys piling on John Tate or Leon Spinks. Gerry was a very good boxer with long levers and a light chin. Let's leave it there... I too thought Oscar Bonavena got the benefit of rankings. He was very strong, awkward puncher, but may have received more credit than he deserved. I don't think Ali pushed very hard versus Oscar, needing the rounds to scrape the rust off him. Ali did take Quarry very seriously, though, didn't he? Without the early cut, I think JO would have made that a very active bout. Ali/Liston II was a weird match in that the fight ended with Liston standing and unhurt, trading with Ali after Jersey Joe left them unsupervised to go to the other side of the ring. While Ali was clearly better, was Liston beaten at that point? Not yet in my opinion, though it might only delay Ali for just a while. I too do not rank Larry Holmes as high as many apparently do, but he was a master boxer and generally a very good guy who had to be champ after the greatest wave of talent in the history of the division had left and retired. I'd have liked to have seen Larry about six years earlier and really seen what he could've done. I think that if Foreman could have stayed on track, he'd have defended his belt against Larry about 1977-78 and knocked him cold. I saw Floyd Patterson and Ingo Johanssen II a few nights ago, made me think of JQ --- IF Jerry had come along then, say 1960, would he rank any higher as a former champ over Floyd, Ingo, Rademacher, et al than he does now? I don't think so, and we did get to see him against a great wave of talent. My point is, his not having won a belt, even against Ellis, does not take away from him. Given his popularity 1967-70, it's like he had one anyway. Floyd won it twice, and still does not rank as high as a two-time champ might otherwise rank all-time. Another fight that should have been: Frazier vs Norton. I've read that these two were friends. Too bad, would have been a key early 70's bout. Thanks.

Also, for Steve in Jersey, if we're setting 70's versus 80's teams, here's my take: Ali over all three handily, Frazier goes 2-1 with a thriller over Holmes, but gets KO'd by Tyson, who also exposes defensive weaknesses of Foreman in beating him (remember Ron Lyle)Foreman also goes 2-1 much the same as Frazier. JQ? It's harder to call versus these three, all would be interesting matches. I'm not sure I see him over any of them (sorry guys), though he clearly would have chances versus Holmes and Holyfield. You might want to add Ken Norton to the 70's group and a sober Riddick Bowe with Lennox Lewis, both of whom squared off in the Olympics, to the 80's team to make it an even 5-on-5. Also, for Massimo, I've read that Carnera was very afraid of killing someone and as a result did not really let it fly in his time. As for Shaq, gotta disagree. Refs are too afraid to call fouls fairly on the NBA's top meal ticket, and there are few other real centers in today's game. He's 7-1 330lbs., but can't lead the league in rebounds, why? I rank him about 7th/8th all-time. Want to see a real giant athlete? Find some film on Wilt Chamberlain, who might have beaten Ali if they'd met. Thanks again.

Wilt might well have beaten Ali? At what ping-pong? We are saying that a man who never entered a boxing ring would have beaten a man who many believe (including myself) was the all time greatest. wow.

Wilt Chamberlain was an incredible athlete who was very quick and agile for a man his size. This coupled with his incredible strength made him a well rounded over all athlete. However, the only way Chamberlain could have beaten Ali was if he had dedicated himself for years to boxing. Boxing is an acquired skill and it is not something that can be picked up on a moment's notice. Chamberlain had the raw tools to make one helluva boxer if he had trained at it from an early age. Maybe the best we would ever see. I not only think Ali would have beaten Chamberlain easily, I also think our Jerry would have beaten Chamberlain. Oh what fun us Quarry fans would have had betting on Jerry. You know how the press was often down on Jerry when he was fighting and a lot of fans were negative about him too, Wilt would have been the betting favorite and we would have cleaned up beating the odds. Jerry would have chopped that giant man down to size! Jerry would have been the perfect opponent as a tune up for an Ali fight (in some of the public's eye) but Wilt would have never got the Ali fight if he fought Jerry first!
film that is widely available (the one edited by Big Fights) it shows Ellis staggering back to the corner after being kayoed by Earnie the film cuts off. Apparently the film is cut because Ellis actually vomited over the top rope while still having his gumshield in. Bill Cayton was said to have cut the film on the original tape. A guy on the other website actually saw the film. I have never seen the complete version but I know HBO have it. Not sure if any collectors have the original version of that fight before it went through the big fights cutting room. What a devastating puncher that Shavers was.

8/20/03 04:30:22 AM|Massimo|not the ugliest town of the world|34.com|||10|Kind friends, I have a lot of things to say!
1) To Evren: with all the respect for the editor of Britains Boxing News it seems to me that saying Ali' was slow or not good is like saying Sir Isaac Newton was stupid, or W.A.Mozart sang out of tune !!!
2) to Gerry: I don't know if Carnera could really punch. He was big but I can name a lot of light fighters who could throw a hell of a punch: Marciano, Dempsey, Cooper, Satterfield, Langford... I have a theory: about 183 lbs can be enough to have a dreadful punch ! About Shaq, the refs maybe are too afraid to call fouls to him when he plays in the Staples, but surely are brave when he plays outside ! I never watched Chamberlain and Russell so I can't judge them. I know only the 42 years old version of Jabbar, so I can't judge him too ! But Shaq is the best center I ever watched ! He scores about 28 points, takes 15 rebounds etc. a game ! Anyway 7th/8th is not too bad, but I think that he deserve more !
3) to Gerry again: I think JQ was a champion when he fought fighters who allowed him to fight in the inside ! Only a lucky punch would have saved him against guys like Ali' or Lennox Lewis, who can use the jab...
4) I'm not twice bigger than Shaq, I was only joking ! I'm not tall at all !! I'm about 5'6"' ! But I'm fast ! Do you know how fast I am ? Last night I cut the light of my bedroom... the room was dark !

8/20/03 05:05:13 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com|||10|I remember hearing an amusing story about the promoters trying to arrange a Chamberlain v Ali fight. Chamberlain was justifiably nervous at the prospect of fighting 'The Greatest'. Just before he was due to meet with Ali to discuss the proposal, promoters begged Ali to tone down his usual rhetoric as they were worried that Chamberlain would pull out. So Ali reluctantly agreed that he would not scare Chamberlain with dire predications of the round he would end the fight, etc. But when Chamberlain walked into the room for the meeting, Ali looked up at him, burst out laughing, and then shouted "TIMBER" and the fight never happened.

8/20/03 09:47:13 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Massimo,
Chamberlain was one of a kind on the basketball court. Jabbar was also a great center, agile, but not quite as strong as Wilt was but his trademark hook shot was very hard to stop. Russell used his brains a lot. He would do things like find out where his opposing center liked to set up on offense and Russell would beat his opponent down the floor and go to the exact spot his opponent favored. Little things would throw someone's game off. Russell thought being a good team player was more important than individual statistics. What Russell did worked very well as his Celtics won more championships than anyone else has to this day, including Michael Jordan's Bulls.

Chamberlain did something no other player will ever match. Except for the one year when he broke his leg, He led the NBA in some major statistical catagory and not just scoring either. Of course he won a lot of scoring titles but he also led in rebounds, field goal percentage and amazingly, for a center, assists for one season. Wilt and Shaq have one thing in common. In addition to being very difficult to stop when they have the ball near the basket, Wilt, like Shaq, was a terrible free throw shooter. The New York Knicks used to have a reserve forward who would be one of the guys who would try and foul Wilt late in the game to get Wilt to shoot freethrows. Massimo, do you know who that forward was? It was no other than Phil Jackson! Jackson has no right to complain about the "hack a shaq" as he did the same thing to Wilt.SORRY FOR GETTING OFF THE BOXING TOPIC BUT I AM A LONG TIME LAKER FAN AND I GUESS MASSIMO IS ONE TOO.| 8/20/03 12:34:19 PM|Paul Maduros|midwest||pama42@yahoo.com|||10|Chamberlain great basketball player, but like Ed too tall Jones found out. You can't get that late of a start in boxing and be effective. The fight between Chamberlain and Jerry would have looked awkward, but Jerry would have took him out easy.| 8/20/03 12:58:49 PM|Forest Ward|South Carolina||Joe kevin|||10|Talking about non-boxers being boxers reminds me of something Jerry Quarry said back in 1969. He made these remarks while in training for either the Mathis or Frazier, I am not sure which. The story was a press release from the Grossingers training camp. Jerry and his trainer Teddy Bentham were discussing "tough Guys" outside the ring. Teddy remarked that he thought Ralph Houk (baseball manager, WWII hero), was a tough guy and he wouldn't want to mess with him. Now listen to who Jerry Quarry regarded as a legitimate tough guy, and wouldn't want to mess with? Jim Brown, the former running back. I thought Jerry was being remarkably honest when he said that. Today, at age 65 Jim Brown still appears to be quite formidable.| 8/20/03 01:42:38 PM|Gerry Schultz|Cleveland, Ohio||ggschultz11@msn.com|||10|John G., I consider Ali the best ever also, but Chamberlain, the greatest athlete I ever saw, would have a chance even without skills against even Ali. Consider the package: 90" reach 7-2 285lbs., unprecedented agility for a man his size, another site I visited shows a film clip of Wilt benching 500lbs. When he tried out for the NFL's KC Chiefs in '66, Wilt ran a 4.4 40, and is said to have had a vertical leap equal to Jordan's, unreal for a man that big. Ali's game drew a lot from his advantages in reach and height, advantages he would lose against Wilt, who would also probably be hard to hurt. Sure would have been entertaining ... Also, again for Steve, matching JQ, at 6-0 and 200 lbs., against the highly-skilled Holmes, 6-3 and probably 220, or Tyson and Holyfield, each of whom lifted and never met a muscle supplement they didn't like, is not to me fair matchups at all, again just like Foreman. Jerry would be a cruiseweight in the 80's - 90's, and likely champ. Doubtlessly, though, he would still give both Holmes and Holyfield a terrific fight, and would have a real chance against both. Just my opinion, guys. Thanks.| 8/20/03 01:47:39 PM|Massimo|Rome||bigaristotle.com|||10|Ali' would have beaten Wilt easily ! I doubt Wilt could punch or take a punch... I have read that the legendary Andre' the Giant ( maybe 6'9", surely not 7'5") beat Chuck Wepner easily within 3 rounds. But that wasn't a pure boxing fight, that was a boxing-wrestling fight. I have a matchup for you: Jerry Quarry vs Andre' the Giant in 3 kinds of fights:1)pure boxing2)boxing-wrestling3)pure wrestlingIn my opinion JQ would have won only the first !About Wilt, it seems to me that he wasn't so good with the Lakers, reading the statistic, I prefer Shaq !!!| 8/20/03 02:00:00 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|Well maybe had Wilt started boxing at an early age and gotten some amateur experience he would have been good.That still doesn't mean he can take a punch, which is my opinion is not height-related (compare 6'6" Michael Grant to 6' George Chuvalo). But I agree it would have been an interesting idea. I guess its just that today's really big heavies don't impress me all that much so I've extended that prejudice to Wilt (on a sliding scale). Just think, with all the giants around today, one version of the championship is owned by a former middleweight who is under 200 pounds and less than 6'.| 8/20/03 04:30:45 PM|Massimo|Rome||tpi|||10|Thanks Kent for your explanation about Wilt, Jabbar etc ! I think Shaq is improving in free-shooting ! Don't you agree ?I don't know, in boxing's history, a good fighter over 6'10'' ! | 8/20/03 07:32:40 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
How about ex-RAIDER great BOB BROWN (and a tough guy himself). Being carted off, after Denver Bronco Defensive end "STONE WALL" JACKSON got thru with him?? I'd HAVE PUT JACKSON IN WITH ANY OF THOSE GUYS!

I tried my hand at boxing and I used to think that if I lifted weights all the time I would just overpower all my opponents. A fight trainer just looked at me once and said, yea thats what your gonna do next month at the golden gloves, were goin there to see who can life the most weight right? In order to be a fighter you must fight that is the rule. If you get to far away from that in your training, you won't succeed.

Paul, you are so correct. Give me a boxer who does nothing but spar, hit the heavybag and speed bag, who runs, and who does push ups and sit ups over someone who does nothing but lift weights any day. Funny how most people (the general public) would pick the weight lifter over someone with long lean muscles even though most of the time the weight lifter would get his ass kicked! Massimo, when Wilt was with the Lakers, he tried to play more like Bill Russell. He concentrated on defense and rebounding because he had shooters around him like Elgin Baylor, Jerry West, and Gail Goodrich. Don't let his Laker statistics fool you because on any given day, even late in his career, he could go out and score 40 points any time he wanted. He was so sick of hearing that he couldn't win the big game that he was willing to give up maybe another scoring title or two. Looking back it didn't make much of a difference as he only was a part of two championship teams in his career.

So true about weight lifting and muscle building (to excess) not helping a boxer. Being muscle laden actually hurts a boxer, muscles need lots of oxygen and can be tiring as a fight continues and they don't contribute to punching power. Bob Foster had very thin arms and could whip lash a punch that could knock a man's head off. Most fighters that train with weights usually say they do it so they aren't bullied around the ring or so they can tie up opponents in clinches. Foreman said he built his arms up to help ward off body shots. About Wilt The Stilt and boxing...I remember him saying the only doubt he had about it was whether he could take a punch or not. I also remember Ali telling him he would have to shave off his goatee cause he " wasn't fighting any billy goats".

If Mike Tyson wants another fight for the title he has to fight guys like Tua, Rahman, Akinwande etc, not bums like Clifford !!!! I have an advice for him: STOP FIGHTING, YOU WERE A GREAT BOXER FORTEEN YEARS AGO !!! Don't say him that , because I'm scared at death !!!! Kent, Wilt never won an MVP title with the Lakers ! Why ? Why with all that champions he won just 1 NBA title ? No doubt in my mind he was one of the greatest champions of all times, but I think Shaq is comparable with him, if not better ! To Tim Duncan: Tim, you are great, but we are gonna give you a good whipping !!!!!!!!!!!

Comments about Wilt are funny. I remember when my matchmaker Bruce Trampler fixed Too Tall Jones up with a sure thing. Well, that little Mexican dude had Tall out on his feet until things calmed down and started going the way they were supposed to. Some people can't take a shot on the chin. It's not that you are less of a man, it's just the way you are put together. Boxing is unlike anything in this world. If you don't believe that then try it.

I saw Jerry fight many times through his amateur and pro career. His greatest strength was his killer instinct, second his power, and third his hand speed. His greatest weakness was that he was not a thinking fighter at all, he did not always train properly or enough, and of course, he was small compared to the big heavyweights. Very few fighters can think during a fight, as Evander Holyfield, Muhammad Ali, Alexis Arguello and Billy Conn could. Jerry did stupid things like sprain his ankle shortly before a big fight, supposedly sliding into 2nd base at a family softball game. Considering his weaknesses, he took his career about as far as he could, and was a very good but not great fighter. Some of the opinions expressed on this sight about his abilities are sentimental and exaggerated. Anyone who believes Jerry ever had a ghost of a chance against George Foreman is, well, incorrect. Jerry's loss to Smokin' Joe in their second fight was devastating and something no one who saw it could ever forget. Like most of us Irish harps, Jerry just took on too much and took on too many guys better than he was too fast. Jerry used to say that if the cruiserweight division had been around when he fought, he would have been the champ for years. That's possible, but he would have had to get past Sheriff Bob Foster, who incidentally stopped Mike Quarry with one of the single best shots in the history of the sport. There were also Jose Torre and other good fighters in the 1970-195 range. Anyway, to see Jerry finish a guy was watching a natural at work, as inevitable as a lion at the kill. Many of the comments here imply that Jerry was never given credit for what he could do. That's hogwash because he was celebrated all over the world, extremely popular, fought many of the biggest names, and got plenty shots at the title. Every ranked boxer gets screwed out of fights he deserves and decisions he should have won. Anybody good will be ducked now and then, as Jerry was. To those who say Jerry was set up in Atlanta for Muhammad Ali's return to the ring are making something out of nothing. When the opening bell rang, he had every chance in the world to win. I had Irish uncles who made all us boy cousins fight in the back yard from the time we could stand up, too, and it's a pretty damned miserable thing to do. It's unfortunate that Jerry got so punchy, but anyone could see it coming from early in his career. The last time I saw Jerry was at an Angel game in Anaheim in about 1976. He didn't recognize me. Requiescat In Pace, Jerry -- take us home early.

| 8/22/03 09:23:36 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | ||| 10 | Years ago, I remember reading that Dick Saddler said that early in his career Jerry turned down a fight against Liston a few times as did Frazier. Anybody know anything about this? |
| 8/22/03 10:34:01 AM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | ronnyraism@yahoo.com | ||| 10 | TUBBY: I agree some of us Quarry fans exaggerate JQ's talents to sometimes a high degree, Personally I think Sheriff Bob Foster, and Jose Torres would have been 5 to 1 underdogs vs Jerry, as Quarry would have been to Foreman, However I think Quarry should have gotten his title shot anyway, Mike Quarry Getting iced by Foster has not a thing to do with Jerry, Or Frazier's massacre of JQ, has nothing to do with George, Boxing is a battle of styles, And JQ always beat the "big slugger" Let's put it this way and I'll drop it, After Quarry's title eliminator victories over Shavers And LYLE, George could have and should have given him a shot, Then we all would have been satisfied forever, August 31, 1973 would have been a perfect time for both. TAKE CARE |
| 8/22/03 11:52:09 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | ||| 10 | Jimmy Dorsey: I agree 100% that Jerry should have gotten a title shot against Foreman after beating Lyle and Shavers so convincingly. Don't get me wrong, I think George would have beaten him because unlike Mac Foster, Lyle, and Shavers, he was not a 1-dimensional slugger. I would have made George a 2-1 favorite and bet on him. But that does not obituate the fact that Jerry was denied a title shot he clearly earned. That is still one of the best fights never made. And Jerry vs. Torres or Bob Foster? Their is nothing in either man's record to even hint they could handle a 200 lb hitter like Jerry. |
| 8/22/03 01:18:59 PM | Forest Ward | South Carolina | Joekevin@cs.com | ||| 10 | Hey Tubby, that was the most objective and accurate portrayal of Jerry Quarry's talents that I've ever seen. Most of the time Jerry's skills are either over estimated (sometimes by people on this site), or ridiculed (by people who know little about boxing). I don't agree with the possible match ups with Torrres or Foster. Torres would have came to Quarry, and forced Quarry to punch hard and fast, Quarry wins in 1st or second round. Foster would have gave Quarry fits for about 5 rounds. And then those Quarry left hooks to the stomache would begin to sap Foster of his stamina. And Bob would collapse anytime after round 5John G., when Liston made his comeback in the late 60's it's my understanding neither Frazier nor Quarry's management wanted to fight him. I agree with their decision. Frazier was made to order for Liston around the years 67, 68 ,69. Quarry too for that matter. I can just see Sonny's jab pounding Jerry's face. Dundee was not going to put Ellis in with him either during this period. When Liston fought Leotis Martin in 1969, Liston did not have the psychological advantage over Martin that he had over other fighters. Martin as a middleweight in 1962-63 was a sparring partner for Liston, during Listons Championship tenure. As a result Martin had no fear of the younger Liston or the older Liston, and he took the fight and we all know what happened.|8/22/03 04:56:39 PM|Massimo|Rome||threepeat.com||||10|The Tubby's portrayal (beautiful word !) is indeed very accurate but, in my opinion, he forgot two things about JQ 1) His chin was granite 2) He often had troubles with cuts To Forest: I don't think the old Liston would have beaten a young Frazier! Maybe a prime Liston would have beaten a prime Frazier (in theory) but I'm not sure because Frazier's heart was twice bigger than Liston's heart !!! Frazier was a lion, like Quarry ! I'm a huge Liston's fan, but this is my opinion! Leotis Martin beat Liston for a lucky punch !!!8/22/03 05:23:30 PM|Massimo|Rome||34.com||||10|I forgot ! Is it true that Ali' had troubles against Bob Foster ? Foster said he fell several times but he never was hurt and that he hit Ali' with hard punches ! I'm curious !

Thanks|8/22/03 06:47:20 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Hi! I haven't looked through all the letters yet, but from those I have, it appears I'm the only female boxing fan posting on the page. My Dad was an amateur, and I picked up my interest from him; we used to watch together all the time, and talk fights. He and my husband had/have a really big collection of fight videos and films, and I read and watch extensively. I was saddened to learn of tough Jerry Quarry's condition and final passing. His era was by far the best in boxing history, and my favorite to talk about. I post in other general discussion forums about boxing, but most either have little interest or knowledge. I look forward to "trading shots" with the posters in here! :-)|8/22/03 07:42:41 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||||10|Leotis Martin was a good fighter, he wore Liston down, after Liston had beat him up, those were some pretty good throws he had there to kayo Sonny, I remember Cosell who seemed to genuinely like Sonny, "Charles what happened?" and Sonny saying, "if i'd had known that Howard I wouldn't have got knocked out" I don't care if JQ had succumbed To Foreman early, I still would have rather seen him in there, Than his 74' bout with "smokin joe" and a payday, Foreman-Quarry title bout at that time would have received a huge buildup of excitement for the fans, and would have paid both fighter's handsomely.ACTUALLY JAMES J. WOODY AND (EVERYONE'S FRIEND) JACK O'HALLORAN WERE THE BEST, JUST HAD TOO MANY "OFF NIGHTS". Besides O'Halloran's agent was better than JERRY'S|8/22/03 10:31:26 PM|KENT APPEL|LA HABRA, CA||ORIONONSIDE@AOL.COM||||10|Tubby, Jerry did not get plenty of title shots. He got exactly two, one against Ellis in 1968 for the WBA title and one against Frazier in 1969, for the New York State Athletic Commission version of the title. He did earn a third one that he never got, of course in 1973 based on the wins over Lyle and
It is true that Foreman brought more to the table than Lyle, Shavers, and M. Foster brought but as I have said before, Jerry had a better chance of defeating Foreman than Frazier or Norton, two fighters who beat Jerry, because of Jerry's counterpunching style. Foreman, circa 1973 or 1974, did not use all of his skills. George relied on his power mainly.

Jerry had a chin in a league with Ali, Frazier, Chuvalo, or Marciano. However, even rock cracks, and Foreman was way out there in terms of power; his punches might have taken a thousandth of a second longer to complete their orbit, but they carried the goods when they arrived. Frazier was talented enough to have fought a different fight against Foreman, but his personality didn't let him, and I'm still skeptical about the validity of the Foreman-Ali, even if George does graciously say it was on the level. Quarry was also talented enough to outsmart George back then, before his morphing into the more centered man he is today. JQ had a little bit of the hot Frazier in him, and if he didn't try to out macho Foreman, and mixed his styles, going inside, side to side, counter punching, combination punching, then moving back, and continually mixing these styles, then I believe he'd have been in the hunt against GF. George didn't do well with the unexpected, or things out of pattern. However, Jerry would ultimately have had to contend with that one big moment when one of Foreman's punches finally landed. Good Lord, he literally lifted Ken Norton off his feet.

Assuming Foreman really did run out of gas against Ali, perhaps endurance was the problem some said it was (though Foreman's workouts were formidable). If so, the longer the fight went, the higher Quarry's star would rise. A question mark too about Foreman was handling himself when in trouble. The punch Ali hit him with didn't really seem to be a bomb, but he crumpled in fog and confusion. Late in his career, after his revival, he was hit, but I can't recall enough times he was badly hurt to say he was one thing or another under crisis circumstances.
size/power advantages and his own propensity to cut to eventually do him in. How many guys did well enough to force Ali and Joe to fight him twice, just JQ. Jerry was a thinking fighter definitely, and an outstanding athlete, in my opinion. I believe he had just two title shots, Ellis and Frazier, in his prime of some eight years. I don't see anyone, Foster or anyone else, at 200 lbs who would stop him from eventually being Cruiserweight champ. Maybe as fans here we go a little far where JQ is concerned, but if commentary here is a little rich, just read what guys like Frazier and Foreman and others have said about him. It's not just hype... Massimo, Wilt's teams won two titles. The only teams to ever defeat (Boston and New York) Wilt's teams in the playoffs had at least 5-6 Hall of Famers. Teams, not players, win titles. There were only 16-20 teams then also, not the diluted, sloppy 30 plus teams the NBA has now. Wilt played against better centers and better teams as a result. He shot 72% from the field for the Lakers in '72, just one of his many unbreakable records. Shaq in today's best center definitely, but Wilt is best all-time. Also, I never said Wilt was better than Ali, guys. Just that his rare size and athleticism would give him a better chance than you think. Wilt was amazing at a number of sports. But obviously, spending years of time to develop skills in one sport would give a true boxer a huge edge over someone like Wilt. Thanks again. |

PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Quarry as a cruiserweight is a very interesting proposition! The cruiserweight division is an odd one. Guys who were natural cruisers have more often than not preferred to labor as "small" heavies, for the money, exposure, and fame. A lot of CWs have been light heavies stepping up, or light heavies who were old and fat, or lazy, and couldn't make 175 any more.Foster, in my opinion, was far and away the best light heavy ever. However, fighting guys at 190, or putting on some weight wouldn't necessarily make him a legit CW. Foster was a naturally tall, skinny guy, an ectomorph, with a dynamite punch (like Danny Lopez). To go against a Quarry, who could easily have been a natural, in shape CW, might have invited the same disaster as when Foster fought heavies.I imagine Quarry would always have heard the siren song of Frazier, Ali, etc. though, and wouldn't have stayed long at the lower weight. Patterson either, or any of the other guys who were at the lower end of the heavy scale.Anyway, Quarry and Foster as Cruisers? As much as I loved Bob Foster, I'd have to say that though he'd have gotten his bell rung powerfully, JQ would have taken him.| |

8/23/03 01:23:27 PM|Massimo|Rome||3peat.com|||10|All Mac Foster's victories were by KO (incredible !) Did he punch so hard ? Is this the only case in heavyweight history ?To Gerry: Thanks Gerry ! OK , Wilt was better than Shaq ! I'm strong inside, I'm gonna except it ! But ShaqbAli' KO 1 !!!!! I'm joking, of course ! No basketball player could have beaten Ali' ! Maybe in a bar' s brawl but not in a boxing ring !!| |

8/23/03 08:14:55 PM|Forest Ward|South Carolina||joekevin@cs.com|||10|Hey Paul M., that's my point. In the late 60's Liston was ripe for the taking. But the managers of all those rising turks at the time avoided fighting him. When Leotis Martin beat him, I think every manager was relieved. Throughout Ali's suspension he repeatedly stated that he thought Liston was the best out there. Was he trying to piss off Frazier, and Ellis, by saying that? Maybe.| |

8/24/03 04:28:12 AM|Tubby Breslin|Fullerton, CA||bearstubastanchu|||10|You folks really know your boxing. First of all, I was wrong: Jerry didn't have lots of title shots. But he had 2, which is more than 99.9% of pros ever have. He was also in contention for a decade, in the minds of opponents, promoters, managers and fans. I'm interested in the proposition that the 60s and 70s were a great era of heavyweight boxing. At that time, almost no one was saying so. Very few of the ranked heavies then were generally conceded to be great, believe it or not. Floyd Patterson lost too much status from his humiliating defeats to Ali, and his other losses. Chuvalo and Bonavena were virtually considered “opponents”. Foreman lost part of his reputation in Zaire. Frazier was considered great even in defeat, yes. Norton, no. There was an earlier cast including Zora Folley, Doug Jones, Eddie Machen, Cleve (“Big Cat”) Williams, Amos (“Big Train”) Lincoln, Buster Mathis, King Fletcher, Thad Spencer, even George (“Scrap Iron”) Johnson -- who went 12 rounds with a young Joe Frazier and lost as decision -- who had many excellent outings and stayed in the Top 10 or 20, but who fell well short of greatness. Some were deserving at high ranks, especially Zora, but never got their shots until the last phase of their careers. There was also a slew of overseas fighters including Karl Mildenberger, Henry Cooper, Brian London and others who were built up for Ali and the cable promoters, and he made mincemeat of them all. Funny how Ali never really learned how to box .. guess he was so gifted, athletic and smart he never needed to.

I also believe Liston and Foreman were great fighters, but with the way Sonny was owned by the Mob, his real greatness is unrevealed, so to speak. Perhaps more than anyone, Larry Holmes proved his greatness again and again and again, and his left jab is the finest any of us are ever likely to see. Ken Norton was a tremendous fighter, and quite likely took the 2nd Ali fight in LA, but didn't get the decision.

Where, then, is the greatness? In those days, Rocky Marciano was considered the paradigm of a great heavyweight, and so was Joe Louis. None of the sportswriters or commentators of the day would have considered any heavyweights fighting in the 60s and 70s to be at the Marciano-Louis level. The Ezzard Charles-Joe Walcott era was thought to be truly great. Anyway, do we call the heavyweight division in the 60s and 70s great because there were so many very good fighters? I guess that's reasonable. Or is it because the pickin's are so putrid now?

Even then, though, people were groaning and sneering about the rotten state of boxing, the final decline, etc. Therefore when we say it now -- and I believe it is true, now -- it sounds questionable. When Butterball fights, or even David Tua or Johnny Thunder (sorry to have the name wrong) or even these 2 Russian brothers, surely Jack Johnson, Jack Dempsey, Joe Louis and Sonny Liston turn over in their graves. What do you guys think? I think to make a boxer, you generally need a pretty desperate kid, a poor kid, someone who's willing to bleed to make it, and usually one who sees boxing as his only chance. With the dozens of pro and "amateur" sports now and their huge programs, as well as the phenomenal sums of money to be made and the worldwide exposure, most kids choose other sports. In terms of bringing young boxers along, the promoters, managers, and cable people have completely knuckled under to instant gratification, and throw fighters into title fights way too early and long before they deserve it.

Obviously, one of the key reasons Jerry Quarry did so well is that he began early and served a long apprenticeship with excellent teachers and good opponents. I may be wrong, but I don't think many American kids get that any more as they learn to fight and get into the amateurs. Myself, I finally got my clock convincingly cleaned 37 years ago, so I've been out of the game too long to know. Can anyone correct me or confirm any of these ideas? Seems like we always have strong fly to middle divisions, right?

By the way, whatever happened to the kid named Baby Cassius who used to fight at the Olympic Auditorium around 1966-1970? He had everything he needed to become champ.

Who believes Oscar de la Hoya will prevail against Shane Mosley? I just can't pick against Oscar. They're perfect examples of what I'm arguing here -- there are no heavyweights nearly as good as Oscar, Shane, Roy, Pernell, James Toney -- oops, Evander was, in his prime. Take care, guys.
generally conceded to be great, believe it or not. Floyd Patterson lost too much status from his humiliating defeats to Ali, and his other losses. Chuvalo and Bonavena were virtually considered "opponents". Foreman lost part of his reputation in Zaire. Frazier was considered great even in defeat, yes. Norton, no. There was an earlier cast including Zora Folley, Doug Jones, Eddie Machen, Cleve ("Big Cat") Williams, Amos ("Big Train") Lincoln, Buster Mathis, King Fletcher, Thad Spencer, even George ("Scrap Iron") Johnson -- who went 12 rounds with a young Joe Frazier and lost as decision -- who had many excellent outings and stayed in the Top 10 or 20, but who fell well short of greatness. Some were deserving at high ranks, especially Zora, but never got their shots until the last phase of their careers. There was also a slew of overseas fighters including Karl Mildenberger, Henry Cooper, Brian London and others who were built up for Ali and the cable promoters, and he made mincemeat of them all. Funny how Ali never really learned how to box .. guess he was so gifted, athletic and smart he never needed to. I also believe Liston and Foreman were great fighters, but with the way Sonny was owned by the Mob, his real greatness is unrevealed, so to speak. Perhaps more than anyone, Larry Holmes proved his greatness again and again and again, and his left jab is the finest any of us are ever likely to see. Ken Norton was a tremendous fighter, and quite likely took the 2nd Ali fight in LA, but didn't get the decision. Where, then, is the greatness? In those days, Rocky Marciano was considered the paradigm of a great heavyweight, and so was Joe Louis. None of the sportswriters or commentators of the day would have considered any heavyweights fighting in the 60s and 70s to be at the Marciano-Louis level. The Ezzard Charles-Joe Walcott era was thought to be truly great. Anyway, do we call the heavyweight division in the 60s and 70s great because there were so many very good fighters? I guess that's reasonable. Or is it because the pickin's are so putrid now? Even then, though, people were groaning and sneering about the rotten state of boxing, the final decline, etc. Therefore when we say it now -- and I believe it is true, now -- it sounds questionable. When Butterball fights, or even David Tua or Johnny Thunder (sorry to have the name wrong) or even these 2 Russian brothers, surely Jack Johnson, Jack Dempsey, Joe Louis and Sonny Liston turn over in their graves. What do you guys think? I think to make a boxer, you generally need a pretty desperate kid, a poor kid, someone who's willing to bleed to make it, and usually one who sees boxing as his only chance. With the dozens of pro and "amateur" sports now and their huge programs, as well as the phenomenal sums of money to be made and the worldwide exposure, most kids choose other sports. In terms of bringing young boxers along, the promoters, managers, and cable people have completely knuckled under to instant gratification, and throw fighters into title fights way too early and long before they deserve it. Obviously, one of the key reasons Jerry Quarry did so well is that he began early and served a long apprenticeship with excellent teachers and good opponents. I may be wrong, but I don't think many American kids get that any more as they learn to fight and get into the amateurs. Myself, I finally got my clock convincingly cleaned 37 years ago, so I've been out of the game too long to know. Can anyone correct me or confirm any of these ideas? Seems like we always have strong fly to middle divisions, right? By the way, whatever happened to the kid named Baby Cassius who used to fight at the Olympic Auditorium around 1966-1970? He had everything he needed to become champ. Who believes Oscar de la Hoya will prevail against Shane Mosely? I just can't pick against Oscar. They're perfect examples of what I'm arguing here -- there are no heavyweights nearly as good as Oscar, Shane, Roy, Pernell, James Toney -- oops, Evander was, in his prime. Take care, guys.
Ali's main faults were that he often arm punched, without proper foot position or contact or hip rotation, he pulled away from punches, often carried his arms low, never went to the body, and wandered around the ropes far too often in the second part of his career. He often was arrogant and didn't train properly, and seemed to want to make a fool out of an opponent ("See how great I am?), more than he wanted to win. Many of his blinding combinations were nice to look at, but in a lot of cases (proven via slo mo), many if not most missed, or were glancing blows. While they confused many opponents, the really smart ones launched an attack immediately after, when he often left himself split second vulnerable. However! He compensated with superb craftiness, extraordinary speed, was largely able to govern pace (except with Frazier), and was superb at tying his opponent up, eye thumbing, and opening cuts. Great jab (though I think Holmes's was better), could throw a decent uppercut when he wanted to, a super straight right and right cross, and even a hook, when he really set himself. Sadly, when his speed, reflexes and stamina were leaving him, he demonstrated his biggest gift of all, unequaled, I believe, by any other fighter ever - the ability to take a punch. When he commented that "Joe Frazier made me what I am today," he didn't know how right he was, though that wasn't what he meant.

Good observations, Roadscholarette. These are examples of how Ali never learned how to box, by doing so many things wrong, beginning with leaning away from punches. He invented his own style and made it fantastically successful. Another great strength of his was his twisting or torquing punches that cut opponents. He also capitalized on pulling down the necks and shoulders of opponents in clinches, even the briefest clinches, for a cumulative effect of exhaustion on them. Some people tend to think of Ali as smaller than he was, 6'4" and 220 or more. Boxers and former boxers know that even glancing punches can hurt a lot, because of the mental scoring that goes along and the embarrassment of being hit. Ali kept his hitting your face and it humiliated and discouraged opponents, even making them mad and distracted from their business of fighting. Besides, when it comes to knockout damage, it's not the power itself of a punch, but the snapping on a precise target to cause unconsciousness. (Sean O'Grady explains this well.) Clubbing a man into submission is a much longer and more difficult process than snapping him on the button or along the jaw. Anyway, Ali's greatest strength of all, and something he practically invented or rather reinvented for the contemporary age of boxing, was the psychological game. Many of us feel this part of the game, at least among two more or less equal opponents, is 90% of the whole contest. At least from the moment an opponent signed a contract to fight Ali, this hapless person was subject to trash-talking, shaming (even on Uncle Tom grounds, like Patterson and Frazier), and even weird behavior and threats (which rattled even Sonny Liston). By the time the opponent enters the ring to fight, he's likely to be a nervous wreck and intimidated. Against Ali, no one fought a man but rather a legend and an international symbol. Intimidation, verbal or otherwise, is as old as sports, but Ali magnified it almost to a cosmic level, bringing in archetypes of race, manhood, destiny, the underdog, and various elements of culture. This in part is why I call him a thinking fighter. Jerry Quarry, like most ranked fighters of that day, had some of his own mystique going for him. He was the rough, tough Irish brawler with killer instinct and a mean streak in the ring, the kind of guy who won't stop coming even when you break a 2x4 over his head. No one stepped in against Jerry without fear. Jerry delivered, too, even in the bouts he lost. He is one fighter... who never had anything to be ashamed of, and that was part of his huge popularity. There was indeed no dog in any of the Quarrys. This gamesmanship and trash-talking and psyching out have grown way out of proportion now, so that a lot of boxing promotion is close to WW Wrestling. We see kids with only 5 fights threatening to kill champions, and we see whole fights based on BS like "Redemption" in the upcoming Mosely-De La Hoya fight -- excessive machismo, and laughable. Ali made his head-gaming absolutely convincing, and often funny as well. Almost 30 years after they fought, Joe Frazier is reportedly still furious at Ali for calling him "The Ugly Bear" and so forth. I suspect that in a sense, many people like Jerry Quarry because he never indulged in that stuff at all, and simply showed up to fight. One more thing -- there's no way to measure it or check the evidence, but I think Ali trained well for a higher percentage of fights than 95% of boxers, and all boxers go slack on this sometimes.

It also occurred to me that Jerry was what? -- 5'11", 200-205? George Foreman was 6'5", 230+. I simply cannot imagine Jerry hurting him, as so few other fighters ever did, excepting Ali. I'm reminded of when Mike Tyson (5'10", 220) finally mixed it with Riddick Bowe (6'5", 240+) and tried his "ferocious stuff". Bowe hardly blinked and seemed to be thinking, "Jeez, is that all?" The oldest lie in boxing is that the bigger they are, the harder they fall. Actually, the bigger they are, the harder it is to make them fall. Look not at the aberrations like Primo Carnera but the proof like Lennox Lewis. And yes, my La Habra friend, I remember your town over the hill very well. Our Boys' Club would have Fight Nights and smokers with you several times every year. You always had good fighters, especially good, skilled Mexican-American kids who could box you right out of the gym and beat you in a hundred ways. A La Habra star I'll always remember was Larry Hughes, who became an outstanding amateur heavyweight, and would have fought for our country in the Pan Am Games, had he not had some Vietnam injuries that hampered him. You guys were the toughest in Orange County then, along with Santa Ana. | 8/25/03 04:22:04 AM|Massimo|Rome||3peat.com|||10|To Tubby: Joe Frazier wasn't the "Ugly Bear" ! He was the "Gorilla" ! Do you remember " I'm gonna beat the gorilla in the Thrilla in Manilla " ? Sonny Liston was the "Ugly Bear" ! Primo Carnera wasn't an aberration ! I beat Paulino Uzcudun twice, Walter Neusel... Lasted 15 rounds against Sharkey and almost 6 against Joe Louis. He wasn't a great champion but he was a good fighter ! P.Uzcudun was European...Lasted 15 rounds against Sharkey and almost 6 against Joe Louis. He wasn't a great champion but he was a good fighter ! P.Uzcudun was European... about the same size of Chris Bird! George Foreman isn't 6'5'', he is 6'4''!

When did Tyson fight Bowe? In a sparring session? Have a nice time!

To Ed: I don't think there's any doubt that football, basketball, and baseball have taken a lot of good athletes who might otherwise have been good fighters. Though fighters still tend to come from rough backgrounds, even the worst schools have sports programs. Football is no walk in the park, but takes a back seat to boxing. The average fighter comes out with fewer overall injuries, but those to his head and often vital organs are usually worse. Even for kids who'd be in the lighter divisions, there are sports they can take part in other than boxing, though the chances of making money in any but soccer are small (and you can't make anything in that in the US).

It used to be said that the inept fighter sustained the worst damage, but that isn't true. The poor fighter doesn't stick around, and is typically knocked out early and often if he tries to continue. Good fighters have longer careers, fight better fighters, and the higher up they go, the more long fights they have (against other good people). While there's a range of ability to take a punch in the elite ranks, all of the guys are pretty durable. The movie Rocky was illustrative of the kind of punishment a palooka takes. The unrealistic part of the movies was that no one, I don't care if it's Rocky ~Marciano~ takes that number and severity of punches, and stays up. That's Hollywood though!

Muhammed Ali may have scared a lot of people off. There are other tragedies out there, as we know, but the public at large is usually unaware of most of them, other than MA. Of course, kids are all bulletproof in their minds, and can always look to George Foreman, who shows no signs at all of ever having been a boxer, and is richer than Ali to boot.

Some interesting recent posts. Tubby mentioned the early 60's era, which did have a very interesting set of heavies, including Eddie Machen, who gave JQ an important lesson. Floyd got good press as an excellent boxer and courageous fighter, but was too extended beyond 190lbs to stick, which is why he got repeatedly flattened by the likes of Ingo, Rademacher, etc. who were real heavies, so was not great as heavy. Floyd would have been your early 60's CW Champ, Road'ette. But JQ would have beat him at 190 if they met 1967-68, they met then as heavies. Liston is considered great from that era, maybe the only one before Ali, Liston was the Foreman of that period, with size/power advantages few could even challenge then. In beating Liston, Ali knew how to beat Foreman years in advance, but it was a greater victory the second time as Ali was clearly declining, as Ken Norton and others revealed. Few liked the trash-talking Clay/Ali, but they called him great, on the level with Rocco and Louis in 1966, if not earlier. He was a revolution as a fighter, unprecedented speed and movement, was truly tough, made great use of height and reach especially on his toes. Agree with Tubby, his mental portion was the best part of his game. But he went too far against Frazier and made Joe the raging slugger who would clearly beat him. Massimo, Shaq has hundreds of millions of fans around the world and for good reason. He's a remarkable athlete and basketball's most dominant player today. Being the best in any era is a remarkable achievement. Mac Foster was a size/power guy with a lot of wins, but few name opponents before Jerry, I believe. JQ was treated like a trial horse, an "opponent", for Foster, Shavers and Lyle and he schooled them all! Jerry was just 196 for Foster, but way ahead in experience and skill. To Kent, Evren etc., this does further prove your skill versus muscle argument. Lennox Lewis is champ not because he's 6-5 245, but because he can (could?) outbox any heavy since 1996. Early 90's had nice group of heavies Tyson, Bowe, Holyfield, Lewis, Morrison, other good top10, top20 guys. Opinions comparing to other periods? Ali was 6'3" probably 215 in his prime, could outbox any of today's giants easily. He, Frazier, Foreman are generally considered great, after that it's a matter of opinion. Holmes, Tyson, Holyfield also, though personally not sure I agree. Liston was somewhat lost after curious AliII fight, but had been in the ring since the late 1950's, so might have been beatable by the right fighter, but not as ripe as you think, Chuck Wepner. Agree with Evren about Earnie Shavers, who had very high KO%, huge punch, which JQ took very well, but smashed others. He gave Larry Holmes a great match. A dangerous, underrated heavy. The first confused Don King graduate. Good to see someone mention the Euro-heavies of the 60's, they gave Ali very good matches and deserve their respect. Greatness of any era usually is made in retrospect. Jerry Quarry's era doesn't just stand out because of the divisions decline since then, it's because of the comparable talent and depth of the time, which produced four respectable (Ali- legendary) champions. When else did this occur? So many do not get title shots, yes, but title shots are earned usually, not given. JQ earned his by beating Patterson, a former champ, and Spencer who was at least #4. Wins like that usually can't be ignored, though Quarry's wins over top guys like Lyle, Shavers somehow were. Some guys like Norton were so dangerous yet not very saleable they were dodged for years. Clay/Ali knew that if he didn't run his mouth, he might go the way of Norton, others. Hype can be as important as talent, I guess, in gaining a titleshot, as Gerry Cooney proved. $$ | division hit harder than Shavers. Jerry took a couple of his punches (the same ones that crumbled Norton) gave back some of his own, hurt Shavers and scored a KO, all in one round. He took Lyle the distance and won convincingly. Jerry would have one chance at Foreman: Slug with him sporadically, move out and take cover, try to withstand George's bombs. If he could have done this for 6 or 7 rounds (a lot to ask, I'm aware), he might have found Foreman in the same condition Ali found him in round 8 in Zaire---punched out, with no energy left. Time and time again, Quarry proved that he had stamina to throw punches later in a fight, even up to the end of his career against Zanon. If he could have taken Foreman to the middle rounds, anything could have happened. Again, I think Foreman would have stopped Jerry on cuts, but I also think Jerry would have a legitimate chance to pull off an upset. Look, Jimmy Young ended Foreman's first career---Young was smaller, lighter and not a big hitter. But he knocked Big George down late in the fight. Jerry's leather was a lot heavier than Young's.

---

| 8/26/03 02:42:30 AM|Massimo|Rome||big aristotle.com|||10|Thanks Gerry, but I wished to know if Wilt and Shaq ever meet in life, not in a basketball court. If they were friends! If Wilt had a good opinion about Shaq! My mistake, English is not an easy language! |
| 8/26/03 03:29:03 PM|Tubby Breslin|Fullerton, CA||bearstubastanchu@aol.com|||10|Let's define "greatness" as unassailably superior to all or almost all of one's peers and predecessors, distinguished by an exceptionally high level of explicit success, possessing innovative and creative qualities, setting standards of excellence, and sustaining this extremely high level of quality in performance and achievement for a significant span of time. OK, that would be Jack Johnson, Jack Dempsey, Joe Louis, Cassius Clay/Muhammad Ali, probably Larry Holmes and probably Mike Tyson. (By comparison, in other divisions, it would include Sugar Ray Robinson, Sugar Ray Leonard, Roy Jones, Jr. and others.) The essence of this definition is a quality of rising above one's own time or the temporal, and joining the all-time elite. Jerry Quarry, for all his skill and heart, makes no claims to this status. George Foreman does. Another point is that boxing is a physical science, more or less codified and classical. Roughly speaking, there is one way to box, with individual variations. Cassius Clay/Muhammad Ali did not box. He fought, and brilliantly. He has been the most popular man of sport and the most celebrated or famous human being since the early 1960s. There are those who dislike him or disapprove of him, whether for his attitude about the Selective Service or his fighting behavior, but he cannot be said to be widely disliked. He is 6'4" and George Foreman is 6'5". I have met them both many times, and I am 6'3", with these two clearly being that much taller. Of course it is not size alone that makes a man a good fighter, or any athlete a good athlete. But when a very good 6'4" fighter goes against a very good 5'10" fighter, the bigger one has a major advantage in many ways. Primo Carnera was indeed an aberration in terms of being heavyweight champion. There was no one like him previously or since, except for Jess Willard. Neither had good records against good fighters. Yes, I was wrong about Bowe fighting Tyson. Finally, what is it about George Foreman than makes so many of you friends disparage him and his boxing abilities? With the possible exception of Sonny Liston, George had the most powerful and damaging punch of all time. He conquered Joe Frazier as if Smokin' Joe were an amateur. The name and memory of Rocky Marciano are enshrined in hyperbole and worshipful grandiosity. He may have been a great fighter and he certainly had an outstanding unbeaten record, and he fought many excellent fighters. If you examine his style and yes, his size, can you actually imagine him entering the ring and fighting on a par with George Foreman, Sonny Liston, Muhammad Ali, Larry Holmes, Mike Tyson or Lennox Lewis? I cannot. This assertion will surely rile the Marciano devotees out there, so bring it on. Be objective, though, please. One more thing -- could we restrict our discussion here to boxing? Wilt Chamberlain boasted for years he could win the heavyweight boxing championship as well as most other athletic standards. He was a supreme egotist, and of course, a great athlete. Any decent professional heavyweight would have cut the Big Dipper in two. Yes, he knew Shaquille O'Neal, but it was almost impossible for Wilt the Stilt to acknowledge that any other center was good. Did they ever play together in a pickup game, maybe at Pauley Pavillion? Probably, but so what? Wilt may have been the greatest player in NBA history, for as I believe Frank Deford once wrote, "There were times when Wilt could dominate in such a way as to be a man playing against boys." If anyone thinks Shaq dominates the league now (and he certainly does), you should have seen Wilt. God bless all of you. (What was Jerry Quarry's best fight and his finest hour in the ring, by the way? Anybody have an opinion?)

(Oh, and yes, to the gentleman from La Habra, I know your town well. Between 1957 and 1967, our Boys Club competed in Fight Nights and smokers with you several times every year, and you usually came out on top. You always had outstanding Mexican-American kids who could box their way out of the gym and hurt you in a hundred ways. The best La Habra fighter I knew was a guy named Larry Hughes, who used to spar with Jerry Quarry. Larry served in Vietnam as a Green Beret, and afterwards came close to winning a spot on the USA Pan Am Games team, except a war injury caused him to be disqualified. His right cross was a real mule kick and I can still feel it. La Habra and Santa Ana had the best fighters in Orange County in those days.)

8/26/03 04:44:51
PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Hi Tubby! I'm going to respond to your other post, but I want to answer this one first.

There's a lot of wishfulness in fights that never were (as well in ones that ~were~!), to go along with analysis of objective factors, as objective as we can ever be about such a sport as boxing. Even when a fighter is KO'd, or TKO'd, you always hear sentimental cries of "off night" or "luck," or "if this (or that) hadn't happened," etc., their man would have won.

One thing that's interesting to do is to evaluate fighters based on their best night. I know this has its flaws, but going with this, best night and all, among heavies, who could taken Frazier the night he clipped the Butterfly's wings in '71? There have been more destructive fights, but I can recall none in which the opponents were not also elite performers (Dempsey-Willard, for example, was more brutal, but look at the disparity in the fighters). Smokin' Joe was ~more~ than human for those 15 rounds. I also put this close to Ali's best night, possibly his best. Keep in mind, he's ~looked~ better, but never against such an opponent, the likes of which he'd never faced before or after, yet he still kept it interesting, even close.

Foreman never went through the number of challenges others did (handling himself well when in trouble), though it did happen. I still look a little fishy eyed at his fight with Ali, but he responded superbly against Lyle, no soft touch. If George hit someone, they were going, period. Others might have kept it from happening, and if indeed endurance ~was~ a problem for George in the late rounds, they might have gotten by, if they also had chin of concrete. Marciano and Foreman? Sorry, Rock fans, George would have bounced him as easily, or more so, than he did Frazier (though I believe it would have been a different story if Foreman had fought the Joe who fought Ali the first time). Unfortunately, the great George Foreman has been subject ~ or victim ~ of the reverse of what many fighters have enjoyed. Some are built into indestructible gods in retrospect, while Foreman has had to suffer a fair amount of denigration, in some cases putting him in the class of a deluxe amateur with a big punch. Yes, staying away from George might have been the recipe for a win over him, but he was no dummy or stiff, and threw a lot of punches. My guess is that few could have, and that there wouldn't be ~any~ who would come out ahead in a theoretical "Best of 10."The only sort who might have stood a chance would be tricky, unorthodox, fast, and unpredictable, hopefully all four (power nice, but not required), witness Ali and the average Jimmy Young.I've met Foreman twice, and Frazier once (not Ali), and Foreman's easily 6'4'', while 5'11'' is stretching it for JF.8/26/03 05:29:01 PM|Massimo|Rome|Wshaq.com|||10|To Tubby: I have watched only 2 Marciano's fights (Walcott I and a synthesis of Ezzard Charles II) so I don't know him very well. But I know that Joe Louis after their fight said: "Marciano is the hardest puncher I have ever faced in the ring"! And Joe had fought good punchers like Buddy Baer and Max Baer! Besides this he had the Chuvalo's chin and the Quarry's heart!!!! Tubby, I'm not so sure about that fights (Lewis-Marciano, Tyson-Marciano) like you are! How tall is Joe Bugner? Surely he is taller than Ali and I have read he is 6'4''. So he must be taller than 6'4''!!Tubby, maybe Shaq is better than Wilt in at least 1 thing: he is more powerful than Wilt was! He weighs much more. Is it a vain hope? My friendly greetings to everybody!8/27/03 01:07:06 AM|Kent Appel|La Habra, CA|oriononside@aol.com|||10|To Tubby, I knew Larry Hughes from La Habra. His parents lived across the street from me for a while and he was my baseball coach for La Habra Little League division for teenagers 16 to 18 years old and he used to coach the La Habra boxing club that met at the Catholic Church and he also helped out at the La Habra boys club along with an older Italian gentleman who's name escapes me at the moment.Larry Hughes was one tough dude and I remember him in a baseball fight taking on, almost single handedly, the entire opposing team. I worked out from time to time at both the church boxing club and the boys club but I never competed on the team. Nowadays, from what I have heard, Larry is active in veterans issues.Ironically, I also worked for the Santa Ana recreation department during the the mid 1980s and occasionally worked out at the boxing club at Jerome center in Santa Ana and you are right, both La Habra and Santa Ana had some very good amateurs although my time was in the 1970s in La Habra and, as I mentioned, the mid 1980s in Santa Ana. I have heard they have an excellent program here in La Habra now at the Gary Center but I haven't made it down there as yet. I understand that light heavyweight contender Julio Gonzalez works out there frequently.8/27/03 04:26:44 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago|roadscholarette@hormail.com|||10|To James Quarry - Hi! I've been doing a lot of reading in your archives, and I notice you've posted every so often. What I think would be really cool would be for you, if you had the time, to post "insider" stuff. What Jerry thought of his different opponents, Ali, Frazier, others, thought he had about his sport, about himself, what he did to train, things he did to prepare for different opponents, things of that nature. We fans read, we watch film and video, and so forth, but insights from the guys who were ~there~ are always a treasure to encounter. Not just the stuff they say for the media vultures, but the ~real~ stuff! :-)|8/27/03 04:40:43 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC|funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Well, I for one HAVEN'T forgotten how good George Foreman was. I respected his power and fighting ability. He was a great champion (twice) and if you combine his raw power and youth from his 1970s incarnation with the patience and maturity of his 1990's version, you'd have maybe the best ever. Still, with that said, let's face it: Muhammad Ali knocked him out in 1974. Foreman was younger, stronger and the standing champion. Ali was 32-33 years old, past his prime, not as fast as he once was, and entered the fight with losses to Frazier and Norton. Basically, Ali exposed some problems with Foreman's game. Then, a couple years later, Jimmy Young took on a still dangerous and even dominant Foreman, and dismantled him over 12 rounds, even scoring a knockdown. You could make a lot of excuses about the Ali fight---Foreman suffered a cut during training that threw him off his training and delayed the fight. Foreman underestimated Ali.Foreman had a fast count (though he was so exhausted, Ali would have finished him in more dramatic fashion if the fight continued). But for the Young fight, Foreman was well trained, well rested and knew what was on the line. Jimmy Young simply had a good plan and stuck with it, again, exposing the chinks in George's armour. It's for this reason that Quarry would have a fighting chance, as a decided underdog, to upset Foreman. But here's another one to ponder: Ron Lyle vs. Ken Norton, both at their peak. I think this would be a very interesting matchup. Norton had trouble against sluggers, but Lyle wasn't as devastating as Foreman or Shavers (Lyle beat Shavers by letting Earnie punch himself out). Norton might be able to survive long enough to get the tide going his way. Also, Lyle made some mistakes that the better boxers capitalized on. Norton could take advantage of this to get the win. I'd love to know what everyone on the board would predict for Norton-Lyle in their prime. I'd call it a toss-up.Regarding Marciano: Pound for pound, he might have been the best heavyweight ever. I've only seen highlights of his fights--- but you can't question his punching ability. He was ferocious when he got a guy in trouble---a great finisher. Two contemporary heavyweight champs, Holmes and Tyson, both raved about Marciano's ability to fight. Holmes apologized for the "jockstrap" comments he made when Peter Marciano showed up at the news conference after the first Michael Spinks fight and proclaimed Marciano to be "one of the all time greats" even mentioning that he has a framed photo of Marciano at his home/training site.Tyson has also mentioned that Marciano's style was an inspiration early in his career. Fighters know fighters and Marciano didn't compile a 49-0 record by accident. He was smaller and lighter than more modern heavyweights and might have trouble with that aspect---but let's not dismiss his chances for that reason alone. I don't buy into "the bigger they are, the harder they fall" mentality either, but a broken rib on a big guy is the same as a broken rib on a smaller guy, and Marciano handed a few of those out.

| 8/27/03 09:02:49 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 |
| 8/27/03 10:03:52 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 |
| 8/28/03 07:30:39 AM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | 10 |

ON MARCIANO'S PUNCHING POWER: I already told this story on another board, but since Marciano and Foreman have both come up on this board recently, I will run the risk of boring some readers. Over ten years ago, my wife and I were at an amateur boxing show at the Elks Club in Queens, NY. I had a chance to speak with former world champion Sandy Saddler who along with Dick Saddler and Archie Moore consisted of Foreman's original management and training team. I asked Sandy who in his opinion punched harder, George or Marciano. I personally thought George hit much harder and figured he would agree. Saddler surprised me and said that Marciano hit a little harder and that he thought if Foreman had fought the Rock prime vs prime, Rocky would have won. I was really surprised. Saddler was a perfect gentleman and was very nice to my wife. I don't know if he was angry at George about something or just honestly felt Marciano was the better hitter. Either way, I thought I would share that story.
I wonder too, if there was some sort of falling out between Saddler and George. At this point in time, it seems George just can't quite seem to get the amount of respect this great boxing champion deserves. It's hard to accept that someone Marciano's size could punch harder than Foreman. I realize the Rock ~did~ punch harder than many, probably most men bigger that he was, but George was a guy who'd have hit hard as a lighter weight (like Bob Foster, Roberto Duran, or Danny Lopez), ~plus~ he was huge, putting his power in lunar trajectory.

In both the movie and the book, The Greatest, sparring partner, Bossman Jones told Ali, "George is the first fighter I've been in the ring with, man, who could ~kill~ you - he can lift you off your feet with one punch!" And did, with several opponents, most notably, Norton and Frazier.

On the subject of GF, on his website, he doesn't include himself in history's top ten champions, which I think is silly, and just George being humble. He also (this being a haven of Quarry enthusiasts) mentions that JQ was the best non-champion, and I'd certainly agree that he is indeed on a short list of "greatest non-champions," taking all divisions into account. Since Foreman-Quarry would have been a huge draw, I can't imagine it never being made. Is George being truthful about ducking Jerry, or just being humble and complimentary again? He also mentioned that if JQ had boxed Frazier and slugged with Ellis, rather than the reverse, he'd have been champ. What do you think of that statement? Slugging with Ellis would have been doable, but boxing with Frazier, successfully, wasn't that easy, as Ali found out in New York and Manilla!

The Age of Marciano was a lot different from the Age of Ali or the Age of Lennox Lewis. In Marciano's day, popular fighters had matches every 2 or 3 months, sometimes more often. In the heavyweight class, they were smaller by 20 or 30 pounds, on the average, compared with today. They lacked the training equipment, nutrition, and most of the comforts of today's top fighters, and most of all, the gigantic purses. Were most of the guys Marciano fought better than the guys Ali or Foreman fought? I think so, but it's arguable. We've discussed how many good fighters there were in the 60s and 70s, whether we agree they were great or not. Marciano was relentless with sure killer's instinct and a big punch, but how would he have done against a really smart, skilled big man? I'm referring to Ali or Foreman or even Norton or possibly Frazier, all much bigger than The Rock. Some of you contributors have been discounting the the factors of size, reach, leverage, ability to wrestle in clinches and walk an opponent to the ropes, etc. Believe it or not, these are usually more decisive factors in how a fight goes than somebody's punch. The notion of a fight ending with a big punch, or being dominated by 3 or 4 big flurries is misleading. For one thing, more than often it doesn't work out that way. What happens instead is two guys being careful for 10 or 12 rounds, pawing each other, clinching a lot, seeing who can wear down whom, and then maybe somebody yielding to fatigue and getting hit with some combinations, dropping to the mat, etc. We've talked about how Ali could wear down King Kong himself by leaning on his shoulders, stinging his face and head with "glancing blows", exasperating and exhausting an opponent with his motion and speed, and above all, his greatest of all time psychouts. And Foreman had his big punch. So where does this leave relatively small Rocky Marciano, a puncher with one speed and one direction, straight ahead? Not much. Finally, and I don't mean this to be disparaging or snotty or disrespectful, but asking guys who have been boxers for a long time to rate other boxers, including those they have fought and those they have worked with, is not a very valid or reliable proposition. Unfortunately, they all have one degree or another of brain damage. They are also sentimental and diplomatic, some of them. So while I respect the Saddlers, I don't put much stock in them saying Rocky had the biggest punch. This claim runs counter to the laws of It’s always great to see James Quarry remembered. For recent posters, James was the elder of the Quarry brothers. James (aka Mr. Jimmy) was also the co-founder of TJQF and posted to this forum many times. Search the archives and you’ll find his valued insights. He set the record straight many times. However, I encourage everyone to go to the home page and play the 1999 WCHE interview with James and his father Jack Quarry. It’s a great program, and James’ first hand accounts of Jerry’s fights are priceless. --Carl

Hey Tubby, remember Cleveland Williams. His size, strength and punching power were awesome. Sonny Liston claims Cleveland Williams was the hardest puncher he ever faced. Well, about 5 years ago I met Keene Simmons a retired heavyweight fighter at Ring 8 in NYC. Keene, fought both Marciano, and Cleveland Williams. I asked Keene who punched harder Rocky or Cleveland Williams. Without the slightest bit of hesitation he replied Marciano. Cleveland Williams had Marciano by at least 30 pounds, 5 inches in height, and I am guessing at least 10 inches in reach. And yet Marciano hit harder.

Hey Roadscholarette, what leads you to believe that George Foreman would have been a puncher on the order of a Bob Foster or Roberto Duran, if he wasn’t, as you say, huge. Foreman always looked liked he was throwing "arm punches". They pulverized his opponents, but even so, didn’t seem to get much tounge from his hips or legs. I don’t think he would have equaled well at a lower body weight. Rocky, on the other hand, threw every punch from the tips of his toes through his hips and shoulders. His trainers would make him hit the heavy bag with his shoelaces tied together to teach him balance. At the end of the day, however, I’d still have to believe that Foreman, just based on sheer kinetic energy, probably hit harder than Marciano. I wouldn’t pick Rocky over Big George just based on the old adage, "A good big man always beats a good little man, blah, blah, blah. Jeese, I’m starting to boor myself! Broken ribs or not, there was just too much size difference.

If anybody around here isn't getting the respect due them, it's Joe Frazier! People are picking Holmes over Frazier? Could Larry Holmes have kept The Joe Frazier of the Ali-Frazier fights one or three? Holmes was a watered down version of Ali. Every knows Ali simply, with all his superior talent, couldn NOT keep smokin’ Joe out of his chest!
counted, and he was bobbing as many as 20 times a minute at times!

Ali was lucky to have lasted with Smokin' Joe. Holmes would've gone down. Larry was a superb boxer, clever, fast, had a decent enough chin, but couldn't have kept Frazier off. No one could, save Foreman.

8/28/03 02:04:31 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||||10|I agree that Frazier would have beaten Holmes. I think Frazier peaked the night he knocked out Bob Foster and the first Ali fight. Frazier was already going downhill when he fought Ron Stander.

8/28/03 03:19:10 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Some good wannabe stories:

Lotsa people who aren't fighters like to think they are, or would have been if things had been different. Some stories that show it ain't necessarily so!

Writer, Ernest Hemmingway used to spar, and thought he was a tough guy. Good Lord, ~I~ would have sparred with him as slow as he was, but anyway, he used to browbeat poor, skinny, know nothing Cubans into getting in with him, and then knocked them all over the place. Once, he convinced (by then X) heavyweight champion Gene Tunney to don the gloves for a little workout. Tunney knew Hemmingway's reputation, and didn't like it, so he let Papa huff and puff and roundhouse away for a while. Finally, after Ernie got a little frisky, perhaps mistaking Tunney's compassion for his (Hemmingway's) own talent, Tunney capitalized on one of EH's many mistakes, and in the razor sharp twinkling of an eye, threw a jab and a right cross, each stopping inches from Hemmingway's head, regarded the fat sloppy author with disdain, and climbed down out of the ring, saying not a word.

Sylvestre Stallone, star of five Rocky fantasies, also came to think of himself as a legitimate pugilist. Earnie Shavers was being seriously considered for the role of Clubber Lang in Rocky 3, a part that eventually went to Mr. T (who ~looks tougher than Shavers, even though ES could clean the Mohawked one's clock as if he were a Girl Scout). As they just messed around in the ring, Stallone suddenly whispered, "Hit me, Earnie, don't hold back!" Shavers remembers thinking, "Is this guy nuts!?" The coaxing continued, so Shavers pulled his punch, but still threw one considerably harder than he'd been, and Stallone threw up, Xing Earnie Shavers from the movie.

In Rocky 2, there's a brief sparring scene in the gym, in which "Rocky's" sparring partner is none other than the great Roberto Duran. For the less than 30 seconds that it's on, Duran makes an absolute monkey out of SS, at the end, even tapping him on the back of the head. Stallone couldn't have hit Duran if he'd thrown a bucket of water at him.

8/28/03 03:24:07 PM|Jonny Q|New York||JohnQW@yahoo.com||||9|I always rooted for Jerry, but Frazier was also my hero in the early 70s. People who diss Joe always refer to his fights with Foreman as a measure of the man. They forget that by the time Joe met Ali in '71, Frazier had swept through the division. A division of great fighters. When Joe fought Foreman it was at the two weakest points of Frazier’s career. In January ’73 Joe was overweight and in poor health, and Joe was clearly finished in ’76 for his post-Manilla fight with George. Anyone but me notice that Joe still went five competitive round with George? It was no rerun of the first fight. Despite all, Joe fought a smart defensive fight in the rematch, suckering George into quick counterpunches, and by the 4th round Joe was clubbing George with hooks. Then George turned up the heat and trapped Joe in the 5th. I wish they’d met instead in 74–75, when Joe was back in form.

8/28/03 03:47:52 PM|Massimo|Rome||Wilt.com||||10|Joe Frazier was fantastic even in the second Ali' fight and probably he deserved a draw; but Jonny, I have to disagree with you about Foreman-Frazier 2. I have that tape and, in my opinion, George won easily! He won surely the first and the third round! I can maybe give to Frazier a draw in the second and fourth round...Just my opinion! Joe Frazier, what a champion!

8/28/03 03:56:45 PM|Gerry Schultz|Ohio||jgschultz11@msn.com||||9|A lot again on Foreman-Quarry. I don't think at the time promoters thought this would be the draw it might well have been. Quarry just wasn't getting the credit, the matchmakers clearly looked past him, a shame. While JQ would surely have had a chance, it's a lot to ask for him to give up 25lbs. and beat a fighter of Foreman's power and ability. Also too bad he ended up then meeting Frazier again, when other 'name' matches might have been available. Regarding Rocco, he is a top 5 all-timer because he could not be stopped and had the HUGE right hand. ESPN has run his match vs. Archie Moore, a must see. Moore was four pounds heavier, took a few rounds from Rock. Then, he went the way they all did with Marciano --- down. Frazier was considered by some a 'new Rocky', generally a good comparison. Foreman would KO him, but Ali probably wouldn't. Rocco was an amazing body puncher also, he would send Holmes, Lewis. People forget Rock rarely topped 190lbs., yet thoroughly dominated his era, give him his due. Still ranks ahead of Foreman because he never lost, he lasted through all they had then, was a better thinking fighter also. Yet today, he wouldn't be close to heavyweight! Massimo, Wilt and Shaq met numerous times socially, comparisons between the two have been made for years. Wilt was lighter, but was an ardent weightlifter and was, prime vs. prime, stronger than Shaq. Wilt, like Ali, gave somewhat left-handed compliments, because he felt underappreciated in his time (he clearly was), and could outplay any center being discussed. I think he appreciated Shaq's dominance/size, but when asked how he'd play Shaq, he dissected him pretty well. Shaq is great at some parts of the game, almost awful at just as many others. Wilt's game had few weaknesses. A lot of hoops for a boxing site... While we're discussing classic heavies, another undefeated champion was Gene Tunney, clearly the best boxer of his time. He also used movement to beat the many flat-footed fighters of his day, was a college grad, very interesting guy. I have him top Ten all-time as Heavyweight. Opinions?

8/28/03 04:14:41 PM|Gerry Schultz|Cleveland, Ohio||jgschultz11@msn.com||9|Also, good posts on Smokin' Joe. I was a fan of his and JQ's about equally back then. He had a huge motor and, like Jerry, overacheived. His win over Ali was more clear than a lot of folks know. His style was a poor matchup for Foreman, who needed to be boxed/counterpunched. Frazier was clearly under 6', at his best about 210-215. He had clear disadvantages versus both Ali, Foreman. Ali-Frazier III is still the greatest boxing match I ever saw, just ahead of Hearns-Leonard. Very few fights even approach that intensity now. Joe is very complimentary of JQ in his book, a class guy all around.

8/28/03 04:37:21 PM|Massimo|Rome||WWilt.com||10|Marciano was one of the greatest champions but I have read that the judges helped him a couple of times ( against Ted Lowry and in another fight). Is it true ? I have just watched the film " Conan the destroyer " and Wilt was a good actor.... Pretty tall too !

8/28/03 04:47:43 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|I have to differ on the opinions expressed regarding the fantasy Holmes-Frazier fight. I think at their best, Holmes would win a close decision. I think he could effectively use his left jab, the best in the business, to keep Frazier away and pile up points. Holmes would win the early rounds, the middle rounds would be even, but Frazier would come on in the later rounds. Holmes would have enough at the end to eek out a close decision. I could see this being a carbon copy of Holmes-Norton. Even if Frazier landed the big left hook, I think Holmes would be shaken, but would survive like he did against Shavers (a harder hitter than Frazier) and come back to win. Frazier and Holmes were both tremendous champions. Frazier faced the better fighters---but lost several of these fights against the best of the best, including Ali II and III and both Foreman fights, while he was still relatively young. Of course, he had a lot taken out of him, as Ali did, by their wars. Holmes was flawless until very late in his career, past his mid-30's.
I see Frazier over Holmes by late-round KO. Holmes could be tagged (Shavers, Snipes), had an average chin, was not nearly the defensive fighter Ali was, and Joe found Ali plenty, especially to the body. Someone asked what was JQ's best fight, I agree it was his win over Ron Lyle in 1973, I feel he was at his peak then. Some think it's his win over Thad Spencer, which is a beautiful match to watch, a counterpunching clinic. Spencer clearly did not see Quarry coming and did not get out of the way. JQ was just 193lbs! But his win over Lyle, to me is better because it was a better opponent and showed Jerry's whole arsenal.

Amazing how one fight made him a phenom, the other was lost in the glare of the division. Just re-read Mike Quarry's stuff, about his climb, his loss to Bob Foster, and Foster's praise of him. There are those who think Mike could have come back after that loss and contended for another title shot, opinions? Sure sounds like he could have.

Massimo, of course it makes a difference how big a fighter's hand is. You should know that, as a former pugilist. It's a matter of physics, of mass and speed determining power. I guess Liston and Foreman had the biggest hands, and Patterson and Quarry among the smallest. Jim Murray, the great sports columnist of the LA Times, once wrote that Ali had "knuckles like potato chips". If he didn't feel a lot of pain between rounds, he sure felt it after a fight.

Gerry, how old are you? You say Wilt was "clearly underestimated in his time." Blatantly false, my friend. He was known as a Superman, a monster, a guy who could average 50 points a game one year, a guy who once poured in 100 in one game. The only marks against him were that he was a lousy free throw shooter, and Russell won more championships by far. Most people agree that Russell usually outplayed Wilt, but then Russell had pretty good teammates with Cousy, Havlicek, and the others. By the time Wilt was on a truly great team (West, Baylor, Goodrich), it was late in his career. So underappreciated? Never.

Also, Gerry, you think Marciano ranks ahead of Foreman because Marciano retired undefeated? I disagree completely. A comparison must be much deeper than that, to compare eras, opponents, age, the fights themselves, frequency of fighting, and many other factors. Jeez, for a long time, Butterbean was undefeated. Now, about very few fights approached the intensity of Ali-Frazier in in Manila, what about Hearns-Hagler, any Leonard-Hearns, any Sugar Ray Robinson-La Motta, Dempsey-Tunney, and so on and so forth. If it's intensity you want, you should take in the WARS the flyweights, bantoms and other small men wage.

Gerry, did you know that Archie (The Old Mongoose) was about 50 years old when he fought Ali and Frazier? He was a great fighter himself, but his prime had been 20 years earlier. He wouldn't have ever beaten either of them except in an unusual upset. Now, Gerry, did you know that Archie was a great fighter himself, but his prime had been 20 years earlier. He wouldn't have ever beaten either of them except in an unusual upset. Massimo, white judges ALWAYS helped Marciano against any fighter of color, and the same with any Great White Hope like JQ or Tommy Morrison. It may not be conscious, but they do it. They also, as you know, favor hometime fighters and also extremely popular and beloved fighters like Rocky. Did he ever steal a fight by favoritism? I doubt it very much, but he still got the edge. Angelo, you write "Holmes would win the early rounds, the middle rounds would be even, etc." That's trying to be too specific and exacting, my friend. That's like saying this weekend USC will drive 77 yards on their first possession, then the Auburn middle linebacker will intercept a screen pass at his own 40 and return it 23 yards before being tackled by the USC right tackle. Can't too that. Too much unpredictability. Steve, Big George threw arm punches? Who doesn't, at least when tired? Besides, in terms of knockout power, as we've said here, what does it is the sharp ball peen hammer blow to the jaw, not the bludgeoning of a sledge hammer. Look at Sugar Ray Leonard's KOs or Alexis Arguello's or Ali's. The sledgehammer is a TKO thing, after belting the other guy around a lot. Even Big George did more of the SNAP KOs to jaws than the bludgeonings to the head, throat and mouth. Therefore, you can do the SNAP with an arm punch, but the problem is it's not nearly as economical, as balanced, or as efficient. That's why it's good to involve your shoulder and side in it, in smooth strokes. Look at the perfection of Larry Holmes's left jab. The idea of swinging from the sole of your feet is Rocky Balboa crap. If you do that, your little sister is going to catch you off balance and push you to the canvas with her left hook. Hell yes, I'd pick Larry over Joe. It's another extreme size mismatch. Holmes was a great, great champion who did not lose for years. I never liked Frazier nearly as much as anyone else, maybe because he was so damned busy. He squandered 50% of his energy huffing and puffing and bobbing. He needed that for himself somehow, and it scared a lot of opponents. Yes, I do think his meeting up with Big George's dynamite punch exposed Joe for the mortal he was. Cleve Williams could really bang, but not much else. In mid-career, he got shot by a Houston cop and lost one kidney. You saw Ali leave him in a heap. Any questions? Anyone who is not a pro boxer pretending to be a good fighter is a joke, not counting sincere amateurs on their way up. I get a kick out of people saying they go to their health gym to box. Even fitness gurus like Chuck Norris have not the foggiest notion of how to box or fight in the ring with boxing gloves. In a great quote, Joe Frazier once said, "It's a lot harder than it looks." Ernest Hemingway was an excellent athlete and not fat, but he was not a professional boxer. He was a jerk who mouthed off, too. The only truly good "civilian" boxer I ever saw was actor Ryan O'Neal, who could have succeeded as a pro. Otherwise, forget it. Inmy opinion, the gap between a health club "boxer" and a real pro is much wider than the gap between a Tuesday night softball player and a Major Leaguer. There is absolutely no way to fake it in the ring or "get lucky" against a pro. Those are my opinions. Hey John G, I agree with you on Frazier-Holmes. The Joe Frazier of 1968-1971 would put too much pressure on Holmes. Holmes could not hit hard enough to keep Frazier off him. Joe would come in low bobbing and weaving, and constantly throwing punches on his way in: and just steamroll him after a great effort by Holmes. Hell yes, I'd pick Thad Spencer over Quarry. Mac Foster over Quarry by a blowout! Ron Lyle by an early or middle round KO.NO DOUGHT IN MY expert opinion mind,Shavers over Quarry in two rounds!These amazing quirks in Jerry'career are part of his unusual popularity and mystique.Whenever he climbed in the ring,even against Ali,Frazier,or maybe even against Foreman,there was always the what if factor. Steve, you make a really good point. Most of us fans, even though we enjoy pure technique and fine boxing, still would prefer 9 (or 10) out of 10 times to see someone entering the ring with the intention and skills to knock the other guy cold. That was Jerry Quarry all the way. He had that chance in every fight, even the times he was outmatched. Even Godzilla would have had to respect that in Jerry -- the kid could hurt anybody. Hey Angelo, I don't know whoe's talents and skills your downgradin,Ali's or Fraziers!'Ali and Frazier rose to a boxing occasion in their first and third fights that no one will ever equal. Larry Holmes, on his best night, have lost to either of them on the nights of their 1st and 3rd fights 1.

It's really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. Let's keep it up.

Larry Holmes, on his best night, have lost to either of them on the nights of their 1st and 3rd fights.8/28/03 11:27:04 PM|Barry Hathaway|Joshua Tree, CA|||DareDevil1990@aol.com|||10|11|8/28/03 11:57:43 PM|STEVE|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Let's see, Hmm, A six foot, 200 lb, golden blond, articulate, macho pro, fighter who hits baseballs out of the park on every other swing. Could have probably been a south California politician!

DareDevil1990@aol.com

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

DareDevil1990@aol.com

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

Its really cool to check out this site, and see what my Grampa Jim, and Great Uncle Jerry, started. let's keep it up.

genetic, so no doubt other members of his family have them too. They move at different rates in different people, and since being a boxer clearly makes them worse much faster, his must have had the pace of a snail. His left eye was bad, but he was getting them in his right too. Even when the fight started in Manilla, Ali was just a blurry haze. He was legally blind in the left eye after the fight, and even after several weeks, the left eye was still bad enough that he couldn't have legally driven at night. He used to memorize eye charts when tested, and used his footwork to subtly try to stay in a position that didn't isolate the right eye so much, when looking for right hands. This was also why he didn't fight in California, since they have more stringent eye exams.

In '75, he had surgery, but in order to have completely normal vision, he had to wear contacts, which he wore when he fought Foreman the second time! This isn't legal, of course, and one of the lenses shifted slightly while he was in the ring, which made things worse than having none at all. I love Joe Frazier, one of my very favorite fighters, but I've got to tell him, that was nuts! A person's eyes are to be guarded at all costs!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>8/29/03 08:29:30 AM</th>
<th>Roadschlorarette</th>
<th>Chicago</th>
<th>roadschlorarette@hotmail.com</th>
<th>10</th>
<th>Ed</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| My post on Frazier's eyes has a typo. I say he used his footwork to keep the burden off his ~right~ eye as much as possible, when looking for right hands, and I meant to say his left eye. Brown and Ali? I can believe that. I'll bet it started out like pretend play, silly stuff, and Ali was willing to let it stay at that level, but Brown decided to push the envelope, and finally Ali had to teach him a lesson. The average guy has been in fights, and watches boxers doing the same thing, and doesn't always see the difference. This happens in all sports, of course, guys thinking, "That doesn't look hard - I could do that!" It seems to happen more often with boxing though, and I can't fathom why, in the toughest sport there is, by far. With this sort of attitude, I imagine a guy already accomplished in sports could feel even more that it wasn't "that hard." Speaking of real life vs the ring, I saw an old clip with Archie Moore once, where he said that a one sided ring win still left the winner as battered as a one sided loss on the street left the ~loser~. Interesting!

| 8/29/03 09:26:19 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | I agree that a round-by-round prediction is a stretch (my analysis of a possible Holmes-Frazier fight) but I just generally think Holmes would be the fast starter, the middle rounds would be a time when the tide started to change, Frazier would come on in the late rounds, but fall a little short. I base this on general patterns of these guys' key fights. It's fun to think about, even if it's impossible to know. In my opinion, people who've never boxed or just boxed recreationally (myself included), can learn the fundamentals and be in good condition---but the worst pro boxer in the world would run circles around the best schooled, most in-shape non-boxer. Simply put, real boxers spend countless hours understanding and practicing how to throw lethal punches in combination. The speed of most pro boxers and the physics of their punches would make an idiot of me and other guys who love to watch and love to put the gloves on to mess around. Also, pro boxers know how to move to take a punch/absorb punishment. You can take an "average" retired professional fighter---maybe a guy who boxed amateur for a few years and pro for 7 or 8 years-----a guy who never made it to a title fight, but maybe lost to a few contenders but made a good show of it. Someone like this, at 50 years old and retired, would destroy a 30 year old non-boxer in the best shape of their life. On the topic of great fights, how about Holmes-Norton? You watch the 15th round and you realize that they were true warriors that night. Norton might have stumbled badly against the big power punchers, but he was amazing against good boxers who weren't known for the power punch. If Norton got into the rhythm of a fight and didn't have fear of getting knocked out, his confidence would grow round-by-round. Holmes had to dig deep to hold on for that win. After watching Norton-
Ali Three and Norton-Young, two very close fights, I offer the following opinion: Norton fought Ali very smartly but failed to score a knockdown, never had Ali in serious trouble and gave away too many rounds. He might have been aggressive, but that's only one part of scoring a fight. You always hear that Norton was robbed in this fight, but I didn't see that. He fought well, but didn't do enough to take the title from a Champion. To take this full circle, I submit that if anything, Jimmy Young was robbed against Norton. Simply, he scored more points. It was a close fight and I think Young outboxed Norton. It's interesting to note that Muhammad Ali believed that Norton would have beaten George Foreman had Norton known that the winner would fight Ali in Africa. I totally disagree with Ali---I think Foreman would KO Norton time after time, not matter what the circumstances. But Ali truly respected Norton and thought that Norton had better stamina and the capability to win. Ali thought that if Norton had the motivation that he would have a huge payday, as Champion, defending against Ali in Zaire, he would have sucked it up to beat Foreman. I say no way. | 8/29/03 10:42:53 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z|||10|THE JUDGES HELPED MARCIANO BECAUSE HE WAS WHITE?? Well I guess those same judges also helped Ali against Norton (I think Norton won all three fights), Young, Doug Jones, and a few others. Every fighter gets some controversial wins, not usually for racial reasons. Everyone who saw JQ fight Larry Middleton in England said the fight was really not that close, but JQ won by only a quarter of a point. | 8/29/03 10:43:06 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z|||10|THE JUDGES HELPED MARCIANO BECAUSE HE WAS WHITE?? Well I guess those same judges also helped Ali against Norton (I think Norton won all three fights), Young, Doug Jones, and a few others. Every fighter gets some controversial wins, not usually for racial reasons. Everyone who saw JQ fight Larry Middleton in England said the fight was really not that close, but JQ won by only a quarter of a point. | 8/29/03 12:26:21 PM|Kent|La Habra, CA||oriononside@aol.com|||10|Funny, how the average guy on the street thinks he could automatically compete with a professional athlete like a boxer. I often write articles for another website and I was mentioning to a friend of mine that I had met James Toney, the cruiserweight champion. I said that it was interesting that Toney, when I shook his hand, shook my hand very lightly and that a lot of pro boxers I meet because of my articles do the same thing. My friend said, "if he isn't going to shake my hand like a real man, than I wouldn't even shake his hand." He then added, "I could kick his ass!" This guy, having no idea who James Toney is and equating a firm handshake as a sign of manhood, also had no concept that the fighter is shaking someone's hand lightly to protect the tools of his trade, used for knocking some other man's head off! My friend still didn't get it when I said, "you wouldn't last ten seconds with James Toney, a three time world champion." So if an average "Joe" would think he had a chance against a real fighter, then it is not a stretch for a world class athlete such has Jim Brown to think he could do it. After all, he had already succeeded in another sport.On the subject of great athletes trying to change sports, remember when basketball great Michael Jordan retired from basketball the first time and he tried to make it as a baseball player? Not only did Jordan not make it to the major leagues, he was at best a below average minor league player after being one of the greatest basketball players to ever play the game.| 8/29/03 02:06:46 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|There are several reasons the average person wouldn't want to tangle with a good pro. As an aside, boxing is unique, in that there is no formalized cut system as in the big four professional sports. In boxing, anyone with mediocre physical talent and/or without the emotional makeup can be a "pro," meaning they can fight and be paid for it, and of course, be consistently beaten up, unless they fight other low level fighters. However, the top pro (or top amateur) in boxing is as untouchable for the average person as would be trying to play major league baseball, in the NFL, NBA, or NHL. The top pro fighter knows how to throw every type of punch, throw them hard, in bunches, how to evade a punch, take one ~if~ hit, and recognize moments to attack and defend, within zones of fractions of an inch and fractions of a second that are foreign territory to the ordinary person. In addition, a top pro wouldn't fight an average person as he would another pro. There wouldn't be the need for the same wariness and respect, and he'd throw anything and everything right away, and it'd all land. He also would little fear being hit back; even if John Doe connected, the punch would almost certainly be nothing to write home about, and there wouldn't likely be an effective followup, just more Hail Marys. Even a guy in shape, who'd had his share of fights with other guys in parking lots or wherever would tire quickly from the exertion alone, in a strange activity, not to mention the pounding he'd be receiving, and his own wasted movements. From the conditioning angle alone, it'd be like the marathon runner who's sore the next day after playing an unfamiliar casual game of tennis with his girlfriend.

As much as I respect Larry Holmes, he didn't have enough of the essential tools to beat Joe Frazier. The only two people ever to beat Joe were the only two fighters who could have in that era. To win over Joe you had to either have the tremendous size and firepower to hurt him (Foreman) or enough speed and strength to outmaneuver him (Ali). Holmes didn’t hit harder than Ali, so forget a KO, and Larry never kept up the constant movement. He eventually slowed down and risked trading in the later rounds. Joe brought down a lot of big guys – Ali, Mathis, Ramos, others. As with all of Joe's fights, Holmes would have ended up on the ropes. Larry was a great mid-ring guy; he didn’t do well pinned. If you couldn’t hurt Joe, or run from, it was only a matter of time.

I think it stupid to say Larry Holmes wouldn't have beaten Joe Frazier. Holmes skills were just a shade under Ali's. Holmes would have held his own with likes of Frazier. Holmes could box and slug it out whenever he needed to. I think Holmes is bit underrated and one of the most multi talented boxers. As good as Frazier was he bypassed alot good fighters in his era like norton/lyle/shavers/ and sonny liston and even mac foster.

I pick Frazier over Holmes by close decision. Joe would have to reach down deep to pull this one out. It would be one for the ages. Heart would play a major role in this one because although Holmes had a lot of heart, he didn't have more heart than Smokin Joe. Joe entered the ring would the mindset that he would die before he would acknowledge defeat. Not many fighters had that determination, not even Holmes. Jonny, yes styles make fights, and Holmes's style is similar to Ali's style, that is why Frazier versus Holmes would be a great fight. But to use Tyson's win over an over the hill Holmes because Tyson had a similar style to Frazier as an example of why Frazier would win is not a good argument because we are talking about an in prime Tyson verses an old, slower Holmes. Because if Tyson had met an in prime Holmes, the verdict may have been different.
Wladimir is back! He beat Fabio! What do you think about Wladimir vs Tyson? I think Wladimir would give him a good whipping! I would like to have informations about "Drew" Bundini Brown... Is he still alive? And about Donovan Ruddock: do you think it's too late for him to fight for the title? In my opinion he can punch very very hard, maybe harder than Tyson!

Bundini Brown died as a result of injuries incurred in a fall, I believe it was. He was in such bad shape that when Ali visited him, all he could do was blink his eyes to answer yes and no. One has to wonder if Ali will soon be in the same condition. Brown used to artificially beat up boxing gloves and sell them as souvenirs from Ali's great fights. Keeping score that way, he no doubt fought Joe Frazier a couple of hundred times. He also used to soak jock straps by the dozens in vinegar and leave them in the sun, then sell those too, as the champ's. No doubt he did likewise with all kinds of other bogus equipment.

Massimo, Wladimir Klitschko is a good fighter but he still needs to prove himself against the top competition. Yes, he has excellent boxing skills and he hits hard but the fact remains that when he was twice asked to face adversity, he failed to respond well. In his first loss, about five years ago against an opponent who's name I can't think of at the moment without looking it up, he was leading the whole fight but he collapsed from exhaustion and ended up losing by TKO. In his recent loss against Corrie Sanders of South Africa, he was knocked down several times in two rounds and he lost by knockout. When he gets knocked down and he gets up and comes back to win is when he will show he is a great fighter. He did win one comeback fight but he needs to do more. FOR THOSE OF YOU WHO OCCASIONALLY SEND ME PRIVATE E MAILS, I AM LISTING MY OTHER E MAIL ADDRESS, ONE THAT IS NOT OVER RUN BY SPAM, ADS, ETC. THE ORIONONSIDE ADDRESS STILL WORKS BUT IT IS GETTING TOO CROWDED BY JUNK.

Thanks! Wladimir is very strong, but I think his bigger brother is still stronger! Vitali never really lost a fight because in the first defeat he fought with an injury and against Lewis the match was stopped too soon! I think Vitali deserves the chance to become a great champion!

Kent, I think nobody in the world can fight using 1 arm! I think Vitali was heroic in that fight, just remember what Liston did against Clay... To Roadscholarette: Why are you so pessimist about Ali's health? I know he has the Parkinson but do you think his conditions are getting worse?

Parkinson's disease itself isn't a real common outcome of boxing, though Parkinsonian symptoms are stiffness, tremors, shuffling, draggy walk, slurred speech, etc. What is true though, is that it's sort of like a time bomb. Ali increased his chances of getting it the longer he fought, of course. Certainly some sort of effect, given the number of times he fought, and the ferocious opponents he went up against. However, the damage to the dopamine producing center in his brain, that caused his Parkinson's could have been done after a half-dozen fights, and he wouldn't have known it for years. I think everyone could see the erosion of his skills and timing years before he quit, and even the beginning of what turned out to be Parkinson's, towards the end. It isn't a disease that stops, and Ali certainly has other problems too, from all the punches he took; an MRI, CAT, and various other neurological tests would be total disasters. In addition, we can't discount internal organ damage too, though these wouldn't be as obvious as his extensive brain damage. I remember an interview he did with Marv Albert after Thrilla, in which he said, "Joe Frazier made me what I am today." How right he was, though he had didn't mean what was so obvious. Frazier, Foreman, Liston, Patterson, Quarry, Lyle, Shavers, and so many others. It's actually a miracle he's as "good" as he is.

There are fighters, in boxing's history, that have fought so much more than Ali and they haven't had health's problem: Archie Moore and Sugar Ray, for example! It's strange! Anyway, I think Ali should have quit after Manila. Holyfield is crazy! What is he doing? He was a great champion, he has a lot of money! If I were Holyfield, I would go to Sicille, not to a boxing ring! Toto' used to say: "ACCHI !!!!!!!!" with shrill voice... I propose a new rule: NOBODY, OLDER THAN 38, CAN FIGHT! Do you agree?

It is a miracle he's as "good" as he is.

There are fighters, in boxing's history, that have fought so much more than Ali and they haven't had health's problem: Archie Moore and Sugar Ray, for example! It's strange! Anyway, I think Ali should have quit after Manila. Holyfield is crazy! What is he doing? He was a great champion, he has a lot of money! If I were Holyfield, I would go to Sicille, not to a boxing ring! Toto' used to say: "ACCHI !!!!!!!!" with shrill voice... I propose a new rule: NOBODY, OLDER THAN 38, CAN FIGHT! Do you agree?

You're very right there. There are fighters who spend many years in professional fighting and don't seem to have a thing wrong with them (Foreman, Moore, and Dempsey for example), and yet there are others with terrible damage after not all that many even amateur fights. A person might say good luck-bad luck, but considering the collision anyone's brain takes from a blow to the head, and the number of times this occurs in a fight, it has to be more than luck. My guess would be that different neurological makeups make some people more susceptible to damage than others, or more resistant to the effect of blows, maybe both at the same time in some people. This would be kind of the same as when some football players get hurt all the time, while others don't. Unfortunately, the more resistant a fighter is to blows, the longer he's likely to box, assuming he's a good athlete to begin with. However, resistance to blows and to being knocked out doesn't mean damage isn't still being done. Ability to take a punch was both Ali's gift, and finally his curse. If he'd been knocked cold a couple of times when his skills faded, maybe he'd have gotten out earlier.
Syndrome). Mr. Jimmy (James Quarry) said that a company has a patent on a blood test that shows if a person has this gene or not but that company is not willing to make it available at a reasonable price. One of the things he was working towards is having potential fighters be able to take this blood test and then they could make a more informed decision about whether they would go into boxing or not. Dementia Pugilistica can have symptoms similar to both Parkinson's disease or Alzheimer's disease. Jerry had the Alzheimer's form.

I've read the same thing, both in relation to trauma and not. There's so much medicine doesn't understand yet about body chemistry, its effect on genetics, as well as the effect of outside factors on what's already in our bodies. It's possible that people who have terrible results from head trauma, whether from boxing, football, accidents, or whatever, might have a higher tendency to develop certain neurological pathologies anyway, with the head trauma simply being an accelerant. This is the same as families that tend to develop any sort of problem at whatever stage of life. My husband told me that in the early 80s, Sports Illustrated had an article on the effects of boxing. He said Bobby Chacon, the riotous Tex Cobb, and he was sure Jerry Quarry participated, and while Cobb inexplicably showed no signs of damage at all (was this before the Larry Holmes fight?), the other two fighters did, and both were still active, I believe, and showing no outward signs, publicly, anyway. It seems that some very slow and sneaky metabolic processes are going on anyway in fighters who crash badly later. The blood test you mention is certainly a step, as is a single regulatory commission, and more stringent medical examinations, as well as rules governing what happens when a fighter sustains an injury (read, knockout), whether in the ring, or in the gym (where a lot of damage can be done, but is rarely heard about, much less reported). Things such as mandatory layoffs have been mentioned, as well as the more radical ideas advocating stopping a career after three knockouts in a certain time span, even after three knockouts in a whole ~career~. Concussions might be a better measuring tool. When you're knocked out, you automatically have a concussion, but you can have one and ~not~ be KO'd. There's no doubt in my mind that many top fighters who aren't knocked out have concussions anyway. Does anyone think Ali and Frazier both didn't have them after Manilla, for example, and neither was even down. I see the "Muhammed Ali Bill" passed, which should help with predatory financial practices as well. With a single regulatory commission, I'd be in favor of career counseling, and mandatory contribution to a pension fund. These things would be a start anyway.

If some good did come out of this, it was after he took the brain exam that Jerry started talking about setting up a foundation to help retired and/or injured fighters. The idea didn't become reality until Jerry himself started showing outward visible signs of damage.

Holyfield will go to "holyfield" if he doesn't quit immediately!

Have you ever seen the Joe Louis vs Primo Carnera fight? I would be very curious to know if that was a one-sided bout or not. How would you score the rounds? Have you ever seen other Carnera's fights? Thank you very much!
saw a film of Louis demolishing Carnera, which was almost as bad a mismatch as Ali-Wepner, or Holmes-Cobb. Louis was a scary fighter, silently gliding forward, that expressionless, almost sleepy look on his face, then calmly walking away, as if in his garden, after flooring someone. He was as completely as unpredictable as Ali, like a chess master setting a sinister trap, then springing. Tony Galento said he "felt like the referee was hitting me too," which is the way Carnera must have felt. Some might have been as accurate, and as good with combinations as Louis, but it'd be a short list, and no one could finish a man like Louis could. Of all the fights I've seen, few were as good at cutting off the ring, either. For heavyweights, I'd put Dempsey, Marciano, and Frazier in Louis's class in that area. Of course, the question of how he'd do in the 60s and 70s is always out there. He'd have done fine, though he wouldn't have annihilated most of the men of that era the way he did virtually all in his own time. There are top contenders, let alone champs, in the 60s-70s who would have made mince meat out of many of Louis's opponents - an awful lot really were bums of the month.SI doesn't have back copies online, so maybe I'll check the library. That was at just about the end of his career, so I imagine Jerry was already feeling many symptoms of his impending condition, just as a person does, if they're observant and truthful, way ahead of a heart attack. I think Cobb and Homes was even worse than Ali and Wepner, and should have been stopped as early as the end of the fifth round. Of course, some good came out of it - we never had to listen to Howard Cosell broadcast a fight again! |

Kent -

9/2/03 04:22:40 PM Massimo Rome\|.com\|\|10|RoadscholaretteThanks ! I saw all the Ali'-Wepner fight and, without a doubt, Ali' completely outboxed Chuck. But I have read that Wepner was in the top 10 at the moment of the fight !!! How is it possible ? He didn't deserve to be ranked in the top 10. He was just a brave fighter ! I think Louis beat some good fighters like Buddy Baer, Lou Nova, Max Schmeling, Max Baer and maybe Tony Galento ( the guy could punch...and a lot of bums !)

9/2/03 07:01:26 PM Tubby Breslin Fullerton, CA \| bearstubastanchu@aol.com \|\|10|Hello, all you boxing lovers! In one of my previous careers, I was a speech pathologist and therapist. One of the areas of this profession is working with people who have aphasia, or brain damage related to communication. This damage can take almost an infinite number of forms, many very subtle. It can also unfold very slowly, or after a delay. When the human brain is assaulted by blunt (like boxing punches or baseball bat or stone) or piercing (knife, ice pick, screwdriver) injury, it is always damaged. There is no escaping it. The extent of the damage depends on many factors. The bottom line is that any boxer who has had even a few pro or very active amateur fights has already begun to incur some brain damage. Those with 20, 30, 40 or more fights have proportionally more damage. This applies to Jerry Quarry, Muhammad Ali, and every other former boxer, no matter how undamaged he may appear. Archie Moore and Sugar Ray Robinson were both notoriously punchy, although when seen briefly on TV, the damage may not have been obvious to all. It wasn't obvious for many years with Joe Louis, either, until he was a drooling old man in the Las Vegas casinos. If you watch any former experienced boxer, you will see some signs, if you know what to look for. This is an unfortunate but undeniable fact.Today in the newspaper, Warren Sapp, a former NFL lineman and All Star who weighs 350+ pounds and stands 6'7", is quoted as saying he is "confident" he could defeat Mike Tyson in the boxing ring. Sapp holds a championship in a competition combining karate, tae kwon do and other martial arts. Of course, if he were allowed to kick and so forth, he probably would win. But if boxing rules only were enforced, I have no doubt that Tyson would cut Sapp in two with his first body punch. Anyone agree? Let's make a plea here. In any group of boxers, such as the heavyweight division at any time in history, there are excellent, good, average, weak and poor fighters. In our discussions, Ali, Frazier, Foreman, Dempsey, Holmes, Louis and probably Marciano and Tyson are the excellent ones. Some of the good ones are Jerry Quarry, Ken Norton, the young Floyd Patterson, and so forth. For average, we might include Riddick Bowe or Lennox Lewis or maybe someone like Jimmy Ellis. Now we get to weak and poor, where we find Oscar Bonavena, George Chuvalo, Alfredo Evangelista, Joe Bugner, Ron Lyle, and others. Then there are hundreds of heavyweights who somehow got a license and fought bouts, winning some and losing others, but never even headliners. A good heavyweight on a great night might stand a chance against an excellent one on a poor night. Otherwise, though, there is little chance an average fighter like Riddick Bowe would beat an excellent fighter like Ali or Frazier. It could happen, and there have been big upsets, but it's so improbable as to be ridiculous to discuss. After all, could Roger Clemens strike out Ed Kranepool? Yes, and usually would. Over the course of many games, would Kranepool ever take Clemens over the center field wall? It could happen, but would be highly unusual. Could we please knock off all this speculation over whether Joe Bugner or Tommy Morrison could KO George Foreman or Joe Louis on a big night? As far as I'm concerned, it's a waste of breath. You folks know too much about boxing to fritter away your time in these pointless discussions of what weak boxers might have done. My opinion only and no hard feelings, OK?

And yes, I was just too sentimental to admit it at the time, but when I went to Ali-Norton II, Ken did win a decision but was robbed. It was close but not that close. One more thing. You should all know before coming to this website that boxing is historically the most corrupt, sleaziest, most lowdown and cheatin' sport of all. In fact, the most dishonest sports are, in order: Boxing, Boxing, Boxing, Boxing, Boxing, Boxing, Boxing, Boxing. If you don't believe me, ask any former pro boxer, or sports writer. Furthermore, boxing rankings are 99.9% pure hokum, false, jive and dishonest. Promoters use them to hype boxers. How many times have you seen a young heavyweight with a record of 7-0 against bartenders and chickens and corpses suddenly ranked #9 one month, then #6 the next month, and finally at #3, signed to fight whoever the champ is in that organization? It happens regularly and has forever. That's how lousy fighters sometimes get big fights, and how lousy fights are promoted. Remember, like most businesses, boxing promotion is done to earn money. Niceties like fairness, truth and justice are usually not part of the picture.

Mike Tyson has to fight serious boxers like Rahman, Tua, Briggs, Akinwande, the Klitschko brothers, Samil San etc. Sapp is just a fat clown (as a boxer, of course). Clifford is another clown (as a boxer, of course). He has to train every day, not once a year! I have read that Sapp real height is 6'3", not 6'7". I hope Shaq's height is really 7'1", not 4'2"! Tyson better than Norton? I'm not sure! How could you judge Lewis an average boxer? Are you joking? He is a champion, surely one of the best 20 heavyweights of all times. How could you judge Bonavena, Chuvalo, Bugner and Lyle weak and poor? I have to repeat the question: are you joking, Tubby? Have a nice time!

Everyone knows or has heard about someone who has been enormously messed up from just one blow to the head in an accident, so in truth, it's a miracle more boxers aren't actually killed in the ring than are. All have damage, even ones who don't show outward signs, and all punches cause some, even if it's minuscule. Archie Moore and Sugar Ray Robinson were both notoriously punchy, although when seen briefly on TV, the damage may not have been obvious to all. That's a good point. For short interviews or commentary, many sound good, and, in fact, speech isn't always affected, or as much in one fighter as in another. Look at George Chuvalo. A tough man to be sure, but in terms of speech, one would never know he'd a boxer, while I've heard Olympic boxers interviewed who sounded like Leon Spinks.

Today in the newspaper, Warren Sapp, a former NFL lineman and All Star who weighs 350+ pounds and stands 6'7", is quoted as saying he is "confident" he could defeat Mike Tyson in the boxing ring. Sapp holds a championship in a competition combining karate, tae kwon do and other martial arts. Of course, if he were allowed to kick and so forth, he probably would win. Maybe, but it's no accident that in kick boxing tournaments, they have a minimum number of kicks the fighters have to execute each round. They do this, then box the rest of the time. Tyson would train for kicks, which take much longer than a punch to arrive, and leave the athlete momentarily very vulnerable, just as a boxer crossing his feet when moving does - you talk about a paintbrush jab leaving a fighter open for a counter! The first time Sapp tossed out a kick, the footballer would have to have his corner tell him how many times he got hit. Tyson would have his choice of rope a dope with a little lateral movement, while Sapp punched himself out, street fighting style, or he could get the big man's respect real fast with a few body punches. Sapp wouldn't rush Tyson as he would someone in a bar, and he'd never be able to catch up in a gym on all the things MT would throw at him, top pro moves that fighters don't even think about (Joe Louis said he knew he was getting old when he started thinking about what to throw). This would be a massacre, and no responsible governing body would sanction it, though "responsible" and "boxing regulatory commissions" are pretty much oxymorons, contradictions in terms. Sapp would be as out of his league with Tyson as he'd be trying to play for the 76ers, or wrestling Rulon Gardner.

A good heavyweight on a great night might stand a chance against an excellent one on a poor night. Otherwise, though, there is little chance an average fighter like Riddick Bowe would beat an excellent fighter like Ali or Frazier. It could happen, and there have been big upsets, but it's so improbable as to be ridiculous to discuss. These Hail Mary situations tend to take on status as the rule, and something that could happen at any time, so used are people to the mostly ludicrous world of Hollywood boxing. Or Wepner and Cobb last 15 rounds as human punching bags, and their somewhat strange moral victory is turned around into something else. Once in a while weird combinations of styles, along with an off night by a great can produce surprises, ala Jimmy Young beating Foreman. Foreman beat Frazier like a drum, yet Frazier would have gone through Young like he was wet tissue paper. It can all get crazy, but that's all it is, crazy randomness, not patterns.

Could we please knock off all this speculation over whether Joe Bugner or Tommy Morrison could KO George Foreman or Joe Louis on a big night? This could happen only in the most bizarre of accidents. Call it luck even - a bad lapse on Louis's or Foreman's part, and Bugner, Morrison, whomever, in the right place at the right time to throw the right punch. Of course, they'd have to follow up, in all likelihood, which would tend to put things back in proper balance, as the top man cleared his head. Even the lucky punch at the proper time isn't being thrown on an ordinary guy on the street, and a fluke, one punch KO of your real big timers is extremely rare, even one superior fighter to another.
And yes, I was just too sentimental to admit it at the time, but when I went to Ali-Norton II, Ken did win a decision but was robbed. It was close but not that close. It's like they say about fighting a champion. You have to take it away, and even when Ali wasn't champion, the judges were almost always seduced by the Ali mystique, swaying them in close rounds. It was almost like his opponents started in the hole. Ali was good enough to come through most of the time, but he received several close decisions he shouldn't have, this among them, arguably Young and Shavers too.

It's like they say about fighting a champion. You have to take it away, and even when Ali wasn't champion, the judges were almost always seduced by the Ali mystique, swaying them in close rounds. It was almost like his opponents started in the hole. Ali was good enough to come through most of the time, but he received several close decisions he shouldn't have, this among them, arguably Young and Shavers too.

1. Boxing
2. Boxing
3. Boxing
4. Boxing
5. Boxing
6. Cock fights
7. Roller derby

As Jackie Gleason said in Requiem For A Heavyweight, "They'd hold these things in sewers, if there was head room." You forgot pro wrestling! If you don't believe me, ask any former pro boxer, or sports writer. Furthermore, boxing rankings are 99.9% pure hokum, false, jive and dishonest. Promoters use them to hype boxers. Just off the top of my head, they did this with Wepner, and I think Coopman too, ahead of them fighting Ali. I'm not sure where Stander or Daniels were before their fights with Frazier. What you say is very true, and with a little research, we could all find a ton of nobodies who suddenly jumped into the top 10 to allow them to fight a champion looking for some easy sparring and a paycheck. Most legit, dangerous fighters have to actually beat someone to move up, while others, real stiffs just sort of appear one day in the rankings to give a champion a workout and a payday. They even faked out Coopman by calling the "Lion of Flanders." What a joke.

| 9/3/03 08:35:25 AM| Angelo| Washington, DC|| funktron@yahoo.com ||||10| Well, you could make a case that Ali was "given" the decision in the Young fight, or the THIRD Norton fight, but against Shavers, Ali won 8 or 9 rounds clearly and finished stronger. Shavers landed the harder punches (Ali was rocked by the same punches that KOed Norton in one round and knocked Holmes down, but Ali stayed upright and answered with his own quick combinations.) but Ali landed more often and controlled the pace of the fight. I'm not so sure Frazier would go through Young like tissue paper. Jimmy Young had an uncanny ability to adjust to the style of his opponent and he had very clever/awkward moves that confused some very great fighters, including Ali, Foreman and Norton. A 1971 Frazier would beat a 1977 Young, but it might not be as easy as going through tissue paper. After Young lost the decision to Ali, he began a string of impressive fights, which ended when he came in out of shape and lost to Ossie Ocasio twice. But during his period of excellence, he was superb. I don't think he would be knocked out by anyone---and would always have a chance to steal a decision.

| 9/3/03 09:33:44 AM| Massimo| Rome|| carnerathegreatest.com | | | | |10| I have read that Ali did something illegal and incorrect against Shavers. During the fight he used a friend to know the judges's scores. This Ali's friend could hear the scores on TV, watching NBC. Anyway, this site judges the Ali-Shavers fight a draw.

| 9/3/03 09:34:50 AM| Roadscholarette| Chicago| roadscholarette@hotmail.com | | | | |10| but Ali landed more often and controlled the pace of the fight. Actually, I could be talked into either fighter winning, and in either case by about the same margin - eight to seven, maybe eight-six-and one. I'm not so sure that Ali controlled a lot of his fights (as we normally think of control, ie dominance, with little opportunity for the other man to do his own thing), particularly in his second career. This was true, even when fighting nobodies. His style was more one of capitalization, letting his opponents fight their own fights, and periodically asserting dominance, either during lulls, or by virtue of mistakes. Rope a dope, while it worked with Foreman, really wasn't a chosen style so much as it was a necessity. Ali could no longer fight consistently as he had earlier in his career.

* I'm not so sure Frazier would go through Young like tissue paper. Jimmy Young had an uncanny ability to adjust to the style of his opponent and he had very clever/awkward moves that confused some very great fighters, including Ali, Foreman and Norton. A 1971 Frazier would beat a 1977 Young, but it might not be as easy as going through tissue paper. After Young lost the decision to Ali, he began a string of impressive fights, which ended when he came in out of shape and lost to Ossie Ocasio twice. But during his period of excellence, he was superb. I don't think he would be knocked out by anyone—and would always have a chance to steal a decision.

It's just that I don't see Young having the skills to defeat Frazier. George Foreman was the only man who wasn't forced to fight Frazier's fight, and everyone else, Ali included, were basically just trying to hold him off. The only two ways to do that were to outpunch or outslug him, or to blanket his perimeters with an awesome bag of different tricks. Young had neither. He couldn't punch, and while tricky, wasn't in Ali's league in this regard, when it came to dealing with an irresistible machine like Frazier.

[9/3/03 01:02:20 PM]Forest Ward|South Carolina||joekevin|||10|Hey Tubby, from 1990 thru 1995, I was a regular at the Boxing Hall of Fame Weekend at Canastoga NY. Archie Moore was a regular. And I can state categorically that he was not "notoriusly punchy," he was not even a little punchy. He was sharp, witty, and well dressed each of the years he was there. Now I can't speak for Archie's health the year leading up to his death, but he was fine in 1995, and I was around him the whole weekend. It must be remembered that Archie was well into his eighties when he died. Charles Bronson who recently died had alzheimers at the time of his death.

[9/3/03 01:02:25 PM]Forest Ward|South Carolina||joekevin|||10|Hey Tubby, from 1990 thru 1995, I was a regular at the Boxing Hall of Fame Weekend at Canastoga NY. Archie Moore was a regular. And I can state categorically that he was not "notoriusly punchy," he was not even a little punchy. He was sharp, witty, and well dressed each of the years he was there. Now I can't speak for Archie's health the year leading up to his death, but he was fine in 1995, and I was around him the whole weekend. It must be remembered that Archie was well into his eighties when he died. Charles Bronson who recently died had alzheimers at the time of his death.

[9/3/03 01:15:17 PM]John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|TUBBY: I can also state that I met Sandy Saddler when he was well on in years, a few years before his death. He was as sharp as a tack. Not only did he remember his opponents, he remembered what happened in specific rounds of his fight with them. He spoke clearly, logically, and had no recall problem. He was also a perfect gentleman and very polite to my wife.

[9/3/03 03:51:50 PM]Massimo|Rome||CarnerabetterthanAli'.com|||10|What's the procedure to become a professional boxer? Can any amateur fighter become a pro whenever he wants or must he demonstrate to be strong enough winning Golden Gloves or other tournaments? Thanks

[9/3/03 03:58:20 PM]Angel0|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Yes, I remember seeing interviews with Archie Moore not too long before his death. I have to say he was sharper than most people his age. He was an amazing guy all around.

By the way, this one isn't a dream matchup, but instead a fantasy fight between a Champion who is a footnote and a Contenter who never became a Champion: Who would win a contest between Cooney vs. Buster Douglas? Personally, I think it would be an interesting fight. I find it difficult to pick a winner. What about Cooney vs. Hasim Rahman or Douglas vs. Rahman? Could anyone see any of these fights going the distance?

| 9/3/03 04:11:24 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | ifunktron@yahoo.com
| 9/3/03 04:42:06 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com

Don't get me wrong: I have respect for Joe Frazier, especially given the fact that he beat my all-time favorite Ali, then ultimately finished Ali as a great during the Manila fight, even though Frazier lost (If you ask me, they both lost that day, and in some ways, they both won.). But I have to mimic comments someone else made on the board--how did Frazier manage to box between 1972 and 1977 without taking on Norton, Shavers or Ron Lyle? I know that Frazier and Norton were friends. But what about Shavers and Lyle, two bangers who delivered KOs in almost all of their wins? I hate to say it, but it seems as though Frazier was "handled" to avoid guys who could punch on a level with Foreman. Lyle and Foreman had the famous war and we saw that in early rounds, Lyle had the power to knock down someone as intimidating as Foreman. And we know that Shavers was among the two or three hardest punchers in boxing history. It's odd to me that during this period when most of the famous heavies fought each other, Frazier managed to avoid these guys. Also, Norton vs. Lyle never happened---and given the fact that Norton had problems with big hitters, that might not have been an accident--Norton's people probably didn't want him stepping in with Ron Lyle and designed the plan to avoid Lyle.

---

Don't get me wrong: I have respect for Joe Frazier, especially given the fact that he beat my all-time favorite Ali, then ultimately finished Ali as a great during the Manila fight, even though Frazier lost (If you ask me, they both lost that day, and in some ways, they both won.). But I have to mimic comments someone else made on the board--how did Frazier manage to box between 1972 and 1977 without taking on Norton, Shavers or Ron Lyle? I know that Frazier and Norton were friends. But what about Shavers and Lyle, two bangers who delivered KOs in almost all of their wins? I hate to say it, but it seems as though Frazier was "handled" to avoid guys who could punch on a level with Foreman. Lyle and Foreman had the famous war and we saw that in early rounds, Lyle had the power to knock down someone as intimidating as Foreman. And we know that Shavers was among the two or three hardest punchers in boxing history. BTW, I had Frazier ahead of Ali in Manila after 14, by 7-6-1! I could be coaxed into 6-1-1, but would still really feel the former. I know that isn't how the judges had it though - Joe needed a KO to win on their cards. But I have to mimic comments someone else made on the board--how did Frazier manage to box between 1972 and 1977 without taking on Norton, Shavers or Ron Lyle? Well, no one can deny that no one even comes close to Ali when it came to taking on all comers, as opposed to coasting on creampuffs in between tough fights with two of three elite guys. The thing is too, that in no other era were so many contenders worthy fighters, many of whom could have been champions in other days. After the second Foreman fight, Frazier was scheduled to fight Knoetze, when he (Joe) contracted hepatitis. I think Frazier on his own would fight Satan himself at the drop of a hat, but I think it's possible Durham, later Futch kept him away from those guys. Or not, I don't know. Shavers was on the table at that time too. I don't know how those fights would have gone. Styles and all, as we know. My hunch is that he'd have taken them, but after what Foreman did to JF, you can't discount a similar showing from Lyle or Shavers, in terms of punching power. They weren't the fighter George was otherwise, but they were in his league as hitters. As you say, Frazier and Norton were friends, and it's just as well. I don't believe Norton could have handled him. Lyle and Foreman had the famous war and we saw that in early rounds, Lyle had the power to knock down someone as intimidating as Foreman. And we know that Shavers was among the two or three hardest punchers in boxing history. Some in the position to know first hand, have said ~no~ one hit harder than Shavers. The Foreman/Lyle fight was one of the most exciting I've seen. Sure took the luster off Foreman being invincible, but at the same time, it sure proved he was game.Norton's people probably didn't want him stepping in with Ron Lyle and designed the plan to avoid Lyle.There's every chance Lyle would have won that. I have nothing against Norton at all, actually like him, but you're right - he did have trouble against power punchers, and seemed to unravel instantly and totally when really hit.Norton's people probably didn't want him stepping in with Ron Lyle and designed the plan to avoid Lyle.There's every chance Lyle would have won that. I have nothing against Norton at all, actually like him, but you're right - he did have trouble against power punchers, and seemed to unravel instantly and totally when really hit.Norton's people probably didn't want him stepping in with Ron Lyle and designed the plan to avoid Lyle.There's every chance Lyle would have won that. I have nothing against Norton at all, actually like him, but you're right - he did have trouble against power punchers, and seemed to unravel instantly and totally when really hit.Norton's people probably didn't want him stepping in with Ron Lyle and designed the plan to avoid Lyle.There's every chance Lyle would have won that. I have nothing against Norton at all, actually like him, but you're right - he did have trouble against power punchers, and seemed to unravel instantly and totally when really hit.Norton's people probably didn't want him stepping in with Ron Lyle and designed the plan to avoid Lyle.

Wow, some big postings. Was surprised to see some very good heavies placed in a "weak" or "poor" catagory for the sake of comparison. Becoming a top10 or top20 heavy is a real accomplishment, no weak or poor guys there. Tubby, Wilt was underappreciated as a player, and labeled a selfish super-athlete during his day. Bill Russell was legendary in just a couple phases of the game, a super role player on a team of Hall of Famers. Wilt's game covered more ground than any player ever, he embarrassed the league. As he correctly said himself " No one roots for Goliath", and few did... Got to defend Rocky also, who beat Walcott, Charles, Moore among others. It isn't just that he went undefeated, he beat better guys overall vs. Foreman as champ, though Foreman did have Frazier and Norton. Rock also lasted longer and clearly conducted himself better. Few of Rock's matches were even close. A lot said about boxing's crookedness and health hazards. Senator John McCain (who should be President) has himself lobbied for a governmental agency of some sort, and many have stated the need for some type of headgear, perhaps similar to sparring gear to better protect fighters. Fact is, few respect the sport in the general public, which is also why the current push for a union, while clearly necessary, is not likely to materialize. Boxing needs to establish a credibility as a sport in the eyes of the general public to gain these considerations, a real uphill road.

The brain's a funny and mysterious organ. Fighters can have a long career and be pretty much unscathed, while some ordinary guy can fall off a ladder and become a vegetable. Just as some fighters are more prone to brain damage, others are not as much. Those with it can find it's unpredictable too. Some guys will remember everything about their career, or perhaps about something else, but forget other very simple things, or not be able to figure out very basic things. Some experience wild emotional swings, others do not. This is the same as with real old people with senile dementia, who may be able to remember every detail of their wedding day, or a poker game during WW2, but have difficulty with a simple kitchen appliance, or forget where their shoes are (that they maybe took off five minutes ago).

I sure have to second that sentiment about McCain!

Already at an advanced fighting age, Ali absorbed punch after punch, trading hard shots right through to the end of the fight. In fact, Ali threw and landed more power punches in that fight than he had in years. I have his last career KO on tape (Richard Dunn) but even in that fight, I don't think he landed like he did against Spinks. Ali was slow and old, without the defensive reflexes he once had. It was a tremendous job he did in the return match, getting into better shape and giving young Spinks a boxing lesson. Later, Holmes took it easy against Ali, which is why Ali lasted 10 rounds with him. But I have to say, Ali's last fight, the loss to Trevor Berbick, surprised me because Berbick was a top 10 fighter and Ali wasn't even a shell of his former self. He simply had nothing left at all on offense or defense, yet managed to go the distance. against Berbick and have a few close rounds. Basically, it amazes me that a 40 year old guy already suffering physical nerve damage and slowed down by age AND physiological factors still managed to hold his own against a top 10 heavyweight in his 20's.

Even Ali'-Frazier 2 was a wonderful fight! I have Ali' ahead 6-5-3 in Manilla, but it's a very difficult fight to score!

Thanks, Kent regarding Mike Q. Seems like being a Quarry worked against Mike in those long duels, though he clearly did show himself to be an excellent boxer, a credit to the sport. About Ken Norton, I think he's one of the most underrespected heavies ever. He had Ali's number in the 70's, and did not get a fair call vs. Holmes, who like Holyfield, was pushed as the champ people wanted. JQ did respect Jim Brown as a super athlete I'm sure, but a match between the two wouldn't go four rounds. Despite that, I doubt the same respect was returned by the arrogant race-fixated Brown toward Jerry. I agree the Klitschko's must gain some real W's to be seen as the division's best, and given the state of the division now, I think they'll come. Good to see some positive posts on Riddick Bowe, who had the package to be a dominant heavy, a huge wasted talent like Greg Page.

Funny how people disrespected JQ's ability in the ring. Jim Brown thinking he could take Jerry in the boxing ring? That is really funny, I didn't know Brown was such a comedian. Jim Brown may have fared better in boxing than other footballers like Mark Gastineau and Ed Too Tall Jones but not much better. But then again, he may not have. Remember I mentioned Michael Jordan's journey into professional baseball as an example of being great in one sport but not in another. Jordan a hall of famer in basketball but a mediocre minor league baseball player.

It is not just other sports people who had no respect for JQ. I remember reading where Rahman Ali (aka Rudy Clay), Muhammad's brother, once told his brother that he wanted to fight JQ and that he could kick Jerry's ass. Muhammad told Rahman that it was a bad decision and that the result would be the other way around! Rahman Ali lost convincingly to Englishman Danny MacIlinden (spelling), who was probably not as good as countryman Jack Bodell, who Jerry destroyed in one round. Jerry would have done the same thing to the other Ali brother. Part of the disrespect people showed for JQ's ability could be because sportscasters like Howard Cosell would make comments like "not many have that distinction," when referring to the fact that Ron Lyle had lost to Jerry. Cosell said this, as memory serves me, in the prefight comments in Lyle's title challenge against Muhammad Ali.

I'm sure Jim Brown had a lot of respect for Jerry, I know Deacon Jones DID (as they were partners in a few business endeavors). Brown's favorite running back was John Riggins there for awhile, I think big Jim saw things as they were, more often than not. And not as the racist, as he sometimes is portrayed.

OK, you guys and gals have taken the offensive but I'm counterpunching, scoring with jabs and hooks, driving you into your corner and pummeling your midsection with my powerful expertise. First, Jim Brown was such a phenomenal athlete that he is the one out of them all who could have become a great boxer with some training and instruction. The man is 6'4", 230. Not only is he one of the dozen or so best football players of all time, but he is also often called the best lacrosse player of all time, and it was a sport he only learned in college. Now, if some of you want to believe Archie Moore and Sandy Saddler or any other career boxer is neurologically normal, speaks and understands speech normally, and was not damaged by his boxing career, be my guest. You'd be convincing if you had a medical degree or one in speech pathology. Many of my Southern California friends -- including a man who sparred with Joe Louis in 1943 in Los Angeles -- knew Archie well for decades and testified to me he was extremely punchy. Period. Let me give you a classic example of aphasia. Someone with aphasia might walk across a room, put his hand on the doorknob, and then stop to think. He has forgotten that one little bit of information on the doorknob needing to be turned to the left (or right) and pulled. He may stand there half an hour, struggling unsuccessfully to remember. Or he might appear normal except for losing the ability to recognize faces, including his wife's and children's faces. Or he might be able to speak and make sense in what seems a normal way, but not understand any words he hears. Or vice versa. These are mostly temporal lobe aphasias. Frontal lobe aphasias might involve increased or uncontrolled aggression, like picking fights with strangers. There are thousands of reported aphasias. Former boxers have them. Read the literature. OK, the great Ron Lyle. He lost to Foreman, Quarry, Ali and several relatively obscure fighters. One of his last fights was a 1 round KO he suffered to Gerry Cooney. Lyle was a big puncher and a journeyman at best. Through the 60s and 70s and 80s, guys like Lyle were opponents. He had a nice record at 48-5 or so, but where is the greatness? I already explained in detail that Wilt Chamberlain was the most famous and respected basketball player of his time, and maybe of any time. He was certainly not "unappreciated". Being liked is something entirely different, and it's true he had many detractors. No one here mentions Ernie Terrell, a good fighter. The finest and most realistic boxing movie of all time is "Fat City", based on the novel by John Gardner, and starring Stacy Keach and Jeff Bridges. I liked "Raging Bull" but thought the boxing scenes were unrealistic and made too mythic. La Motta and Vale and Robinson were hitting each other so damned hard time after time that no one would have been able to take it. The cinematic tricks of slow motion and other stuff distracted me, too. Who would you folks say is the best pound-for-pound right now? I'm not sure. I might go with Roy Jones, Jr. I might go with Oscar De La Hoya. It's a shame Felix Trinidad won't come back for a payday or two, but healthwise it's a smart decision. Does anyone remember 60s heavyweight King Fletcher, who finally died of a boxing defeat? How about Amos (Big Train) Lincoln? Or George (Scrap Iron) Johnson? How about Alejandro Lavorante, who also died in the ring? Yo whoever wrote that fighters earn their way into the rankings, please contact me. I have a collection of mint condition robes every heavyweight champion since Jim Jeffreys wore into the ring, and because you're a friend, I'll sell them to you for only $5,000 each. Now I must hurry to a neutral corner and wait for the referee to count our sadly misinformed friends out. With a name like Tubby, do you have to be a big asshole too? OK, so we're calling names now. Charlie Powell doesn't leave a valid e-mail address so there's no way so far to contact him. Is he the same Charlie Powell who was a phenomenal athlete from Logan Heights in San Diego? The one who Muhammad Ali KOed in 3 in Pittsburgh on January 24, 1964? You can read more about this Charlie Powell in www.sandiego.sports.org/athletes_breitbard.asp and also www.esportsinstruction.com/charliepowell.html. Now this Charlie may feel insulted because I said Archie Moore, his lifelong friend from San Diego, was punchy. Or because I implied Charlie himself would be punchy, as a former boxer. Out of respect to Charlie and his achievements, I apologize. There is a brutality about boxing, though, that none of us can deny. It does injure people, and seriously. I'm glad young people are going more into other sports now, whereas once many of them saw boxing as their only opportunity. I'd like to talk about something else. The sport of boxing and boxers changed radically and rather suddenly in the mid-60s with the advent of closed circuit TV transmission. All of a sudden the revenues to be made from boxing were increased tremendously. These figures are not exact, but it was as if a boxing promotion that might have earned $100,000 in 1961 or 1962 would by 1965 or 1966 bring in many millions. The situation created a demand for telegenic and exciting boxers for these telecasts. Even promoters who'd never been involved in boxing or even sports needed fighters to be in their productions. This demand tended to distort and twist the traditional boxing setup of rankings and divisions. New divisions sprouted up so that TV promoters could claim to have "world championship fights" featuring "top-ranked boxers". Not for the first time but now more often, we saw unknown boxers vault into the upper rankings soon before a big closed-circuit fight. As time went on, this situation redefined the sport. Sugar Ray Leonard was a professional boxer chosen by ABC TV to begin at the top. It's a happy coincidence he turned out to be one of the finest boxers of all time. By 2003, this is how profitable boxing works. Promoters thrive on TV money -- now cable and pay-for-view. The local fight cards barely break even, if they do at all. Every boxer wants to fight on TV and make big money. Who can blame them? The effects of this situation are obvious. 1. Kids are rushed into big fights. 2. Certain kids are favored to appear in these big fights over other kids who are just as good. 3. Some kids get into the wrong sport, hoping to become millionaires. 4. There are dozens of ranking organizations. The rankings have lost almost all their credibility. 6. Powerful promoters run the sport. 7. Boxing now has an artificial nature to it, because sometimes it seems everything is contrived and made up for a cable or pay-per-view audience. 8. Top boxers now fight only occasionally, or once a year or even every two years. Before 1960 or so, they fought once or twice a month. That busyness made the competition and the rankings meaningful, because they fought each other and had common opponents. Now they don't nearly as often. Now as far as this generation of 1960s-1970s heavyweight boxers we're talking about goes, it was a transitional period. One foot was in the old way and one foot in the new. We had some terrific fighters and some people who could barely fight at all, like Chuck (The Bayonne Bleeder) Wepner and the endless parade of Great White Hopes including Cooney, Morrison, etc. If a knowledgeable fan had been able to follow either of them for a while, would he pay to see one of them go up against a Frazier, a Foreman, a Norton or a Holmes? I wouldn't. There's a great suspicion thrown over boxing now and a doubtful quality to it all. When fighters are treated more like movie stars and celebrities, always in the gossip columns or the papers for beating people up or rape, and they only fight matches once a year, the integrity and meaning of the sport are drastically diluted. We might even say that on this hypothetical one night of fighting that these two fighters have, one wins and so what? It just doesn't seem like the Real McCoy any more. In fact, with the money becoming astronomical, how can we trust them? You can be a pretty honest guy, but for $5 million bucks or more, you might do things differently, like throw a fight or dog one. Who knows? Possibly the most hurtful thing to a true fan, like all of us, is seeing what has always been a shabby but respectable sport where athletes train harder than anyone else and risk their lives to pursue it, the whole thing is cheapened now, and reduced to a commercial process. We might say someone like Eddie Machen or Zora Folley or Ernie Terrell or Cleve Williams were good fighters at the most, but by God, they paid their dues in two-bit towns, gritty arenas, with unfair judges sometimes, and for measly purses for years and years before they made it to the big time. Most of the kids we see on TV now can't say that, and it matters. Our sport too often turns into a spectacle that has little to do with boxing. Thanks.
ring's victim. Wasn't he a good fighter? What did happen to Amos Lincoln and to George Johnson? Thanks|
| 9/4/03 07:00:30 AM|George Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpsa@aol.com|||10|As many of the old school visitors to this site know, I have represented the legislative interests of TJQF and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing on a pro bono basis (for free) for about 8 years. On a more recent basis, I have supported the passage of S. 275, the Professional Boxing Amendments Act of 2003--
- legislation that would establish a federal boxing commission. If this bill passed and was properly implemented, then the sport would become fairer, more organized, and respectable. Furthermore, the fighters could more easily establish a union. I commend Roadscholarette and Gerry Schultz in commenting upon these issues and the efforts of Senator McCain. Please contact your U.S.
Senator and urge him or her to vote for this important legislation
!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!| 9/4/03 07:50:31 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|TUBBY: No name calling or disrespect from me, that's not my style. But you seem to think that every single retired boxer is a closet drooling idiot and the rest of us, even when we speak face to face with them, don't have enough common sense to detect whether a man has brain damage or not. When someone points out sharpness of their memory of clarity of thought, you cloud the discussion with terms like "aphasia" which I assume is supposed to impress us enough to believe that a person who our eyes tell us is perfectly normal is in fact brain damaged. And as far as Ron Lyle goes, I never once said he was "great" -- I said he was very, very good and I stand by this. He put Foreman on the floor twice and bums don't do that. Anyone who thinks that the man who put George Foreman on the deck twice is a poor heavyweight has a clear case of "aphasia" or just doesn't know squash about boxing.| 9/4/03 08:08:34 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|I never heard that Jim Brown had said that he could beat up Jerry Quarry, but he might have. If he did, he'd have to know that that's just as foolish as thinking Jerry could step cold into the NFL and rush for 1,000 yards, and to quote Muhammed Ali, "If you even dreamed that, you should wake up and apologize!" Quarry had just over 300 fights. Even a fat barroom brawler with no athletic skill or training, would know something about fighting after that many skirmishes. If Brown lasted a round, it'd be a miracle. If he threw a hundred punches and landed one, it'd be a miracle, and if he happened to evade even one of JQ's, it'd be an accident. Now, Brown might have been a good fighter if he'd chosen that instead of football, but if he made such a statement, he was obviously under the same delusion many ordinary people are, that a top pro fighter is just someone who jogs, hits the bag, and maybe has someone tell them how to throw a couple of punches, also that since everyone has been in a fight, they can therefore ~fight~. Another interesting misconception I hear all too often is that the pro ranks are two or three really super-duper fighters in a division, and everyone else is cannon fodder. I'm looking forward to seeing the movie Undefeated, which actually used real boxers, instead of actors or stuntmen. I agree with Tubby that Fat City is a superb boxing movie. It depicts two men (Keach and Bridges) who are an awful lot more common in the game than are Ali-Frazier-Foreman, particularly in such a unique sport in which anyone can fight for money. They actually had pretty decent moves for actors.
Look for X champ Curtis Cokes as one of the bed partners (also had by Keach) of a local female barfly.Most Hollywood movies are absurd. I was really impressed by the athleticism of Carl Weathers, and loved Rocky, though the fights were pure fiction. No fighter gets hit that much of that hard and stays up, though this sort of thing is common in Tinseltown productions. Even Raging Bull, while a great movie, went Rocky in the fights. Good Lord, the sound effects sounded like a building falling on a truck full of watermelons too!George - nice work, and I most certainly will contact my represented about that bill. I'll encourage friends to do so too, even ones who aren't boxing fans, and haven't even heard of it!RON LYLE, was truly a great fighter, not too many can come to the pro's as a 31 year old rookie, and achieve what he did, can you think of anyone sands FOREMAN and HOLMES?? He could take a tremendous punch, had a great wallop, fearless, and had allotta heart. Instead of trying to do a "SMART FIGHT" and not fall for Ali's tactics, probably should have just come out blasting! CHICKIE FERRARA trained him to set Foreman up with Lead rights, Nearly won him the match, What if there age's had been reversed?? Ron Lyle was the 8th best fighter of the 70's, his comeback fight vs Shavers was phoenoimal, Besides Cooney he'd never been hurt that bad, LYLE never quit or played dead for the $$

Hey John G., very well put. Regarding Sandy Saddler, in the early eighties I used to see Sandy pretty regularly. He worked at the the United Maritime Hall on 14th St. and 8th Ave. I worked nearby so I saw him often, and he was fine. Sandy lived in Harlem, and sometime in the late eighties he was robbed and mugged in the hallway of his building. He was bashed over the head with a iron pipe, and suffered serious physical and was in the hospital for a prolonged period as a result of the injury. He was never the same afterwards.As I previously mentioned I saw and spoke to Archie Moore in depth and he was fine and rational. But yet you take the testimony (was he under oath?) of an ex-boxer, who if we use your logic has at least 60 years of brain damage, and is at least 80 years old (he boxed Joe Louis in 1943). Tubby, please explain to me someone as educated and skilled as you are in the field of health can be a boxing buff. It would seem to me someone as dedicated as you to human science would be abhor boxing.

As a long time boxing fan, I have admiration and respect for the fighters themselves --- and of course, concern for their well-being and long term health. I love the sport, but at the same time, find myself very upset when seeing guys who suffer brain damage or death from a particular fight --- or long term cognitive and motor skills issues like Jerry Quarry and Ali. My conclusion is not to ban boxing, but to make it safer. No, not to make it safer to the point of boredom, but to enact common sense practices to protect fighters to the best of our ability, while still keeping the sport exciting, competitive and hard hitting. It's why I'm interested in what the Quarry Foundation is working on. But one thing we all must realize is that the sport will always be dangerous. Simply, taking punches to the head and body can and will cause damage --- and you can't escape it. Other pastimes and sports have many more injuries and deaths each year than boxing does. It's true that the INTENT in boxing is to score more points or knock out the opponent by hurting them --- but I challange anyone to tell me that 350 pound guys like Warren Sapp, who run as fast as running backs used to, aren't trying to "KO" offensive players in a football game. Likewise, jumping out of an airplane or driving a car at 200 miles per hour, while trying to work your way through 30 other cars, is a recipe for injury or death. People in many walks of life make their living or spend their leisure time taking risks with their health and their life. I'm tired of people demonizing boxing. Sure, there's a lot to be cleaned up, regulated, standardized, enforced, etc. I still think that boxing does a lot of good for a lot of people. And not to make a race issue out of it, but I remember reading an article in which Muhammad Ali, suffering from the Parkinson's Syndrome, still defended boxing. He wondered why no one called for boxing to be banned years ago, when white people made all the money from the sport as boxers, managers, promoters, trainers, etc. He said that the sport has always been dangerous and that long ago, a higher percentage of fighters died or suffered serious injuries. But now that minorities are benefiting at all levels of the sport, suddenly the AMA and media elite are calling for a ban. I don't know if I buy into it, but it's interesting nonetheless.

Robert Horry is surely punchy! He was a great player, but last year he has disappointed me hugely! Boxing is a very dangerous sport, this is sure!

I've begun doing a little research into women's boxing. There are a lot of women out there doing it, most I suspect accomplished athletes from other sports. They don't make much, compared to the men, and I don't think most of the average public really takes them seriously. Of course that could change if the ordinary guy in the street got in the ring with one of them. Anyway, daughters of Frazier, Ali, Foreman, Duran, and Moore are all boxing. There may be others too, I don't know yet. Of course, being related to these talented fathers only guarantees some favorable genes, not necessarily that they'll be great boxers, and dominate say a kindergarten teacher from Kansas. Reportedly, Ichele Duran's father (Roberto) wouldn't talk to her for a week after finding out, but softened, and is now offering her his valuable expertise. I read that the Frazier-Ali bout was more hype than anything, given their names, and the women actually weren't top ranked fighters when they fought. Jackie Frazier was a superb athlete in basketball, but I don't know the athletic background of the others.

Boxing workouts are a fantastic way to get in shape, and the top women are every bit as well conditioned as men, as far as that goes. However, if it continues, it's just a matter of time till we start seeing punchy women. This'll come from the punches alone, and could even be worse than with men. Granted, the women don't hit as hard, but at the same time, a woman cannot attain the same level of strength to withstand punches that a man can. It's somewhat like little kids playing football before puberty, when really meaningful conditioning can take place.

Women should'nt boxe! Muscular women are not sexy!

Roadscholarette, I attend many fight cards each year and on many of them are woman's bouts. They are every bit as competitive (that is when two opponents are evenly matched) as the men's bouts and the crowd always gives them respect. I still haven't gotten used to seeing women leave the ring with bloody noses and split lips.

I saw, walking around in the audience once, female boxer Mia St. John. She was signing autographs and at first I thought she must be a famous actress, as she was so beautiful. I remember thinking what a shame it would be to ruin such a pretty face from getting hit with punches. Of course I think the same thing, on a different level, when I see "pretty boy" boxers like Oscar De La Hoya and Julio Gonzalez, that they should be actors or models instead of fighters. However, it doesn't matter to me if De La Hoya or Gonzalez get their faces smashed as they are men and it is part of the game. Yes it is a double standard but I don't care if a man is handsome or not. Besides, it is my best interest if good looking men like De La Hoya and Gonzalez lose their looks as potentially more women would look my way!
The female boxers are just in real good shape. They look more like women, just as men in shape look more like men. Of course, with the problem with overweight, particularly in the US, this is altering what the ordinary "normal" person looks like, but in terms of ideals, you don't get much better looking than the male or female boxing physique.

Kent -

Roadscloarette, I attend many fight cards each year and on many bouts and the crowd always gives them respect. (that is when two opponents are evenly matched) as the men's bouts and I think a lot of it is that the women in the ring are actually conditioned and know what they're doing, looking like anything but a couple of silly drunks in a catfight in a bar. I'd love to see a card with several women on it! Women will be just like the men. There'll be a range, from stunning performers, to stiffs. I'm sure that's true. I think a lot of it is that the women in the ring are actually conditioned and know what they're doing, looking like anything but a couple of silly drunks in a catfight in a bar. I'd love to see a card with several women on it! Women will be just like the men. There'll be a range, from stunning performers, to stiffs.

I still haven't gotten used to seeing women leave the ring with bloody noses and split lips. I'm wondering if refs will subconsciously defer to sex, and stop women's contests sooner, ala amateur bouts, when there're two women involved? I also wonder if when we start seeing women, postfight, looking like Joe Frazier after Manilla, if the cries for abolishing boxing will come again, and be even stronger? If so, for simply that reason, it'll be very sexist and unfair. One thing I've noticed is that while male boxing is dominated by black fighters, along with Puerto Ricans on the east coast, Mexicans on the west, more female boxers are white than anything.

I saw, walking around in the audience once, female boxer Mia St. John. She was signing autographs and at first I thought she must be a famous actress, as she was so beautiful. I remember thinking what a shame it would be to ruin such a pretty face from getting hit with punches. Having looked at the different pages on the Internet, and having seen numerous articles in magazines, it seems that the manly, ugly, or "dikey" fighter is rare. Many are really sharp looking, facially, and of course, they're all in really top shape, body-wise. Of course I think the same thing, on a different level, when I see "pretty boy" boxers like Oscar De La Hoya and Julio Gonzalez, that they should be actors or models instead of fighters. However, it doesn't matter to me if De La Hoya or Gonzalez get their faces smashed as they are men and it is part of the game. Yes it is a double standard but I don't care if a man is handsome or not. Besides, it is my best interest if good looking men like De La Hoya and Gonzalez lose their looks as potentially more women would look my way! Some of the guys you mention probably looked like angels once (some still do pretty much), but that'll change. Like they say - prizefighters and whores age the fastest, by 19, looking like they're 40. Maybe stretching it a bit, but the sentiment is pretty solid.

I wrote my same post on female boxing for a general discussion forum where I also go, and one guy said - kidding around - that if the women really want equality, they needed to fight bare from the waist up, just the same as the men do. I commented back that if this ever happened, a female Ali-Frazier might draw as much as the male version! LOL!
boxing's show as good as the men do ? A Thrilla in Manilla between women ? I haven't a clear opinion about and I'm curious to know yours. |
| 9/6/03 08:45:30 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Road... (too long !)What can I say? I get interested in something, and talk a lot too.What do you mean with "real good shape" ?With the workouts they do, they're in top shape, and it shows in their bodies. The really hard workers are doing as much as the men.I feel myself ( or I feel... Bah, you know) in very good shape, 5'6" 128lb, but I'm not muscular at all and I could'n fight ! What would happen if a woman took a shot to the breast ( an uppercut, for instance) ?

It would hurt a lot, more than it does when a man's hit there. They wear a protector. This would be a problem, don't you agree ? Especially if that woman has a big breast !

You won't see many really large breasts in a super well conditioned woman. When you get in shape, you lose fat proportionately all over your body. Since breasts are mostly fat, their size will decrease more than say, your ear lobes will (even though the ~percentage~ of loss is the same). If a woman was really big breasted before losing weight, she'll still be larger than another woman who was small before shedding pounds.Do you think the women can offer a boxing's show as good as the men do ?It depends on what an audience member wants. Can they be just as tenacious and stubborn and tough? Yes. They can be well conditioned, fast, well schooled in the fundamentals, and everything else that makes a fight good. However, they won't be as big or as powerful, and won't hit as hard. There's also a certain desire on the part of sports audiences to want to watch performers who are a lot better than they, the audience is. Some crowds may not accept women as this.A Thrilla in Manilla between women ? I haven't a clear opinion about and I'm curious to know yours. Let's define the Thrilla in Manilla. It was two highly gifted, superbly conditioned men who fought like pit bulls. There appeared to be some personal issues too. In terms of a contest though, everyone knew that with these two, there'd be a war, practically a fight to the death. Women could bring all these things except one. Ali and Frazier were the very baddest things on the planet. Women will always have to suffer a certain amount of, "Hey, she's pretty good...for a girl." People like to see T-Rexes fight, not chipmunks, however intense the latter might be. |
| 9/6/03 10:32:53 AM|Massimo|Rome||.com|||10|Roadscholarette -I didn't mean that you talk too much ! Absolutely not ! I was just joking about your name "Roadscholarette" that is pretty long...I love joking, and maybe sometimes I joke too much ! I'm very interested in what you say ! |
| 9/6/03 02:05:30 PM|Gerry Schultz|Ohio||jgschultz11@msn.com|||9|Some interesting comments on women's boxing. Here in Cleveland, a girl named Vonda Ward is a pretty good draw at 190lbs. She recently worked a card with Don King ( thousands have told her, "Don't sign anything with Don King", but I guess it went o.k.). Boxing comes from a very primal place, and it's not surprising women want in on it too. Boxing also comes from a primarily poor-urban place as well, and white men haven't really boxed in numbers since the 50's and the rise of suburbs. White men generally prefer baseball and football. Tommy Morrison was mentioned as "another white hype", he was a very good heavyweight with some impressive wins. Ron Lyle was a remarkable fighter because he did start so late, after prison, and his Foreman fight is a must-see. He was quite a package. He was clearly not ready for Quarry, though. JQ had a way of making fools out of those who underestimated him, and too many did because he was white. That might be the core of his story. Again, a clear sign of boxing's lack of credibility in the general public, few white participants. |
9/6/03 06:27:47 PM|max hord|fernandina bch, fla||rasluc@msn.com|||10|Would have liked to see JQ against Ron Stander!!
9/6/03 09:57:19 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Massimo - Oh, the name! Just make it RS! :-)Gerry - that's true about the majority of fighters, Most suburban kids, or even most blue collar kids play other sports these days. I'm not sure how to account for the majority of the female fighters being white. Foreman-Lyle wasn't even a boxing match - it was just a fight out in an alley! Superb! Jerry Q did well against Lyle types, taking both him and Shavers. Of course, Frazier was another story, and actually the only person who handled him easily was Foreman. Ali managed to get past him twice, but at a horrible price. BTW, speaking of Quarry - I once saw an unbelievable still shot of him doing something I've never seen before. I don't remember the opponent, it might have been Lyle or Shavers. Anyway, he countered a left hook with a right uppercut (then I assume he tried to follow up with a left hook of his own). To land this counter, he was bent so far back and to the right, you can see his right ankle crunched over to where I don't see how he kept from spraining it!\n
9/7/03 02:41:45 AM|STEVE|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Well,seems this last bastion of insecure males zealously guarding their diminishing supplies of testosterone has finally been breached.Congratulations,Roadscholarette.I've been watching your posts with great interest.They are articulate,intelligent, and apparently well informed over a wide range of subjectssrelated to this site . I wondered how long it would take you to get to women's boxing.I think it's absurd!Tubby and yourself are great additions to this wonderful,multi-generational conversation.Max Hord Tubby, and yourself send conflicting messages.I agree with both messages! The 70's heavyweight era was probably as sweet a taste of the sweet science as any generation of fans will ever witness.It was also the most brutal, and seems to have caused the damage to it's major and minor participants, of any generation.It was brutal and wrong!I loved it!It destroyed Jerry Quarry, two of his brothers, and most of the top fighters of their time.Perhaps these men where mean't to fullfill a certain destiny. They reached for victory and made it to the top of an inhuman practise.They also enspired a whole generation of average guys like me and all my boyhood friends , who went to Vietnam, to be strong.whatever the consequences. I don't feel that any female boxers will ever give us fights at a level of intensity that will come close to those notorious pretty boys of boxing Ali vs ugly Joe Frazier or pretty boy Ray Leonard vs homely Tommy Hearns.\n
9/7/03 03:19:18 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Steve, you mentioned that boxing destroyed two of Jerry's brothers. I assume you mean Mike and Bobby. Mike admits he has suffered some damage from the ring but Bobby, in my opinion, does not show signs of physical or mental damage. I have spent time with Bobby and I see no signs of damage. He is well spoken on boxing and other topics. I have also talked to him by telephone many times and he carries on normal conversations like most people do.I realize I am not an expert on such matters but he has told me he has taken MRI exams and he doesn't have damage and I believe him.I have also spoken to Mike on occasion, and though I haven't spoken to him in recently, he too is somewhat articulate despite damage he has suffered. Mike can still hold intelligent conversations and he is still very much with us, at least he was a few months ago when I spoke with him and I hope with God's help he can remain so for quite some time.I realize boxing is a cruel and brutal sport, and there are times when I wonder why I even like it, but maybe we can make it as safe as possible if we continue to work for consturctive change.\n
9/7/03 11:40:36 AM|PAUL MADUROS|MIDWEST||pama42@yahoo.com|||10|Jerry lost to Joe Frazier mainly because Frazier doesn't give a man time to think, also Frazier's bobbing and weaving made him hard to hit. Give Jerry time to think and he'd figure you out. Ask Mac Foster, Ernie Shavers, Thad Spencer, Ron Lyle.

Steve - thank you for the kind words! What don't you like about women's boxing? Not arguing, just curious, and see a possibility for a discussion.

Kent - boy, I don't know about that. MRIs are really sensitive in picking up even the results of a kid's injury, riding bikes, let alone a boxer's brain. Steve - Frazier didn't give anyone time to think, and threw off another fighter's rhythm, also making him hurry what he wanted to do. Frazier was every fighter's nightmare, far more so than the lightning fast mover. Athletically, he was in the upper echelon with Ali and Foreman, and this was tough to crack into - other fighters had to do it almost by chance, and then it was almost impossible to follow up on. Frazier was hard to hit, and disguised being hurt well.

I was thinking about something the other day after posting in here. We know research is being done regarding genetic susceptibility to brain injury. It's also possible that along with the psychological component, that ability to take a punch has its seat in brain chemistry too. What I was wondering though, and I've never read anything about this, is if a fighter can become ~less~ able to take a punch with time. I thought this might be the case with Frazier. Not that he developed a glass jaw by a long shot, but it would explain Foreman (who I don't believe could have taken him the night he fought Ali the first time), and some other times when he seemed to be a little shook by punches he used to shake off. Even the modern age's reincarnation of Two Ton Tony Galento, Ron Stander, froze Joe a couple of times. Does anyone else ever get this idea about different fighters? How about Quarry? Roberto Duran seemed to show it a little, I think.

Roadscholarette, Does Bobby Quarry show no damage whatsoever on his MRI exams? I have no idea. All I know is Bobby is coherent and he has said he is not damaged from the ring. I would say most people would say George Foreman has not suffered major damage from the ring but would George Foreman show no damage at all? Maybe some damage would show up but he is still together mentally and I would say the same thing about Bobby. My point is that when people think about punch drunk fighters, they don't usually think about Foreman falling into that catagory and that any inclusion of Bobby Quarry into that group is unwarranted or pre-mature. I hope the latter is not the case.

Of course I am not around him often but from what I have seen, he is functioning well mentally. Would I recommend Bobby going back into the ring? No way, given that his family has a history of being damaged in the ring. Why tempt fate? But I would also not recommend that Jonathan Quarry, Jerry's youngest son, not go into the ring for the same reason even though Jonathan is a big strapping young man who seems to be the most likely candidate to carry on the Quarry legacy in the ring. Jonathan, of course would show no damage from the ring as he has not, as far as I know, ever boxed.

Recently Bobby and Jack Quarry, the father of the Quarry clan, were interviewed by a man from New York who posted here asking how he could get in touch of Bobby. I got him in touch with Bobby and helped set up the interview. I think this man, who's name escapes me without scrolling down through the posts, would verify that Bobby does not seem damaged. Apparently this man is a free lance journalist and he is looking for a magazine to publish the article. Several years ago, about the time that TJQF started, this man also interviewed James Quarry. I think it is the interview that appeared in Ring magazine and/or People magazine.

I know some people are not going to agree with this statement, but I think w/ one clean shot Jerry hit harder than Frazier. Frazier could be hurt, I think Ali would have stopped him in their 2nd fight had the referee Perez not interfered. |
Regarding your question about fighters ability to take punches, I always thought the skull and how the brain is encased in it was key to how well a fighter takes a punch. A skull with certain thickness and perhaps some other component that cushions the brain has always been my hunch as to that. Consider how different locations on the head when hit effect a fighter i.e. a temple hit where skull is very thin usually causes balance problems (so perhaps a thicker skull in that area would make brain safer), a chin hit probably most likely to knock out fighter because of direct non cushioned impact to whole brain (its known that a mouthpiece helps absorb impact so maybe some fighters have bone structure in jaw region that either absorbs impact or doesn't transmit force directly to the brain).Abount fighters having a diminished ability to take a punch over time, i think they do become more vulnerable with age both from the "brain" angle and losing reflexs to defend from punches. Its well known the effects of trauma on the brain is cumulative so it would seem to follow that the brain would be more sensitive over time.Having said that, its hard to judge when this change is going on, because I think certain fighters hit in a certain way that somefighters are sensitive to and some are not. An example: Jimmy Ellis knocked Bonavena down and hurt him badly and Ellis was a blown up middle weight. Joe Frazier hit Oscar with everything but a sledge hammer and never dropped him. On the other hand Ellis hit Frazier as hard as he could and Joe laughed at him.Also you got to consider that fighters are human like everyone else and just might be having a bad night. As far as Foreman beating a younger Frazier I think Frazier was made to order for Big George...he'd beat him 10 out of 10 times. I have a question for the board if anyone cares to answer..would you let your son (or daughter now) compete in boxing on either an amateur or professional level? If not what would you say to try to dissuade them? | 9/8/03 11:40:35

AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Kent - well, let's hope Robert remains free of problems, or perhaps finds another line of work? He isn't the fighter Jerry was anyway, is he? It really does seem as if the problems of the Quarry boys goes quite a ways towards proving that some genetic makeups have more of a tendency towards damage than others. Intensity of problems also seem to have been in synch with tenacity and longevity in their careers - Jerry's was the longest, most ferocious, and he had the most problems, followed by Mike, in a lighter division, with not the number of fights, not the same monster opponents, or as agressive a style, therefore ~fewer~ problems (though it seems he's had a fair amount of bad times too).Paul - in his prime, I don't think there were many guys ever who hit as hard as Frazier, though in his case, this was not the last thing to leave him, as is usually the case. Whereas Foreman continued to club people into submission in his second career, he was much slower (and fatter, which could have been a lot of the reason for the slowdown). Frazier, on the other hand, in his last fight against a punching bag named Jumbo Cummings, still had most of the nifty footwork, the fast bobs and weaves, and was just as hard to hit, but his punches had lost a lot of their smoke. He hit Cummings flush (not hard to do) several times, with little effect.Ed - there's not a lot of difference between a "thick" and a "thin" skull, though I suppose certain unknown structures could have an effect in making a fighter durable. I think the psychological component is huge, but I also think there may be a lot of brain chemistry factors - which we don't completely understand yet - at work. I also think as the brain is repeatedly damaged, little by little, it becomes less able to handle anything, from normal functioning, to trauma. Even though the physiology is different, it would be something like part of the heart muscle dying after a heart attack, and the heart not being quite as strong, depending on the severity of the attack. I still think the Frazier of '71 would have taken George, but you could be right too. Joe wasn't going to change his spots much on what had always worked for him. He'd ravaged so many opponents up till the time he fought Foreman, that I think he believed he was invincible. It's possible that the fierce beating Ali gave him, even though he lost, could have rendered JF less able to cope with future beatings, and shots to the head. He stood up well in Manila though, succumbing more to facial swelling than to Ali's punches, per se. Blind that he was in his left eye, it's possible that Ali could have put him down in the 15th, with a right Frazier never would have seen. Some rumors say Ali wouldn't have come out for the fifteenth, but I don't believe that. As demolished as both were at that point, it could have almost hinged on luck. Would Ali have landed one too many rights, or would Frazier's left have gotten through one more time? Whichever happened could have determined things in a final round that never was.Some good comments on Joe Frazier, whose physical stature, like Marciano, would determine what type of fighter he would become. Joe was very savvy in the ring, very tough, and and came forward with a lot of intensity, a huge puncher. Jerry loved a good fight also, of course, but could have boxed Joe better and had a real chance to defeat him, instead of giving Joe two great bouts. Even in watching JQ against Chuvalo, he could not just box an opponent and take the easier road. A puncher brought out the fight in him and he would trade with him rather than box and counterpunch, you couldn't do that with Joe, unless you were a punching mountain like Foreman. Even though George was clearly better in his matchup with Joe, I still prefer Joe to George all-time, especially when Joe's bouts with Ali are considered. I don't think Foreman could have challenged Ali to that degree. Of course, I'm glad to hear Mike and Robert are doing well. I'd wish nothing else for any ex-boxer. This talk of skull compression and MRIs only again goes to boxing's loud need for some type of head gear or protection. Since boxing is clearly not going to go away, as some have wished, something or some organization needs to step up and care what happens to former and current boxers. Football players have helmuts, hockey goalies have masks, even baseball hitters have helmuts. When does the boxer get something?Re head guards: these are somewhat effective, but still won't protect against torqueing, collision injuries. Beyond that, as I commented to someone in email, I wonder about boxing fans. Most say they like to see skill, but do they really, totally? A skillful fight is great, but fight fans like Manilas too. How many would take two really sharp guys putting on a brilliant display of boxing, all padded up, as opposed to a Foreman-Lyle, or Thrilla? I agree that most people, even fans of the real "science" want to see smashmouth boxing with headshots and KOs. But I have to tell you, back in the 70's, as a young fan, I loved watching Jimmy Young and Eddie Gregory (later, Eddie Mustafa Muhammad) take opponents to school on crafty boxing, defense, counter punching, and scoring heavily with relatively light hitting, but lots of piling up the points. For example, watching Young outbox Foreman was amazing. And I watched Eddie Gregory pitch shutouts, winning just about every round by pure boxing technique.But the caveman in me loves watching someone like Foreman plow through an opponent, intimidate them and drop them in two rounds. It's why Tyson's fights were so compelling. I have to say, Michael Spinks was beaten before the bell started the fight. If you watch that "fight" (all one minute of it), Tyson knocked Spinks out with punches that weren't as destructive as other people hit Spinks with, and certainly far fewer clean punches than Holmes or Cooney landed on Spinks. But the fact of the matter is that Spinks was scared to death of Tyson and in my mind, took a knee early to avoid being pounded out.Also, before we ban boxing, we should take a closer look at the "Tough Man" competitions. Has anyone heard of the recent case in Florida where a 31 year old woman (mother of two) was killed in a match? The girl she was fighting was I think younger and more athletic (even though she was lighter weight). Anyway, I didn't see the fight, but heard about it on two different radio programs. Apparently, it was a total mismatch and lasted into the third round. The lady was being hit by brutal punches to the head, even turned around and tried to run from the attack but the other woman followed her and hit her from behind, very hard. She collapsed and later died.Several men have also been killed in these competitions, because the matches are lopsided and not regulated safely. It bothers me that the line blurs and good boxing is lumped together with sideshows like the toughman contests. I have to admit to watching one on TV---and it was like a train wreck---you know you shouldn't look but you can't help being interested. |
| Have to disagree with you ,Road'ette. Jerry clearly, to me at least, was a better boxer than Joe, and his combination of aggressive counterpunching and slugging had Joe behind early in both fights. He made Joe pick it up a gear and put the less-conditioned Quarry away in fight I. A wicked body shot badly hurt Jerry in fight II, or Jerry would have had a chance to win by boxing Joe, who he hit often. Don't agree Jerry was better boxer than Ali, especially defensively. I do think Jerry was actually a better athlete, as his 'Superstars' performances indicate. Ali had a birth defect in his left foot, which hindered him not at all in the ring, but kept out of other sports, I believe. Guys, can you confirm this for me?|
| Both Joe Frazier and Earnie Shavers reached the peak of their careers in 1971. A fight between these two guys, in that year, would have been a war ! The winner ? It's hard to decide but... I have to say Joe !|
| I think Shavers reached his peak much later than 1971---probably around 1977 or even later. He became a more patient fighter, better conditioned to be effective later into a fight and able to pace himself. He also overcame management problems and fought with more determination. In 1971, I think Shavers was more of a brawler/raw puncher with very limited technique.By the mid to late 70's, he was much more focused and experienced. In a 1971 fight, Frazier would win by middle round TKO because Earnie would run out of gas. But a 1971 Frazier vs. a 1977 Shavers might be more interesting. I could see Shavers being much more selective with his punches, waiting for openings that would allow for bombs to land on Frazier. I still would have to pick Frazier to pull it out, but with significantly more problems. But as in any Earnie Shavers bout, he'd have a punchers chance. If he managed to connect hard on Frazier like Foreman did, you never know how it would have played out. I think Foreman was much more relentless. After the first knockdown of Frazier, he became a killer and started bouncing Joe around the ring. I'm not so sure Shavers could make it look so easy.

Have to disagree with you, Road'ette. Jerry clearly, to me at least, was a better boxer than Joe, and his combination of aggressive counterpunching and slugging had Joe behind early in both fights. I think Jerry was a more complete fighter than Joe (and Ali), though not better in the ring, fighting. Practice of fundamentals vs execution, IOW. Quarry did everything right fundamentally. Can anyone find a flaw in his skills? I do see Frazier as the harder puncher, and he was faster. His jooka-jooka, grinding, give a punch, bob a punch, slip a punch, whap a punch was a style like the word "boxing" sounds. Frazier rarely won early rounds (which would have been Mike Tyson's best, and probably only chance to take him). Quarry forced Joe to shift into high gear in the first round of their first fight, one that Jerry won anyway. He made Joe pick it up a gear and put the less-conditioned Quarry away in fight I. A wicked body shot badly hurt Jerry in fight II, or Jerry would have had a chance to win by boxing Joe, who he hit often. I dunno about that. By the time of the body punch, Frazier had clicked into that deadly rhythm, and it wasn't too long after that that Joe actually backed away from JQ, waiting for the uncertain Joe Louis to stop the fight, which people in the crowd were yelling for him to do. Frazier took Quarry seriously, but I think this would have always turned out, in ten times, with about the same results as Frazier-Foreman. Don't agree Jerry was better boxer than Ali, especially defensively. Ali had better native physical talent, but not considering that, I think on a neutral checklist of what each did right and what they did wrong, Quarry would have come out ahead. He just couldn't execute on the same level Ali could. A fighter with less talent than Ali would have found himself in real trouble, and often. I do think Jerry was actually a better athlete, as his 'Superstars' performances indicate. Ali had a birth defect in his left foot, which hindered him not at all in the ring, but kept out of other sports, I believe. Guys, can you confirm this for me? I never knew that about his foot. I read once that Knicks players were impressed by Ali's natural physical giftedness. I don't think Ali ever did anything else, though I think he would have been good at most sports he dedicated himself to to the degree that he did boxing. My husband said the same was true with Frazier (who also did nothing else, sports-wise) in the Super Stars - he darned near drowned in the pool. Didn't Jerry play other sports? Bodies build up memories, and the more things a person does, the more well rounded they become - like the old saying about learning to ride a bicycle. You never forget how. Frazier vs Shavers? Joe, no question. Shavers had the Big One, but nothing else that could have competed on a level with the vast array of things Frazier would have brought to the fight. Jerry did have some flaws, technically. He held his hands too low at times and he also stood too upright for a short fighter in some of his fights. But it is true he had more skills than most of the general public thought he had. He was not just some brawler who only could go toe to toe and hope for the best. I don't agree that Foreman would beat Frazier ten out of ten times. Joe just got caught early and he never recovered in the first fight and in the second fight Joe was a shell of his former self. To have a chance to beat Foreman, a fighter would have to hit George hard early in the fight to gain George's respect. Joe, although he did land one left hook early the fight number one, never really connected good on Foreman. Both Ali and Ron Lyle hurt George and let him know he was in for a tough fight early in their fights with George. Yes George fought back hard in both of these fights but he knew he could be in danger himself and that did a lot towards Ali's victory and Lyle's near victory. If Frazier had hit Foreman with the kind of left hooks he hit Ali in the first Ali/Frazier fight or the hooks he hit Jerry and Jimmy Ellis in those fights, the fight with Foreman could have turned out differently or at least not as one sided. It could have very well been a two sided brawl with the winner hard to determine. After all, Lyle was a big hitter but was he really that much more of a slugger than Joe was at his best? If Lyle could hurt Foreman, than why not Joe? I don't think anyone can deny the fact that Joe hit very hard.

Kent's post made me stop to think about Foreman-Frazier in a different way. I'm one of the people that has said Foreman would beat Frazier 10 out of 10 times, and I based it on the total destruction of Frazier the first fight, and relative ease of Foreman's win in the return match. But as Kent pointed out, Frazier wasn't the same fighter by the time they met for the second time as his punches weren't as lethal and he was older. While Foreman pummeled Joe in the first fight, it doesn't mean that he could accomplish it time after time. I still believe that styles make fights, and Foreman had Frazier's number, but after rethinking it, I think Frazier was a great champion who would find a way to beat Foreman if the circumstances were right. As I recall, in the second fight, Joe put together one or two decent rounds, winning one of the rounds clearly. If he could have survived into the middle rounds (7,8,9) of a 15 round title bout in '72, he would have better stamina than Foreman and maybe stole the fight. I have to say though, in the first fight, whatever offense Frazier tried to generate was shaken off very easily by Foreman, who just kept blasting away. Foreman almost seemed annoyed that Frazier would dare think he could land punches against Big George.
not given enough credit for their overall physical strength. I'm not talking about punching power. I mean the kind of overall, leg, back, shoulder and arm strength that allowed Ali to clinch and hold with big fighters so that they couldn't get free. He could grab a fighter behind the neck, and pull his head and upper body parallel to the floor, and keep him there until the ref. broke it up. Many of his longer fights resulted in his opponent succumbing to exhausting and accumulative damage from his reportedly not very hard punches.

Angelo, in Foreman/Frazier 1 where was Frazier's offense? Except for one token left hook early in the first round, Frazier had no offense for Foreman to show disdain for as he was knocked down and badly hurt early in the round. In fact, I don't think Joe should have been allowed out of his corner for round two. No fight, even if for the heavyweight championship of the world, is worth getting killed for.

So we don't know if Foreman could have handled Joe's offense of not. I repeat, I still think if Lyle was capable of hurting Foreman and for that matter Ali was capable of hurting Foreman, than Frazier had the power to hurt Foreman too if given the chance. Foreman never let him in the fight.

Jerry did stay a bit erect a lot of the time. Frazier's bobbing and weaving wouldn't have been natural for him, but some of it wouldn't have hurt him. He seemed to do a decent job of keeping his hands up and in good position, with the exception of those times when he got really hot. On that subject, it's interesting that Frazier utilized one of the two main techniques boxers are taught when they're beginning, to keep their hands up. He'd tap his own head when his hands - more his right than his left - began to drift down. Joe was like Jerry in that respect - the hotter the pace, the lower his hands would go. Sometimes, only his arrhythmic bobbing and weaving kept a good counter from landing.

In his autobiography, Frazier says that he didn't feel right leading up to his fight with Foreman, whether from the high blood pressure, the heat, whatever. Possibly he was feeling some effects of his first fight with Ali. I don't think he looked in top shape, nor did I sense the usual intensity. Anything solid he landed on George was obviously not enough. I know lots of fighters make excuses, but Frazier never was one of those. He was about as un-crybaby as they come. During one of the many interviews after Manila, he issued one of the best tough guy remarks of all times. Asked if he was ever hurt, he replied, sincerely, "No, I wouldn't say that I was hurt. I just couldn't see the man!" Priceless!

When I said I thought Foreman could beat Frazier 10 out of 10 times I didn't mean to denigrate Joe Frazier. There's no question he's an all time great heavyweight champion. It's just that George was great at handling shorter fighters. He probably had the hardest jab of any heavy and Joe was just to easy to hit with it. Also he easily pushed Frazier back (illegal and was warned for it but its going to happen) to set up his bombs. The second fight where Frazier shaved his head for psych tactic, Joe's more defensive style only extended the fight a few rounds.

There were some fighters that Joe could beat and Foreman couldn't, such as Ali. I can't imagine Jimmy Young beating Frazier either. One other thing about Foreman, I think its safe to say no one will ever beat his record as oldest man to win heavyweight championship.

Why didn't Foreman use his jab against Ali'? That was a big mistake! If he had won that fight, now I would be remembered as the greatest heavyweight of all times (after Carnera, Damiani and Erminio Spalla, of course...). Anyway, I rank him in the top 3 ever.

A great big man is gonna beat a great little man every time. Give me an example of where I'm wrong. Remember I said a GREAT big man and a Great little man. Example was Foreman/Frazier, two great fighters.

I have an example in mind: Sam Langford was great and beat many great fighters like George Godfrey, Sam McVey etc. Of course, it was a lot of time ago! Mike Tyson (great? Bah, probably...) could be another example! Anyway, your rule is true very often!

Well, it's a bizarre theory if you think about it: When a little man beats a big man, suddenly, the big man goes from being great to just good. If the big man wins, it's a case of great big man beats great little man. If the little man wins, the big man's reputation is tarnished, and then you say that the big man might not have been so great after all! I always thought Jess Willard was a respected Champion, until Jack Demsey (little man) cleaned his clock---then Willard wasn't so great anymore!

On another topic, we always talk about the great heavyweights of the 70's. One very good and underrated fighter of the 80's was Tim Witherspoon. He's a "would have been, could have been/should have been" if ever there was one. I always thought he had sweet boxing moves and a good, solid punch and also, he seemed to come into his fights in very fine condition. I don't know why he didn't get the matches that would have positioned him to be a dominant fighter of his era. I've read and heard that Don King blackballed him, but who really knows? Also, I'm no Don King defender, but you have to hand it to him: He promoted most of the great fights we talk about, he promoted one of the highest grossing concert tours of its time and he's managed to beat the rap whenever he's been in trouble. In short, for all the things everyone says he's doing wrong, he must be doing something right to always end up in the right place at the right time.

I have a copy (poor quality, but a copy nonetheless) of Sonny Liston vs. Chuck Wepner. It took place in 1970. Does anyone know if this was Liston's last fight?

Don King is an example with what is wrong with America. That money can sometimes buy anything, even freedom from jail. King, years ago, beat a man to death for 600 dollars. King was a loan shark and the man owed him the money. King, by the way, outweighed the man by 100 pounds. He was originally charged with second degree murder but the charge somehow was downgraded to manslaughter. He served 2 years and he was suddenly pardoned by the outgoing governor of, I believe, Ohio. So King killed a man for "blood" money and it is now not part of his record. Were there payoffs involved? I don't know for sure but I think there very well might have been. ONLY IN AMERICA, HUH DON?! reach out of the grass and grab an athlete at any time, and remind him that he's begun to turn into an ordinary man. Holyfield's been fighting pro almost 20 years, and some began to decline a decade earlier than EH's age now.Toney is a real puncher, and is skillful and quick too, not just some plodding dummy who can knock something down only if it stands still.I'll go with Holyfield, whom I place in the top ten of all time great heavyweights. He'll be in shape, he'll have a good plan, Toney can't show anything Evander hasn't seen, and unless the monkey is the fourth man in the ring, he should win.|
compared to this guy you mention. The biggest bouncer I ever saw was one at a place called Mother's in the club district in Chicago - he was 6'8" and weighed close to 300. I read where Andre the Giant once drank 124 beers in one night, and could pick up the back end of a car. Even he's smaller than your man! LOL!|

Don't exaggerate! That were just 117 cases! I advice you to look at the Calvin Lane.com. There is a photo with Lane and Shaq! I would sell my mother to know how tall was Andre the Giant exactly and I love my mother very much! They say he was 7'4" but I can't believe... What's your opinion about ?|

Both Foreman and Tyson fought Holyfield. Foreman, against a 1991 version of Holyfield, better than Tyson, against a 1996 version of Holyfield. This is worthy of attention! Foreman is bigger than Tyson, is more powerful, has a better jab! Maybe even Foreman II was better than Tyson (Tyson after jail), Foreman I would have destroyed Tyson in 2 rounds, in my opinion! May you go into that story of Liston taking 5 person in the street? I'm a Liston fan and this is very exciting to me.

| 9/11/03 03:11:35 PM | Gerry Schultz | Cleveland, Ohio | jgschultz21@msn.com | Massimo, I do not give Holyfield credit for beating Tyson. He deliberately headbutted him in both fights, he also got away with an amazing amount of clinching. Tyson, who is arguably boxing's all-time villain, was the champ no one wanted, Holyfield buffalocked a lot of people into thinking he was the "Real Deal". But he was not a good enough boxer to beat Tyson, he had to cheat. Tyson realized no one would call a fair match for him in that second fight and took matters in his own hands (teeth) to defend himself. Do not agree Foreman's power was better than Tyson. If a 1973 Foreman met a 1987 Tyson, the quicker Tyson would knock the defensively-poorer Foreman out. Holyfield, who won the title when a 246-pound Buster Douglas took a dive, will always be overrated to me, though he was an outstanding fighter. A match at 200 lbs. between him and JQ would, to me, be a very interesting match.

| 9/11/03 03:17:20 PM | John Gerard | NYC | rock289z@yahoo.com | MORE ON LISTON: I remember reading that Ali recently said that Liston was the scariest guy he ever fought.

| 9/11/03 03:27:21 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadsholarette@hotmail.com | Massimo - I'll do some research and see if I can find out any more on that business with the five guys in the street. It was part of an article I read years ago about Sonny, when he "worked" for the unions. While I doubt any of the guys he took were wearing gay pride buttons, at the same time, a man with Liston's size, athletic ability, and devastating punch, could have taken them one-five, one punch each, when he landed.

| 9/11/03 04:29:51 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | Roadscholarette: Your musings on Liston remind us what a force he was. It also reaffirms Ali's greatness---handling Liston's powerful style in the first fight. Liston was the odds-on favorite and had the killer reputation, but when they got in the ring, it's funny how Clay looked so much younger, leaner, faster and even stronger. He made Sonny look like an over the hill old man, and I don't think that was the case. In a way, it reminds me, on some level, of how Buster Douglas shattered the Tyson mystique. Douglas was bigger, heavier and his jab just kept pounding on Tyson. Tyson did hurt him, but it was a bump in the road and Douglas picked back up on dismantling Tyson. It was another case of a bully meeting someone who wasn't afraid to mix it up. That Liston-Wepner match is interesting to watch. It doesn't have sound and it's an old black and white film. Looks like it was shot Super 8 or something. Wepner wasn't a quality opponent I admit---but Liston still showed that he had something left. It's amazing to me that Liston, by 1970, could still fight on that level. I never saw the Leotis Martin fight---how bad did Liston look? I wonder how a 1969-70 Liston-Frazier match would have turned out? Liston could still hit hard.

| 9/11/03 04:50:48 PM | Massimo | Rome | gg | Thanks RS, but don't worry for Liston's story...Andre's height is more important (ah! ah!)! Calvin Lane is lucky that Dallas is so far from Rome...If not I 'd go there with my 5'6" 128 lbs giant body to smash his face! Everybody keep saying how big Calvin Lane is... That sucker is nothing! I'm too fast for him! Ali' clinched often against Frazier (especially in the second fight) and Foreman and he is ranked among the best ever...

| 9/11/03 05:00:21 PM | Gerry | NYC | gerry333@msn.com | There wasn't a single moment in the two Holyfield-Tyson fights in which it seems to me Tyson could hurt Holyfield. Thanks!
I never watched the Liston-Martin fight but i have read the comment in this site...Liston was dominating the fight, winning almost all the rounds but suddenly...Took a great one-two combination to the jaw !

Liston was a victim of his own success. He had 3 1 round k o's going into the Clay fight and everyone had him listed as the greatest ever, especially after the second ko of Patterson. Patterson of course was a sheltered fighter and a nice guy but he never gave the contenders of his era a chance. Zora Folley, Cleveland Williams, Eddie Machen among others never got a chance at Floyd. So against Liston he folded quickly. So you have a heavyweight champion that literally tore the division apart, K O'd Cleveland Williams after taking everything Williams could throw, and Williams was considered the hardest hitter of that era, went though a prime Zora Folley like nothing, made Eddie Machen run for 12 rounds which showed Liston had legs for a long fight then he ko's the champ in 1 round twice. Liston also had the tools of a great champion, his best tool was his 84 inch reach on a 6'1 frame. He could boom his jab out of nowhere and take a fighter out with it.

Meanwhile Ali has a very close fight with Doug Jones that Liston watched and came away with the opinion that he'd be another easy match for him. So Liston goes into the fight over confident (and ageing, many think he was much older then his listed age of 32...he had no birth certificate) against a fighter just coming into his prime, and Liston gets beaten...it makes Clay a superstar and sets him up as a hero for that generation. Could a slightly younger and better trained Liston beat Ali? My guess is probably not, because although Liston had great boxing tools he lacked the 1 thing needed to beat Ali...great speed.
MORE ON LISTON: I saw the Liston-Leotis Martin fight and Liston was winning up until he got kayoed. Liston even scored a knockdown earlier in the fight. Liston reached his prime way before he even became champion. If you ever see films of him against Williams or Nino Valdez you would see what I mean. Liston was the prototype of today's big heavyweight who also has skills. Patterson represented the previous generation of smaller heavies who weighed under 200 lbs and came up short when the two eras met. REGARDING Patterson-Bonavena- I saw the fight live and scored it a draw. Bonavena was still having trouble with his left hand which had been operated on twice.

REGARDING PATTERSON-BONAVENA- I saw the fight live and scored it a draw. Bonavena was still having trouble with his left hand which had been operated on twice.

REGARDING PATTERSON-BONAVENA- I saw the fight live and scored it a draw. Bonavena was still having trouble with his left hand which had been operated on twice.

REGARDING PATTERSON-BONAVENA- I saw the fight live and scored it a draw. Bonavena was still having trouble with his left hand which had been operated on twice.

REGARDING PATTERSON-BONAVENA- I saw the fight live and scored it a draw. Bonavena was still having trouble with his left hand which had been operated on twice.

REGARDING PATTERSON-BONAVENA- I saw the fight live and scored it a draw. Bonavena was still having trouble with his left hand which had been operated on twice.

REGARDING PATTERSON-BONAVENA- I saw the fight live and scored it a draw. Bonavena was still having trouble with his left hand which had been operated on twice.

REGARDING PATTERSON-BONAVENA- I saw the fight live and scored it a draw. Bonavena was still having trouble with his left hand which had been operated on twice.
As a lifelong Ali fan, my heart tells me that he indeed hit Liston with the "Phantom" punch in that second fight, that landed flush on the buzzer and KOed Liston. But my MIND tells me that Sonny might have taken a dive. I'm not saying Ali was in on it, but maybe Sonny was paid off or threatened--or didn't think he could overcome Ali's speed and youth and didn't want to take another beating. He took a legitimate punch, but only one, and took a dive. I simply don't see how this punch could have really KOed a guy like Liston--super tough and willing to mix it up with anyone. On the topic of Teo Stevenson of Cuba: He might have DEVELOPED into a good pro had he been able to go that route--but at his very best as an amateur, even in Cuba where he trained like a pro and was treated like one, he would be walked over by most Top 10 pro heavyweight fighters of his era. People were so impressed that he KOed Bobick and Tate, but these guys weren't even pros at the time. You put Teo at his best in with a guy like Foreman or Mike Tyson and he'd be knocked out in one round. Frazier, Quarry, Shavers, Lyle, Ali, Ellis, the list goes on and on. These guys would make him look silly. You don't spend your life training for 3 rounds against 18-20 year old amateurs then step in against an Earnie Shavers in his mid-late 20's, who has had 50+ pro fights and ended most by KO. And Shavers isn't even at the top of my list.

Hey, R.S. your depiction of a bully is very accurate. The old idea of a bully just needing to be stood up to is why we are having shootings in schools. Inside the ring, there are no bullies. Both men enter the ring willingly. Both men are trained, professional fighters. That's a far cry from being threatened or physically abused by someone much larger and stronger than yourself. Outside the ring, telling a kid who's 5'6" tall and weighs in at 135 lbs. to just "stand up to the bully", who's 6' tall and 185 lbs, is asking to get your kid sent to the hospital! Their are some very real, large, strong, mean, possibly psychopathic people out there, but not many in pro sports. Although Warren Sapp does spring to mind.

Supposedly, Liston said he was just doing what he was told, re the Ali fights. The second one was pretty bad, almost as bad as Jack Johnson (against Jeffries) shading his eyes with his gloves, then getting up when the count reached 10. I've seen slow mo that does indicate that Ali made contact with a very short, and I think weak, punch. However, I've seen other fighters staggered by very short punches that didn't look like much on replay. Look at Ali-Frazier 1. The punch in the 15th round came from down home, and Ali was up immediately, and fighting back hard at the end of the round. In the 11th though, when he was reeling around like a guy ready to fall off a surfboard, he was hit with two real short, and spaced out blows, to start things off.Who knows if those fights were fixed? If we assume they were though, wouldn't we have to assume a lot more, possibly all were? Not that I don't think a fight's never been crooked, but it'd be hard to take any of them seriously and enjoy the sport at all once we started down that road.

I think Liston was hit with a good punch in the second Ali fight but he wasn't hurt that badly. Jersey Joe Walcott did a poor job of refereeing and he didn't send Ali to the neutral corner. Next, Walcott leaves the fighters to check with the time keeper to see what the count was and the fighters start fighting again. What Walcott should have done is insist Ali go to a corner and not start the count until Ali obeyed. I think Liston stayed down because Ali was acting like a nut and Walcott didn't have control over Ali, that Liston wasn't sure if Ali would hit him while he was down or not. It is when Walcott returns to the fighters that he signals Liston had been down for more than ten seconds and the fight is over. My point is, if Walcott had control of the ring like a good...
referee is supposed to, Liston would have gotten up before the count of ten and the fight would have continued. |

Hey, R.S. your depiction of a bully is very accurate. The old idea of a bully just needing to be stood up to is why we we are having shootings in schools. Yes, and this is why I have reservations about kids and martial arts. If the child needs this because of unwillingness to fight, then it isn’t going to help. If it’s because of a size difference, size is wayy more deciding in kids than it is in grown men, so martial arts may help, or not, but quite likely not. I think martial arts can have the potential for getting a kid in a situation he’s unsuited to handle (even then). Inside the ring, there are no bullies. Both men enter the ring willingly. Both men are trained, professional fighters. That’s true. Even in one sided contests, Ali was not a bully to beat up Wepner, Holmes for doing the same to Cobb, Frazier to Daniels, of Foreman to those five lumberjacks he fought on one night. There are cases where fighters are bullies in real life, but this is rare, and much rarer than for the population at large. Most fighters are very sweet, nice guys away from the ring. They sure have nothing to prove, unlike a guy in the street who might. Their are some very real, large, strong, mean, possibly psychopathic people out there, but not many in pro sports. Although Warren Sapp does Such had better cool it. The football field has many ways of dealing with hotdogs and guys who go around talking about how bad they are. Look at what happened to Fred Williamson and Brian Bosworth, among others. The real tough ones let their performance do their talking for them, just as in the ring.

Entertaining that the training scenes were in the Rocky movies, most fighters wouldn’t do a lot of the things shown, some very silly, such as chasing a chicken. Ali commented that the only chickens he ever saw in his camp were on the dinner table! :-) However, the weight training does go on now, more and more. The old myth that  weight training will make a fighter “muscle bound and slow” is finally starting to die out. As an adjunct to boxing specific training, weights will strengthen a fighter, build endurance and cardiovascular capacity, and do nothing to affect flexibility. I’ve asked people who saw these competitions, but no one knows what Frazier and Quarry pressed (actually more of a clean and jerk). As a minimum, the NFL likes a man to be able to bench press his body weight at least 10 times, and most can go way beyond this. The football players always won this event of course, given their size and the brutal weightlifting programs all players take part in. However, if this is true that Joe and Jerry put up 220 and 200, this is very impressive. First, it’s about what they weighed, and second, weights weren’t the biggest part of their training. BTW, does anyone know why Ali had a doctor, Ferdie Pacheco, in his camp? No other fighter did this. Did he have medical problems we know nothing about? Was he on prescription drugs? I know he shot up his hands with novocain, but I wonder if there was more? This just seems odd, is all. | 9/12/03 06:02:22 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|R.S. You haven't taken up the potential discussion on women's boxing. What do you think of my archaic way of thinking? You sound to inteligent to truly enjoy getting punched in the face as a form of stress manegment. I may seem like an old fart to you, but I would much rather see superior woman athletes participating in tennis, soccer, track and field, baseball, gymnastics, and any other sport the beautiful female form can excell at. Just please not boxing! I just don't wan't to watch women, pretty or not pretty, get punched. Don't you think this exhibitionism will weaken the effort to curtail violence towards women? | 9/12/03 08:13:03 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|R.S. Finally, a subject I do know a little something about. A 200LB., EVEN A CLEAN AND JERK, would still translate into about a 250-275lb. bench press. Any bodyweight "standing press", NOT a jerk movement, shows phenomenal upper body strenth. I saw the superstar competitions. I just don't remember them very clearly. I do, however, remember Quarry I think winning the home run hitting contest. You know, I can't help thinking, how wonderful life must have been for him at that time. | 9/12/03 10:32:03 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Steve - My remark about it actually being more of a clean and jerk may have seemed to dilute and minimize the lifts, but really wasn't meant to. There isn't any doubt both guys were remarkably strong. What would they have been like if they lifted like football players do? Wow! I could see Quarry winning the homerun contest. He wasn't as fast as Ali, but that doesn't mean he wasn't fast, especially when compared to ordinary people, and my guess is that this same giftedness translated into swinging a bat. I've seen a lot of real power hitters in softball who have little buggy whip arms, but they strike out like snakes, with every bit as much snap as a crisp puncher. I sent you an email about female boxing, but I'll put some of the ideas out here too. I've sparred before, to get the full range of my favorite sport (and probably to prove something too!) looking like the Michelin man, I was so padded, and I don't do real well when hit. I become furious, and lose my cool, and I wouldn't do it professionally unless I could make a ~lot~ of money, which will come the way of a small minority of the girls with great talent, names, via pay per view. For peanuts, the soreness and headaches aren't worth it. The good women boxers were most likely talented in other sports, some are looking for excitement, equality, money, are proving something to themselves or someone else, are mean, are doing it to please someone, or for reasons we can only guess at. Actually, other than equality, these are the main reasons men fight. They'll never attain the same status as the men because of part of the reason so many people watch boxing - the "Manila factor" - and the accolades women receive will be accompanied by the bitter, implied, "for a girl" qualifiers. Fights will be stopped sooner, which will infuriate the women, and the PR will be horrific when punchy women start appearing, or pre-fight pretty faces appear in sports pages looking like they fought ~Muhammed~ Ali, rather than Laila. It's a sport that won't go away, but will never attain more than cult status, and this will be because of the gender of the participants.  | 9/13/03 01:34:42 AM|Ed|Cicero n y||Mooseygoop@aol.com||||10|Massimo: Concerning Floyd Patterson...Yes he did loosen up and fight better fighters after he lost his title...part of his problem was an overly protective Cus D'Amato (of Mike Tyson fame). He knew Floyds limitations and managed him accordingly. Floyd actually defended his title against a guy who was fighting his first professional fight (and got knocked down), Pete Rademacher. He totally log jammed the division for about 3 years, won title in 1956 and didn't fight top fighter till 1959 and lost (Ingo Johansson). RS Jack Johnson was shading his eyes after going down against Jess Willard not Jim Jefferies...it was a scorching hot day in Cuba that day I was there! lol Just kidding about that part.About second Ali/Liston fight...it might have been a dive by Sonny but consider this...Liston was hit coming in early in fight and not warmed up at all...it looked fake and i think Sonny could have done better job and have made it look real if the fix was in...Liston was on his feet and fighting when Walcott stopped fight...and Ali alwasys seemed to have magic in his right hand.| 9/13/03 01:36:03 AM|Wendell Carruthers|Oakland, CA||chick18f662@aol.com||||10|Oscar De La Hoya over Shane Mosley tomorrow by 8th round KO. | 9/13/03 02:06:36 AM|J Macias|Pico Union, LA C/S OG||jmacias18ST@aol.com||||6|OSCAR IN ! ! ! ! ! ! ! MOSLEY ES UNA PUTA!!!!!!| 9/13/03 02:20:44 AM|Tomato Can Dan|Oberlin, Ohio||jttruax59@aol.com||||10|I don't think so, J. Shane beat your man last time in a close fight. Shane is younger and thirsting for greater recognition. The hungrier fighter usually wins, when the matchup is pretty equal. Oscar is a little past his prime. I see an action fight, maybe a war, probably Mosley coming out on top, likely a late TKO or decision. Two excellent fighters. Could even be a dead heat. Shane says I'm a better boxer than Oscar. We'll see. || 9/13/03 02:35:52 AM|Bruno Celia|Paterson, NJ||celiab57@yahoo.com||||10|Not so fast. Don't underestimate Oscar. He's way smarter than most fighters, even most champions. Their last fight was an upset where Shane operated above his head. Oscar scored all night with his left hook off the jab and manhandled Shane at least in the middle rounds. Shane tends to punch himself out and takes too many punches coming in. No one fighting in 2003 is as patient as Oscar, who waits for his pitch like Ted Williams. Better killer instinct, too, and never beats himself emotionally. Mosley is no whore but I have to go along with J Macias -- Oscar maybe in the middle rounds, probably a stop. I'll be at the fight in the nosebleed section. || 9/13/03 05:56:02 AM|Massimo|Rome||gg||||10|ABOUT STEVENSON: Francesco Damiani beat Teofilo Stevenson in Monaco in May 1982. Damiani was fat, but was a good boxer.He was unlucky against Ray Mercer in 1991. Who is better between Damiani and Carnera, in your opinion. I have a matchup for you: Joe Frazier vs Vitali Klitschko prime vs prime|| 9/13/03 05:56:18 AM|Massimo|Rome||gg||||10|ABOUT STEVENSON: Francesco Damiani beat Teofilo Stevenson in Monaco in May 1982. Damiani was fat, but was a good boxer.He was unlucky against Ray Mercer in 1991. Who is better between Damiani and Carnera, in your opinion? I have a matchup for you: Joe Frazier vs Vitali Klitschko prime vs prime|| 9/13/03 08:06:58 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Ed --Oh, good Lord, what a stupid mistake! Blush. I knew it was Willard, but my mind was distractedly thinking White Hope, which Jeffires got saddled with.I think a dive in the second Liston was very possible, although what Angelo said about Liston being afraid of the "crazy" Ali standing over him shouting, is also
It's been a while but I'm happy to see the IJQ web site is still going strong. Irish Jerry meant a lot to me as a kid and now that I'm in my 50s it's great to see the response Jerry gets. I wastaking a look at some of the recent hits and the one on Smoking Joe and Klitschko (oops...) made me laugh. Joe wins big and early. My question is... what the heck was Corey Sanders doing during the 90s? I realized he liked to golf but this was one guy who should have had a piece of the heavyweight pie during that era. Too bad... I think it's too late for him now, but good luck anyways. Irish Jerry, you are still #1.

Patrick, the post Massimo made referred to Vitali Klitschko verses Frazier, not Wladimir Klitschko, who lost to Corrie Sanders of South Africa, not to be confused with American, Corey Sanders (kind of confusing after all!).Vitali Klitschko, although probably not as good skillwise as his brother Wladimir, showed he could take a good punch against Lennox Lewis while Wladimir crumbled against Sanders.I would still pick Smokin Joe over Vitali, by decision.I did a series of articles for websites Eastside Boxing and Heavyweight News featuring hypothetical bouts between Wladimir Klitschko versus the all time greats. I haven't finished the series of articles, the last one would have featured Wladimir verses Ali, because the Sanders fight changed my perception of Wladimir. Before this fight, I had Frazier winning a split decision over Wladimir K but I would probably revise that to Joe by KO after seeing Wladimir kayoed in two rounds by Sanders. Funny, how before the Sanders verses W. Klitschko fight, everyone thought W. Klitschko was the best thing to come along in a long time but after this fight, some of the readers of my Klitschko verses the greats articles gave me a hard time for suggesting Wladimir could hang with the greats. In the series, I had Wladimir defeating Dempsey by 8th round TKO, Louis by decision over Wladimir, Wladimir by decision over Marciano, Frazier by split decision over Wladimir and Foreman over Wladimir by 6th round KO. I was going to have Ali winning by decision over Wladimir but I never wrote the article.In each case, the fictional fights were very competitive.
there are 3 or 4 guys who know Lorenzo Zanon !! Do you think Joe win comfortably against Vitali or by close decision ? Duncan, you are a genius, but Shaq is gonna dunk on your face ! Go Shaq go ! Go Lakers go ! Kent, who do you think was better between Shaq and Jabbar ? I know only the 42 years old version of Kareem and so, I can't judge him ! Thanks !
| 9/13/03 01:55:18 PM|Massimo|Rome||ghj|||10|Kent|I forgot ! I even saw a young Kareem losing against Bruce Lee ! But, in my opinion, this doesn't mean he was a bad basketball player . Bruce Lee was lucky that Calvin Lane wasn't still born in his times ! And I was 1 years old when he died, I little too young to beat him...|
| 9/13/03 02:18:16 PM|Massimo|Rome||gf|||10|Kent|--br>How tall was Andre' the Giant, in your opinion ? I'm picking up opinion about this fundamental question ! It's a life or death question for me ! If anybody has an opinion about I'm anxious to hear his opinion. I'll do a statistic, with Gaussian distribution ! They said he was 7'4" or 7'5"... Ah ! Ah! That's ridicolous !You should measure is dead body ! Was he taller than me ? I'm 5'6".|
| 9/13/03 09:25:31 PM|Steve|N.J.||drmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Hi,R.S.,I ,m sorry but I can't receive any personal E-Mails yet.I just set up a new computer.I have no idea what I'm doing. I hope your E-Mails to me weren't too nasty or threadening,as I am perfectly prepared to scurry of into internet oblivion and never post on this site again.|
| 9/14/03 12:11:32 AM|Steve|N. J.|dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|I, am personally grateful to the judge from Thailand,Kam Sun Tran, the judge from Thailand who ,I'm sure ,not only rendered a fair decision based on his expertise on American boxing, but also showed me that I am not qualified to make a guess based on a mere 55 yrs.of experience.|
| 9/14/03 10:40:45 AM|Massimo|Rome||fhg||10|Losing against Shane is not a shame !
| 9/14/03 06:09:17 PM|Massimo|Rome||hg|||10|I have just watched De la Hoya-Mosley and Rino Tommasi has De La Hoya 2 points ahead at the end of the fight. It was a good but not great fight. I'm a little disappointed.|
| 9/14/03 08:11:45 PM|charles anderson|ark.|ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|oscar was robbed big time!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!|
| 9/14/03 10:55:42 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|I was rooting for Shane Mosley to win but I don't believe he did, no matter what the judges said. Mosley gave away too many of the early rounds and even though he made a late charge, he appeared to fall short of gaining the win. Oscar De La Hoya was robbed of his titles!|
| 9/15/03 08:06:02 AM|Massimo|Rome||fhg|||10|I have read Clay completely dominated is fight against Alejandro Lavorante. Was that one of the best Clay's fights ? I was ( -10) years old at the time of that fight ! Did anyone watch that fight ? About De la Hoya-Mosley: It's so strange to me that all the judges scored in that way. It's a shame that hurts boxing badly... |
| 9/15/03 03:12:16 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|I read some reports on Mosley/De La Hoya fight this past Saturday that agreed with the decision based on Mosley landing more effective punches. While there were two or three occasions when Mosley stunned De La Hoya, these occasions were for just one punch. I understand the reasoning if De La Hoya was landing soft punches but he wasn't, he was landing hard punches of his own and more of them.Before the last round, I still thought Mosley had a chance if he pulled out the last round, but he didn't do. What happened to the days when a challenger had to come and take a title from a champion? In my opinion, Mosley didn't do this.|
| 9/15/03 05:09:06 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Women's Boxing : Roadscholarette can speak for herself, but my view is that women who are inclined toward maximum physical competition will continue to get into boxing. Like anything else, they've been kept out of the game (or kept themselves out) for generations. Now that some women are crossing the line/breaking the barrier so to speak, more of them will sign on. Many women take up boxing training for the physical conditioning, then actually spar out of curiosity. If the bug bites them, they’re into it just like men act on their interest in the sport. Seeing “pretty” women punch each other in the bouts doesn’t have any more of an affect on me than when the men mix it up. And if any of them are seriously injured, it’ll be just as tragic as when the guys go down. As for their ability, I’m sure Christy Martin and the better women boxers can take most inexperienced/non boxing men on this board, myself included.

PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Oscar said on Leno that if he lost to Mosley, he’d probably hang them up. He’s rich beyone imagination, has a nice home, wife, still has his senses, and he’s smart enough to know that all fighters finally hit that one bout that shows them that their fights are forever more going to be harder. They’re going to hate training more, miss more punches, get hit more, more of their fights are going to go the distance (against increasingly lesser opponents), and the losses are going to begin dribbling in. At this point, the reasons they tell themselves for why “this fight” wasn’t brilliant may be ~more~ brilliant than their performance ever will be again. Stay long enough, and they could wind up in a high school gym somewhere, going the slow, hard distance with the local barroom brawler.

PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Many women take up boxing training for the physical conditioning, then actually spar out of curiosity.

That's true. The training in boxing has it all. Jogging, situps, rope jumping, shadow boxing, the heavy and speed bags - cardio, flexibility, strength, speed/coordination, practicing all-body involving skills, and it doesn't take long either, compared to the amazing benefits. Burns calories like a furnace too. We do a lot of different things to stay fit, but I've always said that taking all forms of conditioning out there, if I could just do ~one~ that'd do it all, I'd punch the heavy bag. Everyone's got to be curious about sparring. Initial sessions aren't always revealing either - stories abound about future champions who felt foolish in their first experiences with sparring. It isn't as condition enhancing, but it's a lot harder - like they say, the bag doesn't hit back! And if any of them are seriously injured, it'll be just as tragic as when the guys go down.

That's true, but I think that with the man-woman double standard, busted up women will be generally viewed differently, don't you? Some of them are real feisty toughies, but still women. Some try to be like men in their demeanor, acting real tough, dropping g's when they talk, spitting, and swearing a blue streak, but most do not.

As for their ability, I'm sure Christy Martin and the better women boxers can take most inexperienced/non boxing men on this board, myself included.

The thing is that most people never face anyone else at all period, or if they have, neither have been in shape, neither know how to fight, or have any experience. Just those factors alone would put the average man at a disadvantage against a conditioned woman who knew how to throw punches, threw them in bunches, didn't tire, could stay away from a guy, and knew what to look for in the man's attempts. A genetically gifted, in shape, trained, and experienced woman would be the equal of Muhammad Ali at a similar stage. It's just that she wouldn't be as effective, because, well, she's a grrrl! My husband used to freak people out at parties when he'd say that he knew as much about shooting a basket as Michael Jordan, and how to throw a punch as Ali, Frazier, or Foreman. People looked at him like he was nuts, even when he offered the crucial qualifier that they simply did it better than he did, and he's right.
think the point is well taken---if a guy gets busted up in the ring, he's rugged/weathered and still appealing but if a woman gets busted up and scarred, they're not attractive to us! If I had a daughter, I'd rather see her sell Mary Kay than step in with Christy Martin but on the other hand, I wouldn't want a son to get battered by Lennox Lewis either!

On another topic, how good was Thad Spencer? I was too young to remember seeing him fight at the time, but from what I've heard, he was quite good. I read somewhere where boxing analysts thought he had all the tools to make it to a title fight, including an imposing physical stature and good fundamentals.

Some interesting comments on Liston. Like Tyson, a very used fighter with no choice but to play the game he was drawn into, it may have even got him killed. Ali-Liston 2 was a real retirement party for Sonny, who was treated as old hat. As weird as the bout was, it couldn't go any other way. Liston was highly favored in the first fight, was full of his own hype, and no one knew how good Ali really was yet, they hoped Liston would shut him up and send Ali away, Ali's mouth was the only reason the bout ever happened. I have Liston as top Ten all-time, just a brutal fighter, and better than Frazier. Massimo, Douglas's win over Tyson is arguably the greatest upset ever in heavyweight boxing, a lot had to happen. Tyson was lost without Cus D'Amato, Douglas was pumped by the passing of his mother. I think Carl The Truth may have briefly shown the formula for beating Tyson: height, a good jab, movement, but also a real punch. Under normal conditions, a sounder Tyson would have knocked the less-conditioned trial horse Douglas out easily. Also, Holyfield was scared silly of Tyson's power, which is why he clinched Tyson so much. The confused Tyson, awaiting the ref's help, could not fire back. Also to be fair, Foreman would undoubtedly have the power to KO Tyson, but again I have Tyson as better. Floyd Patterson was a great fighter, I know JQ respected him a great deal, just not a great heavyweight. I believe he won an Olympic Gold as a middleweight back in 1952, even 190 lbs. is a big climb from there, especially in an era before weightlifting. I believe at one time JQ was a baseball prospect. I wished Jerry had lifted a little so that he could better handle the size of Ali, Norton. Frazier is better than either Klitschko at this point, as for them meeting, it's a toss-up. Both could really swat, both would not be hard to hit, both could take a punch. It'd be messy. Mosely-De La Hoya may have gone the way it did for the betting, maybe some in boxing are tired of Oscar and want to bring him down a few pegs. Mosely had some telling punches, Oscar appeared out-box him, was certainly very close. Mosely, I believe, is 32 to Oscar's 30. Oscar, like Holyfield and Lewis, has every reason to retire, but will he see it? Odds are, no. Jerry Quarry had the same option a few times. Most boxers of Oscar's caliber can't get out of the ring until they absorb a good beating. Even Ali had to have one. Damiani was a good heavyweight, I have Carnera as Italy's #1 heavy. Gianfranco Rossi is another Italian fighter I've liked. My two cents, Kareem over Shaq all-time. But Kareem would have real problems with Shaq's size/strength. I have Kareem second only to Wilt. I'm not a Laker fan, rooting for their loaded club is like rooting for the Yankees, or Microsoft. Thanks.
Foreman would KO him very early. I think the only chance Tyson would have would be the same chance everyone had to beat Foreman: Somehow survive his early onslaught and vicious punches and take him into the middle or later rounds. If he got tired and punched out like he did in Zaire---and Tyson still had juice, Tyson could land the body and head shots to take him out. But it's a lot to ask. Here's an interesting one for everyone:

Who would win a Norton-Lennox Lewis bout? The easy answer is Lewis because he's held the title and he's an imposing size. But I don't know that he has the power or early finishing power (i.e. killer instinct) to put Norton out early. And as we saw in Norton's career, if he got into the rhythm of a fight, he seemed to get stronger each round and more fearless. What about Frazier-Lewis? For my money, Joe would smoke him out with a TKO. I could see Lewis starting strong against Frazier, but fading fast when Frazier started to hook to the body and if Frazier landed one of the booming hooks, he would take Lewis out.

I'm pretty high on Lennox Lewis. I wish he had met Tyson and Bowe in the early 90's to see who was the best of that group, I have all three better than Holyfield, though EH would/did give all three tremendous fights. Norton was a tough matchup for most because of his good size, speed/jab, and some real power also. Like Lewis, his weakness was taking the big punch. Tough call. I'll stick with Tyson over Foreman because of his speed/power package, but it's true he never faced a power guy like Foreman. It'd be a tremendous match, just like the Lewis matches you mention. As for Russell, he rates high all-time as the first great shot blocker/rebounder who changed the way team defense is played. Had no real offensive game at all, though, without Red Auerbach how great would he be? If he played for, say, Detroit back then, he'd be a remarkable all-star, not a lot more. The Celtics could have won titles with a number of guys at center they were so loaded. I do not rate him nearly as high as most do, I'd put him somewhere behind Shaq as a center, but ahead of him as a player because of what he contributed to the game. Mike Quarry was such a gentleman. There was a place on Colonial drive in Orlando that we always tried to eat at when we could. It was called Al and Linda's. The specialty was steak. Mike, of course was the man in Orlando and all the people working there would just go nuts when we walked in. He always said yes sir/no sir to the older folks and the young people would just stare and whisper. Mike made everyone's day when he went there. What a guy.

I've always considered Frazier to be one of the greats, but I wonder if his resume justifies that judgment if you take his three fights with Ali out of the picture. I know that he beat Foster and Ellis and Jerry, but he was twice flogged by Foreman, Bonavena went the distance with him (twice), and Bugner lasted 12 rounds as well. I am no big fan of Lewis, but I wonder whether he would be way too big for Joe and would bomb him out just like Foreman did. Maybe Joe's hatred of Ali took him to heights that he couldn't duplicate against others like Foreman. I'm even starting to think that Holmes deserves to be ranked above Joe as I think Larry would have beaten him. Even so, the courage Joe showed against Ali is why lots of guys like me became boxing fans.

Why do you hate Shaq so much? He is a good guy! I'm joking, I respect your opinion very much! I never saw Wilt and I almost never saw Jabbar so... I have to trust you... Anyway, don't forget Shaq was MVP of the Finals three straight times! Don't forget his statistic. Don't forget what Byron Scott said "... Too much Shaquille O'Neal, he's a monster...". I think, today, there is just 1 playerslightly better than Shaq... Tim Duncan! But Duncan is not a pure C, he is a FC.I think Tyson met in 1991 a man who could hit very hard: Donovan "Razor" Ruddock! I remember that when I asked about Ruddock's power Tyson said: "He can hit like a fucking mule!". Boncrusher Smith and Frank Bruno were pretty powerful too! I think Frazier would beat Lewis by KO 9. I know Jerry Quarry had the heart of a lion, but Frazier had the heart of two.I think Tyson met in 1991 a man who could hit very very hard: Donovan "Razor" Ruddock! I remember that when asked about Ruddock's power Tyson said: "He can hit like a fucking mule!". Boncrusher Smith and Frank Bruno were pretty powerful too! I think Frazier would beat Lewis by KO 9. I know Jerry Quarry had the heart of a lion, but Frazier had the heart of two.I think Tyson met in 1991 a man who could hit very very hard: Donovan "Razor" Ruddock! I remember that when asked about Ruddock's power Tyson said: "He can hit like a fucking mule!". Boncrusher Smith and Frank Bruno were pretty powerful too! I think Frazier would beat Lewis by KO 9. I know Jerry Quarry had the heart of a lion, but Frazier had the heart of two.I think Tyson met in 1991 a man who could hit very very hard: Donovan "Razor" Ruddock! I remember that when asked about Ruddock's power Tyson said: "He can hit like a fucking mule!". Boncrusher Smith and Frank Bruno were pretty powerful too! I think Frazier would beat Lewis by KO 9. I know Jerry Quarry had the heart of a lion, but Frazier had the heart of two.I think Tyson met in 1991 a man who could hit very very hard: Donovan "Razor" Ruddock! I remember that when asked about Ruddock's power Tyson said: "He can hit like a fucking mule!". Boncrusher Smith and Frank Bruno were pretty powerful too! I think Frazier would beat Lewis by KO 9. I know Jerry Quarry had the heart of a lion, but Frazier had the heart of two.
against the hardest hitter in the world: Tua. Mc Call has a good record, maybe the sturdiest chin in the world and a good punch! Even Ali! Almost lost against Cooper, Jones and Banks! Lewis is big, is skilful, he can punch and he showed against Tyson that he doesn't fear anybody! I have two matchup for all of you:Mike Tyson-Zora FolleyChuck Wepner-Primo CarneraBoth prime vs prime, of course!

Massimo, Andre the Giant was 6'11" tall. I have seen this figure as being his correct height on a couple of sources, which I can't name at the moment, but I am sure they are somewhere on the internet.

I'd see Tyson going through Folley like a hot knife through butter - stoppage before five at the longest. Wepner and Carnera? How about a 50 round fight? Then I'd go with Wepner, after da Preem collapsed from exhaustion. Wepner was sort of like the heavy bag - your workout's over, you're tired and sweaty and ready to stop, and there it is, still there waiting for more. Marciano said the same thing about Chuvalo - have fights of 25 or more rounds, and no one would ever take George.

Thad Spencer was well touted at the time, and seemed to have the goods to at least give good fights to some of the greats. Wasn't he lazy and reluctant to train though?

Oliver McCall was not an "excellent" fighter by the stretch of even the most active imagination, and Rahman does have potential, but hasn't shown himself to be excellent, or an all time great either. No, a draw against Tua doesn't catapult him to be the next coming of Joe Louis! And let's face it, Tua is no Joe Frazier.

Ali showed more guts in his loss to Trevor Berbick than Lennox Lewis did in those humiliating losses. Ali finished on his feet. We've talked about it on the Quarry board many times before: The great ones have almost all been knocked down, but they climb up and rally, ala Holmes-Shavers. And "almost" losing, but actually winning is what makes a legend—a great. In contrast, getting your clock cleaned by Oliver McCall shows a major chink in the armour, and having the same thing happen against Rahman confirms the worst.

The Superstar competition between Greg Pruitt and George Foreman. Pruitt won the weight lifting event and Foreman came in second. I think the weight was well over 300 pounds. Pruitt lifted the weight with his legs while Foreman just walked up to the bar and lifted the weight up with his shoulders and back. Talk about super strong. I think George would KO Tyson before the 5th round. Foreman had a chin of iron and had too much heart for Tyson. Not to mention the power. I think the most telling fight for Tyson was his bout with Bonecrusher Smith, who I thought he would blow out. He tied Tyson up, out muscled him and in the final round buckled his legs. Tyson did win the fight going away but if Smith had opened up a few rounds earlier he might have put Tyson away...maybe not. Tyson and Lewis never get up after getting knocked down. Just a few rambling thoughts.

I don't believe it. It's like a reoccurring nightmare Kent Appel after 2 yrs. he's still here!!people are all over the place. the Andrea vs Quarry. Wepner, Cholavo, Cooney, let me catch my breath. DKS signing in under a hundred names, what a joke: i can't take it anymore :) i'm rolling on the ground :) kent's just trying to make a name for himself on here. talking about boxing and jerry quarry not all this garbage. let's see how about hulk hogan vs kent appel, let me think a minute. i pick hulk hogan, see that really takes brains:)))) i'm backkkkk coo coo coo coo coo!
klock AKA Foolface is back to wreak havoc once more. Come on Dougie, we all know you and Koo Koo are one and the same. I kind of missed your comments about me. Folks, this guy cannot go a post without talking about me. I am not quite sure why but I look forward to all of the nonsense he is about to unload. Funny, Angelo and Paul Maduros pop in here still after two years but I warrent the attention. Go figure?

Andre 'The Giant' Rousimoff was 7ft 4 inches and growing when he died. I believe this is the exact figure measured before he died.

Funny, Angelo and Paul Maduros pop in here still after two years but I warrent the attention. Go figure?

Andre was 6'10", and there is a person who met andre' that says he was close to 6'9". If we continue this way, one sad day I will read Andre ' was 5'2" !! This would be tragic ( I'm joking.......Maybe.....) ! I would content of 6'7" ! The 7'5"1/2 for Calvin Lane is very realistic. Watching a photo is enough to understand he is surely over 7'3" ! If Calvin Lane was a wrestler they would say he is 8'4" ! If I was a wrestler, they would say I am 6'5", 821lbs, not 5'6", 128lbs ! Anyway, Andre' the Midget was a kind man ! Kent, who do you think is better between Jabbar and Shaq ? Angelo--I think Lewis wasn't in good shape and "right minded" against Rahman1 and McCall 1. Ali said: 'I was the greatest, but now Lennox Lewis is the greatest !'. What do you think about ? Is he crazy ?

Hi Angelo, I agree with your definition about "greatness" 100%, and also your feelings about "heart." The "great" ones, normally no matter how badly they are being beaten, either find a way to win, or they lose to another "great" fighter. The "great" ones ordinarily don't loose to ordinary fighters |
short message. lets start out w/ the basics w/you. (FOOD GOOD, FIRE BAD) can you remember that? hey, what ever happened to that frazier site. down goes frazier, down goes frazier. hey kent, i betcha be surprised as to who that preacher man you met a couple of years was. that me. that whole story was bogus. got on that one did'nt i. i gotta laugh at you kent. so hows the book writing, still gonna do a story on me. :))))))))))))))) opps koo koo koo koo |

9/18/03 03:35:03 PM|Massimo|Rome||f|||10|Hey kookoo, your English is very difficult forme ! I can't understand if you are joking or areserious ! "Betcha", " Gotta" !?!?! What's that stuff ? Gotta is a illness in Italian ! Have a nice time ! |

9/18/03 04:13:35 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Hey kookoo, your English is very difficult. I can'tunderstand if you are joking or are serious ! "Betcha", "Gotta" !?!?! What's that stuff ? Gotta is a illness in Italian ! Have a nice time ! |

9/18/03 04:33:56 PM|kookooclock|N.Y.||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||7|kent, i'll tell you what keep the copyrights to that and i'll keep them to your life. i wrote the book on that. massimo, i picture you in my mind as short fat and baldheaded. learn english my friend. kent, learn how to back down once in a while don't try to be a quarry, you will never make it and if you can be a writer than anybody can. FOOLFACE IF YOU'RE OUT THERE , MAN YOUR MY HERO. A MAN THAT SPOKE TRUE. ADVISE(KENT GET A REAL JOB) koo koo koo koo |

9/18/03 06:05:01 PM|Massimo|Rome||f|||10|I'm short (about 5'6"), and a little baldheaded, but I'm not fat at all (128lbs) ! Learn Italian, my friend ! You'll be able to read the greatest ( by far) poet of all time: Dante Alighieri (1265-1321). You don't know what you miss ! What a wonder ! An incredible beauty ! And Giacomo Leopardi (1798-1837) is another great genius ! I like English very much, it's a beautiful and funny language. I'd like to travel to USA to improve my English but...The money ! If I hear an American film I understand about 15 percent... I go to sleep, it's late ! |

9/18/03 06:21:34 PM|kookooclock|N.Y.||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||7|i just amaze myself all the time. i know what people look like just by their name and the way they talk :) i don't read poetry, it's for people that don't have a life. like a lot of professors in the u.s.a. italian is my favorite food. hey look, i'm not looking for trouble like kent and paul. kent, stay away from sonya, she won't be interested in you. you remind me of fighter/writer randy gordon. i met him in 1980. he was one stuckup dude. got his butt whip trying to be a fighter. he reminds me of you kent. a little guy that wishes he could have been a hero.pi... |code anyone:) |ciao |

9/18/03 06:56:33 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent|||10|Hey Koo Koo Klock, can you get me a job? It would be so cool if i could have a boss like you! But, i guess you already are my boss because you say you own my life. What should i do now boss? But, i have met Sonya and her husband Tom too. I live by a code and i never look a man in the eye and shake his hand and then go after his wife. Actually, i never would go after anyone who is with someone anyway, even if they are not married. So Koo Koo, there is no chance i would ever try for Sonya. Even if those are the boss of my life's orders! FOOLFACE SHOULD BE APPEARING SOON AS KOO KOO KLOCK AND HIM ARE NOT VERY FAR FROM EACH OTHER EVER. But Paul Maduros and i are the same person, right Paul? | |9/18/03 07:40:39 PM|KOOKO|NY||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||7|kent, i feel so sorry for you. i'm much smarter than you think. i fooled you with that preacher thing just to teach you a lesson. NEVER UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCES GIVE OUT TOO MUCH INFORMATION. what if i had been a nut. you would have been in trouble. paul and you are the same , like clark kent and superman. i'll explain more about his problems some other time. he's obsessed with jerry quarry , its like he thinks he's still here. the guy is nuts man!! |9/18/03 11:05:51 PM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree,
Ok people lets not let this get outta hand, we have to keep this site right for Dad, and Uncle Jerry. Yes, Kent, you have met me and my hubby, at my Father's funeral, and my Brother Eric's fight where my Aunt Brenda, and I worked his corner a night I shall not forget, and you are a nice guy don't let any of this stuff get to you. Life's to short. Hey Koo Koo, its cool your back, but for any of you lets keep it all good, please. Thanks! But please everyone keep coming and checking out the site.

R.S. and Angelo, okay, I give up. I will concede that there may be a place for women's boxing. The new, delightfully liberated generation of young women are going to do it anyway, so what the heck! At least the training is good and healthy for them and will produce many beautiful female bodies for old guys like me to ogle.

Angelo, I don't think the point is that well taken. How many pro fighters, by the time their career is at the halfway point, would be considered rugged and appealing to a normal, intelligent woman? Would you want your daughter to marry an up and coming fighter? It has nothing to do with a woman being pretty. I know I did make that dumb statement! I just don't think they will ever provide an already unpopular, in trouble sport with any positive benefits.

Massimo, don't you think "Dante's Inferno" is a little heavy, and of the beaten track for this site? Much the same with basketball. Anyone here want to discuss the Philly. Eagles with me? Don't over react to the koo-koo clock.

Jerry Quarry would have KO'd Rachman in the middle rounds. Jerry would have had the same chance against Tyson, that he had against Shavers. Of course Paul and I are not the same person. It is funny to think about though. Sonia, Koo Koo doesn't bother me. I think it is funny he pays that much attention to me. Sonia, is Eric fighting in the Battle of the Badges benefit again this year? It was about a year ago that the event took place. I hope to attend if so. Eric did the Quarrys proud with his tough three round decision win last year.

Steve- In my opinion Dante's Inferno is the greatest masterpiece ever written! Heavy? Paolo e Francesca, il conte Ugolino e l' arcivescovo Ruggeri, Ulisse e Diomede etc.etc. Heavy? I say wonderful! I don't have to be what you want me to be, I'm free to be what I want to be! For me it's hard to understand what's happening in this site and why kookoo is so angry with Kent...

Kookoo: ok, everybody thinks I'm funny, will I have some serious advise for the quarrys. Stay out of boxing, do not let another family member fight. Jerry quarry was one of a kind, this family seems to think that they can produce another Jerry, (THEY CAN'T AND NEVER WILL!) Steve i'm tired of you and never met you. STOP TALKING ABOUT BASKETBALL ON HERE, THERE'S PLENTY OF SITES FOR THAT. I've got to calm down now, my feathers are getting ruffled again. Coo coo coo coo

And nobody in the world can deny that Andre's height is tightly binded (or related) with this site's purposes, for God sake !!!!!!!!
I have read that masterpieces years ago, but it was really beautiful! This is just my opinion!

I'm sorry Massimo, I don't think you understand much. You seem like a very nice man, but it would not be possible to have a real conversation with you till you learn more about American culture. Hey Kent, you and Paul can have your own TV show, like Starkey & Hutch. Your ready for the rubber gun squad Kent. Coo Coo!

Steve - re Shavers/Quarry: any one round KO is unsettling, when the opponents are of equal caliber. Was Quarry that much better? Was Foreman that much better than Frazier? Or was it just styles in both cases? "Luck" is always there for the prepared fighter who's presented with opportunity, so it's up to the observer to assign it or not. Quarry/Tyson: When Tyson first came on the scene, though he hadn't fought the quality of people that Jerry did, I don't know if I'd have put money on him winning. But we didn't know. Tyson sure seemed to be the next monster. However, as we gradually became aware of just how bedbug crazy Tyson is, I'd have given JQ a shot. He'd have stayed cool, gotten in close, and if he didn't cut, I believe he'd have had a sufficient bag of tricks with which to befuddle Mike, to have a run at him. R.S. and Angelo, okay, I give up. I will concede that there may be a place for women's boxing. Remember the first woman who ran the Boston Marathon? "They" didn't used to think women could handle distances longer than a mile. With opportunities opening up, there'll be women who'll get into anything that looks exciting, makes a statement, and might make a little money. It'll even out with time, just as I imagine there's a huge turnover rate with men who initially walk into a gym, thinking they want to be a boxer, and decide, "Uh, maybe not!" later (I suspect sooner than later).

At least the training is good and healthy for them and will produce many beautiful female bodies for old guys like me to ogle. It's the best training going, for both sexes. Angelo, I don't think the point is that well taken. How many pro fighters, by the time their career is at the halfway point, would be considered rugged and appealing to a normal, intelligent woman? Me, me, me!!! I love the rugged, beaten up look. Vikings, bikers, boxers. I hate the pretty boy actors today. Dress 'em up in women's clothes, a little makeup and a wig, and they could pass for girls. Give me the John Wayne, Robert Mitchum, Lee Marvin looks any old day?

Would you want your daughter to marry an up and coming fighter? There'd be guys who wouldn't really be threatened by their appearance, so much as by what they did. And many guys wouldn't be threatened at all, would in fact, find it very sexy. I mean even the guys who were around a long time and took a lot of punches looked good (at least to me). Duran, Quarry, Bonavena, Chuvalo are all good looking guys. Ali, Frazier, and Foreman are too.

It has nothing to do with a woman being pretty. I know I did make that dumb statement! I just don't think they will ever provide an already unpopular, in trouble sport with any positive benefits. That's possibly true. Men's boxing is always under a certain amount of siege, and as we've said, the double standard, once beaten up and punchy women start showing up, could increase this by more than the double (of a second population segment coming in). The only thing that'd be worse for producing a nuclear reaction, would be if some kids were to die in a bout. You're right! I don't know very well the American culture. I like Gershwin's music and Richard Feynman's works (I'm a physicist since 20/12/2002). I never saw the Quarry-Shavers and Quarry-McFoster video clips. Are still available in these It's just my opinion, but I don't have Smokin' Joe, one of my favorites also, and Lennox Lewis that far apart. Guys, anything can happen in the heavyweight division. Marciano is trailing Ez Charles badly, than BAM it's over. Ingo Johannson caught Floyd Patterson, no one I know claims he was a better fighter, Patterson is still considered one of the best boxers ever despite his weak chin. No one I know claims Mc Call or Rahman are better than Lewis, but if they couldn't punch, they wouldn't be out there in the first place. Holmes would fall down for a lot of his opponents, was still a champ of considerable ability. Is JQ that much better than Earnie Shavers? I don't think so. He caught him early, that can happen with heavyweights. Jerry had Chuvalo all the way, then took a knockdown. Ali got caught by Chuck Wepner. When the guys are this big, anything can happen. Lewis is a tremendous boxer and a credit to the sport, easily top 20. Also, there's a big diff between punching power and physical strength, which some here seem to mix up. Foreman was a huge strong guy who could also punch with amazing power. Tyson is a smaller guy, but his punching power was just as big. Foreman fell all over the place vs. Ron Lyle, don't forget. His chin was not that well tested. JQ took Lyle's punch much better, that's a chin. Sorry, I don't agree that Foreman, Holmes are as far up the list as some here do. I rank them, Joe and Lewis not that far apart at all. To each his own. Massimo, I've enjoyed your "White Shadows" references. I don't dislike Shaq, I just think his 'star card' has allowed him a lot of unearned credit. If NBA games are called evenly, Shaq fouls out of most of them before the fourth quarter, this is not football. Real nice guy, very good athlete for a huge guy, needs to earn what he's been given. Andre the Giant did have a pituitary condition which killed him. When he was 21 he was a rangy athletic 7-footer who sold a lot of tickets. He was over 400 lbs. when he died. A must-see is Lewis's short, amazingly quick work of Razor Ruddock. Ruddock was a big puncher, not a very good boxer, as Lewis, Morrison revealed. Carnera has been mentioned as a huge guy with a less-than-huge punch, size and power do not always go hand in hand. I watched Bert Cooper nearly KO Evander Holyfield, it takes nothing away from EH's rep as a great fighter. Anything can happen with heavyys. Not having a great chin takes nothing away from quite a few very good fighters.

Jerry would have had an outside chance to beat Tyson but I am afraid Tyson's fast sharp accurate combination punching in his prime would have cut Jerry to ribbons. The later version of Tyson, standing too straight up and throwing one punch at a time and then tying up his opponent, was (is) very beatable by an in prime Jerry. People forget that Tyson at his best was a monster of a fighter. It was when his crazy outside of the ring life began to effect his concentration inside of the ring that he became almost just another fighter. Tyson, of course, always has had that tremendous punching power and finishing ability when he had a man hurt so he never could be just another fighter.

very good road man, it's a boxing site folks. i don't agree w/ road man. quarry is not big enough to compete against todays people. thats not a putdown on jerry, patterson ells even frazier would have no chance at all. frazier because of his style would get knocked out in 1 rd. no disrespect to frazier. i'm writing a book also kent. it's called kents travel guide, california fact or fiction or maybe newyork where to find it. the clock has struck, gotta go coo coo

As a former Ruddock's fan I was very disappointed when he lost against Morrison. But that wasn't the real Ruddock, he was overweight! Do you remember his KO victory against Michael Dokes? I think he could hit a
Early Tyson was a caveman, but a fast, savage, hard hitting caveman. Possibly only Ali and Frazier put combinations together as fast, and it'd be close. Prime to prime, I think Tyson would take Jerry, possibly Ali, Frazier, only if he struck early (past five, and Joe'd chop him up), but Foreman would lift him off the canvas - another Kingston. Late Tyson, all of the guys would beat him fairly easily, inside the distance.|

BTW, has anyone given any thought to Tyson being heavily onto steroids? His weight for his height (and I don't think he's really 5'11"), and as chiseled as he is - giant arms, neck, six pack stomach - are all sure signs of steroids. I haven't been able to see closely enough to tell if he has stretch marks (harder to see on a black man), but the most common and obvious place would be in the underarm/pectoral region. If he were on them, this would enhance his speed and strength immensely. Boxing being what it is, someone could be from another planet and on LSD, and no one would know or care.

i would not doubt mike tyson being on drugs. theres no telling with him. i don't like him as a person and he says a lot of stupid things. he did say somthing very smart once. HE SAID PEOPLE ARE OUT FOR WHAT THEY CAN GET FROM HIM. ALSO HE JUGDES PEOPLE NOT FOR WHO THEY ARE, BUT FOR WHO THEY REALLY ARE!!! the clockster agrees coo coo|

In recent times only two larger heavyweights have shown to be major talents, Lennox Lewis and Riddick Bowe. Otherwise the champions have been closer to the size of the fighters from Jerry's and Joe F's era. Among them, Tyson, 220 pounds in his prime, Evander Holyfield, 205 to 212 in his prime and Larry Holmes, 212 to 215 in his prime. When some of the other super sized heavyweights start winning major titles and holding on to them, then we can say this is the age of the super big heavyweights. Only David Tua, who is hot one minute and then cold the next and the Klitscko Brothers have shown any kind of talent at all and the K Brothers still need to prove themselves as being anything more than talented prospects. None of the other so called giant fighters of today have proved they have any talent at all. Frazier, Jerry, Patterson, and especially Foreman and Ali would do very well against these lumbering, limited fighters.

Yes Koo Koo, you are right, athletes in other sports are bigger and better. the boxers are lagging behind on talent(i'll give you that) otherwise , no contest the small guys lose. roy jones jr. is an exception to the rule. he might be the greatest fight in history before he gets done. KENT, STOP LIVING IN THE PAST ANOTHER THING PAUL DOES. IT'S NOT 1968, IT'S 2003 PAUL RESPOND TO MY EMAILS I LIKE TO TALK ABOUT KENT , I WROTE THE BOOK YOU KNOW:) COO COO |
Like I said, when more of the super sized heavyweights start dominating the division, then I will agree it is the age of the bigger heavyweight. But not until then. A perfect example of skill overcoming size is when 211 pound Davaryl Williamson knocked out American Corey Sanders last year, who weighed 320 pounds. The other Sanders, Corrie of South Africa, by the way weighed 224 pounds when he knocked out 240 pound Wladimir Klitschko to win the fringe WBO title.

A perfect example of skill overcoming size is when 211 pound Davaryl Williamson knocked out American Corey Sanders last year, who weighed 320 pounds. The other Sanders, Corrie of South Africa, by the way weighed 224 pounds when he knocked out 240 pound Wladimir Klitschko to win the fringe WBO title.

Don't you think your being a little hardheaded kent? so all the other sports, just not boxing? I've seen umm all kent, just look at the tapes, jake frazier would be crushed trying to get inside on lennox lewis. he's not going to take lewis' punches all night, like he did with all. i admit the golden days of the past were much more interesting, but kent you must face the facts. otherwise you are lying to yourself. FOOLFACE IF YOUR OUT THERE I WORSHIP YOU MAN, COME BACK MAN, LIKE THE RANDY NEUMAN SONG, YOU GOT A FRIEND IN ME!

What's the general consensus on when Tyson's skills seem to just go out the window? I know it's commonly accepted that he was seriously hurt by Cus DiAmmato's death. This in term of his personal life and his training and discipline. I forget when this huge personal loss took place, in relation to the Buster Douglas fight. Was he losing it all by the time of the fight, or did that beating, and he really did take a pretty good beating, really start his slide? Was it a combination of all the above factors? He pretty much lost that valuable intimidation factor after that. R.S., I do agree that the early Tyson, with his formidable hand speed and power, would have made Quarry a probable early stoppage victim. I do, however, give Quarry a chance based on several observations. First, Quarry's performance in the 1st two rounds of both Frazier fights. As you mentioned, Quarry's ability to change tactics, move in and out, take a punch, and his very hard counterpunching. Also, I question the quality of Tyson's opponents. At least the first, and second group on his way to meeting Hollyfield.

Steve, Cus died about the time of Tyson's tenth pro fight and while it had a huge emotional effect on him, he responded by burying himself in his word, boxing, to ease his pain. So in a way Cus' death helped his career because Tyson was motivated to win the title for Cus. Tyson was also very close to Jimmy Jacobs, the man who took over as his manager, who also died around the time of his fight with Michael Spinks. This second blow triggered his emotional slide. Tyson was not close to, on personal terms, with CO manager Bill Cayton and Don King was able to use the racial card, of not trusting the white man, in this case Cayton, as well as Kevin Rooney, Tyson's trainer, to "weasel" his way into Tyson's affairs. King made sure that Tyson cut all of his ties he had left to Cus and this, along with his brief marriage to that greedy actress, who's name escapes me at the moment, planted the seeds to his downfall. The signs of decline could be seen as early as Tyson's fight with Frank Bruno, in which Tyson was rocked hard in the first couple of rounds only to bail himself out with his power in round number five. This fight happened in 1989, the year before his loss to Douglas.

Tyson certainly beat up a lot of bums, and in face lost his title to basically a fat sparring partner-class fighter, in Buster Douglas. But his hand speed was frightening. Past as Frazier's and Holmes's hands were, I'd put Tyson above them, and just below a young Ali. Tyson's problems always were between his ears. His madness, plus a steady diet of Golden Age heavies would have either defined him as a great, or as a physically talented heavy bag. I suspect the latter. We never got a much of a look at how Tyson could handle the distance against a hard opponent, a route he'd have had to have gone in the 60s and 70s many times. As to the Quarry-Tyson issue once more, certainly Jerry would have had to stay close to Tyson early as he did Frazier (1st time), though Mike didn't start slowly, as Joe did. I think Quarry's best shot with Tyson would have been this and lateral movement, in and out, side to side, countering, in close, strike, tie him up, then move again. JQ held together mentally in the ring, Tyson was like papers in a high wind. Staying close for two or three rounds, then finding his deadly rhythm, I think Frazier would have made Mike Tyson cry or bite his ear or something, or quit. Ali would have driven him nuts, once more, possibly provoking disqualifying behavior, but slowly beating his face into a gargoyle, ala Frazier, and Tyson wouldn't have the guts to stay with it. Foreman might have killed him, literally.Staying close for two or three rounds, then finding his deadly rhythm, I think Frazier would have made Mike Tyson cry or bite his ear or something, or quit. Ali would have driven him nuts, once more, possibly provoking disqualifying behavior, but slowly beating his face into a gargoyle, ala Frazier, and Tyson wouldn't have the guts to stay with it. Foreman might have killed him, literally.The actress name was Robin Geevens. I think Tyson, in his career, beat a lot of very good fighters but never beat a great champion... I'll stick with Tyson over Foreman, if I'm the only one, that's fine. With Tyson, it seems to be an attrition of things, Cus, drugs and the fast life, the fact he's bi-polar, the wrongful rape conviction, Don King, being treated like Dracula when Evander Holyfield is almost Jesus Christ, divorces, debt, it's a pretty heavy load. Mentally, Tyson is almost exhausted, I think, and therefore well past his prime, Lewis beat a fraction of Mike Tyson. Massimo, Larry Holmes didn't beat a champion either, and should've been counted out versus Renaldo Snipes, he's still a respected former champ. Mike has a rack of round-one KO's against top Ten guys, let's give the guy his proper dues, he's a legend. Got to also agree with Kent's assessment of talent in today's heavyweight division. It still comes down to skill, if not the no-talent Micheal Grant would be champ. I met Mike in Cleveland several years back, he's no taller than 5'10", maybe even 5'9". He definitely pumped up with whatever supplement he used to reach 220lbs., but still, it's the punch that counts.Your list of things with which Mike Tyson copes (or misfires) on a daily basis, is a good point. Consider that someone living that way doesn't just mess up something, then function normally, mess up something, function normally. His entire life, in every way, is a disaster, and Disaster Central, his mind, is like an assembly line, cranking out one screwup after another. The sort of mind that does this must be a nightmare to live with, even in between debacles, and some have been thrown at him, along with what he's done himself. You're right, it has to wear on him, and he isn't getting any younger.On the subject once more about the big fighters of now or smaller ones from the periods proceeding now, I did acknowledge that Lennox Lewis is a real talent and I think he would be a difficult opponent for someone like Joe Frazier. A Frazier/Lewis bout would be dangerous for Joe, particularly in the first couple of rounds, but if Joe found his rythem by round three or so and got to "smokin" full steam ahead, it could be a very long night for Lewis or even a short one when one of Joe's hooks lands on Lewis," at times questionable chin. A bout with Riddick Bowe against Frazier might be Joe's downfall prime and agaisnt prime. Bowe was just so strong that he might overpower Joe. That said, where is the rest of the talented giants of the heavyweights today? My feeling is that most of them are probably not any better than Buster Mathis, a good fighter but not a great one who both Joe Frazier and Jerry Quarry walked through. I think Joe and JQ would do the same to most of today's heavys as well. I agree with Gerry S, Michael Grant? Ha! Ha! Ha!
sympathy, even when the guy has a good day, it isn't a good day. While he is still physically capable of becoming champ, I doubt he will be able to focus mentally on it for it to ever again happen. Evander Holyfield also appears to be on a self-destructive course, Lennox Lewis appears to have the sense to pack it in, but it bugs him no doubt that he isn't getting deserved respect. All three of these guys need a huge retirement party in Las Vegas to send them off. They all should quit with the respect they deserve. Not in boxing... Kent, do you remember Grant's match with Andrew Golota? Golota had him bleeding all over for six rounds. Grant, with his size and muscle, couldn't beat Mac Foster. Grant is a poster boy for today's division. With all the happenings regarding Tyson, Holyfield, Bowe, Golota is it any wonder few take the sport, or at least the heavies, seriously in the last 15 years? And people want to know why I prefer the good old days ...

| 9/20/03 04:16:50 PM | Massimo | Rome | t | 10 | Gerry- I think that if Tyson really did even just 1% of the bad things he is accused to have done he is a motherfucker... He had several arrests before 12 years old. It's true, people take advantage of him, but he is no Madre Teresa di Calcutta ! Don't you agree ? | Kent, do you remember Grant's match with Andrew Golota? Golota had him bleeding all over for six rounds. Grant, with his size and muscle, couldn't beat Mac Foster. Grant is a poster boy for today's division. With all the happenings regarding Tyson, Holyfield, Bowe, Golota is it any wonder few take the sport, or at least the heavies, seriously in the last 15 years? And people want to know why I prefer the good old days ...

| 9/20/03 04:31:13 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 | Kent, my Brother Eric, said to let you know that he's retired. So everyone, keep the posts coming, and just do right! Be Cool All! | Kent, my Brother Eric, said to let you know that he's retired. So everyone, keep the posts coming, and just do right! Be Cool All! |

| 9/20/03 05:15:03 PM | Massimo | Rome | g | 10 | Kent-Do you think that a prime Bowe was better than a prime Lewis ? | Kent, do you remember Grant's match with Andrew Golota? Golota had him bleeding all over for six rounds. Grant, with his size and muscle, couldn't beat Mac Foster. Grant is a poster boy for today's division. With all the happenings regarding Tyson, Holyfield, Bowe, Golota is it any wonder few take the sport, or at least the heavies, seriously in the last 15 years? And people want to know why I prefer the good old days ...

| 9/20/03 05:30:48 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Gerry, Galota is another example of an underachieving large heavyweight. He had all of the tools to be a force in the division, and he did give a past his prime Bowe hell for two fights, but here again is another mental case. He just couldn't stop fouling Bowe, even though he had both fights won. He also has had problems outside of the ring.In one of Tyson's latter day devastating performances, Tyson walked right through Golota's punches and Tyson destroyed Golota inside of two rounds. I am sure if Golota had got his act together and won the title or at least one of the major belts, and Tyson had retired early and the two had never fought, then a lot of people would have been saying that there is no way a smaller heavyweight like Tyson could beat such a big strong guy like Golota, not true though. |

| 9/20/03 11:33:39 PM | kookoo | nyl | kokooclock000@yahoo.com | 7 | Kent, you've got to be crazy! tyson's body is of a modern day heavyweight, frazier's pales along side him. leave yesterdays heavys where they belong, in yesterday. it is not possible. people like chris byrd being in the game show that we have been losing great athletes to other sports for many years now. i look at frazier videos and think theres no way in hell he could stand up against these guys today. KENT TAKE A REALITY PILL AND CALL MY UNCLE DR.CLOCK IN THE MORNING.KOO KOO KOO KOO |

| 9/21/03 06:20:02 AM | Massimo | Rome | y | 10 | KooKoo-I don't agree with you. An old and fat Foreman almost dominated the modern heavyweights !I'm not sure that a post jail Tyson could have beaten Foreman 2. Ali' beat Foreman and Frazier once beat Ali'. Joe Frazier would have been great even in modern times ! | Kent, you've got to be crazy! tyson's body is of a modern day heavyweight, frazier's pales along side him. leave yesterdays heavys where they belong, in yesterday. it is not possible. people like chris byrd being in the game show that we have been losing great athletes to other sports for many years now. i look at frazier videos and think theres no way in hell he could stand up against these guys today. KENT TAKE A REALITY PILL AND CALL MY UNCLE DR.CLOCK IN THE MORNING.KOO KOO KOO KOO |

| 9/21/03 09:14:11 AM | Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com | 10 | Geez, R.S. just because a guy has streach marks doesn't mean he on the juice, though it would not suprise me about Tyson. I have them on my upper arms, upper back and rear delts and I have never used steroids. I just lifted very heavy weights, the same thing a lot of today's fighters do. As far as Tyson vs. Frazier, the early Mike would have KO'ed Joe before the fifth round. The more recent version on Tyson it's a toss-up. Iv'e always thought Foreman could KO Tyson. Massimo, Foreman did not even come close to dominating the modern heavys, he beat a well selected group of guy's, and could not defeat the top rated guys like Holyfield and Morrison, he was lucky Moorer was champ, I always thought he was a bum and he proved it against Foreman. Of course when a 45 year old guy can take you the distance or KO you what does that say for you. It does say Big George is one hell of a fighter and has a heart that would be be hard to beat. Oh, yeah Massimo quit your cussin'. And Steve from NJ, It's hard to 'dis a Bro from Jersey, but Jerry was a much better fighter than Ernie Shavers. Shavers had one thing...the right hand. He didn't jab, had slow hands and footwork,a weak chin and no endurance. He beat alot of set up's with a few top 20 fighters thrown it. Jimmy Young was a good prospect when Shavers clocked him, he was in line for Frazier's title when Ron Stander pounded him out. He did drop Ron Lyle and had him hurt until he succumbed to his lack of training and skill. Ernie Shavers in no way compares with Mike Tyson, who early on, was a fairly complete fighter. Tyson stops Quarry in 2.| 9/21/03 11:06:50 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10| Geez, R.S. just because a guy has stretch marks doesn't mean he on the juiceAlong with obviously oversized musculature for a given size, usually combined with dazzling definition, stretch marks are the single most obvious sign of steroidal use, and are rare in someone who doesn't take drugs. I'd be curious if Tyson's suffered a lot of little nagging muscle pulls, also a side effect of steroids, since such a body's frame isn't designed for the amount of muscle the drugs produce. Tyson's weight is appropriate for an in shape man of 6'4" at least. As far as Tyson vs.Frazier, the early Mike would have KO'ed Joe before the fifth round. The more recent version on Tyson it's a toss-up. Iv'e always thought Foreman could KO Tyson. Foreman would likely knock out Tyson the same way he did Frazier. JF was the greatest inside fighter in boxing history. Tyson would be in a phone booth with Joe, who would have started faster than was customary with him. Tyson wouldn't have found Frazier's head, and his short punches wouldn't have mattered. I'd take five rounds too, but the other way around. Tyson might have quit from the body punches. I always thought he had a lot of dog in him. George is one hell of a fighter and has a heart that would be be hard to beat. One of the top five all time greats. I can't think of another champion who could have even fought at the age at which GF won the title, let alone captured it. Of course, he didn't take it away from an immortal or anything, but how many fighters at even 40 are anything but a wreck? In his prime, there are few who could have stayed with George. Plus, when considering a fighter's greatness, I like to (along with thinking of his best night, and overall record), imagine how he'd do if dropped down into the fight of another great, either against them or their opponent. There isn't a fighter ever, or their opponent, in any fight, who wouldn't have been in trouble against Foreman (or Ali, Frazier), though the same can't be said for Tyson, or most of the current group, save Holyfield. Tyson stops Quarry in 2. If he didn't cut, I think Quarry would have done a little better than that. There were some who were trickier than JQ, but it isn't a real long list, and Tyson wasn't one of them. Cleverness was one thing with which Tyson had trouble. As with any bully, he also had problems with someone who wouldn't quit and threw volumes of punches, which would have been his downfall against Frazier, and a big part of it against Quarry. | 9/21/03 11:43:06 AM|Massimo|Rome||gh|||10|Bob- Foreman at 45 fought against an 29 years Holyfield much better than a 30 y. old Tyson did against a 34 y. old Holyfield. I don't thinkMoorer was so beat. He was surely a legitimate top 10, he hadn't a good chin, but he could punchPS; I don't understand what the expression "quit your cussin " means... Is it an offense ?If it's an offence I want you in the ring ! You don't have a chance with me, you are too short, too slow, you have no footwork ... You would be in trouble against me
Okay, I'm ready to admit that Mosley COULD have beaten Oscar last week, but last night's fight between Byrd and Oquendo didn't seem close to me at all. I thought Fres had it by about an 8-4 margin. Do I need to start following golf, where there are no decisions?

I saw the Byrd/Oquendo fight twice last night. The first time on regular HBO and the second on a replay in Spanish on another HBO channel and since my Spanish is not good enough to keep up with the announcers, I had a different perspective the second time. I thought Oquendo was the winner when I heard the English broadcast but I called it a draw the second time being unable to tell if the announcers had bias one way or the other. The second time around I thought neither man deserved to win. It was a lousy fight.

Massimo, I am not sure who would win between Lennox Lewis and Riddick Bowe, prime against prime. It could have gone either way.

What fight did see the judge who scored it? Sometimes there is injustice even when there isn't money involved, but when there is...... Much more.....

I didn't mean I thought Shaver's was that good. I expressed myself poorly. I actually didn't think Shavers was much of a fighter, aside from that that huge, but very wide right hand. I still don't understand why you are living in N.C. when you could be living in scenic N.J.? I also was a competitive teenage power lifter in the early seventies. I specialized in the squat, dead lift, and bench press, and I too have stretch marks in the upper pectoral-deltoid tie-in. I also seem to be developing them around my propensity for run on sentences.

Hey Bob, I lied on my last post. I was a teenager when I started power lifting, but a much more mature lifter in his early twenties in the early seventies. Where I still got blown out by more mature lifters in their thirties and forties. Hey R.S., I am surprised at how many people on this site give so little credit to Joe Frazier! If you go back and review his old fight films, there amazing! This guy fought like a machine. He was constant, tireless, and relentless. Remember the theme song from the movie, "Jaws"! They should play that music in accompanyment to all his fight films.
I've heard a number of songs over the years that reminded me of Frazier fighting, but Jaws hadn't occurred to me - perfect! Boxing is a totally unique sport. Teams and individual players in the big four sports can play poorly, and it's OK. With fighters, it's different. Someone has an off night, gets caught, and all of a sudden, it's as if fans caught him in bed with their wife! He's a bum, always will be a bum, probably always ~was~ a bum. Now Ali was a little different. People, judges included, continued to see an Ali who had many years before left the building, never to return again. One fight can start the frightfully rapid erosion of a brilliant boxer's skills. One punch can do it sometimes. Fans aren't always aware of it, and retro judging of an entire career based on some moment when this clarity becomes apparent, is unfair. Ali and Frazier are the only two elite fighters (maybe someone else can think of others, I can't) who ever came back from the bleakness of decline and turned in one more brilliant performance before saying goodbye forever, and maybe it took each other to produce a mind tyranny that transported their bodies beyond what they might have been capable of against anyone else. They may even have surprised themselves in retrospect, I don't know. Anyway. Frazier was brilliant in every way, and on his best night, only a handful of fighters ever could hope to even stand a chance against him, with no guarantees of winning. I would certainly put Joe, Ali and George as my choices for top three all time greats, though I'd have to think hard about the order. On this subject, I read something very poignant that Ali said, showing that all of his thought processes haven't been dulled by the hammers of Mars. He said, "The world has our fights, Joe Frazier has my brain." Shiver.

why does everybody seem to think that joe frazier would do so good? i could just see him in there today looking like a little T-Rex. he's almost a jr. heavyweight himself , like patterson and quarry. Cooney was an embarrassment to all fighters big and small, dumb, akward, stupid looking jerk! little mike spinks took him down, no excuse for this jerk! coo! coo!

Come on, kookoo. Holyfield almost killed Tyson ? Do you remember rounds 10 and 11 of the first fight ? Foreman looked hurt just 1 time in their 1991 fight , but not so badly hurt !Foreman was able to hurt Holyfield, Tyson made Holyfield the tickling !PS; pizza is very good, mostly " Pizza napoletana ".

Holyfield would have never beat mike tyson if he had not been off for 3+ years. the only person that beats mike tyson is himself. lennox lewis also fought the watered down version of mike tyson. REMEMBER MISSIMO, DOMINOS DELIVERS.

What does it mean "Dominos deliveres" ? May you find please another way to say this thing ? 3+ years ? Foreman was out for 10 years. In my opinion, Foreman is clearly ahead Tyson in boxing history ! Even Ali' was 3+ years out of the ring but when came back was still a champion. When Tyson came back was a bum that I, Massimo Giulio Leonardo Cini, would have been able to beat. He disappointed me so much! After his come back he fought just two very good fights: Frank Bruno and Andrew Golota but he was even able to trasform the second in NC assuming mariujana !

i can't argue with someone who does not speak proper english. stop backing foreman , he never had the speed or talent of tyson. may have hit harder but not by much. you, kent, paul all live in the past. go to a poetry site, something you seem to know To everybody-

I need an advice. I have decided to buy Ali'-Terrell from Lotis Tunaman. Is it a good idea? I mean, was it a good fight? Thanks! How do you explain, as a great Tyson's fan, his lost against Buster Douglas? Just a bad night?

massimo, do you really think that Douglas would have won a rematch??? Tyson himself knew that he could win back the title. anytime he wanted. I'm not a Tyson fan, I am a great Quarry fan, better than Kent and Paul. The Quarry family has great respect for my opinion. Sonya email me a couple of years ago to thank me. I know my stuff, I just heard my alarm. coo coo coo coo |

Steve: Will someone explain the seemingly simple ten point must system to me? These last two weeks have produced decisions in two big fights that make me question my understanding. Winner of a round who scores a knockdown, gets a 10-8 round. Winner of a round must get 10 points. Usually a 10-9 round. In a 12 round fight, if you score a perfect shutout, you get 120 points. I cannot remember ever seeing a 9-8 round. How could Byrd have possibly won by a 111-117 margin on that one judge's card? How many rounds does that mean he won? These Vegas judges are just knocking the enjoyment right out of this sport for me. What's worse, there doing it on cable TV for all the world to see. Imagine what the casual boxing fan, who only watches big fights on HBO or pay-per-view, must think!!!

After watching the DeLaHoya-Moseley fight a second time, I think possibly it could have been a just decision. It depends on several factors. Do the judges give more credit for total percentages of power punches and jabs landed? Perhaps they evaluate on the effectiveness of punches landed, who does the most damage. Moseley's punches though fewer than Oscar's, seemed to be heavier and do more damage. At the end of the fight, it seemed like Oscar had gotten beaten up.

Very probably he wouldn't have won the rematch even if Douglas never was in that shape again. This doesn't explain what really happened in that night. Tyson was young and at the peak of his career, maybe a little overweight, but just a little. The thing that mostly surprised me was that Mike lost badly the ninth round, after having obtained a knockdown in the eight! I'd like to know if the reach of a fighter is measured with open hands or with closed fists. Thanks! Tyson's aura of invincibility was shattered by Douglas---but even so, I've got to believe Tyson would have won a rematch. I think Tyson was in decent physical shape for the fight, but wasn't focused mentally. In contrast, Buster Douglas was totally focused and stuck with his fight plan in an amazing way. Not since Young-Foreman did any underdog go in with a plan and stick with it to that extent. The funny parallel about these fights is that in both cases, the underdogs were clearly winning---then got cocked with thunder bombs, only to recover and win. Douglas had the slip up but came back to win. I think in a rematch, Tyson would come into the fight in about the same basic condition. Meanwhile, I think Douglas fought his heart out for that one night, but even though he had the physical tools and boxing ability, I think he showed before and after winning the title that he didn't have the mental focus to stay in shape and come into fights sharp. Tyson would have knocked him out as Holyfield did. But the one thing Buster did was out Tyson as a guy who wasn't Superman after all. I think I've heard Bert Sugar talk about this before---how when a Champion is going down, he suddenly looks smaller. Liston looked short and stocky, old and slow against Clay/Ali. Frazier looked like a midget against Foreman. And that night, against Douglas, Tyson suddenly started to look smaller and not so imposing after all.

| 9/22/03 06:56:55 PM | kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||8|you guys are mostly the same bunch of hardheaded jerks that was on here 5 yrs ago. tyson at his best would have the great ali, why? because ali could not afford to lay on the ropes. unlike foreman tyson would not get tired. 1 tyson shot in his prime could have ended it. what you guys don't realize is that these guys now would beat the old guys just on sheer size. angelo who cares about italian, if your going to learn a language, learn spanish, somthing we'll all need to use. we all want to relive the past , it can't be done. hey massimo john gotti was a friend of mine. thanks to you folks, you really did a lot for the U.S.A. pizza, gambling , murder, forget about it.coo coo |
| 9/23/03 02:19:34 AM | Massimo|Rome||e|||10|KooKoo:Anyway, the problem is that Tyson's prime lasted about two days !|
| 9/23/03 02:41:55 AM | Evren|London||@|||10|Ali at his best never layed on the ropes - incorrect comment!|
| 9/23/03 06:51:10 AM | kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||8|you are right, ali would hit and then be laying on the ropes covering up. he'd do ok till tyson got in a good shot. much faster and harder than fraziers'. no punch frazier ever threw was remembered except that lucky knockdown in the 15th rd. when ali was tired and he still was up at the count of 3! tyson still was the greatest, look at the video. yea , he fought bums , but he destroyed them like nobody before or since. he'll end up dead though, too angry, too stupid. coo coo|
| 9/23/03 06:56:36 AM | Massimo|Rome||e|||10|Is it true Ali' thumbed purposelly Terrell in the third round of their fight ?|
| 9/23/03 09:32:38 AM| Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Yes, he did, though this wasn't unique with the Terrell fight. Ali was known as a thumber, and might have had as good a head (butting) as Frazier. All the top guys are pretty good with less than clean tactics, without being readily observable. Watch too for "missed" hooks (elbow).|
| 9/23/03 11:31:48 AM | Massimo|Rome||e|||10|Thanks RS !Tyson is a great master of "elbow hooks". RS,I need an advice: i have decided to buy Ali'- Terrell from Tunaman... Is it a good idea ?Was that a good fight ? Thanks again.I'm surprised that a fighter thumble another fighter using gloves and not bare fists !|
| 9/23/03 11:49:23 AM| Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|If the price is good, and you like Terrell, I'd go with it. Ali dominates the fight, but Terrell does fight too. Ali is incredibly fast. The blindingly fast Clay/Ali is to be seen consistently only pre-exile. He had moments in his second career, but not consistently. His hands stayed fast for a long time, but his foot speed deteriorated rather quickly, particularly against good opponents. I'd have loved to have seen Frazier against him in career one. As odd as it might sound, I think Ali handled himself better in the Frazier fights than Clay would have.Ali looked lousy in training, laying on the ropes and letting guys pound on him, with occasional flurries, and this began creeping more and more into his actual fights. He always said that the majority of his opponents trained harder for him than he did for them, saying that such strenuous activity would have killed him. Perhaps if he stayed in reasonable shape all the time, and didn't let sparring partners kill him in the gym, he'd have kept his skills longer, and looked better in many of his fights.

As odd as you think it may sound I can understand your feeling regarding Ali doing better against Frazier, than Clay would have done against Frazier. Logic would have one believe, that although Clay was faster and obviously more active than Ali, Clay would do better avoiding Joe's pressure and left hook. But, I am thinking to myself Clay did not punch as hard as Ali, and was not as strong as Ali. And as a result Clay may not have been able to tough it out against Joe as Ali did. Clay did not have to worry about stamina and being hit when he fought. He set the pace and all of his opponents were older than him, an slower. Frazier, was very fast, especially moving forward, and he threw punches in bunches. Clay never feared burning himself out. Against Frazier burning himself out may have been a possibility. Where as Ali was aware of his limitations, and as a result would pace himself and fight in spurts. And to mention once again, Ali was stronger than Clay and punched harder, and as a result he could keep Frazier off him. This is all conjecture of course, but your feeling is not as odd as it sounds.

On the other hand, Clay might have had enough speed to stay away from Frazier's smoke, while hitting Joe countless times with punches that wouldn't knock him out, but would have a devastating cumulative affect. I could see Frazier's eyes swelling worse than Manilla if Clay landed precision punches from a distance, over and over. Also, it seems we forget about 2 of Frazier's best victories---against the great or at least near great Jimmy Ellis. This was Joe at his best, against a very good opponent. Has anyone seen Shavers against Jimmy Young?

Joe Frazier verses Ali would have been a great fight at any point in their respective careers. Frazier just had a style that gave Ali problems. Remember Ali had trouble with Doug Jones, who had a similar style to Frazier's, during Ali's first march to the title.

I have never seen Shavers' fights with Jimmy Young but I do know they fought twice. The first time Shavers stopped Young in the first round and the second one the fight was called a draw. Shavers was a limited fighter but extremely powerful and anyone he hit was in a lot of danger. It would seem Young ran the second time around against Shavers after learning about Shaver's power the hard way the first time.

Joe Frazier is coming back, at 46 years of age... Another crazy guy...

Wow, some swearing and verbal sparring on here lately. Massimo, Tyson dominated the late 80's, a longer run than Foreman. Tyson did do some terrible things on the way up, he was the product of his environment, which explains him but does not excuse him. Boxing is full of former criminals, and current ones too. Tyson is just one of them. Bowe-Lewis should have happened early on, a few years after they'd met in the Olympics. Oddly, Lewis, the winner, couldn't get the big matches then. I saw Mosely-De La Hoya, Mosely was given the last four rounds by all three judges, they all need their eyes checked, De La Hoya won at least two of those rounds and had a big lead entering round 8. Byrd- Oquendo, I gave Byrd two 10-8 rounds, and all the rounds down the stretch for a one/two point win. Oquendo won at least five rounds, got away with way too much shoving and clinching for which he should have been penalized late in the fight. Still, I have no idea how Byrd got a judge to call it for him basically 9 rounds to 3. Remember Holyfield-Lewis 1, how one judge gave it for EH 10-5? One judge gave it to Ellis over Quarry 10-5, as I recall. Again, this really hurts boxing's credibility. A standardized format needs to be established for judging fights, these guys need to pass a course. Ali-Tyson would be a great match, but I think Ali's movement, reach, jab would prevail, maybe even for a late-round KO. At least someone else gives Tyson his props. Koo Koo, it isn't a yesterday thing, it's a talent thing, most heavies today don't have much. They think boxing skills are incidental if they can weigh 250 and bench 300, this is stupid. Jimmy Thunder looked like a Greek God, couldn't break the top Ten. Look what endless hours in the gym and in tutelage did for the 6-0 195 lbs. Quarry, who dropped much bigger, stronger guys throughout his career. You can't buy talent at a pharmacy, it doesn't come in a bottle to wash down five cheesesburgers with. This why the late 60's - early 70's stands up and always will. People still buy Beatles records for the same reason.

| 9/24/03 11:23:45 PM| kookoo| ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com||||8| dear gary thats nice of you to think that way about jerry, yes he did because of his talent beat and take down big me, but these days these guys would be too big. we are not talking a little bigger , were talking a lot bigger. if jerry quarry were 6.5 230 he would be heavyweight champion today, but otherwise impossible! sorry coo coo|

| 9/25/03 03:21:04 AM| Massimo| Rome||u||10| Foreman' s reign was brief just because he met one of the most skillful fighters of all time:Ali'. I think after the Ali' fight he wasn't mentally the same ( Young, Lyle). If he never met Ali', he'd retired undefeated and he ranked as the greatest fighter of all time! He had the "match point" against Ali' to be the greatest, but Ali' canceled it. Tyson never came close to have "the all time match point".2) I saw the Lewis-Holyfield 1. I think that the draw wasn't a scandal. I had Lewis ahead of 1 or 2 points, even if I saw that fight just once.3) KooKooWhat do you think of the Quarry-Grant matchup ? I think this matchup proves that being huge is not enough ( maybe being huge like Calvin Lane yes, but I'm talking about human beings...). You have to be huge and skillful at the same time. Lewis is big and skillful !4) About the Ali'-Tyson matchup I have a theory:I think that the (19-21) years old Tyson probably would have beaten the (19-21) years old Ali'. But Tyson would never have beaten the Ali' of Thrilla,the Ali' of Kinshasa and the Ali' that beat Cleveland Williams. Best night against best night ,Ali' is the winner...|

| 9/25/03 06:40:09 AM| . . . . . |10| Earnie Shavers KO'd Jimmy Young in the third round of their first match in 1973, not in the first round as is often recorded. Despite much searching, no footage of that fight has ever appeared. Even the promoter of that fight in Philly was approached and he confirmed that the match was not filmed. In part, this may be because Earnie didn't really become famous until he KO'd Jimmy Ellis later that same year and Young's highlight would come in 1976 when fought Ali. No one seems to know if the Shavers-Young rematch in 1974 was filmed. That fight was scored a draw. It is very odd that no footage of two such important fights has ever surfaced.|

| 9/25/03 09:33:22 AM| Evren| London||@||10| Earnie himself believes the Young fight was two rounds. Where did you get that info that the fight was three rounds...who are you?|

| 9/25/03 10:35:34 AM| Roadscholarette| Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||10| Clay never faced anything like Frazier. Actually, Clay rarely faced anything like he did in his second career. The first time around, he could float like a butterfly around confused punching bags, who lumbered around the ring like Frankenstein monsters, throwing slow, roundhouse punches. I don't really understand why any of those opponents of his then even wasted their time jumping rope or hitting the speed bag. Their feet were nailed to the floor, and you could have balanced a stack of dishes on their hands, they were so slow. I honestly think he would have unraveled against Frazier, or several other opponents from career two. Foreman would have been Liston on LSD, and would have knocked him out, as would have Frazier too, most likely.By the time he fought the second time, his body had matured, he was much more centered emotionally, was able to process his experience in the ring and internalize it usefully as a ~man~ does, not like a silly adolescent as he was as Clay, and as Ali, he’d discovered his crowning virtue/curse – the ability to take a punch as no one ever has, ever. Consider that as athletic as the man was, it was, in the end, his ability to take a punch that allowed him to get by with so many things that he did, and to appear brilliant doing them.|

9/25/03 11:23:17 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|The Earnie Shavers verses Jimmy Young first fight is listed as Earnie winning by 1st round TKO over Young at the Boxing Records Archive at boxrec.com. It is possible this listing is incorrect as I remember seeing somewhere else the bout listed as Shavers winning by TKO in round number three. The second listing, I believe, is correct. Shavers and Young fought to a draw the second time around.|

9/25/03 12:41:59 PM|Massimo|Rome||e||||10|I think the Ali' that beat Cl. Williams would have beaten any fighter ever! Of corse, Williams wasn't a great champion, but Ali' was really awesome that night! Maybe that was his best fight!|

9/25/03 02:56:01 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|ESPN classic showed Ali verses Patterson 1 this week. What a pitiful but brave performance that Patterson put on. I could tell by the way Patterson moved that something wasn't right with him. Of course his back had gone out early in the fight and he not only had to endure a tremendous beating at the hands of Ali, it hurt him just as bad to throw punches. It is amazing he stayed up for twelve rounds. His corner or the referee should have stopped the bout as soon as the sixth round when it was obvious he didn't have a chance of winning. There was no need for him to take so much punishment. On a couple of occasions, a cornerman can be seen lifting him up to try and help his ailing back but it did no good.Of the rounds I saw, as some of them weren't on the program aired on ESPN, I only gave Patterson one round, the first round. Ali did not land a single punch and while Patterson only landed a couple of ineffective left hooks and maybe two or so body shots in the round, he was pressing the action throughout the round. I haven't seen the scorecards for this fight but it wouldn't surprise me if the judges gave Ali round one because he is Ali, not because he did anything in the round. No fighter should be given a round for not doing anything but dancing around. Of course, Ali controlled the rest of the action in the fight with constant left jabs and fast combinations but he did not do this in the first round. |

9/25/03 03:42:01 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|I wonder how Ali would have felt had Larry Holmes humiliated him, dancing around, as Ali used to do (and Leonard), showboating, and just punching the bag?I think these one sided things should be stopped. People get hooked on the Hollywood miracle punch, and think it happens all the time, while actually, it rarely does. Of course, fans would be upset with early stoppages, and some would say the fix was in, but what can you do? There are always massacres in which fans will say their man was in the fight, once in a while even that he was winning. |

9/25/03 05:04:56 PM|Massimo|Rome||e|||10|Did anyone see Ali'–Mac Foster and Ali'–Chuvalo 2? Were those beautiful fights?|Did Ali' deserve to win both fights? |

9/25/03 06:06:20 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|I've seen the second Ali-Chuvalo fight, and it was one of the most exciting boxing matches anyone could hope to see – a real slugfest. I truly don't know where commentators or writers are coming from (not all of them, but quite a few) who depict Chuvalo as a plodding, slow handed palooka. His ability to take a punch was not only equalled by only a few, but he was also a good boxer, fast handed, and threw excellent combinations. Also apparent in any Chuvalo fight was this was an intelligent man, and a seasoned professional who really knew what he was doing. Excellent announcer and interviewer too. Last time I saw him, not an outward sign of his profession either (other than the tough guy face).Chuvalo's punch-worthiness gave him many added options for strategy that only those naturally gifted in this way have.

*9/25/03 10:49:55 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentalleenent@aol.com||10|Roadsscholrette, the first Ali/Patterson fight reminds me of Jerry's second fight with Ali, except Jerry had a couple of competitive rounds, rounds one and two, but he did very little for the rest of the fight. He did have one last rally near the end of round six on the way to a TKO loss at the beginning of round seven, but the referee saw fit to stop the fight to avoid Jerry taking any more punishment. In the past I have argued that the referee stopped this fight too soon but now I believe it was a good decision. Fighters need to be protected in the ring even if some of the fans don't like it.One fight sometimes can push a fighter over the edge as far as permanent damage is concerned. Wouldn't it be a shame if Patterson's current condition of being punch drunk was made worse by taking unneeded punishment such as the beating he took in his first bout with Ali?*9/26/03 06:10:21 AM|Massimo|Rome||7||10|Thanks RS, I don't know exactly when, but I'll buythat fight one day! Foreman beat easily Chuvalo in less than three rounds in an one sided fight. |

*9/26/03 07:22:36 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||10|I saw Ali and Mac Foster (they fought in Japan) and I was impressed by Foster. He did much better than I expected. I was surprised he never went anywhere after that fight. He looked much better than he did against Jerry Quarry.*9/26/03 07:25:19 AM|Massimo|Rome||7||10|Do you think Wladimir Klitschko beat Fabio Moli with a really hard punch or was it another false? I have seen the knockout punch and it didn't seem so devastating...*9/26/03 07:37:17 AM|Massimo|Rome||7||10|Thanks John! Do you think Ali deserved to win? How did you score the fight? Was it a beautiful fight? Mac Foster is the only heavyweight that I know that achieved a 100% KO rate! Incredible! I beat the top contender Thad Spencer by Ko 1. Do you think Mac Foster would have been a top fighter even in modern times?*9/26/03 09:16:14 AM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||10|FOREST WARD: FOREST did you ever see Leotis Martin, when he was in Philadelphia? There was talk of him and Frazier, who were in fact no strangers to each other in 1969, THERE was an article in the NEW YORK TIMES, were Chuvalo said he just happened to get by JQ HE Sure as hell could beat Martin!*9/26/03 11:06:30 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||oriononside@aol.com||10|I have never seen Ali verses Mac Foster. Foster looked better than he did against Jerry? Foster looked good against Jerry for three rounds. He was landing his left jab consistantly and he really rocked Jerry with a hard right hand in the third round. I thought Foster won all three of these rounds. By round four Jerry began to figure Foster out and he started to come on strong. Jerry's finishing flurry in round six is vintage Quarry. He bombed Foster with a barrage of blows punched out by a hard right hand that drove Foster out and through the ropes.Earnie Shavers, in his book, mentions a time when he and Foster sparred in the gym. Shavers says he dominated the action until Foster's trainer decided that Mac had had enough.Another side note on Foster: George Foreman said Foster was supposed to be one of the five fighters he fought in one evening but Foster pulled out of the fight. Foreman commented that he was glad Foster pulled out as Foreman felt Foster may have given him some real trouble.
Kent - Patterson's problems were probably more of the Ali/Quarry origin - an accumulation of fights rather than just one, but the thing is, who knows? Since some fighters go long careers with relatively little or no (obvious) damage, any given boxer could conceivably be injured in just one fight, and have the problems assigned to an entire career. Ali, for example ~could~ owe his condition entirely to Joe Frazier. Since this isn't something we know, and obviously boxing is going to be slow to initiate any ongoing monitoring to determine beginning and increasing damage, the best we can do now is to stop fights to a fault.

Say, just for fun, how about some top ten lists? We could do them for any division, or for any niche within a division. I'll start out with an obvious one, and list my choice for top ten all time heavyweights, based on record, their best nights, potential, obviously how I think they'd have done against each other, and so forth. BTW, Ring magazine has a really neat issue this month - 50 great fights you never saw. Really good reading, and really gets the thought processes going!

Top ten heavies:

1. Muhammed Ali
2. George Foreman
3. Joe Frazier
4. Jack Dempsey
5. Mike Tyson
6. Evander Holyfield
7. Rocky Marciano
8. Sonny Liston
9. Jack Johnson
10. Joe Louis

The really tough guy contenders during the boxing's Golden Age - Quarry, Shavers, Lyle, Bugner, Chuvalo etc. - could have taken most of the rest of the champions. Can you imagine Quarry-Braddock, Shavers-Tunney, Lyle-Sullivan, Chuvalo-Corbett, or Bugner-Fitzsimmons?

I don't see Primo Carnera in your list !!!!! Are you drunk ? Are you crazy ? Are you drunk and crazy at the same time ?

My list:

1. Ali
2. Foreman
3. Frazier
4. Louis
5. Liston
6. Ken Norton
7. Vitali Klitschko
8. Lennox Lewis
9. "Big" George Godfrey
10. Mike Tyson

PS: but Calvin Lane, who was an undefeated amateur fighter (and as you can imagine, an heavyweight) would kick their ass easily !

Primo Carnera was simply and by far the greatest boxer, pound for pound, of all time (or of all times?). He had the sturdiest chin ever, was twice more powerful than Foreman, twice more fast than Ali, and was a better tactician than Tunney! Ah! Ah! I'd like it! I'd like it!

In your opinion, soon after Manilla, would Ali have prefered to fight Frazier for the fourth time or Foreman for the second?

a sad site indeed where are the minds of todays boxing fans? you have got to be crazy to rate Jack Dempsey in the top ten of all time. Tyson would kill Dempsey, it would almost like fighting a golden glove fighter. Dempsey not a chance, not in this world or the next one. get real people or just watch the cartoon channel. coo coo|

Primo Carnera was simply and by far the greatest boxer, pound for pound, of all time (or of all times?). He had the sturdiest chin ever, was twice more powerful than Foreman, twice more fast than Ali, and was a better tactician than Tunney! Ah! Ah! I'd like it! I'd like it!

In your opinion, soon after Manilla, would Ali have prefered to fight Frazier for the fourth time or Foreman for the second?
Frazier a fourth time, no doubt about it. Number one, Ali was never able to "put Frazier away" in his mind. There were always questions inside Ali about himself, and about this "beast of a man," as Ali called him, who trailed MA like a frightful predator, and refused to be beaten. Secondly, the money would almost certainly have been enormous. Though the judges had Ali ahead (I gave Frazier the edge by a hair) at the end of 14, the conclusion was unsatisfactory, it being halted by Frazier's swollen-shut eye. How good a fight a fourth one would have been would be another matter. They pretty much wrecked each other in Thrilla.

As far as I know, Chuvalo, Quarry, Bonavena, Ellis, etc. saw fighting Frazier only as a way to make a lot of money, and a way to make a giant career leap if they beat him, and that was it. Ali was obsessed with Frazier. I've read many times that Ali either refuses to talk about him at all, or talks constantly about him, even in the wee hours of the morning, wandering around his mansion, when Frazier isn't even there. Joe Frazier was the most defining event and person in Ali's life, and Muhammad will never reconcile it. Frazier doesn't like Ali, but is not similarly haunted.

Is it possible, in your mind, that Ali feared Foreman more than Frazier? Foreman maybe is the most scaring fighter of all times!!!! Do you think Ali' was confident to can beat Foreman another time?

R.S. you sound like you're obsessed with Frazier. Ali has never refused to talk about anybody...much less Joe Frazier, Joe is one of Ali's favorite subjects. It's Frazier who get's visibly angry when Ali's name is mentioned. He Hates Ali. When Ali lit the Olympic torch in Atlanta Joe said he wished he'd been up there with him...he would have pushed him into the fire! I read an artical by a young writer who spent a few days with Frazier, Joe is the one who won't let the people around him mention Ali's name, if they do he throws them out. Frazier is the one who won't let go, not Ali. A young Ali vs. a young Frazier. Joe may have had a better chance, but 8 out of 10 times Ali beats Frazier. It's not that I don't have any respect for Joe...he has always been one of my favorite fighters, but I also can't see a prime Frazier beating a prime Tyson, Joe was a slow starter and needed a few rounds to get into the groove. Tyson was always a fast starter, especially when a guy is right in front of him, which Frazier would be. Joe might slip a few punches but but Tyson's greater speed and power would would put joe on the deck...early. A slightly less than "prime" Frazier was staggered early by Ron Stander several times and Tyson is a world away from Stander. I'm watching the Ali-Wepner fight, and before there are any comments on how Wepner knocked Ali down. It was Wepner's size 13 left foot that dropped Ali, not a right to the heart.

R.S. you sound like you're obsessed with Frazier. Ali has never refused to talk about anybody...much less Joe Frazier, Joe is one of Ali's favorite subjects.

Well, he is my favorite fighter, based on the sort of fighter he was, and his skill and determination. Ali won’t always talk about him, but there are times when an audience wonders who put a nickel in him. It's Frazier who get's visibly angry when Ali's name is mentioned. He Hates Ali.

Yes, I guess that’s true. Frazier does indeed sincerely hate Ali, and for some good reasons, but it’s never seemed to me that it was the same sort of obsession Ali has about him. Maybe neither of them will ever get the other out of their system. I personally would have been grateful for the chance to make all that money, and who’d care about anything else? I don’t think Frazier ever completely internalized the star grasp Ali had on so many people, and A young Ali vs. a young Frazier. Joe may have had a better chance, but 8 out of 10 times Ali beats Frazier. It's not that I don't have any respect for Joe...he has always been one of my favorite fighters, but I also can't see a prime Frazier beating a prime Tyson. Joe was a slow starter and needed a few rounds to get into the groove. Tyson was always a fast starter, especially when a guy is right in front of him, which Frazier would be. Joe might slip a few punches but but Tyson's greater speed and power would put joe on the deck...early.

I see Frazier’s hand speed as second only to Ali’s, Tyson’s after Holmes’s. Ali and Quarry both went for Joe fast, and Frazier woke up. In close, JF had no peer. Tyson might have won a round or two, but then fear would set in. I’d see Tyson unraveling, if he was still up, inside of five rounds.

A slightly less than "prime" Frazier was staggered early by Ron Stander several times and Tyson is a world away from Stander.

I wonder if Frazier even trained for Stander? Stander was probably just as tough as Frazier (though a bleeder), but not anywhere near as good an athlete. The latter doomed him, not his heart. His wife said he didn’t even quit drinking beer when he was in training for the title!

I’m watching the Ali-Wepner fight, and before there are any comments on how Wepner knocked Ali down. It was Wepner’s size 13 left foot that dropped Ali, not a right to the heart.

Yes, that’s what I hear! Wepner and Cobb were two more who were just as tough or tougher than anyone they fought. They just weren’t good enough.

Some of you seem hypnotized by Joe Frazier. Yes, he was a great fighter, but no, he was not Superman. He took way too many punches and wasted a lot of energy with his "smokin'". He was also a dirty fighter -- all elbows and forearms and butts. Although he had excellent skills and was a great champion, he also depended greatly on his own voodoo legend from Cloverlay and all the stories of him starting out too fat to pull on his jeans, so he goes to the gym to work out and lose weight, discovers he can fight, etc. With this colorful and impressive jazz going on, and Joe being an unusually homely and mean-looking human being, with a skull like a bowling ball, he had opponents psyched out and fearful before they even climbed in the ring with him.

Massimo, Primo Carnera was a bum, a freak, an opponent, a nobody, hardly even able to box. Same with Jess Willard. world that's where boxing fans like this are. Dempsey only great for his time, not all time. Salt brine would not help Dempsey today, not even a can of spinach would help. What a joke you are, Kent! Can't fool the clockster :) coo coo!

Dempsey was a freak. He had a good left jab, a great heart, a good uppercut and a very good reach. He beat Uzcudun twice (a former European champion who beat Max Baer), Walter Neusel, Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey. He lasted 15 rounds against Sharkey (in their fight) and 6 against Joe Louis. He hadn't a good chin, he fell 11 times against Max Baer. But Baer could punch very hard! You can't become heavyweight champion of the world if you are a freak. Primo Carnera wasn't great, but in his prime was good.

Matchup: Michael Grant-Primo Carnera

I don't think that Carnera was a freak. He had a good left jab, a great heart, a good uppercut and a very good reach. He beat Uzcudun twice (a former European champion who beat Max Baer), Walter Neusel, Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey. He lasted 15 rounds against Sharkey (in their fight) and 6 against Joe Louis. He hadn't a good chin, he fell 11 times against Max Baer. But Baer could punch very hard! You can't become heavyweight champion of the world if you are a freak. Primo Carnera wasn't great, but in his prime was good.

I don't think that Carnera was a freak. He had a good left jab, a great heart, a good uppercut and a very good reach. He beat Uzcudun twice (a former European champion who beat Max Baer), Walter Neusel, Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey. He lasted 15 rounds against Sharkey (in their fight) and 6 against Joe Louis. He hadn't a good chin, he fell 11 times against Max Baer. But Baer could punch very hard! You can't become heavyweight champion of the world if you are a freak. Primo Carnera wasn't great, but in his prime was good.

Matchup: Michael Grant-Primo Carnera

I don't think that Carnera was a freak. He had a good left jab, a great heart, a good uppercut and a very good reach. He beat Uzcudun twice (a former European champion who beat Max Baer), Walter Neusel, Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey. He lasted 15 rounds against Sharkey (in their fight) and 6 against Joe Louis. He hadn't a good chin, he fell 11 times against Max Baer. But Baer could punch very hard! You can't become heavyweight champion of the world if you are a freak. Primo Carnera wasn't great, but in his prime was good.

Matchup: Michael Grant-Primo Carnera

I don't think that Carnera was a freak. He had a good left jab, a great heart, a good uppercut and a very good reach. He beat Uzcudun twice (a former European champion who beat Max Baer), Walter Neusel, Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey. He lasted 15 rounds against Sharkey (in their fight) and 6 against Joe Louis. He hadn't a good chin, he fell 11 times against Max Baer. But Baer could punch very hard! You can't become heavyweight champion of the world if you are a freak. Primo Carnera wasn't great, but in his prime was good.

Matchup: Michael Grant-Primo Carnera

I don't think that Carnera was a freak. He had a good left jab, a great heart, a good uppercut and a very good reach. He beat Uzcudun twice (a former European champion who beat Max Baer), Walter Neusel, Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey. He lasted 15 rounds against Sharkey (in their fight) and 6 against Joe Louis. He hadn't a good chin, he fell 11 times against Max Baer. But Baer could punch very hard! You can't become heavyweight champion of the world if you are a freak. Primo Carnera wasn't great, but in his prime was good.

Matchup: Michael Grant-Primo Carnera

I don't think that Carnera was a freak. He had a good left jab, a great heart, a good uppercut and a very good reach. He beat Uzcudun twice (a former European champion who beat Max Baer), Walter Neusel, Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey. He lasted 15 rounds against Sharkey (in their fight) and 6 against Joe Louis. He hadn't a good chin, he fell 11 times against Max Baer. But Baer could punch very hard! You can't become heavyweight champion of the world if you are a freak. Primo Carnera wasn't great, but in his prime was good.

Matchup: Michael Grant-Primo Carnera

I don't think that Carnera was a freak. He had a good left jab, a great heart, a good uppercut and a very good reach. He beat Uzcudun twice (a former European champion who beat Max Baer), Walter Neusel, Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey. He lasted 15 rounds against Sharkey (in their fight) and 6 against Joe Louis. He hadn't a good chin, he fell 11 times against Max Baer. But Baer could punch very hard! You can't become heavyweight champion of the world if you are a freak. Primo Carnera wasn't great, but in his prime was good.

Matchup: Michael Grant-Primo Carnera

I don't think that Carnera was a freak. He had a good left jab, a great heart, a good uppercut and a very good reach. He beat Uzcudun twice (a former European champion who beat Max Baer), Walter Neusel, Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey. He lasted 15 rounds against Sharkey (in their fight) and 6 against Joe Louis. He hadn't a good chin, he fell 11 times against Max Baer. But Baer could punch very hard! You can't become heavyweight champion of the world if you are a freak. Primo Carnera wasn't great, but in his prime was good.

Matchup: Michael Grant-Primo Carnera

I don't think that Carnera was a freak. He had a good left jab, a great heart, a good uppercut and a very good reach. He beat Uzcudun twice (a former European champion who beat Max Baer), Walter Neusel, Tommy Loughran and Jack Sharkey. He lasted 15 rounds against Sharkey (in their fight) and 6 against Joe Louis. He hadn't a good chin, he fell 11 times against Max Baer. But Baer could punch very hard! You can't become heavyweight champion of the world if you are a freak. Primo Carnera wasn't great, but in his prime was good.

Matchup: Michael Grant-Primo Carnera

I'm sorry to disappoint you, but whoever wrote that attack on you is not me. You know full well that I never take cheap shots at you or anyone else. You can believe me or not, I don't care. I did tell some of the other regulars and some Quarry family members one time about your post at the old Frazier site when you repeated misinformation from another site about Jerry trying to put a hit on Johnny Flores and they all gave you a hard time about it. Hey, I am sorry I stirred up a little trouble that was sent your way, but I will repeat, I never take childish attacks at you or anyone else and anyone that knows anything about me knows this. But anyway, that incident at the Frazier site happened over two years ago, get over it! Otherwise, I can't imagine what is bugging you about me, but it is really not my problem and I really don't care what you think about me.

What do you think about? He was 6'5 3/4. His body was similar to the Andre' Rousimoff's body: huge hands and feet, big weight, but not very tall! But probably he could boxe pretty well! I think Frazier was ahead of about 5 points after the first Ali' fight! He won clearly! Ali' did a very good fight, but never or almost never threw hard punches to Joe (maybe only in the ninth round). How do you score that fight? How did Frazier react to the Foreman's loss against Ali'? Was he surprised or shocked?
RS: I don't know if Carnera could punch hard. What do you think about? He was 6'5 3/4. A guy that big (he weighed about 260) can hit hard, even if he's an out of shape guy on the street who doesn't know how to throw a punch! In elite level boxing terms, from what I've read and his record, he'd probably be a little better than average, though not in the Foreman class.

I think Frazier was ahead of about 5 points after the first Ali' fight! He won clearly! Ali' did a very good fight, but never or almost never threw hard punches to Joe (maybe only in the ninth round). How do you score that fight? I had it 8-6-1, or possibly even 9-6. The Recht score of 11-4 for Frazier though was as ridiculous as the Phillipine judges who had Thrilla 8-4 Ali after twelve rounds. I had Joe ahead 7-6-1 at best when it ended. I don't doubt that Ali would have won the last round (if he'd come out, and I think he would have), given JF's swollen eyes. ~If~ my score had been the official one, and Ali won the 15th, the fight would have gone to Ali, since a champion retains the title on a draw. How did Frazier react to the Foreman's loss against Ali'? Was he surprised or shocked? I don't know. I suspect he was very surprised. He picked Foreman to win, both from ego, but common sense as well. I still have my doubts about that fight's legitimacy, from more than one angle.

RS's credit: This is Frazier-Ali
1) Even or Ali
2) Ali
3) Even or Frazier
4) Even or Frazier
5) Even or Ali
6) Frazier
7) Even or Frazier
8) Even or Frazier
9) Ali
10) Even or Frazier
11) Frazier
12) Even or Frazier
13) Even or Frazier
14) Ali
15) Frazier
2) Where do you disagree, RS?

2) Even or Frazier
3) Ali
4) Ali
5) Frazier
6) Frazier
7) Even or Frazier
8) Even or Frazier
9) Ali
10) Even or Frazier
11) Frazier
12) Even or Frazier
13) Even or Frazier
14) Ali
15) Frazier
2) Where do you disagree, RS?

Some curious comments regarding Muhammed Ali. Massimo, how can you say Foreman would be #1 all-time but only if he dodged Ali? That would still make Ali #1, wouldn't it? Fact is, Foreman was a cokehead and was on a fast road to defeat even if he dodged Ali. Jimmy Young was a very good top Ten guy, but not nearly as good as George and he beat him by exposing...
George's flaws as a boxer as well. Foreman had poor balance, good defensive openings, and no jab, he's nowhere near #1. Road's, I'm a Frazier fan too, he was a courageous man who, when enraged, gave Ali, all he could ever handle. Jerry had better handspeed than Joe, as did others. Joe's forte was his ability to pursue relentlessly and eat or slip hundreds of punches in doing so. I agree with Kent, Ali over Frazier 8 out of ten, and that's no disrespect to Joe at all. Koo Koo, let's quit the namecalling, it adds nothing to this site. Since all-time lists are being added, here's mine: 1)Muhammed Ali, not that I'm a big fan of his, but he is the best I've ever seen. He lost his best years to suspension, in my opinion. 2)Joe Louis, I also consider Joe the #2 sports performer of the past century, behind Babe Ruth, because of what he did for America. Ali I'd put fifth, behind Jim Thorpe and Jackie Robinson. The rest of the heavyweights I put in no particular order: Jim Corbett, Jim Jeffries, Jack Johnson, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney, Rocco Marciano, Sonny Liston, Mike Tyson. Note the absence of Frazier, Foreman, Holmes, Holyfield, and Lewis, they belong in the next group. Koo Koo, one reason Tyson might pound Dempsey today is because he came some 65 years after him, isn't it? Tyson benefitted from all the training advancements that came after guys like Dempsey, didn't he? If Tyson comes along in 1920, and if he avoids prison, which is doubtful, he weighs 190 and he and Dempsey are even. My list is based on the ability to dominate one's era, not fuzzy prime vs. primes which rarely respect the classic champs properly. Massimo is right about Carnera, a good moving big guy who could box, but was afraid to punch, a gentle giant. One of a number of good Italian heavies.

9/29/03 01:25:17 PM|Gerry Schultz|Ohio||jgschultz11@msn.com|9|Also, I saw a couple of good up-and comers this weekend, Dominick Guinn and Joe Mesi, both look like very good top Ten material.|
9/29/03 02:16:44 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|10|Massimo - you have a lot of even rounds there! What's really interesting to do (which judges don't have the benefit of) is putting fights or parts of them on slow motion. It's interesting how this can turn perception of a round around. In fight one, Ali didn't go after Frazier early as he did in Manila, but he wasn't brilliant either. Good enough to win though, which he probably did in three of the first four rounds. Ali won nine, but other than that, five through fifteen, Joe won seven or eight, one even maybe, with fifteen dramatically his. Dundee said Ali was knocked out at the point of impact, alive again on impact, then miraculously was able to muster some fight at the end.Gerry - I still say Frazier had the fastest hands next to Ali, maybe Holmes. Tyson after them. The champs of old would have carried more weight (muscle too), and would have changed their fighting styles and training if they were around today. One guy I read about who was a fantastic athlete other than as a fighter, was Jeffries. His workouts would put guys today to shame, he could run close to a 10 second hundred, and high jump five feet, doing the Western Roll! At 220 pounds.

9/29/03 03:45:09 PM|Massimo|Rome|3|10|RS-I have read that Ernie Cab was a very good street brawler and that ( if I remember correctly) once he challenged Sonny Liston in a street brawl but Sonny didn't want part of it.I think Ali' won the following rounds: 2,9,14 and maybe 5.Gerry-Thanks for your support to Carnera's cause !I don't say that Carnera was good just because he was Italian. I say that because I really believe that. I think he was much better than people usually think.About Foreman-I meant that if Foreman hadn't fought Ali', probably the wordl wouldn't have realize and maybe wouldn't not even have suspected that Ali' could beat Foreman. Today the world would say: "Ali' had 3 painful fights against Frazier and Norton, Foreman destroyed these two guys as they were amateurs! Foreman would have killed Ali'!". Besides that I think that Foreman wasn't mentally the same fighter after Kinshasa (this explains Young and Lyle...!)! He was a shocked and depressed fighter! Foreman could jab very well (Foreman-Frazier 2), even if sometimes he forgot about jabbing (Kinshasa).|
| 9/29/03 04:36:15 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | RS: Some of the regulars on this board have some great Jerry Quarry streetfight/parking lot altercation stories—usually starting with someone picking a fight with Jerry and ending with Jerry slamming the idiot. You know, at 6 feet and change and 190 pounds, Jerry (even with the thick neck) wasn't the most imposing guy in a bar/club. I imagine some jerks might even think, hmmm...is that the guy who lost to (fill in the blank—Ali, Frazier, etc.) and have the delusion that they might be able to take him. Their mistake! |
| 9/29/03 05:28:59 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Also, I don't know if there's any truth to it, but in the mid-late 70's, AFTER Foreman lost the title, it was rumored that he punched and consequently, disoriented a shark near a beach he was at. Keep in mind that this was the JAWS era, so it could have been a tall tale—but apparently he was in the shallow water and a decent sized (not huge) shark rushed toward him and other swimmers—he had his feet planted and punched at it—stopping it cold—and then it swam away in a dizzy state. Has anyone else heard this? |
| 9/29/03 06:15:45 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 | Angelo – once, on the gulf of Mexico, a shark got trapped by a sand bar and currents, and you wouldn’t believe the artillery guys were hauling out of their cars to shoot at it! No one waded in to punch it though. LOL! I wonder if that’s true? Well, six feet and 190 is a big guy, and if he were recognized, I can imagine some drunken fool wanting to test himself against Quarry. Liquor turns mice into lions sometimes. What the ordinary guy could do too, seeing Frazier and Quarry, and Frazier winning, would be to normalize both of them, and see Jerry therefore as a soft touch, not realizing that these were two extremely gifted, highly trained, conditioned, and ferocious men, waay out of the orbit of the ordinary person’s realm. The average barfly would be hit six times before his brain even registered what was happening, and the boxer wouldn’t have to fear anything of his, even ~if~ it landed by a miracle. I’d like to hear some of these stories! What I’d fear as a fighter would be one, a lawsuit in this day and age, and two, that I’d break my hand. Of course, a real “guy” wouldn’t do anything, having a great story to tell, which of course he’d embellish, with him going “toe to toe” till someone broke it up. He’d probably say, “Naw, he wasn’t much!” about the fighter. &#61514;Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.Angelo – once, on the gulf of Mexico, a shark got trapped by a sand bar and currents, and you wouldn’t believe the artillery guys were hauling out of their cars to shoot at it! No one waded in to punch it though. LOL! I wonder if that’s true? Well, six feet and 190 is a big guy, and if he were recognized, I can imagine some drunken fool wanting to test himself against Quarry. Liquor turns mice into lions sometimes. What the ordinary guy could do too, seeing Frazier and Quarry, and Frazier winning, would be to normalize both of them, and see Jerry therefore as a soft touch, not realizing that these were two extremely gifted, highly trained, conditioned, and ferocious men, waay out of the orbit of the ordinary person’s realm. The average barfly would be hit six times before his brain even registered what was happening, and the boxer wouldn’t have to fear anything of his, even ~if~ it landed by a miracle. I’d like to hear some of these stories! What I’d fear as a fighter would be one, a lawsuit in this day and age, and two, that I’d break my hand. Of course, a real “guy” wouldn’t do anything, having a great story to tell, which of course he’d embellish, with him going “toe to toe” till someone broke it up. He’d probably say, “Naw, he wasn’t much!” about the fighter.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.

Massimo – who’s Earnie Cab? Primo would probably be in the class of Lyle and Shavers in the late 60s-late 70s, an opponent to respect, but no one who’d take the monsters.
was, till later. The guy (who got punched) was a tough guy too in a lot of bar fights and stuff. There was another incidence with a local fighter name Hal (tnt) Carrol (who fought Bob Foster). Hal was shot in the head and the doctors couldn't believe his skull stopped the bullet from entering his brain.

Joe Mesi who fought on Saturday nights card is an absolute superstar in Buffalo. He's a bigger draw and more popular then any members of the Buffalo Bills or Sabres. Only problem is he fights absolute stiffs. The guy he fought Saturday stood straight up and practically stuck his chin out to be hit. Mesi seems like a real nice guy and I hope he makes it but my personal opinion is he doesn't have the stuff. I think any of the other 4 fighters on the card could have beaten him easily. Hope I am wrong .. we'll see.

Ernie Cab is a guy who fought Sonny Liston in 1958 losing by KOT 8 and Ernie Terrell twice losing both times by KO (3, 8). I think he would have given Patterson a competitive fight. He is ( or was, I don't know) 6'1" and his fighting weight was about 210 lbs.

At 48, reading about Jerry brings back the memories. And, to be completely honest, it was the fact that Jerry was a white guy that could hang with a group of immensely talented black heavyweights that drew my attention to him. Jerry really never got the "Wide World of Sports" type exposure necessary in that pre-cable era to give him name recognition among the not-so-intense, casual boxing fan. And that is a shame, as he fought the best, gave it his all, a real warrior. Now for MY two cents: Ali may have been the "greatest", I can not say for certain, as I did not see the fighters that preceded the Liston era fight LIVE fights. Somehow, old clips do not tell an accurate story. But, I do NOT see one Heavyweight mentioned here, that, to this day, sticks in my memory. One that fought an in-his-prime Ali. Was European Champ at the time he met Ali. Went 15 rounds, no knockdowns. In fact, I do not remember Ali or him even really hurting each other. Of course, this was in 1976, so my memory may be failing me, but what I remember was this: A tall, agile, white guy outboxing "The Greatest." A fight I thought Richard Dunn won easily over the 15 rounds. Not even close. Ali mailed his effort in? Maybe. Thought this was just another white guy, easily defeated? Again, could be. But lose to Dunn he did. On World Wide Television.

I think Calvin Lane would kill anybody in a street or a bar brawl! Maybe Foreman, Ali and Frazier put together, in their primes, could give him a competitive brawl... Is there anybody who thinks he can whip Calvin in a brawl? He is 7'5"1/2 tall, weights about 400 pounds and his size shoe is 25EEE. Oh, I forgot ! He has a black belt in karate !!!!!!!

Muhammad Ali knocked Richard Dunn out in, I believe, the 5th round. I think it ended as a TKO, but Ali had knocked him down a bunch of times. Dunn looked good for a few minutes of the fight, but Ali took control. In fact, it was Ali's last win via knockout in his career. Maybe you're thinking of Joe Bugner? Alfredo Evenagelista? Hmmm....was Chuck Wepner European? Only if New Jersey is part of Europe! Anyway, none of these guys came close to beating Ali. What do you think about Joe Bugner? I know he was European champion several times and that he gave Frazier a very close fight. Do you think he today would be a top contender? How would you see him against Lewis, Tyson, Holyfield or Tua? Thanks !
He is a limited fighter, but he is probably the hardest puncher in the world today! I'd love to see Tua against Tyson! This one would be a war and I think Tua would win. I believe that Tyson should show to be a top 10 contender at this point of his career! At this purpose he should beat people like Tua, Rahman, Briggs, W and V.Klitschko, Whitaker, Mc Cline etc. Tyson-Briggs would be another very interesting fight!

Massimo - Bugner was big and athletically talented, and had a good chin. Unfortunately, he didn't really care for boxing all that much, being in it solely to make some money. I think he was always in shape, but was not real active in the ring much of the time. He seemed to be something of a Teflon man, who seemed to avoid damage, going the route with Ali twice, and Frazier once. Joe beat him by a narrow margin, and Bugner was only 23 at the time. There are some people who say he had the "potential" to be the best white heavyweight since Marciano. He fought till he was close to 50, and won the European title in his 40s. There are few of the really big names he didn't face when he was fighting.

Bugner also played in several films with one of my favorite actors: Bud Spencer (Carlo Pedersoli). I need a good and I hope free English lesson: Does "aint" mean "are not"? "Whatcha gonna do" is "What are you gonna do"? "Betcha you" is "Do you bet"? These things are hard to learn because nobody teaches you.
first or second language, the fact that it's hard to learn and make sense of, isn't talked about much any more. So many usages of words, meanings changing with voice tone, homonyms, and all sorts of things. You do well with it though. Better than I'd do with Italian!

| 9/30/03 01:20:14 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago || roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 |
|---------------------|-----------------|--------------------|----------------------------------|----|
| Does "aint" mean "are not" ?Yes, it can mean "are not" too."What's gonna do" is " What are you gonna do" ?Yes. Sometimes people write words as they say them, or as they say them in slang."Betcha you" is "Do you bet" ?"You betch" mean "you best," yes.And it's homonym, not hominym. I typo now and then when I don't proof read. These days, they say Chinese and Russian are the hardest languages to learn. Kids learn faster than adults. Some schools with foreign populations sometimes have to have the kids help with translations to their parents in conferences with the kid's teachers. |

| 9/30/03 03:44:15 PM | Massimo | Rome ||4||10 | RS-- I was in the underground yesterday and I found a Russian newspaper... My God! They have the number 3 within the words !!!!!!!!!!!!!BEATING CALVIN LANE IS EASIER THAN LEARNING RUSSIAN !!!!!!!|

| 9/30/03 05:54:31 PM | Steve | N.J. ||dmmsrm@comcast.net | 10 |
| Hi R.S. we the people of N.J. take umbrage at your implication that the musical, lilting dialect of the people of New Jersey has anything to do with the English language. We believe in fully integrating the phonetic alphabet into our daily speech patterns. Such as the phrases," djaet?" Which poses the question," have you eaten? Another," hey youse guys." , or ,hello,everyone." I'm afraid I must really ask for an apology for myself and Bob Bumbera . Kent can give you some pretty good stories about the Quarry clan's brawls. He is however, admirably discreet about those details. |

| 9/30/03 06:33:59 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago || roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 |
|Steve -- | Blush, apologies floating your way! What do we Chicagans have to talk about when we call our mayor "da mare," and some of my southern relatives? We won't even go there! Maybe Kent will share some stories. You mean more than Jerry brawled in the streets?Ali once asked Frazier how he thought he'd do in a street fight. Joe replied simply and matter of factly, "Man, I'd ~kill~ a monkey in the street." Probably so.|

| 9/30/03 07:09:13 PM | Paul | Sydney, Australia | P1MIs4.aol.com.au | 10 |
| RS - you are right about Bugner. He lives on the Gold Coast in Australia now and is very healthy and fit. His speech is articulate and he obviously doesn't have any bad effects from years of boxing. I recall that he had a part in a couple of movies but I can't remember what they are. I read recently that he is tutoring Russell Crowe (who also lives here) on boxing for a new movie on the life of James J. Braddock. So you are right on that point as well. I've only seen Bugner in person once and he is a huge imposing man. It was at a fight night about 8 years ago and George Foreman just happened to be visiting Sydney at that time and he was at the fight too. For some years before then Bugner had been trying to arrange a fight with Foreman but it never happened. At the fight night Bugner tried to hype the proposed fight by acting like a World Federation wrestler and he kept taunting Foreman about being "too chicken" to fight him. He suddenly confronted Foreman (feigning anger). Big George broke out into a huge smile, wrapped his massive arms around Bugner, and then gave him an affectionate hug. It looked really funny at the time and even Bugner had to laugh. Anyway, Bugner is popular over here. Crowe is a boxing fan as well and he was recently at the Mundine v Echols fight. |

| 9/30/03 08:00:01 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |
| I think Jimmy Dorsey may have more information about street brawls involving the Quarrys as he grew up in Bakersfield. I do have a good source of information within the Quarry clan but I forget to ask him about trivial things like brawls. We talk about things such as what is going on in our lives and often we don't even talk about Jerry or even boxing. Steve is right. I hear things sometimes and I don't repeat them, at least not in a public forum and of course I would never repeat something a friend told me not to say anything about and I consider my source a friend of mine. Not that he has told me anything recently that is of any significance that anyone else would want to know. Iroically, Mr.
Jimmy told me some good fight stories but I don't remember that much about them as public brawling is not much of an interest of mine. I will add one that I heard on ESPN classic. Apparently two young thugs tried to pull Jack Dempsey out of a cab to rob him. Dempsey being elderly at the time hit each of them once to the body and they both fell to the ground and they would not get up, being afraid of what this tough old man would do to them. One punch for each of them was enough!

| 9/30/03 09:08:16 PM|steve|N.J.|dmmsrm@comcast.net||10|Hi R.S. Kent and I have awhile ago parted ways on street fighting.He knows some outragious stuff!
Out of respect for Kent,I won't repeat it.Kent and I disagree on street fighting. He is a sports writer.I,however,am just an old,retired street fighter.I love the inside poop about the Quarryclan.They where a rompin, stompin, grapes of wrath family.God bless them!This families story reads like a Steinbechian novel. Kent beleives that these stories of the Quarry family migration to Cal. are too personal. I believe they are perfect fodder for a book on the reality of the Irish,american experience during the "dust bowl" nightmare of the 20's and 30's. I think Kent,or someone,is missing a great opportunity for a book. |

| 10/1/03 01:01:50 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com||8|gud road scum you are longwinded, kent write a book, parden me while i almost bust a lung laughing, frazier 2nd fastest heavy , what have you been doing watch in fast speed mode, or maybe that stuff you've been smoking again, lets keep it real on here or is that just too much to ask for, massimo stick to italian, forget english, its not for you. coo coo coo coo |

| 10/1/03 04:44:31 AM|Massimo|Rome||4||10|Bugner played in 4 movies with Bud Spencer. That movies were not about boxing but, anyway,Bud gave him a beating in all that 4 movies ( in the real life I think it would have been a little...different...)

| 10/1/03 05:44:59 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Steve, you give me more credit on knowing what happened to the Quarrys as far as early history or street brawling than I actually know but it would be facinating research. Like I said, Jimmy Dorsey would know more about the street stuff than I do even though Mr Jimmy (James Quarry, for those that don't know) told me some stories that I didn't take notes about, sorry Steve but I guess I didn't think it was that significant at the time. Mr. Jimmy was a good source of info and he will always be missed on these pages.Others have been at work on the Quarry story, Daryl if you are out there, how's the book coming? haven't talked to you for a while.Koo Koo, you can laugh all you want but I already am the author of a book of children's stories and I am working on a book of science fiction shortt stories. I am still puzzled the hatred this person has for me. I would say he was jealous if it wasn't for the fact that I really don't think I am that big of a deal. I am just an ordinary guy putting my two cents worth out there. If I happen to have a forum on some other sites to express my opinions, I am in way lucky they let me do it. That is the way I see myself.
I give up, Koo Koo can rant all he wants but I will no longer read or pay attention or respond to any of it. |

| 10/1/03 08:01:33
AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||10|Steve - Given different things I've heard and read, my guess is that a Quarry book would be interesting, perhaps with wider appeal than as one just for boxing fans. A movie? I'm not sure how a movie audience would respond to a film about someone who didn't win the title. Hollywood scripts are pretty formula predictable, and strict boxing movies have even Rocky Balboa as champion. The street fighting aspect is interesting, since first of all, in a ring these guys are way above the capabilities of the ordinary person. But secondly, since everyone who watches a fight secretly wonders how they'd fare if they were in there, the street probably gets their hopes a little higher, away from the Marquis of Queensbury. A little alcohol may play a part too, I imagine!

10/1/03 05:04:40 PM|Massimo|Rome||4|||10|I have just read that Ring Magazine in 1998 rated Holyfield above Foreman !!! That's a swearword !! Evander is great but not so great ! Lennox Lewis rated 32...Another swearword !He is surely a top 20 all time, maybe a top 10.Ali! called him the greatest of all time ! Was he joking ? Is he crazy ! Lewis's fights against Golota, Ruddock, Tyson, Grant, Botha, Morrison, Tua etc are masterpieces !|10/2/03 02:39:39 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|MASSIMO: The all time greatest rankings from Ring Magazine have always been whacko. The orginal editor Nat Fleisher wrote that he believed Max Schmelling would have beaten Ali. Fleisher rated Jack Johnson as the all time best heavy, and I believe, Jim Jeffries as the #2. I personally rate Ali as the greatest heavy of all time, with Foreman #2. Right before he died, Jack Dempsey rated Sam Langford as the greatest. We will never know will we?|10/2/03 03:55:37 PM|Massimo|Rome||4|||10|John-I agree with you: Ali' is the number 1, Foreman is the number 2. Jack Johnson was surely a champion, but his fights were so boring. If anyone can't sleep, my advice is to watch a Jack Johnson's fight. Don't you agree ? RS has some doubts about the Ali'-Foreman fight ! I think that fight was too beautiful to be fixed...The only thing that I can't understand is why the ropes were so loose... What do you think about ?|10/2/03 10:33:41 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|I've read old copies of Ring Magazine when Fleischer was editor, and he was very anti-Ali. He grudgingly gave him ~some~ due, but MA could have beaten Foreman and Frazier on back-to-back nights, and if he'd been dropped, that would lead. He even refused to call him Ali. Fleischer also tended to go with the ~real~ old timers, possibly even fighters who kissed his ass (from whenever). I remember in one of their "Who'd beat who" features, he even had scarecrow Bob Fitzsimmons taking Frazier, and he liked Joe! He also had Benny Leonard beating Roberto Duran at lightweight.I've noticed that Muhammad Ali tends to laud fighters he's either beaten, or never has to fight. Could he be doing that with Lennox Lewis?|10/3/03 02:44:31 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|R SYea you got Nat Fleischer pegged correctly. He loved the old timers. He prided himself on keeping a clean magazine. i guess back in the 60's and before there was a lot of sex and tawdry stuff in the fight magazines and he had one the whole family could look at. The old Ring Magazines do seem more interesting then the new ones though, not that i was around to remember the fights. I liked the sketches that one artist use to do too. One thing he never touched on much either was the fixing and mob control of fighters back then, and from what i've gathered there was a lot of it. Ever check out the old fight magazines on ebay? They're not very expensive and are fun just to look at the old covers, some go back to the 30's. P S I couldnt quite follow you on your last post..4th sentence down. Not like you to be incoherent so maybe its me. lol|10/3/03 06:44:54 AM|Massimo|Rome||e|||10|I have read in boxing record archive that Bonavena weighted about 280 lbs against Jimmy Ellis. Is it true? This would explain howJimmy could beat him !!|10/3/03 07:49:21 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|MASSIMO: Bonavena weighed about 205 in his fight against Ellis. That was one of Oscar's worst fights ever. He was knocked down twice in that fight. Bonavena was about 6' tall. He was from Argentina but his parents came from Italy. He was a pretty tough guy. His early trainer in the USA was Charlie Goldman who trained Rocky Marciano. Goldman thought he had real potential. |
| 10/3/03 08:10:48 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Ed -What I meant by that sentence (the word "lead") was first to allude to the headline choosing philosophy of the news media, that "If it bleeds it leads." In terms of leading in this case, I was predicting that no matter what Ali did, Fleischer would attempt to find something negative, or some way not to give the man his due, even by just saying nothing when he should. Of course, Ali "got his due" sometimes when he didn't deserve it too. Yes, the old Rings had a statement inside about someone being able to bring the magazine home, leave it on the coffee table, etc. "It is entertaining, and it is clean." I don't recall other older magazines showing racy pictures. What was he talking about? Ads?|
| 10/3/03 09:33:10 AM|max hord|fernandina Bch,Fla||rasluc@msn.com||||10|Joe Bugner was a tough guy that kept his hands up and his ass off of the floor most of the time. A good thing to do when you're a boxer. Not much offense though. He probably could lose to the present day heavyweights without getting hurt too bad. He may even beat Orlin Norris. |
| 10/3/03 10:01:06 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Not that anyone ~tries~ to get hurt in the ring, or doesn't want to win, but from people I've talked with about Bugner, and articles I've read, it seems that he took this a bit too far, and often appeared to be trying more not to ~lose~ than to win. He often jabbed or did nothing at all, as if he were "thinking about it" all the time, and all too often the moment just passed. I understand that in the gym, he looked awesome, incredibly quick and graceful and strong, but didn't always carry this ability into the ring. Of course, no one looked worse in training than Ali, letting guys bang on him, and possibly this is where a lot of his damage was done.|
a three round deficit to overcome when they fought him. Judges and refs tended to "see" what they were told they'd see, not always what was happening. Rounds and fights went his way that wouldn't have with anyone else. I admire his athleticism, his wiles in the ring, and his toughness - unparalleled - but I can't say the same for him as a person. Have you ever checked out his page? Good Lord, you'd think you were accessing God's homepage!

| 10/3/03 04:45:50 PM | steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | | | 10 | I'd like to see James Toney vs Bob Foster in a 175 lb or 190lb. fight!! Then, the winner against Holyfield. I'd like to have seen a Bob Foster vs Floyd Patterson fight. |

| 10/3/03 06:05:06 PM | Evren | London | | | | 10 | Frazier broke George Chuvalo's eye socket and George correctly quit. Chuvalo was also stopped by George Foreman in three rounds which many consider a premature stoppage by Arthur Mercante. |

| 10/3/03 07:40:50 PM | max hord | fernandina, Fl | rasluc@msn.com | | | 10 | R.S. Never heard anyone say Joe Bugner was awesome. Sounds like some "pub" talk. What you are referring to though is the classic "gym fighter" syndrome where an ordinary guy can look like a champion in the gym but all of that changes when it counts. |

| 10/3/03 07:55:48 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | | | 10 | Exactly right - that was the gist of it. Not knowing this, and seeing Ali, Frazier, or Foreman in training, and guys like Bugner, others, there's no way anyone would bet on the first three, especially Ali. He/they shot to smiteereens the old team sport maxim that you play like you practice. |

| 10/3/03 02:48:32 AM | Massimo | Rome | | | | 10 | To Brenda Quarry - If you have only Jerry Quarry's fights or even other fighters fights? Do you have some Primo Carnera's fights? If you have only Jerry Quarry's fights I'd like to buy Quarry-Lyle. But before buying it I'd like to know if the film is in good conditions. How much do you think will be the overall price? I live in Rome. I wrote here because I suspect my mail isn't working well. Thanks! |

| 10/3/03 09:21:46 AM | Gerry Schultz | Cleveland, Ohio | jgschultz111@msn.com | | | 9 | It may well be pub talk, but I think Joe Bugner was a very good heavy also, a solid top Ten guy and a good contender on par with Shavers and Young. Road'ette, you're right about Jim Jeffries, a real cowboy who was also a world-class athlete for his era. Jeffries demolished every top guy during his reign and retired undefeated at age 29. Many know him for coming back at 38 to face Jack Johnson, the guy lost 50 lbs. for the fight in a matter of just a few months! I don't hold that loss against him and it was his only loss against a rack of dominating wins. Jeffries might by top five all-time, a real legend before the 1920's, the first big decade for sports and entertainment. |

| 10/3/03 11:53:55 AM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | | | 10 | Here's a good site I found on Jim Jeffries. This page claims Jeffries could actually jump over six feet. I've also read 5'10", so I just said "over five" (anyone wondering about the difficulty of this should go out in their yard and try to jump three!). It says he once shot a deer and carried it 9 miles back to camp. The comparisons of Jeffries to other fighters is very interesting, whether you agree with them or not. One thing is for certain - this was a tremendously strong, athletically gifted, rugged man who would have changed his style for today. The page likens him to a combination of Liston-Foreman, but with greater stamina. While I know the fights then (almost all much longer and with fewer "safety" rules) were slower paced, I'd love to see Jeffries fight to get a feel for his fighting! I don't think Mc Cline is a top 10 contender, but he would be a good test for Mike Tyson...Jameel is no Clifford...I just wanted to add my opinion. I think Chuvalo didn't have a chance in the world to beat (or of beating, or to beating...Boh! ) Foreman. I'm happy that fight was stopped at that point, because Foreman could have hurt Chuvalo badly.

Ed – You're right, the fight scene was very different then, as were the styles of fighting. When they refer to the “fleet footed” Corbett or Fitzsimmons, we aren’t exactly talking Muhammad Ali flitting like a water bug on speed around a befuddled Sonny Liston. A “big punch” could be a big fish in a small pond as well, as could the ability to take one, or claims of stamina when guys spent a lot of time just standing in the ring looking at each other. So to say they could have been plopped down in Manila or Madison Square Garden and done well is not something to put your money on. Many old timers would have adapted, but some would not have. Johnson and Langford were obviously not the only blacks who had the ability to fight well, but with the way things were, others just figured it wasn’t worth their time to endure the hassles of trying to establish themselves. As for records, we have a modern day comparison. Not to take anything away from Earnie Shavers, but one reason his KO % is so awesome (67 out of 73 fights) is his competition. There were only three fighters I’ve ever heard of in his first 45 fights, and once he began fighting names, his win loss record against them was 2-1 for losses, and all those wins weren’t against prime boxers. One of his early losses was a KO by Ron Stander, and the only reason I’ve heard of ~him~ was Frazier’s decision to use him for a post-Ali gym workout.So it was easier to build an impressive record in Jeffries’s day, plus when fighters fight each other over and over, there’s more of a chance for a return win off a loss (or continuing to win). An easier era all around. As we’ve seen from the success blacks have found in all sports, a fighter’s record who never fought them is as dicey as the chances of an all white football team (a dilemma southern colleges had to face once upon a time).So it was easier to build an impressive record in Jeffries’s day, plus when fighters fight each other over and over, there’s more of a chance for a return win off a loss (or continuing to win). An easier era all around. As we’ve seen from the success blacks have found in all sports, a fighter’s record who never fought them is as dicey as the chances of an all white football team (a dilemma southern colleges had to face once upon a time).As we've seen from the success blacks have found in all sports, a fighter's record who never fought them is as dicey as the chances of an all white football team (a dilemma southern colleges had to face once upon a time).As we've seen from the success blacks have found in all sports, a fighter's record who never fought them is as dicey as the chances of an all white football team (a dilemma southern colleges had to face once upon a time).As we've seen from the success blacks have found in all sports, a fighter's record who never fought them is as dicey as the chances of an all white football team (a dilemma southern colleges had to face once upon a time).As we've seen from the success blacks have found in all sports, a fighter's record who never fought them is as dicey as the chances of an all white football team (a dilemma southern colleges had to face once upon a time).
If this is true, which is the explanation? It's not clear to me.

I'm just a boxing fan, but it's clear to me that you have a very personal way to rank the fighters (probably better than mine). You're way to look at boxing is different from most guys that write in this site.

Thanks.

I think the ability to take a punch is a fairly complicated issue. There is for certain a psychological component, but I also think there's a physiological one as well. I'm not sure that medicine has a handle on the physical part. Remember, most doctors deal with what's known, rather than what could be. The greatest doctors are artists too, asking, testing, wondering, so perhaps the answer to punch-taking will emerge one day.

While faster than Ali, I think Cassius Clay would have been eaten alive by Frazier or Foreman, as well as a number of other contenders not willing to plod around before falling down for him. Muhammad Ali was Cassius Clay as a fully grown man, and I think this maturity brought into full flower his ability to take a punch as well as to weather the fury of opponents of a caliber he never fought as Clay.

BTW, everyone, I mentioned this in another, general discussion forum, and I neglected to bring it up in here, to people who'd actually enjoy it (no one in the other forum cared). This Summer, I read a fantastic book (it's in libraries and bookstores) – "Ghosts of Manila," by Mark Kram. Kram is not only a whale of a knowledgeable boxing man, but one of the best authors you'll ever read, in any area. His ability with words brings the world of the ring vividly alive like no one else. This book not only is good reading, but has much information about boxing in general, but more specifically about Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier. Even an enthusiastic fan comes away with a lot of new information!

I remember reading a book on Ali that commented that he actually trained himself to be able to withstand knockout blows. Ali allowed his training partners to hit him heavily around the head so that he would experience the sensation and know how to react when it happened again. I remember reading that Ali called it the "land of the half dream". He often didn't wear head protection when sparring. As a result of this training Ali not only had extreme tolerance to knockout punches, but he also knew how to pretend that he wasn't hurt when he was actually hurt very badly. There were other times when Ali actually pretended to be hurt and his confused opponent didn't know whether he was or wasn't. Ali's current problems are probably due to the punches he took at training just as much as the ones he got in real fights. And Koo Koo, Tyson would NEVER have beaten Ali. NEVER. Teddy Atlas once said that Tyson would have lasted seven rounds maximum with Ali. By then Ali would have broken Tyson psychologically. Atlas said that Tyson was never strong enough mentally to beat Ali, Louis and the other greats. Apart from Tyson's weak psychological state, he would not have been able to knock Ali out and it would be sheer fantasy to think that he could beat 'The Greatest' on points by out-boxing him. Likewise, Louis would not have had any problems with Tyson. A Tyson v Marciano fight would have been different, though. Marciano would have soaked up some punishment from Tyson before stopping him late in the fight. Tyson had most of the tools bar two - mental toughness, and the ability to absorb punishment. Ali and the others were always willing to pick themselves up off the canvass to win a fight. Tyson wasn't.

I think nobody can deny Joe Frazier was a great champion. He had arguably the best left hook ever and surely the biggest heart ever. The 3 Ali' fights are a wonderful gift for all the boxing's fans. I doubt that even a prime Tyson could have beaten the Frazier of Thrilla. Tyson never showed a big heart. I can't see him fighting like a lion for 14 rounds as Frazier did.I never saw Tyson coming from behind, overcoming difficulties and finally winning a tough fight. He never showed Frazier's heart !

Tyson was only good if he could intimate his opponents. Actually he was GREAT if he could. But if the other guy was not afraid (Holyfield, Douglas, Lewis) something died in him. Tyson would have wet his pants at the weigh in had he ever fought Sonny Liston. One glare from Sonny would have sealed it. He would have spanked Mike like he was a little boy. I would honestly bet my life on that.

Paul - yes, I remember reading the same thing. I imagine there's something physiological about being able to take a punch too, but I don't think there's any doubt that part of the psychological component is one's intimacy with it. He said ahead of the Foreman fight that the fact that he (Ali) had been down, had been stunned, and knew how to handle it, gave him a big advantage over Foreman, who had careened to the championship like a semi knocking aside Volkswagens. I remember reading Ali's descriptions of the half dream, the hallucinations, the things he heard, and how he welcomed it, rather than freaking. Cus d'Amato, Patterson's and Tyson's trainer, said that anyone who's knocked out by a punch they see coming, secretly wants it to happen. I think that may be going a little far, but it certainly addresses the mind's possible chaotic response to a massive assault, which Ali likely minimized by becoming familiar with it. Steve - the best fight between two mortal human beings that will ever take place! That's for sure. Never has there been such a combination of emotion, physical skill, and anticipation.

I explained my personal thoughts about one's ability to take a punch in an earlier post. I'll say it again but in a different way. It is the way one is physically put together that determines ability or lack of it to take a hard punch without going down or out. The glass jaw term is used when a fighter gets floored by an average punch. His jaw doesn't break as stated. Every fighter is different in their make up. Some can get better by learning to slip and relax when tagged and others just get tense and anxious waiting to get tagged. Result is down!! Good example are tough man contests where the baddest street fighters hit each other. Most of the time someone gets knocked cold by an average shot to the head. A lot of big strong guys can't do 1 pull up, ever notice that? Ali was the master at taking punches and Big George got rocked by some average fighters. He showed it when Ali didn't.
It is the way one is physically put together that determines ability or lack of it to take a hard punch without going down or out. I think mental/emotional architecture has a big play too, but you're right - there's definitely something about the construction of the brain, its chemistry (not understood at this point in time) that makes a big difference. Some can get better by learning to slip and relax when tagged and others just get tense and anxious waiting to get tagged. I've noticed some disparity in the way guys who could take a punch handled it. Some of the rocks' heads barely turn at all (Frazier, Chuvalo and Bonavena were like that), while Ali, who really didn't have a bull neck, swivelled his head, loose as a goose. A strong neck can help for sure, though Tyson's neck starts at the sides of his earlobes, and he isn't even close to being in Ali's class for taking a punch (who is?). On a slightly different note, have you noticed too how often the top fighters are able to keep their eyes open when tagged, rather than succumbing to the natural instinct to blink? Result is down!! Good example are tough man contests where the baddest street fighters hit each other. Most of the time someone gets knocked cold by an average shot to the head. A lot of big strong guys can't do 1 pull up, ever notice that? Oh sure, I have. There are guys in the NFL who are benching 600 pounds, who couldn't pull themselves up an inch, or the other sort, the "country boy strong" guys, without any definition at all, who throw guys around as an angry child would a doll. Ali was the master at taking punches and Big George got rocked by some average fighters. He showed it when Ali didn't. It's interesting to note that both men took punches better when they became ~men~, not the silly little boys they were at the beginning of their careers. Speaking of strength, we're members of the Brookfield Zoo near Chicago, and at one of the parties a couple of Summers ago, one of the curators of the ape house told a story about one on the gorillas. It's amazing enough the way they throw those tires around, but this particular ape turned a tractor tire ~inside out~!!

Tyson isn't close to being in Ali's class but he can take a punch very well. In all his losses he didn't fall for a single punch, but after a long beating. He also took well Ruddock's heavy punches in both their fights. Toney can take a punch very well too.

You expect Teddy Atlas to give you a real answer about Tyson vs Ali, of course he's going to say Ali, he's sour grapes about Tyson, since Tyson got rid of him. Frazier can have all the heart in the world it would not do him any good against Tyson. Liston never fought anybody even close to being as vicious as Tyson. He was way too slow, it would be a short night for Liston. Tyson afraid of Liston who would look like he was moving in slow motion. Please guys get out of the past, Frazier would just make the top ten if he was lucky, too small, don't hit hard enough, Fraziers left hook, the only one anybody remembers is that knockdown of Ali, which happened in the fifteenth rd when he was dog tired. Give me a break man.
the land where crocodiles play saxophones -- this semi-conscious nether world every boxer knows. It takes strong will and determination to keep going and not let yourself slip under, right, Massimo? The urge to give up and sleep can be almost overpowering, when you are more exhausted than most human beings can imagine. Champions are strong-willed people or they don't last as champions.
There is very little significant variation between the physical elements such as skull size and thickness, etc. That's not it. Neither is a strong, thick neck. Just watch some of the great thin Mexican fighters who will not be knocked out if you hit them with a baseball bat. The power of suggestion is the main thing going on when a fighter believes he will lose, or can't win, or cannot possibly beat a given opponent. Patterson had a bad case of this against Liston, as who wouldn't? Tyson built a career on it. So did Ali. As the mind goes, so goes the body. How come nobody ever says anything negative about Jerry Quarry here? I she supposed to be some kind of saint? He was a stupid fighter and had a mean streak. He picked fights outside the ring all his life, and enjoyed beating people up. I dare anybody to admit that or deny it. If Jerry hadn't been white, he would not have had the same career and neither promoters or fans would have been so interested in him. Again, koo koo, beat it. |10/8/03 06:13:48 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PIMls4@aol.com|||10|Koo Koo, lots of people think that Liston was slow only because they saw him against a young Cassius Clay. Against Clay, everyone looked cumbersome. Liston certainly didn't look slow against Floyd Patterson who, I remind you, was trained by Tyson's mentor (Cus D'Amato). Patterson lasted 126 seconds in the first fight and 130 seconds in the second. In that era, Liston was more feared than Tyson ever was in his prime. Although I think that Tyson would probably have beaten Liston, I don't think the result would be a 'given'. Liston was capable of intimidating Tyson, just like Holyfield did before his first fight with 'Iron Mike'. At the press conference Holyfield glared at Tyson and said, "You don't bother me one bit." Holyfield wasn't intimidated and this spooked Tyson and Holyfield won the fight before it even began. Liston was more capable of intimidating Tyson than Tyson ever was of intimidating Liston. And that brings us back to the weakness that stopped Tyson from being one of the greats: he was a mentally weak bully.
(His other weakness is that he is unable to absorb punishment.) After the Douglas fight, Tyson discarded the bobbing head and body movement and thereafter he became an easy target to hit. By the way, Big Mel, cruel demean those who speak them more than the person targeted in the attack. Monuments are never built for critics. (P.S. Massimo - I enjoy your comments and your sense of humour). |

The huge money fights of today are making it difficult for any of the current fighters to achieve immortal greatness. In my opinion, a guy like Tyson simply hasn't fought enough. Having one fight every 18 months to 2 years, no matter how good you are, doesn't work. Larry Holmes was a great champion because he defended the title so many times (and it didn't hurt that most of these fights were on network television for the whole world to see). Look how many times Muhammad Ali fought after winning the title (both after Liston and after Foreman). Now, managers are scared to death that having a guy fight too many times will spoil a big payday against a certain contender, so the waiting game is on all the time.
It's why we never saw Lewis-Bowe, a natural fight that would have been that generations Ali-Frazier. Back in the 70's, the fights were made quickly and there were lots of them, for every contender, every champion. Now, Tyson won't even fight often because he might lose! What a bizarre system. |10/8/03 09:52:08 AM|Massimo|Rome||18||10|Paul-

Thanks for the beautiful words! What do you mean when you say that Tyson can't absorb punishment? I think he can take a punch, as I have discussed before. Anyway, I think a 1958/1962 Liston would have beaten a prime Tyson thanks to his chin and thanks to his long and powerful left jab. For beating Liston you need a genial performance, as Clay did. If you transform the fight in a brawl, you're gonna have your ass kicked (... I'm learning English, as you can see...) !|

10/8/03 10:58:39 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||8|white/black thats how some people see everything i see things as they really are. quarry perfect no, attention yes, because he was white, yes why because there was not a single white fighter i ever saw that had that kind of skill, i do feel bad about telling his brother james that he cost him the title by pushing him into a jukbox before the ellis fight, but it did make a difference in the fight. BIG MEL WHAT COMIC BOOK DID YOU COME OUT OF. THE CLOCKMAN WILL NEVER BOW TO YOU OR KENT. GOOD DAY! COO COO |

10/8/03 01:46:10 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Liston, Tyson, Frazier, Quarry, Chuvalo, Bonavena, Duran, Galindez, and many more of the like were all street brawler-types (some -literally-) who were taught to box. Of these, the only one suspect in the testicular department is Tyson. MT was a heck of a puncher, and had very fast hands, but unlike the others, I wonder about his endurance, and his "bully quotient," ie, how did he respond when someone else gave him "the look," cold and hard, told him they were going to eat his heart out of his chest, and then tried to do it? Guess is, supported by real life, is that he'd leave a puddle on the floor before any of the real tough asses in his class, followed by his body. Liston, with his aura, reputation, and werewhithal to back it up, would have taken "Iron" Mike. Tyson reminds me of what they said about Duran after his baffling "No mas" fight - "Hands of stone, heart of shit."Re Duran: anyone ever hear anything about that fight? I heard he was going to crap his pants due to a digestive problem. It's hard for me to accept he just quit.| 10/8/03 02:34:26 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com|||10|Liston reached is peak BEFORE he won the championship. He was by no means slow and plodding. He had two punches that would have given Tyson trouble - the hardest left jab ever in boxing (combined with a very long reach) and wicked left/right "hookercuts."His hands were never as fast as Tyson's - agreed. If Tyson had a hard time with Bonecrusher Smith in the clinches, God knows what Sonny would have done to him. Tyson would have froze or refused to fight Liston after seeing him at the weigh-in. Liston was a wicked puncher but he was not a wild slugger. He could box well. One of Louis's sparring partners was one of his early trainers and he did a good job with Sonny. Ali said that Liston was without a doubt the scariest man he ever faced and that's coming from a man who fought Foreman, Lyle, Shavers, Frazier, etc. If Tyson ever bit Liston's ear, Liston would have more than responded in kind and Tyson would be speaking with an even higher pitch voice than he was born with.| 10/8/03 04:32:38 PM|THEMUFFINMAN|ZANZIBAR||ZANZIBAR@R|||8|Hello KooKoo! Welcum bak to Brother DKS!| 10/8/03 06:06:46 PM|Massimo|Rome|||4|||10|Mitch "Blood" Green was another famous street brawler! I know he lost to Tyson and Berbick and that he's still fighting today, at 94 years of age... He won four New York Golden Gloves in a raw,... He had to be pretty strong...Did anyone see his fight against Trevor Berbick? Was it a close fight? Do you think he had good potential? Thanks !| 10/8/03 07:04:04 PM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com|||10|Massimo, maybe I put it wrongly when saying that Tyson has an inability to absorb punishment. Perhaps he could take some punishment but he never fought back to win (and 'kick ass' as you would probably say it). Whenever Tyson got hurt, the fight soonafter ended. Angelo - you mention that modern fighters like Tyson don't fight a lot. Some of the old fighters didn't either. Between 1971 and 1976 Frazier had 12 fights while Ali had 24 in that same period. And why was it that Frazier fought Jerry Quarry and Jimmy Ellis twice each, yet he never fought Norton, Lyle, Shavers, Patterson, Folley and Ernie Terrell. Was he ducking any of those guys? Finally, in Joe Frazier's book he says this about Jerry Quarry, "He was a courageous fighter, and if he didn't cut so easy, he could've been a world champion."
| 10/9/03 12:43:40 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

Welcome Muffinman, great handle. When has Brother DKS appeared on this page of late? I always enjoyed his posts even if at times we didn't always agree or even get along (other times we did). I always respected his opinions. DKS did shake things up around here but at times this is needed around here. I hope DKS drops by here sometime. |
| 10/9/03 02:20:41 AM | Massimo | Rome | Paul | You're right. We saw it last time in his loss against Lewis. I remember that at the beginning of the fight I was thinking "Oh good! We are gonna have an exciting fight!". At the end of the third round Tyson came back to the corner with a little injury. After this, Tyson completely disappeared from the ring! At his peak, Tyson was a great or almost great fighter! There was a moment I believed Tyson was invincible! He beat a lot of good fighters (Berbick, Smith, Thomas, Tucker, Bruno, Stewart, Ruddock... A long list!), but I think his losses and mostly the way he lost, reduce a lot his greatness as a fighter. Anyway, he remembers probably the best heavyweight of the 80s. This is not a little achievement... |
| 10/9/03 08:17:46 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia81@aol.com | 10 |

Hey all its cool to read the posts, adding excitement to it. Keep it up Coo Coo, Kent, and all you others, as long as we keep it all good. Have a good one. |
| 10/9/03 10:38:57 AM | Massimo | Rome | Sonia Quarry | Sonia, I'm shocked!! The right way of writing (or to write? I try with of writing... It sounds better!) its cool is (please, listen to me!) isIT'S COOL. Have you understood? Learn English my friend! You're lucky that I'm a kind and generous man and if you want a can help you with English. But I'm not going to travel to the USA! You have to come here and you have to pay the travel)))}} (KooKoo taught me that, thanks KooKoo) |
| 10/9/03 11:13:41 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 |

It's interesting that three all time greats who fought in Jerry Quarry's era, Foreman, Frazier and Ali, at one time or another, wrote or talked about how good Jerry Quarry was. These guys didn't owe Jerry anything then or now, and I believe were offering unbiased opinions. I think after the second fight with Quarry, Ali had some good things to say about how Quarry wouldn't quit and just kept coming.I've always wondered about Frazier not fighting often---and not fighting all the top contenders.I can't imagine he ducked anyone. |
| 10/9/03 12:22:31 PM | Kent | La Habta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

Angelo, I think a lot of fighters' decisions as to who they fight are the work of their managers and that fighters seldom intentionally avoid other fighters. For example, George Foreman didn't fight Jerry because he wanted to take the bigger money fight with Ali, not because he didn't think he could beat Jerry. His managers thought Jerry represented at least some risk to the bigger money fight with Ali. I think they figured, why take a potentially tough fight, even one that George was likely to win, if they could get the Ali fight with no risk at all? Another example from way back is Jack Dempsey not fighting Harry Wills, the long time number one contender. Dempsey himself was said to want to fight any and all comers but his management reportedly paid Wills off to step aside. I have seen a figure of $50,000, at that time a very hefty sum. Wills, of course, was always denied a shot at the title because he was black. Did Dempsey's management think that Jack couldn't beat Wills? Who knows? All I can say is it was a shame Wills was denied his chance. |
| 10/9/03 01:38:30 PM | MUFFINMAN | ZANZIBAR | ZANZIBAR | 10 |

Koo Koo is an ignoramus! Koo Koo is The Opinionated Brother! Bicycle, Bicycle I want to ride my Bicycle... |
| 10/9/03 02:22:58 |
Who a fighter fights? Hmm. I've always thought this was a sort of balancing act between being the urge to be the toughest guy in high school, money (of course - they're pros), and risk. Why would someone fight someone who could give them problems, when wildly lucrative fights with Ali, Frazier, Norton, Foreman, Holmes, whomever were waiting? In the end, when I was retired, I really wouldn't care what the fans thought, as the interest continued to roll in on my bank accounts! I'd go with whatever paid the most, or a route leading in this direction.

Hey, Muffin Man, welcome to the site. I have a question. Bicycle, bicycle, I want to ride my bicycle? Those are words to a song from a monster group from the seventies called, "Queen". I think their lead singer, Freddy Mercury, was born in Zanzibar. Any connection?

Joe Frazeier, because of his physical stature, his lack of weight and height, his short arms, was allowed by nature only one style. That style was flat out, frenetic upper body movement, combined with constant forward movement and contact with his opponents body mass. This meant either pushing or chasing. This type of style would probably spell out a short career for any fighter who didn't have genuine management. As for the fighters he supposedly "ducked", think about it! Lyle was totally beaten by Quarry, I mean tactically and physically. Shavers had a one punch change. Even Foreman couldn't stop Frazeir, with one punch. In fact, if you think about it, Frazeir absorbed more solid, unprotected shots from Foreman than anyone before finally succumbing. Neither Folley or Patterson was strong enough to keep a Frazeir blitz off.

To Sonia Quarry -

Sonia, I'm sorry! I was only joking! I thought that was obvious! I'm Italian! How in the world could I teach English to an American person? Doesn't the symbol ))) mean joking? Believe me, I hadn't bad intentions at all!

you people take the cake, massimo i knew you would hang yourself if you kept talking, you offended the Quarrys and my future woman Sonya. Sonya Quarry Koo Koo, it's got a nice ring to it, don't you think Kent? :) Back to boxing, was Sonny Liston ever young? He was born 35 yrs. old. He was slow at any age, not just against Ali. foolface i implore you, comeback for a cameo appearance. koo koo koo koo!

Mark Kram said in Ghosts of Mannila that Futch and Durham worked on Frazier's bob and weave style for Ali. He always used it, but not as often or as perpetual (bobbing up to twenty times a minute). They also made it even more of a combination of defense, with a springboard to offensive moves than before. I've watched both fights in slow motion in their entirety, and it's shocking to discover that Frazier had a slight edge in solid head punches landed (body wasn't a contest, since Ali never went to the body). In Manila, that was up till Joe's right eye (the virtually blind one) had swollen shut. Then Ali hit him with whithering right hands. Ali tried something else against Foreman - jabbing off a combination, as part of the combination, something fighters rarely do, but it didn't work. Frazier was difficult to hit, his punches were coming in at 50-60, sometimes more a round, and his style made other fighters hurry, or adapt to him. Actually, everyone except Foreman adapted to him, even Ali, whose style was sort of a defensive offense.
Ali was given credit for a great uppercut (which Futch said he didn't have), but didn't use it that much against JF. This would have been effective. Had MA spent time practicing the timing of uppercuts with Frazier's bobs, rather than clowning around, and playing rope-a-dope in the gym, he might have had another weapon. Frazier was practicing the bobs and weaves, in synchrony with attack, thousands of times, literally. That bobbing and weaving constancy is hard to do, particularly with a constant potential for, and execution to offense.
hand. koo koo koo koo
10/10/03 10:55:52 AM|steve|N.J.||dmmrsm@comcast.net|||10|R.S.-That's the second time you've mentioned Frazier's left eye. I had no idea he had that problem. I can't believe, after all these years, I've never absorbed that information. Don't you think that makes his fights with Ali even more amazing?
|10/10/03 12:28:15 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|R.S.-That's the second time you've mentioned Frazier's left eye. I had no idea he had that problem.He actually sneaked and wore contacts when he fought Foreman the second time, since he'd had cataract surgery, but still needed the lenses. One of them got knocked cockeye, obscuring his vision. Joe mentions this in his autobiography, saying his eye was bad enough that they wouldn't have let him fight if they'd known how bad it was. He just counted on sloppy exams, and memorizing the eye charts.I can't believe, after all these years, I've never absorbed that information. Don't you think that makes his fights with Ali even more amazing?It sure does. Kram theorizes that in addition to Frazier's style taking away some of the disadvantage, that Joe also used subtle footwork and punching strategies to keep his opponents from getting too radical with counterclockwise movement, which could take them too far into his "dead zone." I've watched for that, and it certainly seems to be true. Of course, the age-old tactic of moving away from an opponent's right hand wouldn't be wise with Frazier, since they'd be moving right into the best left hook ever (Frazier's a lefty, which would partly account for that power).Who's afraid of the muffin man, the muffin man the muffin man? Who's afraid of the muffin man, the muffin man the muffin man...Koo Koo be very afraid..It looks as though your as stupid as the other paul, so all pauls are losers. the clockman is on his own time. Sonya you deserve a great man like myself, get out of that tired relationship w/tom. he can find someone else. Kent keep staying gone :) koo koo |
real, today's guys are too big, too fast, for any yesterday people, even the great Joe Louis would about as good as Thad Spencer, plodding in slowly getting hit. koo koo |

10/12/03 03:58:47 AM|Massimo|Rome||5|||10|Silvio Branco is the new WBA lightweight champion of the world... Thanks! Thanks! We are simply the best! |
10/12/03 04:05:39 AM|Massimo|Rome||4|||10|KooKoo-Don't you think that Joe Louis would beat Roy Jones, John Ruiz and James Toney? I think today he would be surely a top 5 contender. I think there is very few people today that could have a chance to beat him! Maybe Vitali, maybe Lewis, maybe Tua, but just maybe... Call please the names of the fighters that you think would beat Louis! |

PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Massimo - The contenders of the 70s would be champions today. The champions then would fight the champions today as tuneups, or hire them for sparring partners. Same would be true of all the all time greats like Louis. Louis would fight differently today, faster paced, he'd weigh more, be bigger, stronger, but would finish just as fast. No one could finish better than Louis. I'd say his style today would resemble that of Roberto Duran. |
10/12/03 04:48:37 PM|Massimo "Larger than Life" Cini|Rome||7|||10|RS-You're right! Louis was hugely skillful, he could throw every punch in the book and wonderful combinations and he could punch very hard. I don't think there are many fighters today that can punch harder than Joe Louis. Besides that, his left jab was a beaty, the second best ever (after Liston's). Now the problem is helping KooKoo to accept this... |
10/12/03 05:08:59 PM|MUFFINMAN|ZANZIBAR||ZANZIB@R|||8|The Klock's time is up. To all of you who have been wondering who this fool is, I can reveal his identity. The Koo Koo is.....Pee Wee Herman! |
10/12/03 05:22:53 PM|Massimo|Rome||5|||10|Who is Pee Wee Herman? A sculptor? |
10/13/03 12:49:13 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|i knew that i would be disagreed with strongly about joe louis losing to todays fighters, but that is reality! not only fighters but basket ball players, football players, weightlifters, on and on the list would go. yes if louis were bigger he would be able to compete, but i looking at him as he was, not as dreamed up to be. i will admit boxers are way behind as far as skill for their sport compared to other sports. do i the clockman think roy jones would beat joe louis, hell yes!!! if billy conn did what he did to him, what do you think jones would do. joe louis was like a poor dumb animal, look man, there's no way. don't make me say more bad things about louis. koo koo is tired now, time to unwind. |
10/13/03 03:00:47 AM|Massimo|Rome||8|||10|KooKoo-If being big is so important, how did Roy Jones achieve his position in the heavyweight division? The first fight against Billy Conn was one of Joe Louis's most disappointing performance, that's true! That was probably just a bad night! In the return match Louis easily defeated Conn. Anyway Louis beat twice easily Abe Simon that was a huge and very muscular guy. If a fighter can punch hard as Joe Louis could punch, why do you think being big is so important? You named the basketball players... Do you think Shaq would beat Joe Louis in the ring? |
10/13/03 04:52:37 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com|||10|Current fighters minus modern training and diet advances (and drugs like steroids) would physically be just like fighters of past eras. Likewise, old fighters like Louis would be just as big as the modern ones with the same training and diet (and drugs). Speed and reflexes remain the same whatever the training and fighters of past eras were tougher than the present bunch. Referees were less inclined to stop fights, corners didn't throw the towel in so easily, they fought more often, and fighters then were prepared to take greater punishment. Height is another thing that doesn't change with modern training and Tyson has proved that shorter guys can dominate in modern times. Anyway, Henry Armstrong and many others proved that you don't need bulging muscles to be a great fighter. Another thing, prior to the 1970s there were only 8 weight divisions and no cruiserweight and super middle weight and all that stupid 'super' stuff that makes up the 13 weight divisions there now are. Before the 1970s there was one title in each division for a total of only 8 world titles in boxing. Now with all the alphabet titles there are over 45 on offer. They are even creating more titles (like they recently have with Sven Ottke - the WBC now call him the 'emerit' champion or some nonsense like that) just to rip off more sanctioning fees. It had greater prestige just to be a contender pre-1970s than it means to hold a title now. If Jerry Quarry, Earnie Shavers, Ron Lyle or even Joe Bugner were fighters over the last 10 years then chances are that they would have held a world title at some stage. | 10/13/03 07:52:06 AM| Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)| Joshua Tree, CA|| Sonia81@aol.com ||| 10|Of course this site is Cool! Hey KooKoo, you are too funny. | 10/13/03 08:47:08 AM| Kent| La Habra, Ca|| Kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10|Not only did Joe Louis beat Abe Simon, who was over 6'5" and 260 pounds, he also defeated Buddy Baer, who was 6'5" 250, Primo Carnera, 6'6" 265 pounds as well as Tony "Two Ton" Galento, 5'9" 230 pounds. He also beat Max Baer, while not as big as baby brother Buddy, was 6'3" 220 pounds, compared to Louis'6'1" 200 pounds. Louis wouldn't need today's training methods to beat most of today's lumbering no talents. He had skill. When asked why smaller fighters can beat bigger heavyweights, James Toney had this to say, "these guys are lazy, they don't want to run or train hard." Toney has the skill to possibly win at least one of the major heavyweight titles and with Lennox Lewis being on the way down skill level wise, maybe even the consensus championship itself. Toney, the IBF cruiserweight champion, is fighting at anywhere from 190 pounds to 215 pounds these days, a small heavyweight compared to most of the guys out there now. Remember, two of the three major heavyweight belts today are held by smaller heavyweights in Chris Byrd, 211 pounds and Roy Jones Jr., 193 pounds. Could Jones beat Louis, I don't know, but if he could beat Louis, that just proves that a smaller heavyweight can beat a bigger heavyweight!! | 10/13/03 08:53:27 AM| Kent| La Habra, Ca|| Kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10|Damn those typos, just goes to show I shouldn't post without wearing my reading glasses. Getting older but not old, sigh!! | 10/13/03 10:06:47 AM| Massimo| Rome|| 8 ||| 10|I think Sonny Liston's body was close to perfection for a heavyweight! 6'1", about 215lbs (not too heavy)and very long arms! Buddy Baer was at least 6'6", but Abe Simon was not taller than 6'4". You can trust because I'm an height's expert, as I have widely shown in my discussion about Andre' the Midget... Max Baer was 6'2 1/2 and Carnera was 6'5 3/4. Dulcis in fundo, Calvin Lane is 7'5 1/2... Goodbye ! | 10/13/03 10:25:16 AM| Massimo "Smaller than Life" Cini| Rome|| 9 | | 10|What do you think about a Tyson-Bonavena matchup? Don't you think that Bonavena's chin, power and fearlessness would have given Tyson a tough fight? | 10/13/03 11:16:31 AM| Kookoo | ny|| Kookoomoclock@yahoo.com || 10|i knew you guys would bring up carnera, simon and nova. these guys had no skill whatsoever. carnera would fall over his own feet. what jones beating louis would prove is that today's fighter are better conditioned and yes jones has much more skill than louis. heres some of my fight results/ rocky vs tyson , tyson wins in 2 rds, louis vs tyson, tyson in 3 rds, liston vs tyson , tyson 3 rds, frazier vs tyson, tyson 1rd, frazier coming straight at him makes it a short night. frazier has a less chance against tyson than anybody i ever seen. his style would get him killed quick. Tyson vs ali, tyson in 6 or 7 rds. EVEN THOUGH HE IS A JERK, IN HIS PRIME HE WOULD HAVE BEAT ANYONE! THESE ARE THE FACTS AFTER WATCHING BOXING ALMOST 40YRS. TIME FOR THE BIRD TO FLY. KOO KOO KOO KOO|
How many seconds do you think would have lasted a Carnera-Tyson fight? I'm curious! But don't forget that even light can't overcome c (Albert Einstein, 1905). Light speed is c in vacuum.

Skillwise, Tyson was a lot better than Bonavena. However, so were Ali and Frazier, who beat on him for a total of 40 rounds, with little effect. Frazier said he was like running into a refrigerator all night. The problem with Tyson was his mental stability. He unravelled with tough opponents who weren't afraid of him, and he'd have banged on Bonavena all night like a bag with no change. Oscar had an almost pathological lack of fear, even contempt, for men he should have respected, and Tyson would have been nothing to him. Tyson by KO, only if he could have managed to knock OB down three times as Ali did (in a place with that rule). Otherwise, an exhausted Tyson by decision, but not a massacre. Bonavena by KO if Tyson went sissy.

As a side thought, I'd also have liked to have seen Quarry-Bonavena, or Bugner-Bonavena. Or Quarry-Bugner. Are you off medication and out of therapy again? Hanging Tyson and Don King posters on your bedroom wall has turned you into some sort of loopy sicko. For thinking those thoughts about 'The Greatest' and 'The Bomber' your mind should be cordoned off and declared a crime scene. What do you admire most about 'Iron Mike'? Chewing on ears? Street brawling? The non-consensual sex? Just when we were starting to love laughing at you, we realise that you have serious mental issues to sort through. Picking Tyson to beat Ali and Louise makes you a kangaroo short of a top paddock. Call a 'time out' and get some help.

Joe Louis would also not be afraid of Tyson and he would hit Tyson hard early and get his respect. Tyson of course always has that fire power that can get him out of trouble at any time so there are scenarios that show he, at his best, was one punch away from beating anyone in the history of the game. In prime Tyson was awesome but beatable too, but not by many who have ever walked this Earth.
himself doesn't believe to be the greatest of all time...Kent-What do you think about Mitch "Blood" Green? He won 4 New York Golden Gloves in a row! Do you think he had potential? Thanks| 10/14/03 09:04:45 AM| Fran| Philly|| plc7755@aol.com||| 10| I read this site everyday because of Jerry being my boyhood Hero. I had to be his #1 fan. You guys bring up some interesting things to think about. We took a train from Philly to the Garden to see him KO Shavers. That was the most exciting sporting event I ever saw. If you take away the cut factor he would have been one of the all time greats. As far as Tyson goes he looked devasting until he met with guys like Douglas and Holyfield who weren't great fighters just good pros with enough talent and experience to find Tyson's weaknesses. Ali, Quarry, Foreman would have done the same thing........| 10/14/03 02:02:41 PM| Roadscholarette| Chicago|| roadscholarette@hotmail.com||| 10| Fran -Ali, Frazier, and Foreman would have massacred Tyson, as would have any of the really great champions of the past. Tyson, in his prime, was a talented and devastating fighter who would have been rough trade for the above, but boxing is as much - maybe more so - mental as it is physical, and in this department, Tyson was bankrupt. The contenders of the 70s, many of whom would have been champions without the likes of Ali, Frazier, and Foreman around, would also have taken "Iron" Mike, maybe taking a little longer to do it. Quarry, with his rock chin and deep bag of boxing tricks, Shavers, with a punch probably exceeded only by Foreman, and Lyle, bomber from hell with a solid fundamental base, and all of them about as intimidated by Tyson as they'd be by David Letterman, would have completely discombobulated Tyson. He'd have either laid down, quit, or done something bizarre and been disqualified, if they didn't knock him out first.| 10/14/03 02:42:55 PM| MUFFINMAN| ZANZIBAR|| ZANZIBAR||| 8| Koo-Koo you choose to ignore me you fool! You write the words of a blind man. You are not only dumb but you are stupid beyond belief. I am watching you all the time you idiot! Remember Koo Koo your time is up. Kent stop being to this schmuck. Kent you are my hero. Can I have your autograph? Back in Africa I hear the cries...Ali Bomaye, Ali Bomaye, Ali Bomaye...time to ride my bicycle.| 10/14/03 03:47:16 PM| Paul| Sydney, Australia|| PIMls4@aol.com||| 10| Kent - I realised after I posted that I wrote 'Louise' instead of 'Louis'. Tyson would certainly have beaten Louise and Thelma but I couldn't back him against Ali and Louis. Tyson was a great offensive fighter and when he bobbed and weaved he was very good defensively. But mentally, when his opponent wasn't intimidated, he had nothing. Now I must go off to work.| 10/14/03 04:17:21 PM| Evren| London||| 10| I think it's very harsh to say that without Intimidation Tyson had 'nothing'. He had one of the hardest punches in history, he was one of the quickest in history, he was one of the cleverest fighters ever (open for debate I'm sure) his ferocity was unparalellled and he was a good defensive fighter also. Definitely in my top 10. Still think he could of have achieved more though. A real shame. A great great fighter. I think Muffin man is strange. Kent you have a fan!| 10/14/03 04:17:52 PM| Gerry Schultz| Cleveland, Ohio|| jgschultz11@msn.com||| 9| Road'ette, you're a very good Frazier fan, but to say that Ali, Frazier and Foreman would massacre Mike Tyson is a joke. Ali would have to survive him for 6-7 rounds with jabs and movement to beat him knowing that Mike could drop him at any time. Frazier was crushed by Foreman because he is open defensively. Tyson had a punch like Foreman. Foreman-Tyson could go either way, but as I said earlier, Tyson was much faster and better fundamentally, he would have a better chance. Being a fan is one thing, let's keep it real. We're all Quarry fans, but no one has him beating Ali. That's the reality.| 10/14/03 06:23:06 PM| Roadscholarette| Chicago|| roadscholarette@hotmail.com||| 10| To me, keeping it real is to say that Mike Tyson was a complete chump and a loony who was blessed with athletic talent, something he exhibited against men not of a caliber of the 70s crew. I know anyone can get caught, but Buster Douglas!? On the subject of complete fighters, which I'm largely bringing up actually, rather than answering, I can't think of a better, more complete, and flawless fighter than Roberto Duran. I probably can if I think, one as fundamentally sound and able to execute, but I doubt I could think of a -better- one! He's as much of a joy to watch work as Frazier, or a young Ali before he started playing offensive survivor.

Thanks Muffinman for the compliment and your concern but I don't respond to anything a certain someone says to me or about me. Massimo, yes Mitch Green had potential but he had some mental issues that got in the way of his potential. He was the second fighter to go the distance with Tyson and while he didn't come close to winning, he did show how holding could be used to frustrate Tyson, a tactic that Ali, particularly an older Ali would use effectively. Tyson didn't turn out to be the next greatest like a lot of people were saying he was when he was on top but he is in my top ten of all time because when he was at his best, there are not many people from any era who could beat him. Maybe only Ali, Louis, Holmes, and Foreman. Joe Frazier would have to escape the first two rounds and then he might have had a chance. Ironically, our own Jerry Quarry would have had a better chance of beating Tyson because of styles than either Frazier or Ken Norton. Norton too would have to survive that initial onslaught to have a chance. As I said in an earlier post, Jerry would be in real danger of having his tender cut prone skin busted up by the accurate punching of Tyson.

A lot of things had to happen for Douglas to beat Tyson that day, if they'd fought 9 more times at other points in there careers, Tyson wins all of them, it's probably the greatest upset in sports history, not representative of either man's talent. A chump? What is that, something you heard on "Starsky and Hutch"? Boxing is full of guys from poor backgrounds, Roberto Duran certainly fits this profile. Sonny Liston, Joe Frazier, Floyd Patterson and many others as well. There's a lot of cause and effect with this very flawed guy, yes, but those that have managed Tyson have not taken care of him, they've used him. How many guys have been champ or damn near champ for 20 years? Tyson is a very rare talent.

it is you that copies me kent, Sonya don't trust this man, it is the clock man that should guide you. Kent is a man without a soul. He is a giant void, but let not your heart be troubled, the koo koo clock is here. sweet dreams to all. koo koo!

A name from the past: Tony Tucker! He gave Tyson a good fight and he would have performed even better if he had not damaged a hand early in the fight! A prime Tyson was great but wasn't even close to being unbeatable! A prime Tyson lost to Buster Douglas!

What does it mean "chump"? I couldn't find it on the dictionary!!

Yes, you are right. Tyson had more than "nothing" and I should have given it more thought before writing it. The point I was trying to make was that he didn't like it if he couldn't intimidate the other fighter. The fight became a lot more even. Early in his career Tyson was a Top 10 ever fighter and, while I don't think he could ever beat Ali, Louis, and Foreman, I do think he beats Frazier and perhaps even Marciano. So saying he had nothing was wrong. He had plenty. However, he was a squandered talent and maybe because of his upbringing he never really had a chance. But I still don't think he had the mental toughness to bother Ali and Louis. Massimo - Ali used to say that Frazier was a 'chump' and not a champ'. Kooky Clock says you need a hair piece. Why don't you get one like Rocky Marciano wore when he retired? It would suit you.

I have a DVD called "THE FIGHTERS" (the most beautiful DVD I have ever seen). It's all about Ali-Frazier. In this wonderful DVD it's Frazier that calls Ali 'chump... I have never understood what fuck (or prick or cazzo in Italian) this means... Surely is nothing good !!!!!

A lot of things had to happen for Douglas to beat Tyson that day, if they'd fought 9 more times at other points in their careers, maybe, but the real greats were never taken by someone with that great a discrepancy in ability, all other things being equal. The main thing that happened was the emergence of Tyson's chumpism, something no one thought he had. This can override talent any day. A chump? What is that, something you heard on "Starsky and Hutch"? Boxing is full of guys from poor backgrounds, Roberto Duran certainly fits this profile. Busted! Yes, I have tapes of all their reruns, and use the show and its immortal actors (they put Jack Nicholson and Michael Caine, et al to shame, as we all know) as guides to living a good and God fearing life. Instead of asking myself, "What would Jesus do?" I ask, "What would Starsky and Hutch do?" They would have thought Mike Tyson was a physically talented boxer, but a chump as a man. I was aware that virtually all boxers came/came from poor backgrounds, yes. How many guys have been champ or damn near champ for 20 years? Tyson is a very rare talent. Compared to ordinary people, and in this venue, being a chump wouldn't be an issue. However, when talking sports, people compare athletes to others at their level. Some dictionaries might have "chump" in them, but many don't. It's a slang term that means someone who's deeply flawed or lacking in some, possibly many ways. In Tyson's case, we have a man who's very talented physically, but a chump emotionally, mentally, which is where boxing lives when you have to men (or women) who are fairly even physically.

As far as ability or heart goes Norton was not in Jerry's league. The Jerry Quarry who beat Mathis, Spencer, jumped on Frazier in 69 Blew out #1 Mac Foster in 70 blew out Shavers and took apart Lyle would have easily countered and beat Norton and probably stop him late.
Norton was a superb athlete, and an excellent fighter, but there was always something about him that made me think he wound up in the wrong sport, and that only momentum (and the money) kept him going. Ali and Holmes were right for him, and he put on terrific fights with them. Foreman annihilated him like he was an ordinary guy on the street, as Frazier would have done. As I said, he never seemed like a fighter though. Maybe football would have been his sport, as with his Cowboy son. Norton did actually play for a while, but then dropped out of college.

The Quarry he fought was on the downside of his career, while Norton was at or near his peak. There's no way to measure their pure athletic quotient, but Jerry was more of a pure fighter. It would have been a much different fight a few years earlier. Norton didn't cut people up like Ali and Joe could do, so the fight would have been on a red hot wire till the end.

Norton always seemed to freeze against real punchers like Foreman, Shavers, and Cooney (although Norton was really passed in prime when he fought Gerry). The Quarry who beat Lyle would have taken Norton out early inside of 6. I am not saying JQ could hit like Foreman or Shavers but if he landed right, he could hurt anyone. I always liked Norton's response to the question "who hit you hardest, Foreman, Shavers, or Cooney?" to which he answered "I try not to use my body as a gauge for other guys punching power".

Hey Massimo! I'll be in Rome on the 26th Oct. What are the best restaurants that I should eat in? I love traditional Italian food not 'tourist menu'. I'll be staying near the Termini Station. Is the seafood good in Rome, I want mussels, clams, oysters, lobster and crab if poss! Reply to my e-mail. Regards Evren.

Non boxing related trivia: Which country is older, United States or Italy? What do you think Massimo? I bet you and I are the only ones who get this right.

Also, who discovered the Americas? Cristoforo Colombo discovered the America (1492). He had three ships: the mythical Pinta, Nina e Santa Maria. All you American have to thank we Italian! Cristoforo Colombo should be your number 1 hero... Shaq should be just the number 2 !

Here's what you have to believe to conclude that Mike Tyson would have beaten Joe Louis: 1) Tyson with his mediocre defense would have withstood Louis's powerful and proven punching power.2) Tyson, who fought mostly run of the mill opponents, is simply better somehow than Louis, who also fought mostly run of the mill opponents. 3) The reputedly superior equipment, training methods, conditioning and nutrition of Tyson would enable him somehow to dominate and defeat Louis with his inferior stuff. 4) Tyson's so-called ferocity would intimidate and overcome Louis. 5) Tyson at 5'10" and 220 would physically dominate and overpower Louis at 6'1" and 205. 6) Tyson's pattern of rushing out to try for a first round KO being his choice, unlike any other prominent boxer in recent history, would also prevail over Joe.
Louis in a first round KO, even though Louis never in his career lost a fight in the first round. 7) Evander Holyfield figured out Tyson and owned him, but Joe Louis could and would not. In my opinion, not a single one of these beliefs is supportable. While they are both great champions, I believe Louis would have won a single fight, or about 8 out 10 if they fought that often. He was fast, shrewd, a superb boxer, and packed a wallop with either hand. Sooner or later, he figured out almost everybody, and then knocked each one out. He would have been a great champion at the turn of the century or in 2003, when he would have easily trained up to 220 or more. In his day, when boxers fought every other week usually, skill and speed were considered more important than size. Louis would have had a good chance against any champion, before or after him, including Ali, Foreman, Frazier, Dempsey or Marciano. He might have lost or won, but he would have been in every fight. He was a great champion, fought all contenders, and I don't understand why anyone would sincerely argue otherwise. | 10/16/03 03:26:20 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|Tyson had 3 phases to his career. Phase 1, when he was focused on boxing and with trainer Kevin Rooney he was a great fighter. His combination of power and hand speed we're unmatched, (Ali and Patterson maybe matched his hand speed but not his power. Liston and Foreman his power but not his speed). He had excellent head movement and a very good chin. His fighting discipline was also more focused. He lived to fight.Phase 2, after Kevin Rooney, was the start of his downfall. Blame it on a bad marriage, extremely poor trainers who couldn't handle Mike ( I'll never forget the way his trainers handled the ice bag when Tyson fought Douglas), Don King's antics causing resentment with Mike, or Mikes over active sex drive..these things all contributed to his fall from greatness. Mike was always a loose cannon and needed strong people around him to keep him in line. He didn't have it.The third phase was his after prison life. He came out of jail very resentful and unfocused in boxing. He never would have bitten Holyfield's ear early on in his career. He pulled one bad stunt after another but he was making huge money and still knocking out most guys very quickly. Even today at this stage there's still very few fighters that could beat him ( but with the current state of the heavyweight division thats not saying very much).So when I judge Mike Tyson I use the first phase of his career. He would have beaten most ex-champs easily and would have had an excellent chance against anyone in history.| 10/16/03 03:53:33 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||Kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Massimo, these questions were for your amusement (and mine too). You are wrong!!! Columbus did not discover the Americas!!! The ancestors of the present day Native Americans, also known as Indians because Columbus claimed he was in India, came to the Americas and settled here thousands of years before any Europeans ever set foot here. It is believed that the Bering Strait, which separates Alaska in the United States and Siberia in Russia, was a land mass and the people originally came from Asia. They slowly settled the continents of America over the centuries. Since we don't know who the first individual is who came to the American continents, the correct answer is unknown. How can someone discover something if other people are already here? Actually, there is evidence that people from northern Europe were here 400 years before Columbus so sorry Massimo, Columbus may not even be the first European to come here.This is not to make Columbus as an unimportant figure in history because mass immigration of European people and culture came here and they changed everything here. Our very existence as a society owes everything to Columbus' voyages.The second the question is while the Italian culture is a rich and valued culture and is much older than the United States, Italy itself as a united country has only existed since 1870, so the United States is older than Italy. The area known as Italy today was a collection of separate kingdoms who shared a common language but they were not under one government until that year.
I meant to say, the second question is not the second the question is. I can't seem to get by without some mistake. I guess I was just tired as it is late here.

The fact that in America there were 4 ragamuffins and 5 bums with bare asses before Colombo's (not Columbus) voyages is not very important. A little more important is (if it's true) the fact that northern Europe persons arrived at America before Colombo did. But those guys didn't help the world to know America as Colombo did. Garibaldi, Mazzini and Cavour are ours George Washington! If you want I can correct my America's top heroes list. Shaq (by far) George Washington, Colombo, Abraham Lincoln. PS: how can you write from La Habra and from Orange County at the same time? Do you have the obiquity gift?

OK, you're right, I have underrated your ancestors! Colombo was a bum and a chump (I'm joking!). I have studied Latin and Greek in High School... Latin is a very beautiful and musical language! It needs a lot of intuition for correctly translating a Latin version. But if you think Latin is hard, you should study Greek! I remember my friend once, translating a Greek version, wrote that Alessandro Magno hunted the sparrows using spears, because there was a Greek word that meant sparrow and ostrich at the same time... sleep over this, I was wondering if there was some special reason we don't know about for this animosity?

One thing I've also been told is that Cosell went particularly out of his way for black athletes in all sports, maybe because of some effort to show himself what a broad minded guy he was. I remember when I was little, and watched Monday night football with my Dad and brothers, they used to turn the sound on the TV off, and listen to the radio!

In retrospect, he was a whiny, annoying, self serving snake and a wannabe, who dwelled on athlete's failures, rather than their successes.

Massimo, we cannot downplay Columbo's voyages importance to what became modern America. Without them, the world would not be what it is today. However, there are downsides to everything such as the destruction of centuries old societies that lived fine the way they were. I am not saying go back to those times as even I would not want to live like my Indian ancestors lived. The conquest of those cultures is history and we move forward from where we were to where we are now and beyond.

I also wouldn't want to live like my white ancestors from Prussia and France did in the past either. I like how my life is now as I am from this time. Appel, by the way, is my family name that came with my great-grandfather who came from Prussia (Northern Germany) in the 1840s.

Massimo, we cannot downplay Columbo's voyages importance to what became modern America. Without them, the world would not be what it is today. However, there are downsides to everything such as the destruction of centuries old societies that lived fine the way they were. I am not saying go back to those times as even I would not want to live like my Indian ancestors lived. The conquest of those cultures is history and we move forward from where we were to where we are now and beyond.

I also wouldn't want to live like my white ancestors from Prussia and France did in the past either. I like how my life is now as I am from this time. Appel, by the way, is my family name that came with my great-grandfather who came from Prussia (Northern Germany) in the 1840s.

Evren: Howard Cosell had no use for anyone who finished second. I don't think race had much to do with his attitude about Jerry. Someone who Cosell probably thought had talent but somehow lacking because he couldn't, for whatever reason, win the brash ring of number one.

No Massimo - I didn't receive your e-mail. Try again. Thanks.

Evren: I sent you an e-mail about six hours ago. If you didn't receive it, it means that my mail isn't working so I'll write you here later today.

Roadscholarette I’m glad you pointed out the JQuarry v Cosell rub. His early interviews and ring commentary at Jerry’s fights with Patterson, Ellis and Frazier were full of respect and credit for Jerry’s ability. Cosell even relented after the second Patterson fight that Jerry could go the distance without tiring out. It was later that Cosell seemed to diss Jerry in his coverage, somewhere around Jerry’s first fight with Ali. Perhaps it was Cosell’s racial-political bias, or something that was exchanged in private that soured his perception of Jerry. It may also be that Cosell wanted only to associate himself only with “Winners”. Anyway, whatever it was, his attitude seemed obvious to me, though I’ve heard few people ever mention it.

Very close to Termini Station (about 200 mt) there is a good restaurant called "Nazzareno" (Via Magenta), and there is another one also, but I can't remember the name. If you go for a brief walk around T.S., you will find inter. places. Far from T.S., I know "Il Corsaro" (Via del Boccaccio). It's good but it's closed on Sunday.

I also know "Il Glicine" (Corso Trieste). This one is the best, it's very very good, but it's a little expensive (for my resources). If you decide to go to Glicine, ask for LASAGNE. In no rest. you will find lasagne as good as in Glicine. Do you know what lasagne are?

If you want to go for a good walk my advice is of using the T.S.'s underground (be carefully, there are 2 possible lines: A or B, and you have to use A if you want to reach the best destinations: SPAGNA, BARBERINI, SAN GIOVANNI). If you choose SAN GIOVANNI, you can't miss "LA BASILICA DI SAN GIOVANNI", it's arguably the most beaut. church I have ever seen in my life...

Have a good time in Rome! PS; don't worry, seafood is my favorite food too.
was little, and watched Monday night football with my Dad and brothers, they used to turn the sound on the TV off, and listen to the audio from the radio! .. In retrospect, he was a whiny, annoying, self serving snake and a wannabe, who dwelled on athlete's failures, rather than their successes.'Look at what you're saying. You were a little kid and the authorities you cite are your father and brothers. You attribute a desire to please blacks as one of Cosell's primary motives and you call him a snake. Roadscholarette, you're committing the Rush Limbaugh Mistake here. While obviously abrasive and arrogant, Cosell was a brilliant human being and sportscaster who delivered the goods. He consistently knew more about boxing and football than almost anyone else. He was an innovator, and with Roone Aldredge, in effect invented post 1965 pro football and boxing. Obviously he associated with winners and why not? Would you expect him to befriend the unranked fighters, the 0-20 football team members? If so, why? Without Howard, there would have been no Ali as we know him now. Cosell made a tremendous contribution to sports and deserves more respect from all of you. Among many of you, I have seen a tendency to take a limited amount of knowledge, experience and let's face it, reasoning ability and imagination, and then use them all to spin ice cream castles in the air. You assume things you're not at all sure of, and then base assumptions on your assumptions and then more assumptions on that. For example, big heavyweights usually handle smaller ones, so Mike Tyson would have handled Joe Louis easily. Joe Frazier developed a unique boxing style and had tremendous heart and beat Ali, so Joe must have been the greatest of all time. Tyson won first round KOs and was trained by Cus D'Amato, so he must have been the greatest. Primo Carnera was my national hero, so he must have been a great boxer. Floyd Patterson had nothing going for him but hands speed. Jerry Quarry was a wonderful guy and a great fighter with a great punch and good speed, so he too was an all-time great who might have beaten almost any champion if only blah blah blah. Stick to what you know, think hard before you write, and show a little humility. | 10/17/03 08:51:47 AM| Fran| S.E. PA|| plc7755@aol.com| ||| 10| Thanks Albrecht, for getting back to boxing. I was not a little boy back in the Howard Cosell days but we also turned the sound off on him. He was a lousy commentator who knew nothing of the sport all he did was paint a picture. He was the worst of all time. | 10/17/03 09:21:11 AM| Roadscholarette| Chicago|| roadscholarette@hotmail.com| ||| 10| " I remember when I was little, and watched Monday night football with my Dad and brothers, they used to turn the sound on the TV off, and listen to the audio from the radio! .. In retrospect, he was a whiny, annoying, self serving snake and a wannabe, who dwelled on athlete's failures, rather than their successes.'I simply said I watched TV with them. He fawned over the superstars of the day of any color, but if they also happened to be black, more so. Cosell was a bush league huckster who jumped on any passing bandwagon, or tried to blow its tires out, whichever did him the most good. He was like wealthy (phony), self congratulatory liberals of the late 60s, who used to invite Black Panthers to their Manhattan penthouses for cocktail parties. You attribute a desire to please blacks as one of Cosell's primary motives and you call him a snake. Roadscholarette, you're committing the Rush Limbaugh Mistake here. Nothing at all like that. Cosell wanted to please himself, and at a time of racial upheaval, when all things were equal, he leaned towards the black athletes. It wasn't for them. He couldn't have cared less about people he wouldn't have even acknowledged if they couldn't have done him some good. He didn't care about Ali or the whole mess he was in then. Ali was just mileage. Cossell and Limbaugh, in a funny sort of way, were snakes of the same sort, though they expressed this genre in vastly different Cosell liked to think of himself as "above sports." He really wanted to be a news journalist on world affairs. He was given a variety show in the 70's which was so bad it was funny. I never heard a good word about the guy from anyone that ever worked with him. Even NYC disk jockey Cousin Brucie (Morrow) who really has very little bad things to say about anyone and is a rather harmless guy, hated his guts. Listen to his commentary during the Holmes-Cooney fight and the way he constantly shifts opinion on whom he thinks will win is awesome example of covering all bases in order to always be right. He claims to have invented the term "lateral movement" and equates it with the discovery of penicillin.

What bugged me about Cosell is he always said, "I tell it like it is," rather than he told it as he saw it. Everyone's perception is different according to one's own life experiences so there is no absolute as it is. It is like, who died and left Cosell as God? What an arrogant persumption to think of himself as the prevayer of truth.

I write for some other websites and there are times when I interact with people of the boxing world. Sometimes a fighter may not like a comment I have made or a question I have asked but I try to convey to them it is just my opinion or the opinion of readers who would like to know something. I stand by my statement of never taking a cheap shot as any question is a search for knowledge and it is not personal. Am I the prevayer of some sort of absolute truth? Hell no! I don't want the job! What I say is just my "two cents worth."

Cossell's "tell it like it is" rubbish wasn't even "tough journalism," presenting hard to accept truths to viewers. If what he said ever was true, it was coincidental. He was something like the equally shlocky Bryant Gumbel, conjuring sensationalism and shrill hype to foist off on all of us ignorant peons as something we were too stupid to catch onto ourselves, thereby creating the illusion of groundbreaking truth. It was all for them.

Athletes, particularly football players, used to tell Howard stuff that wasn't true, then laugh when he presented it as his own insights.

I'm impressed that you know the word, but I don't understand your meaning. Likewise, you once wrote, "Lyle would have discombobulated Tyson." In my dictionary 'discombobulate' means 'disturb' or 'disconcert.' Why didn't you just say that "Lyle would have worried Tyson" instead of causing us to rush off to the dictionary. Another time you said, "pure athletic quotient." Koo Koo Clock. Where have you gone? Please come back and give me some of your humour before I go crazy reading bloody dictionaries.

Howard Cosell, a man i love to hate and hate him i did. no he played up to ali, downed jerry because he figured his career had nothing to gain from jerry, in the later part of jerrys career he did dis him quite a bit. JERRY HAD MANY THINGS HOWARD WOULD NEVER HAVE , THE ADMIRATION OF HIS FELLOW FIGHTS AND FANS, GOOD LOOKS, A BETTER Way of speaking and the attention of many beautiful women, something Howard would never know his whole life. He had a big mouth, big mouth, no hair and no guts!!! Koo koo! I'm steamed!!|

10/18/03 12:57:03 AM| Bob Bumbera | Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam | renfberra@aol.com | ||| 10 | This site is getting better and better with every post. I can understand R.S. and even get her drift, why all the over analysis I don't know...like if Ken Norton would have been better suited for another sport. Who knows...who cares...he was an excellent prizefighter and all I know is that the first time I saw him fight he beat the hell out of Muhammad Ali. Norton could not fight going backwards, he couldn't even pitch a decent jab in retreat. That's why Foreman, Shavers, and Cooney killed him and why he never fought his buddy Joe Frazier....Kenny was Frazier's sparring partner, he knew he would be killed. And that's why I believe Jerry would have taken him down as well. Look at the 3rd round of the fight when Quarry has him pinned on the ropes. If Jerry had been younger...Howard Cosell....it's just one guy's opinion, he did go out of his way to promote Black athletes in the 60's and 70's and they needed to be promoted. Look, it's the year 2003 and were are still debating if a Black guy is smart enough to be a quarterback or a coach in the NFL. I think Cosell was smart enough to know if you get people to debate you views they will want to hear more, the more they listen the more money you can make from it. Just some of my opinions, now, I'm not a "Rhodes Scholar" although, some people seem to think I look like Bill Clinton, so maybe my views are not up to par, I just like to go by the old saying "Keep It Simple Stupid"...that seems to work for me. Now I'm off for a Cuban Cigar, and a few Tiger beers in a Saigon Bar...very simple. see ya....|

10/18/03 01:32:11 AM| Ed | Cicero n y | mooseygoop@aol.com | ||| 10 | Concerning criticism of Cosell. I agree with everyones opinion of him. I remember Frank Gifford even didn't have anything nice to say about him. He was an opportunist who wouldn't even acknowledge anyone's existence if it didn't put himself in the spotlight. About criticism of posts on this board...this is a casually written web site, it has people posting from all points of view and all kinds of educational backgrounds. I like it that way, if I didn't I would ignore it. When I want edited and censored material I will read a magazine or newspaper. There's many things ive learned here I never read in a magazine. There's knowledge to be gleaned from all sources. Keep posting everyone!|

10/18/03 05:00:38 AM| Paul | Sydney, Australia | PlMs4@aol.com | ||| 10 | Bob - I agree with the K.I.S.S. system as it is much less discombobulating calling a shovel a bloody spade. And talking about the use of big words and Howard Cossell, I remember seeing film of Cossell interviewing a young, brash Muhammad Ali. Cossell (obviously hoping to catch Ali out) said to him, "You are very truculent today." Ali looked momentarily non-plussed before gathering his wits and replying, "If that means great then that's what I am today." Over here in Australia I never saw enough of Cossell to form a view of him. Was he wearing a bad hair piece ? I once saw film of Cus D'Amato interviewing Ali and that was very entertaining. D'Amato was intelligent and entertaining and he more than held his own.|

10/18/03 08:53:43 AM| Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | ||| 10 | Ali and Foreman both scored IQs in the 70s on tests they took, yet I doubt anyone listening to them doubted that they were highly intelligent men (as all top pro athletes are). They were simply illiterate, spending no time in school when they were young, and all intelligence tests have at least some educational bias. Cossell was no dummy, but couldn't get the better of Ali because IMO Ali was smarter than he was, and had a quicker mind.Some people watched Cossell -because- they hated him. They loved to hate him, and in that respect, he was a national treasure, or maybe anti-treasure, like the anti-Christ. However, it's no accident that he died the same bitter man he was when he was in the spotlight. When he was no longer in broadcasting, I read that no one ever called or came to see him. I used the word "peon" loosely as it is often, to mean peasants or inferiors, which Cosell's manner indicated he thought almost everyone else but himself was, even the luminaries whose booties he continuously kissed.

Like Cosell or not, he was successful. It was ironic that ABC television tried to use Dennis Miller as a commentator for Monday Night Football and he used a lot of big words that went over most people's heads and it didn't work. I think that they did that because if it worked with Cosell, it would work again with Miller, wrong!

Thanks for your concern about me! I have read RS's "shrill etc...) but I glance was enough to understand that that stuff wasn't for me. When, in a sentence composed by many words, all you can understand is "us" and "all", you, my friend, have to jump... Anyway, I have to thank RS for giving me some good English lessons. It's her merit if now I can dominate hard words like ain't, chump, whatcha, betcha etc.

I was wondering about a couple of things I've observed about Ali in all his fights I've seen. They aren't brand new aspects of his ring life, but they could possibly give a new slant to the fighter most think was the greatest heavy ever. First, I can't think of a single time in all his fights where Ali was hit with a follow up punch. Even when Frazier, Norton, Foreman, ~whomever~ nailed him and hurt him, even knocked him down (rare) none ever hit him with a second (followup) punch. His ability to keep his senses about him, even when in turmoil, was uncanny. While thinking about this re Ali, at the same time, I can't think of any ~other~ great who was ~not~ hit with multiple followups when they were really shook.

Second, while we can all agree that he had extraordinary speed for a heavy, and an unequalled bag of tricks even when he slowed down, did his also unequalled ability to take a punch allow him to aspire to greatness that his boxing fundamentals wouldn't have, had he had just an average chin?

Primo Carnera was another example of a great champion with that quality! I know that very well because I have seen all his 103 professional fights!|

Da Preem was a great fighter, 'rassler and a darn good actor too. Maybe, if he was around today he would have even beat Arnold for for gov'n'a of the land of Fruit & Nuts. I have to agree with R.S. on Ali. He rarely took a follow up punch, I think Frazier, came the closest, the 11th round of the first fight comes to mind. Of course Ali's jaw had a fondness for left hooks, but even as fast as Joe was he rarely caught him with two in a row. When he was hurt he had the ability to do what ever he had to to save himself. Survival instinct I guess you'd call it. And keep in mind that most of the "big punchers" he faced he KO'ed, another survival instinct? He didn't have the image of a typical tough guy but he was one of the toughest fighters of all time. Looking at all the Heavyweight champs of the past, I think Ali is far above the rest. He's #1 and the next guy down the list (Louis, in my opinion) would start at #3, if you get my drift. Of course we could and should, argue over who, if anyone could replace Ali at #1, and please let's do!, but overall, I believe Ali was the best, and is probably top 3 in the history of the sport.
Massimo, it's amazing, your mastery of the English language seems to have improved by leaps and bounds since you've been on this site. Are you sure your not goofing on us poor, illiterate, lower middle class folk? Your intellect is pretty impressive. I mean, you know, you mentioning that you're a physicist and all. Does C represent the velocity of light in a vacuum? Or would that be C Squared?

Hey Ramblin' Bob Bumbera, how do you doin', my fellow New Jerseyite? Imagine my surprise when I read that you're in the "GREEN DREAM", you know, "THE BAD PLACE"! I see your in "Ho Chi Minh City". Oh, bye the way, Bob, I spent two tours in that place! If your doing business with them, then I hope you have some spare time to look for M.I.A.'s.

Bob Foster vs. James Toney or Roy Jones. Don't be too quick to judge. James Toney is still just an amazingly adaptable, overweight, middleweight. If he fights Roy Jones Jr. so what? Could either one beat Ali or Joe Louis?

Thanks for the nice words! The irony is that after having praised me for my English, you have KOed me with the word "boofing". What does it mean? I have a lot to improve with English. The hardest thing is not writing (anyway, it's pretty difficult) but understanding an English person when he (or she) talks. Another hard thing is the use of the verb "to get" that means almost everything in English. Even if you have to go to the bathroom, you say "I get...". Light speed is $c=300000$ Km/sec in vacuum, it's $c/n$ in materials, where $n$ is the refraction index of the particular material. The amazing thing is that light speed is $c$ (in vacuum) independently from the motion of the source and of the observer. This is the basis of Einstein's theory of special relativity.

The comments on Ali are right. He was one of the toughest warriors who ever fought. I can't recall him ducking anyone and if the first fight was good, then he was always prepared to do it again. Everyone praises Ali for his speed and boxing skills, but I don't think the guy's toughness has ever been fully appreciated. Maybe if he had a rough head on his shoulders everyone would have noticed his toughness as well. Perhaps Ali needed a flat nose and a few scars to be appreciated in that way. Ali's shown that toughness in the way he is handling his illness. He doesn't hide himself away and I've never read or seen him feeling sorry for himself. Also, RS made an extremely astute observation when commenting that Ali never got hit with many follow-up punches. I'd never noticed that before even though I've probably watched videos of his fights hundreds of times. Ali doesn't make as many public appearances as he used to. I imagine he feels wretched, from the Parkinson's if not the to the medicine he's on, plus is aware of how he comes off. I remember one stark and sad moment recently when he was on, when they had closed captioning at the bottom of the screen to let viewers know what he was saying.

Foster vs Toney? I think Foster would win by a convincing unanimous decision. Foster wouldn't KO Toney because James is iron chinned, but he would outbox him. I have seen Foster in 4 fights, and he is one of the most skilfull fighters ever.

Tyson with his weak mind would never have beaten the Ali' of the 3 Frazier fights or the Ali' of the Foreman fight. But I think a (19-21) years old Tyson would have had a good chance against a (19-21) Clay.

I read or heard somewhere that the second concussion immediately following the first, is very often the lethal one. Such as a fighter being knocked out by a punch and then slamming his head into the canvass. Or being hit with a second or third punch after being rendered helpless.

Foster's skinny arms were like bullwhips. I could see a tough guy walking out of a bar laughing, thinking Foster would be a soft touch, and having to have his buddies tell him what happened when he regained consciousness. Though I think Foster would have taken any light heavy anytime, even Archie Moore, the heavies were another story. Ali and Frazier walked through him like he was nothing. Toney is not Ali or Frazier though. I'd put money on Foster to knock him out.

How would have Foster knocked out Toney? Holyfield couldn't do that! Holyfield hit Toney with 3 or 4 terrible bombs in their fight, punches that would have killed a bull and Toney didn't seem hurt at all. I was really impressed by Toney 's last fight. He's really a tough guy, but I think Foster was too skilfull for him! Don't you think that Holyfield hits harder than Foster ever did?

About Foster's skinny arms I remember Rino Tommasi once said that the most powerful fighters are those who have long and thin muscles (like Foster and Hearns). I don't know if this is generally true, but surely it doesn't work for Foreman (George's muscles are huge!)
The ability to hit hard, ~really~ hard, is a genetic gift. Anyone can work out and practice fundamentals, and increase their punching power greatly, but real bombers are born. Punching power and snap. Ali had snap, but wasn't that hard a hitter. Foreman didn't have as much snap as Ali, (though it was sufficient!), but no one has ever hit harder. I'd hazard a guess that if Foreman had never been a boxer, just ate cheeseburgers and drank beer, didn't work out, and didn't know how to throw a punch, that he'd still be a fearsome hitter. Being skinny doesn't mean you ~can~ hit hard. Big punching scarecrows like Foster, Hearns, Danny Lopez, etc. were guys with the gift. Foster was like a big snake in the ring, coiling this way and that, long legs eating up real estate like a vacuum, then those blinding hands would come whipping out in a three punch combination, almost as if it was one movement. I don't think Toney could cope with his experience, his tactics, speed, or power. Foster was a real killer, with a rare destructive instinct, even among boxers.Don't you think that Shavers could hit a little harder with his right than Foreman ? Lyle and Ali', who fought both, said that Shavers could hit a little harder.<br뗑<建档立 a daunting tournament, where Jerry lose's a split decision to Bob Fitzsimmons,All I can say is JQ never lost to any light heavyweights. I can remember when A FIGHTER by the name of AL "MEMPIS" JONES knocked Quarry down extracted 4 of his teeth and broke his jaw, then decked him again with a flurry accumulated with a push-punch,then was knocked kicking the next round at 3:08 OF THE FOURTH. (WENT IN THE RECORD BOOK AS A KO 5 FOR Jerry, but it was the fourth round).Not a lot of fighter's would have survived Alexander,after he decked Jerry in 74', (Joe Alexander said later Quarry was the only opponent he ever decked "that got up and won").I Agree with some other's on this post how Jerry's first year in the broadcast booth, he could outshine HOWIE COSELL at EVERYTHING!ESPECIALLY THE LADIES,A lot of people forget that besides being articulate, QUARRY WAS INTELLIGENT,CHARMING AND ELOQUENT WITH HIS FAN'S. TAKE CARE!!the clockman agrees, jerry did have the class of a champion, it's too bad that he cut so easy, but hey that the way it goes, he'll always be remembered, you can't forget that kind of man. |You said that Foster would have taken any light heavy anytime. I want to propose you 3 names 1) Doug Jones. He beat Foster ! Don't you think that he could have been greater than Foster at 175 lbs ?2)Ezzard Charles. He beat Archie Moore 3 times convincingly and gave Marciano the toughest fight of his life ( first fight)3) the legendary Sam Langford: he fought in almost all the weight division, includind the light heavyweight, kicking asses of almost all the best fighters in the wordl ( with the exception of Jack Johnson, that had an ass hard to kick !). | diet down one weight class, if possible, with the theory being that the individual will retain the strength he had at a higher weight. This isn't always the case, plus with everyone doing it, it sort of evens the field. Some fighters have done OK going up or down, but the majority going up hit the wall. Duran and Hearns didn't, but most light heavies do. Spinks found the going much tougher, but someone like Quarry at cruiser would have had a walk in the park.

While Foster couldn't take the great heavyweights, I believe he would have taken most of the less than great, much less ones sort of on the line between the two divisions. I also think he would have been a shoein at cruiserweight, if the division had been around when he was fighting.

Last time Tyson fought was in February. Eight months of rest but for a good reason: his exhausting battle against Clifford. The Thrilla in Manilla looks a joke in comparison! Mike, be serious! If you want to fight, keep on fighting, but if you don't want to fight...Just quit, please!

Jose Napoles was a superb fighter. He won 77 of 84 fights, 57 by knockout, beating such men as Cokes, Griffith, Lopez, Backus, Lewis, Pruitt, Perkins, and Muniz, some more than once. He lost to Monzon, trying for the middleweight title, but Monzon was a phenom at middle, one of the greatest ever. Big too—six feet. Anyway, Napoles would have been an interesting match for Sugar Ray Leonard. I think Napoli would have been a dangerous contender in Leonard's day, and against him or Duran, could never be counted out.

Re middleweights—there's an aura and mythology about Sugar Ray Robinson, just as there is about Ali that no one could have beaten him, but IMO, his opponents were not of the quality of those in the golden age of middles, late 70s and into the 80s. This was the time by which middleweights should be measured, just as the 70s was for heavyweights. I think Robinson would have had his hands full with Hagler, Hearns, Leonard, and Duran. Fighters like Graziano, LaMotta (not the heavy hitter he was portrayed to be in the movie), Basilio, etc. would have been lucky to have gone the distance. Robinson and Ali are often named as the best fighters ever, but for my money, the best, pound for pound, and the most fundamentally complete, was Roberto Duran.
Sugar Ray Leonard was a great champion, but I put him a step below Marvin Hagler and Robinson because sometimes he looked scared in the ring and didn't fight bravely. Wasn't Roberto Duran better as a lightweight than as a middleweight? I think he was the best lightweight ever, but not the best middleweight ever.

Wasn't Roberto Duran better as a lightweight than as a middleweight? I think he was the best lightweight ever, but not the best middleweight ever.

I think Duran hit the wall of greatness as a welterweight. No one was even close as a lightweight, almost likewise as a welterweight, but he was running in the middle of the pack as a middleweight. It was a pretty fast pack, but he wasn't leading it. I think his no mas fight is a major blemish, without real explanation. Was it an off night or was he sick, and was therefore being humiliated? Was he being humiliated, period? Was he going to crap his pants due to something he'd eaten, as has been suggested? Who knows? I don't think a current fighter always beats one from the past, or vice versa, but even allowing for changes in style on the part of some of the old time greats, I don't put them in the 80s class (though I think there'd have been some good fights).

Leonard was a GREAT fighter. (one of my favorites) Duran was not. Great fighters don't quit like he did. He quit because he was getting his ass kicked. PERIOD.

Hey KOO you can be nice when you want too!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

I still think Duran is one of the greatest of all time and the second greatest fighter I ever saw...the first being....yeah,yeah,yeah...Roy Jones Jr. Oh yeah...speaking of welterweights...If you want to watch a beautiful boxing match...SRL vs. Wilfredo Benitez.

The "no mas" fight was a blemish for Leonard too! A great champion like Leonard should behave in a sportsmanlike way and shouldn't act like a clown.

Duran was great. He fought often and was never afraid of moving up a division, but it is hard to forget the 'no mas' incident and to my mind that stops him being among the most elite. I'd even have Carlos Monzon above him. He fought 102 times, only lost three, and was never knocked out. It's easy to knock the opposition he faced, but that's not his fault. I was re-reading Angelo Dundee's book and his top fighters that he saw fight are: Ali, Sugar Ray Robinson, Leonard, Tony Canzoneri, Joe Louis, Henry Armstrong, Willie Pep and Rocky Marciano.

I think Duran was the best fighter of all time. He was able to move up in weight and his ability to slip n slide and counter later in his career showed him improving as he got older.
too think Duran presents a powerful argument for being the greatest fighter ever. He was fundamentally sound, he could hit like a mule, he could take a punch, he didn't ~get~ hit, some had as much of a killer instinct, but no one more, he could move, feint, parry, bob, weave, corner a man, and could finish. He knew how to get out of trouble, and how to weather a storm. His footwork was exemplary, and he was almost always in top shape.

The second Leonard fight has some 'splainin' to do! Leonard was a superbly talented fighter, but not more so than Duran, and certainly not as much as what we saw that night; Duran looked ridiculous, bordering on Cobb-Holmes or Wepner-Ali, and we know from his career before and after that fight, and from his first fight with Leonard, that that wasn't the case. I believe the first fight is a better indication of their comparative abilities. I doubt this killer, who'd been fighting since he was four years old, quit just because he was being beat. As I say, unanswered questions...

I throw out the 2nd Leonard Fight. The first was both of them at thier best. Duran was in terrific condition hungry and was able to out manuever a razor sharp former Olympic champ. The second fight was either a case of Duran being sick in body or mind or both. Leonard was a diferent generation of fighter than Duran and a bigger fighter should have beaten a former lightweight champ who should have been in decline. But Duran was hungry fined tune and Ready. I'll never forget watching it on Closed circuit it seemed like Duran was on top of Leonard as soon as leonard got up off his stool. It was like they threw him from Duran's Corner to Leonards when the bell rang. That was one of the biggest fights of the century at the time it was like Frazier Ali one and after the fight Duran Partied. He wasn't ready for the 2nd fight. Leonards people knew it. They were both ready for the first and Duran won......

I have to agree with Dundee on his all time greatest.Wonder why he doesn't include Duran?

I don't think it is as simple as "throwing out" a fight that badly tarnished Duran's record. Angelo Dundee describes Duran as having "three weapons - a left hand, a right hand, and his head." According to Dundee, before the first fight Duran incensed Leonard with his rude, arrogant manner, and he even insulted Leonard's wife. He says that Leonard lost his cool and the result was a defeat for Leonard. And Leonard can't remove that fight from his resume. Regarding the second fight, Dundee and Leonard went to the weigh-in wearing false beards (mimmicking the unshaven look that Duran chose to make him look tough in trying to intimidate opponents). They were showing their contempt for Duran. Dundee also says that Leonard was bigger and stronger and that Duran noticed this during the "stare down" when the referee was giving instructions. He says that Leonard negated all of Duran's "bullish tactics" causing frustration and that Duran eventually looked "ordinary, pedestrian." Dundee believes that Leonard got to Duran psychologically, just like Ali got to Liston psychologically in their second fight. Whatever the case, you can't pretend it never happened.

I have the tape of Leonard-Duran 3. I know that Duran was 38, but that was a very disappointing performance by "hands of stone". I threw 1 serious punch in all the fight, in the eleventh round!!

Massimo - Italy are going okay in the World Cup Rugby Union in Australia. They are not 'kicking ass', but they are holding their own. Here I was thinking all you guys in Rome could only play soccer and eat spaghetti and look good in Godfather films. By the way, the posts of Fran and RS are very informative. You two are deep thinkers, your posts are always well considered, and I look forward to reading them. Also, your presence has made Koo Koo Clock behave himself. I think he might be intimidated. Fancy that. Anyway, keep the great posts going.

I don't like rugby and baseball, maybe just because I have never understood the rules of both. Baseball looks so boring!! We Italian are good at soccer, but we don't win nothing since 1982! RS is a smart lady and she is a good English teacher too!

I forgot that you guys are also good at making ruins! I like rugby, but I don't know enough about baseball to form an opinion. I sometimes like to watch soccer, although boxing, rugby league football, and horse racing are what I like most. Sometimes I spend the entire weekend going from one to the other of those activities. I raced a horse last year and it kept coming second (like me). She came second seven times and we could not get her across the line for a win. RS believes that Duran is the greatest pound-for-pound and I suppose that view has merit if confined to his lightweight days. He was a two-fisted fighter at times unstoppable. But I have to go with Ali pound-for-pound. To me he is the benchmark for great fighters - the magnificent jab, ability to take a punch, speed, courage to pick himself up off the canvass, and he was just so unpredictable. Just when you expected him to jab, he'd hit you with a straight right. When you thought he would dance, he'd rope-a-dope. His balance was superb and he'd even throw great combinations going backwards. Early in his career his timing and speed were so special that he didn't need big power to knock a guy out with just one punch. So I have to have Ali on top. There's only one guy who I think could possibly have been better and that is Joe Louis. I think Ali would beat him but Louis was so great I can't be certain. Who is your best pound-for-pound, Massimo? Gianfranco Rosi? I wonder whether Koo Koo Clock is going to stay gone.

The best pound for pound? Most guys say Robinson, but I have seen only about 10 minutes of Sugar Ray in the ring, so I can't judge him! I have never seen Carlos Monzon in the ring! Let's say that BOB FOSTER is my best fighter pound for pound, just a half step above Ali' and Hagler. Leonard had a huge class, he was a super champion, but I prefer Hagler because was more brave and serious in the ring! Don't you think that a (19-21) years old Mike Tyson would have had a good chance against a (19-21) Cassius Clay? Tyson looked impressive at the beginning of his career...

If Duran wasn't who was. Did you know the Quarry's?

I was wrong! I have written Kent Apple's fan but his surname is Appel not Apple! Forgive me Kent, that wasn't intentional!!! course, it's all just speculation. Foster at a natural 210, Monzon or Duran the same, if there was a proportionate increase in power, and they were still as quick, would be fearsome fighters. Strength is a funny thing. A human is stronger than a horse, pound for pound, and an ant is stronger than an NFL lineman, by the same standards. A 100 pound ape is as strong as a 300 pound man. Speaking of strength, there's a gorilla at a Chicago area zoo - Brookfield - that not only throws tractor tires around, but got P-offed once, and turned one inside out! Wow!Re your posting about Ali, Paul - it's always tempting to take great little guys and shine a Martian growth ray on them, turning them into heavyweight scoundrels, while at the same time, dismissing the regular heaves. While Ali was not a killer puncher,ala Foreman, Frazier, Dempsey, or Shavers, etc., I think a strong case could be made for him being best pound for pound too. There was never, ever a smarter, more creative, or craftier fighter than Ali. People look at him as a model of the stylistic boxer, but I submit that he was anything but. He was a ~fighter~! The most versatile, adaptable man ever to enter the ring. Maybe he made some fundamental mistakes, but the ~Fighter~ reigned supreme, rendering those irrelevant. He was smooth, dirty, tough, indestructible, fast, and fought with his mind like few others.I tend to look at heavies in terms of how they'd have done in either the first or third Ali-Frazier fights, against those two, those nights. In my mind, only those two, or Foreman could have survived. I can't think of another boxer, in any division who fought and beat both the number or the caliber of opponents than Ali did. If he'd had Foreman's punch, they'd have made him illegal!!

| 10/24/03 01:53:16 PM | Massimo | Rome | | | | | 10 | RS-I think a brawl between that gorilla and Calvin Lane would be very interesting! Do you know that Calvin can bench press 385 lbs? He is a living legend!!Better than any other... Frazier, in my mind, fought slightly better than Ali' in those 5 rounds.It wasn't a bad fight at all. Not as hyped as the first and third, and not ~as~ good as those two, but nothing to kick out of bed either, even if it did eat crackers! :-( Ali learned from the first, and held Frazier relentlessly, something that was not curtailed one bit by the incompetent referee. They might as well have had some punchy X-champion as the third man in the ring. Ali probably won narrowly, though neither man was at his best.Some of the drugged out NFL behemoths can bench press 500-600 pounds for reps, and are frighteningly strong men, near gorillas. They're fast too, moving like ballet dancers, rather than the bearlike men they are in appearance. Heart attacks waiting to happen too.

| 10/24/03 01:58:36 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | | | | 10 |Before Ali'-Frazier 1, do you think Ali' was really aware of Frazier's greatness or not? In the pre-fight interviewes he said "It's gonna be an easy fight! I'll KO Frazier in 6". RS, my English teacher, I'm sorry, but I don't understand what you meant from " nothing to kick out the bed... To crackers". Kick out the bed? What's that staff? Is that similar to " kick the bed"? I understand what "kicking asses" means, but why someone should kick a bed? It's not a smart behavior. It could be very painful!!!! |

I don't think Ali took Frazier lightly at all but he didn't think he was as good as he proved to be. Kicking out of bed is a phrase we use to say that a woman was hot enough that you wouldn't kick her out of bed. |

Ali Frazier and Foreman along with Quarry, Lyle, Shavers Norton was a great era. I remember watching Ken Norton and Joe Frazier go to war at 7 champs gym in NJ when Joe was training for Foreman. Norton was jumping on Frazier with right hands and Frazier was getting shook to his toes then he'd fire a left hook back and almost take Norton's head off. These guys were killin each other in the gym. |
Thanks Fran and thank George! Welcome George Buell! We have a new friend! I though dogging it meant avoiding it... I wasn't very close to the truth! I think that Sam Langford deserve a shot to the pound for pound best fighter. If you are 5'6" tall and you beat several times George Godfrey, Joe Jeannette, Sam Mc Vey etc., you are great! I'd be curious to watch a Godfrey-Tyson fight! My impression is the George Godfrey was a terrific fighter! Apart the fixed fights, he didn't lose many fights! Larry Gaines used to say: "I feared just 2 men in the world: my father and George Godfrey!". Paul said that if he had trained for all his fights in the same way, his career wouldn't have lasted so long!

Welcome George Buell! We have a new friend! I thought "dogging it" meant "avoiding it"... I wasn't very close to the truth! I think that Sam Langford deserves a shot to the pound for pound best fighter. If you are 5'6" tall and you beat several times George Godfrey, Joe Jeannette, Sam Mc Vey etc., you are great! I'd be curious to watch a Godfrey-Tyson fight! My impression is that George Godfrey was a terrific fighter! Apart the fixed fights, he didn't lose many fights! Larry Gaines used to say: "I feared just 2 men in the world: my father and George Godfrey!".

George Buell, are you any relation to a Bruce Buell who used to (and may still) live in the La Habra, Whittier area? If by chance you happen to be his relative, he was a friend of my father's, Victor (Shelly) Appel, who passed away about 15 years ago. If not, you are right about the strong presence of Mexican fighters, both Americans of Mexican descent and Mexicans from Mexico, in Southern California. They are still going strong with fighters such as Oscar De La Hoya and Fernando Vargas, among many others.

Eddie "El Amimal" Lopez of Mexican descent was a decent heavyweight who was close to a top twenty ranking. He was the first fighter to go the distance with Gerry Cooney.

Ruben Olivares knocked out Australia's Lionel Rose to win the World Bantamweight title. Olivares was a great fighter and his nickname was 'Rockabye'. Rose had earlier won the title from Fighting Harada. Beating Harada made Rose a national hero over here.

Paul, do you mean Shotgun Olivares was called Rockabye in Australia? Good nickname. Whatever happened to Lionel? I remember him now. Have there been other aboriginal world champs? Whatever happened to Evonne Goolagong?
it also means avoiding it. When you call someone a dog (or dawg), it now means he is a stud or "Romeo" or successful with the ladies, like Sugar Ray Robinson. But you could say a boxer who holds, circles around, hardly throws any punches and doesn't work hard is dogging it. Yes, there were and are thousands of good Mexican-American boxers from the West Coast, too. Some include Mando Ramos, Bobby Chacon, Ruben Navarro, Art Aragon in the 40s and 50s, Ernie and Little Red Lopez (actually they were from Utah originally and part native American)-- I should be able to list 50 more, but I'm too damned old. The ringside announcers always made a big thing about how Mexican boxers were taught "the liver punch" as children -- this claim sounded a little racist. There was one tough Mex-American heavy named Joey Orbillo who came up with JQ as a rival, and friend.
Joey may have reached the Top Ten and I remember he fought Liston in the twilight of Sonny's career. In interviews, Sonny pronounced his name "Orbillio", and then KOed him, if I remember right. Joey later lost a showdown with JQ, who said for once he hesitated and didn't want to knock his old buddy flat. Then Joey became a policeman and may still be doing it. I guess Manuel Ramos qualifies as a good heavy but not a great one. Alejandro Lavorante was from Argentina, I think. He was highly touted around 1962 but lost to Cassius Clay, and then a month later got KOed by a ham-and-egger (average fighter or "journeyman") named Johnny Riggins. Lavorante hit his head on the ring turnbuckle (where the ropes come together), suffered a basal hemorrhage and died soon after. This is the most common reason for ring deaths -- not a punch but hitting the turnbuckle. I think Cassius Clay did the original damage that made Lavorante vulnerable. But who knows? I regard Ali as a very heavy puncher. Not in the category of Foreman, Cleve Williams, or the big bangers, but probably as forceful as Frazier and the second tier hitters. The difference is that Ali had the crisp snap that immediately cut off the CNS (central nervous system), and most of the others had bludgeoning blows. It used to be (and maybe still is) that a lot of Thai boxers were highly-ranked in the lighter divisions, too.
Massimo, Shaq, Magic Johnson, Kareem Abdul Jabbar and many others live in Bel Air, a couple of miles down Sunset Boulevard from me. When you see Shaq or any 7-footer on the street or in a restaurant, it's unbelievable at first.
One last question -- I always heard some heavyweights train with middles or even welters for speed. True or false? If true, who are some of the guys who did this? Oh, and I didn't have relatives named Bruce Buell, but for decades, one of the announcers on classical station KFPC-AM/FM had that name. I was reading a book covering the Lionel Rose v Olivares fight and it called Rubin 'Rockabye' Olivares. To be honest, I did not know that was his nickname until I read that. I can't recall that nickname being used when he fought. Lionel Rose is alive and well and is about 54 years old. A friend of mine knows him well and I got to meet Rose about two years ago at a fight night in Sydney. I was lucky enough to enjoy a number of beers over several hours with him. At the time he was living 100 kilometres from Sydney in a place named Ulladullah. Like many ex-champions, Lionel is not wealthy but he doesn't complain and he battles on.
He smokes too much. I understand that he sold the bantamweight title belt that he won. After the Olivares fight, he had a few more bouts which he lost. He then made a record singing an ordinary song and playing the guitar. On the night we were with him none of us (including Lionel) could recall the name of the song.
Lionel is a very friendly and likeable man. Evonne Goolagong is also alive and well. I think she still lives in Sydney, but she keeps out of the limelight and we never see her. In her youth she lived in a suburb in Sydney called Roseville, just a few streets from me. But I've never seen her in person. She was a wonderful tennis player. No one has a bad word for Lionel or Evonne in Australia. You are right about Ali. He had terrific snap in his punches.
have been other Aboriginal world champions. There have been and I will have to get back to you on it (as my dinner is ready to eat). Anthony Mundine, who now holds the WBC Super Middleweight belt (after beating Antwun Echols), is part Aboriginal (mother white, father black). His father is Tony Mundine and you might recall that in 1974 Tony was knocked out in the 8th round by Carlos Monzon. Tony beat guys like Emile Griffith, Jean Claude Boutier. He was a classic fighter with a great offence (but unfortunately his chin was flawed). Tony was very popular here. Unfortunately, Anthony is extremely unpopular and most here regard him as a loud mouth. He said some dreadful things after September 11th and many of us will never forgive him for it. I have a framed photograph on my wall of an unconscious Anthony on the canvass after Sven Ottke knocked him cold. It makes me happy looking at it. I'll get back to you on the rest of your questions. | 10/26/03 03:41:26 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com||||10|George - the only Aborigines to have won world titles that I can come up with were Lionel Rose and more recently Anthony Mundine. We've had some terrific Aboriginal fighters though. Dave Sands (who died at age 26) twice beat world champions but never actually did so in a title fight. He beat Robert Villemain who later beat Jake La Motta. Another Aborigine named Hector Thompson came close too. In 1973 after 26 straight wins he was tko'd by Roberto Duran and was later beaten in a title fight against Antonio Cervantes. Thompson twice killed opponents in the ring, even though he was more a bodypuncher than a knockout guy. Australian champions we've had were Vic Patrick, Jimmy Carruthers (he retired and operated a fruit juice shop and I met him before he died), Jeff Fenech (now very wealthy and is training Danny Green who will win a world title soon), Jeff Harding (now in gaol, has a terrible alcohol problem after a broken marriage), Barry Michaels (successful commentator), Lester Ellis (made a recent comeback to be knocked out by Anthony Mundine), Rocky Mattioli (hails originally from Massimo's home town), and Johnny Famechon (who is severely disabled after being hit by a car). I can't think of any others. We also had Tony Madigan who Cassius Clay beat on the way to winning Olympic gold. Madigan didn't win a world title. | 10/26/03 09:12:59 PM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia81@aol.com||||10|Hey KooKoo, thats great you trust the Quarry's, cause I know I am a trustworthy person. Its great all the stuff you all are writing on here, and its all pretty much positive about Jerry. You are very missed and loved Dad & Uncle Jerry| 10/27/03 01:41:31 PM|Massimo|Rome||4||||10|Tony Madigan gave Clay his toughest fight in Rome (1960). The fight was a close-run thing, with Cassius scrapping a narrow points win. I have found this sentence in a book and I'm going to seek in the dictionary "to scrape", for better understanding what I wrote! George - Did you ever meet those guys you have mentioned? My biggest friend is 6'4" 210lbs and every time I meet him I look up and think: "What a mountain!". But you guess Shaq is a little bigger than that... Maybe even Andre' the Midget was taller, but I would not bet my guts he was taller than Vitali Klitschko! Anyone who meets Calvin Lane risks a heart attack! | 10/27/03 02:27:27 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Massimo - "Wouldn't kick him or her out of bed" is a slang expression referring to the obvious or course, but can be expanded to mean anything desirable. The eating crackers part is just one of my little additions! Paul - At some point, I think Ali lost some inner fire, and while he could find this from certain opponents, it wasn't there for all. He didn't train as he should, he didn't hone technique, and he didn't listen to anyone. As one time, he tried to get Eddie Futch to come over to his camp, knowing how bright Futch was (not that he had any slouch in Dundee), but I don't see that it would have done any good - he wouldn't have listened to Futch. I sense that Eddie wouldn't have put up with Ali's crap either, and would have been soon gone, had he ever come
Before Frazier fought Foreman, he said he didn't feel right. High blood pressure, perhaps hepatitis (which he got later, before he was to fight Knoetze, then Shavers), his eyes, whatever. He said he felt weak. Could Frazier have beaten Big George the night he fought Ali the first time, or in Manila? Who knows, but if Foreman had won anyway, it wouldn't have been as easy as it was those two times. Joe lost to only George and Ali, decisively only to one. He was always ready. I wonder how fighters today would respond to some of the new interval anaerobic training methods employed with Olympic fighters? Most fighters run like they're carrying anvils - 10 minutes per mile or slower. One of the Mexican fighters (can't remember who) hooked up with the track coach at San Diego State, they worked out a running program, and just the difference in roadwork improved his ring performance immensely. I also read about another fighter who was dating a woman who was a 10K and marathon runner, and after she just about killed him on their runs, he too improved unbelievably.Can you hear the AUDIO of the videoclippes ? Before I could, but not anymore !What happened in here the last few days? First, my bookmark took me only to a timed out message, then to Colussus, saying the page was "taking a vacation." | 10/27/03 05:40:24 PM|Massimo |Rome||4||10|To everybody in the world-RS-Have you seen all the Frazier's fights ? I ask you that because I know you are a huge Frazier fan ( as anyone should be ) ! Even if he had fought only the Thrilla all the men and women in the world should say:" Thanks Joe !Thanks to be born". What a luck that Joe was a little fat when he was a boy... If not... No Joe Frazier ! The Thrilla is the best fight I have ever seen and I think I'll keep watching it for all my life... Am I crazy ? I don't think nice !Ali'-Frazier 1 maybe is the second best fight I have seen... Is that a coincidence ?... I don't think so !| 10/27/03 06:20:17 PM|Massimo|Rome||4||10|RS--Charles anderson|ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com||10|what did Frazier have to say about Jerry in his autobiography?Charles-Frazier showed a great respect and consideration for Jerry Quarry in his autobiography.| 10/27/03 07:45:33 PM|Massimo|Rome||4||10|Charles-Frazier showed a great respect and consideration for Jerry Quarry in his autobiography.| 10/27/03 07:59:51 PM|VIDEO POST|The Jerry Quarry Foundation||TJQF||10|<Font color="lime">VIDEO POST</Font>| 10/28/03 02:03:58 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PIlMs4@aol.com||10|RS - I recall reading an amusing story about Ali's preparation for a fight overseas. I forget who the fight was against, but it was a bout Ali was expected to win. Angelo Dundee was in bed trying to sleep the night before the fight when the window blinds kept rattling. Every time Dundee started to nod off to sleep, the blinds would rattle again and he did not sleep much. When daylight came he inspected the blinds to find fishing line attached and the line went all the way up to the floor above where (of course) Ali was staying. So Ali must not have slept much either staying up all night pulling on the line. The story illustrates that Ali was not always focused and properly prepared for the fights he thought he would win easily. In regard to what Frazier wrote about Jerry Quarry....Frazier described Quarry as a "skilled counterpuncher, with quick hands, a decent punch, and a good head for tactics." He also said that "Quarry was a good looking Irish kid, with a nice smile and an engaging boy-next-door manner." And then, "But Quarry hadn't the kind of Leave It To Beaver upbringing you might have figured. He'd been raised to be a fighter by his father, Jack, a rough sort of man who had the word HARD tattooed on his left fist and LUCK on his right. Old Man Quarry had been a club fighter in his youth. And when the fighting part of his life was done, he'd bolted from the Texas dust bowl and went looking for a better life." It is a good read! Massimo - are you going to ask what Leave It To Beaver means? Then ask Koo Koo.

Why are you doubting that I understand what "Leave It To Beaver" means? I already knew that when I was 6 years old! We all in Rome act that way, we all "Leave It To Beaver"!

If you are looking for a good Frazier's hook, watch the last videoclip! You are gonna (don't worry for "gonna", it means simply "going to") find something interesting! But I have to admit you were right when you said that Frazier wasn't indestructible: he looked really hurt by that Bugner's right hand and Bugner wasn't a great puncher! RS, what's going on? Frazier looked really hurt by that right hand! This site is the greatest!

The Mexican fighter you are referring to who had a track coach revise his roadwork program is Carolos Palamino. Today's fighters run much differently, they do wind sprints, interval training, etc. For more info on modern training methods for boxers go to Rossboxing.com. Lots of good training advice that cuts through the myths, etc.

Ali seemed to be the sort of person who had a need to be challenged to do really well. Some of the guys he beat he could have come close to beating by just doing a little jogging. For the beasts, he needed to go to the bottom of the well. Sometimes it seemed to me that his perception of what was happening in the ring was different, like he was processing things in such a way as to slow them down, or as if he was living one second in the future. I thought both guys were a little faster in their first fight, though Ali had lost more speed than Joe in Manila (not that he was ~slow~!). Frazier kept his hands higher in their second fight, almost like Patterson, and bobbed more in the third. He puffed up a little more in the third, which might be a result of age. The quality of the third was much more chillingly brutal. If the ancient Romans had seen it, they'd have thought it was another of their gladiator battles to the death. Frazier was complimentary of Quarry in his book, and actually was of everyone he fought, other than Ali. John -

Yes, you're right, it was Palamino! I'll check that site. I've been researching training, and it has indeed changed. Fighters are lifting weights, and combining intervals and sprints with long slow distance running, which is also picking up over the old days of slow running, sometimes in combat boots. I'm surprised no one ever got an injury wearing those things, compared to today's excellent running shoes.

what can anybody say bad about Jerry? that he didn't win the big ones, the guy was a family man, he was tops, JERRY QUARRY MIGHT HAVE LOST , BUT HE WAS NO LOSER! LOSERS DON'T TRY IN THE FIRST PLACE!
Please forgive me, it has been quite a while since I viewed the site. In doing so recently it became painfully obvious that James has since passed away. Can someone fill me in? Sorry to bring up a sad topic as I have been quite fond of the Quarry family. Jerry and Mike were my favorites and I followed their careers. In creating TJQF James helped bring their careers and personal stories to a wider audience. I hope future stewards will continue to do the same.

On the other hand, I remember seeing an interview with Angelo Dundee and he said that Ali enjoyed roadwork, skipping rope, general training, etc. He said he didn't have any trouble getting Ali up early to do the training and he went at it enthusiastically. Who knows, this might have just been some of his more important fights Dundee was thinking of. Ali seemed to love being the proverbial ham when sparring, putting on a show for spectators. I have to say, even being Ali's biggest supporter, I think luck was on his side when he took the title from Foreman. Don't get me wrong: He won the fight without a doubt. Some people say it was a fast count, but he was still packing a punch and Foreman was out on his feet. Had the fight continued, Ali would have mauled him. What I'm really thinking about is that everything aligned for Ali perfectly---Foreman suffered the cut while sparring that led to the fight being postponed. I think that hampered Foreman and changed the prefight momentum. Ali used it as an opportunity to meditate more, continue training, get the fans on his side, etc. By the night of the fight, I think the delay hurt Foreman more than Ali. Ali got inside his head in a way only Ali could. I always thought that had Foreman gotten a quick rematch, he might have won the title back. Interestingly though, during an interview with Bob Costas, Foreman said he was "dumb" back then, and would have made the same mistakes in a rematch, and probably lost again. That surprised me. Regarding Foreman-Frazier, I watched both fights again recently, and the second one wasn't as easy for Foreman as I remembered. He did get the win in 5 rounds, but Frazier got into rhythm for some of the fight and gave a glimpse of how he could perform had he been able to sustain that style for more than a few minutes. Someone mentioned Duran-Cuevas from the early 80's. I should know this, but can't remember: How did that fight play out? Hadn't Hearns already destroyed Pipino at that point? It's weird that I can't even remember anything about Duran taking that fight.

Someone told me Jerry had an arrest record. Is this true, and if so, did the arrests involve violence?

Angelo, ironic that you should mention Duran verses Cuevas as there is a video clip of the fourth and final round, which was won by Duran by knockout, on this very letter page, still on the page near the bottom. I believe that Ali landed several hard right hands to Foreman's head in the very first round to put it into Foreman's "head" that he was in for a real right this time and not a walkover and this had a lot to do with Ali's win. I think if Frazier had tagged Foreman hard early, he did land one left hook early in the first round but it was not the kind of hook that had destroyed Jimmy Ellis and put Ali down, he would have gained Foreman's attention and respect. Joe was caught cold in that first fight and he never recovered. Ron Lyle also hurt Foreman early and this turned their fight into the pier six brawl that most fight fans know and love. I believe that if Lyle could hurt Foreman with his best punches (and Ali too), that Joe Frazier was capable of hurting Foreman as well. In the second Foreman/Frazier fight, Joe was a washed up fighter by that time but he had the right idea of trying to change his style and make into the later rounds and then turn on the offense when Foreman had tired and was more vulnerable. I still believe that gaining Foreman's respect early was a key ingredient to having a chance of beating him but trying to last into the later rounds and surviving Foreman's initial onslaught was also important. Ali combined both of these plans and he won!

Who do you think we have to blame for the loose ropes in Kinshasa? Who did want that the ropes were loose? Ali? Who?

Last comment, obviously, was by Massimo, not by Kent! The hurry made the mistake!

One reason Ali was liked by so many people was that he was an eternal child. Like most prizefighters, he was a real nice guy outside the ring, and in addition to that, he took true joy in everything he did, including working out. Early on, he was always enthused about running, going to the gym, working on technique, and so forth, but from everything I've read, as his career wore on, along with certainly the aches and pains, he came to enjoy the people more than the workouts. He falsely stated that if he'd been in top shape all the time, his career wouldn't have lasted as long. What was wearing was getting out of shape between fights, then having to work back into a semblance of condition, not to mention the pounding he always took in training. It would certainly have been better had he continued to run some, jump rope, and hit the bags in between fights, as an ordinary person might do.

While Ali was certainly the most adaptable man in the ring ever, Joe Frazier might have been the least. I read that Frazier put Jimmy Young in the hospital after a sparring session, yet Young defeated Foreman. Joe was getting the right idea about how to fight George when they went at it the second time, but his body betrayed him by that time. Starting out like Tyson, tagging George early, counterpunching, and staying in close was the key. Roping a dope for the first time in his life, counter to instinct, may have made him even more of a sitting duck, though his exquisite gift for bobbing made it work for a while.

Ali could be vicious in the ring early in his career, but also showed bursts of compassion for overmatched opponents, particularly in career two. A number of times, he waved the referee in to stop a fight. When Coopman got the fight with Ali, he was thrilled of course, but his manager said it could have only been with Ali, since many Olympic boxers could have taken The Lion of Flanders. He said Frazier and Foreman were out, because they were killers.

In Thrilla, in the 13th round, when Frazier's left eye was swollen completely shut, and Ali was almost potshotting Joe, he hurt him, Frazier staggered back, and Ali just watched. He knew JF was in trouble, but didn't move in with a multi-punch combination, which could have had fatal possibilities to someone who couldn't even see the punches coming.

I remember Frazier doing this in the second Quarry fight, and then not really tearing into Jerry when the confused Joe Louis ordered the fight to continue.

I realize this posture can be risky, but I also think it shows a lot of class and sportsmanship.

Just watched a tape of Wilfredo Gomez and Lupe Pintor. If you haven't seen that fight in a long time you should. Brutal. One of the most disgusting things I ever witnessed was when Pintor fans threw cups of urine on Johnny Owen as he was being carried out of the arena on a stretcher. Johnny Owen would be here today if it wasn't for his management or lack of it. He had no business fighting Pintor. That was a set up by the then WBC crooks.

On the subject of boxing cruelty and corruption; I seem to remember a young and upcoming fighter named John Collins. He was badley beaten in a fight against a journeyman fighter. I apologise again for my faulty memory. Perhaps I should try doing a little research! Anyway, He suffered broken cheek bones, broken nose, jaw, eye... sockets. It was just a horrible beating. After the fight it was discovered that the other fighters gloves had been slit, and the padding removed! The trainer deemed responsible for the gloves was suspended from boxing for life. Again, I'm not sure, but I think it was Panama Lewis. If I am incorrect, then I apologize to Panama Lewis. He was, however, later reinstated to boxing. I think I read that John Collins later was killed in a car wreck. There was a strong suspicion that it was a case of suicide by auto. He was despondent over his career ending beating, and no other cars where involved in his car going off the road.

Max Baer killed 1 and a half persons in the ring. I'm talking about Baer-Campbell and Baer-Schaaf. Onlookers claimed that Baer slugged C. unmercifully after he was already unconscious but had held onto his feet by the ropes. Some hours later C. died from a severe concussion of the brain. Baer-Schaaf - Baer didn't kill S. but he ruined seriously his health. I'm not sure, but I suspect that Baer was a cruel fighter!

I have read in a book (written by David Remnick if my memory serves me well) that Charley Powell vomited blood for half an hour after his fight with Cassius Clay. I never saw that fight, so I don't know if Cassius fought with exaggerated cruelty. Probably not, he has a nice guy face.

Hi Steve. The boxer that got hurt and died later was Billy Collins jr. The guy that had his gloves rigged was Jose Resto. Terrible loss to his family and friends. I can't remember right now who his manager was, but I remember not trusting him any farther than I could throw my house. I was involved in amateur and pro boxing for 20 years. I could tell you a lot of war stories. Mike Quarry was involved in a fix one time in Miami. I was there when he got the shaft.

Steve -

Yes, Gypsy was a friend of Joe Frazier's. He memorized eye charts for his exams, such that they were. Joe said in his book that "Gyp" knew about his (Frazier's) eye problem too, but naturally didn't ever say anything.

A story I read about Baer, not the nice guy he was often portrayed as: He was sparring with a fan, who wasn't any good, and Baer circled, coiled, not throwing a punch, easily picking off paint brush jabs and ponderous haymakers. Then, at the end of the round, he waited for another jab to be slowly telegraphed, and whipped across a lightning fast right over top of it. The guy didn't move for five minutes, and Baer just laughed. Today, the fan would own Baer, and not only the horse he rode in on, but every horse he owned. What a bastard.
CA||Sonia81@aol.com||||10|Mike V.Just to let you know our Father James "Mr. Jimmy" Quarry, passed away July 2002, 3 wks prior to that our Mother, and just 1 month ago, my Grandmother, so its great to get on this site, and read the good things you all have to say about Uncle Jerry, and my Father, and they are both very missed, and still in our hearts and thoughts, daily. Keep coming back everyone!!

|10/29/03 09:05:19 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Jerry Quarry is my alltime,favorite fighter,closely followed by Joe Frazeir. The boxing world will never see the unique packages of style and power again. I notice the lack of mention of Philly fighters of the 70's and 80's.Guess you guys are pretty wraped up in Calif. fighters. Ever hear of George Benton,Willie "the Worm" Monroe,Eugene"Cyclone" Hart,Joe Giardello,Augie Panatellos,Bennie Briscoe,Denny Moyer,Mike Rossman ? |

|10/29/03 10:22:40 PM|steve |N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||||10|Weird stories about Philly fighters.Anyone ever watch a televised title fight where one of the fighters simply didn't show up ? Mike Rossman vs Victor Galandez. After Rossman,"The Jewish Bomber",from Cherry Hill,New Jersey,won the lightheavy title from Galandez in their first fight,in their rematch,was left standing in the ring.this was on national tv. Galindaz simply decided not to fight.Months later ,Victor Galendez regained his title by tko over Rossman when he decided it was time to fight.|

|10/30/03 02:22:31 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||ronnyrains@yahoo.com||||10|Steve: How are you? Yes I remember all the "Philly Fighter's" It still bothers me that the Rocky movies took away from a heavyweight that was very deserving of alotta those Philadelphia Accolades-"SMOKIN" Joe Frazier|

|10/30/03 03:17:25 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Sonia:Your Dad and uncles (as well as the entire Quarry clan) obviously had a big impact on many thousands of people, including those who are regulars on this board. Your Dad's work was important for professional prizefighters' safety/security. I think your family has impacted people not only because of the rich boxing tradition, but also because they're good hearted.|

|10/30/03 03:49:03 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Jimmy -Just as he was never totally able to internalize the attraction of Ali, possibly his inability to gain it too away from the ring, Joe Frazier has been hurt by his city's ignorance of his accomplishments, embracing instead a silly actor. In reality, much of America has a shallow celebrity mentality, and grabs at the first shiny object that attracts its attention the most, the reason for the Stallone statue as reflection of the "rich and colorful boxing culture of Philadelphia." I'm not sure if it's still there or not.I think I mentioned these two stories before, but in case I didn't, Earnie Shavers was originally slated for the Clubber Lang role in Rocky 3, but when the egomaniacal Stallone told Earnie to "hit me," Shavers did, and caused him to throw up, and ES pulled his punch at that. If Shavers had really opened up, it could literally have been fatal in a matter of seconds. Second story involves Rocky 2. In a brief sparring scene, the speedball in the ring with Stallone is Roberto Duran. Stallone looked ridiculous, couldn't have hit Duran with spray from a garden hose, and at the end, just before the camera cuts away, Duran has danced behind SS, and derisively taps him on the back of the head!I really enjoy most boxing movies, lack of realism and all, but I have utter contempt for these sissy actors who try to pretend they're really tough guys.|
I'm not a Stallone basher at all---I enjoyed the movies and characters he's created---but people were fans of "Rocky" not of Stallone. It's like the country needed a white champion so badly, they blurred the line between the sport of boxing and a movie actor playing a boxer, starting to believe the character was real. I can't imagine Stallone didn't realize that Shavers could throw a 35% punch and hurt him. I know that Stallone also had Dolph Lundgren (hope I spelled it right) hit him 50% to the head and 100% to the body for realistic affects. Apparently, the body shots he got hit with did some internal damage, including severe ribcage contusions. |
You people are living in some kind of a fantasy world of a sport that you clearly don't understand. Have fun though, everybody has to be somewhere.

The Rocky movies are entertaining but not very realistic. I watch movies and television to escape from the reality of everyday life and that is fine as long as it isn't done too much. The so-called reality shows are not reality at all as they are still staged to a certain degree. The only reality T.V. there is would be watching the news footage of the California fires and that is not very much fun to me.

I agree with whoever said the statue of Rocky that was in public was an insult to Joe Frazier. But it also was an insult to the many other fine Philly boxers that have toiled down through the years in that fine fight town.

Jerry would have chopped down Bugner. Mr. Jimmy said Jerry sparred with Bugner while in England and had his way with him.

Someone mentioned fighters from Philidelphia. If my memory serves me correct, wasn't the 1970s middleweight Benny Briscoe (who fought the great Carlos Monzon) from there. I think Briscoe might have had Phillipdelphia as part of his nickname. I don't think there should be any doubt that Jerry Quarry would beat Bugner. I agree with RS that it would be a decision, given that Bugner survived against Ali and Frazier. Also, I am embarrassed to admit that back in the 1970s I used to watch the first Rocky movie before I played football to psych me up. The whole team used to. With the benefit of hindsight, it is now clear that we were a team of imbeciles.

I don't think that Bugner was so harmless! He managed to hurt Frazier in that tenth round and he did pretty well in the first Ali fight.

Who begins well is in the middle of the path... Do you understand what I mean Tim?

When was Bugner ever in with an undefeated top ranked heavyweight in which he was the underdog and won. Who did he ever beat when they were in their prime. Bugner wasn't in Quarry's class. When did he ever have the Garden rockin for him like Jerry did.

No Contest Jerry would smoke him. The 70's were the golden age of Philly middleweights. Bad Bennie Briscoe fought the great Monzon to a draw in Monzon's back yard. What does that tell you. Bobby Boogalo Watts and Willie the Worm Monroe both beat Marvin Hagler. Cyclone Hart was on a fast Track to a title until he fell out of the ring against Denny Moyer at the Spectrum and was never right after that.

Max Hord didn't you have a good career as a middleweight back in the day?

Paul - Boxing is supposed to be about "hitting without getting hit." Joe Frazier took it a little far one way, Joe Bugner the other. Bugner lacked the destructive instinct of Frazier or Foreman as well. Perhaps a clone/mix of the two would be the perfect fighter? :-)

He was TKOd by Shavers, but then the night Quarry beat Shavers, JQ was well aware that he was one landed Shavers punch away from the result being reversed. Anyone is with a bomber like Earnie.

Bugner was four inches taller than Quarry, about twenty pounds heavier, had a decent chin, and was dedicated to survival, something he did well, emerging relatively unscathed from losses to both Ali (twice) and Frazier. He was probably a little faster than Jerry, but didn't hit as hard. JQ could always have caught him of course, but I suspect it would instead have been a long and relatively uninspired night of patiently chopping Bugner down slowly like a big tree, winning finally by decision.

I agree with all of you, Quarry would have beaten Bugner by a convincing decision. Quarry deserves a position above Bugner in heavyweight history, but this doesn't change that Bugner was 3 times European Champion, beat a lot of good fighters and fought toe to toe with a that "monster" of a fighter by the name of Joe Frazier. I think he would have given a good fight to anybody, including Lewis, Liston and Tyson even if, I think, he would have lost. He probably deserves to be ranked in the top 30 heavyweight ever.

I was just going to mention we left Briscoe and Leotis Martin and Witherspoon out as Philadelphia fighters, I would say Jerry was always faster than Bugner, especially combinations, he would get inside Bugner, and really go to town, it would not have surprised me if Quarry stopped Bugner or Bonavena (boxing is a battle of style's) Mr. Jimmy said Jerry really owned BUGNER SPARRING IN 1972. although odds on Decision in a real battle as I said Jerry could get inside JOE BUGNER, with Bugner doing his tying up gig as much as possible, and in for either a long (Ron Lyle) or short (Earnie Shavers) - EVENING, TAKE CARE!!

Hey Max Hord, thanks for the info on Billy Collins Jr. and Jose Resto. I wish somebody with your real boxing credentials would answer more questions on this site. Your name seems to ring a bell with me. With your 20 years in boxing, I would like to hear any war stories you would care to tell. I didn't even know Mike Quarry was fighting out of Florida. I think I remember a post by you where you talked about a restaurant in Florida that you and Mike frequented where he was very popular. Bye the way, if anyone is trying to reach me at my e-mail address, I'm sorry, but I still can't get my e-mail account up and running. This is a new computer and since I am a computer idiot it's quite a problem.

Hey Jimmy Dorsey, how you doing? I know you live in Calif. but do you remember the "Friday Night Fights". Maybe your too young. Don Dunphy was the class act announcer and commentator of all time. Along with Jimmy Lennon Sr. The only commercial they had was Gillette Razors, LOOK SHARP! FEEL SHARP! BE SHARP!. Friday night was date night with my girlfriend and she sat through it with me every week. I watched it from the early 60's to the mid 60's when I entered the military. I didn't see any of Jerry's fights when they occurred between 1966 and 1969. I do think I saw him knock out some really tall guy when he was just starting to get attention. Hey Larry, whatever happened to that other crazy stooge, aka Kent? He doesn't seem to post here much anymore.

Hey Jimmy Dorsey, how you doing? I know you live in Calif. but do you remember the "Friday Night Fights". Maybe your too young. Don Dunphy was the class act announcer and commentator of all time. Along with Jimmy Lennon Sr. The only commercial they had was Gillette Razors, LOOK SHARP! FEEL SHARP! BE SHARP!. Friday night was date night with my girlfriend and she sat through it with me every week. I watched it from the early 60's to the mid 60's when I entered the military. I didn't see any of Jerry's fights when they occurred between 1966 and 1969. I do think I saw him knock out some really tall guy when he was just starting to get attention. Hey Larry, whatever happened to that other crazy stooge, aka Kent? He doesn't seem to post here much anymore.

Hey Steve, YA LUNKHEAD! I, Curly "Q" of our stooges club am often here at the site even when I don't post. Massimo, yes Bugner had talent but he just didn't always use his talent to the best of his ability. His safety first attitude may have even stopped him from scoring an upset win over Ron Lyle. He fought well but lost a close decision. Of course, his safety first attitude may have kept him from being knocked out by Lyle too.

What about Ali'-Bugner 1? I have read that Ali' said that Bugner had given him a tough fight! Was it a close decision or an one sided fight as in Kuala Lampur? Kent, the Lakers won and without Kobe...

Hey Steve, YA LUNKHEAD! I, Curly "Q" of our stooges club am often here at the site even when I don't post. Massimo, yes Bugner had talent but he just didn't always use his talent to the best of his ability. His safety first attitude may have even stopped him from scoring an upset win over Ron Lyle. He fought well but lost a close decision. Of course, his safety first attitude may have kept him from being knocked out by Lyle too.

What about Ali'-Bugner 1? I have read that Ali' said that Bugner had given him a tough fight! Was it a close decision or an one sided fight as in Kuala Lampur? Kent, the Lakers won and without Kobe...
mentioned Matt Franklin (Saad Muhamad). Wasn't he a Philly hard knock? What about Dwight Braxton? |
| 10/31/03 06:07:14 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|A guy in East Side Boxing makes a case for Bugner as "the best white heavy" since Marciano.http://www.eastsideboxing.com/boxing-news/amato1909.php|
| 10/31/03 08:40:23 PM|steve |N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|{}|10|Yo, Angelo, your correct, Mathew [Saad Muhamed] was a Philly fighter and has to be in the top 20 best light heavyweight. He fought two of the best light heavyweight title fights of all time against Dwight Braxton - The Camden Buzzsaw. Interesting story about Franklin. He was discovered on Franklin Ave, [a major street in Philly], by a nun when he was only two years old, just wandering the street. The nuns adopted him. Since they found him on Franklin Ave. , They named him Mathew Franklin. |
| 10/31/03 10:50:17 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|RS, I am a writer for the Eastside Boxing homepage. We have a fine bunch of posters over there in our message section but also a few knuckleheads that make their way in also. I enjoy all of their posts though. I will be in Phoenix, Arizona representing Eastside Boxing this coming Thursday, November 6, for former cruiserweight champion Vissiliiy Jirov verses Joeseph Kanumba (spelling). I think it is a tape delayed broadcast for Fox Sunday night fights for November 9. If anyone wonders what I look like, I will be in press row, near the front row wearing a black shirt that has in capital letters, Eastside Boxing.com. You may catch a glimpse of me on camera. I have seen myself several times at various boxing shows on the broadcasts when there have been tape delays. I will probably also have a piece on the homepage at Eastside concerning James Toney's chances of becoming heavyweight champion, this coming Monday. Mr. Jimmy always told me to plug what I am up to but I do feel silly doing it sometimes. |
| 10/31/03 10:59:35 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|{}|10|Hey Fran, I come from south Jersey, just over the Ben Franklin Bridge from you in S.e. Philly. Have you ever been to the Blue Horizon Fight Club? How about the Cherry Hill Coloseum? |
| 11/1/03 04:29:07 AM|Massimo|Rome||9|{}|10|KentPhoenix is a little too far... May you organize this meeting at Naples? |
| 11/1/03 02:11:01 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|{}|10|Massimo, I was just saying if someone happens to tune in to the television broadcast on Fox Sports network (or maybe live on NBC TV) they may see me in the audience. Naples is a little far for me as well. Besides, I wouldn't want anyone to show up to the fight thinking I can get them in as I only have a pass for me. Opinion, to anyone on the board, Should I stop ignoring Koo Koo Klock? He was funnier even when he was saying things about me. He just doesn't seem to be as enthusiastic as before. I mean, what fun is it for him if he can't make fun of me?Koo Koo would be surprised about how big a person I am physically. He is lucky in a way that I never want to hurt anyone physically and I go out of my way to not harm anyone. Sonya has seen me in person and she can vouch for me about how I look, right Sonya. Ha! Ha! |
| 11/1/03 02:53:47 PM|Massimo|Rome||2|{}|10|KentAre you bigger than Shaq? Are you bigger than Calvin Lane? I know what being big means... When you are 5'6" 129 lbs it's clear that you have some problems of acromegaly.Don't worry about KooKoo. He has said that you are a nice person. There is no serious problem between you and KooKoo. It's just a joke or almost a joke. He is a funny guy. He has also said that English is not done for me!!!!!!! He has said "stick to Italian", when he knows very well that I am the next William Shakespeare. i'm listening, the clockman is never far away, kent apple mr. nice guy, even massino has sense enough to know i know what i'm talking about, kent is a jealous man, sonya take my side against this clown, he knows nothing about being quarry like, i have studied the ways of being a quarry, PLEASE PEOPLE DON'T EVEN THINK THAT JOE BUGNER COULD BEAT JERRY, JERRY WOULD BEAT HIM ON AN VERY EASY DECISION OR LATE ROUND KNOCKOUT, PLEASE !! KOO KOO|

|11/1/03 04:07:57 PM|steve |N.J.|dmmrs@comcast.net|||10|Hey Kent, please take it easy, pardner!! I value your informed and friendly opinions, even when I know your wrong. Ha, Ha. This site is a class act!!! I don't pretend to understand the pathology behind that clock morons' rantings and ravings. You have a right to express your opinion on this site without a nasty personal attack on your person. That's why this site is so unique and delicate. Let's keep it, as Sonia says, cool and good. Hey Kent, as we say in Philly, KOO KOO'S A PUNK in his heart!!|

|11/1/03 08:22:12 PM|Kent Appel|La Habra, Ca|kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Massimo, I am 5'11" tall and 310 pounds, I was 350 pounds. I have been swimming five days a week since May. Bobby Quarry says I have a good jab. Steve, Like I said, I am gentle and have taken a lot more nonsense from Koo Koo than other people would put up with. Besides, I think he is funny. Come on Koo Koo make fun of me now as I agree with you that Bugner couldn't beat Jerry, knowing him, he would probably find a way to talk sh*t about me even when I agree with him. It is you Koo Koo that is jealous as I have met Sonya in person and you haven't! In fact, I have met almost the entire Quarry family at one time or another. To other posters: If you want to keep this board rational and not petty, I will continue to ignore Koo Koo again. Sometimes I just can't resist taking a "shot" back now and then.

|11/1/03 09:13:14 PM|kookooclock000@yahoo.com||10|Alright Kent, we agree, everybody else on here but the quarrys can but out, this is between Kent and I. Most of you don't know the cols side to this man, he's not warm and fuzzy like me, ANYWAY I DON'T LIKE ANY OF THESE WHITE PETENDERS LIKE BUGNER AND COONEY, JERRY QUARRY WAS THE ONLY REAL WHITE THREAT SINCE MARCIANO!!! THERE'S NOBODY AROUND TODAY WHITE THAT EVEN COMES CLOSE. THAT'S JUST THE WAY IT IS. SORRY FOR BRINGING UP RACE, BUT THE TRUTH'S THE TRUTH. KOO KOO KOO KOO|

|11/1/03 11:35:13 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca|kentallenent@aol.com|||10|The cold side of me is I stand up for myself sometimes. I would say that the Klitschko Brothers are a threat and talented but may not be the next major talent they have been thought to be. They are still unproven. Wladimir has not been able to overcome adversity. Twice when things were not going his way he folded and lost. Vitali's stock went up somewhat in his loss to Lewis but it may have been a case of how much Lewis didn't have left as opposed to how much skill Vitali has. We still need to wait and see if he can prove himself a champion.

|11/2/03 02:13:17 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia|PlMls4@aol.com|||10|Some years ago I had a ring side seat in Sydney at a washed-up comebacking Joe Bugner v a (sadly)very washed-up Greg Page. There was as much movement and excitement as watching paint dry. Bugner won and then shortly after got beat-up by Frank Bruno in London. I was surprised just how big Bugner is. He is taller than Foreman but not quite as bulky and muscular. Bugner wouldn't have had a snow flakes chance in hell against Jerry Quarry. JQ would have been too busy and aggressive for him. I don't think Bugner was capable of knocking him out. But I am uncertain of a Kent v Koo Koo match-up. It would be either Koo Koo on points or Kent by KO. I enjoy reading both their posts and some of Koo Koo's stuff has me laughing my head off (although he is off his game lately). I also like reading Masimo's interesting management of English. Fran has watched a lot more boxing than most of us and is great to read. RS thinks outside the circle and looks at things differently and is a pleasure to read her posts. And Kent is informative and a perfect foil for Koo Koo's humour. It is interesting to read all the other opinions, and in particular I wish Forest Ward was back posting because he also spoke from experience. The Quarrys should be proud that people from all over the world visit this site every day. And we should be appreciative of them for providing a forum for us to do it. So thank you to all the Quarrys. If you ever come to Australia I'll buy you all some beers.

I just hope people like Forest Ward are not put off by some of the silliness that prevades this page sometimes. He was a good poster who kept us on our toes at times. Believe me, this site is tame compared to some of the others I have seen. Eastside Boxing gets heated sometimes but the administration there bans people if they cause too much trouble. I read the article over at Eastside Boxing but I don't think it gave much reason for Bugner being better than Jerry. The main argument the author made was that Bugner did better against Ali and Frazier than Jerry did. Styles make fights so his argument doesn't really hold water.

Oh, by the way, some people said that they are fans of mine so I should say who I am a fan of. Drum roll please........ THE MUFFINMAN!!! With Paul Maduros being a close second. What's up Paul from K.C.

I caught some footage of Bugner a couple of nights recently on cable. One was in relation to his efforts to transfrom Russell Crowe into something cinematically believable as James J. Braddock, for his upcoming movie. Bugner now looks more like an NFL linebacker - just huge - but in terrific shape for a 20 year old, much less one in his mid 50s (which is what the second feature was about - guys who continue to fight way past their prime). I heard the same thing about his fight with Page. Frank Bruno TKOed him, but I think he beat Bonecrusher Smith for some version of the title, at the age of 50, and said he'd like to fight Tyson (and we thought his mind was still intact!). I had an interesting thought watching him. He was still chillingly fast and powerful in the gym filmings, yet slow as a Frankenstein monster in the actual bouts. Lots of fighters look great in training, lousy in fights. Ali, Frazier, and Foreman looked lethargic and uninspired during a lot of their training, yet were killers in the ring. I sometimes wonder why some fighters bother to hit the speed bag (not as hard as it looks to someone who can't hit one), or jump rope, then walk flat footed through their fights, and throw nothing but haymakers in the ring.

I know in football and basketball, a coach would be all over someone loafing around, citing the old and revered maxim that you "play like you practice." I've seen other fighters who might as well have just jogged and hit the heavy bag and nothing else, for all the good the "else" did on fight night.

Ok Ladies and Gents: Lets all just enjoy the site, and keep on coming back, its what Dad & Uncle Jerry, would have wanted. Opinions, Facts, and all that good cool stuff, is what its for too. So be cool, and be good all. Chow!

RS - I heard that Bugner was helping Crowe with that film. Bugner lives on the Gold Coast about 1000 kilometres north of Sydney. He is now an Australian citizen and when he came here he tried to endear himself by calling himself 'Aussie Joe'. But I have to say there is never any bad publicity about him and he is popular here. It's always positive with him, never negative, and never any controversy about him. I saw him once at a Jeff Harding fight in Sydney and you are right in saying that he takes care of himself. He looked very imposing. By the way, Russell Crowe goes for the same football team as me (the mighty South Sydney Rabbitohs). We came last this year. That's a scary name for a team mascot, don't you think Massimo?
but those intense, almost Charles Manson eyes. Not the case at all though. He has a manly voice, but also that terrific accent, like he was going to talk about his rose bushes or something! :-) Very articulate and intelligent too. The first time I ever heard him, I feared the worst, given the people he's fought. By all accounts, he's a nice guy, as most fighters are outside the ring. BTW, my biggest surprise in that regard was Chuvalo, who I thought would sound like Leon Spinks.Say, I saw something really amazing the last time I saw Thrilla. I've noticed for some time that many great fighters are able to resist the normal blink response when they're hit, and can often keep their eyes open, giving themselves that extra measure of time and control, but Ali went this one better. In the 13th round, when the tide is turning, he's hit Frazier a couple of times, and a combination of a Frazier right counter and water makes him slip, and fall into the ropes. His head is clear through, but he has the presence of mind to not only continue to watch Frazier (who exhibits good sportsmanship and doesn't go for him), but also curls his right hand around the rope, bringing it to the left side of his head, in case Joe did try to hit him. Watch for that the next time you see the fight - it's really something!

I have looked up that word "Rabbitect." in two different dictionaries but I couldn't find it. Maybe I should buy a decent English dictionary, for God sake! I don't know what "Rabbitect." means, but I know what "Rabbit" means and, since I am a man of deep intuition (Einstein becomes short of imagination in comparison)))) I understand that that word isn't scary. That word reminds me what I am: a rabbit. I'm not that kind of guy who could intimidate Sonny Liston in a blind alley at 3:44 a.m. and I don't think I could become a good street gang leader...

I watched films of both Quarry AND Bugner, all weekend, JERRY'S twice as fast with his hands, feet, everything, No I do not believe Bugner was probably a little faster, He's not even in Quarry's class at any faze of boxing! Everyone Jerry fought where in tip top shape, can you name one that wasn't?? They know they had to be in that shape to beat him! A lot of people judge JQ'S speed by Zanon bout, I NOW think JERRY'D ran Bugner outta there in 4 rounds, Bugner could not have knocked out a Spencer, Shavers, Bodell, Corletti, Neumann, Zanon, Woody, or Macarthur Foster, If people think JERRY'S bout with Ali in Vegas was a shut out (which ESPN shows over and over and over again). SHOULD see BUG'S non-bout with ALI for the title (15-0). When Jerry knew he'd beat you (say a Bugner or Bonavena) YOU WERE IN FOR A LONG BUT MAYBE LUCRATIVE EVENING! On the subject of Bonavena, I have a trivia question for all you stooges on this post! what does Bonavena, macarthur Foster, AND Billy Joe Frazier HAVE IN COMMON?? They are all converted southpaws!! take care.

What's the hell is OUTTA? I guess it's a slang expression...

"Outta," usually used in conjunction with "there," as in "outta there," is kind of a slang expression. Actually, it's a somewhat lazy representation of how people talk when they say "out of there." Bugner would have survived Quarry, I believe, having weathered much more ferocious and different storms in Ali and Frazier. Quarry was fast enough. No one would ever have called him slow, but never would have marveled at his lightning moves either. He was a man who might have been a champ in some eras, but not ever in the one in which he fought, given the inconvenient presence of Ali, Frazier, and Foreman, which is not a knock of Quarry, of course, any more than it is of Lyle, Shavers, or Patterson. I knew Frazier was a converted southpaw, but didn't know that about Bonavena. Frazier's left hook, the best ever, was also something of a defensive technique, subtly keeping his opponent away from his bum eye, along with his nifty, manipulative footwork, and swarmimg, pace-dictating style. I imagine Joe and Ali were in good shape for Jerry, but in their minds didn't take him as seriously as they did each other.

My guess is that in any era, no one played top contenders lightly, but didn't really go all out in training or mindset for anyone but the very top killers, if they existed.

Hey Steve I am from South eastern Pa but originally from south west philly. I have never been to the cherry hill collisiem but I fought twice at the Blue Horizon. In 73' and 79'.

Outta is a bad beast, I don't think I'm gonna ( what a class... Gonna !) use it ! " Out of there " is a lot easier than " outta there"... I think Jerry Quarry would have an easy time against the modern heavyweights... The youngest is 65 years old, Tyson is becomin a bum that even my grandmother would beat. This is true with the exception of Vitali... I think Vitali Klitschko would beat JQ, don't hate me for this opinion !

Thanks ET (English Teacher) !

Man!,what's the fascination with Joe Bugner? He was a big dull man who fought Ali, Frazeir, and Lyle to collect huge paychecks and not get hurt. Hey R.S., if you want to see a scary set of eyes, try looking at Quarry's face during the referees instructions in any of his fights! I really do appreciate a female's perspective on this site. I never realized Bugner had such a deep, articulate, dreamy he-man voice. Hey R.S., I'm just teasing you!!!

Joe had Marvis trying to fight like Joe against Tyson with disastrous results. Marvis made a million dollars in the game, the bulk of it from fighting Holmes and Tyson, who Joe had to know Marvis couldn't handle. Joe himself would have had a tough fight with either of them, and Marvis was not even in the same universe in terms of the things Joe had.

The craziest, scariest eyes I've seen in fighters were Sonny Liston and Roberto Duran. Of course, if eyes and BS tough guy stares gives a fighter the willies, they have no business being there. Victor Galindez was pretty mean looking too. Bob Foster was just cold looking, Ali and Frazier would be disconcerting too I imagine, with their automatic expectation to win, walking through you, their opponent like you were nothing.

Let's try to put the apparently dynamic, exciting Joe Bugner who's dynamic career has dominated this site for about two weeks. In the proper perspective. Putting Joe in the proper context, compare him with George Chavalo, Eddie Machen, Jerry Quarry, Cleveland Williams. You know, the other underachievers who never won a title. At least they came to make a real fight of it.

although I agree with what you are saying, maybe the case was that Bugner overachieved rather than underachieved. Personally, I don't think that Bugner really had that much ability that he should have lasted all the way against Ali and Frazier like he did. I think he lifted above his ability for those fights. The thing is though, in other eras Bugner probably would probably have won a version of the championship.

Hey Paul, what dissapoints me about Joe Bugner is that if he would have reached down inside a little bit, he could have made those fights against Ali and Frazier alot more competitive. He had all the physical tools, he just would not commit. Hey Paul and R.S., I'm sorry, but Joe Bugner reminds me of the Klitchko Brothers. Now, give them enough time hanging around, and pick the most vulnerable champion, and one of them might stumble into a title.

That's why that era was the greatest ever - you had a small handful of all time greats, backed up by underachievers with talent and overachievers with determination, the latter two groups of which might have won a title in other times. As for the elite bunch, I'd only give two or three champions from any era even a chance against Ali, Frazier, or Foreman. Steve - Bugner might be something like what I was wondering about Ken Norton once - if he'd gotten into the completely right sport for him. Bugner might have been better off playing something else, but of course, if you aren't in school, the only sports open to you are boxing, tennis, and golf. Potential rewards in all three are enormous, but so are the odds against ever getting them.

I have to agree with my stooge buddy Steve (SHEMP) Bugner's eyes intimadated me about as much as a MAXIE "PAD" Kellerman fight prediction. Marvis Frazier was ok (he just had his mother's jaw line). Anyone whom did not think Jerry Quarry had quick hands, OUTTA! buy some fight tapes. And i'm not talking his bouts with Lorenzo Zanon (WHOM BUGNER MIGHT NOT EVEN HAD BEATEN). OR ESPN'S OWN signature patented bout ALI-QUARRY II. I have to agree with my stooge buddy Steve (SHEMP) Bugner's eyes intimadated me about as much as a MAXIE "PAD" Kellerman fight prediction. Marvis Frazier was ok (he just had his mother's jaw line). Anyone whom did not think Jerry Quarry had quick hands, OUTTA! buy some fight tapes. And i'm not talking his bouts with Lorenzo Zanon (WHOM BUGNER MIGHT NOT EVEN HAD BEATEN). OR ESPN'S OWN signature patented bout ALI-QUARRY II. About Joe Bugner. Is there an update about a book or movie about the Quarry's? Kent, do you know anything? you seem to be close to the family. I'm gonna become a master of the American slang! Is there anybody outta there that has ( or got, or has got ) any doubts about ? If there is, this guy is a bum and a chump !!!!!!! Only in this site... Only in this site... Only in this site... just posted and the next POST use's CHUMP OR BUM in an uncomplimentary manner?? That's all, nothing more need to be said about it, i've never really brought anything up about my personal life on the post, so maybe it was just my turn. Back to things that are real I had a real friendship with a man back in 1980, that I knew on a first name basis, and would get together at the FORMOSA DRAG STRIPS ETC. The man had just been beaten on a cut eye in Australia, to a VERY GOOD English Heavyweight And formally world rated Bunny Johnson. I always wanted to meet his older brother! The guy i'm talking about is Mike Quarry!

One more post today, and I'll save you good people from some more of my jive (I promise) JQ did a lot of commercials when I was growing up, one in particular, was for Los Angeles weekly boxing, that could be a number of arena's (right KENT) IT show'd Andy Kendall Hitting Mike Quarry ABOUT A DOZEN PUNCHES AFTER THE FINAL BELL! Jerry of course stormed the ring, and looked as he might annihilate the whole Kendall corner! talk about some scary eyes!! Jerry intimidated the whole arena! anyway they played that commercial to the theme of "LOVE STORY" and would show JERRY CHECKING ON MIKE, then go back to Kendall's corner and some "choice words" it was an hilarious commercial, and a little derogatory to the Quarry's I would have to say. I have a question To any OF the QUARRY family members. do you remember that commercial?? Linda or Sonia, Brenda or anyone? I was in Delano Ca. AT THE TIME, we used to take on Bobby's NORTH STARS in HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL (DELANO TIGERS). another commercial had JERRY advertising And driving A EL CAMINO- "THIS VEHICLE IS JUST LIKE ME" "TOUGH, AND A LOT OF CLASS" Then we watched Jerry in a shaving commercial, 5 minutes later the news came on where Jerry Quarry liked to have drowned from an undertow at MARINA DEL REY, and if memory serves me right, JQ had a similar KERN RIVER incident. Not many people remember Jerry and Mike's miller lite commercial entitled "saved by the bell" Which was also very clever, JERRY "less filling" AND mike "tastes great" and before they could go to blows, a bell rang! As MIKE QUARRY SAYS "SAVED BY THE BELL"!

Would love to see them commercials of Jerry. I only saw that old I dream of Geinie episode he was in. When I was in the marines in 1976 i drove from Camp Lejune N.Carolina all the way up to I forget i think Syracuse? or somewhere in upstae N.Y. (I suffer from C.R.S. (Can't Remember Shit)) to meet Jerry when he was doing the commentary with Tom Brookshire for the George Foreman/ Scott Ledoux fight. After the fight I went up to Jerry to get his autograph and some loudmouths were jokin with Jerry when all of a sudden Jerry says " Don't make me start my comeback right now" those guys shut up quick. I got my autograph and headed back to Lejune. He was Bigger in person that I thought. Looked like a football player. Powerful. That was the only time I met him. He was a great influence on me. I'll never forget him.

Uncle Jerry, was in I Dream of Jeanie, Knight Rider, Batman, and he did one or two of those Battle of the Superstars, just to name a few things, along with the commercials. Keep coming back all, be good, and be safe.

I have been busy and I haven't made all of the phone calls I told you I was going to make to see if the book I had heard about was making any progress. I talked to Bobby Quarry a few days ago but he hadn't heard anything new about the book. The man working on the book, Daryl Breeze, does come to this site at times. So Daryl, what is up with the book? I will give him a call next week. I can't do it this week as my schedule is full as I will be out of town. Jimmy Dorsey is right, Mike Quarry is a great guy. I wish him all of the best. He is very down to earth just like Jerry was.
CA||balmofgilead23@earthlink.net|||10|UH-OH! Now we have some more hard asses on this chat! Tough monkeys or gorillas who almost beat so and so 30 or 40 years ago. I had 32 fights as an amateur heavy around San Francisco, Oakland, Daly City, East Palo Alto, Lodi and Stockton before I joined the First Marines and spent 14 months in garden spots like Da Nang and Hue, getting shot 7 times but never the Million Dollar Wound. Compared to all that, boxing is completely pussy. 35 years later, it's both amusing and obnoxious to hear how tough boxers are, you know?Anyway, I wish the good folks on this site would get back to their speculations:1. If Joe Bugner had met Alfredo Evangelista at their primes, Joe would have begun Round One by circling slowly to the left, while Alfredo throws a series of tentative left jabs, until a fat guy in the third row sneezes and his wife drops her Pabst Blue Ribbon beer.2. Joe counters with a left hook that misses by 7.3 inches, leaving him vulnerable to a 10-inch right uppercut from Alfredo right into Joe's ribs, mildly hurting him.3. Then they clinch.4. When they break, Joe spits 2.7 milliliters of saliva and phlegm onto the canvas.5. Joe throws a clumsy sneak right that causes him to lose his balance.6. Alfredo counters with a looping right haymaker that grazes the top of Joe's head.Again they clinch.This goes on. Picking up in the 7th round:19. Joe throws a left hook that crashes into Alfredo's left temporal lobe, and he goes down.And so on: 459. In the 9th, Joe steps on Alfredo's left foot, drawing a mild warning from Larry Rosadilla, the referee.So it goes. With the braintrust we have here, and the schizophrenic contingent led by Ko Ko (a pseudonym for Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld), who needs actual fights or fighters?I recommend you tough guys read Goodbye to All That by Robert Graves. If you'd been in the trenches of the Great War between 1915 and 1918, you would have cried for your mama. |
TIME IT IS!"

11/5/03 03:04:15 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlM1s4@aol.com||10|Koo Koo - I was going to say welcome back but it seems that you are off therapy and out of medication. Picking on poor old Massimo and Kent is no good. I enjoy their posts as much as yours (although some don't seem to understand Massimo's sense of humour because he means no harm). And lighten up a bit Wendell 'I like the smell of Napalm' Carmichael. We aren't all as smart and tough as you. My grandfather fought in the trenches in WW1 at Ypres and the Somme in France. He got gassed and shot but when he came home he didn't carry on like a stuffed turkey. So calm down. And Koo Koo start taking that medication again and leave Kent and Massimo alone.

11/5/03 04:08:05 AM|Wendell Carmichael |San Leandro, CA||balmofgilead23@earthlink.net||1|PAUL FROM SYDNEY WRITES: "And lighten up a bit Wendell 'I like the smell of Napalm' Carmichael. We aren't all as smart and tough as you. My grandfather fought in the trenches in WW1 at Ypres and the Somme in France. He got gassed and shot but when he came home he didn't carry on like a stuffed turkey. So calm down."That's because I was servicing your grandmother every night, Wallaby Breath, and he could sit outside in the dirt with his mates drinking swill and playing with boomerangs. She looked exactly like Smokin' Joe Frazier when I was done with her, too, you soft Canberra Creampuff. Anyway, if Ingemar Johansen had fought Tex Cobb in Kezar Stadium on Veteran's Day in 1971, at exactly 1:02 of Round Four with the fight dead even and Willie Mays in the third row with Carol Doda, what punch would Ingemar throw next, Roadscholarette? Massimo, whatever happened to Laura Antonelli, the most beautiful woman in the world? Don't tell me she married a Quarry, had 7 tadpole kids, got tattooed and went to the joint for peddling crystal meth! KoKo, take your Haldol. Kent, get a real job, for Christ's sake.

11/5/03 05:04:22 AM|Massimo|Rome||2||10|Boxing is not a deep science, nothing is demonstrable in boxing... So, KooKoo, when you say " Tyson in his prime is without a doubt the best heavyweight ever" your words are in no way more intelligent than mine. When you can't demonstrate what you say, your talking is just a bla, bla, it's just philosophy. Talking about boxing is not the right way of measuring smartness. In this site I met a lot of kind persons: Paul, RS, Kent, Pauli e Ottaviani, Evren, Steve etc. but there are too many verbal brawls. I don't like the street brawls and I don't like the verbal brawls too. I'm a peaceful man! Wendell-I have read some years ago that Laura Antonelli had an health problem and became ugly. I think it was an infection. Her lips became huge. After that, she disappeared! Mina, the greatest singer of all time, became very very fat and she disappeared too.

11/5/03 08:37:59 AM|Massimo|Rome||12||10|Boxing is not a deep science, nothing is demonstrable in boxing... So, KooKoo, when you say " Tyson in his prime is without a doubt the best heavyweight ever" your words are in no way more intelligent than mine. When you can't demonstrate what you say, your talking is just a bla, bla, it's just philosophy. Talking about boxing is not the right way of measuring smartness. In this site I met a lot of kind persons: Paul, RS, Kent, Pauli e Ottaviani, Evren, Steve etc. but there are too many verbal brawls. I don't like the street brawls and I don't like the verbal brawls too. I'm a peaceful man! Wendell-I have read some years ago that Laura Antonelli had an health problem and became ugly. I think it was an infection. Her lips became huge. After that, she disappeared! Mina, the greatest singer of all time, became very very fat and she disappeared too.

11/5/03 09:05:59 AM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia81@aol.com||10|Hey KooKoo, just to let you know I have chosen my husband, of 20 yrs, I would never leave what I have. The people on this site, make me laugh, you all brighten my days, and believe me in the last year and a half they've been damn tough. So lets all just get along, and be good. Keep coming back, and be cool all.

11/5/03 10:43:35 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||10|A guy in Eastside Boxing has a thread about gay boxers. There are many claims, and who knows? It was suggested that Lennox Lewis is, and that Mike Tyson is. I've heard rumors more than once that Tyson and Arsenio Hall were an item, and I've heard that Emile Griffith was gay; supposedly, Paret called Griffith a fag, so the story goes, and this helped contribute to Griffith's performance that resulted in Paret's ring death. Bonavena called Ali a "marichon" (fag), as did Duran to Leonard, though this was certainly more attempts at messing with them than a statement of reality. I imagine that while gays exist in prizefighting, just as they do in the NFL, armed services, or any other traditionally macho venue, that there'd be fewer of them, and in any event, they'd be harder to determine in such a culture, since attempts to disguise this would be greater than say, in figure skating or ballet. There was a guy once who fought professionally to pay for his way through hairdressing school (not that that automatically means he was gay). He wasn't a champ or anything, but I thought that was kind of funny!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/5/03 11:39:10 AM</th>
<th>kookoo</th>
<th>ny</th>
<th>kookooclock000@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>SONYA YOU SHOULD BE TIRED OF HIM BY NOW, BUT HEY 20 YRS THAT'S A LONG TIME. NOW IT'S TIME TO CHOOSE AGAIN. I GET A CHARGE OUT OF KENT, HEY KENT WHY DON'T YOU TRY A DATING SERVICE, YOU CAN'T FAIL THERE, RIGHT? MASSINO, WHAT CAN I SAY ABOUT YOU, DUMB, FAT, BALD, YOU WISH YOU WERE THE MAN THAT TYSON IS, BUT YOU ARE ONLY A COMIC FROM ITALY, YOU NEED TO HAVE YOUR OWN SHOW. SONYA I'M SURE YOUR FAMILY WILL LIKE ME, EVEN YOUR HUSBAND WILL LIKE ME, LET'S MAKE KENT EVEN MORE JEALOUS THAN HE IS:))) KOO KOO KOO KOO</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/5/03 02:00:43 PM</th>
<th>Fran</th>
<th>S.E. PA</th>
<th>pic7755@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Wendell what are you trying to say. Why did you say that about Paul. You sound like an asshole</td>
<td>11/5/03 02:03:04 PM</td>
<td>Massimo</td>
<td>Rome</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Life is a valley of tears... We are gonna to getting older, older and older! We'll become old and sick...And finally we are gonna die! Everybody! Our women are gonna to bed with our best friends, our parents are gonna betray us for money, the Lakers are gonna lose! I'm not an Italian comic now, not anymore... Now I am an Italian tragedian...</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/5/03 03:36:54 PM</th>
<th>Paul</th>
<th>Sydney, Australia</th>
<th>PlMls4@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Wendell – at least your last post proves something: you never saw active service. Anyone decent and loyal enough to serve their country wouldn't carry on like you do. So put the bottle down and give yourself an uppercut. Besides, I don't think that Wallaby's have bad breath. Apart from that, I don't think it's fair to the other posters for this stuff to carry on any longer so I won't bother responding to you again.</td>
<td>11/5/03 05:15:02 PM</td>
<td>Paul</td>
<td>Sydney, Australia</td>
<td>PlMls4@aol.com</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>RS – I never before thought about the subject you raised. To my knowledge none of those rumours ever reached over here. From memory Emile Griffith died about two years ago and he had been in poor health for some years before then. You mentioned a couple of times about how good the era was with Ali, Frazier, and Foreman. I agree that we should consider ourselves blessed to have witnessed it. I also reckon we were fortunate to see the Leonard, Duran, Hearns, and Hagler period. Weren't there some great, great fights among them. Those Hagler and Hearns rounds still send shivers down my spine. There was drama, power, courage, controversy, upsets, and everything else you needed to create a great spectacle when all of those guys fought. The closest thing to this era might have been with Sugar Ray Robinson, Zale, La Motta and all those guys. That would have been something else to see as well. But back to Ali. The big fights he had against Frazier and Foreman and a few others had such an effect on me that I can still remember where I watched them and who I was with. They weren't just fights; they were events.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/5/03 05:32:29 PM</th>
<th>MUFFINMAN</th>
<th>ZANZIBAR</th>
<th>ZANZIBAR</th>
<th>8</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>WHO'S AFRAID OF THE MUFFINMAN THE MUFFINMAN THE MUFFINMAN...? YOU STUPID LOT! WHAT ILLITERATE RANTINGS! MASSIMO YOU ARE BUT A DUMB ITALIAN WOP. KENT YOU ARE AN ARSE LICKER! I NEED TO RIDE MY BICYCLE...</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/5/03 06:17:14 PM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Rome</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Am I dumb? If I am dumb it's for genetic reasons, it's not my fault! I may be dumb but I never did a bad action in my whole life and I didn't deserve the treatment I received</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
in this site ! |
| 11/6/03 03:25:46 AM| Paul| Sydney, Australia|| PlMls4@aol.com |||| 10 | Massimo - not only are you not dumb, but you're probably smarter than the rest of us here. You speak Italian, very good English, and your slang American is starting to kick ass. That's almost three languages and that makes you multi-lingual. Apart from that, you have a fine sense of humour and Koo Koo was only joking when he said that you are fat, bald, and ugly. So keep posting. Anyway, Koo Koo has already admitted that he looks like Woody Allen. I've got a quick joke for you. This guy goes to the doctor and the doctor asks, "What's wrong?" and the guy says, "I've got a steering wheel stuck down the front of my pants." So the doctors says, "That must be uncomfortable" and the guy answers, "Yeah, it's driving me nuts." Ha ha. Does anyone out there remember what the Ring 'fight of the year' was in 1988. Clue: it was two lightheavies. |
| 11/6/03 08:19:22 AM| John Gerard| NYC|| rock289z@yahoo.com |||| 10 | Emile Griffith died? Someone please confirm, that's news to me. When I was a kid I used to see him all the time at the old Solar Gym in NYC. He was a very nice guy. |
| 11/6/03 08:38:08 AM| Evren| London|| @ |||| 10 | Hey! Leave Massimo alone - he's one of the more interesting characters on this site. Keep up all your good work Massimo. Prego |
| 11/6/03 11:42:46 AM| Roadscholarette| Chicago|| roadscholarette@hotmail.com |||| 10 | Paul -
I don't really like being around gay men, because I like ~real~ men, but I don't really care what someone does on their own. As for prizefighting, I suspect it's pretty strange psychological territory for most gays. On the other hand, for some in conflict with their orientation, I suppose they could be extra ferocious fighters, feeling they had something to prove and compensate for. Someone else somewhere said they thought Griffith had died. If it was after a long illness, as you say, I wonder if it was AIDS? You're cool, mister! Don't let anyone make you feel otherwise! :-) |
| 11/6/03 01:06:47 PM| Jerry Quarry| California|| elv69@aol.com |||| 7 | check out http://hometown.aol.com/elv69/myhomepage/index.html the new website for Jerry Quarry |
| 11/6/03 02:44:16 PM| Massimo| Rome|| 2 |||| 10 | Thanks Evren, Paul and my English teacher RS ! You are nice people ! Paul, you forgot that I speak excellent Roman ! The Roman dialect is very funny, maybe it's the best you can find in Italy, if you want to laugh ! Do you know Carlo Verdone's films ? Evren, I hope you have spent a good time in Rome. Is it not too ugly, Rome, or not ? Another thing: it's not my fault if Andre' the Midget wasn't 7'4" ! And I have another shocking news for all of you: Paul Wight " Big Show" is not 7'4" ! He is about 6' 10". He is 7'4" using a ladder... The only real legend is Calvin Lane... You have to force him to quit bouncing and to become a wrestler ! |
| 11/6/03 03:10:49 PM| Paul| Sydney, Australia|| PlMls4@aol.com |||| 10 | Regarding Emile Griffith, I remember reading a newspaper report quite a while back that he had died. I hope I am not mixing it up with someone else, but I think I got it right. I'll try and hunt around and confirm it. I took notice because Griffith fought a good Australian middleweight back in the 1970s named Tony Mundine. Mundine went on to be knocked out in 8 rounds by the great Carlos Monzon. The Ring fight of the year I was talking about was Jeff Harding v Dennis Andries. Neither were much as fighters but the first of their three fights was tremendous. Harding knocked Andries out in the final seconds of the fight and was way behind on points. |
| 11/6/03 05:20:14 PM| Massimo| Rome|| 1 |||| 10 | I think saying that Emile Griffith is dead is a little exaggerated. He is fine and he is a good Nino Benvenuti' s friend yet ! They two usually talk about their 3 epic fights ! |
| 11/7/03 02:00:43 AM| Paul| Sydney, Australia|| PlMls4@aol.com |||| 10 | Massimo - if my report of Emile Griffith's death is greatly exaggerated, then mea culpa (that's Latin for 'my fault') I just thought that I read somewhere that he had died. I've looked up some newspaper archives and can't find reference to it. Emile was born in 1938 in the Virgin Islands, but there was no finishing date for him. I hope he's still alive. But, I'm left wondering......if it wasn't Emile, then who was it? I'm gonna start ringing around and make sure my friends are still breathing. Anyway, Massimo - who is your favourite all time fighter? And who is the best pound-for-pound of all time? For me it's Ali on both counts.

11/7/03 04:30:19 AM|Massimo|Rome||7|||10|Paul-
I can't assure you that he is still alive, but I have never heard and I have never read on newspapers that he is dead. It seems to me that I have recently read on "boxing record archive" that a fighter is dead, but I didn't know him and I can't remember his name. My favorite all time fighter is probably (I'm not sure) Ali'. My pound for pound favorite fighter is Bob Foster, because in his prime and in his own weight division, he was unbeatable and he had everything a fighter needs for reaching greatness. A step below we find Ali' and... Erminio Spalla.

11/7/03 05:45:37 AM|u|i||i|||9|u|
11/7/03 09:45:22 AM|Fran|SE Pennsylvania||plc7755@aol.com||||10|My favorite all time fighter is without a doubt Irish Jerry Quarry. The cut in the first Ali fight was caused by a sneaky tricky skill Ali used by twisting his glove at it hit Jerry. Had he not used this tactic Jerry would have whumped his ass and changed sports history. Forget the second fight with Ali Jerry had just watched Mike get carried out of the ring and he wasn't focused. After a spectacular career all they show of Jerry is a fight he fought right after his brother could have been hurt seriously. As far as an exciting fight goes why don't they show His great fights. How many times did Jerry fight a top contender and upset them. He could box, was great counter puncher, had good head movement, and Great punching power. His counter punching ability was the best in the heavyweight division and I have never seen anyone with those skills since. His counter punching ability was the main reason he upset Ron Lyle and Mac Foster. He had skills and because of those skills was avoided by George Foreman. Jerry Quarry was more exciting than Ali. Ali was a made by the media. Have a good weekend.

11/7/03 12:27:50 PM|Massimo -
There'll always be people who'll argue otherwise, but I think Foster and Moore were the best LHs ever. Who'd win between them? I think Moore had the technical edge due to his vast experience, but that in no way implies that Foster was lacking. If Moore survived Foster's swift and savage punching, he might have outpointed him, but I don't think it would have gone the distance. Foster was so fast that combinations came almost as one movement. In his prime, no one was even close to being in his league. He had bad luck against Frazier and Ali, but then those two both had marble for heads, and were big enough to muscle him. Also, Foster fought them differently than he would someone in his weight class, just as they did him.

You have a good argument for him as best pound for pound. My choice still drifts towards Duran as best pound for pound, but who knows?

11/7/03 01:21:15 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Massimo -
I think one thing that can be honestly said is that Moore achieved better results against the heavyweights than Foster did. He beat a long list of decent heavyweight: Valdes twice, Baker, Kalbfell, Albright, Lavorante and he K0ed Whitehurst twice (a thing that S. Liston couldn't do). Some months ago I read a Foster's interview in which he talked (or spoke? I need you) about his fights against Zora Folley, Ali' and Terrell. He said that Folley gave him a boxing lesson and that before the stoppage he had kicked Ali's ass for all the fight and that all the knockdowns were pushes. Can you confirm or neglect this? Did you ever see that fight?

He said that he wasn't impressed at all by Terrell's performance and that the final knockdown was a push.
Check the Internet on Moore. There's a lot of good stuff on him. Here's a link to get you started:

http://www.ibhof.com/moore.htm

I've seen the Ali (Clay then) Moore fight, and Archie was never in it. Of course, he was at least 49 at the time, some say older. He scored a record 141 KOs in his time, and no one could stay with him in his division. He even floored Marciano, though was finally beaten. Some of the flashy stuff Ali did in and out of the ring, he got from Moore, his one time (and short time) mentor. Ali was always a gregarious person, and in his younger days was a sponge for information, though was probably ADHD (Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder), and dumped Archie fairly quickly. One thing he didn't like was AM's spartan like approach to training. Ali's rope-a-dope was actually Archie Moore's "turtle shell" defense, and Moore, working in Foreman's corner in Zaire knew it, and knew how to beat it, but George then wouldn't listen to anyone any more than Ali would.

I'm not sure that George could have beat it, even with Moore telling him how. Ali was an unbeatable fighter in any age, regardless of his opponent's style. Interestingly, one of the great warhorses of boxing, George Chuvalo, provided the first clue for how to beat Ali, which Frazier used to do so once, and come within a hair's breadth of doing so two other times. Emile Griffith was in Wales recently in a reunion with Brian Curvis who he boxed many moons ago..he was still alive (and well) then. Did'nt go too mad on Rome Massimo...previously I travelled to Sardinia (Sardagna?) - now that is a place!!

Emile Griffith was in Wales recently in a reunion with Brian Curvis who he boxed many moons ago...he was still alive and well then. Didn't go too mad on Rome Massimo...previously I travelled to Sardinia (Sardagna?) - now that is a place!!

Evren -
If you like Sardegna so much, it means that you like beautiful nature and beautiful sea (and good food).

If you like Sardegna so much, it means that you like beautiful nature and beautiful sea (and good food).

FRAN: Yes ESPN shows ALI-QUARRY II. Its there only bout that they have on tape!? On the subject of that, Jerry was said to have beat 6 un-ranked boxer's on his way to Ali II, I know for a fact Jack Bodell, AND LARRY MIDDLETON were both ranked in everyone's top ten when JQ beat them, Even the best (RING MAGAZINE) had Bodell #8, and MIDDLETON #7. QUARRY was also "fighter of the month" for his win over Bodell, And ranked NO.2 over GEORGE FOREMAN himself. A friend, and it's a reasonable reliable source, said Jerry came down the aisle, and made BOB FOSTER and his entourage walk around him, after he beat Mike Quarry, (but isn't there an interruption between bouts?) TAKE CARE!!

Et Tu, Muffinman? I said I was a fan out yours and you turn on me. That is too bad as I can use all of the fans I can get and I liked it when he said he was my fan. Hey, at least I still got Massimo. Hey Massimo, I admire you too. Don't let the knuckleheads get you down. They always insult me and I don't care. I have friends in the boxing world who mean something, not like these bozos who go around disrespecting people. I wonder if Koo Koo can go ten posts without mentioning me. I am still not sure why he is so concerned about me anyway, for bad or good. Maybe he is jealous that I am an original stooge around here and he isn't.

Hey Massimo, you're allright in my book, pardner. I believe you are a true ren'aisance man. Your a comedian, a physicist, a philosopher, a bit of a linguist, and now I find a tragadian! I've spoken to, (not talked to), several of my wife's family, who just happen to live in your area. They tell me you where also a bit of a bad ass, and actually a criminal years ago. I would like to invite you to New Jersey. This is where proper English is talked!, er, I mean, spoken. Do you understand these phrases? Jaheet?, hey youse guys, yo? How much of theoretical physics is demonstrable? The theory of everything? String theory? Is Quantum mechanics demonstrable?

| 11/7/03 11:52:20 PM | Kent | La Habra, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Hey Steve, "youse guys is da woist" When it comes to proper American English. But you are an alright guy anyway. I think Jimmy D coined you as the Shemp of our stooges club. That is quite an honor, you know? Massimo, keep coming back. Your insight and comedy is welcome here and I like I said about those other guys, they have been saying things about me for over two years now and who cares? Their opinion means nothing. |

| 11/8/03 02:11:17 AM | Steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net | 10 | Hey Kent, you crazy, Calif. sports nut type stooge. If I'd known how big you are earlier in our internet chats, I'd have given you a little more respect! I do, believe me, realy Honer the title of Shemp of the Stooges club!! I value the inside stuff you and Jimmy Dorsey have given to me. You know, Kent, this site is starting to attract some attention. Some of it is a little flaky! If you don't mind Koo Koo and Muffin Man and Wendell, who apparently was in my unit at Hue, in 1968, then I guess I can accept them to! |

| 11/8/03 02:53:11 AM | Kookoo | NY | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 | the ramblings of kent "bobbing for apples" appel. The man don't ever want me to be friends with the quarrys, but they know i'm a bigger fan than you. what are you trying to do get rich by selling their story? thats a great plan kent, a true fan wouldn't do that, anything for a buck, right kent, everythings for sale these days, I AM THE BIGGER QUARRY FAN NOT YOU KENT, LIVE WITH IT!!! KOO KOO! |

| 11/8/03 11:41:52 AM | Massimo | Rome | 10 | Thanks for the nice words! Steve &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;In Physics there is an easy way to verify what you are saying: THE EXPERIMENT (this is Galilei's great teaching). Quantum M. has been verified with an incredible degree of accuracy and it works amazingly well! QM has changed the world! There are, anyway, many, many...many things that "we" have not still understood and THE EVERYTHING THEORY doesn't exist. The String Theory is too much for me, there are just about 1 hundred persons in the world that work on this subject. I remember when my uncle went to a lawyer for some help and that lawyer told him "I'm sorry, but you'd need a good lawyer". Steve, you'd need a good physic, I'm just a bum among physics, even if I have honestly gained my degree (and it wasn't a walk in the park at all, the Ulisse's voyages are a joke in comparison...). But what I know for sure is that the String Theory is not still a theory but it's a conjecture and all the physics are aware of it. But maybe it's the right way to solve some problems in physics. For instance, the electric field of a charge is infinite "where" the charge is and this is not physically reasonable (nothing is infinite in this Universe, but maybe the Universe itself) and thinking a particle as a string of finite dimension could (or might) resolve this divergence. Besides that I don't think an experimental verification of the String Conj. will never be possible because for reaching that enormous energies you'd need too much money and this would be too much even for Bill Gates. When the exp. verif. is impossible Physics becomes similar to Phylosophy... Anyway, even if String Conj. was completely false, remember: the smart things are always useful! You don't know how or when but one day you are gonna use it somehow. A huge amount of Mathematics has been developed thanks to the String Conj. Do you know how QM is born? Studying a furnace's radiation...&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;PS: what's yo? Is it a masked you? |

| 11/8/03 12:19:22 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 | The thing about some of the different and new scientific theories, deep that they might seem to those outside the fields, is that they are almost certainly fumbling entry level attempts to define our world and what's going on, certainly only scratching the surface, possibly even barking up the wrong tree altogether, in terms of the essence of things and how they work, just as some of the incomplete and/or ludicrous beliefs of other times. BTW, when you say "Yo!" to someone, you're trying to get their attention, or to say hi to them. Speaking of boxing, it's interesting to note that comparing boxers of today to those of the 70s was like comparing Ali, Frazier, et al, with boxers in the WW2 age. It's too bad that modern fans so often have no perspective, and say that "Tyson woulda taken everyone, all time." They'd have been the same who'd have said that for any current champion, no matter when they lived. I don't believe Tyson could have cracked the elite three circle of the 70s, or if he had, he'd have had to have caught Ali on one of his bad nights when he looked lousy, or gotten very lucky inside with Foreman or in the first round with Frazier. IMO, anyway.

I have a strong feeling Antonio Tarver will upset Roy Jones, Jr. Boxing is mostly a contest of hunger and will, when the opponents are a reasonable match. I think Tarver may be hungry enough and Jones may have crossed that invisible line between his prime and his decline, which is often very steep and quick even in great fighters. His arrogance has hurt him. I think we'll see a middle or late round KO by Tarver or a decision. For my money, Massimo is the kindest, most admirable and friendly person in this site. He doesn't seem to be bothered by the cheap insults because they don't really apply to him.

Roadscholarette, new physics is now 100 years old and traces its developments partly from other thinkers from as long as 4,000 years ago. You may be right that its discoveries and current views are still in early stages, but probably not. I am not much interested in science itself and dislike the common misuse of the Big Bang Theory to imply a refutation and discarding of faith-oriented creation stories. Even if the Big Bang Theory or something similar could be proven to the satisfaction of all, that would still not explain (or eliminate) God's role in it. To argue or consider a matter of faith in a context of Western reason is to confuse apples and oranges. It would be like evaluating a boxing match by the rules of volleyball.

I'm surprised some of you consider Ali the best pound-for-pound of all time. Maybe you're thinking of his supreme mastery of the head game, and concluding he could have used it to defeat anyone. That may well be true. Anyway, I'd choose either of the two Sugar Rays as greatest pound for pound. | that we know and respect today has bases rooted in past knowledge, even if it was only yesterday. Most progress is a tweaking of something we already know. However, when something out of the box and ground breaking happens, it's invariably the result of someone who goes against the grain with something completely different, or with something that expands the essence of something thought to be a static fact. It's a mistake to separate science and religion, simply because they don't conveniently explain or reinforce each other. They're -both- part of the larger overlay of the Great Mystery, and have their own jobs to do. One doesn't, or shouldn't, negate the other, when either are approached properly. In that sense, the Divine -was- responsible for the creation of the universe.Say, re boxing, who do you all think was the most durable fighter? I'd probably have to consider a heavyweight, since they're subjected to the worst abuse, and for this honor, I think I'd have to say George Chuvalo. Not even off his feet, let alone KOd for ten, in any fight. Of course, there's the case of Joe Grim too. If I'm not mistaken, he never won a fight, but was so indestructible, people came to see his fights just to see if "this was the night" he'd be knocked out. A case can be made for the "opponent" being more durable than the legitimate contender or champion. They get pounded on by the worst and the best, without the skills to do much more than to just swing with it, like the heavy bag.I agree with you, Chuvalo was the toughest fighter ever, even if, I think, Foreman would have knocked out him if the referee didn't have stopped ( and I'm glad he did) the fight. But Toney is very durable too. He was never stopped in his long career. I'd be very curious to see Toney against Tyson. Tyson doesn't seem very focused in boxing. Do you think Tyson's power would stop Toney ?PS: the Universe is complex over any human imagination...The best computer in the world can't emulate a fly's brain. But it's really amazing how many things Science has discovered in relatively so little time !!!!!!!

Yes, I think Foreman would indeed have knocked out Chuvalo for real, if the TKO hadn't been ruled first. Before one of his fights, the Chicago Tribune had a big boxing glove on a page. "Want to know how hard George Foreman hits?" it said. "Tape this glove up on a wall, stand ten feet away, and run into it face first!" They couldn't do that today for legal reasons - some jackass would try it, then sue the paper. Say, I found out something I didn't know - Toney played the Frazier part in the movie "Ali." I didn't like that movie that much. It was OK, I guess, but I don't really like Will Smith, and the movie was more about questionable arguments for Ali's sainthood than it was about his brilliant boxing career. The Frazier part of the sage was treated as if Joe was just another bum Muhammad got easily past on his journey to save the world.You're right about the fly's brain, and many more wondrous things in nature that we have not a clue about. "We" like to congratulate ourselves for our scientific status, forgetting that it's only a comparative state to what wasn't before, rather than to what is still out there to understand.In a hundred years, little kids will hold as common knowledge things with which our greatest scientists today are struggling.Is it true that Frazier gave Ali' some money during his layout ? If this is the case, they were good friends at the time.In the " Ali' " movie I didn't like the way Frazier-AlI' 1 and Ali'-Foreman are rappedresented. In both it seems that Frazier and Foreman had completely dominated the fight and this is not true...

ket you make me so sick, you bow down to anybody new you meet on here. NOT VERY QUARRY LIKE, YOUR NOT EVER GOING TO LIVE UP TO JERRY QUARRY STANDARDS. THAT REQUIRES BEING A MAN!! I'M ALSO SICK OF ALL THESE GUYS THINKING THAT THIER SOME KIND OF COLLEGE
PROFESSORS, THIS AIN'T THE SITE! KOO KOO KOO KOO | |11/10/03 12:54:51 AM|KENT|North O.C.|||11/10/03 12:54:51 AM|KENT|North O.C.| ||KENTALLEN@ETC|||10|Hey Koo Koo, being polite to new people by welcoming them and acknowledging that they were close to the point when making a prediction is not bowing down to someone. It is called manners.It is obvious you were never taught any manners so I will speak to you in a language you will understand! WHY DON'T YOU GO F*CK YOURSELF YOU PIECE OF CRAP! I AM SICK OF YOUR SH*T! HEY MUFFIMAN, I AM NOT LICKING ANY ARSE NOW, AM I? YOU CAN F*CK YOURSELF TOO! THIS IS THE VERY LAST WORD I WILL EVER SAY ABOUT THIS NONSENSE AND I MEAN EVER! YOU CAUGHT ME IN A BAD MOOD, BUT NEVER AGAIN WILL I PAY ANY ATTENTION TO YOU, PERIOD!! | |11/10/03 04:56:31 AM|John Parriner |Sleepy London Town ||jparr92@aol.com|||10|RS writes: All that we know and respect today has bases rooted in past knowledge, even if it was only yesterday. Most progress is a tweaking of something we already know. However, when something out of the box and ground breaking happens, it's invariably the result of someone who goes against the grain with something completely different, or with something that expands the essence of something thought to be a static fact. WHAT DO YOU MEAN? COULD YOU SUPPLY SOME EXAMPLES? DO YOU MEAN SOMEONE DISCOVERED LUCITE IN ANCIENT EGYPT?And you wrote: It's a mistake to separate science and religion, simply because they don't conveniently explain or reinforce each other. They're ~both~ part of the larger overlay of the Great Mystery, and have their own jobs to do. One doesn't, or shouldn't, negate the other, when either are approached properly. In that sense, the Divine ~was~ responsible for the creation of the universe.SORRY, NOT CLEAR TO ME. How close did Tarver come to beating Jones? Over here the press is mixed on that. Sooner or later Jone's larking about and roostering was bound to get him in trouble, just as it did Ali. At least from the time Ali resumed after his layoff, his buffoonery got him in trouble with every good opponent, if only briefly. Boxing is a sport where a man can lose everything in a second, of course. I'm relieved no one has suggested we all send Koo Koo Automatic e-mail that will be sent to his address every half hour every day of the week. That would soon overload his message queue and prevent his dominatrix from calling him. Please, nobody try this. I'd like to explain our notion of durability and nominate The Old Mongoose, Archie Moore. You could hit Archie with "everything including the kitchen sink" and none of it would actually hurt him. He'd slip, parry, cuff, dodge, sidestep, block, duck or muffle everything. Another boxer with a strange but effective defensive stance was Eddie Machen, who more or less held his elbows out. Ken Norton may have taken that stance and copied it. | |11/10/03 07:00:28 AM|MUFFINMAN|ZANZIBAR||ZANZIBAR||10|KENT - THAT'S BETTER MY SON - KOO KOO IS A LOSER - HE IS PEE WEE HERMAN - HEE HEE. GO KENT GO - YOU ARE LIKE A QUARRY! KOO KOO - CURL UP AND DIE SHITHEAD!WHO'S AFRAID OF THE MUFFINMAN THE MUFFINMAN THE MUFFINMAN?| |11/10/03 10:06:15 AM|Massimo|Rome||7||10|What do you think about TONEY vs MC CLINE ? This fight will be fought on 7 December in Las Vegas. I think Toney is gonna win clearly on points. Do you think Tyson's power would be too much for Toney ? Do you think Eddie Machen would obtain better results than Toney against the modern heavyweights ?| |11/10/03 10:33:38 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|John -Just the idea that everything that will ever be is here, waiting for discovery. There is technically no such thing as an "invention." Heart surgery was possible at the time of Christ, if the knowledge and equipment were available, and germs existed before anyone thought about them, or discovered them. Everything is part of our existence; it's egotistical for people to separate religion and science. God gave us minds, and expects us to use them, and we developed both of those fields, neither of which provide us with all the answers. Perhaps the quest is what "it's" all about. Archie Moore was indeed very durable. I don't think anyone ever had more total fights than he did, in addition to being a champion, and fighting a lot of really good people. Just to continue isn't necessarily "durable," ala Joe Grim. Well, it is in the literal sense, I guess, but it's also wheel spinning and stupid.

Yes, Frazier helped Ali with money and with trying to get his license back. Ali's taunts of Joe came from the heart, I think. He just said they didn't to preserve his nice guy personae. You'll notice he only taunted his most fearsome opponents, those he was afraid of. His personal attacks were used to dispel this.

Massimo -

Yes, Frazier helped Ali with money and with trying to get his license back. Ali's taunts of Joe came from the heart, I think. He just said they didn't to preserve his nice guy personae. You'll notice he only taunted his most fearsome opponents, those he was afraid of. His personal attacks were used to dispel this.

Hey Kent, I must say, I'm somewhat dissapointed by your coarse and vulgar outburst!! I'm afraid I really must demand an apology for my self and all the other gentle readers at this site on the other hand, NAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAA!!!! Good for you!! Now it's been put out there! However, (to quote you, `@#%@#@&*^_)(^%$$##@#$@!~,does seem a bit personal. Again, nice work.

Hey R.S. Massimo, God did not endow us with an intellect capable of comprehending his true nature or the vastness of the universe. I read a great book "The Physics Of Immortality" by Frank Tipler, Prophesor of mathamatics at Tulaine University. He estimates the size of the universe, observable and unobservable at between 1 and 20 trillion light years! Hey Massimo, how many zeros is that? The speed of light keeps us from ever really exploring the distant wonders we are discovering daily with the newest telescopes. Perhaps as we evolve, we may come closer to understanding. The average time span for a species on Earth is, however, only about 1 to 2 million years. Why this huge universe, which is so vast that the human mind can't comprehend it, only measure it? Yet the speed of light confines, traps us in this tiny section of the universe. A waste of space? Think how it would alter the religious beliefs of 6 billion humans, to find out that there are other intelligent life forms out there? Would it mean someone else was created in Gods image after all? No disrespect meant to anyones' religious beliefs.

Hey Jimmy Dorsey, that's right! Those fights you sent those Latino kids were some of the classics. They are a few of the alltime best gut it out fights of the Quarry era! If Quarry had learned a few defensive skills from the monster, Joe Frazier, like soaking his face in brine water, maybe he wouldn't have had his face sliced to ribbons in their second fight. Did you ever see Joe Frazier get a serious cut? His face would swell up, but never cut. If Jerry did soak his face in salt brine, it did not seem to help, if you read more about Jerry Quarry, like did, you'd know that, oh well I can't expect everyone to know what I know about Jerry :) koo koo.
because other fighters had a "book on him". You watch a film, you know he cuts easily. Look at the films. Frazier and Ali both used every trick in the book on quarry, elbows, laces, pulling the head down from behind, butting, etc. Remember the low blow Quarry threw in their first fight? It was a travesty of fairness! Frazier had spent the entire fight on the inside throwing elbows and his head. |

11/10/03 09:40:15 PM | kookoony | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 |
you are right steve, ali a little bit with the cuffing around the neck, this is why jerry picked him up in the first rd of their 2nd fight, as for frazier, yes he repeatedly butted him, mostly in the first fight. you don't get that kind of damage that quick from punches, Jerry confirmed in that interview w/ cossell after the fight that frazier is not as hard of hitter than jimmy ellis,|

I suspected that for the last 35yrs, YOU SEE I'M NOT AS STUPID AS SOME PEOPLE THINK :))))))))) |

11/10/03 10:12:17 PM | Ashley Quarry | Texas | abquarry@yahoo.com | 10 |
My name is Ashley Quarry. Jerry Quarry was my grandfather, & my dads father. it hurts to see my dad cry because grandpa died. But yes Jerry Quarry was an excellent fighter even though i dont remember very much about him. He was also a wonderful singer and so is my dad, Jerry Lynn Quarry. I guess thats why i love to sing. well, i hope everyone who looks at this site learns to appreciate how hard my grandpa worked. |

11/11/03 02:23:59 AM | Kent Appel | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |
That is wonderful Ashely that you are a singer. I am a singer also and even though I have never been famous doing it, singing is a big part of my life. I met you grandfather many years ago and I was and still am a big boxing fan of his, but he and I spoke about music instead of boxing. Your grandfather had a very good singing voice.I didn't know your dad, Jerry Lynn, is a singer too. It must run in your family. Good luck and keep singing always! |

11/11/03 02:35:35 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |
Hey Steve, I hope the gentle and sane readers of this site were not offended by my outburst but I have been taking this nonsense for two years and there are times when you just have to defend yourself. I am not taking back one word of it though because this type of language is the only thing some people understand and this type of person sees niceness as a weakness. It is about time to close this story for good. This is my very last comment regarding this topic. |

11/11/03 04:31:12 AM | Paul | Sydney, Australia | PlMls4@aol.com | 10 |
The November issue of The Ring magazine has a photograph recently taken of a smiling and very much alive Emile Griffith. So I was mistaken when I posted that he was no longer with us. I think I might have mixed him up with Benny Briscoe. Massimo - I remember reading somewhere that Frazier gave Ali some money during his enforced exile from boxing. There was also an occasion when Frazier drove Ali from Louisville to New York and they taped some of the conversation during the trip. They were actually friends before that first fight. Anyway, what's all this talk about physics and religion? I don't understand either topic. I don't even know what physics is about. But as far as I am concerned, God hasn't been born yet. God will be the scientist who discovers the cure for diseases etc. Maybe we'll be the last generation who will die naturally. My timing has always been out. RS - I was warming to your contention that Duran was the best pound-for-pound until I assessed his resume and saw that he lost fights in his prime that he should have won. Why was that? What's your view of Henry Armstrong? |

11/10/03 06:21:15 AM | Massimo | Rome | 4 | 10 |
I think saying that our intellect can't understand the universe is not exact. I think there are infinite levels of understanding of the nature, each deeper and more general of the other! The fact that we don't live in caverns shows, without a doubt, that we have understood a lot of those (prob. infinite) levels. Steve, nobody knows for sure is the universe is finite or infinite, there would be a lot to talk (or speak) about. 1 light year is a huge distance! The Earth-Sun distance is about 8 light minutes. I think the fact that there are other intelligent life forms is very likely, or almost sure. There are outta there hundred of billions of galaxies, each containing hundred of billions of stars... It's a matter of probability... But It's also very likely that will never exchange messages with these guys (let alone meeting them or shaking "hands" with them) because of the huge distances! What's that? Who are you? AAAAAHHHHGGG!! HELP! AN ALIEN!!!!!!!!!!PS1) Kicking asses, bad asses, kicking people out of bed...Why you American people are so concerned about asses?PS2) I tried to understand what CRAP means but it wasn't in my dictionaries! Is it slang American, RS?||11/11/03 08:08:51 AM Massimo| Rome | 17 | 10 || Paul -  Physics is often an important support for Medicine (LASER, NMR...).||11/11/03 10:45:45 AM Roadscholarette| Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 || Steve -  Sounds like an interesting book to check out, thanks. I thought Quarry hit Frazier low in their second fight. The casual viewer, the non-fan, probably doesn't realize that all top fighters know how to employ dirty tactics, and do, only smoothly enough that they typically escape easy notice. Accidental contact of heads? Uh-huh, sure. I heard about an old interview with Eddie Futch and Angelo Dundee, in which both men were talking frankly about the deliberate and strategic use of many dirty fighting techniques by everyone. BTW, I've mentioned Tyson and drug use before (which is obvious), but in case he's ever been tested and done so negatively, there's a drug out now that doesn't force people to try to get around the ever more strict urine tests. It's THG, and is undeectable. The labs are working overtime to keep up with demand for such substances. Of course, this rabid demand is only from a small minority of athletes. LOL!||11/11/03 03:51:41 PM Evren| London | 10 || I read in Boxing News that Roy Jones Junior failed a drug test (for steroids) a few years back and nothing ever became of it! Boxing and drug controls are a real joke. It's amazing that you get a 190lb amateur fighter that turns into a 240lb+ lantern jawed professional monster a few years down the road! I suspect quite a few boxers but there you go. I heard that THG is now detectable as one of our leading sprinters, Dwain Chambers failed a test and also Shane Mosely is being investigated for it after his fight with De La Hoya. Unless I have the drug mistaken with another.||11/11/03 04:45:47 PM Paul| Sydney, Australia | PIMls4@aol.com | 10 || Massimo - I know that physics is important but my brain is not sophisticated enough to understand it. After spending my time concentrating on football, horse racing, boxing, and work, I haven't got any brain space left for anything else. RS - Henry Armstrong has to be up there in the top ten pound-for-pound ever. Massimo - how much fuel has our sun got left to burn? When the sun dies, so does earth. How long have we got?||11/11/03 06:10:22 PM Massimo| Rome | 10 || Hi Paul! The Sun has fuel enough for 5 billions years yet! Then the Sun will become a "RED GIANT" and finally a "WHITE DWARF".||11/11/03 08:21:36 PM Charles Anderson| Ark. | ctjjandfam@aol.com || what does this crap have to do with jerry and family. get back to boxing.||11/11/03 09:02:09 PM John Parinner| London |jparr92@aol.com || We're seeing Kent, the Muffinman and Koo Koo write as the gentlemen they are, so Charles of Arkansas, please tolerate the twists and turns of our discussion as the fine citizens of the Great State of Arkansas traditionally have. ||
equations, seeking to go where no man has ever gone before in the realm of understanding or knowledge. And the seeker too is alone, possibly in the Dark Night of the Soul, reaching for meaning, purpose and redemption in this universe. Changing the subject, could someone please explain more about Jerry Quarry's singing? Was it more like karaoke with friends, or did he sing in public as a professional? What kind of music did he sing and what was his voice like? You all know that Joe Frazier sang, too, and Ali recorded one hit cover of "Stand By Me". Oscar De La Hoya recorded at least one CD, too, and one of the greatest 20th Century singers, Dino Crocetti (known to some as Dean Martin), had several pro fights as a youngster in and around Canton, Ohio. Hammering Henry Armstrong would be a good pound-for-pound choice. I was thinking he was from a different era, and then I asked myself what that term really means. In those days, as several people here have noted, boxers fought much more often, for purses miniscule in comparison to most today, and lacked the high quality of equipment, training regimes, nutritional knowledge and medical care. What I'd like to mention is something about expectations then (before 1960) and now. Namely, in those days, few if any pro fights had the high level of perfectionism they seem to have now. In other words, back then, if you lose a fight or even get KOed, it's not the end of the world. Your career is not ruined or even harmed, you don't call a press conference to announce your retirement, you don't drop off the rankings if you were ranked, and everyone had a better and more realistic attitude to winning and losing. Contrast that with the way it is now, and see that any up and coming fighter had better not lose even once unless it's to an obviously better fighter, or the media and fans will decide the youngster is no good. Even Dempsey and Louis got decked sometimes and even lost a few fights. Among the great lightweights, welters and middles, both men might be knocked down in a good, tough fight, and an excellent fighter might still lose one or two in a busy year. Nowadays that humility and willingness to risk is gone, and the public and promoter faith in fighters is gone, too. It makes for boring fights were often 1 or both kids fight not to lose, not to win.

Does anyone see what I mean? Do you agree, or disagree? Look at someone like Lewis or Bowe -- they fought very seldom, almost as if they feared losing everything if they lost a single fight. I apologize for gadding on so much but I love this site.

let me answer this one, JOE FRAZIER CAN NOT SING, COULD NOT SING AND WILL NEVER BE ABLE TO SING, what a joke he was trying. Jerry on the other hand had a pretty good voice, if he worked more at it, who knows, i always like jerry's speaking voice, real mellow and cool sounding, nobody talks like that, anyway thats what i think. koo koo koo koo

The whole star-->superstar mentality, cynically marketed by the people who run sports and the entertainment industry, is a double edged sword. On the one hand, promotion and monetary return is enhanced, but on the other hand, the public expects not only perfection, but that the participant make it look easy. Walter Mitty on steroids. Even the wars the last couple of years, regardless of how you feel about them politically, were influenced by a public innundated by Arnold Schwarzenegar movies. You can have a war, but no one on the good guys' side dies. In terms of fighters, we'll assume all fights are on the level, because if they aren't, that introduces far too many wild radicals from which to draw any meaningful conclusions. Muhammad Ali had it right. You have to put buns in the seats, and a lot of them have to be people who aren't ordinarily boxing fans. You have to make ~those~ people care about you and your fight. Those people (today) have watched a lot of TV and movies, and have an idea of "how things are," and how they want them to happen, regardless of whether this is realistic or not. The fighters are human, so anything can happen, so you give the audience the image. When things don't go according to plan, viewers can feel a sense of abandonment, and think the fighter is a bum and a loser. Remember, "one" of the biggest draws to boxing is the spectator projecting himself into the ring."Follow me to victory, but kill me if I fail."John P, please cut me some slack if I stepped over the line. Understand, I have been taking abuse at this site for over two years now and most of the time I have taken it in stride as I have tried to tell Massimo to do. But when I welcomed you and I was put down for it, it was "the straw that broke the camels back!" Understand, I say that all of the negative comments directed at me for all of this time didn't get to me but they did bother me. But nothing hurts more than you a reasonable person such as yourself, lumping me in with Koo Koo, etc. I try to be a gentleman at all times but there are times when everyone falls short of this goal. Please don't judge me by one outburst because others on this board who have been here for a while know I am a gentleman who has taken far than his fair share of abuse that I don't deserve. I HEARBY APOLOGIZE TO ALMOST EVERYONE ON THIS BOARD FOR MY POST I SHOULD HAVE THOUGHT MORE ABOUT BEFORE I SENT IT. IN A WAY, I WISH I COULD APOLOGIZE TO KOO KOO BUT HE IS THE EXCEPTION BECAUSE HE HAS DONE A HUNDRED TIMES MORE TO ME THAN I HAVE EVER DONE BACK TO HIM AND EVERYONE HERE THAT HAS BEEN HERE ON THIS BOARD FOR A WHILE KNOWS IT.Jerry was singing long before karaoke ever was around. He even sang on television shows such as the Merv Griffin show where he did a fine rendition of "By the Time I get to Phoenix." The song that was a hit by Glen Campbell.As far as I am concerned, Massimo, RS, and Fran add a touch of class to this site and when we have strayed from the central topic of boxing it has been interesting. Massimo - thanks for the info. Someone was saying something about steroids and rumours of same. Hearing things like that about Mosley makes you start suspecting everyone else. Mosley did seem to improve heaps last time, didn't he. Kent - you gotta stop apologising for letting off steam. Koo Koo - you're losing your touch. You haven't made me laugh for a while. | then maybe sum single hooooks, butt that aint enuff to make them a grate filters," and then there are others who really have minds and mix many things in with fighting.I was always impressed with Liston's, Patterson's and Ali's ability to do this. Here were three men with absolutely no education at all (not that that automatically equates with native intelligence), were probably just about completely illiterate, yet who consistently came up with some of the most stunning, colorful, and articulate insights imaginable; they were likely smarter than many people with multiple degrees.|
|11/12/03 02:19:30 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|yea, yea, ok, ok, i wish that one of jerry's family members could come on here and tell us more about jerry. i've been studying him for 30 + yrs. and still would like to know more, i know he had a lot wives, that can bring any man down, make a little money, hang on to it, don't let some pretty women take it away, not me though much too smart to do that. NEVER TRUST ANYONE, THATS MY GOLDEN RULE!!! koo koo|}
|11/12/03 02:32:49 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|Continuing on about the Shane Mosely steroid allegation (and it is nothing more at this stage) there is a link on Eastside Boxings website about it. Very interesting. In my opinion it is widespread in boxing -my opinion only. There was a big thing about Jack O'Halloran using it in the 60's and 70's which caused him to lose the use of his legs. Koo Koo you crack me up...you remind me of Anne Robinson on 'The Weakest
Link'.|
|11/12/03 03:13:41 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|JOHN PARINNER: Jerry had a night club act at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas called "JERRY QUARRY WITH PLEASURE" I Never saw it,But his singing took him on a lot of excursions,He had a lot of talent in a lot of things,Super Stars competition in 1974 still blows me away, how he finished third,with all those NFLer's.(not the one in 1975!!!)Its too bad no one can find a tape to that. One thing great about his popularity,is when he sang on Merv Griffith,he'd just lost to Ali and was considered "RETIRED" from the ring.|
|11/12/03 03:50:42 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|Dorsey, you seem to be the only visitor here that knows about jerry quarry, i commend you, Roadscum continues to talk out of his mind, he has a little bit of kent in him, kent quit drawing those goverment checks, get a real job. koo koo |
|11/12/03 03:58:29 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|by the way i forgot to mention the movie ALI, you know with that moron Will Smith, when it showed ali's comeback fight against Jerry it had some out of shape actor playing jerry in the movie, THAT WAS A PUT DOWN AGAINST JERRY AND HIS FAMILY, THE ONLY FIGHT JERRY WENT IN OUT OF SHAPE WAS AGAINST NORTON, HIS LAST REAL FIGHT.
HOLLYWOOD PEOPLE SUCK!!!! KOO KOO|
|11/12/03 04:25:15 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|I can HONESTLY say,I've never seen that particular movie,they actually had Jerry played by some out of shape buffon??
THAT IS A MAJOR INSULT!! to say the least,MR.JIMMY said himself,THAT was the bout WHERE JERRY was the most focused and poised, too bad we could not do the casting, there is a man in Mesquite Nevada that looked,sounded,body,mannerisms,attitude, THAT COULD HAVE PLAYED JQ 1970 version
BY SIMPLY PLAYING HIMSELF,Another friend who does not even follow boxing,OUT OF THE BLUE said he looked like QUARRY! The guy was also a college linebacker who would have been in shape,Just like the real QUARRY!! FOR THE PART.|
|11/12/03 05:47:22 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|"Ali" didn't portray Quarry or anyone really as clowns, but the movie did have an agenda; any movie about a particular fighter will slant things to whatever end it's pursuing. It veered back and forth between Ali fan club idolatry and the well worn Hollywood modus operandi that uses stark contrast to accentuate a theme. In a crime movie, nuns might cross the street ahead of villains to boost their evil, for example. In the case of this movie, all Ali's opponents were either overblown or glossed over and dismissed. Even Frazier (played by James Toney), certainly the most defining drama for Ali, was Cliff's Noted.

11/12/03 06:00:59 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|i did not realize that was james toney, it made frazier look bad too. compared to tyson, frazier looks like robert redford, tyson does look like KING KONG, AS ALI HIMSELF SAID. Hey Sonya , whats up you good looking doll :) koo koo |

11/12/03 08:17:32 PM|steve |N.J.||dmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Yo,R.S.,I don't quite understand your last post.The movie,Ali,did indeed have an agenda. It cast Ali as a cultural,social and political hero. He defied the system,was unfairly punished. Yet he bravely indured,arose triumphant over the governments evil opression. Much the same as our brave American heroes who fled to Canada. I guess that make's me and the 50,000 war dead pretty stupid.Okay,back to the movie.The movie glossed over his amazing boxing carreer.They dwell alot, for some unknown reason,or his tiring,grade school level vaudevillian act that he trotted out for the white press's consomption. Ali's silly poems, name calling,proclaiming himself "I'm so pretty",and yelling over and over again for twenty years,"I am the greatist",was maybe pretty funny the first few times you heard it. Ali seemed to think he had to perform these stupid,childish skits to generate ticket sales amongst the white public.Who all laughed dutifully at his childish,redundant comedy routine,even after hearing it 50 times. R.S., did you mean the stark contrast between Ali's rather astute political dealing's involving his religious life,and his public personae and his complete dominance over his opponent's in the ring.Who were treated as an afterthought, and merely a vehicle to carry him to his status as Godlike cultural Icon.

11/12/03 08:31:38 PM|Evren|London||@||10|Can anyone help? - Do any of you guys have a complete version of Jerry's fight with Eddie Machen? I have highlights only. Would be great if anyone could help. Has anyone seen Jerry's fight against Alongi? I know that a couple of collectors have it but the quality is meant to be real poor. Help Anyone (except Muffin man) |

11/12/03 09:06:30 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|BRAVE, DID I HEAR YOU SAY ALI WAS BRAVE! what about all those war veterans, what did they get, ali did not want to face war, he would much rather fight with padded gloves on. Mac Foster said long ago, if he were good enough to go , so was ali, Ali was a slick , trash talking crook, yes i said crook, he cheated his country, he knew he could get away with it, remember he had money and muslims on his side, GUTS YEA, HE HAD SOME, BUT NOT AS NEAR AS MUCH THOSE VETERANS THAT Fought FOR THIS COUNTRY, HE HAD A GREAT EXCUSE USING THAT MUSLIM THING, BUT I AIN'T NOT BUYING!!!KO0 KOO|

11/12/03 10:06:49 PM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree,
CA||Sonia90101@aol.com|||10|Hey KooKoo, things are ok here on our end, keeping busy with the hubby & kids, but check this site out daily. You sure do love to rattle people don't you, be nice everyone. Let's keep this site, cool so people keep visiting, and it keeps going. Be safe all. Dad & Uncle Jerry, you are missed very much so, and loved always.| then he won. Beat everybody, made seasoned professionals look like amateurs in career one. By career two, his aura was giving him rounds, and fights as a result, that he earned by being Ali. He was like fighting Victor Galindez or Carlos Monzon in South America, or Roberto Duran in Panama City - you had to knock them out to win. We found out he had a harder chin and more heart than anyone, along with an unparalleled bag of tricks by career two, and only Ali beating Ali then, save for the first Frazier fight. Of course all this wouldn't have been possible if he hadn't been so damned good! The movie was about Ali's ongoing Canonization, not about Sonny Liston or Joe Frazier or Jerry Quarry or George Foreman. In their dismissal, they came off as just accidental assists, and near palookas, really, except when one could be useful to reinforce his Sainthood.

The movie was about Ali's ongoing Canonization, not about Sonny Liston or Joe Frazier or Jerry Quarry or George Foreman. In their dismissal, they came off as just accidental assists, and near palookas, really, except when one could be useful to reinforce his Sainthood.

| 11/13/03 01:00:50 AM|steve |N.J.|drmsrm@comcast.net|||10|R.S. Not sure what you mean. Ali used the Muslims as a cash cow? I'd have thought it was the other way around.Anyway, I thought we where only talking about the movie. It doesn't matter to me who wrote his poems, but the movie does show a contrast between his maneuverings between several black political factions and the side he portrayed to boxing. I don't know about the portrayal of a villain. In those days, fans took their boxing pretty seriously. I don't beleive to this day, you could get a majority opinion from sports writers that Lewiston, Maine, wasn't a fix.|

| 11/13/03 02:32:43 AM|Steve |N.J.|dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Hello John Parinner,"and the seeker too is alone, possibly in the dark night of the soul, reaching for meaning, purpose and redemption in this universe." Is this your own original thought? It is quite beautiful. It applies to anyone who has lain in the grass and stared up at the starry sky. I can tell you, John, that the physical barriers endured by fighters to overcome and find their "personal truth" is fleeting at best. It's only as good as your last fight. Or how you handle life's day to day problems. It's another aspect entirely, to consider physicists who spend their entire life in pursuit of a theory, trying to find our place in the universe. I've been through all the running at 5:am in the winter, all the physical hardships, blah, blah, blah. You know what, Sir John, everyone is alone. |

| 11/13/03 04:13:55 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia|PlMls4@aol.com|||10|RS - I agree with your comments regarding Liston, Patterson, and Ali. A fourth name to add is Jack Johnson. In his day he was just as big a personality as Ali and, given the intolerance of those times, what he dared to do was truly amazing. He revolutionised boxing with his style, he travelled overseas to win the title at age 30 after being denied the chance because of racism, and he had the gall to antagonise the establishment with the way he dressed and the colour of the women he entertained. His life was so controversial, so entirely different to the norm, that modern film makers could make a blockbuster movie out of it. In regard to Ali, I thought his film was disappointing. It was flimsy and plastic. Regarding the person, I don't agree with Ali refusing to be drafted but then again I don't have any religious beliefs so I can't imagine how he felt. But it is not an issue of him not being brave. After all, he wouldn't have been on the front line because, like Joe Louis decades earlier, he would have got a cozy little gig away from the fighting. I don't consider any boxer to be a coward, especially one that took on the meanest monsters of that era, one after the other. And the way Ali has fought his deteriorating impairment with dignity and courage is reason to admire him. He hasn't hidden himself away and it takes a lot of courage to be seen in public with the illness he has. Another thing about Ali, he was never motivated by money. His fights were world events. |

| 11/13/03 11:43:17 AM|Fran|Pennsylvania|PLC7755@aol.com|||10|Question. How does Ron Lyle get banged around by a hard counter punching Jerry Quarry, go to war with what I have heard everyone on the site say is the hardest puncher in heavyweight history Earnie Shavers get rocked by shavers and come back to win. Then fight George Foreman and take devastating punches get knocked down get up knock George down etc. Then fight Ali who lays on the ropes gives away all the rounds then lays on a few very light combinations to Lyle and the ref stops the fight? That was the question and the answer is ....It was fixed.

Question #2 How does he lay on the ropes against Jimmy Young and seemingly lose every round then get the decision/.................Fixed. 2Nd Spinks fight Ali held Spinks the whole fight but was never warned. Fixed. And on n on. Question. Why did Foreman look drunk when he fought Ali? Because he was . Remember him saying that they brought him a grapefruit and after he ate it he felt sleepy.....Fixed. He was good in his prime but was way over hyped and he made everyone money after he came back. Jerry would have killed him that night he came back. Ali could not have beaten a good seasoned active hard punching heavy weight who may have been the best counter puncher ali ever faced. Jerry could work his combinations off Ali's jab instead of the other guys who walked in and ate his jabs. He couldn't have come back after 3 years off and beaten a fighter of Jerry's caliber. Bonavena had no boxing skills, Frazier killed him.

Have a good day everyone but lets not get hyped up on all that crap about that guy he was way overhyped.

11/13/03 11:45:54 AM Fran PA PLC7755
Why did Foreman get rid of all his cornermen after the ali fight? Because he knew they sold him out.

11/13/03 11:53:51 AM Evren London
Glad to see we have blind people posting on the site!

11/13/03 12:14:20 Roadscholarette Chicago roadscholarette@hotmail.com Steve -
I think Ali and the Muslims were a symbiotic relationship. Ali was paranoid about white people for a time, and that, along with the mileage he could get out of the Muslims attracted him to them. They were useful for intimidation, attention getting, negotiations, while he was the poster boy for their politics. Finally, he didn't need them anymore, really.
Fran -
It sort of ruins boxing conversations to think about fixes, so I don't mention the subject much, but there's no doubt in my mind that at best, judges and referees were swayed by the Ali mystique, giving him rounds (and often fights as a result) that were close, at worst, the fights were foregone conclusions. Foreman? Bogus as a three dollar bill, IMO, punch taking ability by Ali or not. I don't know many people in RL who're boxing fans, but when I run into them, and I mention fix in this fight, and they disagree, fine, I won't argue, but I know what I think. All good fighters know how to employ dirty or illegal techniques, but Ali did both constantly, without penalty. Others did too, but he was better at it, and no ref would call him on it. The ref in Manilla warned Ali once for holding, Frazier once for hitting low, but both completely ignored him, continued to do it (among other things), with no consequences.
Paul -Jack Johnson had all the raw material in those days to be an even bigger Ali (flamboyant, great fighter, running around with white women, beating up white men, etc.), but the timing was wrong. People then could still get away with overt, no excuse bigotry towards blacks that they couldn't pull off in Ali's day. Therefore, Johnson was simply hounded, and eventually run off the scene, after throwing the fight in Havana. Mann act? Gimme a break!

11/13/03 12:51:19 PM VIDEO POST The Jerry Quarry Foundation TJQF

11/13/03 12:59:15 Roadscholarette Chicago roadscholarette@hotmail.com Lots of fights that get stopped on cuts can be debated - who woulda won if it'd gone the distance? One thing is certain in Ali's comeback fight against Quarry though - if it had gone the distance, and Ali had won, he wasn't going to look good doing it, and he ~had~ to look good. Jose Torres feels Ali would have won, but was going to look lousy, and get hit a lot. Solution? "OK, Ali, this sonuvabitch has a head like concrete, so you aint gonna knock him out. This is gonna be a long night. Butt him, he cuts easy." Can you envision this conversation in the Ali corner? Quarry wouldn't likely have initiated a butt. He knew Ali had never bledd before, and a butt could have opened a cut on his own face. George Foreman was a better fighter after ten years, when you factor in his age. He had better technique, and he had mind memory for the moves, even though his body couldn't put some into play any longer. Ali's layoff? Probably did him some good, yet this was used as an excuse even years after he returned. A refrigerator like Bonavena made everyone look bad, so there was the excuse there. But Frazier? He cleaned Ali's clock. Yes, he took a lot of abuse doing it, but I personally think we saw Ali at his best that night. I think Joe would have knocked out the butterfly of career one. IMO anyway, and that's all any of us have in theoretical scenarios in a subjective sport. And, I like Ali too, as a fighter. In top form, few could beat him, and I don't believe any could in a best of three, though of course, dark questions always have to come in. The Phillinie judges had Manila 8-4 after 12 for Ali. I wonder if they decided on this ahead of the fight, 'cause I had it 6-5-1, ~maybe~ even 7-5 Frazier, at that juncture. Oh well, just armchair reffing, who knows, huh?

Massimo Rome

11/13/03 02:12:37 PM

George Foreman was a better fighter after ten years, when you factor in his age. He had better technique, and he had mind memory for the moves, even though his body couldn't put some into play any longer. Ali's layoff? Probably did him some good, yet this was used as an excuse even years after he returned. A refrigerator like Bonavena made everyone look bad, so there was the excuse there. But Frazier? He cleaned Ali's clock. Yes, he took a lot of abuse doing it, but I personally think we saw Ali at his best that night. I think Joe would have knocked out the butterfly of career one. IMO anyway, and that's all any of us have in theoretical scenarios in a subjective sport. And, I like Ali too, as a fighter. In top form, few could beat him, and I don't believe any could in a best of three, though of course, dark questions always have to come in. The Phillinie judges had Manila 8-4 after 12 for Ali. I wonder if they decided on this ahead of the fight, 'cause I had it 6-5-1, ~maybe~ even 7-5 Frazier, at that juncture. Oh well, just armchair reffing, who knows, huh?

Massimo Rome

11/13/03 02:15:47 PM

George Foreman was a better fighter after ten years, when you factor in his age. He had better technique, and he had mind memory for the moves, even though his body couldn't put some into play any longer. Ali's layoff? Probably did him some good, yet this was used as an excuse even years after he returned. A refrigerator like Bonavena made everyone look bad, so there was the excuse there. But Frazier? He cleaned Ali's clock. Yes, he took a lot of abuse doing it, but I personally think we saw Ali at his best that night. I think Joe would have knocked out the butterfly of career one. IMO anyway, and that's all any of us have in theoretical scenarios in a subjective sport. And, I like Ali too, as a fighter. In top form, few could beat him, and I don't believe any could in a best of three, though of course, dark questions always have to come in. The Phillinie judges had Manila 8-4 after 12 for Ali. I wonder if they decided on this ahead of the fight, 'cause I had it 6-5-1, ~maybe~ even 7-5 Frazier, at that juncture. Oh well, just armchair reffing, who knows, huh?

Massimo Rome

11/13/03 03:09:43 PM

Mass for a great fight you should have seen the Jerry Quarry / Mac Foster fight at the Garden. Unbelievable Foster ahead going into the sixth and Jerry comes out and just freezes and Foster was confused and pawed a few jabs n Jerry started counterpunching it took about an hour to find Fosters head it was rolling around in the second deck. Anyway I like you guys RS you should be a writer you write beatfully and I would enjoy reading anything you write, especially about Jerry.

Massimo Rome

11/13/03 03:29:01 PM

So Foreman's people wanted that Foreman lost ? That's a betrayal !!!!! Unfortunately I have never seen Quarry-Mac Foster... I have seen just about half an hour of Jerry Quarry in the ring but it was enough to understand that he was one of the most exciting fighters ever !

Massimo Rome

11/13/03 04:20:25 PM

Mass we have to get you some films. When I was kid I used to watch Jerry Quarry Frazier one over n over. That was a fight. Jerry was a tough Kid.

Massimo Rome

11/13/03 04:33:58 PM
wore himself out trying to break out of clinches. And if it had gone 15 rounds and Ali lost on points then the crowd would also have rioted. The stupidist thing Foreman ever did was fight Ali in Zaire. He should have known that Ali would manipulate the situation and Foreman was in an environment where he could never win. And the cut that caused the delay hurt Foreman's prospects more than Ali's. I don't think that the fight was fixed. But I think that every possible factor was manipulated in Ali's favour. The ropes were loose, Ali was given more time to get fit, the crowd was decidedly against Foreman, Ali was allowed to hold on, and Foreman must have known that unless he knocked Ali out, he'd never get a decision because the crowd would go crazy. So in blinding heat he punched himself out and in hindsight that was always going to happen. Had that fight been in a different place, then Foreman most probably wins. Also, Angelo Dundee must be given a lot of credit for the way he manipulated Ali's career. He saved Ali against Henry Cooper (thumbing the cut glove open) and he was most likely responsible for the loose ropes in Zaire.

Let's not get the old Henry Cooper glove myth out again - the interval was measured at around 1 minute 4 seconds (in the region of). That's another 'why I lost' excuse by a boxer. I have a question for you all: - Has a boxer ever lost because his opponent was better?

This happened at least once when Sharkey lost against Carnera! Is it true that Earnie Shavers knocked down Ali'? Or was it a slip? And in Frazier-Ali' 1, at the beginning of round 11, Frazier knocked down Ali'. Was it considered a slip? Was it right? When I watch the replay I can see Frazier hitting Ali', at least partially!

There's no doubt in my mind that Frazier tagged and decked Ali in the 11th. In slow motion, you can see the punch land, then Ali goes down to a knee after a slight delay. Because of the second or two interval, and the fact that water was there, they called it a slip. Dr. Ferdie Pacheco (and Joe of course!) also thinks Ali was hit and went down a second later.

Jerry Quarry, one of the great heavyweights from the "GOLDEN ERA" of heavyweight boxing. He always put up a great fight and had a whole lot of heart. Ron Lyle was another, as was George Chuvalo. Earnie Shavers didn't floor Ali, but rocked him bigtime when they met. He did, however, floor Larry Holmes and it was quite an accomplishment when Larry got up from that knockdown. Ali stayed on too long, as many great fighters do...He should have retired permanently when he took the title back from Leon Spinks. Which brings me to Mike Tyson. In his prime, he had it all; speed, strength, knockout power...he was a great entertainer; he was, in his prime, unbeatable. The 5 greatest modern Heavyweight Champions - 1. Ali, 2. Joe Louis, 3. Rocky Marciano, 4. Joe Frazier, 5. Mike Tyson

The 5 greatest

|11/14/03 12:02:47 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Massimo -IMO=in my opinionRL=real life (sometimes substituted with RT for "real time"), IOW (in other words), not online.;-)|
|11/14/03 04:32:32 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com||||10|There was a news report in Australia today that George Chuvalo is taking legal action against Sylvester Stallone over the Rocky movies. Chuvalo is claiming that Stallone told him that he got the Rocky idea after watching Chuvalo fight Ali. So Chuvalo now wants a slice of the $1.4 billion that the movies hauled in. IMO that's a lot of money RT. The Bayonne Bleeder wants Stallone to bleed financially.|}

|11/14/03 05:03:01 AM|Evren|London||@|||10|I think you got George Chuvalo mixed up with Chuck Wepner. Does anyone remember Curtis 'Hatchetman' Sheppard?IMO= in my opinionRL=real life (sometimes substituted with RT for "real time"), IOW (in other words), not online.;-)|
|11/14/03 05:23:13 AM|Massimo|Rome||5|||10|Yo RS !!Thanks for your kindness! May you add two little informations? What's LOL (laughing...?)? What's BTW? Evren is right! It's Chuck Wepner, not George Chuvalo! I have read that stuff some days ago! Money! Money! I suspect that people likes money! |

|11/14/03 05:37:59 AM|Massimo|Rome||4|||10|Evren-It seems to me that Curtis Sheppard was a guy that fought Jersey Joe Walcott !
|11/14/03 08:20:54 AM|Fran|PA||plc77558@aol.com|||10|I agree the fight in Zaire wasn't fixed in that Foreman threw the fight it was that they let Ali hold and let the fight proceed with illegal ropes. And I believe Foreman was drugged. We saw all through those years where Ali got away with everything and that was because he made big money for everyone. Then the publicity and hype that he was the greatest. Norton beat him 3 times. Frazier beat him 2 out of three. Jimmy Young beat him. He was hype in the second part of his career. Chuck Wepner was a stiff who Ali fought because he was a bum and Ali knew he needed an easy fight. Wepner was a stiff who was also over the hill wasn't even in the top 50. |

|11/14/03 09:50:53 AM|Evren|London||@|10|It was once reported that Curtis Sheppard caught his wife and a police officer making love in their house. Curtis killed the officer and then cut his wife's head off. He then went to a bar ordered a drink then put his wife's head on the bar and said "order her one too". Whether this is true or not I don't know but the police officer died, his wife was killed and Curtis spent his life in jail and is still there as far as I know.Try this websitewww.cyberboxingzone.com/boxing/wail1000_rocky.htmIn fact in Manila Frazier's son Marvis, who was sitting at ringside, recalls that one of Joe's entourage, Willie Monroe, who was sitting near Ali's corner, had been trying to attract Futch's attention over the pandemonium. He was shouting "Ali is finished" but nobody heard him. It all could have been different if they'd heard Willie Monroe. Maybe Frazier would have won by KO 14.Wepner was a top 10 contender at the moment of the Ali' fight, even if, the ratings are not always realistic...|

|11/14/03 10:20:33 AM|Massimo|Rome||5|||10|I think cutting a wife's head off is a ill-mannered behaviour !|
|11/14/03 10:51:12 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Massimo -IMO=laughing out loud.RL=real life (sometimes substituted with RT for "real time"), IOW (in other words), not online.;-) Yes, the pandemonium was so great that Frazier's camp never heard the word that Ali was finished, and wasn't going to come out for the last round. Ali fans won't hear of this, but after taking bombs from one of the hardest punchers in heavyweight history, calling it a day would seem like a pretty good idea to me! :-) In addition to Ali's Parkinson's, he's had dialysis as well. What the punches did to his brain, they did to his internal organs as well. He was having spells of dizziness and feelings of "drunkenness" way back after winning the title from Liston, but of course doctors told him what he wanted to hear - nervousness, stress, etc. He saw some quack after retirement who said he had "no signs of brain damage." How incompetent can you get? Sheesh. With the sorts Ali fought, it would be frightening to be in his body and experience the panorama of results during and immediately after each fight, as well as the things that came, stayed, and worsened as time went on. Dementia of all sorts is an odd condition. The person is unaware of some parts of what's happening or has happened, but they're very aware of other parts, made worse because they don't have a mind that's at 100% to help them cope. A vicious cycle then.

Foreman was going to have to knock Ali out to win. A decision would have gone to Ali, no matter what. We never had to find out what sort of scores the judges cooked up ahead of time, ala Ali's ludicrous winning margin in Manila at the time of the stoppage.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/14/03 10:57:31 AM</th>
<th>Fran</th>
<th>PA</th>
<th>Plc7755@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Wepner was a club fighter and was never in the top 10 the only knock outs he had were against his wife. Who did Wepner beat to deserve a shot. They were just protecting &quot;The Greatest&quot;</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Actually, I saw Wepner as #10 in a real old magazine. Of course, your point was whether he deserved to be there, which he didn't, of course. You're always going to get stiffs in a sport like boxing though, where there's no cut system as with the team sports, and occasionally, one can be useful for a top fighter to coast with and pick up a bogus payday. If no one paid for these fights, they'd stop having them. But people always do...

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/14/03 11:40:23 AM</th>
<th>Roadscholarette</th>
<th>Chicago</th>
<th>roadscholarette@hotmail.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Actually, I saw Wepner as #10 in a real old magazine. Of course, your point was whether he deserved to be there, which he didn't, of course. You're always going to get stiffs in a sport like boxing though, where there's no cut system as with the team sports, and occasionally, one can be useful for a top fighter to coast with and pick up a bogus payday. If no one paid for these fights, they'd stop having them. But people always do...</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/14/03 11:48:40 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Rome</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I have a DVD in which Wepner says &quot; I was in the top of the world from 42 weeks before the Ali' fight&quot;. Anyway, I agree with you that he didn't deserve it. One of the most beautiful things I have ever seen in a boxing ring is Ali's strange dance against Jimmy Ellis !!!!!!!!!!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/14/03 11:57:25 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Rome</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I meant in the top 10 of the world in my last comment.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/14/03 12:48:04 PM</th>
<th>Pete</th>
<th>Cleveland, Ohio</th>
<th>pco@hotmail.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ali stayed on too long. It was the fame and the money which kept him in there. The Foreman fight was not fixed. Ali outsmarted and outfought Foreman. Foreman was an intimidating powerhouse, in his prime, but not much more. He was kicked around by Ron Lyle, Jimmy Young and of course by Ali. Archie Moore had said that Foreman was a poor listener and I believe that to be true. Tyson would have beat Foreman in his prime. Chuck Wepner is the tomato can with the lawsuit. He stepped on Ali's foot, which caused the knockdown in their fight. George Chuvalo has much more class than to sue for money almost 30 years after the fact. The THRILLA IN MANILLA was a grueling match for both Ali &amp; Frazier. Ali may have thought about quitting, but he wouldn't have and Angelo Dundee wouldn't have allowed him to. He beat Frazier and both were finished after that fight. Ali was in his prime 65-67. Unfortunately his career was cut short. We may have missed some great fights 67-69, had he continued with his career during those years.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/14/03 01:27:30 PM</th>
<th>Fran</th>
<th>PA</th>
<th>Plc7755@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| I used to wait for the latest edition of ring magazine or Boxing Illustrated to come out to get the latest scoop on my most exciting heavyweight of all time Jerry Quarry. He NEVER got the credit he deserved. As a young guy trying to follow in his footsteps and wanting to be just like him I used to study his moves in the ring any time I could see him fight I'd memorize his moves. He was so smooth in the ring with his counterpunching ability he would take apart much bigger opponents. He'd move his head and double up the hook body then head. He could bob and weave very smoothly. He was a very unique fighter. It is amazing that this site is here and he is getting the attention now. I know Mike must have been influenced by Jerry and whatever happened to his brother n law Mike Nixon the middleweight anyone know. This is a great site. | 11/14/03 02:24:27 PM|charles anderson|ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com||||10|fran, i was just like you, i couldn't wait to get to the newstands each month to see if ther was an article about jerry in one of the magazines. i wish i had saved them now. | 11/14/03 02:47:15 PM|VIDEO POST|The Jerry Quarry Foundation||TJQF|||10|<Font color="lime">VIDEO POST #8</Font>Per recent discussionsAli vs Frazier I - Round 11New York, March 8, 1971<A HREF="http://www.jerryquarry.com/media/alifrazier11156k.ram">56K |<A HREF="http://www.jerryquarry.com/media/alifrazier11150k.ram">DSL|Charles I saved all of them for years and put together a scrap book of them. He was one bad dude. He had the power. When he fought Shavers at the garden he looked over at him and Don King who was Shavers manager at the time and gave them that scowl and thumbs down and then went out and knocked him out. | 11/14/03 03:06:38 PM|Fran|pa||plc7755@aol.com||||10|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||||10|Regarding Wepner suing Stallone. My guess is Wepner is broke and hopes that Stallone will settle out of court just to get rid of the nuisance. Stallone never used Wepner's name to promote the movie. He merely said he got the idea of Rocky from watching the Ali-Wepner fight. He said he remembers seeing how the crowd reacted to the "knockdown" and thought if he could capture the excitement of an underdog doing surprisingly well, it would translate into a good movie. Wepner is claiming that he never authorized Stallone to use his name to promote the movie. What a load of crap. Like Wepner's name could sell a movie. Yeah, right.| 11/14/03 05:16:51 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|I remember jerry fighting patterson twice,spencer. and i thought jerry was very fast with his hands; great counter puncher. i lived and died with every time he fought.hindsight is always 20-20 but if jerry had hooked up with clancy earlier i truly believe boxing history would have been different.| 11/14/03 10:31:27 PM|charles anderson|ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com||||10|i remember jerry fighting patterson twice,spencer. and i thought jerry was very fast with his hands; great counter puncher. i lived and died with every time he fought.hindsight is always 20-20 but if jerry had hooked up with clancy earlier i truly believe boxing history would have been different.| 11/14/03 10:48:28 PM|RICHARD PERRY|HEMET||rjperryautos@hotmail.com||||10|I AM A FAN OF JERRY,MIKE AND OF JIM ..MAY HE ALSO REST IN PEACE..IT WAS TRULY AN HONOR WHEN JIM AND HIS SON ERIC..COME OUT TO BOX ME IN AN EXIBITION IN SEPT/OCT 2001..I MEET A LOT OF THE FAMILY..AND ONLY WISH THE BEST FOR ALL OF YOU...THANKS FOR THE MOMORIES| 11/15/03 12:50:26 AM|Pete|Cleveland||pco@hotmail.com||||10|How did Jerry get into boxing? Did his father box? Are Jerry's parents still living? How big is Jerry's family?|
Hey Richard Perry, how's it going? Love the van. Keep in touch!

Hello Richard, I was at your second fight against Eric Quarry, the PAL event at Soboba in 2002. Both you and Eric showed a lot of heart in fighting it out for a good cause. These fights may have been exhibitions but they were very real and everyone involved deserves credit for a job well done. I intended to make it up for this years event but I had other plans this time.

Imagine that, wherever a Quarry is Kent is there, I don't know Sonya, this guy might not be wrapped too tight, just as long as everybody remembers I'm Jerry's No. 1 fan, not what's his face.)))

Funny thing about Ali. He never quite put together the two parts of his greatness at the same time; we saw only fleeting pieces of both careers in either one. In part one, he was as fast as a welterweight, and pummeled opponents who for the most part were about as mobile as large appliances. This of course lent some illusion of speed on top of what was already there, and he rarely got hit. Yet, we rarely saw him really fight, or IMO, reach deep into his bag of tricks; much Clay brilliance was lacks in opponents. I'm aware of the pedigree of the people he boxed, but he was a lot better, much better comparatively than he was to the men he met after his return. In career two, he was more of an unorthodox brawler (and still fast, just not ~as~ fast). He encountered much better people, a lot of movers, and he got hit more, but we found out that that didn't matter much. He probably knew this, but now had to call upon it out of no other choice necessity, and still no one could follow up. Never were able to, even Frazier, who came the closest. He was really more of a spider than a butterfly or a bee. He still hit with his arms a lot, floated sporadically, yet viewers and judges seemed to be hypnotized into thinking that they were still seeing the butterfly, that when he deigned the dance, he was doing so by choice. He was hard to corner, and tough to hit cleanly, could take it when he was hit, but remained a sharp shooter till almost the end. Fighters paid the price. He isn't given credit for inside fighting, and wasn't the killer close that Frazier or Tyson were, but he did a lot of damage to the flies who ventured into his web, answering his siren's song. If you cut, you were in trouble. He might have "twisted his punches," but he also had the quickest head and elbows in the west, often administered as a fighter was coping with a thumbed eye. The guy's actually hard to compare to anyone else, and not for reasons of the short lived butterfly.

Funny thing about Ali. He never quite put together the two parts of his greatness at the same time; we saw only fleeting pieces of both careers in either one. In part one, he was as fast as a welterweight, and pummeled opponents who for the most part were about as mobile as large appliances. This of course lent some illusion of speed on top of what was already there, and he rarely got hit. Yet, we rarely saw him really fight, or IMO, reach deep into his bag of tricks; much Clay brilliance was lacks in opponents. I'm aware of the pedigree of the people he boxed, but he was a lot better, much better comparatively than he was to the men he met after his return. In career two, he was more of an unorthodox brawler (and still fast, just not ~as~ fast). He encountered much better people, a lot of movers, and he got hit more, but we found out that that didn't matter much. He probably knew this, but now had to call upon it out of no other choice necessity, and still no one could follow up. Never were able to, even Frazier, who came the closest. He was really more of a spider than a butterfly or a bee. He still hit with his arms a lot, floated sporadically, yet viewers and judges seemed to be hypnotized into thinking that they were still seeing the butterfly, that when he deigned the dance, he was doing so by choice. He was hard to corner, and tough to hit cleanly, could take it when he was hit, but remained a sharp shooter till almost the end. Fighters paid the price. He isn't given credit for inside fighting, and wasn't the killer close that Frazier or Tyson were, but he did a lot of damage to the flies who ventured into his web, answering his siren's song. If you cut, you were in trouble. He might have "twisted his punches," but he also had the quickest head and elbows in the west, often administered as a fighter was coping with a thumbed eye. The guy's actually hard to compare to anyone else, and not for reasons of the short lived butterfly.

I would suggest for anyone on this sight, who are into boxing and love true stories, to click on CURTIS "HATCHETMAN" SHEPPARD. Which would be Weill CBZ 2000. This will tell everyone what really happened and is a great story. Take care!

How good was Alex Miteff? I know that he won the Panamerican Games as an amateur. He is still a legend in Argentina. Clay beat him in 1961, Jerry Quarry managed to do the same in 1967.
where Wepner aggressively pursued Ali and Ali did nothing but dance and not throw punches except for a few illegal punches on the back of Wepner's head in retaliation to Wepner landing some punches on the back of Ali's head. Since neither fighter was penalized by the referee for illegal shots, then Wepner wins the round on my card. I don't remember what the scoring was for the fight but even though Ali won most of the rounds on the way to a fifteen round TKO win, Wepner should have won at least two or three rounds when Ali did little if anything. In this and in other fights later in Ali's career Ali was given rounds on the basis of his name only.That being said, Ali, even very late in his career was a good fighter. Even in his last fight against Trevor Berbick, a young contender and future WBC champion as well as the first fighter to go the distance in a championship fight with an in prime Larry Holmes, Ali was competitive and he almost beat Berbick! Ali was an amazing boxer and we can't take that away from him.It is too bad that Jerry didn't get to fight someone like Berbick for at least a share of the title. Berbick, while being a strong aggressive fighter, was awkward and Jerry would have boxed circles around him. If a 195 pound cruiserweight named S.T. Gordon could out hustle 220 pound Berbick, then Jerry sure could have handled him!In a way, it is a shame that Berbick is called a former heavyweight champion and Jerry is not. Take nothing away from Berbick as he won his title fair and square, but Jerry flat out was a better fighter than him. Jerry was also better than some other former champions like, sorry Massimo, Primo Canera, Leon Spinks, Tommy Burns, and a few others, not to mention some more of the ALPHABET SOUP boys of the 1980s.Searching for chuck wepner,BIG BUM, BOBICK, BIG BUM, COONEY BIG BUM, ALSO A WIMP, SPINKS BEAT HIM, EMBARRASSMENT TO WHITE HEAVYWIEIGHTS, SHOULD HAVE COMMITED SUICIDE AFTER THE FIGHT. I HATE HIS GUTS. KOO KOO | his size and the lack of credible contenders. If Vitali had not been busted open, I believe he would have taken Lewis that night. Either way you cut it, Lewis' days are numbered.

I just saw the replay of Jones verses Tarver as I didn't see it last week. I scored the fight 115 to 114 for Jones. It was a very hard, close fight and Tarver came close to beating Roy, but Tarver didn't press the action in the middle rounds after clearly winning the first two rounds and I believe he came just short of pulling off the win.

I disagree with whoever said the Ali/Lyle fight was fixed as Lyle was badly hurt in the 11th round when he took a hard right to the head from Ali and he sagged against the ropes. Lyle then took over twenty unanswered blows to the head and he sagged against the ropes a second time. If there is any doubt the referee didn't give Lyle much of a chance to prove he was alright, look at the glazed look in Lyle's eyes. This and the fact he wasn't punching back shows that he was definitely hurt. If he had even thrown one punch back a case can be made the stoppage was premature. It was a good stoppage.

Like I said, Lyle's eyes tell the whole story.

I've been reading for a long time without comment. Some of you like Roadschoalrette seem to have an onus against Ali that's hard to understand. He cheated the public, he cheated in the ring, he wasn't as good as people said, he conned the judges, he wasn't really so fast, etc. This sounds like revisionist thinking. I suggest you stay close to his actual record. Roadschoalrette, Kewn, Koo Koo and others, is it possible you actually have a racist agenda you are not aware of? The fighters you usually bash are African-American, and the ones you promote are usually white.

Why do you people tolerate Koo Koo? Do you consider him funny or witty? He's obviously pathological. Quarry family, are you proud to be associated with him? It seems to me if he had any integrity or courage, he would at least sign his real name.

As far as Jerry Quarry goes, he is not well-regarded in the black community, among those who remember him at all. People still consider him a redneck, a cracker and white trash. He had plenty of slurs for his black opponents, some even spoken in public. Roadschoalrette, you are pedantic and you bloviate. Maybe you're a nice woman, but you should know how you come off to people. Most of your explanations are obviously improvised and not convincing. You sound like the teacher's pet trying to win brownie points by gabbing. Anyway, you said the younger Cassius Clay did not face good opponents. How about Sonny Liston? Floyd Patterson was ranked near the top. So was Ernie Terrell. Many of his opponents then were. It may be true that some of them never put together an outstanding career, like Karl Mildenberger, but they were on the rise when he met them and considered promising. You are judging him selectively and I suspect with racism.

If you were objective, you would discuss him or anyone else dispassionately. Kentucky, why the word "stoppage"? Isn't "stop" a good enough word for you? It was used for many hundreds of years before someone started saying "stoppage". Who are the Dorseys? Family friends of the Quarrys? Have a great week, everybody.
regarded in the black community, among those who remember him at all. People still consider him a redneck, a cracker and white trash. He had plenty of slurs for his black opponents, some even spoken in public. Roadscholarette, you are pedantic and you bloviate. Maybe you're a nice woman, but you should know how you come off to people. Most of your explanations are obviously improvised and not convincing. You sound like the teacher's pet trying to win brownie points by gabbing. Anyway, you said the younger Cassius Clay did not face good opponents. How about Sonny Liston? Floyd Patterson was ranked near the top. So was Ernie Terrell. Many of his opponents then were. It may be true that some of them never put together an outstanding career, like Karl Mildenberger, but they were on the rise when he met them and considered promising. You are judging him selectively and I suspect with racism. If you were objective, you would discuss him or anyone else dispassionately. Kent, why the word "stoppage"? Isn't "stop" a good enough word for you? It was used for many hundreds of years before someone started saying "stoppage". Who are the Dorseys? Family friends of the Quarrys? Have a great week, everybody.

While watching some old fight tapes, I realised that the most amazing thing about Frazier's left hook was that it didn't need to be set up by another punch like a right cross. When he staggered Ali in round 11 of their first fight, it was a left to the body and then an immediate left hook to the head. In the 15th round he put Ali down with one left hook and there was no lead-up punch. His left hook was so powerful a weapon that it stood on its own and Frazier didn't need to get the opponent's head moving towards it by throwing a right cross. Same thing when he fought Bob Foster. It was a left to the body and a left hook to the head. (Even so, I still personally think that Frazier was otherwise overrated.) Ali didn't have a bad left hook either. That was a single left hook to Bonavena's head that put him down for the first time in round 15 (but the same punch wouldn't have put him down in round 1). Someone wrote something about racism on this site. Seems nonsense to me. Ali's always been my favourite fighter above anyone else and I have framed photos of him and his fights above my bar. Anything written about him by others on this site has mostly struck me as constructive criticism. I can't recall anything with a racist sting being written. For all we know, RS and Koo Koo might even be black. So what! And who cares? Maybe some of Koo Koo's comments can be misunderstood (or deliberately misconstrued), but to suggest that RS or Kent or anyone else here is racist is nonsense. Hey, Massimo - what colour are you? I think Antonio Tarver was robbed against Roy Jones. I have him 3 points ahead on my scorecards. I think a prime Lewis was better than a prime Vitali, but now Vitali is the best and should be champion. Paul-To be racist it needs to be very bad and very stupid at the same time. I'm sure nobody is racist on this site. I'm white.
who are you top three pound-for-pound. Mine are Ali, Sugar Ray Robinson, and Joe Louis. |

11/16/03 06:30:23 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com||||10|Thelma - I had a bit more time to stew over what you wrote. I don't know whether a young Jerry Quarry made the comments you refer to. I do know that there were things in my youth that I wish I'd never done or said. And I'm sure there were things in Muhammad Ali's youth that he regrets as well. For example, Malcolm X and the Black Muslims had views that were not very complimentary of white people and, by association, Ali tacitly endorsed them. I think it would be true to say that Ali's views today have moved on. Same thing with Jerry Quarry were he still alive. I truly think that your comments about what Jerry may or may not have said in his youth were very unfair. Same thing if someone were to use ancient history against Ali. I suppose in hindsight that your comments about Koo Koo are not ridiculous because, to use a KooKooism, he does not seem to be tightly wound. But I would be really disappointed if your criticism of RS and Kent was accurate - and I don't think it is. Anyway, Thelma, you seem to know boxing - who are you top three pound-for-pound. Mine are Ali, Sugar Ray Robinson, and Joe Louis. |

11/16/03 12:16:30 PM|Pete|Cleveland||pco@hotmail.com||||10|Joe Frazier was left handed and this is why his left hook was so powerful. I don't feel that Joe, was in any way over-rated. He was an outstanding fighter, in his prime. His only shortcoming may have been his style of boring straight ahead into his opponent (FOREMAN). Jones beat Tarver, but I think that it is time for Roy to hang it up or risk becoming one of those great fighters who stayed on too long. He says he wants TYSON and if he doesn't get him, he'll retire. I think these two outstanding fighters should both retire. |

11/16/03 01:04:27 PM|Massimo|Rome||4||||10|A match against Roy Jones would be a walk in the park for Mike Tyson. Jones is not powerful enough for Tyson and his style (and particularly that low left hand) would be tailor made for Tyson. Iron Mike would not need to train at all for that fight... Every top heavyweight would eat Roy Jones alive !! |

11/16/03 01:44:02 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Thelma, of course there is no racial agenda on my part as far as I am concerned. I was just commenting on how Ali's celebrity influenced people's perspective of him. If you had been coming here for any length of time, you would know I have always said Ali is the best I have ever seen. I have a lot of respect for Ali. He is a warrior in every sense of the word who showed and still shows a lot of heart and courage in and out of the ring.If it seems I am critical of black boxers more than I am white boxers it is because there are more black boxers than white boxers. I don't see the color of fighters. I just see boxers. I spend time with fighters as I am a part time boxing writer for another site and among the fighters I have never seen a hint of race having anything to do with boxing at all. There is a mutual respect for what they go through in the ring that boxers of all races share. It is usually the fans and at times the press as well, that make race an issue.Besides, how could race be an issue with me as I am considered to be of mixed race as I am white and Native American. I am a member of a prominent Southern California Indian tribe.As far as the term "stoppage" goes, it is not my term, it is a term used by people in the boxing world and it is quite common. |

11/16/03 01:51:02 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Being the height and build he was, Frazier was somewhat limited as to the style he would/could use. I think too that a fighter's style often reflects their attitude about the sport. Frazier obviously saw it as a war of attrition - "let's hit each other, and see who can last." He wasn't a pure take it all slugger though. I can think of no one who had a style as aggressive as his who got hit as little. No one could bob and weave like he did.Kent -Ali didn't have to make excuses (though he did, often). Viewers and sportswriters did it for him. They often reminded me of the little kid who has a bum for a dad who makes him sound like Captain America to compensate. "Oh, the champ's setting him up," or "he's going to the rope a dope," or "he didn't train hard enough," or the other guy got lucky. Never that his opponent might be better, or that Ali's skills were eroding, or that he was lazy, or that he was relying on the only thing he had left with any amount of consistency - the ability to take a punch. Didn't train hard enough? Does that mean he's stupid too (he wasn't)? A man is going into the ring, where he could literally be killed, and he hasn't trained hard? C'mon! :-)As egotistical as he could be, I think Ali in reality was an insecure man, and not wholly comfortable with winning. Hence, he often subconsciously crafted his own doom to a point. Of course he continued to win because (other than conscious or unconcious help from judges), he was better than most in career two, and better than all, by a country mile, in career one. Or maybe I should say that in career one, his opponets were worse, a subtle difference.|
the comments he may have made about individual fighters (maybe after a "couple" of beers?), which, if they were black, were also certainly racist in nature. It's sort of like even the slightest criticism of Israel being "antisemitic." For those who might be a bit slow on the draw, this is a sarcastic post. From now on, all are on their own, in terms of figuring this out.

| 11/16/03 05:01:06 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | R.R. I was not apologizing or justifying my position, I was presenting my position to Thelma. You are right, no apologies are needed when you know what is right is in you heart. It gets tiresome that any time one is critical of a black fighter, or sometimes any black person, even though race is not even mentioned, some political correct person will bring up the race issue. It is about time that people be judged by the content of their character and not by the color or their skin! I wonder who said that? That idea sounds vaguely familiar! Oh yes, Dr. M.L. King Jr. said that and he was right back in the 1960s and his idea is still right now! Jerry had many black friends in the boxing business. Among them, Ali, George Foreman, and Joe Frazier. These men and others know Jerry on the whole was a good hearted person.

| 11/16/03 06:42:10 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10 | MS Thelma Banks: I'm A friend of MIKE QUARRY and MOE(JAMES QUARRY) To answer your question. I grew up 30 miles from where Jerry Q. was born, and his father now lives,And I graduated a year ahead of Bobby Quarry, i'll bet you would have a lot of boxing knowledge available around Detroit, I came across a great one that featured Curtis "Hatchetman" Sheppard that was on the cyber boxing zone (CBZ) by Waill, I'd suggest anyone on the sight read that article, Your not related to Tyra Banks, are you? Take Care!

| 11/16/03 07:01:18 PM | kookoo | ny | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 | I KNEW IT, I KNEW IT, I KNEW IT!!! THATS ALL ANYBODYS GOT TO DO IS INJECT RACE IN TO EVERYTHING, NOW ALL THE WHITES ON HERE ARE GONNA FALL OVER THEMSELVES TO MAKE THIS LADY FEEL WELCOME, LETS SEE I'M WHITE TRASH, I'M A HONKEY, A CRACKER, MAYBE SPEAK TO BLUNTLY, BLAME ME MISS THING, BUT DON'T BlAME KENT, MR. DORESY OR THE QUARRY'S, THE NAME OF JERRY QUARRY WILL NEVER BE RELATED TO ANY KIND OF RACISIM, NOW GET BACK IN YOUR KITCHEN AND BAKE ME A PIE :)))))) KOO KOO!

| 11/16/03 07:09:12 PM | Massimo | Rome | 10 | RS= SThe surname Cheney sounds very similar to my own surname: Cini (pron. "cini", not "sini")

| 11/16/03 07:26:42 PM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, Ca | Sonia90101@aol.com | 10 | Ok here goes: Thelma, just to say people are people and are entitled to their thoughts, feelings, and opinions, its what makes the world go round. I have to say in all my years I have never heard my Uncle Jerry, say a prejudiced word, and if he did he must of had a good reason or he wouldn't of said it. And for what was said about Uncle Jerry, being white trash, thats a bunch of crap, we have same blood lines running through us, and I know damn well I'm no white trash. He was a very good person, loving, kind hearted, and willing to help anyone who needed it, and I knew him to be respectful of all people. So my feelings are, and I'm entitled are if you have nothing nice to say or write about him, you might not want to put it on this site. As for your questions about KookKoo, he does keep this site entertaining, and yes, he loves to give Kent, a hard time, but a bigger person can handle it and not let it get to him. I think Kent, handles it well. Sorry people, but it bothered me to have someone call Uncle Jerry, white trash. Well I hope you all keep checking out this website, and keep posting. You are very missed Dad(Mr.
Jimmy, for those of you regulars, Uncle Jerry, you are missed also, and will all still love you both. Take care all!

| 11/16/03 07:33:09 PM | koookoo|ny||koookoclock000@yahoo.com|10|You rock Sonya, that is the truth about Jerry Quarry, hey race always heats things up, now let's get back to boxing. I'd like to see more video posts with Jerry. Sonya you are so fine, i almost sound black :))))))))

| 11/16/03 07:36:51 PM | Richard Perry | Hemet, California | rjperryautos@hotmail.com|10|Sonia and Kent- Thanks for the kind comments, that exhibition you are right was real both were very real we did the best we could. Eric dropped me with a Quarry left hook in the third round in the first fight, even though I lost by decision the first fight. I was glad Jim was there to see it... and to tell you the truth I was looking forward to the rematch we had and well if you seen it... I did much better... I watch the tape several times... it is a treasure for me. Thanks to all..Richard Perry

| 11/16/03 07:44:41 PM | Koookoo | NY | koookooclock000@yahoo.com|10|Hey Richard that pretty cool man but, How many times do you have to tell us you fought a Quarry, I'll tell you like I tell everybody I'm the number 1 Quarry fan, nobody else is even close!! Now get back on your bike and go home, Yo Mama callin'. Koo Koo

| 11/16/03 07:57:07 PM | Richard Perry | Hemet, California | rjperryautos@hotmail.com|10|Sorry, Koookoo if I offended you... I don't remember that I spoke too much about my contact with a Quarry... Koookoo I don't know if you are kidding or not... Anybody who knows me; know what kind of fan I am... Sonia if you think I should get on my bike and go home, I will... or if Koookoo owns this site or speaks for the Quarry family let me know...? Richard Perry

| 11/16/03 08:11:10 PM | Pete | Cleveland | pco@hotmail.com|10|To all, what was Jerry's greatest fight?

| 11/16/03 08:27:25 PM | Koookoo | NY | koookooclock000@yahoo.com|10|Hey, take it easy Richard, your right I am kidding, no I don't run the site, just Kents Life:: Koookoo

| 11/16/03 08:40:37 PM | Richard Perry | Hemet, California | rjperryautos@hotmail.com|10|I was riding my my bike to my ma ma's house then when I turned on the computer and found Koookoo's nice response... (Just kidding). Kent is that true you have a guy from NY name Koookoo running your life? Richard Perry

| 11/16/03 08:46:16 PM | Koookoo | NY | koookooclock000@yahoo.com|10|Pete, I feel that I should answer your question, because I'm Quarry expert, he had 3 greatest fights. Mac Foster (who was much bigger, he was picked to lose) even I bet against him at the time and lost money) Ernie Shavers (the hardest hitter of all time) finally Ken Norton where he showed more guts that any human ever showed in the ring. (I remember watching that one live closed circuit) in the 5th rd after taking an unbelievable beating he still motions the referee to get out of the way so he can get back to the fight. The guy was just too brave. Koookoo Richard Perry

| 11/16/03 09:16:03 PM | Richard Perry | Hemet, California | rjperryautos@hotmail.com|10|Koookoo-sounds like you know your stuff... they probably were his best... other to consider... are Jerry's fight with that Spencer (Thad was bigger, stronger and had more experience and way ko by Jerry/// and he showed great boxing ability when shut out Ron Lyle... and his first fight with Frazier... he sure planted his feet and banged away... if he boxed it could have been different... I have a vacation home in Big Bear... that I keep all my boxing videos... Koookoo you sound like the kind of guy I could watch fights with and you could probably keep up with me..Richard Perry

| 11/16/03 09:39:26 PM | Koookoo | NY | koookooclock000@yahoo.com|10|You sound like good guy, well I've thought about it for the last 34yrs, Jerry's best chance against Frazier was to try and take him out early, I don't care what anybody says, he did not have the reach of all, he had to take a chance, he did us all very proud, yes I do what Jerry at least 4 or 5 times a week. Never gets old.
GUY WAS JUST TOO COOL. KOO KOO

11/16/03 09:43:42 PM| kookoo| NY || kookooclock000@yahoo.com ||||| 10 | KENT, YOU OWE ME ONE, I TOOK UP FOR YOU, WHY DID I DO THAT? MAYBE PEOPLE ARE RIGHT, I MUST BE KOO KOO?

11/16/03 10:43:55 PM| Kent Appel | La Habra, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com ||||| 10 | No, no one runs my life. I am not married so I don't have a boss trying to make me tow the straight and narrow.Yes, you fought well against Eric the second time and you had me worried in the third round at that point the last five fighters I had met and talked to, had lost their fights after meeting me. I had met Eric and there he was on the verge of losing. You split Eric's lip up badly and I thought the referee was going to stop the fight in the third round and give you the win. Eric hung on though and won a close decision that he had solidified with a knockdown of you in the second round, as memory serves me, it was a right hand this time. "My jinx was over!"

11/16/03 11:04:53 PM| kookoo | ny || kookooclock000@yahoo.com ||||| 10 | Kent, I must say your a good sport, except for that one time, but the koo koo clock forgives people, if you need any advice, let me know please. but be forwarned I WILL NOT GIVE UP MY POSITION AS THE NO. 1 QUARRY FAN, THE QUARRYS HAVE TAKEN A LIKING TO ME , WHOO! ANOTHER FEATHER IN THE HAT FOR ME! KOO KOO KOO KOO

11/16/03 11:04:53 PM| kookoo | ny || kookooclock000@yahoo.com ||||| 10 | Kent, I must say your a good sport, except for that one time, but the koo koo clock forgives people, if you need any advice, let me know please. but be forwarned I WILL NOT GIVE UP MY POSITION AS THE NO. 1 QUARRY FAN, THE QUARRYS HAVE TAKEN A LIKING TO ME , WHOO! ANOTHER FEATHER IN THE HAT FOR ME! KOO KOO KOO KOO

11/17/03 02:01:21 AM| Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA || Sonia90101@aol.com ||||| 10 | Hey Richard, no you don't need to get on your bike and go to your Mom's. You are welcome here just as anyone else is. KooKoo, is harmless, and he just keeps us entertained. I do want to say if people don't agree with what I said in my post to Thelma, but hey you can't come on this site and bash Uncle Jerry, and get no response, not in this lifetime. We need to keep this site good, so let's all get along, and keep on coming back to visit. Yes, Kent & Richard, the Exhibition fight between you Richard, & my brother Eric, was a good one, for me it was a trip to be in his corner with Aunt Brenda, its something I'll never forget, was also nervous, was a lot of people there and wanted to make my brother proud, and my family. Well lets all get along, and keep this site going, so people keep coming back, & posting. We all sure do miss you Dad, and Uncle Jerry, we know your watching over us. Probably laughing too.

11/17/03 03:39:43 PM| Pete | Cleveland || pc0@hotmail.com ||||| 10 | "TO THE #1 QUARRY FAN"
How did Jerry get involved with boxing, initially? Did his father box?

11/17/03 04:58:09 PM| kookoo | ny || kookooclock000@yahoo.com ||||| 10 | YES, FOR A SHORT TIME JACK QUARRY BOXED, BUT HE HAD A SKIN CONDITION AND HAD TO QUIT, HE CONVINCED JERRY THIS WAS THE ONLY WAY TO MAKE IT BIG, I WOULD SAY THAT JACK QUARRY WAS THE ONLY MAN JERRY EVER FEARED. NO. 1 QUARRY FAN, KOO KOO

11/17/03 05:30:01 PM| Roadscholarette | Chicago || roadscholarette@hotmail.com ||||| 10 | Massimo -
Say, Italy and Switzerland are about the only places we haven't been, save the Orient, which we have no interest in. I'd love to see Italy. I hear it's really expensive, like Japan. True?

11/17/03 06:23:52 PM| Massimo | Rome || 4 ||| 10 | RS-Maybe I'm not the right person to judge Italy because it's my country and I love my country very much but, anyway, I think Italy is very very beautiful: Rome, Venice, Florence, Pisa (where I was born) with the famous tower... All Italy is beautiful! And we can cook very well! For me it's hard to judge if Italy is expensive because last time I left my country was in 1991. My advice is: come to Italy, you'll have a good time! PS: my ET I have a doubt: what's right "where I was born" or "
where I'm born " ? PS2; ah, I forgot: Carnera was the greatest ! LOL ! | 11/18/03 12:29:51
AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Massimo - "Where I WAS born." Past tense, since it's already happened.I love Italian food, even crappy Italian food. The good stuff is a real treat, and the Chicago area has a lot of good Italian restaurants. I think Italy is a gorgeous country. I'm a big photographer and would probably take 50 rolls of film there! The motorcycles (thinking of Ducati) are very fast, but not real reliable.Have you ever seen Primo and Max Baer fight? They're up and down off the canvas like a professional wrestling match! <br| 11/18/03 05:04:34 AM|Massimo|Rome||4|10|RS-Ah interesting, I suspected that saying " where I was born meant that now I was dead. I have seen about five minutes of Carnera in the ring. This includes about 1 minute of Baer-Carnera (a synthesis). I think Baer showed a lot of sadism in that fight, because he could have won in 3 rounds and instead he decided to torture Carnera for 11 rounds. I have seen the entire Louis-Baer and Joe made him look an amateur. Max couldn't avoid one of Joe's left jabs. Probably Primo was better than Baer stylistically, but Max hit harder. | 11/18/03 10:42:45 AM|MUFFINMAN|ZANZIBAR||ZANZIB@R|||8|KOO KOO YOU ARE A LOSER - I KNOW WHO YOU ARE THE OTHER DO NOT. I SEE YOU EVERY DAY FOOL.WHO'S AFRAID? | 11/18/03 11:12:14 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Massimo - Yes, there are a number of stories out there about Baer's sadism. Because he presented himself publicly as a good time, smiley sort of a guy, that became his image. "Be merry today, for tomorrow you may die," was his signature statement. People are funny with public figures, particularly in sports and entertainment. Because (often ~only~ because) someone is a star of some sort, they have a sort of free pass card to do anything they want within seemingly endless limits, and have it excused, glossed over, have ridiculous excuses made for it, or have it ignored completely. It's sort of sad to watch people so empty themselves that they have to continue to lionize someone who's obviously a bum. | 11/18/03 07:41:28 PM|Jonny Q|New York||JohnQW@yahoo.com||||10|I don't agree that Baer was a cruel personality. I've read about Baer over the years, including Nat Fleischer's book, who wrote based on knowing Baer in person, rather than judging him from rumors. Fleischer, described Baer as a comedian and prankster during his career, and generous (as most fighters are) and charitable after his career was over. Was Baer hurtful at times to people around him? Probably. Name me a fighter/entertainer who hasn't been. Marciano rubbed shoulders with mod figures, Ali made openly racist statements and belittled Frazier for years, Foreman was a bully in and out of the ring in his early career. Tyson . . . well, his record speaks for itself. Baer didn't torture Carnera in their fight. I have the film too. At his best, Baer had a right a hard as Foreman, but when the action got wild, he missed most of his punches. Baer went all out after Carnera, who was much tougher than historians give him credit for. Carnera not only survived the early battering; he actually came back in the middle rounds and had Baer on the defensive several times. Throughout the entire fight, you can see Baer and Carnera insulting each other between the exchanges. When the fight was stopped, both fighters were exhausted and Carnera was still on his feet. I read that Baer and Carnera did an exhibition in the late 40s or early 50s. Baer was living the party life at the time, but Carnera was in shape and made a great showing. Afterwards Baer said, "I'm sure glad we're weren't fighting for the title tonight." 11/18/03 09:24:04 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com||||10|muffin man, there's nothing you can do to upset me, if i can fool kent, i can fool you, hey kent remember what that shoeshine man said we all walk hand in hand, kent knows what i mean ::))))))))))))))) | 11/18/03 10:58:11 PM|tim|upstate new Speaking of Max Baer: Didn't he have Lou Nova down in their 2nd fight? I remember seeing a film of both fights. I also remember Max against Two-Ton Tony Galento. That fight ended with Galento quitting in his corner. (Galento claimed he had broken his hand on “dat bum”. Good ol' Tony he always had an excuse for losing. He claimed the against Joe Louis that something got in his eyes. Louis suggested it “might have been my fists”! Anyone remember Baer's fights with Nova and Galento?

Jonny, interesting post! Was Carnera-Baer a good fight or just a brawl? Could Carnera boxe? Could he punch? And what about Baer? He surely could punch, but he looked very clumsy against Joe Louis! Thanks!

Tim & Massimo – The Baer-Carnera fight was a wild one, and Carnera did much better than he’s given credit for. He had a good jab and moved very well for someone so big. What Baer lacked in skill, he made up for in size and power. He could hit. Unfortunately he peaked only briefly 1933-35, but his KOs of Schmeling, Carnera and Schaefer were amazing victories. I’ve also seen his fights with Nova and Galento, and they were also great. Baer was unusual in that he really didn’t want the responsibility of being champion and basically gave the title away to Braddock. Baer just wanted the limelight and remained a leading contender until 1941. Louis was the only fighter who outclassed him. The Galento fight was his last great victory, and Baer lost on a cut in the first Nova fight and ran out of gas in the second after having Nova down.

Tim – It's been many years since I saw the second Baer-Nova fight. All I remember is that Baer went after Nova early and decked him, but could not finish him. Over the next few rounds, Baer punched himself out and Nova came back strong. Baer was down at least once at the end, but that’s all I remember. In their first fight, Baer had the edge, but suffered a severe cut inside his mouth and spent the last half of the fight coughing and spitting out blood, until the ref stopped it on the 11th. Baer never went down in that fight, and had Nova in trouble several times. Anyway, these were Baer’s last fights. Nova was also a tough fighter. I’d like to see his bout with Louis.

Baer-Galento was a classic brawl. If it was anyone else, the fight would not have lasted 3 rounds, but these were two very durable guys. Galento was quick, and tagged Baer often, but never really hurt him. Galento was trouble for Baer as Max had to punch down, which left Baer him open for counter hooks. Baer started throwing uppercuts about half way through the fight, which got to Galento, and almost had Galento down in the 7th with a crushing right to the body. You can see Galento go wobbly and hang on to Baer as the bell rang.

2 Ton Tony Galento.
He was a bit of a Jersey Folk Hero. A brawler, very crude and disliked by most of his opponents. His claim to fame was decking Joe Louis, early in their bout. He had knockout power and a lot of ring presence, but little else. He fought both Max and Buddy Baer, and was stopped by both of them. Would have done well in a tough man contest or brawl for all, had they existed back then.

What was Jerry's level of confidence entering the second Frazier fight? I know he was great in 73, but I think he got knocked down in the Alexander fight prior to his second fight with Frazier. He should have fought Frazier in 73.

Roadscholarette, would you please stop entering comments like this one:

Yes, there are a number of stories out there about Baer's sadism. Because he presented himself publicly as a good time, smiley sort of a guy, that became his image. "Be merry today, for tomorrow you may die," was his signature statement. People are funny with public figures, particularly in sports and entertainment. Because (often ~only~ because) someone is a star of some sort, they have a sort of free pass card to do anything they want within seemingly endless limits, and have it excused, glossed over, have ridiculous excuses made for it, or have it ignored completely. It's sort of sad to watch people so empty themselves that they have to continue to lionize someone who's obviously a bum.

You start out with rumor and hearsay and build another one of your ice cream castles in the air. I have worked in the movie industry for over 40 years and have known hundreds of famous people and celebrities, and very few of them match your description. Many of them are and were world famous athletes, and some boxers, too. The people who read this site are uneducated for the most part or credulous enough to believe Jerry Quarry was a fine gentleman and family man, as well as a great, great fighter who just happened to get creamed by Frazier, Ali, et al. These people believe all the silliness that comes out of your mouth, Roadscholarette. You probably dropped out of Chicago Circle as a sophomore when it got too hard. Will you please just shut up except for what you know for a fact or can document with footnotes? Thank you very much.

Those of you who actually think Koo Koo is funny probably licked paint flakes containing lead when they were children. He is a psychopath and one day will hurt someone, most likely himself. Take a Thorazine 100 MG, Koo Koo. Get away from me. Massimo, whatever happened to Carlo Perrone, "The Beast of Tuscany"? I saw him fight in Rome in 1937 and he was a sensation. About 6'4", a lean 215 or 220, a left jab like a mule kick, sneaky right. He was a kid then, about 19, had maybe 15 fights then. Did he die in the war? Nice site, everybody.
Baer in 20 rounds in one of the most exciting fights of the 30's. He was no chump!

11/20/03 06:55:22 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com|||10|Giancarlo - pull your head in. They're looking for wood.

11/20/03 08:18:45 AM|Fran|PA||plc7755@aol.com|||10|Charles, Jerry fought Frazier 2 in 74 june or july. Going into the fight I think he may have been favored or even. He was coming off a great year in 74 and the Alexander knockdown was considered a flash knockdown and written off. The plan I believe was to box move and counter Frazier and not go to war with him. Jerry boxed beautifully and showed his skills off but it seemed to me at the time he was burning alot of energy and not really hurting Frazier. I thought he'd beat Frazier fairly easily in that fight but the loss was devastating. That fight would have led to a fight with Foreman who was to win the title from Ali later in the year. The 2nd Frazier fight was the last shot for Jerry.

11/20/03 10:19:29 AM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia90101@aol.com|||10|Hey Giancarlo, if you are coming to this site just to bash my Uncle Jerry, maybe you should just stay away and visit another site. How dare you say people on this site don't know him, and he was a family man, and a very good person. Who the hell are you to say anything when you don't know him, and you never will. Give us all a break and don't come back. Sorry to the rest of you, but for this person to come on to bash him, me being me had to say something about it. Anyways the rest of you keep posting, and coming back|

11/20/03 10:35:01 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock00@yahoo.com|||10|THERE ARE SOME PEOPLE OUT THERE LIKE THIS MR. G THAT ARE UNINFORMED ABOUT JERRY, THEY THINK HE'S A BUM CAUSE HE LOST TO ALI/FRAZIER. YOU GOT TO LOOK AT THE WHOLE PICTURE KID, AS I'M SURE BY THE WAY YOU TALK , YOU ARE ONE, JERRY QUARRY PROVED HIMSELF AS A FIGHTER AND AS A MAN LONG AGO BEFORE YOU WERE EVEN SPERM, HE WILL ALWAYS BE REMEMBER, WERE YOU WON'T BE REMEMBER AS ANYTHING BUT ANOTHER BULLSH.. DETRACTOR, NOW GO GET YOUR SHINEBOX! KOO KOO KOO KOO |

11/20/03 10:51:01 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Fran -You bring up an interesting point when you mention your expectations from Frazier and Quarry in their second fight. The mystery of why different bodies react in different ways to the same things, or same sorts of things isn't really explainable. Medicine knows there're reasons held in the body's chemistry, but really don't have a clue what they are. I think both men in that fight looked way different - in opposite directions - than many thought they would.Jerry had just taken Lyle and Shavers the year before, while Frazier had been demolished by Foreman, then fought Ali in their second go 'round. Ali was given the decision, and it wasn't that exciting. It would have seemed that each was headed in a different direction than the fight showed. However, Jerry Quarry was just destroyed, yet Frazier still had Manilla in him. JQ had probably hit, then crossed his peak with the Lyle and Shavers fights, Frazier was inexplicably getting a second wind.Being a boxer is almost like being a dog in terms of how fast a person ages, so everything's speeded up. The plunge can come anytime. While Foreman's success was inspirational to Joe Couch Potato, it'll drive a lot of fighters to lie to themselves and think they can do it too.

11/20/03 11:57:42 AM|tim|new york||steinmec@optonline.net|||10|Memo to Giancarlo: a wise man (wiser than me and especially you) said "judge not, that thee be judged". Jerry Quarry was undoubtably a flawed man as are all of us (yes even you Giancarlo, maybe especially you). I will take the word of Sonia over you any day. You are wracked with bitterness. Look in the sky, take a walk in the sun, and try to enjoy life. On a lighter note, has anyone read about or seen any of the fights in the 30's and 40's? I did not know Buddy Baer fought Abe Simon. Who won? Also who won the fight between Lou Nova and Tami Mauriello? I know Galento and Nova fought with Galento KOing him in 14 but I heard both wound up in the hospital after. Also anyone know where I can get films of Jerry Quarry vs. Chuvalo, Frazier I, Patterson, Foster, Etc.? Thanks!

Giancarlo, you make a statement that we are fools who claim Jerry was a fine gentleman and a great fighter but you don't back up your statement with any information at all. Just because you say so, doesn't make it true! If Jerry made mistakes in his life, so be it. Nobody is perfect and on the whole, I believe he was a fine man. I met Jerry many years ago and he treated me with respect and I did the same to him. My impression of him is he was a fine gentleman. I have also met almost the entire Quarry family and I count some of their members as friends and they are fine people who you obviously know nothing about. They also defend their own so if you come here expecting to get nothing in return after you make a pointless statement, you have another thing coming. Secondly, Jerry Quarry was a three time number one contender who beat fourteen fighters who were at the time Jerry beat them were past, present, or future top ten heavyweight contenders, as well as defeating former heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson. Among the contenders he beat were, Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers, Mac Foster, Thad Spencer, Jack Bodell, Eduardo Corletti, Brian London, Larry Middleton, and Lorenzo Zanon. Most boxing experts agree that Jerry would have been a world champion if he hadn't been in the era that was the most competitive in the history of boxing. Jerry got creamed by Ali and Frazier? Not so! Yes, Jerry's second fights against both of these fighters were not competitive but both of the first fights were competitive. Round one of the first Frazier/Quarry fight was called one of the top 12 rounds of all time by ring magazine and most people say Jerry won that round and round two was just as exiting and Jerry carried the fight to Frazier in that round too. Yes Frazier slowly wore Jerry down in a war of attrition on the way to a seventh round TKO win over Jerry but Jerry very much held his own, he hardly got creamed! As Frazier how tough Jerry was and his answer will be, very tough! Joe knew he had to be at his very best to beat Jerry! The first Ali fight was also competitive as Jerry pressed the action for almost three rounds and he made Ali miss on occasion with his fine defensive head movements. He also kept Ali honest by landing some hard body shots. Jerry was cut badly near the end of the third round but a lot of people question whether or not Ali had the stamina after a long layoff to keep up the pace he was setting. So Jerry likely would have given Ali a lot more difficulty in the later rounds. Jerry, except for an ill fated fight at the age of 47, never lost to anyone who wasn't a boneyfide contender and of his eight losses in his original career, six of those losses were to past, present, or future world champions. Although Jerry had a tendency towards cutting, if you take away this factor, Jerry had a record of 53-4-4, with 33 KOs. Quite impressive if you ask me.

Buddy Baer beat Abe Simon in 3 rounds. Abe Simon began the fight very well and hurt Baer in the first round, but Buddy's superior power gained him the victory. Jerry Quarry also outclassed Buster Mathis in 1969. Buster was big, a great dancer, very fast and in top shape for that fight. That is very true about the directions Frazier and Jerry were heading going into the fight. Jerry didn't seem strong that night. He boxed and moved nice but seemed weak. It is very true about athletes peaking at certain times it seemed Jerry was at his best going into the fight. I don't know how he was feeling before the fight. I never saw Jerry get beat until that night. I mean the first Frazier fight he looked sensational then cut. Chuvalo fight was a joke he was taking Chuvallo to school. Then the new mandatory eight count (now its called "standing eight count". It wasn't even a knock down. Chuvalo stuck out a lame jab and Jerry had his feet crossed. Ali fight Jerry looked great and legendary in his refusal to accept the decision to stop. I mean who was that guy. What a man. And his wins were sensational underdog type come from behind fights of all time.....

What rock did that guy crawl out from to say some cheap negative stuff like that. He sounds like a real moron. I love the posts and talking about my favorite fighter of all time. As Jerry said that time "don't make me have to make a comeback" |

Mathis was a perfect example of the fast big man who revolutionized sports over the days when anyone huge was also a slow moving galoot. At one time, in football for example, the real behemoths were strong, but were also as slow as molasses, lumbering around like Frankenstein monsters carrying buckets of water. Their endurance wasn't that great either (still isn't today, compared to a boxer). A perfect example was the monstrous Dave Butz, a 300+ pound defensive tackle for the Washington Redskins who once recovered a fumble and started to run for the endzone, almost 85 yards away, but fell down after sprinting 50 yards, because his legs had turned to rubber and he was too exhausted to go any further. He joked later that he thought he was in a marathon! :-)Of course, even today, fast and strong that they might be, football linemen still carry a lot of fat for bulk. A 6'4" lineman will weigh at least 270, many much more, while a fighter at that height, if he were in top shape, would carry 220. The aerobic demands of boxing are just too much to carry a lot of extra blubber, while in football, a player is in actual action only 15 minutes out of an hour, and a play that lasts even 30 seconds is rare. A boxer won't carry the amount of muscle mass that a FB player does either.

The crossover, in terms of physical demands greatly favors the boxer. A fighter wouldn't be tired at all at the end of a FB game, while a bulky football player would probably be exhausted after just punching a bag for five rounds, and bags don't punch back (unless their name is Oscar Bonavena).|

Jerry Quarry going ballistic over the first Ali fight being stopped is a great moment. Many fighters would have been secretly thinking, "Whew, thank God," and would have been only pretendng if they acted like they wanted to continue. Ali must have thrown close to a couple of hundred punches in the first round, and looked great. Then he started missing, JQ began smiling inwardly (probably), realized what Ali had and didn't have, and began going to work. As I mentioned once before, Jose Torres (a huge Ali fan) felt Ali would have won, would have looked bad doing it (which he couldn't afford to do), but he also said he wouldn't have bet money on Ali winning. He said Ali should have fought a couple of bums, then maybe Quarry, Bonavena was good, then Frazier. Of course, this would have also removed the BS excuses Ali had for being beaten by Frazier. Going with Quarry was like advice Bundini gave to Ali when MA wanted Jeff Merritt for a sparring partner after his layoff. He said that he (Ali) should get in shape first - "It's hard for a hungry alligator to bite soft, champ!"Getting back to Quarry and storming around the ring when the fight was stopped, this is in a class with Frazier being asked if he was hurt in Manilla and replying, "I wouldn't say I was hurt, I just couldn't see the man."

Shaq is twice bigger than Mathis and he is very fast too ! I don't know if Calvin Lane is fast ? What do you think about ? Maybe we should investigate ! We should go to Dallas, we should offend him and then try to run away ! LOL!|
Per recent discussions, Max Baer vs Tony Galento & #124 Highlights
Roosevelt Stadium, NJ
July 2, 1940
Play Video-->
Max Baer vs Tony Galento & #124 Highlights
Roosevelt Stadium, NJ
July 2, 1940
Play Video-->

Surely Giancarlo has a right to his views—perhaps we should invite him to explain and back up his words:—

Ha, ha, sure, why not? I've been on the Internet for more than 10 years now, and I've found that it's always amusing to encourage knuckledragging Joe Bobs to post, for laughs! LOL!

Finally, everyone except that moron MR. G. AGREES WITH THE KOO KOO CLOCK, I'M SO PROUD OF MYSELF, THE CLOCKMAN RULES!!! TALK IS CHEAP, ANYBODY CAN SAY WHAT THEY WANT AGAINST JERRY, BUT JERRY PROVED HIMSELF LONG AGO. HEY MR. G ARE YOU OUT OF SHOESHINE POLISH YET? KOO KOO KOO KOO

At least he gave his name Koo Koo. I'll let you off though as you make me giggle! I think I have unearthed some fight footage of Jerry Quarry that has'nt been since it was first aired. I am unable to get in contact with the Quarry Foundation as my e-mails keep coming back undelivered. Can someone in charge please contact me? Would appreciate it. Evren

Yes, Giancarlo is entitled to his opinion, no matter if we agree with it or not. I hope he does respond to the information we provided and he just doesn't make a statement again without anything to back it up. It could be very possible that this man has only seen Jerry not at his best, in such bouts as Ali 2, Frazier 2, and the Norton fight, a fight in which Jerry was well past his best days in the ring. These are the only fights cable channels, such as ESPN, show of Jerry. Massimo is right, Jerry also completely dominated a well conditioned Buster Mathis. Mathis, who often weighed in more than 240 pounds at 6'5'' tall, came in at about 234 pounds for his fight with Jerry. Without looking up his record, Mathis only had three or four losses in his career. He lost to Frazier, Ali, Quarry, and if it was four, one other fighter. Mathis was a very good fighter who had a lot of boxing skills yet Jerry gave him a boxing lesson. Another thing, if Jerry wasn't one of the very best that the heavyweights had to offer at the time, than why did his opponents train so hard when they had to fight him?

KENT FOR GOD'S SAKE WHY ARE TAKING IT SO EASY ON THIS GUY MR. G. HE'S AN INSULT TO THIS SITE AS WELL AS AN INSULT TO ALL FIGHTERS, NO RESPECT THAT I SEE IN PEOPLE LIKE HIM, COME ON KENT, GET ON THIS GUY FOR REAL, LIKE YOU DID ME, REMEMBER? KOO KOO

Thanks to all of you who gave input on the fights during the Joe Louis era. Anyone out there know the result of the Lou Nova-Tami Mauriello fight? I am impressed with Max Baer's record. Seems he fought all the top contenders of his day and did well. I have seen his fight with Joe Louis and something was very wrong that night. Had Max seen Louis take apart Uzcudun? That sight would make any fighter nervous. Was the Purple Gang giving Max notice that he should not fight too hard against Louis? We'll never know but I wonder if anyone has thoughts on this.

Hello again, everyone. I accept all challenges, and I will be happy to fight every single one of you, if I am allowed to do it one at a time, figuratively speaking.
answered my arguments. He did establish that Jerry's career was better than I suggested, so I was wrong. The idea I was trying to get across, though, was that Jerry was obviously not great in the sense of Ali, Frazier, Foreman, Holmes or Tyson, and probably not great in respect to some of the others like Norton, although this last is debatable. Now besides Kent making that point, the rest of you restricted yourself to ad hominem, name calling and sarcasm. That gets you nowhere. In addition, I argue that at no time and at no moment did JQ seriously challenge Ali or Frazier. Where I come from, he got his ass kicked, he was pounded, and there was utterly no question about it. If he got some licks in, he still got creamed. First, as to my allegation that most of you are uneducated and in fact not especially intelligent, I ask you to examine your reasoning, or better, the trend of your claims. Few of you are logical or make intellectually valid points. For example, Roadscholarette implies that because she has been on the Internet for 10 years, she is knowledgable or informed. That's a non sequitur. Very few of you present evidence for your claims. We will get to that later, too. In addition, you use words incorrectly (e.g., "prime" meaning "at his prime"), and much of what you write is ungrammatical or syntactically incorrect, and often misspelled. Most of you are poor writers, and Roadscholarette in particular is verbose, pretentious, pedantic, logically incorrect, and excessively general. By her "ice cream castles in the air", what I meant is her proclivity for taking a factoid, commenting on it, linking it to a questionable idea, pronouncing that idea and her synthesis as factual, and then building more arguments on that. Let me know if you want examples.

Now, KoKo says I am an insult to all fighters. How is that? And he's not? If nothing else, he is needlessly hostile and contrary. That doesn't strike me as amusing or entertaining. That it does seem to amuse many of you is partial evidence of your coarseness and weakness in discernment. In other words, you're likely to laugh at drunks or mental patients tripping and hurting themselves.

Kent, I saw every one of Jerry Quarry's fights, beginning with his final string of KOs to win the Gloves. I saw these fights in person here in the LA area, or on Olympic Boxing TV programs, or on cable. What exactly is it you want me to "back up", Kent? I will be delighted to do so.

Now, as for Jerry being a gentleman, let me ask you all these questions. Please answer them clearly and in detail, including a yes or no.

1. Did JQ have a criminal arrest record? Was he ever arrested for DUI or narcotics charges?
2. Did he or did he not engage in over fifty (50) brawls resulting in injury to others?
3. Were the brawls cited in #3 or were they not in bars, outside bars, in casinos, outside casinos, and in similar places?
4. Did Jerry or did he not instigate these fights?
5. Did Jerry or did he not ever strike and injure women?
6. Were some of these women wives or fiancées or girlfriends, or were they not?
7. Did Jerry or did he not assault police officers at least twice?
8. Did Jerry cause damage to property by crashing his car(s) into it, or did he not?
9. Did Jerry threaten to harm other people, or did he not?
10. Did Jerry use words such as nigger, spade, coon, jig, kike, hebe, bean, and spic, or did he not?
11. Were some of these words he used in anger, or were they not?
12. Were some of these words used in anger, or were any of them?

Now, more specifically as to his character and background:

1. How far did he go in school?
2. Wasn't he a lousy student, frequently in trouble, often disciplined for fighting?
3. Wasn't he a womanizer?
4. Didn't he come from and usually stay in towns such as Bellflower, Paramount, Norwalk, Buena Park, Hawaiian Gardens and Stanton?
5. Are those towns known for high crime rates, poor educational levels, high numbers of bars and taverns and pawn shops, motorcycle gangs, and illegal activities such as narcotics sales, loansharking, strong arm robbery, shakedowns, crystal meth and angel dust production and sales?
6. Was Jerry or was he not a frequent companion of people engaged in these activities?

I submit all these allegations are true and challenge anyone to deny even one of them.

Finally we come to Roadscholarette.
Roadscholarette, I challenge you not only to debate on any subject but also to ask me anything, whether it has to do with sports, science, medicine, law, history, business, art, literature or any other subject. You imply you are an intelligent, knowledgable person, and I say that's a lie. You all have your assignments here. Good luck. | 11/20/03 11:38:34 PM|charles anderson|ark.|ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|did any of the guys ko'd in the finals ever make it to the pros?| 11/21/03 12:01:53 AM|steve |N.J.||drmsrm@comcast.net|||10|To the webmaster of this site. Thank you for the video posts! Their a great enhancement to this site. I didn't have any film of the Bear-Galento fight. Max Bear impressed me with his patient, mostly controlled handling of a non-conventional, but very lethal foe.

Hey Giancarlo and Thelma, your missing the point, my friends. This site is for people who are interested in the heavyweights of the late 60's, 70's, up until today. It's especially for people who enjoyed and admired Jerry Quarry's career. Naturally, true fans will show an interest in his personal life as well. He was, after all, a pretty flamboyant figure. I'm not on this site to judge Jerry Quarry. Only to learn as much as I can about this larger-than-life character. There is no record of him ever uttering a racial slur. Thelma, when you say he wasn't well regarded amongst blacks, I take that to mean that you feel you are the spokeswoman for all blacks. I won't apologize for being a fan of a white fighter. Let me ask you, are you a fan of country western music, or Michael Feinstein? As to Jerry being a rompin, stompin, irish street fighter, I just think that makes him all the more interesting. BASED ON THE POSTS FROM HIS FAMILY MEMBERS, he must have been a pretty loving family man. Hey Giancano, you would do well to remember old Joe Frazier quote. When asked to stage a fight sequence in a movie, Joe wasn't able to pull his punches enough to ensure the safety of the leading man. He was not used for the film. When asked about this, he said, "hey, I told them, when you step into the ring with me, this ain't Hollywood." Your bitter experiences in Hollywood do not qualify you to judge either Jerry Quarry or the people who post here. I enjoy all the sincere, intelligent posters, Kent, Bob B., Jimmy Dorsey, Rhoadschollarette, Fran, Max, and all the rest who take the exchange of information and pleasant observations seriously.|

11/21/03 12:15:59 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Steve -

I remember hearing once that Frazier was involved in something like this, but don't know the title of the movie or TV show. Do you happen to remember it? I'm sure every fighter has been in situations where fools challenge him. Probably most of the time, conflict can be avoided (for the good of the challenger). I can envision cases where this wouldn't be possible, however. Thank you for the kind words. Someone simply (brain) farted. We'll just raise the windows. It'll air out in due time. LOL!|

11/21/03 12:39:45 AM|steve |N. J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Giancarlo, whew, you seem pretty pissed off! Admittedly most of the posters here are just average fight fans. I enjoy this site because I loved that time of my life. You sound like you are probably well educated. That's something most of us cannot claim. Why the anger?? The beauty of this site is that I know that my posts and opinions won't be castigated for improper syntax or poor spelling. Can you provide some bibliography or any documentation to support your opinion of Jerry Quarry? Oh, by the way, Giancarlo, please don't start with the stupid physical threat nonsense, even masked as a challenge to debate! You stated you will fight anyone here, or debate anyone here. Everybody's a bad ass on an anonymous web site.|

11/21/03 01:30:40 AM|steve |N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Hey Fran, If you where a fighter in Philly in the seventies, I would love to hear some stories!! I was in the eighth row when Eugene "Cyclone" Hart and Denny Moyer went out of the ring together. That was at the Blue Horizon. I saw Emile Griffith, and Dick Tiger there. They where only middleweights, but their shoulders looked huge in their suits. Your correct, Cyclone Hart was never the same after that fight.

The saddest thing about you is that you probably don't even realise that you are an intellectual snob. You wrote, "My allegation that most of you are uneducated and in fact not especially intelligent." Not having had the opportunity to attain high education is a crime, is it? And you imply that people have a CHOICE about being intelligent or unintelligent. In fact, you mention it ad nauseum, ensuring than everyone on this site recognises you as the bigot you are. Further, the first utterance falling from that bloated overfed face of yours was that you are some Hollywood 'big shot' of 40 years standing. Wow, that answers it. Now we all know why you're so smart and grammatically correct. Guess we all should remember you from some Godfather film, eh? And, Giancarlo, to denigrate a dead man who never claimed to be anything other than a boxer, you raised accusations of arrest records, DUI, narcotics, womanising, brawls etc. You don't have to be a boxer to have sinned. In Hollywood you don't get an Oscar until you've sinned seriatum. Anyway, you're probably too busy to be thinking up any more insults about all us dumb folks. You and your Hollywood mindlikes are probably tied up consoling poor old Michael Jackson. Wacko might be a child molester, but at least he ain't makin' dumb ass grammatical errors like us uneducated dumbs on the Quarry site. In Australia, Giancarlo, intellectual snobs and 'big noters' and bigots who talk ill of the dead in front of the dead person's family are fed to the crocodiles.

Is not your critical post about the grammatical errors and education level of some of our posters in itself an ad hominem non argument? Content can often still come through even when structure is not accurate. Attacking ones' education level proves nothing but your own arrogance. Also, your view that Jerry got creamed in several of his key fights is subjective as well as I can say he didn't get creamed (my subjective feeling) and we can go back and forth all day long and not prove anything. At least you did acknowledge that Jerry was better than you alluded to in your post but I am not sure how you could think otherwise if you have seen all of Jerry's fights. Yes Jerry was a class below Ali, Foreman, Frazier, and Holmes, but he was ranked as the twenty-seventh best heavyweight of all time in Ring magazine's list of the top fifty heavyweights ever and that goes a long way to show Jerry was a great fighter. Hey Paul, Mike Quarry, who once lived and trained in Florida, once told me they fed intellectual snobs to the alligators in Florida. I wonder which animal could eat a snob faster, crocodiles or alligators?No, Mike really didn't say this but maybe his buddy Max Hord would know the answer. What do you think Max?I got to admit, Giancarlo has a lot of foritude to come back here when he isn't the most popular person on the block. As I said, he is still entitled to his opinion.After all, as Mr. Jimmy (James Quarry) said regarding people booing Jerry and Mike at their fights and people coming here and badmouthing Jerry and/or other Quarry family members, "if they bought a ticket, let them boo." He compared someone buying a computer and using the Internet to buying a ticket.| 11/21/03 03:09:01 AM| steve | N.J. | drmsrm@comcast.net |10 | Giancarlo, boy, did you stir up a hornets nest! You've even gotten Kent pissed off! Could you explain to me what the phrase, "logically incorrect", and also "excessively general", mean? Are these just oxy morons, or excessively verbose? As to the brilliant sentence, "BY HER, "ice cream castles in the sky", what I meant is her proclivity for taking a factoid, blah, blah, blah. Did you ever hear the term, run on sentence? It's not only awkward, it doesn't make any sense. I have a feeble associates degree. Maybe, compared to you, that is undereducated. I must say, your the first to tell me that I'm of less than average intelligence. However, having vented my spleen, please keep posting here. Your almost as amusing as Koo Koo Clock. |
| 11/21/03 03:38:35 AM| steve | N.J. | dmmsrm@comcast.net |10 | Giancarlo, I hope you won't persist in your animosity towards us poor, illiterate, feeble minded posters on this site. If you do dare to challenge our accumulated wisdom, then I'm afraid I'll have to have Kent, who is a big, nasty guy, with a rotten personality, or Max Hord, who was a prof. fighter, to hunt you down and beat you up. Just kidding, except for Kent's nasty personality.
| 11/21/03 04:43:44 AM| Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com |10 | Steve, me nasty personality? Hey, I'm cool! I am not pissed off, I just wonder why this guy as such a grudge against Jerry. I also wonder if he has bad things to say about my hometown, La Habra, after all, it is in the same general area as Norwalk and Buena Park. Bellflower and Stanton also are not too far away either. |
| 11/21/03 05:42:20 AM| Giancarlo Ciampitti | Toluca Lake, CA | gecital174@hotmail.com |8 | Charles, that's a good question about the guys JQ KOs in the Gloves. I don't remember who they were. Just possibly one may have been Joey Orbillo, who did have a good pro career and lost a fight to Jerry. Man, the intended insults are coming fast and furious. Hardly anyone has responded to my questions. If you read where I offered to fight everybody, I added "figuratively speaking". What I obviously meant is that I will take all of you on in discussion, debate or point counter point.
| Kent, I'm very sorry you asked me about La Habra, because now I owe you an answer. I consider most of it a pit. Flat, ugly ticky-tack houses and crummy shopping areas, neighborhoods where folks park their cars on their shabby yellow lawns. La Habra Heights is nice, though. OK? You asked. I also noticed many of you have constructed my biography. This is a perfect example of bad logic or none at all. I said I worked in the film industry, but you don't know whether as a chauffeur, clerk, producer, writer, actor or janitor. You know nothing about me and that's as it should be here, where most of us know nothing about everyone else. What is bad logic or good logic? Do I have to explain? Well, if one of your premises is incorrect, then the logic is bad. Or if you proceed incorrectly on your premises. If you say JQ had fast hands and therefore might have beaten So and So, you're using a non sequitur.Showing off? Intellectual snob? Angry? No evidence. No way of you knowing. If most of you folks try to earn a living, balance your checkbooks, listen to your doctors and try to understand, follow street signs to get somewhere, and all that, then you seem to be in a lot of trouble. Grammar, syntax, spelling, punctuation and all that are indeed extremely important. They are the basis of written communication, which is the basis of civilization. If you're sloppy with them, you are likely to be sloppy with other important things in your life. If you don't care about those matters, you are neglecting something important. It's like not brushing your teeth, or not changing the oil in your car. Sooner or later the results are going to kick your ass -- you will have a lousy job or be unemployed, you will elect a moron to be president, you will lose all your money and wealth, you will get physically sick unnecessarily, etc. What I don't like about this site is that it glorifies Jerry Quarry as a person, as a man. He was a terrific fighter, maybe even great, but as a person he was a meathead, a cracker, a redneck, a stupid Irish bully. He hurt people, sometimes badly, he broke the law, he showed off and threatened to kick people's asses, he associated with scum and he had a nasty cruel mean streak. There is no excuse for racism. Didn't you people learn anything from Mark Fuhrmann's testimony in the OJ trial? He claimed he never used the word nigger, and then I think he changed the story to admit using it humorously. People like Jerry Quarry and his family sit around telling nigger stories, talking about whose asses they have kicked and whose ass they plan to kick, who they're diddling and whose got big tits at their sleazy beer bar in Artesia, and which beans to look out for if you go down there. They are scum and dangerous. A lot of them end up skinheads or at Pelican Bay or both. Now if anyone wants to dispute or discuss my allegations, I'll be back. Otherwise, reading what some of you write and trying to imagine what you're like turns my stomach. You have had your turns supporting disgusting TV shows, strip malls, use of drugs, your kids start the fights in school, you vote against school bonds, creating a nation of obese pigs from the fast food that's all you eat, you drive drunk or stoned, you have babies when you're 14, and you keep this country from going anywhere good. That's what Jerry Quarry the person and his ilk mean to me. Brutal, drunken, wife-beating Irish white trash. A pretty good fighter, though. | 11/21/03 06:37:42 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|I THINK I KNOW WHO YOU ARE AND IT'S NOT AN ITALIAN, AS YOUR NAME SEEMS TO BE, I THINK YOU ARE THE INFAMOUS DKS, BACK FROM THE PITS OF RACIST HELL, IF JERRY QUARRY KICKED SOMEBODY'S ASS THEY HAD IT COMING, HE'S NOT THE TYPE THAT STARTED FIGHTS, BEATING HIS WIVES, THIS IS THE FIRST I EVER HEARD OF THAT AND I'VE BEEN FOLLOWING THIS MAN'S CAREER FOR OVER 35 YRS. TALKING SHI.. THATS WHAT YOU'RE DOING, AS FAR AS THE DWI, I USED TO DO SOME DRUNK DRIVING MYSELF, DOES THAT MEAN I'M TRASH. G MAN YOU'LL NEVER IN YOUR LIFE BE ANYTHING EVEN CLOSE TO THE MAN JERRY QUARRY WAS, PEOPLE LIKE YOU HAVE NO RESPECT FOR ANYTHING OR ANYBODY, I SEE YOUR COMMENTS AS RACIST IN NATURE, IRISH WHITE TRASH ETC.. WHAT YOU SAID ON HERE YOU WOULD DARE SAY TO JERRY IF HE WERE HERE, CAUSE HE'D KICK YOUR COLLEGE BOY ASS. NOW GET YOUR SHINE RAG OUT AND GIVE ONE OF THEM SPIT SHINES LIKE I KNOW YOU CAN DO;) ) ) ) ) ) ) ) ) ) | 11/21/03 06:54:44 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|THESE ARE JUST SOME OF THE TYPE OF CHALLENGES JERRY QUARRY WENT THROUGH BEING A WHITE FIGHTER IN A WHAT IS MOSTLY A BLACK SPORT, WHEN YOU LAY IT ON THE LINE LIKE JERRY DID, NOBODY SHOULD TALK SHI.. ABOUT YOU , BUT SOME PEOPLE JUST CAN'T GET OVER COLOR, THE SLAVERY THING, ON AND ON IT GOES AIN'T THAT RIGHT DKS??| 11/21/03 06:55:17 AM|Evren|London||@|||10|Giancarlo. I am quite pleased to have your here on the site. We do need subjectiveness in life and your comments offer a wider spectrum of views. Well done. Have you ever been in the boxing business? Have you met any old time fighters that you can give us views on? I would be interested in hearing your stories. In regards to Jerry Quarry's character assassination - I personally like to keep out of a fighters 'out of the ring' exploits and keep to their ring achievements. Jerry was a very good fighter but unfortunately wasn't a match for the very elite. He was a brave, tough and at times clever fighter. I bid you all well. | 11/21/03 07:04:18 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com|||10|Like a dog returning to its vomit, we all knew that Giancarlo would come back. We have him pegged by now. Kent challenged Giancarlo to produce evidence that JQ was a racist, but he ignored the dare and didn't answer it. He didn't even address the fact that his scribblings have shown him to be a bigot. Ridiculing the unintelligent is every bit as bad as laughing at a one-legged person who can't jump or a dyslectic child who can't read or someone who hates another because of race. The thing with people like Giancarlo who considers himself intellectual elite (and most of the 'elites' are from academia or the arts, etc) is that they MUST have an under class. They need it to feel good. So they claim everyone is uneducated and stupid and they poke fun at us and guys like JQ. Guys like Giancarlo never played sports at school. They were the chubby ones with bad skin out the back buying the teacher an apple (or worse). Guys like Giancarlo didn't exercise to be better at sport; no, they preferred the non-contact stuff to try and look better when trying their mother's panties on. And guys like Giancarlo don't like red-blooded men like JQ who got in a few manly brawls and maybe did a bit of womanizing. No, guys like Giancarlo, like boyizing. They reckon it's tougher to attend anti-everything demonstrations and throw marbles under the hoofs of police horses and pour cups of urine down the backs of police when they weren't looking. Guys like Giancarlo don't like web sites like these because it gives others the chance to be heard. Academics and artistics snobs and all these bald, fat guys with pony tails (I got that right, didn't I Giancarlo ?) think they are the only ones who should be heard. So they hate free speech and if someone from the perceived underclass says anything then guys like Giancarlo stomp on them by ridiculing their education and grammer. Only the intellectual snobs have the right to say anything. But the reality is that web sites like these should be the best friend of guys like Giancarlo. After all, he wouldn't dare say what he has said if the object of his ridicule - say me or Koo Koo - was eyeballing him in a dark alley. No, Siree ! Our pony-tailed 'friend' would be shimmering Koo Koo's shoes before baking him a pie. Guys like Giancarlo were the ones who put lead in the paint so that it made babies sick when they licked it. You see, guys like Giancarlo are so intellectually insecure that they can't have a racionale debate without satirising the person with an opposite view as some dumb, uneducated, illiterate. We saw that when he made RS the focus of his early attacks. Why did he pick on RS ? Because he saw her as his biggest threat. And why did he pick on Koo Koo ? Because Giancarlo is incapable of laughing; scorn and ridicule is the only emotion he trusts. Giancarlo hates himself so much that he even goes to the depths of attacking a dead man on a site so generously set up by his relatives. Thanks Giancarlo for reinforcing to all of us why this site is so special. And your assignment today is to keep coming back ...... prove to us that a souffle can rise more than once. | 11/21/03 08:03:56 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com||10|Evren - I can't believe that you are encouraging Giancarlo. You really want to hear more of his "subjectiveness" and "wider spectrum of views". His "subjectiveness" and "wider spectrum of views" is that the (dead) host of this site was a drunk, a druggie, a womaniser, a racist, etc, etc. How subjective is that ? Gees, I would really want to be in the trenches with you. I suppose we should have known. You were the one who got on this site a week ago criticising President Bush's grammer. Who the hell are you to do that from London. I suppose you were at the London protests today ? Maybe you and Giancarlo are one of the same. Anyways - RS and Koo Koo and Massimo, you keep me thinking and laughing. Keep it up. Come over to Australia some day and I'll show you around. You'll have the best time of your life. Same for Kent, Fran, Max, Sonia Quarry-Porter-Koo Koo, and everyone else EXCEPT Giancarlo and Evren. I got a crocodile waiting for you too !) | 11/21/03 08:12:39 AM|Massimo|Rome||4||||10|Tim<-br>Tami Mauriello KOed Lou Nova twice ( KO 6, KO 1). I have read this on boxing record archive.Giancarlo<-br>Don't attack Roadscharlarte,please ! She is so kind and smart !I think she can write very well and I chose her asmy English teacher. Even saying that KooKoo is crazy and that one day he will hurt somebody is logically incorrect. We don't know him deeply and we can't judge him. For what I know about him, he may (or might, RS?) be the nicest guy in the world.

You know no body in this world is perfect, and never want to be. But for Giancarlo, to say Uncle Jerry was a racist, I don't recall any of that but like someone said if he said anything racist he had a damn good reason, and for hitting his wife, not thats a bunch of crap, and street fights if this ever happened its not like he went out lockin for it, he was never one to go out and start a fight but if someone attacked him, then he finished it. We people on this site are not stupid, or anything like that. So if you feel the way you do then why in the hell are you visiting on this site. In my 40 years of life I have never heard anyone spew all the crap you have, and its pretty damn sad. So please find another site to bash and leave this one alone. Thank You! Sorry to the regulars if you don't agree with what I've said, but for someone to come on here and bash my family, especially when they are no longer alive to give them hell for it, just pisses me off.

Well Said Sonia. This is a great site I love it and the people who post make my day. Now for this Chump. What he has done is piss us all off and brought us all ready to find him and feed him to the crocodiles. In other words he has bought out the best of us. He is a guy who resented what The great Jerry Quarry stood for. He was white and could fight with the best of them. He was arguably the best white heavyweight of all time. He was a great athlete. Good lookin an idol to many including myself. He was quited by a liberal press who didn't want to appear racist by hping a great white fighter. He never got credit for the hard work he put in. Now he is and this guy doesn't like it. Well I wouldn't even comment on him anymore.

I am so proud of the way everyone has jumped on this jealous hate filled piece of S__t.

Fran -Sadly, the media isn't about us and reporting things that happen with some attempt at truth and objectivity. The news and people in it are about ~them~ and enhancing their own positions via dramatic reportage and fleeting association and idolization of those who have made it to the top of any given field - in that sense, a black and white world (speaking non-racially). To many in the media, a person is either a star or a bum, and even the stars are dropped like hot potatoes when they're no longer useful. Fortunately, most people don't live their lives this way.

Not realizing this, and being unable to handle the change when they retired, there have been athletes who have turned to the bottle, even suicide because of it.

Dear Paul. I never said that I agreed to what this Giancarlo has written but it is interesting to get different views from different people. I do not appreciate your comments at all. I also think they were uncalled for. My quote from George Bush was nothing to do with his 'grammer'. If I had the opportunity to protest I would have but again that is my personal feelings. You have NO IDEA what I go through because I am a Muslim. I am a decent person who listens to ALL views Good, Bad and Ugly. I'm very sorry you have been so aggressive but I guess that is your nature.

Everyone knows Jerry Quarry was a superb fighter, and always one landed punch, or careless opponent away from the title. Other factors entered in, of course, not to mention the best crop of heavyweights in the history of the sport, past or present. Actually Jerry wasn't the only championship caliber contender then, but I'm talking about him. OK, let's set aside the time in which he fought, take the old, "Quarry could have been champion in another era," and run with it. Let me list champions he would have been challenged by, with the assumption he'd have taken the others, some in a rout. We'll also assume all from the past would have fought as modern fighters do, and that Jerry didn't cut. Johnson - very tricky, fast. Could be lazy though, with a tendency to not try as hard when he was beating someone, or was being beat. Edge to J.Jeffries - hit like a mule, superb athlete, possibly the strongest heavy ever, chin like Jerry's, but slower. Tossup. Edge to J if he countered edge to Jeff if it became a slugfest.Dempsey - same thing. Dempsey was explosive, hard hitting, had good footwork, and was fast. Had trouble with movers and counterpunchers. Whomever made the first mistake.Tunney - a real cutie, but a suspect chin. Edge to J, but Jerry would have to fight him like he did Frazier.Baer - stay away from the right hand, and crowd Max. Baer was a bully, and would have wilted under an attack from someone unafraid of him.Louis - possibly the most technically complete boxer, and a killer finisher. He almost had it all. His chin wasn't as good as J's, and he had trouble with speedballs. Stay away, dance, counter, stand a chance. Fight Louis's fight, pay the price.Marciano - see Frazier. Tough one. Could JQ have ~not~ slugged to see who was tougher?Liston - move, counter. He had a tendency to be spooked by "crazy" people, and those not afraid of him, much like Tyson.Tyson - see Liston.Whataya think!? This same sort of thing, with changes for style could be written about other good men who didn't win the title, just as it is constantly about those who did, in fantasy matchups with one another. Things can happen and change very fast in the ring, sometimes against all armchair logic.

---

| 11/21/03 12:36:03 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

So Giancarlo, you have been with the Quarrys when they were sitting around tossing racial insults and bragging about kicking everyone's ass and planning who their next victims will be? Again, you show no proof. >I have heard stories about Jerry's street fights and brushes with the law but I have never heard about Jerry, in general, going around starting trouble. >Now as far as the other Quarry brothers, Mike is a fine respectful gentleman who as far as I know, has not had brushes with the law. Bobby, if he had some run ins in the past with the law, is now a family man working a regular job and taking care of his family. Bobby also treats people with respect. While Jimmy was a bank loan officer for "christ sake!" Jimmy was a fine respectful gentleman as well. Yet you paint them all as a bunch of blood thirsty goons waiting to prey on their next victim. >What is bad logic? When someone makes a statement with no proof to back it up and Giancarlo does that a lot, contrary to his self perceived sense of logic. >Now I know he is snob. La Habra is primarily a residential community where all races live and get along. There are problems of course, as nothing is perfect, but for the most part people live, go to work, and take care of their families. >Surprisingly, at least to Giancarlo, the people in the so called nicer area, La Habra Heights and the "trailer park trash," at least according to Giancarlo, in the La Habra valley, also don't have a problem with each other. Those of us who have lived most of their lives in La Habra and La Habra Heights went to school together and got along fine. >Besides, La Habra Heights is where most of the best parties were and there is nothing wrong with a good party if not overdone. >Paul, I HOPe YOU CAN CUT EvREN SOME SLACK AS HE IS A GOOD GUY. IT IS OK TO HAVE DifferING VIEWPOINTS AND NOBODY SHOULD BE AFRAID TO PRESENT ONE, EvEN WHEN ONE Is WRONG, LIKE GIANCARLO IS. I THINK EvREN WAS JUST ENCOURAGING DifferING OPINIONS AND THE FREE FLOW OF DIALOG, NOT AGREEING WITH GIANCARLO. | 11/21/03 01:00:09 PM | Kookoo | NY | Kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 |
IT'S ALL 100% BULLSH.. EAT ME COLLEGE BOY!!! KOO KOO KOO KOO | 11/21/03 02:43:42 PM|Fran|PA||pic77558@aol.com|||9|KooKoo I'm with you 300% on that. Nothing I wouldn't do to defend Jerry. That was very interesting however The old time fighters didn't face the black athelete as much as Jerry did because he came up in an era completely dominated by not good but great Black fighters and it is for that reason I think his level of competition that he fought and overcame was more impressive that that of some of the old timers and because of that I feel his place in history was higher than some of the previous champs. You have some great insights and you write some great posts. Steve, Do you remember Uper Darby PAL at 69th street, that has been my home for 32 years now and I still go there. Great place to "grow up". I only had a handful of pro fights. 4-1. Great people life long friends. | 11/21/03 03:17:49 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com||||10|HELLO SONYA, I'D LIKE TO KNOW IF JERRY'S FATHER AND MOTHER ARE STILL WITH US? | 11/21/03 04:10:03 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Fran -It seems that lots of people, the ordinary person on the street, the casual situational fan, and the boxing enthusiast alike, have the tendency sometimes to go to extremes with fighters. They can build up a current one excessively, and sometimes with ones of the past either make them into invincible gods or into near palookas (compared to whomever is champion at the time).Running the risk of doing this, but I don't think I am, I see the 70s as being top tier, with all other fighters, even the best of other eras, having to pass muster in comparison. Some could have with flying colors. Most could not have.However, as I said, not being able to take Frazier, Ali, or Foreman doesn't make a fighter a bum. A notch on Joe Frazier's gun can still be a rout with anyone else. I'm sure some guys on the street who challenged Jerry, or even way down to Terry Daniels or Ron Stander, or Jean Pierre Coopman, etc. thought, "Well, Frazier and Ali handled them, they aren't that hot." Tragic failure of perspective.I remember once when a niece and a nephew stayed over for the weekend, my nephew was hitting the bag with my husband, and said, "Wow, I'll bet you could beat Mike Tyson!" My husband really goes at the bag and looks impressive, but he had to laugh about that later. I did notice a certain swagger in his step the rest of the day though! LOL!LET'S FORGET THIS GUY, (MR. G.) I WON'T RESPOND TO HIM. NOW KENT I'VE BACKED YOU UP ON HERE ON SOME THINGS, I THINK IT TIME TO BURY THE HATCHET, WHAT DO YOU SAY KENT, OUR WE FRIENDS OR ARE YOU GOING TO SHUN ME AGAIN? KOO KOO| 11/21/03 04:51:14 PM|Kent Why do we need differing viewpoints on this site about Jerry. He never got his due then, but he is getting it now. the only problem I got with Evren is that he thinks it "subjectiveness in life" and "offering a wider spectrum in views" when the intellectual snob Giancarlo calls the dead host of this site awful names and then refers to the rest of us as uneducated and unintelligent illiterates. Those comments began the name calling and Evren implies that we should accept it as a "wide spectrum of views". But, while we are supposed to calmly accept being called names, Evren didn't like it when he gets criticised. I don't give a damn if you don't like what I said Evren. Also, Evren, I couldn't care less that you are a Muslim who doesn't like President Bush. What's that got to do with this site ? Out of nowhere you came on this site, bagged President Bush for something he said, and when you got criticised, you say something about you being a Muslim. Nobody cares, Evren. Why the hell would you bring that up ? It's none of our business. Go pray somewhere else. | 11/21/03 05:02:01 PM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlM1s4@aol.com||||10|Kent - the dead host of this site awful names and then refers to the rest of us as uneducated and unintelligent illiterates. Those comments began the name calling and Evren implies that we should accept it as a "wide spectrum of views". But, while we are supposed to calmly accept being called names, Evren didn't like it when he gets criticised. I don't give a damn if you don't like what I said Evren. Also, Evren, I couldn't care less that you are a Muslim who doesn't like President Bush. What's that got to do with this site ? Out of nowhere you came on this site, bagged President Bush for something he said, and when you got criticised, you say something about you being a Muslim. Nobody cares, Evren. Why the hell would you bring that up ? It's none of our business. Go pray somewhere else. | 11/21/03 05:28:43 PM|Kookoo|ny||KooKooClock000@yahoo.com||||10|I USED TO WORK AT A HOTEL , I'D SEE MUSLIMS PRAYING AT DIFFERENT LOCATIONS IN THE BUILDING, LIKE INSIDE BATHROOMS, OUTSIDE NEAR THE CAB LANES, I WANTED TO KICK THE SHI...
OUT OF THEM, I VIEW THEM AS A THREAT TO THIS COUNTRY, I KNOW THAT I SEEM EXTREME, BUT IT'S GOING TO TAKE EXTREME IF WE ARE TO SURVIVE AS A COUNTRY, WE ARE BEING INFILTRATED BY HUMAN WASTE. KOO KOO|

|11/21/03 05:41:24 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|Paul. If that is your view then that is your view. I accept that. Please do not say that I have just 'turned up on this site'. I have been posting here for over three years. You are incorrect. Kent : - do you have an e-mail contact at the Quarry Foundation - in reference to what I e-mailed you I have some 'unseen' footage on Jerry and would like to discuss with the powers that be on this site on how we can obtain it. Thanks in advance. |

|11/21/03 05:49:16 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|Also I read an article recently from Boxing Illustrated from May/June 1995 titled 'The Sad Saga of Jerry Quarry'. A poem was quoted of Jerrys - 'I look at my past, great memories abound/For I fought, I bled and I cried I gave it my all round after round/and the world knows that I tried'. It also quoted his amateur boxing record which I am sure all you Quarry stat keepers know but for those who do not it was - 170-13-54. That seems a strange record (in the amount of draws) but that is what is listed. Another quote later in the article. Jerry Quarry "Boxing is a very cruel sport and getting in the ring is not an easy thing to do. But the situation after you retire is hellacious" When asked whether he had regrets in light of his condition he replied "No, It's a part of life. Life's just a steady climb to the bottom".Evren|

|11/21/03 05:51:50 PM|SABRINA QUARRY-PORTER|Florida||sabrinalporter@aol.com|||10|Hey KOOKOO if you're the #1 Jerry Quarry fan, do you have the "Irish" Jerry Quarry No. 1 fan button? |

|11/21/03 06:12:07 PM|Sabra|Florida||sabrinalporter@aol.com|||10|GIANCARLO YOU'RE AN ASSHOLE!!!!!!GO CRAWL BACK UNDER YOUR ROCK....|

|11/21/03 06:17:08 PM|Kent |La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Fran, Mr. Jimmy, the CO founder of the Jerry Quarry Foundation along with Jerry himself, liked to have all viewpoints expressed. He knew, in the end the truth about his brother would outshine any attacks sent his way. Like Mr. Jimmy said, "if they buy a ticket, let them boo." I think he likely would have said, "who cares what this guy says?" Of course, his family members would know better than I do but Sonia and Sabrina, isn't that about how your dad would have handled this situation?|

|11/21/03 06:24:44 PM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia90101@aol.com||||10|Hey KooKoo, Our Father's Parents are still alive. Hey Sabrina, sister dear, I have the Jerry Quarry #1 Fan Button, its way cool. Love ya! Keep checkin out the site people, and lets keep the stuff all good. Dad & Uncle Jerry, you are loved & surely missed every day of our lives!|

|11/21/03 06:26:29 PM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia90101@aol.com||||10|Yes, Kent, Dad, would have said let them speak they are entitled, but I also think if he was alive these people wouldn't be saying the crap they are. Thanks Kent, for backing us up.|

|11/21/03 06:39:37 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Koo Koo, every time I am nice to you in my posts, you start attacking me again. It is like you think kindness is a weakness.I do wish you would not come down on Muslim people the way you do though because most Muslims are not the enemy. In fact, there were Muslims killed who worked in the Twin Towers on "911." There are many different sects and factions within the Muslim world and some of the radical terrorist types hate those other Muslims as much as they hate us. I hope you treat Evren fairly as he is a decent fellow and just because he said he is a Muslim and I am not sure why he said this, but he is very much a part of this board as we all are and I guess, even you are.PAUL MADUROS IS THE NUMBER ONE JERRY QUARRY FAN THOUGH! COME BACK SOON PAUL. HEY, I COULDN'T RESIST THAT ONE! |
Kent I will explain why I mentioned I was a muslim. Paul seemed to indicate from his posts that it was wrong to march against President Bush in London (over 100,000 did.) I feel that, and this is my opinion, that President Bush has caused a divide between Muslim and Christian people. I have Christian friends, Jewish, 7th Adventist - who cares what they are. The point I try to make is that as a 'muslim' (born as not followed) I am treated most unfairly. i.e - I have my post opened all the time - People see my name and presume I'm a bomb toting refugee freedom fighter etc. The reason the march was good was to let people air their opinions against someone they feel has done more harm and good for society. I did'nt say I hated president bush. I feel he has made some bad decisions which has affected millions of people. Now I really didn't want to get into a 'religious' argument. I am not religious. I come on here to talk about boxing with interesting people. I welcome all views good, bad and indifferent. It doesn't mean I agree with them Paul from Sydney ! I remember when Forest Ward (where are you?) first appeared on this bored he was 'booed off'. After a while everyone was praising him for his views. Please no one think I am a Quarry hater. My father and I have spent many a night watching Jerry's fights and I collect them in abundance. Thanks |

OK, I'LL CHILL ON THE MUSLIM THING, IT'S LIKE OPENING A CAN OF WORMS. KENT HOW COULD YOU HURT ME AND EMBARRASS YOURSELF SAYING PAUL MAD IS THE NUMBER ONE FAN, I ASK YOU WHERE THE HELL IS HE!!

HE LEFT QUARRYLAND LONG AGO, I'M SURE HE'S WITH MICHAEL JACKSON IN NEVER NEVER LAND, HE'S TO MUCH OF A TOUCHY FEELY GUY, PLEASE DON'T BRING HIM UP, I'M MORE QUARRY THAN HE'LL EVER BE, EVER!!!!!! |

Kent - I have sent you an e-mail. |

Evren - you lose the argument so you get condescending. All because I have the gall to disagree with an intellectual snob who attacks the Quarrys. All because I disagreed with your efforts to make this a forum for your political and religious views. You guys don't believe in all that "wider spectrum of views" stuff. The business with Salman Rushdie taught us all that. You blame President Bush because someone opens your mail. Last I knew he wasn't in charge of British Post. You say that 100,000 marched. Well millions more didn't. Go back and read your posts. After that intellectual snob attacked the Quarrys and the rest of us on this site, you addressed your post to him and said, "Well done". As soon as someone expresses a different view to guys like Giancarlo and you, they get called uneducated, unintelligent, illiterates. Or they get Fatwahs and Jihads declared on them like what happened to Rushdie just because he wrote a book that provided subjectiveness in life offering a wider spectrum of views (to use your language). I didn't see you guys protesting about the treatment Rushdie got. Come to think of it, I didn't see you guys protesting about September 11 when thousands of decent people got the choice of burning to death or jumping out a 110 storey window without a parachute. You didn't protest about Bali either. But as soon as someone opens your mail, you guys begin hompin' and stompin' and blaming America and President Bush. I won't bother acknowledging you again, Evren, because you're really only interested in your own views. To be honest, I feel sorry for you.

| 11/21/03 08:43:15 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|Wait I'm going to stop this crap. You are right Paul - I really am sorry I offended you. To think that I am not against terrorism is very hurtful to me. You imply so many hurtful things to me. Your imly so many things about me that are so wrong. How many of my own people were killed in Istanbul yesterday? I think these people are the lowest of the low. This is what I mean though - I mention Muslim you mention terrorists. Please don't feel sorry for me. I understand from what you write that you have very strong views about this subject and that's okay. Why don't you e-mail me on evren.bekir@btinternet.com and we can discuss it off a boxing forum. If 'winning' is what is important to you the you won. |

| 11/21/03 08:45:06 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|One last thing I'd like to say is that everyone was so appalled when the Quarry's were accused of being racist by Giancarlo. How about being appalled at the Anti Muslim sentiment being thrown around. What a joke! |

| 11/21/03 09:18:34 PM|Kent|L.H., Ca||kentallen@etc.|||10|OK Koo Koo, since the other Paul isn't posting here, you are the number one fan. |

| 11/21/03 09:43:26 PM|KOOKOO|NY||KOOKOOCLOCK000@YAHOO.COM|||10|HEY LOOK , I JUST HAD TO REWIND MY CLOCK, I JUST BLEW MY COOL ABOUT THE MUSLIM THING, AFTER 911 WERE ALL JUST A LITTLE BIT SENSITIVE, KENT LOOKS LIKE YOUR ALRIGHT AFTER ALL , HEY, NOW TELL ME THE TRUTH WASN'T THAT FUN!! KENT AND ME FRIENDS, LORD HAVE MERCY!!! KOO KOO |

| 11/21/03 10:15:04 PM|Pete|Cleveland||pco@hotmail.com|||10|ATTENTION QUARRY EXPERTS: Did Jerry feel that he was robbed after he was counted out in his bout with George Chuvalo??|

| 11/22/03 02:09:48 AM|Wendell Charles|Oberlin, Ohio||wcharles@oberlin.org|||10|Maybe Giancarlo isn't as cruel or mean as he sounds. He seems to be saying that Jerry Quarry was no boy scout. He admits Jerry was probably a great fighter. |

| 11/22/03 02:24:57 AM|Evan Bearscombe|Sydney, Australia||evanb46@juno.com|||10|Paul, you really come off as working class unemployed and pissed. Even for a lout like Giancarlo, you can't sit on your arse and say he's a fat bugger a pony tail. Makes you sound petty, mate. As far as Jerry goes as a fighter, he did have a terrific killer instinct. Once he got somebody in trouble, he usually finished him. I can't see him in a heavyweight Top 50, though. Kent, Ali and Frazier hurt Jerry badly. They roughed him up, son. They battered him, cut him, dazed him, decked him, the whole shooting match. I dont say this to run the man down. But the 2 of them beat Jerry savagely, esp Frazier. I heard a radio interview in San Francisco once where the host asked Jerry if Frazier hurt him. Jerry laughed and laughed and said, "Hurt me? Look at the second fight and then ask me that again." Now if that isn't getting creamed, what is? Does the song have a different meaning in the States? At that time, I lived in a colored neighborhood and the Afro-Americans considered Jerry a joke when Ali came back from enforced retirement. They thought he was nothing but another white boy, a good tuneup for Muhammad, and so on. That was the big fight in Atlanta. Now bear with me, but if Jerry was so great, how come he never became champion? A great fighter would find a way, even if it had to be through Ali, Frazier, Norton, Spinks, Holmes. We can praise Jerry here and celebrate how entertaining he was, but please, let's not exaggerate. With goodwill toward all.

Butch, no Jerry never fought Jose Torres. Evan, I have already said Jerry was a step below Ali, Frazier, Holmes, and Foreman but he was on a level with M. Spinks, who came around later than Jerry, and Norton. As far as L. Spinks is concerned, Jerry would have wiped the floor with this guy, no contest there. It is all about timing as far as not winning a title. He would have had a good chance of winning a title in say, the talent poor 1980s, or at least a share of one as Holmes would have been a hard obstacle to overcome. As it was, Jerry still almost won the WBA title during Ali's forced retirement but he lost a close split decision to Jimmy Ellis.

Norton caught a very faded Jerry Quarry and yet Jerry, for a few rounds, was very competitive. The second and third rounds were two of the best rounds I have ever seen as Jerry and Norton went toe to toe. In the third round, after getting cut early in the round, Jerry threw caution to the wind and he tried to get Norton out of there and he won that round on the judges scorecards. Jerry had nothing left after this, on the way to a fifth round TKO loss but he did pretty well for a shot, worn-out shell of his former self who only had three weeks to train. Did you only see the last two rounds of this fight? Jerry never should have taken this fight or any after this. Jerry would be a good bet to beat Norton, prime against prime. I would say this fight is a pick em fight, hard to pick a winner. I will say again, Ali did not look that good in the first Quarry fight as he was missing punches because of Jerry's defense. All did land a fair amount of punches to win the rounds on the judges scorecards but Jerry was walking through the punches as he pressed the action the whole time. Jerry was cut, not creamed in this one. Again, in Frazier/Quarry one, Jerry went toe to toe with Joe for seven rounds and he was cut and had an eye almost closed. Joe wore Jerry down, he didn't cream him. Did you only see the last round when Jerry's punch output was a lot less than it was in even the previous round? Would you consider Floyd Patterson a top fifty heavyweight of all time? Well, Jerry beat him and Patterson still fought for five years after this. Patterson had a lot of fight still in him. Also, would you not consider Ron Lyle and Earnie Shavers top fifty of all time, Jerry handily beat both of these fighters. Shavers hurt Ali more than anyone in their fight with the exception of Joe Frazier and Larry Holmes, in Ali's ill-fated comeback attempt. Lyle gave George Foreman the fight of his life and Lyle was winning on the judges scorecards in a title attempt against Ali after ten rounds only to be stopped in the next round. I don't believe there are more than twenty five heavyweights that have ever been born who were better than Jerry at his best. He comes in just below Jersey Joe Walcott, and Ezzard Charles, Lennox Lewis, and of course below the very upper tier consisting of Joe Louis, Ali, Foreman, Frazier, Holmes, Dempsey, Tunney, Tyson (at his best), and Marciano. Jerry fits in well with the level of a Max Schmeling and Norton and he was certainly better than champions such as Jack Sharkey and sorry again Massimo, Primo Canera. Jerry was also better than Ingemar Johaanson. Jerry's ranking by Ring magazine was a very deserved twenty seven.
the fight at age 47) were to fighters listed in the top fifty of all time. A very hard time to be a heavyweight. It might be seven out of eight but I would have to check to see if Eddie Machen, who beat Jerry very early in Jerry's career, is in the top fifty list. Machen, by the way, deserves a top fifty ranking also.Even, I have had friends who said the same thing about Jerry. They asked me, "what is the fuss about this guy?" Until I showed them some highlights of Jerry at this best. Boxing circles around Lyle, creaming Shavers and Mac Foster. They changed their minds very fast and now say, "that Quarry was a bad ass!"

Paul, Sydney, Australia||P1M1s4@aol.com|||10|Evan - never been unemployed even one day of my life. I am self-employed operating a very small company. Nothing wrong with being working class. What's this Bears thing in your web name. Are you a Norths supporter? I grew up at Willoughby. I used to play lower grades at Norths. I now support the Rabbitohs. All the best to you.

Kent, that is one outstanding post, mate. You answered everything very clearly and you convinced me, too. I will look at the Ali and Frazier fights again. It's been as long as 30 years. Maybe we got ourselves goofused then into believing Ali, Frazier, Foreman, Terrell and those guys were unbeatable. Paul, Bearscove is my name, you muck! Hahahaha! No, I'm from Ireland. Belfast 4 United!!Floyd Patterson was excellent for a while but the losses started adding up, and he just did not have the tough mental set to be a top fighter. He was left in the dust. (Massimo -- I mean others went beyond him, as if they kicked up road dust settling on him.) I still like the question a while back about the dudes JQ KOed in the Golden Gloves. Anyone know? Does anyone remember King Fletcher from the 60s? One night in Los Angeles at the Olympic, he stopped Amos Lincoln in 1 or 2 rounds. Soon after he dropped off the radar. To where?

Massimo, Rome||4||10|I think Jack Sharkey was an excellent fighter at the beginning of his career. He beat George Godfrey and he was kicking Dempsey's ass! I think probably prime vs prime JQ would have beaten him, but it would have been a good fight. Carnera was a good fighter, but his last competitive year was 1935, when he was 29. In that year he lost only to Joe Louis. After that year, his career was a disaster.

Kent -Yes, he probably was a half click below Frazier, Ali, Foreman, and Holmes, but at the same time, particularly in this division, even a reasonably competent fighter can turn everything around in a heartbeat. That's why I wrote the JQ vs other champions piece. Do I think Jerry would have taken Joe Louis, Sonny Liston, Jack Dempsey, etc.? All things being equal, probably not, but at the same time, just one landed punch or split second lapse, and destiny changes in the ring. I could have written a similar piece, changed for styles, for Norton, Chuvalo, Lyle, Shavers.I know I talked a lot about Bugner before, and I'm going to again now. I'm not a secret Joe B fan, per se, but the guy interests me. The recent clip made me think of his fight with Frazier. Perhaps Frazier wasn't on the razor's edge he was on in Manila, but he inflicted less damage on Bugner than he did on Ali. Bugner moved more than Ali too, and was as good, possibly better defensively (since I don't consider the rope a dope to be defense). Frazier took Bugner to a knee, but in the same round, JB staggered Smokin' Joe with a right. Frazier's eye made him susceptible to rights, yet no one threw many of them against him. Ali doesn't count, because he always threw a lot of lead rights against everyone.|
|11/22/03 11:44:24 AM|Pete|Ohio||pco@hotmail.com||||10|Jerry's best years were up to and including his fight with Jimmy Ellis. I felt that he won that fight but I guess the judges saw it differently. He came up with some distinctive victories later in his career but he was not the same fighter. It only takes one pounding in the ring to change a boxer's future. He was a great contender and he definitely deserves ranking in the top 25-30 heavyweights of all time. Floyd Patterson was pretty well finished after his first fight with Liston. He did have a number of wins and losses, following that era, but really only looked impressive against Jimmy Ellis. Patterson won that fight and you can see Ellis turning to him at the end of the bout and saying "YOU WON". But as we all know, he didn't. When the question is asked if Jerry was such a great fighter, why didn't he become champion. Well the point being, a championship does not make a fighter great. Where the fighter came from, how he came along, how he handled himself as a winner & a loser, his significance historically and how the fans remember him makes a fighter great. Jerry was a great fighter because of his contribution to boxing and to his fans, all over the world.|

Jerry's best years were up to and including his fight with Jimmy Ellis. I felt that he won that fight but I guess the judges saw it differently. He came up with some distinctive victories later in his career but he was not the same fighter. It only takes one pounding in the ring to change a boxer's future. He was a great contender and he definitely deserves ranking in the top 25-30 heavyweights of all time. Floyd Patterson was pretty well finished after his first fight with Liston. He did have a number of wins and losses, following that era, but really only looked impressive against Jimmy Ellis. Patterson won that fight and you can see Ellis turning to him at the end of the bout and saying "YOU WON". But as we all know, he didn't. When the question is asked if Jerry was such a great fighter, why didn't he become champion. Well the point being, a championship does not make a fighter great. Where the fighter came from, how he came along, how he handled himself as a winner & a loser, his significance historically and how the fans remember him makes a fighter great. Jerry was a great fighter because of his contribution to boxing and to his fans, all over the world.|
|11/22/03 11:45:07 AM|Evren|London||@|||10|I'd like to say a massive well done to the English Rugby team on winning the world cup against Australia in Australia. Come on England Come on England!!!!|

I'd like to say a massive well done to the English Rugby team on winning the world cup against Australia in Australia. Come on England Come on England!!!!|

family, Evren, thanks for the kind words. I didn't realize how much I pissed people off at the time. Although, I suppose if I really thought about it, and put myself in other people's shoes I would have realized it. Although, on some level I suppose I did realize how reactive my comments were, because I went to great lenghts to explain why on the one hand I despise boxing and the people involved in it and what usually happens to fighters after their careers are over. But on the other hand I have always loved boxers (with some exceptions), from the 4 round fighter up to the champions. All these guys have warm places in my heart. With that being said, I've periodically I just take a vacation from the board. No internet in jail. Recently, I watched the Amos Lincoln-Roberto Davilla fight from 1965. After watching that fight I don't know how Lincoln lost to Johnny Persol in 1966. Persol, won like 9 rounds. Granted, Persol was a good scientific boxer, but he was not that good! He had no punch, and could not take a punch. Roberto Davilla has to one of the most mismanched fighters of all time. If he was brought along slowly and given the right matches coming up, he could have been a legitimate contender, instead of a trialhorse who gave good fighters tough fights. I also watched Earnie Shavers against Roy Tiger Williams. I remember watching that fight on TV when it took place in 1976. It's funny how ones memory plays tricks on one. Over the years I've read about what a good fighter Roy Williams was (most notably in Larry Holmes autobiography). Granted Williams amost knocked out Shavers in the 9th round, and again in the 10th round before Shavers finally stopped him. I realize Williams was not the tiger I thought he was. Watching the fight one of the commentators remarked that Williams has the reputation as being a "gym fighter." Well, that's exactly what Roy Williams was. Although tiger might have been appropriate name just the same. He got out of prison a few years ago after serving time for killing someone. Not that, that makes him a bad person.|

I also watched Earnie Shavers against Roy Tiger Williams. I remember watching that fight on TV when it took place in 1976. It's funny how ones memory plays tricks on one. Over the years I've read about what a good fighter Roy Williams was (most notably in Larry Holmes autobiography). Granted Williams amost knocked out Shavers in the 9th round, and again in the 10th round before Shavers finally stopped him. I realize Williams was not the tiger I thought he was. Watching the fight one of the commentators remarked that Williams has the reputation as being a "gym fighter." Well, that's exactly what Roy Williams was. Although tiger might have been appropriate name just the same. He got out of prison a few years ago after serving time for killing someone. Not that, that makes him a bad person.|
|11/22/03 10:03:27 PM|Forest Ward|South Carolina||joekevin@cs.com||||10|Hi family, Evren, thanks for the kind words. I didn't realize how much I pissed people off at the time. Although, I suppose if I really thought about it, and put myself in other people's shoes I would have realized it. Although, on some level I suppose I did realize how reactive my comments were, because I went to great lenghts to explain why on the one hand I despise boxing and the people involved in it and what usually happens to fighters after their careers are over. But on the other hand I have always loved boxers (with some exceptions), from the 4 round fighter up to the champions. All these guys have warm places in my heart. With that being said, I've periodically I just take a vacation from the board. No internet in jail. Recently, I watched the Amos Lincoln-Roberto Davilla fight from 1965. After watching that fight I don't know how Lincoln lost to Johnny Persol in 1966. Persol, won like 9 rounds. Granted, Persol was a good scientific boxer, but he was not that good! He had no punch, and could not take a punch. Roberto Davilla has to one of the most mismanched fighters of all time. If he was brought along slowly and given the right matches coming up, he could have been a legitimate contender, instead of a trialhorse who gave good fighters tough fights. I also watched Earnie Shavers against Roy Tiger Williams. I remember watching that fight on TV when it took place in 1976. It's funny how ones memory plays tricks on one. Over the years I've read about what a good fighter Roy Williams was (most notably in Larry Holmes autobiography). Granted Williams amost knocked out Shavers in the 9th round, and again in the 10th round before Shavers finally stopped him. I realize Williams was not the tiger I thought he was. Watching the fight one of the commentators remarked that Williams has the reputation as being a "gym fighter." Well, that's exactly what Roy Williams was. Although tiger might have been appropriate name just the same. He got out of prison a few years ago after serving time for killing someone. Not that, that makes him a bad person.|

I also watched Earnie Shavers against Roy Tiger Williams. I remember watching that fight on TV when it took place in 1976. It's funny how ones memory plays tricks on one. Over the years I've read about what a good fighter Roy Williams was (most notably in Larry Holmes autobiography). Granted Williams amost knocked out Shavers in the 9th round, and again in the 10th round before Shavers finally stopped him. I realize Williams was not the tiger I thought he was. Watching the fight one of the commentators remarked that Williams has the reputation as being a "gym fighter." Well, that's exactly what Roy Williams was. Although tiger might have been appropriate name just the same. He got out of prison a few years ago after serving time for killing someone. Not that, that makes him a bad person.|
|11/22/03 10:35:01 PM|CHARLES ANDERSON|ARK.||CTJJANDFAM@AOL.COM||||10|in the second frazier fight, joe threw more right hands than i ever seemed to see him ever throw in his whole career. i think that throw jerry off alittle. did jerry ever have damage to his right hand? he seem to paw with it later in his career than throwing more of a straight.|

in the second frazier fight, joe threw more right hands than i ever seemed to see him ever throw in his whole career. i think that throw jerry off alittle. did jerry ever have damage to his right hand? he seem to paw with it later in his career than throwing more of a straight.|
|11/23/03 01:52:09 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com||||10|IN THE 2ND ALI FIGHT, JERRY WAS BEAT BEFORE IT STARTED, YOU CAN'T WALK IN TO RING MAD LIKE HE DID AND WIN, AT LEAST NOT AGAINST ALI, FIGHT PLAN WENT OUT THE WINDOW, THE 2ND
FRAZIER JERRY SOMEHOW APPEARED WEAK, UNLIKE THE FIRST FIGHT, WHERE AT LEAST HE GOT IN SOME GOOD PUNCHES. KOO KOO

11/23/03 02:20:01 AM| Evan B | Sydney | evanb46@juno.com ||| | 10 | Forest, I feel as you do about despising boxing more and more these days. A couple of weeks ago, I read that a kid in the States or Mexico named Antonio Barrera had a medical device implanted in his brain to fix an aneurysm. He has been fighting anyway, and had a fight last week where I guess he was beaten pretty badly. MADNESS! This is a question we might discuss: SHOULD WE CONTROL SUCH SITUATIONS WITH LAWS OR SHOULD WE ALLOW AN INDIVIDUAL TO DO WHATEVER HE WANTS, INCLUDING EXPOSE HIMSELF TO GRAVE DANGER? I vote for the laws and control. Sometimes we need to protect people from themselves. Probably lots of young boxers are so pumped full of their own testosterone and dreams of glory that they cannot make adequate decisions. We might also say that when they eventually get hurt badly, usually they receive treatment and care from public agencies and institutions, which means the rest of the taxpayers pay for it. That's money that could be used on much worthier causes such as education.

What do you folks think? Barrera isn't the only one to do things like this, either. I'll bet the Quarrys wish someone had persuaded Jerry to stop fighting way earlier than he did.

11/23/03 02:39:28 PM| Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com ||| | 10 | Evan, Marco Antonio Barrera was considered one of the best pound for pound fighters in the world until his loss last week to Manny Pacaico (I can't remember how to spell the guys name). He had been fighting with the plate in his head and beating everyone in sight but no one said a word about it but he loses one fight and suddenly it is an issue. Yes, every effort should be made to insure fighters are as safe as possible but there is still an inherent risk involved when people enter the ring. They choose this profession.

I have asked a couple of Quarry family members if they tried to talk Jerry out of continuing his career when it was obvious not fighting was the best thing for him and the opinion was that "Jerry was going to do what Jerry was going to do." That Jerry had a mind of his own and that he was very strong willed about what he wanted and didn't want to do. Ironic in that when Jerry was working the corner for his brother Mike in Mike's third fight against Mike Rossman, Jerry had the fight stopped over Mike's strong objections. I would bet my bottom dollar that if the situations was reversed and Mike was the cornerman for one of Jerry's fights and Mike had the fight stopped, resulting in a loss for Jerry, that Jerry would have been upset with Mike for stopping the fight. Mr. Jimmy said that Mike was angry at Jerry for quite some time for stopping that fight. The issue is, fighters at times have to protected from themselves as they don't look at the situation objectively. The saying that the character Mikey, Rocky's trainer in the Rocky movies, that every "pug" thinks he has one good fight left in him is true in real life.

11/23/03 02:43:20 PM| Forest Ward | South Carolina | joekevinscs.com ||| | 10 | Hi Evan, I agree with you 100%. Evan, I don't follow boxing too closely anymore. As a result that story about Barrera having a device put into his head to fix an aneurysm went right by me until I saw it in your post. Imagine that a guy has an aneurysm, so they put a device in his head to fix it. And then they let him get hit in the head. It makes me want to vomit. I remember when Barrera was coming up and HBO did pre-fight stories on him. Supposedly, he comes from an upper middleclass background, and at one time he wanted to become a lawyer. And now I learn he is having head implants, so he can continue to get hit in the head. Your right Evangeline! People like Barrera, Holyfield... Need to be protected from themselves. As I said many times before the realistic chances of making professional boxing safer are about as likely as making cigarette smoking healthy. It can't be done.

If I remember right alot of Jerry's amatuer fights were in the junior division and thats why there were so many draws. I'd like to know how often he fought in High School in the amateurs and if 1965 was the first time he went to the Nationals. Where did he fight his amatuer fights at and what amatuer team was he on.....Thanks!

Just wondering - do any of the boxing fans here do boxing workouts, sans sparring? The two bags, rope jumping, s-boxing? We do, and have been thiking of getting a double end bag too - those look like a lot of fun! I like to ride a bicycle and run too, and we lift weights, but if someone said I ~had~ to choose just one way to exercise, it'd be the heavy bag. It pretty much has everything, other than the ability to sculpt your body or increase size (if you're a man) as weights do.

Jerry had 183 amateur fights. That's more than most people have, isn't it? Was he or his family not sure whether he was going to go pro? Frankly, I don't know where someone could find places to fight that many times, around here. For all its tough guy reputation, boxing is pretty dead in Chicago. I mean, they have the Golden Gloves, but you never see any tournaments advertised.

I can use the heavy bag only for 1 punch, because after that punch, the heavy bag is broken... It's like an hydrogen bomb... Foreman can't hit in comparison...

Well, I'd heard that rumor, that Big George said he'd rather fight Joe Frazier and Earnie Shavers the same night than to step in the ring with you! My husband had one of those magical moments of timing once. One of my nephews used to always work out with him when he was over, run, ride bikes, hit the bags, stuff like that. On one of their workouts, he (husband) punched a hole in the bag we had then. My nephew couldn't quit talking about it! The truth of the matter was that it was an old (canvas) bag that was ready to go, and even ~I~ would have probably broken through it eventually. LOL!

That is alot of fights, And to win the Nationals is a real Herculean feat in itself. Thats why I was curious as to whether Jerry had been there before. The year before He won the Nationals was an Olympic year with Frazier and Mathis leading the pack. I wonder if Jerry maybe tried out for the Western regional Olympic Trials. That double end bag is good for pop shotting and getting your hands and eyes wired together but that is also the primary function of the speed bag which gets your hands eyes feet n ass wired together so the speed bag does a little bit more. You can also Pop Shot the speed bag. Pete The Chuvallo fight was a mixup not a robbery. No One who saw the fight at the time believed Jerry really lost he was off balance took the eight count on one knee i think the ref told him to go to one knee then he jumped up at 9 or ten and the ref waved it over . He was off balance and went down on a jab. Wasn't even a real knock down.
the boxing workout does not build big muscles per say, but does create definition and endurance, as you could see most fighters bodies don't change that much from year to year, look at joe frazier for instants, sonya remember koo koo's thinking about you :) koo koo

According to that Boxing Illustrated article I quoted from last week Jerry had 237 amateur bouts! That is alot - he was still very young when he turned pro too. Fran - your comment about the Quarry-Chuvalo fight (if I understand it correctly) is wrong. The fight was quite close though Quarry was clearly the superior boxer and was ahead by most peoples reckoning. After a heated exchange along the ropes in round 7 both boxers steadied themselves - as the referee broke them Chuvalo scored with a perfectly timed left hook which caught Jerry high on the head/near the temple area. Jerry staggered and the went down. He was up immediately but dropped down to one knee to take the opportunity to clear his head. Referee Zack Clayton went right up to Jerry (who was on one knee) and tolled the count right into his ear. The count went to ten and then Jerry jumped up - he made a mistake or he was still feeling the affects of what was a decent punch. You hear commentator Don Dunphy shout "Oh No Oh No" recognising the fact that Jerry had missed the count. In his interview after Chuvalo said "That's what happens when you get hit with a good shot - you think it's nine it's really ten!". The replay showed that Clayton did act properly and did indeed count directly into Quarry's ear. It was one of those things...it kind of reminds me of the 2nd Marciano - Walcott bout.

Fran -

I looked up Jerry on Cyber Boxing Zone for his total record. Maybe he did have more amateur fights. I don't know when he started as an amateur, but it looks like he turned pro just about a week before his 20th b-day. Even if he had the 183 fights I mentioned, and started at 10, that's still almost a fight every three weeks. I'm guessing bigger kids demanded his lunch money on the way to school only once! LOL! Koo-Koo - I think boxers have great bodies, but you're right that it won't build the muscles weights do. I like a weight trained body too, but not the Mr. Universe/steroid bods. Since most of what a fighter does is endurance, high rep/low intensity (compared to weights) training, they don't get the mass. If high rep/low intensity built really showy muscles, marathon runners would have the best legs in the world! Where you see high definition in a fighter, a lot is the workouts, but it's also because they have really low body fat percentage. Here's something else interesting I read once in a fitness article: it said that on the average, blacks tend to have a lower body fat percentage than whites do. This was in Muscle and Fitness, which BTW is an excellent magazine for health, fitness and diet, with a heavy slant towards weights.

Fran -

I've seen guys use the double end bag, it seemed that it had a mind of its own, but then when you first start hitting the speed bag, that's how it seems too. The speed bag isn't hard at all once you learn how to control it, and probably the DE is that way too, huh? I think the most amazing routines I've ever seen on the speed bag and the jump rope were by Roberto Duran. Honestly, he was so fast and clever, with so many cool variations, he could have given demonstrations! Even if a person knew how to do both well, he'd still be a whiz to watch.

Duran was beutiful could do it all. I remember the Chuvonal fight from 34 years ago it was the only time i saw it and I remember Quarry taking him to school and Chuvalo was on his way to getting stopped. All these years it sticks in my mind that it was a jab that caught Jerry off balance not a left hook. I don't remember any exchanges because it didn't seem like Chuvallo could move with Jerry. I'd like to see the film again. Jerry dominated and outclassed Chuvallo the whole fight except for what was a flash knockdown. Jerry got right up because it was what it was a flash knockdown. He was told to take the 8 count.

I look at it this way: When two boxers meet, it doesn't matter who the better fighter is—it only matters who the better fighter is on that particular day. In other words, I don't care how much better Mike Tyson might have been than James Douglas. Douglas was superior the night they met. I think back to Jerry's career—and I believe he did enough to beat Ellis. There are people, including Kent, who believe Norton beat Ali at Yankee Stadium. This is different—these are examples of contested decisions. But I'm referring more to upsets or guys who lost because of "the flu," "a knee injury," etc. If you're standing there when the bell rings, and the other guy KO's you or wins a clear decision, there aren't any excuses. It's why Mike Weaver was better than Tate, Ali was better than Foreman, and yes, on that night in 1971, hard as it is for me to admit, Frazier was clearly better than Ali.

I argued this point on another forum once. The thing is that many people are so full of PCness, are such parrots who learn what the right thing is to say, that they don't bother to observe and to think. Why is it racist to say what every sports fan knows and what the athletes themselves know? If blacks are more genetically blessed in certain ways on average than whites, so what? Kind of a compliment, if you ask me. Many people like to congratulate themselves though and say that any averaged statement is a generalization, therefore automatically false, and with evil intent to boot. Sure, blacks work hard, but white athletes work just as hard. Aren't there as many white kids going out for football, basketball, and track? Are they all lazy? Wanna have an all white team? Good luck winning many games (as the southern universities found out decades ago).

There are less whites going into competitive sports such as boxing than there used to be. In the past, white ethnic groups such as Polish, Italian, German, and Jewish, didn't have a much of a chance to escape poverty as they do now and a lot them went into boxing with success. There are not many fighters such as Carman Basilio, Jake LaMotta, Gene Fullmer, Mikey Walker, etc. around today. These fighters mentioned all had skill to compete at the highest levels and they would still be competitive if they fought today. Most of the would be Basilios, Klitschkos, Fullmers, Walkers, and LaMottas, have better educations than their counte rparts from yesteryear and less incentive to take up boxing. Muscle definition and skill don't go hand and hand so just because a black athlete is "cut", so to speak, this would not make him a better fighter if he didn't have the skill to go with it. White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.

White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill.

I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.

White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.

White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.

White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.

White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.

White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.

White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.

White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.

White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.

White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.

White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.

White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did.
sloppy) were about the same for all groups. Why do blacks resent these implications that they are naturally better athletes? It's because historically they have been categorized as beasts of burden, slaves who were not the same as humans, and because this implication also suggests they are good athletes (or dancers or fornicators or construction workers or ditch diggers) and nothing else, without the brains to do any other kind of work. Even today, there is a stereotype in the USA of the black male slave being Big Buck and the female a strapping big girl, with the two of them producing huge, brawny, strong children. This can happen just as often when any large male and female pair have a child. The implication is also that blacks do not accomplish much as athletes because they are good anyway, while whites (or Hispanics or Asians) have to work hard to achieve what they do. We know this characterization is untrue. Look at it this way. Massimo, do you agree that Italians are born strong, athletic, powerful, competitive and determined, any more than Poles, Germans, English, Australians, Americans, Canadians or Japanese? That would be an absurd argument and for it to be true, there would have to be something in the bodies of Italians that made them superior -- something not there in anyone else. But we know that is not true. Even the concept of "race" is no longer accepted among experts because it cannot be defined. As I said, there is no significant difference among the various "races", but only very minor variations in hair, facial shapes, colors of skin, etc. Besides, most American blacks have extensive Caucasian ancestry, like Ali. Let's put this argument of black superiority to bed, gang.

There are less whites going into competitive sports such as boxing than there used to be. Especially boxing, in fact, only boxing. Boxing is dominated by blacks, with Mexicans filling in the lighter divisions on the west coast, Puerto Ricans on the east, and a few Asians in the really light categories. In the old days, you're right, lots of Europeans fit into the scraping to get by category, hence lots of Irish, Italians, Brits, and even some Jewish fighters. It used to be that boxing was the chance the down and out had to make it big. It's still that, but it isn't the only kid on the block. Babe Ruth made fifty thousand a year, while Dempsey and Tunney could have gotten a million for a 3rd fight. This difference is no longer there. Maybe Holyfield is worth one or two hundred million, but big time multi-million dollar contracts are routine in the big four now. Only football compares to boxing in terms of shortness of careers, and there are a lot more slots to be filled. A guy can get beaten to a pulp and never score big in boxing, while all pro football players do. Besides, lots of people just plain don't like to be hit. These fighters mentioned all had skill to compete at the highest levels and they would still be competitive if they fought today. Most of the would be Basilios, Klitschkos, Fullmers, Walkers, and LaMottas, have better educations than their counterparts from yesteryear and less incentive to take up boxing. Right. Funny though. Back then, most people didn't go to college, while today, there isn't much difference between opportunities for a high school grad and someone who doesn't finish. So, boxing is drawing from people who see even less of a chance to make it. Sean O'Grady is a doctor, and I think there might be another grad, but that's it. These are guys who might have gone if they could have, because they aren't stupid people. Many weren't victims of the School of Hard Knocks. In many cases, it seemed to go after them. Muscle definition and skill don't go hand and hand so just because a black athlete is "cut", so to speak, this would not make him a better fighter if he didn't have the skill to go with it. Oh, totally true. You're seeing a lot of cut fighters because they're training and eating better, but just boxing per se isn't doing it, nor do big show-offy muscles have anything to do with punching. My husband told me about a former Olympic weightlifter, Ray Ellson who fought Victor Galindez. Ellson was manhandling Galindez effortlessly, but Victor was giving him a boxing lesson. White fighters such as the Klitschko brothers, Vissiliy Jirov, and our own Jerry Quarry beat most of the black fighters because these white fighters have learned a specialized skill. It's funny. People are almost surprised at a white fighter who is actually any good, in the heavier divisions. It's almost the reverse of what blacks experience in the rest of the world. The white fighter has to be better initially to be judged ~as~ good. I was speaking to a guy the other day who is about 6'8" 360 pounds and everyone always asks him if he played football (American style). He says he tried in his last two years of high school but he was not as successful as one might think being he had the size and natural strength that would give him an advantage over other players. The reason he gave for his lack of success was he didn't start learning to play the game at a young age like his smaller but better skilled opponents did. Sadly, the age of kids having fun and playing lots of things is dying out. Once a kid shows any promise at all, s/he has to specialize to gain and keep their edge.|11/25/03 01:11:14 AM|Evan B|Sydney|evanb46@juno.com|||10|RS, Sean O'Grady is doker? You mean an MD, a medical doctor, after 4 years of medical school in the US, after 4 years of college, and then at least 3 more years of residence, often as much as 8 and sometimes even 12? Not a doctor of chiropractic or podiatry or optometry or physiology but actually a physician, an allopathic physician, an MD? If this is true, I wonder how he found the time. |11/25/03 01:27:06 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|EVAN, ARE YOU
BLACK? BECAUSE MY STATEMENT WAS NOT A PUTDOWN, NO, ITS NOT THEIR NOSES, NO ITS NOT A BONE IN THEIR LEG OR THEIR HAIR, IT'S HOW NATURE MADE THEM, WHITE MEN CAN'T JUMP, CAN'T SPRINT, CAN'T FIGHT AND CAN'T DANCE BETTER, YOU TALKING ABOUT SCIENCE, SCIENTIFIC FACTS CAN BE INTERPRETED DIFFERENT WAYS, LETS JUST LOOK AT THE SIMPLE FACTS, NFL (NEGRO FOOTBALL LEAGUE) NBA (NOTHING BUT AFRICAN AMERICANS) WHITES LEAST CHANCE IS IN BOXING, WHITES NEED NOT APPLY, THIS IS COMING FROM A WHITE MAN WHO KNOWS, SORRY KENT, I KNOW YOU DISAGREE STRONGLY, KOO
KOO KOO KOO |11/25/03 01:36:27 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|BY THE WAY I HOPE SHAWN O'GRADY IS A DOCTOR MAYBE HE CAN STOP HIMSELF FROM STILL BLEEDING
FROM THOSE FIGHTS HE HAD :) COULDN'T RESIST )))))) |11/25/03 04:43:34 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Hey, Sean O'grady looks very good after having a long successful boxing career. I see him in person at least severarl times a year, if not more, at the various boxing cards I attend. If I get a chance to talk to him in the near future, I will ask him if he is a doctor. Sean is in great shape and it looks like he could step into the ring tomorrow without any problem. Sean is articulate and he respects and is respected by fighters of all races and colors. Sean is not called the champ for nothing and he is a class act through and through.|11/25/03 06:02:50 AM|Massimo|Rome||4|||10|A few months ago I read an article (about muscles) on a magazine. This article asserted that the cells of black people's muscles are genetically better than the cells of white people's muscles. I have just a vague remembrance of that article. It seems to me that it asserted that there are two different kinds of muscular cells: white cells and maybe red or black, I don't remember) cells and that one of this kinds of cells is genetically better in black people than in white people. It's true that almost all the basketball champions are black but there are important exceptions: Divac, Ginobili and especially Yao Ming. Yao Ming is gonna be remembered as one of the best centers ever, maybe the best.|11/25/03 06:15:07 AM|Evren|London|||10|I'm not black or white - I am an inbetweenie. I hope Paul doesn't go beserk and accuse me of being a suicide bomber. Anyway regarding the issue of Black and White Athlete's. I think it is a very difficult subject. Black boxers are definitely MORE successful than white boxers. Muhammad Ali used to say that it was because of their tough upbringing (his ancestors and to a degree his generation). You could argue that 'whites' are more successful at certain sports such as Swimming, Tennis, Rugby but is it because 'Blacks' haven't become actively involved in these sports yet or because they are not interested? Judging by the Williams sisters in Tennis I would think that as they become more involved in these sports you will see a dominance there also. When I was at school the 'black' children were always more successful at sports - one thing was apparent was that they were very dedicated and had a huge interest in sports - far and above most of the 'white' children.

I really hate getting into this black and white thing in sports, because it inevitably degenerates into a racially divisive subject so I will state my opinion as carefully as I can. Being a champion in any sport is usually a matter of freak genetics (I mean the word freak as a positive in this usage). The larger the gene pool you have to draw from, the better chance you have of coming up with someone who has the perfect genetics for boxing. Naturally if you have 250 black heavyweights and 5 white heavyweights, you have a much better chance of coming up with someone with the proper genetics to be a champion. You are drawing from a much larger base. If there were an equal number of whites in boxing as there was blacks, there would probably be an equal number of white champions and top contenders. Boxing will always appeal to the oppressed minority as it is a way out of the ghetto without college, etc. When African Americans have reached equality in America with whites, they will no longer dominate the sport. That's my opinion for what its worth.

Two points: 1) Depends what sport you're talking about. Whites seem to have all the swimming and weightlifting champions, either because of genetics or because they have better access to training facilities for these activities. Look at all the great Russian weightlifters. Figure skating and gymnastics just aren't available or accessible to minorities, but what about weightlifting/powerlifting? For distance running (marathons), whites seem to do very well, though the Kenyan athletes dominate some events. Point # 2 is that CBS fired Jimmy "The Greek" because of what they considered to be racially insensitive comments about why black athletes outperform whites. In a drunken moment, he babbled that in the days of slavery in America, slave owners mated the strongest, healthiest black women with the strongest, healthiest black men. He concluded that generations later, superior genetics help the black athlete. It's interesting to note that Reverend Jackson defended Jimmy The Greek at the time—he said that The Greek's grasp on American history wasn't that far off. Also interesting is the fact that The Greek didn't at any point condone slavery or related actions of the slave owners—he just offered his opinion about one aspect of why black athletes do well, yet CBS fired him. A guy who had great relationships with athletes of all colors (and a guy who decked Brent Musberger at a bar!) was let go by the PC police, even though he was defended by Jesse Jackson!

Well, you fans surprised me, at least your honest, then we all agree blacks are going to always dominate in these sports, weightlifting, hey those guys have been on so many drugs, I don't know if they can ever control that sport. Till next time. Koo Koo Koo Koo

People definitely have certain traits based on race and ethnicity. However champions are made from Desire dedication and hard work. The athlete that dominates a sport is the hungry athlete who takes it higher than the others. People are people we all have to sweat blood to make it you don't get a free pass because you are of a certain race. Hard work is the common denominator for everyone in sport. You have to pay the cost to be the boss no matter who you are.
good fighter its what you don't see.

It can't be scientifically proven that there's any difference between races athletically because we don't even begin to understand the complexities of the human chemical systems. All we can do is look at the numbers, which is all doctors really do when drawing conclusions about conditions. Blacks and Jews have a higher tendency towards high blood pressure, for example, than white Gentiles. Is this racist? It ~is~ a fact that there's a difference (though MDs aren't sure what), in the Indians who do high steel work. Neurologically, they demonstrate better balance, plus have slightly different hip structure, resulting in a more exaggerated "one foot in front of the other" walk, hence more suitability for the work. I could go on. Racist? No, it's part of the rainbow ~difference~ we all say we cherish.

The stereotype that a top athlete is "talented" but stupid is a ridiculous myth that keeps exploding out of the bathtub like Glenn Close. Many, many top athletes are uneducated (few graduate from college with their classes in top FB and BB schools), and there's a range of social skills among athletes, just as there is with anyone. Joe Frazier said once he wished he were smarter, had a ~degree~, mixing up formal education and simple possession of facts, with intelligence. Thomas Hearns had to be coached in social skills, how to do an interview, what to say, not to say (something Tyson could have used), because to polite, suburban America, he seemed to be an ignorant, knuckle dragging brute and an idiot when he first began his rise. You don't pick up many cocktail party social graces at the Kronk gym. But natively stupid? Hardly!

Perhaps the crux of the "black issue" re athletics is that they perceive themselves to being saddled with a "talented, but stupid" tag, ie, they wouldn't be any good without being accidentally blessed genetically, hence just animals who can jump through hoops, roller skating bears. In reality, as the intelligent sports fan knows, the top athlete is not only smart, but very together emotionally (even Mike Tyson, comparatively speaking). In short, they're "better" than the masses in many ways. ~All~ blacks aren't talented, and ~all~ whites aren't untalented, but the cream at the top suggests something is going on and that there might be a difference even in the middle to bottom population walking the streets.

Some athletes, particularly in non-contact sports, are good without hard work, but it's rare. No one is top of the line though without favorable genetics, no matter how hard they work.

Boxing is largely a cultural sport, just as hockey was at its start (at one point in the 70s, there were only ~three~ non-Canadians in the NHL). There aren't any boxing gyms in the suburbs, and there are no ice hockey programs in the ghetto. Can you imagine Tiffany St. James, soccer mom, going from sideline to ringside to videotape her little prince's brilliant left jab, right uppercut, left hook combination, or working the speed bag? :-(

BTW, I can find nothing to suggest that Sean O'Grady is a doctor. I was sure I read in an old boxing magazine that he was. I was sure I read in an old boxing magazine that he was. I'll continue to search and advise if it was him, or if not, who it was...
implement strict drug testing protocols at the Mr. Universe and Mr. Olympia competition, to prove their drug free claim. For once, even Joe and Ben Weider were stammering for words (it didn't happen).|
|11/25/03 12:14:41 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Koo Koo, could Jake LaMotta and Carman Basilio have beaten Ray Leonard? Probably not as Leonard was too fast for them. Could LaMotta and Basilio have beaten Ray's brother Roger Leonard, who for whatever reason only had about fifteen professional fights? LaMotta and Basilio could have easily beaten Roger Leonard because of skill and experience. Roger Leonard has the same basic genetics as his brother Ray so why couldn't he beat these two white fighters? Answer, black doesn't make better, skill does! &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Another one, could Jerry Quarry beat Ali, answer, yes, "everyday and twice on Sunday!" How could this possibly be when everyone knows Muhammad Ali beat Jerry twice? I was referring to Ali's brother Rahman Ali, AKA Rudy Clay. Jerry was a much better fighter than Rahman Ali was. Again, Jerry had more skill and experience than the other Ali brother even though this Ali has the same basic genetic structure as Muhammad does.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Lastly, Ray Leonard beat a Ugandan named Ayub Kalule for a share of the Jr. Middleweight title in the early 1980s. Kalule was very "cut" looking and very strong and he is also 100 percent black African while Leonard, a lighter skinned black, probably has some white ancestors at some point in his family history. Yet Leonard beat Kalule, who was a very good fighter and I believe a former Olympian because Leonard was too fast for him, just like Leonard would have been too fast for Basilio and LaMotta.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Once again, black doesn't make the athlete better, skill makes him better.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;|11/25/03 12:25:55 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|10|Kent -&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;No, I wasn't trying to suggest that ~being~ black makes an athlete better, just that there is some fairly compelling evidence that black people ~may~ have a larger pool, via genetics, of folks who might be able to develop into top jocks, all other things being equal (training, coaching, hard work, etc.). Jon Entine, in his book, goes into this deeper.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;My nephew laughs at a situation in his school. There's a black kid in his class (dad's a dentist, mom's a stay at home), with only moderate athletic talent, yet in gym class, he's always picked in the top three for games! :-) |11/25/03 01:05:55 PM|Pete|Cleveland||pco@hotmail.com|10|Interesting discussion; not that it has much to do with Jerry Quarry, but...&lt;br&gt;When we speak in terms in genetics, two brothers are anything but identical, genetically speaking. To reach a pure state genetically, that is to say homozygously, you would have to have many, many generations of brother/sister matings to call any future generations genetically the same. This isn't happening here. What is happening here is hybrid vigor. For any of you who are familiar with the history of slavery in this country, you will be well aware that all African Americans have a degree of white ancestry in their genetic makeup. This makes for a bigger stronger individual, regardless of the species. Where boxing is concerned, the innate ability or potential has to be there. It is not so much strength as it is the ability to react. Talk to any top athlete and he or she will tell you that they were always able to "beat their opponent to the punch". Reflexes and speed. There is also truth to the cultural issue. How many Jews succeed academically and later where business and creativity is concerned. That isn't to say that all African Americans, raised in the inner city, are great athletes and all Jewish Americans, raised in the suburbs, are outstanding scholars and businessmen, but...it's any interesting topic.|11/25/03 01:18:26 PM|Fran|PA||plc7755@aol.com|10|Interesting about the Leonard brothers. I was on the same Inter service team as Roger back in 1975 and we were sitting around talking and I remember him talkin about Ray and saying that Ray doesn't drink wine or anything how he was very dedicated. Now Roger was an Outstanding amateur and had all of the ability Ray did but at some point when faced with the grind we all settle at some point. Some don't. Duran was the greatest lightweight of all time and everyone knew it yet he had to have more so he kept moving up. If you see Duran between fights he looks like the frito bandido. Yet he worked his body to a fine tune ass whuppin machine. So its not the genes its the heart. Pride. Jerry Quarry was all of that. | 11/25/03 01:34:36 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|If Roberto Duran had never been any more than a trash collector in Panama City, he would have been the quickest handed, hardest hitting, toughest, meanest hombre even to sling a garbage can. I've seen other people who never played sports who surprised themselves and everyone around them with some feat of athleticism. They had it, and didn't know it. What Duran ~also~ had was toughness, a killer instinct rarely seen in the ring, a recognition of his abilities (he was street fighting at four years old), and the drive to hone them into world champion form. However, without the genes, he'd have been just another catcher fighting undercards in seedy Central and South American fight clubs.Character and hard work takes the edge of physical talent to atom splitting sharpness, but without genetics, it'll only take an athlete so far. However, just talent, even with drive isn't always the ticket to greatness. The Chicago Bears immortal Dick Butkus said that without a lot of luck, he'd have been a furniture mover. There are men playing basketball on some of your big time inner city playgrounds on Summer evenings with NBA abilities, but different fates kept this from happening.Stardom is a mixed bag, but no bums make it to the top. Like the old joke goes, "Choose your parents well!":-)| 11/25/03 02:22:57 PM|KOOKOONY|KOOKOCLOCK00@YAHOO.COM|||10|KENT, WHAT A POOR EXCUSE, ROGER LEONARD, I'M TALKING ABOUT THE TOP PEOPLE FROM BOTH RACES, BLACKS COME OUT ON TOP, NOT BASILO VS ROGER LEONARD, STOP WITH THIS PC CRAP KENT, IT MAKES ME WANT TO VOMIT, SOME PEOPLE STINK, SOME PEOPLE THINK: AIN'T THAT RIGHT KENT:) KOO KOO | 11/25/03 04:14:00 PM|Evren|London||evren.bekir@btinternet.com|||10|Kent - remember the competition I ran 2 years ago - the Heavyweight tournament? It would be interesting to see what the outcome would be now with so many people posting - I think I still have all the results somewhere!Massimo - I found some footage on Primo Carnera that I may be able to copy for you - All you'll need to do is send the covering charge.Regards Evren| 11/25/03 04:48:57 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Evren, it would be fun to start the tournament over again but with 32 fighters instead of 64. The last one ran too long.I realize brothers are not exactly alike, probably even twins, but they are similar and if race makes someone a better athlete, than why does one brother excel and the other doesn't? Maybe, as someone here pointed out, Roger Leonard didn't have the drive that his brother Ray had.I don't know if the best athletes of different races, blacks or whites, come out on top more because most of the time in recent times it has been more likely for blacks to dominate because there have been more of them. If the numbers were equal, then we would see definite results. | 11/25/03There are now four white heavyweights at or near the top ten in the heavyweight division, The Klitschko brothers, Joe Mesi, and Corrie Sanders. If none of these fighters competes at the highest level, then Koo Koo's idea holds water but we saw recently where V. Klitschko fought the best heavyweight of recent years, Lennox Lewis, and he came close to winning, if not for cut, he might very well have won. It can be said Klitschko caught Lewis on the way down but even a faded Lewis still has the talent to beat 99 percent of the fighters out there.Koo Koo, part of being politically correct is agreeing with people just to be popular. I never do this and if people who have extreme views on both sides of the spectrum have a problem with what I say, which has happened to me at times, then I know I am doing something right, that I am being true to myself, not catering to what someone else will like. | kent , i will never be PC, then you must disagree with the roadman too, look, i know this is a explosive subject, but anyone thats followed boxing knows its how it is, SONYA, YOUR A QUARRY YOU KNOW THE TRUTH, BUT CAN'T SPEAK OUT BECAUSE OF YOUR POSITION, I'LL JUST DROP THE SUBJECT, KNOWING I'M RIGHT !!!! KOO KOO

Two years ago I was out of this site yet, but about that heavyweight tournament I'm sure that Primo Carnera from Sequals was the winner, because you are serious people, for God's sake !Thanks for the footage, Evren ! What's a footage ? And what's a covering charge ? Thanks again !About good white heavyweights, what do you all think about Tommy Morrison ? I think he was as strong as a bull, but his defence wasn't good. Anyway, I would have probably lost a street brawl with him, in spite of my shoe size ( differently from Stallone ) !

In other words I have some Carnera fights that he can copy onto Video ( PAL ONLY ). Cover charge - basically money to cover the expenses of tape post and package. Let me know if you are interested and I'll tell you what fights I have. How did you guess that Carnera won?

I am never P.C. either. I just happen to not agree with you on most of the race issues. I just don't believe that in general any group of people is better than any other group of people. Individuals may or may not be better at certain tasks, but races are not.You would probably agree with me that there are times when people will use race as an excuse for their own shortcomings. They will say things like, "the white man keeps me down," and while that is true historically, it is less true now and we have come a long way to realizing M.L. King Jr's. dream of people being judged by the content of their character and not by the color of their skin. Not only should people not be automatically judged as being bad people just by the way they look, they should have to take responsibility for their own actions, be they good or bad.Massimo, I will admit that Carnera was not as bad as people portray him. He moved well for a man his size, had a fairly good jab, and he was very strong. He also had a lot of courage and that goes a long way on making a fighter sucessful.Kent you shouldn't listen to any 'race' comment that KOOKOO has to say when he openly admits that his desire was to 'Kick the Shit' out of praying muslims at the hotel he used to work at.Yes, my video can play PAL ! I'd like to buy Carnera-Impelletiere, how much it cost ?

Americans have such a shameful history of race, and we're so messed up about the issue, that's it's almost impossible to have a legitimate discussion. Sociologists and scientists know very little about the genetic differences between the racial groups, so all people can do is speculate. I have no sympathy for Whites that resent the idea of being diminished in any way. Get over it. And for the Black Americans who assume superiority based on sports victories, most of which are determined by performances that differ by fractions of a second - That's right up there with assuming greatness after cutting someone off on the highway.Professional sports have been integrated in the U.S. for decades now, yet they remain largely mixed racially. Whatever the physical differences there are between racial groups, those differences are small enough so that no group dominates entirely. When someone wants to use "the best of the best" as an argument, they're only talking about individuals, not a group, community or race.Those communities that historically dominated boxing, were communities in the most desperation, and with the most to prove. After a generation or two went by, those communities (i.e. Irish, Italians, English, Filipinos, Japanese, others) made advances and moved out of boxing and into more of society. Unfortunately, Black Americans have had it hardest the longest.

---

11/25/03 08:10:45 PM|Evren|London|11|10|Massimo - I'll do the whole lot if you want them - may take some time. Would 30 euro's be too much including post and everything for all the fights?

11/25/03 08:23:23 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|11|10| well here we go another PC wrong moron, why don't you get it, not just this country, but this world you have got to see who leads the pack in sports, i'm white and i'll tell you if there's a sport that blacks don't dominate in, it's because their not in it!! THE TRUTH IS HARD, JUST LIKE JOE FRAZIER'S HEAD, STOP PLAYING THIS PC GAME PEOPLE. KOO KOO

11/25/03 08:45:16 PM|charles anderson|ark.|ctjjandfam@aol.com|11|10|speaking of morrison, he had everything, including a glass jaw. i thought he was the second coming of quarry until mercer nearly killed him. never was the same.

11/25/03 08:48:29 PM|Massimo|Rome|11|10|Evren - 30 euro are nothing, this is a little dream that comes true for me! Thank you very much, you are very kind!

11/25/03 09:26:58 PM|Evan B|Sydney|evanb46@hotmail.com|11|10|Going back a few days to one of Roadscholarrette's posts:1. Your claim or argument that scientists do not understand "the chemistry of the body" well enough to understand or ascertain the differences between whites and blacks contains several logical fallacies. First, your suppressed premise is that there are differences, which is the question under challenge. Second, you beg this question. Third, your claim itself is illogical and spurious. Using the same propositions, we could claim that a distant star is made of Skippy Peanut Butter, because scientists have not yet been understand its exact composition in all its detail. RS, the reasons blacks and Jews have higher blood pressure and more hypertension is two fold: one, they endure more stress as groups than most other groups, and two, they draw strongly from the same genetic pool, especially Jews. In the latter case, they favor recessive genes. Now you could cite Native Americans, with the highest rates of alcoholism, which is due, again, to most of their births coming from the same large genetic pool. It may also be the long ago (talking millenia here, or at least many centuries) some Native Americans -- perhaps just one or two -- developed a mutation or other chromosomal aberration resulting in a predisposition to lower tolerance for alcohol. That kind of "racial difference" would not account for relative failure or success in sports, though. Again, "race" is not a scientific term or anywhere acknowledged in formal study, except as a loose, general categorization. In any objective way, it's impossible to define "race". Therefore, no race can dominate a sport or sports by virtue of being a race or having the so-called attributes of a race. In the case of the NBA and the domination of African Americans in it, we can make several observations. For one, some of the African groups evolved higher percentages of people with great height, e.g., the Masai. These taller individuals, though, are not essentially different from tall whites, e.g., Bill Walton, Kevin McHale, or tall Asians, e.g., Yao Ming, etc. Second, basketball is so revered in the black community of the United States that large numbers of black boys and girls have exceptional motivation to do whatever is needed to excel. Many white kids may have similar motivation, but probably they are fewer in number. No one except Koo Koo commented on the pain and frustration blacks feel in being labeled as superior physically, with the inevitable label of being inferior mentally. It's true that sometimes slaveholders forced large male slaves to mate with large female slaves with resulting large offspring, but that proves or suggests nothing relevant to our debate. It fails to explain the large number of small blacks, or the prevailing general size of American blacks, which is the same as American Caucasians. Instead of continuing this debate, why don't we consider why anyone would want to believe or conclude that blacks are physically superior and thus, almost inevitably dominate all sports in which they participate? Koo Koo is a strong advocate of this position. Is it a way to nullify the losses of white fighters to black fighters? Is it a way to "prove" that although Ali and Frazier seemed to have beaten Quarry conclusively 4 times, actually these were not legitimate victories, because Ali and Frazier had physical advantages? In addition, let's suppose for a minute blacks WERE physically advantaged over whites. What are these advantages, then? Are they harder skulls, tougher skin that does not cut, stronger muscles, better speed, better quickness, superior ring generalship, better ability to withstand punches, better footwork, better stamina, or what? Please be precise in your answers. I predict that no matter what ability any of you argue that blacks naturally have more of, it's possible to identify a white fighter with more of it than most of all fighters, regardless of color. For example, I've always been impressed with Quarry's killer instinct. As I said, once he had an opponent in trouble, he almost always finished the fight. Quarry was white, though, so are all black fighters better, with better killer instinct? No. Marvin Hagler may have been equal in this skill, or better. I'm sure we could think of some others, too. For now, though, why exactly do you think blacks are better, in terms of specific skills or abilities they have in greater abundance than whites? | 11/26/03 05:24:54 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca|Kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Some people say blacks completely dominate professional basketball but if there was an all time white all star team with players from various eras all playing at the top of their games, they would be hard to beat even by an all star team of all time great black players. The starting five would be Bill Walton, Kevin McHale, Larry Bird, Jerry West, and John Stockton. Coming off of the bench would be George Mikan, Bob Cousy, John Havlicek, and Bob Petit, among others. This team could compete well against a starting team of Wilt Chamberlain, Julius Erving, Karl Malone, Michael Jordan, and Oscar Robertson. Substitutes for this team could be Shaquille O'Neal, Kobie Bryant, Magic Johnson, and others. Which team would win? I don't know, but I do think the elite group of white players could beat any team put together consisting of players below this elite level, white or black, or any combination of the two. THIS IS MY LAST ENTRY FOR QUITE SOME TIME ON THIS TIRESOME ISSUE, RACE! BACK TO BOXING, THIS IS GETTING BORING.| 11/26/03 06:36:40 AM|Evren|London||@||10|Massimo - we will make it 100 euro's then!}\}
| 11/26/03 09:34:49 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|KENT, EVAN, THERE IS NO DEFENSE FOR WHITE FIGHTERS, IT IS A FACT THAT NO ONE WANTS TO ACKNOWLGE, THERE HASN'T BEEN A WHITE HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMP SINCE 1960, IT THAT SOME KIND OF ACCIDENT ALL THESE YEARS, NO , BLACKS AND WHITES WE ALL KNOW THE TRUTH AND THE LAST 43YRS PROVES IT. KENT THE GREATEST WHITE BOYS OF ALL TIME WOULD NOT BEAT THE GREATEST BLACKS OF ALL TIME, I'M DONE TRYING TO CONVICE ALL YOU PC
Unless you Count Gerrie Cottziee from South Africa in 1983 There hasn't been that many white contenders either. But that will change with the Russians seeing Boxing as an escape from poverty. The Klitchko brothers will dominate the heavyweights in the next couple of years.

Yes, probably on average the black guys are bigger, more athletic and stronger than white guys are. Probably their muscular cells are better and probably this is demonstrable scientifically. I think if somebody compares two persons, one white and one black of the same age, equally trained and equally big, on average the black one is stronger. This doesn't bother me at all. It's well known that white and black are different and it's inevitable that black people are better in some activities and white people are better in others. For instance, I don't remember a great black mathematician. This doesn't mean that black people are unable to produce great mathematicians, surely there are many historical reasons that can explain this! But anyway I suspect that, ON AVERAGE, white people are better than black people for Mathematics. And so what? What's the problem?

Evren, the reason I respond to Koo Koo now is he apologized to me and he has been attacking my opinion and not me as a person, this is how it should be and I have no problem with this.

Your claim or argument that scientists do not understand "the chemistry of the body" is not true, they don't, not on any level, for any reason. Take aging, for example. Medicine knows something is going on chemically, but they don't know what it is. Likewise with any other area you might want to name.

First, your suppressed premise is that there are differences, which is the question under challenge. In the days when they weren't allowed to compete at all, no one would've said anything, but when the doors were opened, and almost total dominance has become the result, then one has to say to themselves, "Huh, what's going on here?" This has got to be one of the greatest examples of something about which people feel one thing privately, and say something else publicly.

we could claim that a distant star is made of Skippy Peanut Butter, because scientists have not yet been understand its exact composition in all its detail. You could say that, but it'd be silly. There would be no reason to suspect any different composition than Earth, till evidence indicated otherwise, then explore from there. That's what I've advanced here - exploration of compelling evidence. I haven't pulled something out of thin air (like the peanut butter example), such as, "Blacks like hamsters as pets more."

RS, the reasons blacks and Jews have higher blood pressure and more hypertension is two fold: one, they endure more stress as groups than most other groups, and two, they draw strongly from the same genetic pool, especially Jews.

I know ~why~ they have higher BP - my point is that it isn't racist or even derogatory to say something of this nature. The BP issue is based totally on numbers, a similar situation to the one we have in sports. We aren't all hardwired for all time at the "factory" either. Things can change over enough generations. Fish that live in black caves are eventually born with no eyes. People who live a life of devastating poverty, stress, poor diet, high levels of substance abuse, etc. will eventually begin negatively affecting their gene pool. predisposition to lower tolerance for alcohol.

Quite likely, just as many behaviors are now being linked to chemistry, once again - everything from obsessions to violence to alcoholism and other addictive behaviors. Again, "race" is not a scientific term or anywhere acknowledged in formal study, except as a loose, general categorization. In any objective way, it's impossible to define "race". Race is easy to define - just the way we do it. Science, as history has shown, is not static, concrete, absolute, or particularly enduring, so I'm sure it'll be understanding! Therefore, no race can dominate a sport or sports by virtue of being a race. But they do, and do so without question. For one, some of the African groups evolved higher percentages of people with great height, e.g., the Masai. Or the Watusies. It's also been theorized that other inner attributes survived the trip across the pond, centuries ago - greater numbers of fast twitch muscle fibers (jumping, speed, faster movements), and lower body fat percentage. Strength doesn't seem to be much different. Large numbers of black boys and girls have exceptional motivation to do whatever is needed to excel. This is certainly an edge. A coach once said - I want to say it was Phil Jackson when he was in Chicago, but I'm not sure - that black kids play BB outside in December, with snow in the air, on a playground with broken glass on the concrete, and a hoop with no net, while you have to open up the high school gym to get white kids to play. No one except Koo Koo commented on the pain and frustration blacks feel in being labeled as superior physically, with the inevitable label of being inferior mentally. I commented extensively on that. Or the prevailing general size of American blacks, which is the same as American Caucasians. A black man is far more likely to be six feet or more, than is a white man. A person doesn't even have to know this. Just look around. How many average sized (5'9") black men do you ever see? I can't remember the last time, myself. Want to believe or conclude that blacks are physically superior? I don't want to believe it, or have any need to do so. I really don't care, one way or the other. I was simply stating the great unstated obvious. Koo Koo is a strong advocate of this position. Is it a way to nullify the losses of white fighters to black fighters? It doesn't nullify the losses, anymore than a Tampa Bay victory over my Chicago Bears is nullified, by virtue of the facts that the Bucs are a much better team. Because Ali and Frazier had physical advantages? They did. They were enough better athletically, to ensure two victories each over JQ. That's sports. Just being black doesn't automatically confer magical powers to an athlete. However, observation and anecdotal evidence suggests that there is certainly something going on in large enough numbers of black men and women, as to make it impossible to ignore as being there. What are these advantages, then? The advantages would have their roots clear down at the cellular level - the "body chemical." This is true of any attribute, positive or negative, or whatever the attribute is. What we don't understand is the what and the how. We can already see the results. The ability of Ali, Frazier, and Quarry to take a punch certainly has its genesis here as well as anything else you might want to name. Some have even suggested that there may be a higher (or lower, as in breaking something down to base) place where our attributes reside - that of the spirit, the idea of us being souls with bodies, rather than bodies with souls. But of course that gets into a whole new field of argument... Identify a white fighter with more of it than most of all fighters, regardless of color. Yes, you'll always find exceptions to everything - like the hundred year old guy who smokes like a chimney and drinks like a fish, and people point to him as proof that these things aren't that bad; humans have the unfortunate tendency often to generalize exceptions. For example, I've always been impressed with Quarry's killer instinct. That's an emotional characteristic though. We could get into those too, I suppose.
they were freed from slavery. When they were freed, they were completely illiterate and viewed as animals without souls, then when they weren't able to seamlessly and easily blend into white society, whites said, "See, they are inferior!" To say they're better athletically isn't a slam, ie, "that's all they can to, the dumb brutes." Instead, it's simply a recognition of what is quite likely a wondrous inborn gift in greater numbers of blacks than whites. We may eventually find that many races have their own specific niche talents or attributes. It's just that athletics is so obvious, and so much in the spotlight that it's first to be noticed.

I predict that no matter what ability any of you argue that blacks naturally have more of, it's possible to identify a white fighter with more of it than most of all fighters, regardless of color.

IF WE SELECTED 100 WHITE FIGHTERS AND 100 BLACK FIGHTERS AND COMPARED THEIR ABILITIES AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN THE RING, I AM CERTAIN THAT THERE WOULD BE A HIGHER PERCENTAGE OF BLACKS THAN WHITES THAT WOULD EXCEL. THAT DOESN'T MEAN THAT A WHITE FIGHTER IS NOT AS GOOD AS A BLACK FIGHTER, BUT IT DOES MEAN THAT THERE ARE A GREATER PERCENTAGE OF ACCOMPLISHED BLACK FIGHTERS AS OPPOSED TO WHITE FIGHTERS. AGAIN, LET'S NOT OVERLOOK THE CULTURAL FACTORS, AS WELL AS, INATE ABILITY.

Hi RS !

I don't agree with you on what you have said about the stars. The physicists have understood in detail how the stars work, their composition and their evolution. "we" know very well that the stars are very different from the Earth.

Even if you consider the ancient Greeks, all the great Mathematicians were white: Archimede, Euclide, Pitagora... Probably there are historical reasons for that, I don't know exactly how black people lived in Greece at that time. I just have a legitimate suspect that, on average, black people have a lower level of skill for this activity. But I would be not surprised at all if tomorrow I heard that a black guy has found something very important in Mathematics.

Now I see, I am THE ROADMAN, I thought that RS was. There is a deep difference between STREET WILINESS and real SMARTNESS. Anyway I can't really define intelligence... We can't be sure that someone can be a thing until he realizes that thing.

Yes, as far as we've gone in space exploration, we have a respectable understanding of how stars work. I was just responding to the example about assuming a star was made of peanut butter (when we didn't know its composition), by stating that in the absence of knowledge or proof, one starts with what's familiar or obvious, and uses that as home base from which to explore further, and get to the bottom of something they don't understand.

Wrong roadman, i don't consider whites any smarter than blacks, blacks in many cases don't have the means to get a good education, although they been working on that for years, if your talking about book smart , looks like the chinese/japanese have the edge, STREET SMART NOBODY EVEN COMES CLOSE TO BLACKS, THEY COULD CON YOU SOCKS OFF, LETS CALL IT GETTO SMARTS, KOO KOO !

Now I see, I am THE ROADMAN, I thought that RS was. There is a deep difference between STREET WILINESS and real SMARTNESS. Anyway I can't really define intelligence... We can't be sure that someone can be a thing until he realizes that thing.

Absolutely right. If the schools in the suburbs where I live were a tenth as bad as the Chicago ghetto schools, there'd be a revolution. There's also not the same amount of cultural support for education in the slums as in white suburbia, so it's a lot of factors all feeding off themselves, perpetuating the vicious cycle of failure.

Formal education isn't a guarantee of intelligence either, not really even the same thing. Using a computer metaphor, "intelligence" is the power of a given person's CPU, and it'll be that no matter how far they went in school. While the odds are that the more education a person has, the more native intelligence they'll have, that's just a matter of odds, and not a given. There are also people out there with minimal education who are flat out brilliant - garbage men who dropped out of high school who belong to Mensa, and so forth.BTW, the man who holds the record as the "smartest" man in America, with a 195 IQ, is a biker, looks like a porkchop, lives in a log cabin he built, and works as a bouncer. So...you never can tell! Generally the smarter a person is, the more eccentric they'll be as well. I think we've all seen that.The last sentence in my last comment was completely wrong! The hurry and the English fooled me! I meant that we can't be sure thata black man can be a great mathematician until there will be a black great mathematician.IN MANY WAYS, AFRICAN AMERICANS ARE STILL ENSLAVED. THEY ARE, FOR THE MOST PART, CULTURALLY SEGREGATED AND DO NOT, AS A PEOPLE, HAVE ACCESS TO THE MANY OPPORTUNITIES (EDUCATION, EMPLOYMENT, HOUSING) THAT WHITE AMERICANS EXPERIENCE. AS ABORIGINAL AMERICANS WERE DISPATCHED TO RESERVATIONS, AFRICAN AMERICANS WERE DISPATCHED TO THE NEGLECTED INNER CITIES OF THIS COUNTRY. THE PROBLEM WITH AMERICA IS THAT IT REFUSES TO CALL A SPADE, A SPADE (please pardon the expression). WE ARE IN DENIAL, WHERE RACISM AND RACIAL DIFFERENCES ARE CONCERNED. THIS IS A PROFIT DRIVEN SOCIETY WHICH HAS LITTLE TIME OR USE FOR THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN MARGINALIZED. IS IT ANY WONDER THAT VISIBLE MINORITIES, SUCH AS AFRICAN AMERICANS, ARE ONLY ABLE TO SUCCEED IN SPORTS AND ENTERTAINMENT. LOOK BACK HISTORICALLY AND THE SIMILARITIES ARE QUITE ASTOUNDING.Evren, this is why I rarely participate on the board anymore. Sorry to say but quite frankly, I find it boring.R.S. hit the essence of this racial controversy when she mentioned that there are people out there with untapped athletic and intellectual potential. I remember hearing or reading some sports pundit saying that there are probably thousands of white pro-caliber athletes, fighters, ball players, who are stock brokers or construction workers. As there are probably thousands of black mathematicians, doctors, etc., who, because of missed opportunity, are instead menial laborers. Remember, the top pros in any sport, are the one-tenth of one-percent of all athletes in the world! Differences in reflexes of less than a split second, make all the difference in performance at this level. Which would suggest a very small difference in the total population overall.

Hey, R.S., your falling prey to your own accusations of racial stereotyping. I am a retired ironworker. I worked with native americans from New York frequently. Aside from having a radically different lifestyle and outlook on their future lives, their skills were no different than the white and black ironworkers. Their having superior skills connecting "high iron", is another racial myth. It's insulting!! The number of native American ironworkers is a small percentage of the men who have built this country. I would be very interested in the source of your information as regards any neurological studies that have proved conclusively that Indians demonstrate better balance, whatever that means. Also, I'd be fascinated by conclusive proof that American Indians have a different hip structure, endemic only to Indians, that somehow gives them an advantage in walking high iron. Working in the air has nothing to do with balance skills. It is a phycological state of mind that comes with time, practice, and mentoring from all the tougher, stronger, older guys. Oh, yes, and also a three year apprenticeship program. If I laid a six inch beam on the ground, you or any one else could not only walk it, but probably dance on it! If I take that same beam two hundred feet up in the air, you would freeze and be unable to take a step.|

11/26/03 06:52:39 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|Sorry to here that Forest. I wanted to ask you by the way whether you ever attended Quarry fights back in the 1960's or 1970's or any other major battles that took place then. |11/26/03 07:30:15 PM|Mr. B|Sydney||same|||10|Roadscholarette, you are not responding directly to my points in repudiation of your earlier claims. Your lack of response must be due either to: 1) Lack of understanding 2) Stubbornness, willful or otherwise 3) Insincerity 4) Relative ignorance of research and research techniques  5) Combinations of these. At any rate: 1. Please define race. 2. Identify which areas of body chemistry (e.g. systems, phenomena) and what levels (e.g., cellular, hormonal, etc.) are not understood or well understood by scientists. 3. If you are saying one or more areas are not ABSOLUTELY understood -- meaning completely, perfectly -- say so, please. 4. Prove your allegation that black men are much more likely to be taller than white men. I argue that the level of height and distribution of levels is closely comparable, with the exception that there is a statistically insignificant taller group of black men (probably about 1% of total, from Masai, etc.) 5. Discuss and defend your assertion that black men are "obviously" better athletes in even one sport. Kent has shown that an all-star white team is on par with a black one. Also account for white domination of bowling and thoroughbred riding, where many blacks also participate. 6. You say you have no need to have a reason to believe "the obvious", while in fact that's exactly why you believe this idea, because you perceive it as obvious. You're like a dog chasing his own tail, then. Several of us have shown this perceived obviousness is anything but obvious. What is your motive in believing this, then? Statistics can be a much more complex discipline that most of you friends seem to realize. Even a longtime boxing fanatic like Roadscholarette has seen only about 15,600 boxers in her life. (Assuming 10 new ones a week for 52 weeks for 30 years.) (Of course, at his age, Massimo has seen a million.) This 15,600 is a minute sample of all the world’s boxers in the last 30 years. Therefore, you cannot argue perceptions dependent upon visual samples -- it will be unreliable, invalid, and dependent on vaguely related factors, e.g., how many beers you drank at the arena that night. Instead of starting from the outside, then, we must start from the inside and basic principles. One of them is that there is no such thing as race. Another is that there is no significant difference between so-called racial groups. Three, for every black champion, we can point to at least one boxer who is just as good. Fourth, we can demonstrate that one form of dominance (most excellent fighters in a given time) varies from Irish to English to go German to Italian to American to Jew, etc. Yet that’s how the dominance swept though the West beginning in about 1875. It seems as though from now on every single word, make that letter that you right will be dissected and analyzed, scrutinized and bastardized by someone. What sort of race are you lot from Sydney?? Your right Forest.. BORING !

Hey Evren, I'm surprised to read that your dissapointed in posters becoming a little more analytical about posts that might be considerd somewhat biased,innacurate,or perhaps having an agenda other than boxing. I'm an Irish Catholick.Please keep your faith off this site. Otherwise,I might have to talk to some of my I.R.A. relatives,and have a muslin soup kitchen, you know, the one that welcomes all homeless people,regardless of faith, become a victim of no trash pickup for two weeks!! By Steve N.J.|dmmsrm@comcast.net|11/26/03 10:02:27 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com||11/26/03 11:16:25 PM|Pete|Cleveland||pco@hotmail.com||

"THE CLOCKMAN HAS SPOKEN, THERE WILL BE NO WHITE HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPIONS " (KOOKOO'S QUOTE)You may be very surprised, Mr."K", as the Heavyweight scene is very unstable currently, and often difficult to predict. There are a number of "White" contenders at the moment and a "Black" champion, who is asleep at the wheel. Stay tuned.Does anyone remember Irish Frankie Crawford, a welter out of the San Fernando Valley, fought around 1965-1975? That kid did me proud, for I am also an Irish Catholic. I'm not a dumb slob of a harp, but I cin mispel wiht th besst of them, two, if reiured to do so too get alung. If you don't I write, you can kiss my royal Irish arse. Kent and I have tried to be patient and set things down as clearly and logically as we can, but a lot of you aren't here for the truth or to learn. You sign on to polish your knob and see how stupid you can get away with being. Even Tiny Evron climbs onto a chair and brandishes his crutch. There should be an electric shock device programmed into this sit to administer a heavy zap to the next moron who writes: 1. was always a punch away from a championship. 2. George Chuvalo was a helluva fighter. 3. Ali was overrated. 4. Quarry had the perfect style to beat . 5. I don't see how Jack Dempsey ever won a single fight BECAUSE HE WAS WHITE! Scientists don't know enough about that to know for sure.
7. A few years ago in Chicago I was working on my collection of Joe Frazier boogers and I suddenly realized that a double left uppercut feint and an overhand left hook, he could have flattened Ali at 1:21 of the 2nd in Manila! BOXERS WITH STRANGEST STYLES: Eddie Machen Archie Moore Ken Norton Floyd Patterson That Prince Naheel of whatevert guy Pernell Whitaker Roy Jones Junior Gene Fullmer Georges Carpentier Gypsy Joe Harris Ernesto ("Huggy") Marmalejo Now will someone please write another genius post about how great the underrated Joe Bugner was? Time for bed, Massimo. Are you in your jammies yet? I'll tell you some Primo Carnera bedtime stories. | 11/27/03 12:11:06 AM Slade Portland, OR info@ptctel.com | Hello Folks. Slade here. It's been a few years since I visited the site, but I come back to share an important issue with you (and I'll get back to that issue in a minute). But first, I want to say that I always thought it was a privilege to speak with James Quarry, I viewed the world of boxing in a different perspective each time I spoke with him - he could take a negative issue in boxing and talk about it in a positive tone...such a great guy. What brings me back to the site today is "Timothy Middleton". He is a fellow that writes about Financial Investing and he wrote an article that's popping up ALL OVER the internet. I got upset about his article...he's says "The fund industry is taking a beating like Jerry Quarry, and for good reason. One fund after another is disclosing that it was engaged in funny-business trading." First of all, he is completely off mark with using Jerry in a "tomato can" stereotype. He associates a great person, in Jerry, with corporate thieves just by mentioning him in the same paragraph. I tracked down "Timothy Middleton" and got his business email address, it's timothy@middleton.net. I would encourage you to read his article and drop him an email, again this article is everywhere, see it at http://moneycentral.msn.com/content/p63164.asp as well as other sites. I sent him an email and explained that his reference about Jerry was off mark. I told him that Quarry was no "stiff". His record was something like 52-8, during the most competitive era of Boxing (the era of Ali, Foreman, Frazier, Norton, etc) and although he was TKO'd, he was never knocked out. I reminded him that Quarry beat 2 of the Ring's #1 contenders, I explained how he took apart Ron Lyle (17-0), Mac Foster (24-0), and how he KO's Ernie Shavers in the 1st round. I explained that Ring Magazine voted the 1969 Frazier fight as the Fight of the Year, and for good reason, 2 fighters in their prime gave it all they had and put on a great show. I asked him to visit George Foreman's home page, for years George posted on his site that Jerry was the greatest Heavyweight to never win a title and that if he changed his strategy in the Frazier fight, he could have been champion... and that George admittedly dodged him after the Shaver knockout. I know all these points have been posted time and again on this site, but if you can think of a good line or two, let Tim Middleton know about it - he flooded the internet with his inappropriate comment about Jerry, maybe if we share the true reputation Jerry with him he’ll make it up to us and post another article that shines a different light on Jerry. Happy Holidays, Slade.

| 11/27/03 12:15:54 AM | steve | N.J. | dimsmrm@comcast.net |
| 11/27/03 12:24:50 AM | Evren | London |

Evren - I was kidding about the Race think with 'you guys from Sydney'. Steve - I have never tried to garner sympathy for my religious beliefs as I have very few. When I foolishly mentioned I was a muslim (by birth) I meant that my name and my complexion give me hassle. I don't want any sympathy. It reminds me of a few years back - someone would mention an Irish person and ignorant people like Paul from Sydney would start rambling on about him being IRA. You said it perfectly Steve - 'We are from the human race' and really there should me no more to it than that. When all my friends get together it's like a meeting at the UN conference. Every race, religion you could think of... I don't really care what anyone is. None of this has nothing to do with boxing and I feel somewhat responsible for the tone and subjects on here when I made a comment about the US President. Maybe I'll stay away from here for a while... Massimo - you e-mail me your address if you can. Forest and Kent are kings on this site... Just one last thing - Evan - regarding your list of fighters with the strangest styles. Very interesting... another to add perhaps would be Tommy 'Hurricane' Jackson - anyone remember the punch he was famous for? | |11/27/03 01:55:28 AM|Evren|London||@|||10|Steve, are you a greasy little goombah, about 5'6", 350 pounds? Haven't seen your own dick in 20 years? Don't attack people's religion, OK? Just don't. You owe Evren an apology. To answer your question, the US just completely destroyed Iraq. Does that possibly suggest a reason some of the Muslims there might hate Americans and Christians? Evren, thanks for the strange style guy. (I swear, you read this site, you go away thinking Jerry Quarry pissed lemonade, never got hit, was the greatest heavyweight in history .. ) | |11/27/03 02:11:06 AM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Hey Evan, it's great that you remember Gyspie Joe Harris! He did indeed have one of the strangest, herky jerky styles. Jersey Joe Walcott had a simaler style, and he wasn't blind in one eye!! Walcott would plant his feet, as though to throw a punch, and then suddenly walk away to either side of his opponent. Very energy conserving. Everyone in Philly loved Gyspy Joe. He was an absolute original. He told everyone he trained on "scotch and milk"! He gave Emile Griffith a great fight for welterweight title. Not bad for a guy with one eye. He fell on very hard times after his split with the Frazeir camp. | |11/27/03 02:39:03 AM|Steve |N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Hey Evan, your right, I'm a greasy little Irish american goomba. Er, that is, I'm married to a goombah, that is, an Italian girl. I'm five foot ten inches tall. I weigh 275 lbs. I can, whoever, still see my dick. I will this one time acknowledge your post. I have not attacked anyone's religion. I have defended my religion! | |11/27/03 02:55:01 AM|Evren B|Sydney||evanb46@juno.com|||10|Steve, that's great. I never saw Gypsy Joe fight, though. I read about him in one of the American magazines and he sounded spectacular. Even mentioned his scotch and milk! Does anyone know what happened to Joe? Seems to me he may have fought Hurricane Carter, too. Reminds me that the other day somebody was saying Hurricane was 200% overrated. Kent? RS? Experts? I can't keep track of all the divisions. Glad to hear of another strange style. Former boxers: is there a name for that classic sidestep you see fighters make in the earliest "feeling out" part of a fight, round 1 or 2? Hard to describe. It's circle, circle, circle, stop, deliberately step the other direction, resume boxing and circling. Maybe it's called "the Joe Louis" or something? | |11/27/03 03:05:12 AM|Kent|jLa Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Slade, welcome back. You are right, Jerry takes a bad rap as just being an opponent and just taking punishment. This is not true of course. If someone looks a little deeper than their perception of Jerry, they would find out what a good fighter he was. Koo Koo, you know I have never said there would be no more white heavyweight champions. I think it is possible and I am not sure why you would say this and you know I disagree with you on this issue. | |11/27/03 03:08:26 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PaulMls4@aol.com|||10|Evren - you are the biggest fool on this site. You rambled on about being a Muslim, trying to garner sympathy, introducing your political beliefs, claiming to have been discriminated against, and now you're trying to back away like an ignorant bigot. I ignored you so that the others didn't have to listen to your crap, in the hope that you would stop, but even though I haven't posted, you have narked on and on trying to start trouble. Over the past few days you have slammed
Steve, you have told Kent who he should listen to, and you got upset at Koo Koo when he spoke his mind (despite praising others for doing exactly the same thing). At the same time you crawl to others trying to get their support. And then you turn around and make racist comments about everyone from from Sydney just because you have it in for me. You are indeed a fool and at least everyone can see you for what you are. Forget about all the provocative stupid comments, stop telling everyone that you are a Muslim, and please desist from telling everyone else what they should say and think. Stick to talking about boxing.

| 11/27/03 03:31:58 AM | steve | N.J. | dmmrsr@comcast.net | 10 | Hey Kent!! Where are you when I need you? Are you going to let this guy make insulting remarks about my manly physique? Couldn't you at least say that I'm not really a bad Christian dog non-believer? |
| 11/27/03 04:41:53 AM | Paul | Sydney, Australia | PlMls4@aol.com | 10 | Hey, Evren - while staying away from this site and not posting 24/7, why don't you get a job. You've got some employable talents, haven't you? Oh, sorry! And Evan B. You write suspiciously like someone else who posted here, someone calling himself Gianfranco. Putting aside all the personal sniping in your posts, you are entertaining. I get a good laugh from your posts and enjoy reading them. What does that say about me? I suspect that you are not really the intellectual snob you make out. But you shouldn't team up with ignorant Evren. He has an agenda, which we can't talk about. Only Evren is allowed to make those sort of comments. So sssh everyone. And Evren gets bitchy and nasty when he doesn't get his own way. Did you notice how I didn't post for over four days hoping that Evren would give everyone a rest with all the personal sniping and religious and political crap? But every day I missed Evren just kept coming back making provocative remarks trying to keep the fight going. Go read his posts and see for yourself. So instead of ignoring it, I may as well comment right on back. Evren is now insulted out and trying to get sympathy he says that he is going to stop posting. Yeah sure. Koo Koo - the last thing we want around here is you being politically correct. Gianfranco will call me a psycho for it, but I like your humour and it makes me laugh. Anyway, how's the job hunting going, Evren? Try a bit harder. |
| 11/27/03 05:27:11 AM | Massimo | Rome | 4 | 10 | About fighters with strange stiles, TONY GALENTO is another one! Evren->Massimo.Cini@roma2.infn.it THANKS! |
| 11/27/03 06:06:36 AM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Steve, yes us with those Manly builds should stick together! Shame on anyone who makes fun of how they perceive Steve to look like. Also, anyone who makes racial slurs about Italian Americans, Italians, or other ethnic groups, even as a joke should lay off of this! There have been so many negative comments sent back and forth lately it is getting hard to keep track of who said what. I am going to try again to limit my comments to boxing and not race issues.  I will not comment on someone's religion other than to say, the real danger is extremists, whatever their beliefs. Be those beliefs Christian, Jewish, Muslim, or any other belief. Thank God that the extremists make up a very small percentage of all groups. I would say Muhammad Ali had an unusual style as well. Until he came along, no one had ever been able to move around with his hands so low and get away with it. |
| 11/27/03 06:14:43 AM | Paul | Sydney, Australia | PlMls4@aol.com | 10 | Massimo, help us out here. Gianfranco says that Christians "completely destroyed Iraq". Was the Vatican involved in the war or is Gianfranco making that up? Saddam was a great man. He murdered over 300,000 of his countrymen and gassed tens of thousands of kurds. Evren and his multi-coloured friends down the UN didn't care less and let him do it. The US and the coalition of the willing did care. Does that give you a hint about the war, Gianfranco? You are the smart one, so tell me. What religion other than Islam reveres words like Jihad and Fatwah? Answer:
Question to Evren: What has the Jerry Quarry site got in common with religion and politics? Answer: none. So why did you start this argument, you @$#%^ muck !!!!!!!! I am going to be politically incorrect – not every Muslim is a terrorist, but nearly every terrorist is a Muslim. Let us all know when we can go back to only talking about boxing, Evren and Gianfranco.

Mike Quarry opponent Ray "Windmill" White? Talk about an unorthodoxed style. White would swing roundhouse shots from all angles and he had some success with this style.

How about Mike Quarry opponent Ray "Windmill" White? Talk about an unorthodoxed style. White would swing roundhouse shots from all angles and he had some success with this style.

Paul: The argument never ends brother. You have your opinions and I have mine. I MUST admit that in the last few days I HAVE tried to annoy you. Rugby etc. Reason I'm off work; Kent knows.

I must say finally that I really haven't been myself and do want to offer my apologies to Paul and anyone else that I may have offended. I PROMISE that I'll stick to Boxing. I do think you were a little harsh on the beginning but you feel strongly I know. Paul can we be civil?

Hi and yo Paul!

I had an argument in mind, but then I have decided that I'm not going to talk about politics on this site. I'm sorry that Paul and Evren are not good friends, they are both nice guys!

Ray Windmill White and his behind the back punch was the most unorthodox fighter I ever saw. Good one Kent. I wonder what he is doing now. I remember reading about a fighter from the 30's who would go back to his corner and read the newspaper and smoke a cigar between rounds. There are no shortage of characters in boxing.

Hi yo Paul !

And what about John Sullivan that did drink all night and then whipped asses?

Does anyone remember Tommy Hurricane Jackson's double uppercut punch?!? It was quite ridiculous actually and it was more effective in getting the crowd 'going' than it was damaging his opponent. He would basically pull both arms back and fire them simultaneously in an uppercut fashion. He was an Enigma Jackson. He used to run everywhere - all the time running here there and everywhere - he was super fit and his endurance was frightening. On the night of his world title fight with Patterson his manager had do disuade him from running to the stadium. A crazy cat. Never know what happened to him in the end.

His record shows that he beat - Rex Layne(twice), Dan Bucceroni (The Butcher Boy), Charlie Norkus, Archie McBride(twice), Jimmy Slade, Ezzard Charles (twice), Bob Baker (twice), Julio Mederos and Howard King. His final record finished on - 34-9-1-16 ko's.

My husband saw the Windmill many times, from the Olympic and Forum. He said tth while he was inept enough to make a fight with Foster highly dangerous, that he also had the ability to make other good fighters look bad. Didn't he used to throw a double hook? I don't mean doubling up with one hand, body then head or head then body, but a left and right hook at the same time. Also punches behind his back and stuff? :-)

HAPPY THANKSGIVING ALL! WE LOVE & MISS YOU DAD, AND UNCLE JERRY.

Happy Thanksgiving Sonia and the great Quarry family and all of the characters on this site. It has been fun.

Yes, Evren has good reason to be off of work and to be a little surly recently. It is not my place to repeat what he told me here.

Koo Koo has said at times that I don't work. It is true, I don't have a regular job, I haven't had one in almost five years as my family and I lucked into becoming part owners of a very lucrative business. I may be literally set for life if things continue to go the way they have been going financially. Funny, my life hasn't changed all that much. I still drive the same old 1987 Mazda and I don't dress to impress. I just don't have to go to a job I hate and I don't have to walk home or ride my bycycle home late at night (when I didn't have a car) anymore. I know this is none of anyone's business but Koo Koo used to bring up the job issue. No, I don't get a government hand out, in fact my income is quite high, especially compared to what it used to be.

11/27/03 02:52:14 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|hey kent, no sweat man, it's good you don't have a job, working for other people sucks, looks like you got some freedom man, HAPPY THANKSGIVING TO THE QUARRY FAMILY, TAKE CARE

11/27/03 02:55:17 PM|Massimo|Rome||4|||10|I don't remember exactly what "THANKSGIVING DAY" is. I heard that once atschool, all I remember is that there is a turkey involved... Anyway, good THANKSGIVING DAY to everybody !!

11/27/03 03:48:43 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com`|||10|Happy turkey day everyone! People are here, and things are cooking, so I'll see y'all tomorrow! I'm going to be climbing Mt. Everest and doing a triathlon in the morning though, to work off everything I eat today! :-)

11/27/03 03:55:16 PM|Evren|London||8|||10|Happy holidays to all. Massimo I have sent you an e-mail - read it young Roman.

11/27/03 05:06:01 PM|Paul|Sydney||PlMls4@aol.com|||10|Kent - we can all have off days and problems but that doesn't give Evren the license to make the comments he did. I hadn't posted from 22 November hoping it would give Evren the space to stop the nonsense. But then, among other comments, he wrote on 25/11: "I hope Paul doesn't go beserk and accuse me of being a suicide bomber." When I didn't react, he wrote on 26/11: "What sort of race are you lot in Sydney" (imagine if anyone else said that about a middle eastern country). And when I didn't react, Evren wrote on 27/11: "Ignorant people like Paul from Sydney." So then I reacted and I was entitled to. Hopefully we can now get back to talking about boxing. But if I could raise just one slightly different subject. Happy thanksgiving to all the Americans. But what is Thanksgiving all about ? It sounds like a wonderful tradition, but what is it ?

11/27/03 05:44:23 PM|Evren|London||8|||10|I've apologised to you Paul. It really wasn't like me alot of the stuff I wrote - look back at the last three years of my posts. Paul - Can I ask you a boxing question if I may - What Australian boxers are most revered in your country? I hope you can answer me.

Evren

11/27/03 05:46:49 PM|Forest Ward|South Carolina||Joekevin@cs.com|||10|Evren, I saw a lot of Jerry Quarry's fights in NYC, beginning with Buster Mathis. Here is the list: Mathis, Frazier 1&2, Chuvalo (incidentally, Quarry got a fast count in that fight. Zack Clayton was notorious for fast counts, look at the Foreman-Ali 10 count). I saw Quarry against: Mac Foster, Randy Neuman, Ron lyle, Earnie Shavers. I also saw a few of Mike Quarry's early fight in NYC: Rueben Figarua 1&2, Ray Ayalo. Mike won close decisions in all 3 of those fights.The rematch for the Figarua was on the undercard of a Foreman fight. When Quarry got the decision the latin fans in the Garden started grumbling and throwing things. Guess who is sitting ringside and encouraging them, Muhammad Ali. Ali damn near incited a riot. This was in the fall of 1969 Mike Quarry could have just as easily lost those 3 fights. Being undefeated, and Jerry's brother didn't hurt Mike. Although, after he lost to Bob Foster, he did not win too many close decisions after that.I saw Ali-Bonavena, I actually rode in the subway train with Ali and his entourage to the fight that night. I saw quite a few of George Foreman's early fights in the Gardens. The one I remember best was when George beat Chuvalo. George pounded Chuvalo from one corner to the next, Foreman was devastating. Chuvalo's wife was at ringside screaming to the referee to stop the fight. The tape of that fight does not do justice to how awesome Foreman was that night! I saw Bonavena against Patterson, I thought Bonavena won. I saw Emile Griffith fight more times than I can remember, but he was no longer a champion in any of these fights. I saw Sonny Liston-Chuck Wepner in the Jersey City Armory. The 1st professional boxing match I ever attended was Dick Tiger-Bob Foster. The greatest fight I ever attended was Dick Tiger against Frankie DePaula. The 1st 4 rounds were identical to Foreman-Lyle. The last 6 were drab, Tiger won 10 round decision.

I saw Vito Antufermo in his first amateur fight, he lost. I see him fight 6 months later and boy did he improve. Vito was a overachiever. I saw Eddie Mustafa Muhammad aka Eddie Gregory in the amateurs. He would knock out all his opponents with just one punch. He was a teenage welterweight version of Bob Foster. I saw Eddie beat Vito via a 3 round decision in the Golden Gloves finals in the Garden in 1971. No one knocks Vito out! Evren, when I saw most of these fights I was a teenager (I turned 50 last October). I would have made a deal with the devil to trade places with most of these fighters, and be them. Now at the age of 50, I thank God that I never got to meet the devil. But, the memories are priceless.

Massimo - Ali kayoed Bonavena and WEPNER ABSOLUTELY DID NOT KNOCKDOWN FOREMAN NO MATTER WHAT HE SAYS! Evren, in the interest of fairness, you should not have said anything about people from Sydney. Any negative remarks about any kind of people is not right. Be they white, black, of whatever their beliefs are.

Also, by saying to Paul that it never ends, it will be hard to get back to boxing. I am not turning on you and since we go back a long way at this site, I would consider you a friend. But like I said, fair is fair. Evren, I do understand why you have been feeling the way you do. You know I am concerned about what you are going through.

NOW, AM I BEING FAIR BY BEING CRITICAL OF ALL OF THE NEGATIVE TALK LATELY, AND CAN WE PLEASE GET BACK TO BOXING?! night.I've always told Wepner that the fight that should have been made was him and George chuvalo. Fortunately, in hindsight for Wepner it didn't happen. Chuck was made to order for Chuvalo, and Chuck might have gotten seriously hurt. Wepner tells me his best fight was against Manuel Ramos. I was there it was a good fight the decision could have gone to Ramos, it was that close. I told Wepner that I thought his best fight was against, guess who? Forest Ward. Ward was a sensational amateur from Brooklyn. Everyone thought he was destined for great things. That fight was the turning point in Wepner's career. Wepner knocked down Ward in the 2nd round. In the 4th round Wepner was getting pounded and a bloody mess, the referee asked Wepner if he wanted to continue (and Wepner was not knocked down or given a standing 8 count. Wepner said yes and Ward collapsed from exhaustion, I believe in the 6th round. This fight was on the undercard of Mathis-Woody, and Chuvalo-Ramos.

Putting aside Kostya Tzysu and Anthony Mundine who now have world titles, our more recent ones were Jeff Fenech (three world titles in different divisions) and Jeff Harding (1989 light heavy champ twice). Fenech has gone on to bigger and better things - very wealthy and a rising fight trainer; but sadly Harding has hit the bottle and been in the slammer. I met Harding once and he was a good guy, but very quiet, reserved, almost simmering. Aboriginal Lionel Rose was another who won a world title (beat Fighting Harada). I was extremely fortunate two years ago to mix socially with Rose after a boxing night in Sydney. He is a very nice guy in every sense and also a very humble man. Rose lost his title to a great fighter named Reubin Olives. Johnny Famacheon won a world title in London. He was a superb boxer with great skills. He fell on hard times 10 years ago when hit by a car and he is now in a wheelchair. Jimmy Carruthers and Vic Patrick won world titles earlier. The former operated a fruit juice shop in Sydney in 1979 and I met him there once. That was a great privilege. Unfortunately he has passed on. Les Darcy is acclaimed as probably Australia's best fighter who never won a world title. He went to America and died of blood poisoning from a bad tooth. Actually our best race horse - Phar Lap - went to the States and died of blood poisoning, too. We've had some good fighters. Kostya Tzysu, of course, is from Russia, but he lives here now and is very popular. He is a wonderful advertisement for the sport. Unfortunately, and I hope I'm wrong, I suspect he might be the type to get old overnight (if you know what I mean). The best up-and-comer from here is Danny Green (trained by Jeff Fenech) who will win a title soon (he was disqualified against Marcus Beyer earlier this year for a head butt after knocking Beyer down 3 times). My favourite Australian fighter was Tony Mundine (Anthony's father). In 1974 he got knocked out by the very great middle-weight Carlos Monzon in the 8th round. It was a tremendous effort to even survive that long with that guy. Tony never won a world title, but he deserved one. At one stage in Australia Tony held every national title from middle-weight to heavy. He was an excellent offensive fighter, but his chin let him down. Anyway, Evren, gotta go, and I'm sure we're both good guys when we're not boring the rest of the posters here by talking politics or religion. Cheers.
at home. Tomorrow I'll go to the university and I'll see! Thanks again!

11/28/03 12:28:13 PM|Massimo|Rome||12-3 without Shaq|||10|EvrenI sent you an e-mail

11/28/03 01:22:02 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|I didn't bother to record CSI last night, because I'd seen it before. They had three cases, one of them about a boxer killed in the ring. I can't imagine a ref not stopping a fight that was as shown, particularly the caliber of ref used with world class fighters. Anyway, in addition to the one fighter being helpless on the ropes, "out on his feet," the winner had injected mercury into his gloves to give them a few ounces of extra weight. Has anyone ever heard of something like this actually being done? I personally have not, though I have heard of various other foreign objects being put in or on gloves, though usually to produce cuts or irritation. Inspections should take care of this sort of thing, but of course, all inspections are not equal.

Regarding another discussion - Zack Clayton. I agree about him being a quick count ref, probably shaving off a second with his style (which we saw with Quarry-Chuvalo, and Foreman-Ali). Remember the funny argument Mel Gibson and Danny Glover have in one of the Lethal Weapon movies, where they're going to "go on three," but can't agree whether this means the instant they ~say~ three, or after? That's how Clayton tolled "ten," simultaneously waving off the downed fighter. By doing it that way, the ref's actually counted to a legitimate ~nine~. I think Jerry would have been in better shape to continue than George would have been, but that isn't the point, particularly when a fighter might be strategically staying down till eight or nine, in a screaming arena.

11/28/03 02:43:12 PM|Massimo|Rome||4|||10|RS

Willard accused Dempsey to have (or having) put something into his gloves!

Yo, always yo, RS!

11/28/03 04:02:46 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Massimo, yes Dempsey was accused of having loaded his gloves with plaster of paris, but if Dempsey had this substance in his gloves, he would have injured his own hands very badly when he hit Willard. The substance is hard, like cement. So it would have been like Dempsey was punching a cement wall during the fight.

11/28/03 04:24:26 PM|Evren|London||@|||10|Kent and Massimo I don't know whether you remember the long time British Boxing Commentator of the UK called Harry Carpenter? He was like the Don Dunphy of the United Kingdom. Anyway many years after the fight between Dempsey and Willard he actually interviewed Jess. Willard claimed that what had indeed happened was that Dempsey held in his glove a large bolt. He claims that in the footage you see Dempsey throwing 'Side on' punches as if trying to strike Willard with the inside of his glove. Harry carpenter said that midway through the interview Willard opened a draw in his house and produced this bolt which he found on the ring apron after the fight. It was this 'Bolt' which caused him so much facial damage and body damage. True or Not? Who knows? Willard did have a tremendous amount of bruising though. What do you guys think?

11/28/03 04:51:13 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Yo Massimo -

I've read more than once that Dempsey had soaked his wraps in something that dried hard. Who knows? Did they have people checking wrapping and gloving up then? I don't know. Even if they did...As for the horrific damage Dempsey did to Willard? I know Dempsey could punch hard, but other than broken noses (which even a ten year old can inflict if they connect right), how many injuries of that magnitude have happened, even with the bombers when they massacred someone? Ali had his jaw broken (probably because he was talking) by Norton, Chuvalo had his cheekbone fractured by Frazier, and didn't Jerry Quarry have his jaw broken once? I may be missing some, but look at Louis, Foreman, Liston, Marciano, Shavers, other fearsome punchers, some possibly, ~probably~ in some cases, harder hitting than Dempsey, and they didn't do to their opponents what Jack did. So a few ounces of mercury would mean this guy's gloves would weigh 12 oz, and in the show, they had the offending fighter unable to hold his hands up, they were so heavy. C'mon! Fighters don't have a problem doing this with ~16-ouncers. Plus hands would be slower with more weight.

I think the show was just making something up that sounded dramatic, and the average viewer wouldn't know the difference. Even though I like the two CSI shows, I've caught the Las Vegas one in two mistakes already. Like the old McGyver series - climbers used to watch it just to laugh at the preposterous things they did to be exciting.

Did someone control if Dempsey's hands were all right? Maybe he sacrificed his hands for the glory.

Did you receive my email? I suspect that the thesis of the bolt is true. Even at the weight-in Jack held a little stone for adding weight. Nobody can cause so much damage in so little time! Foreman hit Frazier almost as often in Jamaica and after the fight Frazier was pretty fine, even if a little sad. He didn't lose teeth and he hadn't 49 broken bones! Dempsey was often incorrect in his fights. For instance, against Sharkey he was having his ass kicked and then did what he did.

I meant "were all right after the fight". I just forgot "after the fight"

Checking back on my favorite fighter's site, I see some folks are still sniping at each other and continuing some of the same old arguments. Cooney and Morrison are not chumps (whatever a chump is) for failing to beat the very best in their careers, certainly neither was Quarry. All three were stars just as much for their ability as the novelty of their race, given that few whites choose boxing as their sport. Let's drop the race issue, all three beat good black fighters, all three lost to the best not because of race but because of talent, which usually was the only thing to decide any of their fights. Dempsey-Willard "hands of stone" issue is interesting stuff, given Dempsey's devastation of the farm-strong Willard in just three minutes, I believe it to be true. Still doesn't stop me from calling Dempsey one of the all-time Top Ten heavies. Willard's heart was never really into being champ, his reign was short and strange, especially given his bizarre 26-round win over the better Jack Johnson, the culminating fight of the White Hope era people have tried to tie Quarry, Cooney and Morrison to. Is this what awaits Joe Mesi? Hopefully not.

Hey Gerry, what's your problem, I'm the Kookoo Clock, I speak truth about these fighters. Gerry Cooney was nothing, overrated crybaby, like you, get over it. Hey Kent! Throw the bum out!! KOO KOO!

I always felt that Dempsey's gloves were loaded. My reasoning being based on the fact that Jack Kearns bet $10,000 against $100,000 that Dempsey would knock Willard out in the 1st round. Dempsey himself mentions the bet in his autobiography. It is my feeling that a hustler like Kearns would not bet over a millions dollars (today's value of $10,000 as compared to 1919), unless he had an edge. A big edge.

I sent the tape and then you can send the cash in the post. I hope that is okay with you. Evren

Oh and Massimo in the Heavyweight tournament we ran a couple of years ago Primo Carnera went out in the preliminary stages against Gerry Cooney. The posters voted that he was stopped late. Evren

Regarding the Dempsey-Willard bout. Amazing to think that back then Willard was considered a coward for quitting on his stool!!!!!!!!!!!

What a swear! Maybe Cooney and Ali together would have had a chance against Carnera, but Cooney alone... Never in this world or in the other one!

Gerry Schultz makes a good point, although not the one about Cooney and Morrison being good fighters. To reach the limelight, be ranked in the top 20 or 50 or 100, to go in against name fighters, or to fight in the major venues is a tremendous accomplishment most of us take for granted. (The exception is when promoters buy a kid into the Top Ten just to hype him for a fight.) These achievements are equivalent to making the NBA, NFL or major league baseball. So even someone like George Chuvalo, Ron Lyle, Buster Mathis and others we see as mediocre and undistinguished were actually in the 97th or 98th percentile, better than almost all other pros. From 98th to 99th, though -- that is, from Chuvalo or Wepner level to Ali or Frazier level -- is a HUGE JUMP.

I have a friend in Jersey who calls anyone who loses a fight "a bum". This is grossly unfair to anyone with the stones to climb inside the ring and fight. I don't care if it's a Boys Club Fight Night in La Habra (agree, Kent?) or a PAL smoker in Brooklyn, nobody who fights is a bum. I was hoping more people would comment on Barrera, with the device in his brain to fix the aneurysm. Someone said nobody cared about that until he started losing. Bullshit. I don't care if he ran his record to 50-0-0 against ranked fighters -- that kind of reckless disregard for a human life is disgusting. And please, no jive about how a man's got to do what a man's got to do. At the very least, when a man gotta be that stupid, taxpayers have to pick up his ER expenses and the cost of his MRIs, CTs, and extended ICU costs before he crumps -- all so he could show the world what a tough monkey he was. Even Koo Koo would agree with that, if we could get him stabilized on his medications and out of his restraints.

I think Jerry would have been in better shape to continue than George would have been, but that isn't the point, particularly when a fighter might be strategically staying down till eight or nine, in a screaming arena." (QUOTE) I think Jerry really didn't win many big fights. He ko'd Doug Jones, He ko'd Jerry Quarry, he ko'd Manuel Ramos and he decisioned Cleveland Williams. But George, like Jerry, had a big heart and was and still is held in high esteem by most Canadian fight fans. I liked his fight with Frazier. Frazier was up and coming at the time and just demolished poor George's eye socket. It didn't last long, but it was a great display of pugilism. When the Foreman/Chuvalo fight was stopped, George turned to the ref and said, " What are you, nuts??" I think that George was quite proud of his showing against Jerry and later attended a dinner in Jerry's honor, when he was diagnosed with his condition. George has experienced a lot of family tragedy and today he hosts a Classic Boxing television series in Toronto and does a lot of charitable work where educating young people of the dangers of drug abuse is concerned.

I agree with you whole heartedly on Barrera, and Cooney. First Barrera. I spoke about this on an earlier post. I was not aware of Barrera's medical condition until you brought it up (reason being I don't follow boxing to closely anymore). Imagine, a guy has a problem with his brain. So in order to help him they put a implant in his brain. Good so far. They determine that the damage done to his brain, cause UNKNOWN (maybe from sleeping on a hard pillow); is undone. Bravo, and now he is allowed to go into a ring and get hit in the head again. This sounds like a torture only Saddam Hussein could think of. I never regarded Cooney as a good fighter. And God forbid, I would never mention him in the same breathe as Jerry Quarry. The reason I regard Cooney as your average run of the mill fighter is simple. Cooney never won a fight that went beyond 8 rounds. He never got up off the canvass to win a fight after being knocked down. All good fighter's never mind great fighter's have done this at some point in their careers. I will give Cooney's management accolades for picking the right "fights" for him, and moving an average fighter into big money fights. Every day Cooney gets up he should say a prayer to God thanking him for the managers he had. With meager talents he made an extraordinary amount of money. Only in boxing.

| 11/29/03 01:10:11 AM | kookoo|ny||kookoclock000@yahoo.com| | | | | |10|OK, HERE GOES FOR THE LAST TIME, GERRY COONEY WAS A ACKWARD, OVERATED, OLD MAN WHIPPIN, BUM, WHEN MICHAEL SPINKS WHIPPED HIS A.. COONEY SHOULD HAVE JUMPED OFF THE BROOKLYN BRIDGE, BIG A.. PUTZ. KOO KOO|
| 11/29/03 01:28:56 AM | Evan B|Sydney||evanb46@juno.com| | | | | |10|Cooney was even worse than that, Koo Koo. He was a big dumb ugly mick who set being Irish back 20 years. He wasn't fit to carry Jerry Quarry's jockstrap. Boy oh boy, did Holmes tune him up, and Gerry dropped out of sight. What is he now, a bouncer at the Massepequa Hooters? Who was feeblest -- Cooney or Morrison? New York, the island and Jersey are allo chock full of these stupid harps who think they can scuffle. I should know because all my cousins were that way. Truth is, they feel a lot better if they can fight you with a 2x4 or a piece of pipe in their hand. "John Barleycorn must die," if you catch my drift. Most of them stumble a bracket or 2 into the Gloves, fighting other potatoheads, until they run into a black guy who's learned how to handle himself in the Mean Streets. Then it's adios, Patrick/Mike/Sean/Casey etc. BTW, I don' see these Russian brothers doing SQUAT. They still haven't mixed with anybody down yet. Some poor hungry bastard from South Philly or The Hill or Desire Project or West Balty or DC SW is going to give put a clinic on for these Russkies. Mark my words. |
| 11/29/03 02:12:56 AM | steve |N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net| | | | | |10|Hey Evan B. to understand your New Jersey friend who calles every guy who losses a fight a bum , you would have to live in the tri-State area of New York,New Jersey,and Philly that comprises the Delaware Valley. We are one of the largest,fiercist sports markets in the states.We are also considered the craziest,nastiest grours of fans.We love the Eagles,Phillies,Flyers,and all Philly fighters. Yet,if one of them dares to lose,or have a poor performance,we immediatly them as "bums",untill their next game or fight.Then we all jump back on the bandwagon! We have been known to boo Santa Clause here at the Vet Stadium. To Evan and Kent; the Philly sports writers are the biggest sports whores in the world! Their opinions change daily. They castigated the Eagles' quarterback,Donavan MacNabb,for the first four weeks of the season. Now they think we could still win the superbowl!! |
| 11/29/03 03:17:24 AM | Evan B|Sydney||evanb46@juno.com| | | | | |10|Thanks, Steve. Makes sense and I stand corrected. I remember when young Joe Frazier started his climb up with Yank Durham and Cloverlay Management. Was the whole city of Philly behind him from the beginning? I also read back then he only went to the gym to lose weight at first, because his thighs were so fat he couldn't pull on his pants. That legend true? Tell us a little Frazier lore, Steve. |
| 11/29/03 03:20:11 AM | STEVE|NJ||dmmsrm@| | | | | |10|Hey Giancialo,and Avan, Since the only guys to attack me personally,then I'm going to respond personally.Yes, I'm, a stupid "Harp" who thinks he can scuffle! Hey,Evan,maybe all your irish cousins were punks.|
| 11/29/03 06:44:51 AM | Paul|Sydney, Australia||P1Mils4@aol.com| | | | | |10|In a society as litigious as America, would the taxpayer really be burdened with Barrera's ER, MRI's, CTs, and extended ICU costs ? Surely there'd be some critter to sue. Did the surgeon warn Barrera of the dangers of fighting with that gadget in his brain ? Did his manager allow him to fight by failing to warn the sanctioning body of the gadget and the risks ? Did the promoter knowingly allow the fight to proceed despite the risks ? How about the sanctioning body ? What did it know ? Come to think of it, how about his opponent ? The opposing trainer and manager ? What about the referee ? Was there a pre-fight medical and let's hope that the duty-doctor had his liability insurance current - he's gonna need it. Why did the guy who owns the venue allow it to be used for that purpose ? Did the all the above parties warn the boxer of the dangers ? Who failed to save the boxer from himself? Everyone? Apart from the boxer himself, EVERYONE else has a duty of care to that boxer. There'd be so many defendants, you wouldn't fit 'em in the Superdome. And then the lawyers and hangers-on would eat up all the award in costs and disbursements. And guest what? The incapacitated boxer gets nothing and taxpayers must then foot the cost of his remaining days in a nursing home because not everyone can get a job as a 'greeter' at Caesar's Palace. So the winner by unanimous verdict is..... all the lawyers! Sadly, Gianfranco, that's how the system would probably work. Perhaps Forest Ward was right all along when he wrote many months ago that boxing produces more victims than winners.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/29/03 07:09:09 AM</th>
<th>Evan B</th>
<th>Sydney</th>
<th>evanb46@juno.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Steve, are you drinking again?
Paul, I imagined a situation where someone like Barrera would have no medical insurance and after being injured in the ring, would be taken to a county facility. Yes, court cases could get caught up in a storm of delays.
The Quarry family took some advantage of public assistance, including SS1, I would imagine. It may have amounted to millions of dollars over the years.
Where'd you do your scuffling?, Steave?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/29/03 07:49:03 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>Kentallenent@aol.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Yes, anyone who enters the ring is no bum.
Evan, let me tell you, they had some pretty tough hombres there at the La Habra Boys Club and the La Habra Catholic church.
I put the gloves on and sparred with some of these guys back in my youth and one of them busted my lip up and bloodied my nose up quite good.
I wish I could remember the guy's name as I was certain he was a good pro prospect.
Why? Because he kicked my ass of course!
Hey, but if the fans want to call someone a bum, then let them. Boxing is nothing without the fans and while I don't agree with someone saying any fighter is a bum, they have a right to say it.
At various boxing shows, I can always tell when east coast writers such as from Philly are around. Some of these guys seem to be an arrogant bunch and they act like they are above the rest of the press core instead of being just another guy with an opinion, which is what most boxing writers are anyway, just a fan who is lucky enough to have a forum to express his or her opinion.
Two things you can bet on my opinion of Gerry Cooney will not and my opinion of Jerry Quarry, if Quarry had the size of Cooney he would have held the title I don't know how long, by the way what big fights did Cooney ever win? He'll never get the respect of Jerry Quarry, not from me, not from boxing fans, not from his fellow fighters, never!!!!!!!!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/29/03 10:10:49 AM</th>
<th>Kookoo</th>
<th>ny</th>
<th>kookooclock000@yahoo.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Larry Holmes said Cooney hit him low so many times, he thought Cooney was "funny," as Larry put it.
To the person who asked:
Frazier started out punching a bag with bricks in it for weight, surrounded by rags and things, which he hung in a tree.
He wanted to be Joe Louis. No one messed with him, even when he was a little kid. We all know you're born with a big punch, but obviously the tenacity was there too. He went to the gym because he was a real butterball, and a guy there noticed that he could really punch, even though he didn't know how. His hard work ethic was why they told him to stick around later as an alternate when Mathis was on the Olympic team, because Mathis was so lazy. When Buster broke his hand, Joe was in.
An interesting thing about his conversion from southpaw - his father lost part of his left arm to a farming machine. When Joe was born, people showed up to see if he'd have a left arm! In the superstitious tradition of a lot of the deep southern black culture, many later said that Joe's left hook was so powerful because he had his father's strength too, from the severed arm!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>11/29/03 11:36:18 AM</th>
<th>Roadscholarette</th>
<th>Chicago</th>
<th>roadscholarette@hotmail.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Here's an interesting topic at boxrec.com on sparring sessions between name fighters, some who actually met later for real, some who...
Talking about great fights I have recently seen a synthesis of Rex Layne vs Bob Satterfield fought in 1951. What a fight! Layne was decked in the first round and maybe even another time later in the fight but won with a wonderful combination: left jab and hard right to the jaw. He looked so big and was only 190.5 lbs for that fight. A few fights after I fought Marciano. He was given 9-5 favorite for that fight!

I would like to make a note on here if I may. I lost my father tonight after two years of the bravest battle against Cancer. I mention my dad as he got me into boxing and he always was a great fan of Jerry. We would always watch the old fights together - me and him. He suffered so much over the last two years. When James Quarry became ill with cancer we would talk about my dad. Thanks to allowing me to write this. Thanks to Kent for all your kind words of support over the last two years. My life will never be the same.

Evren, you have my deepest condolences. Your having a tough go lately. Your father's spirit will always be with you. Evren, always remember: "no champion ever lost a fight by being knocked down, only by staying down." Just take it one day at a time. Evren, your my man!

Evren, I am very sorry for your loss. You father sounds like a wonderful man, and obviously the two of you had a great relationship. Good luck, my friend.

Evren, I am sorry to hear about the loss of your Father. As you know our Father, James Quarry, died a little over a year ago to Cancer, 3 wks before that we lost our Mother, and just about 2 months ago, our Grandma. In time it will be ok, and you'll always have him in your heart, and in your memories, that'll always be with you. Take care and just give yourself time.

Evren, I am very sorry for your loss. You father sounds like a wonderful man, and obviously the two of you had a great relationship. Good luck, my friend.

Evren, my friend, I'm very very sorry. My heart is close to you. Condolences.

My sincerest condolences, Evren. A year ago when my father died someone told me that loved ones are never really gone while ever wonderful memories of them live on in your mind. Hang in there.

Thanks everyone - it means so much. Saddest day of my life.

Evren, your dad will always be a part of you in your heart and in your spirit. As you know, I lost my father sixteen years ago but to this day, he is still a part of my life. I know it is hard but I hope you can focus on all of the good times you had together and that this can somehow ease your pain. We are here supporting you my friend!

My sympathies, for sure, and I know how you feel - my Mom died last spring. The sharp pain goes away after a while, and good memories do begin filtering in, but at the same time, there's still always a cold room with a broken window and glass on the floor.

You have my deepest sympathy Evren, may the Lord comfort you in this time of need. God bless!

I am very proud of all of the posters who have left their condolences for Evren in his time of loss. Jerry, Mr. Jimmy, Evren's father, and all of our other love ones who have passed on are all smiling at us right now!
Anyone ever seen a "Toughman Competition?" We rented a tape once, just for the heck of it, and it was terrible. We weren't exactly anticipating the Thrilla in Manila, but these guys were just plain awful! Only a couple appeared to be in any kind of condition at all, and after about a round all were exhausted. Punches missed only by accident, as the "boxers" wheezed around the ring, bellies jiggling, hoping to connect on opponents who were about as mobile as a cement truck.

The problem is that, in addition to training regimens that likely consist, at most, of buffalo wings and beer and an occasional 30 second barroom "brawl" (first landed punch wins), the competitors know nothing at all about fighting or defense, and even a punch from a like opponent can be dangerous, even lethal, considering that, in addition to punches connecting by accident, they also ~miss~ by accident too. These things are savage carnivals, preying on clueless innocents, however mean they may be in spirit.

As PT Barnum said though, "There's a sucker born every minute." Why should greedy promoters shun Sapp vs Tyson, or Butter Bean vs Tyson or whatever, if there are people who are going to grab up tickets to the execution?

I don't think that Butterbean is so weak. He recalls me Tony Galento, he is very fat but his punch is heavy! In my opinion a fight against him would be more dangerous for Tyson than a fight against Roy Jones, or a return match against that tough warrior that he fought in his last fight (Clifford). Who knows how would be a "Softman competition"...

How much are able of gaining (or to gain) these desperate guys who fight in these "Toughman competitions"?

Do you agree that R.Jones wouldn't have a chance of beating Tyson?

A good chance, yes. Tyson's no kid any more. He'd better get some quick paydays in while he can, and put the money away. He's going to be old a long time. Instead I'd like to see Tyson-Toney, that would be an exciting fight! Do you think that Tyson's power would be too much for Toney? Toney might have a chance today. Boy, he's really something. Few light-heavyweights have had any success in the heavyweight ranks, and here Toney's moved all the way up from middle-weight! About odd fights, did you ever see Andre' the Midget vs Chuck Wepner? In their primes, it'd depend who was able to execute his specialty first. To a non-boxer, Wepner would seem like a cross between Muhammad Ali's speed and George Foreman's power. However, Andre was simply monstrous and strong as a horse, so Chucky would definitely want to fight outside!

I have seen Jones against Tarver and he didn't impress me at all... He can't hurt Tyson because is not powerful enough and his style would be tailor made for Iron Mike. The last thing Tyson needs is money because it doesn't matter how much money you give him, after a week he'll be full of debts again. Andre' the Midget vs Chuck Wepner was really fought in 1976 and Andre' won easily in 3 rounds. He literally threw Chuck out of the ring! Yeah, he was a little bigger than me, even if his dimensions were always overexaggerated by the wrestling organizzators... Shoe size 24? Shaq wears 22... I doubt!!!!!!

I'm with you regarding horses. Anything that big and that dumb is not for me! Paul -Paul -We've watched some of the workouts at a track in the Chicago area (Arlington Park), and the teams for the different horses are some really hard working folks. It's like a pro athlete in training. They keep meticulous records too. I know they're likewise meticulous about the horses's diet. I got to see the prep area at the zoo once, and human athletes should only be so careful about their diets. Imagine what it must be like for an expensive race horse! Some trivia I read once: pound for pound, a human is stronger than a horse. P4P, a human is much weaker than an ant. P4P, if a human could jump like a flea, they could clear two football fields!
pissed a river !!!!!!!!!|
|12/2/03 01:53:55 PM|Evan B|Belfast||evanb46@juno.com||||10|Massimo, not only is the elephant's urination an impressive fire hydrant-like gushing, but their urine is also very corrosive. In some zoos, you can see cement floors in their enclosures worn through and eroded by their pissing. Golly, RS, horses aren't stupid! Maybe you were teasing. Steve, everything you say about jockeys and more is true. You have a 100-pound man trying to control a 2,000 pound animal in full gallop. Because of their serious and sometimes nasty competition, fistfights among jockeys are common after races. Laffit Pincay of Panama was always one of the best fighters. He's about Roberto Duran's age, and I always wondered if they were friends. .. I like Toney a lot, too, but I think he's reached the last gasp of his career where he may lose it all at any time. Whatever happened to lightweight champ Pedro Carrasco? He was the one guy Mando Ramos could not beat, and more of less ended Mando's career. He has been a stevedore in Long Beach since about 1974, and weighs a solid 200 or 220. I wonder how many guys over the years have chosen him off, Massimo!!! On the Toughmen, this is an exhibition with none of the discipline or art of boxing, of course. To me it's depressing. There are a few guys who train full-time for it, but so what? It's a trash sport. Does anyone remember Irish Frankie Crawford from the San Fernando Valley, around 1965-1975? Kent, you probably did. He had a pretty sad existence after boxing. For some reason, he retired young, at about age 30 or so. Soon after, he was sitting at a hamburger joint when he was shot and paralyzed. How was it he died, Kent? He was a good fighter. |
|12/2/03 02:28:24 PM|Evan B|Belfast||evanb46@juno.com||||10|Massimo, qualunque è accaduto a quel ragazzo grazioso, Alfredo Evangelista? Muhammad Ali ha interrotto il suo fettucine! (I am asking whatever happened to that pretty boy, Evangelista. Ali messed up that dude's pasta.) |
|12/2/03 03:11:56 PM|Massimo|Rome||4||||10|Evan B-Mi dispiace, ma l'unica cosa che so di questo Alfredo Evangelista e' che e' stato un avversario di Muhammad Ali'. Who can understand, understand... Who can't (probably the major part... His problem!). Why do you speak Italian? Are you been in Italy? I didn't know that elephant's urination was corrosive. Interesting, even if probably no elephant is gonna piss to my face... But in life you can never know. |
|12/2/03 04:31:08 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Evan, yes I remember Frankie Crawford, he was a good lighter weight fighter, featherweight or lightweight. He lost about his last five fights in a row so that is probably why he retired. Some fighters are old by the time they are 30 years old while others are just starting to mature. Crawford was of the first kind. Apparently he never could cope with life outside of boxing. I am not sure how he died, other than I heard he was shot, a tragic story anyway. |
|12/2/03 06:50:28 PM|Evan B|Belfast||evanb46@juno.com ||||10|Parlo italiano (così male!) per honor Massimo, il mio amico e l'uomo più nobile in questo Web site. La mia prima moglie proveniva da Torino. Potrebbe buttare giù Marvin Hagler in 2. (I speak Italian (so poorly!) to honor Massimo, my friend and the noblest man in this web site. My first wife was from Turin. She could have knocked out Marvin Hagler in 2.) I agree about Frankie, Kent. He fought some wars. How about Hedgemon Lewis from the same time? What was the best fight Jerry Quarry ever put together, in victory or defeat? |
|12/2/03 07:12:12 PM|Massimo|Rome||4|||10|Evan B-Grazie di cuore per le gentili parole! Sono commosso! |
|12/2/03 09:05:15 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|I remember Frankie Crawford very well, I did not know about how he died, and that he lost his last 5, I hope he too was not suffering dementia, as so many of the lighter weights have a tendency to do (they get hit more, and have more bouts) I'll haveta get ahold of fellow stooge. Curly Q. Link (Kent) FOR MORE INFO, I know for a fact, he (Crawford) was a great friend of Jerry's. I'd heard a while back Ernie (INDIAN RED) WAS also doing quite poorly, as well as Armando Muniz. Sadly so many California fighter's from the great era of 60's 70's 80's suffer this unfortunate and unasked for affliction, I'm a lot like Mr. FORREST WARD nowadays, for lack of interest, especially when you see such great athletes and performers suffer this way. TAKE CARE!

| 12/2/03 09:31:03 PM | Paul | Sydney, Australia | PlMls4@aol.com | 10 | RS - I hope you were only teasing when you said that horses are dumb. My brother breeds clydesdales and shire horses, and apart from being huge and beautiful and good naturally, they are not so stupid. At the races, when they want a thoroughbred to pee in a bucket to swab for drugs, they whistle and it soon does the trick. It's none of my business, Massimo, and I know nothing about elephants, but it would probably be prudent to refrain from whistling next time you visit elephants at the zoo. |
| 12/2/03 10:01:37 PM | Evan B | Belfast | evanb46@juno.com | 10 | I couldn't find a bio of Irish Frankie Crawford so far, but the following excerpts tell some of his story. There were 2 things that made him popular, along with his great skills: he was a real battler; he was a very skinny, almost fragile-looking kid with dead white skin. In the 1960 and 1970s, LA was a great boxing town, thanks mostly to Aileen Eaton, promoter at the Olympic Auditorium. She promoted a weekly card, and bigger fights usually happened at the Forum, across town. See the list of Forum fighters at the bottom here.  http://www.ringmemorabilia.com/_disc1/0000003f.htm I remember your father (Frankie) as one of the most entertaining fighter of his era. I was at the Forum in 1971 or 1972 when he fought one Jesus "Chu Chu" Alonzo (aka "El Mortero"). I was sitting behind one of his biggest fans, the actress, Connie Stevens and when the decision went undeservingly to Alonzo, I thought Connie and the crowd was going to riot!! Anyway, I will always think of your father as one of the best pound for pound boxer in the featherweight/lightweight division. Are there any videos of his fights available? Please advise.  http://pub97.ezboard.com/fcyberboxingzonefm3.showMessage?topicID=266.topic A couple of years ago I wrote a story on Mando Ramos for the CBZ. I didn't interview Mando, I just wrote the story based on my memories of the youngest Lightweight champ, which is the way I usually write about the boxers I knew.  A couple of months ago GorDoom out me in contact with Mando Ramos and ever since we've exchanged E-mail and today we had a long talk on the phone.
It was really fun discussing things with Mando & the people we both knew well, such as Frankie Crawford, Ruben Navarro & Dwight Hawkins. Mando told me that Hawkins KOed him three different times in the gym, which is no surprise if you saw Hawkins workout.  Anyway, I won't go into all we talked about, however. in a month when I return to California to live, Mando & I are going to get together and from there a real story will written about the youngest man to win the lightweight title.  Mando has been happily married for 30 years & has nearly twenty years clean & sober. Life is in session for Mando & I'm happy to hear it. With the exception of a bad back, life is very happy today for Mando Ramos, in the end he has proven to be a true boxing success story.
The following month (in 1967) Jackie McCoy took Ramos to Sacramento where he KO'ed Alex Luna in two. Ramos returned to L.A. and a few weeks later knocked out Eliseo Estrada in five. Mando was growing into a lightweight but before getting much bigger, fans in Los Angeles were begging to see him fight another hot featherweight making a name for himself at the Olympic, "Irish" Frankie Crawford.  Crawford and Ramos were not strangers, as both worked out at the Jake Shugrue Gym near 78th & Hoover in South Central Los Angeles. they had started their pro careers within months of each other and were similar in build.
Like Ramos, Crawford was a tall featherweight at 5'9" and was a knockout puncher. Another thing the two boxers had in common was natural ability and poor training habits. In later years they would become stablemates when McCoy took over management of Crawford’s career and the two fighters became friends. However, on October 5, 1967 the two brought no friendship into the Olympic Auditorium ring when the two met for the first of two great fights. Mando had about an inch in height on Crawford and at the weigh-in came in nine pounds heavier, which is quite an advantage to a guy under 130 pounds. Before a sellout crowd of 10,500 fans, Frankie Crawford stepped on Ramos' toes, hit him low, thumbed him and opened cuts with head butts and elbows. I knew Crawford well and can guarantee you that Fritzie Zivic and Ace Hudkins had nothing on Frankie when it came to dirty fighting. However, Crawford beat him legit. It was Crawford who entered the ring in better shape and who scored an upset decision victory over Ramos. I remember that Frankie had exhausted himself so much fighting the heavier Ramos, he was given oxygen in the dressing room after the match. Ramos had lost for the second time in three months and this was a loss that Mando would have to avenge or forever hold his peace. Mando turned nineteen a month after losing to Crawford and three months later, on February 1, 1968 he'd meet Crawford again in a rematch. Mando entered the ring in shape this time and won a unanimous decision over Crawford. Mando Ramos was now ready to get back on the road that would lead him to a world title.

Some of the boxers who have appeared on Forum Boxing Fight cards at the GW Forum in the past (including the days of promoters George Parnassus and Don Fraser) are Muhammad Ali, Ken Norton, Ruben Olivares, George Foreman, Bobby Chacon, Thomas Hearns, Alexis Arguello, Chucho Castillo, Jerry Quarry, Jean Josselin, Alan Rudkin, Billy Backus, Julio Cesar Chavez, Lionel Rose, Terry Norris, Roger Mayweather, Jorge Paez, Jose Napoles, Carlos Zarate, Raul Soriano, Alfonso Zamora, Jesus Pimentel, Oscar De La Hoya, Greg Page, Albert Davila, Jose Legra, Hedgemon Lewis, Marty Monroe, Tim Witherspoon, Bonecrusher Smith, Ernesto Marcel, David Kotey, Danny Lopez, Sean O Grady, Lupe Pintor, Art Frias, Enrique Pinder, Randy Shields, Rafael Herrera, Rodrigo Valdez, Hedgemon Lewis, Emilie Griffith, Rodolfo Martinez, Ahzuma Nelson, Marcos Villasana, Juan O Kidó Meza Curtis Cokes, Micheal Carbajal, Jonny Tapia, "Chiquita" Gonzalez, Arturo Lomeli, Ben Villflor, Rodolfo Martinez, Dwight Hawkins, Takao Sakurai, Frankie Narvaez, Evan Armstrong, Irish Frankie Crawford, Rafael Herrera, Raul Cruz, Enrique Pinder, Ruben Navarro, Manuel Pulgarcito Ramos, Jack O'Halloran, Rafael (Bazooka) Limon, Paul Ferreri, Erbito Salavarria, Mike Waever, Juan Kid Meza, Ruben Castillo, Frankie Duarte, Marcos Villisana, Jaime Garza, Andy Price, Jose Medal, Ernie Red Lopez, Rojelio Lara, Romeo Anaya Irish Art Haffey, Genero Hernandez, Julio Cesar Barboa Vincente Saldivar, Mark Johnson, Marco Antonio Herrera, Sammy Fuentes, Luis Santana and Bollilo Gonzalez.

|12/3/03 08:59:54 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com||||10|Paul: regarding the intelligence of horses: I heard on Discovery channel that a rat is much much smarter than a horse and the dumbest dog is streets ahead of a horse. I have no idea why we are posting this on this board. |
|12/3/03 11:26:17 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|To horse fans:I do not dislike horses, do in fact think they're very nice animals. However, there are a number of animals that are smarter - dogs, dolphins, monkeys, ravens, pigs, and many humans.I had a parakeet once that I taught to say quite a few words, some even on cues other than my saying of the word first. I read that man's (woman's too) best friend, the dog, could talk if its vocal chords were structured differently.Re boxing - after doing a little research, I found out that Butterbean, the now "boxer," X Toughman Champion, has fought five rounds many times, and at a furious pace. The reason I mention this, and the number of rounds, is that this was the time at which Muhammad Ali is credited for having "cleverly" roped his dope, and seeing glimmers of the fight becoming his. Yeah, sure. A 5'8" 350 pound beachball with arms can fight hard for five rounds, but George Foreman is exhausted after the same amount of time? Uh-huh, doesn't sound like anything's fishy about that fight at all.RS writes, "The reason I mention this, and the number of rounds, is that this was the time at which Muhammad Ali is credited for having "cleverly" roped his dope, and seeing glimmers of the fight becoming his. Yeah, sure. A 5'8" 350 pound beachball with arms can fight hard for five rounds, but George Foreman is exhausted after the same amount of time? Uh-huh, doesn't sound like anything's fishy about that fight at all."What exactly are you saying, RS? Are you suggesting the Ali-Foreman fight in Zaire was fixed? It's exhausting to go 5 rounds outdoors in a tropical African country at 4 AM, after weeks of intense media scrutiny and overcoming an injury, when most of the crowd is with your opponent, chanting his name, and you suspect curses and magic have been set against you. To the other person, we discuss any subject that arises in our more general discussion of Jerry Quarry. Be more flexible, please.Curses and magic? :-) Do you really think George bought into that? Oh, I absolutely do think the fight was dirty, probably in more ways than one, ie, ahead of time with George (water, grapefruit, whatever), and with the judges, who were not going to let George win by decision. I think without his aura and fixed fights, Ali would have a record befitting a darned good, but not great champion. I'd love to see scorecards of a lot of his fights...Horoscopes, magic, witchcraft... All these things are a huge bunch of crap! Everyone is shooting up my favourite animal and sports hero. Okay, I can believe that dogs are smarter than horses, but RS you are never going to convince me that the Ali-Foreman fight was fixed. In that heat Foreman was never going to last 15 rounds, and in the end a punched-out, exhausted, and dispirited George simply didn't want to get up. But I do agree that Ali's aura got him the benefit of doubtful decisions (eg Norton) but in my eyes it doesn't diminish his greatness. Ali never ducked anyone, and he fought the best on offer time and time again. Unlike your favourite heavyweight RS. If you take the three Ali fights out of Joe Frazier's resume, Frazier might merely be regarded as an above-average champion, but not an elite one. The way Foreman twice demolished Joe raises huge questions about him. I also never really understood why Joe found the time to fight Tony Doyle, Marion Conners, Manuel Ramos and Dave Zyglwicz, but somehow never managed to enter the ring against Ken Norton, Ron Lyle, Chuck Wepner, Mac Foster, Ernie Terrell, Zora Folley, Henry Cooper, and Earnie Shaver. I don't think blood pressure and eye sight problems are the reasons Joe didn't fight the best on offer (although these medical conditions might explain why he didn't fight very often). It seems to me that unlike Ali, there was an agenda as to who Joe did and didn't fight.Say, I was thinking about something the other day. Once a fighter is out of the game, people tend to polarize with them. Either they become near bums, with faults or bad performances from sometimes just one fight becoming overlays for their entire careers, or they are awarded hindsight halos and abilities beyond what they had when they were actually in the ring. That got me thinking about Jerry Quarry's reputation as a "bleeder." How many times was he actually cut to the point that it affected the outcome? I mean, Ali and Frazier were the fastest heads and elbows in the west, superb at cutting up a fighter, particularly Ali, but who else cut Jerry, causing either a loss or a situation where the fight was
I can't convince you. No one can prove the Foreman fight was fixed, myself included. I just think it was, given Ali being Ali, moneymaking machine, mystique, people he knew and all, and George being the killing machine we all knew he was. Now, ala my first point in this post, George is widely viewed as a devastating puncher, but also as a wheezing pansy who couldn't go more than five rounds without getting in trouble, even after winning the title again at 45.

My "favorite fighter" went through a ton of good men, and devastated most. He beat Ali once, possibly twice, and was beating him up in Manila on one eye (which finally betrayed him). No one can truthfully say that he wasn't an elite fighter of the ages, or that more than a small handful of former champions would even have stood a chance with him, let alone won. Once more though, people remember his fights with Foreman. Joe had as big an ego as Ali, and had he not been ruled by it, would have known he'd have to fight George differently than anyone else he'd ever been up against. I also don't understand why anyone didn't get him to use his right hand more, or even his jab, which was a good one when he used it, particularly in close with his ability to double punch with one hand.

My "favorite fighter" went through a ton of good men, and devastated most. He beat Ali once, possibly twice, and was beating him up in Manila on one eye (which finally betrayed him). No one can truthfully say that he wasn't an elite fighter of the ages, or that more than a small handful of former champions would even have stood a chance with him, let alone won. Once more though, people remember his fights with Foreman. Joe had as big an ego as Ali, and had he not been ruled by it, would have known he'd have to fight George differently than anyone else he'd ever been up against. I also don't understand why anyone didn't get him to use his right hand more, or even his jab, which was a good one when he used it, particularly in close with his ability to double punch with one hand.

My "favorite fighter" went through a ton of good men, and devastated most. He beat Ali once, possibly twice, and was beating him up in Manila on one eye (which finally betrayed him). No one can truthfully say that he wasn't an elite fighter of the ages, or that more than a small handful of former champions would even have stood a chance with him, let alone won. Once more though, people remember his fights with Foreman. Joe had as big an ego as Ali, and had he not been ruled by it, would have known he'd have to fight George differently than anyone else he'd ever been up against. I also don't understand why anyone didn't get him to use his right hand more, or even his jab, which was a good one when he used it, particularly in close with his ability to double punch with one hand.

My "favorite fighter" went through a ton of good men, and devastated most. He beat Ali once, possibly twice, and was beating him up in Manila on one eye (which finally betrayed him). No one can truthfully say that he wasn't an elite fighter of the ages, or that more than a small handful of former champions would even have stood a chance with him, let alone won. Once more though, people remember his fights with Foreman. Joe had as big an ego as Ali, and had he not been ruled by it, would have known he'd have to fight George differently than anyone else he'd ever been up against. I also don't understand why anyone didn't get him to use his right hand more, or even his jab, which was a good one when he used it, particularly in close with his ability to double punch with one hand.

My "favorite fighter" went through a ton of good men, and devastated most. He beat Ali once, possibly twice, and was beating him up in Manila on one eye (which finally betrayed him). No one can truthfully say that he wasn't an elite fighter of the ages, or that more than a small handful of former champions would even have stood a chance with him, let alone won. Once more though, people remember his fights with Foreman. Joe had as big an ego as Ali, and had he not been ruled by it, would have known he'd have to fight George differently than anyone else he'd ever been up against. I also don't understand why anyone didn't get him to use his right hand more, or even his jab, which was a good one when he used it, particularly in close with his ability to double punch with one hand.
to. Ali's aura is palpable. George identifies with the Zaire people but also feels separated from them, and does not mix in with them successfully. He wonders more and more about their spiritual beliefs about ghosts, evil spirits, possession, curses, white and black magic, and so on. He comes to feel these forces are probably real, and they increase his anxiety and fear. He gets sick and is injured several times, and the boredom of waiting for the fight and Ali disturb him deeply. When Ali arrives, it's almost as a god, and Ali manipulates the people shrewdly. When the fight comes, it's just before dawn and Foreman is "psyched" and exhausted. The huge crowd changes "Ali m'bele" and other incantations. All this disturbs George even more. He fights unintelligently and Ali exploits his weaknesses. Wearing George down, Ali finally goes for the kill and wins by TKO. Where exactly is the fix, RS? You have a habit of postulating ideas as facts and factoids, passing them off as true, and never replying if someone challenges you. You used the term and concept of race hundreds of times, but never once defined it when you were asked. I wish you'd come down off your high horse of believing you are such a mega-expert and listen to the real experts like Kent, Jimmy, Steve, Massimo, and Paul. Please take this as constructive criticism and not a personal attack. BTW, read Norman Mailer's The Fight. Massimo says, "Horoscopes, magic, witchcraft... All these things are a huge bunch of crap!" My dear friend, as a man of deep passion and fiery but tender heart, how can you deny these intangibles? As my first anthropology professor said in 1967, "Superstition is only what you call what the other guy believes." Foreman believed it and it finished him. SI? I doubt that KooKoo is gonna open a JOE FRAZIER FAN CLUB... Evans B., simpatico amico mio, Stesso discorso per le stregonerie! (forgive me for the heavy word). Stesso discorso per le stregonerie! I don't have any religious belief. Mi sono sempre comportato da persona perbene solo perché mi piace comportarmi così, non perché creda in qualche premio ultraterreno... | out of gas or out of his mind from exhaustion, physical, emotional or otherwise. George didn't have the mental toughness to beat Ali that night. As for Frazier fighting Foreman with a different style, bull. Joe only fought one way. You can't turn a Joe Frazier into a counter punching defensive fighter for one night. You are what you are. And Joe was pretty good at being Joe.

Bob, thanks for addressing the issues I raised and, while you have not convinced me, you obviously have an informed and accurate memory on the subject. I just can't get out of my mind that Joe did not fight the calibre of opponents Ali did and, relevant also, is that he didn't really have all that many fights after the first Ali fight. Take the Ali fights out of his resume. What was his best victory? Ellis or Quarry? With all due respects, that doesn't put Joe up there with Marciano, Louis, Ali, or even Larry Holmes. Also (and sorry to harp back to it RS) but your accusation that the Ali - Foreman fight was fixed only seems to be grounded on the assertion that Ali "knew a lot of people" and that the result was a huge upset. I'd need more than that to even entertain the suspicion that it might be true. To have fixed that fight would have been a logistical nightmare. It would have been the hardest conspiracy of all time to pull off. Apart from Ali and Foreman, the trainers, the judges, the referee, and even a bank manager would have had to be in the know and how could you trust them to keep quiet about it for the rest of their lives. Wouldn't you worry about deathbed confessions or even a religious conversion (like Foreman) for someone to blab out the truth. Imagine how much money had to have been involved to bribe the crown away from Foreman. So there'd be more problems in hiding a financial transaction of that magnitude. And if big George was really only acting in Zaire then move over Russell Crowe because Foreman should have been the star in Master & Commander, The Insider and all those other films. RS, I honestly enjoy your posts but I think you missed the mark on this occasion. And you are not a counterpuncher. You never fully answer the questions asked of you. Finally, I rate Larry Holmes way above Joe Frazier. Sorry.

Paul - Joe was supposed to fight Shavers and Knoetzee, but got hepatitis. He didn't fight Norton because they were friends. I doubt Norton wanted this anyway, as Joe had already knocked him out in the gym.

Evan - Ali had plenty of weaknesses, and plenty of "third people in the ring" throughout his career. The greatest boxer ever? Not a chance. The best brawler? Certainly ~one~ of the best. I just somehow have never been able to place him completely in the legit column, or as much more than a talented professional wrestler with concrete for a head. C'mon, there are lots of ways to fix fights, just as there are in any sporting event. It's just that the individual sports are easier and more certain to rig. Norman Mailer, professional wannabe jock sniffer as boxing expert now, is it? LOL! I've heard him and another guru, George Plimpton talk about both the first Frazier-Ali, and about Zaire, and they didn't even have some of the punches and moves right! I read the book. It was more a book about Norman Mailer once removed, if you look and read closely.
your credibility here. What was it you said about Foreman being a sissy or something for not going more than 5 rounds? I don't think you actually imagined he couldn't, either in his prime or recently. You are a piece of work, Roadscholarette. You'd do well to listen to the experts here and try to learn. (I am not an expert but simply a fan.) Massimo, come mai sarete scelti Papa con quell'atteggiamento? Quanto vecchi siete, il mio amico? Quanti mogli e bambini? Scommetterò che potreste ascendere a destra conoscete e buttate giù Tyson!

A lot of the time you don't have to 'fix' things to get a result. Foresight and manipulation can do the trick. Plan the fight in a foreign country and incite the people into frenzied support. Make sure it is a stinking hot country where your opponent will not have the stamina to go the distance. Slacken the ropes a little. When the fight starts lean on the ropes and get into your opponent's mind to sap his spirit. Let him punch himself out. And when he finally shows fatigue, go for him. Does anyone really doubt that Ali wasn't smart enough to manipulate such a scenario? Talking of fixing things, I remember a trick they used to do with greyhounds. No need for drugs. Just tie the poor thing to the back of your boat and then take it for a very long swim. That night when the finishing line is in sight, it will start to think like Greg Norman and knock up very suddenly. You can't swab for fatigue. Anyway, RS, I hope you are not serious with what you said about Ali. The other thing I can't understand - if Ali needed to 'fix' the Foreman fight to win, then why didn't he do the same thing with Holmes and Berbick? RS, thanks for addressing my concerns regarding Frazier's opponents. Did you know that the first person to visit Norton in hospital after his accident was Ali?

Holmes was surely a great champion, but he never convinced me completely. Who did he ever beat? Shavers (he was a top contender only thanks to his power, nothing else), Weaver (a guy with 215 losses in his record), Witherspoon (a disputed win), Norton (another disputed win). I rank him a step below Ali', Foreman and Frazier. Anyway, I didn't see him in the ring when he was in his prime because I'm 31, so I'm not sure of what I'm saying. That's just my intuitive impression. What do you think about the following 2 matchups? Lewis-Holmes, Lewis-Frazier?

I'm working while the rest of the world sleeps (although some might unkindly suggest that it is because I'm a burglar). Anyway, RS, you turned me around on my thinking about Roberto Duran, so I deserve a last chance to change your thinking on my favourite, Ali. In his career, Ali fought eight men who held world titles (Moore, Liston, Foster, Patterson, Frazier, Foreman, Spinks, and Holmes). He won 9 and lost 3 of those fights. Now look at the calibre of opponent Smokin' Joe fought. He fought three world champions - Ali, Foreman and Foster. Of those fights he won 2 and lost 4. So you must agree that Ali's record has a better calibre of opponent. Longevity goes to Ali as well. Ali fought often and anybody. Frazier didn't. Do you want me to prove that? And you say that Frazier didn't fight Norton because they were close friends. Okay. But Ali and Ellis were close friends, too, and they had the same trainer. They fought. Business is business. As I said before, I look forward to reading your posts and you think 'out of the square' and that makes you very interesting for a conservative thinker like me. However, I suspect that you were disingenuous on saying that Ali is just a guy with a "block of concrete for a head" (or words to that effect). I think you made a rash statement and, rather than back off, you foolishly persevered. I'm an expert on foolishness because it's usually me doing it! Anyway, I am not trying to be offensive in saying this and I hope you take it in the playful way it is meant. One more thing, RS, please give me your opinion on who won the Leonard v Hagler in 1987 and why. I'll then give you my opinion. Be warned - I have a very firm belief. Massimo, does 'consigliori' really mean trusted advisor in Italian. Evan B - you were right when you posted that Massimo was the most 'honourable man' on this site. He is. Cheers.

| 12/4/03 07:29:53 AM | Paul | Sydney, Australia | plm1s4@aol.com | 10 |

Massimo - I really gotta go to bed as it's getting late here. I'm 46 and I need my sleep. If you don't mind, I will get back to you on the questions you asked. I am going away early tomorrow morning (hence the need for sleep) but I will be back on Sunday afternoon, and I will reply then. Quickly, though, if Holmes hadn't made THAT 'jockstrap' comment about Marciano, he would have been a lot more respected. But, gee whiz, he won 49 times in a row against the best on offer. What more could the guy do? Take care and I am sincerely hope that Evran is hanging in there.

| 12/4/03 09:52:20 AM | Massimo | Rome | 4 |

Paul -I look forward to reading your opinion about Holmes. What do you think of Frazier's wins against Eddie Machen, Doug Jones, Buster Mathis and Doug Jones? Very good wins, in my opinion! &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Ellis was so desirous of winning the Ali' fight that he said "I don't care if I never win another fight as long as I live if I win this one, I lived in the shadow of Ali' too long".&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;"Consigliere" means "trusted advisor".

| 12/4/03 09:54:29 AM | KOOKOO | NY | kookooclock000@yahoo.com |

MASSINO , YOU ASK IF FRAZIER COULD BEAT PRIMO, I KNOW THIS WAS A JOKE QUESTION. I FELT SORRY FOR PRIMO, HE WAS USED IN THE BOXING GAME BY CROOKED MANAGERS, IT WAS NOT RIGHT, CONCERNING FRAZIER, I RESPECT HIM, BUT FEEL HE WAS OVERATED IN BOTH PUNCHING POWER AND TOUGHNESS, &lt;br&gt;HE COULD BE HURT WE SAW THIS IN THE 2ND ALI FIGHT, THE STANDER FIGHT, THE BUGNER FIGHT, HE DID NOT WANT ANY PART OF SHAVERS OR LYLE. SHAVERS FOR SURE WOULD HAVE KNOCKED HIM OUT. NOW GET IN THAT KITCHEN OF YOURS AND FIX ME SOME SPAGGITTI AND MEATBALLS. KOO KOO |

| 12/4/03 10:39:24 AM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com |

Assuming all of Ali’s fights were on the level, ;-) he was a great ~fighter~ not a boxer. I’ve seen a lot of younger fighters beaten who tried to imitate his style, with disastrous results. I agree with Eddie Futch: Ali was ridiculously fast, he was hard to corner, you couldn’t follow up on him (Futch didn’t say this, but it’s true), he threw tons of punches, disrupting his opponent’s rhythm, and anyone who underestimated his heart or chin placed themselves in harm’s way. However, he threw arm punches, often from crazy angles with no leverage, he pulled away from punches, he never went to the body, he was always upright, had a great jab, straight and overhand right, countered well, had a decent left hook, no right, and not much of an uppercut; his repertoire consisted of mainly three attacks - a jab, a lead right, and a one-two jab, straight right. My reference to being a professional wrestler was to call attention to his theater and his faults to a degree, but also to point out the cerebral side of boxing, a far greater factor than just getting is shape and learning to fight, which anyone can do. Mailer was a super fan who came up with some cool observations sometimes, but when you listen to him, always realize that Norman is endlessly and hopefully projecting himself~ into the ring when he writes or talks about a fighter.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Massimo -&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Primo was a giant, powerful man, but I don’t believe he would have been a match for Frazier. Joe was hard to hit, took it well when he was, forced others to hurry and fight his fight, which was usually reacting to him and trying to survive. He punched non-stop, and would have been in under Primo in a flash, in close. I can’t see Carnera being able to handle a fight in a phone booth.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Paul -&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Fighting Ali in Africa was akin to fighting Duran in Panama City or Galindez in Buenos Aires. Second career Foreman could have handled it. Young George could not.&lt;br&gt;|

| 12/4/03 10:56:28 AM | Fran | PA | plc7755@aol.com |

Ali was a money machine for many people. In order to win the title he had to go through Foreman as it was his time. Ali needed help to steal the fight. Can anyone explain what you could see like the loose ropes. Has anyone seen a fight go on with loose ropes before or since that night and in a heavyweight title fight? Can anyone explain why George said at the time they gave him a grapefruit before the fight and he was drowsy afterwards. How come Dick Sadler who took George from the job corps to Olympic gold to heavyweight title never worked with George afterwards. Even if George was getting tired he could have still slowed the pace down. How could Ali who was a light puncher knock out George? He couldn't George had something in him that night. Joe Frazier fought everyone they put in front of him and peaked in the first Ali fight. Frazier would have fought Mac Foster who was undefeated 24-0 and #1 ranked but we know who bumped him off.After Ali 1 Joe was never the same fighter. You can't rate Joe based on the post Ali 1 fights. Joe was at his best and peaked in 71. Ali peaked in 67.

Joe Frazier, I thought he won the 2nd fight against Ali. Ali did so much holding in that fight it was a disgrace. Ali would "jab and grab." Throughtout that fight Ali would jab Frazier, and then grab Frazier behind the neck hold. T he referee in that fight Tony Perez was terrible. I think it was in the 2nd round Ali had Frazier in trouble, and Perez heard "bells" and stopped the 2nd round a minute early. I think as a result of that error Perez decided to make it up to Ali, and he let him "jab and grab." Many of the writers covering of that fight thought Frazier won including Red Smith. On my scorecard, I have Frazier winning 2 of the 3 fights. Over the years Frazier has been quoted as saying words to the effect, "look at Ali, and look at me; and you tell me who won those fights. I agree with the idea that Frazier was at his peak when he fought Ali the 1st time, and after that he was on the way down. Frazier fights Foreman 10 times, Frazier loosens 10 out of 10. Frazier fights Jimmy Young 10 times, Frazier wins 10 out of 10. Foreman fights Jimmy Young 10 times, Foreman would be lucky to win 3 times. The point being styles make a fight.
likely at all that Ali really had a "head of concrete" -- he just went farther in his commitment and training than most. | 12/4/03 10:11:41 PM|Pete|Cleveland|pco@hotmail.com|10|"How could Ali who was a light puncher knock out George? He couldn't George had something in him that night."(QUOTE)George had nothing in him but air, which ran out quickly that night. Foreman was not a smart fighter, he did not take instructions from his corner and he saw himself as being invincible. Ali beat him nicely for the title and the KO was really a culmination of George over exerting himself to the point of exhaustion. Lyle put him on his ass, as did Jimmy Young. George was a powerhouse but he peaked quickly and died out the same way. Ali was the greatest heavyweight in his prime(64-67). He stayed on too long, as most fighters do, and made a fool of himself in the end. He's not the only one. Larry Holmes wants to fight George Foreman. Jerry stayed on too long as well. So did Frazier, Holmes, Patterson, Liston, Tyson, Lewis...There's some psychology involved, but the prime attribute is certainly physiological, unless we're also willing to say that Frazier was a sissy with Foreman, or that other tough guys were too who were KOd or TKOed. :-) More likely, it's part of attitude, And he said ~Frazier~ was ignorant!? Honestly, this tactic has to be one of the most ignorant things I've ever heard in or out of sports. John Tate copied this technique too. This approach is like a lot of others in sports, like a football team practicing in rain or extreme heat. Some moronic football coaches used to deny their players water too, in the erroneous belief that this made them "tougher." Till kids started dying from dehydration/heat stroke.It's not likely at all that Ali really had a "head of concrete"If medicine had the wherewithal to measure such things, I'm certain Ali would show himself to be different neurologically in a way that made him more resistant to head trauma. It's interesting that no other champion I know of has wanted to quit as many times as Ali (even though he never did), so it's sort of good news/bad news he could take a punch. If he were more of a mortal, and been knocked out a few times, it might have spared him a lot of grief today. Fans need to believe that Ali was durable solely because of character though. -- he just went farther in his commitment and training than most.That's one thing I really resented about Ali - showing up in the ring in less than peak condition, blowing off about how great he was, then lumbering and loafing around the ring, grabbing opponents, and passing this off as "strategy." Also one of the best eye thumbers and head butters too, though this was always "accidental" contact. | 12/5/03 12:43:39 AM|Evan B|Belfast|evanb46@juno.com|10|Roadscholarette, you are a Roberto Duran at begging the question and a Tex Cobb at debate. It's pointless to correct you because you slither on to your next outrageous claim. What will it be? That Foreman was actually a big Lesbian, or that Frazier is the Risen Christ? That only by using Flubber in his shoes was Ali able to dance? Where do you get these ideas, ma'am? OK, OK, OK, OK, Ali was a hopeless bum who won his fights by fighting dirty, we should have him because sometimes he didn't train enough, and his skull was made of Titanium. Now we're getting somewhere! You are so wise. | 12/5/03 04:05:05 AM|Massimo|Rome|10|Judging a fighter for his best night, I think that the Ali' that fought C1. Williams was the greatest heavyweight (and maybe the greatest fighter) of all time! I know that Williams was over the hill at the time, but was still a dangerous opponent. Nobody ever showed the class that Ali' showed that night !| 12/5/03 05:55:33 AM|Fran|PA|plc7755@aol.com|10|Ali was the guy they wanted to win. They being promoters sports writers and all others who profitted from Ali's ability to attract the non boxing fan. So one fight maybe is a stretch but when you look back at all the fights that an over the hill tired Ali "won" you see a pattern. 2nd Frazier fight jabs and holds, 3rd Norton fight he losses gets the decision, Jimmy young fight losses gets the decision, Lyle fight lays on the ropes losses 11 rounds throws a few pity pat punches ref jumps in and stops it. 2nd Leon Spinks fights he jabs and holds the whole fight any one else would be disqualified. The sad part about it is he was tired worn out over the hill but still made everyone so much money they kept him going 3 or 4 years to long and now he is a shell of the man he was. He was a great fighter and would have been something in his retired years. He made alot of people alot of money at a terrible cost to his health.

12/5/03 06:35:25 AM|Massimo|Rome||4|||10|I think the best evidences of Ali's greatness as a fighter are the following fights1)Williams2)Frazier 1-33)Foreman4)Quarry 1-25)Liston 1IN the first and third fight with Frazier he didn't hold that much and showed a big heart. In the 2 Quarry fights he clearly showed his superiority and Jerry was a champion. In the first Liston fight the way he survived the fifth round being totally blind showed his greatness.| right, but it's completely Mickey Mouse. If you look at the sequence of punches that put Foreman down, you'll notice that only one is what could be called a hard punch, and even that was nothing to write home about. The rest were arm punches, most thrown while slightly off balance and out of position.BTW, the befuddled Jersey Joe was way out of line to ~not~ let Ali-Liston 2 continue, simply because Nat Fleischer told him more than 10 seconds had gone by. The correct response, even if this was true would have been to go ahead anyway. A call was made and action had resumed.}

|12/5/03 02:24:49 PM|Massimo|Rome||4||10|Steve-

I have a boxing tape entitled "THE 12 GREATEST ROUND OF BOXING THE UNTOLD STORIES" in which Tom Hauser (the author of "MUHAMMAD ALI' HIS LIFE AND TIMES" says that Williams after the first Liston fight in the dressing room had a lot of trouble seeing. The same thing happened to Eddie Machen.|

|12/5/03 02:31:31 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|The phantam punch is a topic that comes up over and over again and yes, there was a punch. Liston appeared off balance and he went down. Liston lunged forward while attempting to hit Ali with a left jab. He didn't get up before ten, not because he was hurt, but because Ali was standing over him and yelling at him. Ali then was running all around and Walcott didn't have control of the situation. I think Liston may have thought Ali really was crazy and he would attack him while he was down. The correct thing for Walcott to do was not start the count until Ali went to a neutral corner. Yes, Walcott should have let the fight continue. As far as Ali as a fighter, I have never seen a heavyweight who is better. Ali had the speed of a lightweight, in both hand and foot speed, he had extremely quick reflexes and the heart of a lion. As far as using tactics such as holding, he used what he was allowed to use. If the officials had been more critical of not allowing him to hold, then Ali would have come up with some other tactic to help him win. Ali was a great improviser in the ring and he would adapt to any situation. As far as Ali as a fighter, I have never seen a heavyweight who is better. Ali had the speed of a lightweight, in both hand and foot speed, he had extremely quick reflexes and the heart of a lion. As far as using tactics such as holding, he used what he was allowed to use. If the officials had been more critical of not allowing him to hold, then Ali would have come up with some other tactic to help him win. Ali was a great improviser in the ring and he would adapt to any situation. He was a genius in the mental as well as physical aspects of the game. If you notice in Jerry's second fight with Ali, near the end of the second round, Jerry hits Ali with a hard left hook and right cross combination to the head. Ali play acts like he is hurt by wobbling at the legs, much to the delight of the fans. I am sure he probably told Jerry something like, "my grandmother hits harder than that!" Jerry didn't seem to press the action anymore after this. Did Ali get into Jerry's head? I think this added to whatever the reason was that Jerry just didn't have it that night. The real Jerry would not just slowly plod after his opponent, win or lose, like he did for most of this second Ali fight. Ali did the same thing to Foreman in Zaire, because after taking some hard shots from Foreman, Ali would say things like, "George, you punch like a sissy!" This sort of thing has to take energy from a fighters psychological energy. |

|12/5/03 04:41:10 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Yes, fighters do what is allowed, even if some are more allowed than others. In hockey, you can fight, it's condoned with a wink and a nod, even though you do get a rinky-dink penalty doing it. If players were fined ten, twenty thousand dollars and suspended for three games, it'd stop yesterday. In football, a sport second only to boxing in contact and brutality, you ~can't~ fight, so no one does. Same with basketball. In amateur hockey, you can't either. Not in Olympic hockey either, and these are basically pros. I always liked the Mexican fighters. No grabbing and clinching, lying on the ropes, just furious action, fights of attrition.Interesting bit of trivia re hockey. When X Chicago Blackhawk star Keith Magnuson first came into the NHL, he couldn't fight at all. He was a superb hockey player, but in fights, he threw wimpy punches, and was always falling down and getting beaten up, so they took him down to then Johnny Coulon's gym. He soon became one of the best enforcers on ice. Now they scout players for ability to fight and throw punches, while maintaining leverage, balance, and power on ice, in skates. |12/5/03 04:50:04PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|10|BTW, when I was real little, my Dad took me and my brothers down to Navy Pier in Chicago, where Ali trained for a while (before moving to Coulon's), while in training for his Ellis fight the Summer after Frazier. It was cool! He really trained hard - shadow boxed, jumped rope, hit the bags, and sparred with serious intent, rather than gym rope a doping like he did later. Of course to a little kid, anyone would have looked good, but I still knew I was seeing something special. My Dad filmed it on 8mm movie film too, so I've been able to view it from an adult perspective too! One other interesting thing: he and his sparring partners really scrapped, and he was better than they were, but he didn't beat the crap out of them as many champions did/do, just because he could have. I thought that was pretty classy.|12/5/03 06:11:02 PM|Massimo|Rome||4||10|RS-In soccer, if you are a bum you have no problem... But if you are good, they' ll kick the shit out of you !!!!!!!|12/5/03 10:02:16 PM|Forest Ward|South Carolina||joekevin@cs.com|10|For too long now, Muhammad Ali has been given tremendous praise for his victory over Cleveland Williams. Many knowledgeable boxing fans regard this as Ali's greatest fight. I think it's about time the record has been set straight on that "fight." That "fight" was the biggest hoax put over on the public, since Floyd Patterson fought Pete Rademacher. At least when Patterson fought Rademacher everyone knew it was a sham. But when Ali fought Williams the public regarded it as a legitimate "fight." Nothing could be further from the truth. Williams took 2 or 3 bullets in the stomach from a 357 magnum about 18 months prior to the Ali fight. Normally one 357 magnum bullet in the stomach is enough to kill someone. Although Williams did the loose one kidneyAfter getting out of the hospital with a bullet still in his kidney, and not fighting in 18 months; Williams had 4 fights in 4 months. Williams fought and beat: Ben Black, Mel Turnbow, Sonny Moore, and Tod Herring. As a result of knocking out 2 of these "tigers," Williams "qualified" for a fight with Ali. It should be noted that the last legitimate contender that Williams beat was Earnie Terrell. He knocked Terrell out in the 7th round in April of 1962. That's right 4.5 years and 3 bullets earlier.The point I am making is when one talks about Ali's great fights, and there were many make no mistake about. That Williams "fight" should have never been allowed, and should not be regarded as a "fight". No matter what the record book may say. An exhibition would be more realistic description. Let me make it clear I am not denigrating Cleveland Williams, in his time he was a very good fighter. And the lifetime goal of any fighter is to fight for the championship. But by Nov of 1966, his time had passed; he was just a shell of the fighter he once was. Williams finally retired in 1972. What really amazes me is that somehow he was not lured out of retirement in the early 80's, and signed to fight Gerry Cooney.A few tidbits about that fight. The fight was promoted by Bob Arum. He later guided Butterbean to the championship. And if you look closely at the tape of the Ali-Williams fight you can see Don King in the ring after the fight is over standing next to Ali grinning. Ironically, this fight took place after King's most recent homicide, apparently he was out on bail. Because soon after he was sent to prison for murder. |12/5/03 10:36:34 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|10|Let's be real, Williams was not able to defend himself against Ali. Ali looked so good because Williams had nothing to offer. Come on! He couldn't miss his face, it was a sad night for boxing. Like a lot of other sad nights. The idea of Mike and Jerry fighting on the same night was a bad idea, because if I lost it would effect the other. By the way I didn't like Ken Norton , I thought he was so full of himself, another guy Who I didn't like knocked him out (gerry cooney). Ali and Norton that's who I could not stand. I feel nothing for them, especially Norton that said he wanted them to carry Jerry Quarry out on a stretcher. Koo koo!

12/5/03 11:15:06 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||Kentallenent@aol.com|||10|You guys are right because the Cleveland Williams Ali fought that night brought nothing to the table. Now if Ali had destroyed an in prime Williams, it would have been Ali's greatest fight."Awaqu$ kuna Ya'ash potung Jerry Quarry. Jerry Quarry pilek lovich sodatho awaqu$. Jerry qay ahiyka pi chamshoon qay lovich!" Since some of us are writing in Italian, I thought I would write something in my native California dialect (California Indian). What I said was, "there once was a man named Jerry Quarry, Jerry Quarry was a great warrior. Jerry is no longer alive and we are all sad because of this!"

12/6/03 12:11:58 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||10|Yes, it isn't too hard to look brilliant when you're fighting someone who isn't in your league. I might be in a minority when I say this, but I think Ali hit his prime when he returned to boxing, not before, when he was up against a lower grade of competition than before his exile."Look at who he fought when he returned: Quarry twice, Bonavena, Frazier three times, Norton three times, Foreman, Shavers, Lyle. Did I forget any monsters? The others were more in the league of career one (not that that was bad, just not as good as career two)." Of course, I don't know the guy, only what I've seen, but Ken Norton always seemed like a nice guy. Did he really say that about Jerry? That's pretty bad, like Duran saying of Ray Lampkin after knocking him out, "If I'd been in shape, he'd be in the morgue, not the hospital." Jeez, in the end it's a sport, and should be a brotherhood. They should have a mindset to beat their opponent, even KO him, but not to hurt, "carry them out on a stretcher."Re Mike Quarry --WoW, even Foster was worried. Mike didn't run from him though, like most Foster opponents did. I can't imagine being a brother and even going out to fight after that, let alone doing well. I think Foster was the best, most devastating LH ever, and believe he would have taken even Moore, Conn, and Spinks.12/6/03 01:07:48 AM|Forest Ward|South Carolina||joekevin@cs.com||10|I guess we will never know for sure when Ali was at his prime. Before his lay off he was certainly approaching it. But, without question the opponents he fought after his lay off were far superior to the ones he fought during his 1st run for the roses. They were younger and stronger than what Ali was fighting before the layoff. I guess it was about 20 years ago when Ali started showing signs of brain damage. People would ask me what was wrong with Ali. I would tell them he was hit in the head too much, and he has brain damage. They would tell me that can't be, Ali never got hit. I would explain before the lay off he never got hit, after the lay off was a whole new career. And he got pounded.During Ali's 1st career as a young pro he was given a number of stiffs to fight on the way up. No damage there. As he moved through the ranks and fought better fighters he was so talented he rarely got hit. So during his 1st career he probably suffered less brain damage than a man getting drunk at his bachelor party.During Ali's second career there were no more preliminary fights (with few exceptions). Ali was fighting ranked contenders. Imagine a fighter in his first fight, fighting Jerry Quarry, 2nd fight 15 rounds with Bonavena, 3 fight 15 rounds with Frazier... And he is getting hit in the head by these guys! by the time his second career is over: Frazier 3 times, Norton 3 times, Shavers, Foreman... Most of these fights went the distance. And once again these are young vibrant world class athletes pounding him on his head.No question about it those guys Ali fought the 2nd time around were far superior to the ones he fought the 1st time around. It's only conjecture at this point to wonder what Ali's health would be like today if he retired after the Foreman. My best guess is that the brain damaged still might have occurred, but it might have progressed a lot slower, and possibly not have become evident until Ali was well on in years.Ali's brother Rachman the last I heard was homeless and living in his car in Louisville. Some years ago after a sparring sessions with Muhammad, Rachman complained of head pains and was hospitalized and then released. But he was never allowed to box again. The story goes that Ali always felt guilty about that. | Most of you experienced readers who actually did a little fighting or training know that a punch doesn't have to be powerful to hurt or to knock an opponent out. What's more important is placement of your punch, especially in regard to knockouts. What you want to do is hit an area of the opponent's head or face where a nerve ending or its circuitry to a brain center will be momentarily compressed, in effect turning much or all of the brain off for a moment, something like a light switch. If the compression is long or deep enough, there is enough loss of consciousness for a KO or full 10-count. One or your earlier posters called these perfectly-placed punches "snap punches". They can indeed be "arm punches", and do not have to be powerful, bludgeoning blows. Alexis Arguello was a master of the snap punch, and hardly ever seemed to throw really hard punches, but still became a champion. This type of punch from Ali brought down Liston in their second fight. Sonny got clipped perfectly and went down. Heavy, bludgeoning blows, unless they're right on the button, do hurt a fighter but seldom know a man out, unless several land in quick succession. Is this right, Kent, Steve, Paul, Jimmy, Kokos? Now regarding the way Ali "trained getting hit"L he did not allow his sparring partners to knock him out or bang on him until he was finished. What he did was dare to accept a little more punishment than most champions sparring, so as to familiarize himself with fighting hurt, not showing it, and learning to keep some of his wits about him in this situation. It worked, too. Regarding the loose ropes and all the funny business in Kinsasha, Zaire: isn't it the responsibility of a fighter's manager and trainer to make sure all that stuff is acceptable, or refuse to fight? Why didn't Foreman's people raise a stink? Were they threatened not to? Did they try and get ignored? Regarding the allegation of Ali's dirty tactics: isn't this every man for himself? Either fight or shut up. I fought a guy in the amateurs once who used just about every foul you can think of, but only once. The referee was mad at him but did not stop the fight or disqualify him. Besides, as Paul (I think) pointed out, there are thousands of ways to shade an outcome, semi-cheat, or get away with fighting dirty. When I fought in LA, a lot of the black guys had their hair freshly cut to just a stubble, and after just a few rounds, their fairer-skinned opponents would have arms, shoulders and sometimes faces scraped raw. Lots of white guys used the same tactic -- including Jerry Q, I think -- by coming into the round with a 5 o'clock shadow. That's more gamesmanship than cheating. Ali was not the only hombre who held, clinched, leaned on your neck, etc. | YES, THIS IS SOMETHING THAT SOMEONE BROUGHT UP A WHILE BACK ON HERE. THE BODY IS FULL OF PRESSURE POINTS, IF ONE HAPPENS TO GET HIT JUST RIGHT, IT WILL KNOCK THEM OUT. THIS IS MUCH HARDER TO DO WITH A GLOVE ON, IF YOU WERE TO TAKE OFF THE GLOVES, YOU'D FIND FIGHTERS GETTING KILLED IN THERE, ANY TIME A FIGHTER GETS IN THE RING HIS LIFE IS ON THE LINE, I KNOW THEY DON'T LOOK AT IT THIS WAY BECAUSE THEY ARE YOUNG AND FEEL INDESTRUCTIBLE, BUT THAT IS THE REALITY OF THE GAME, BECAUSE IN THE FINAL ANALYSIS, THE GAME IS NO GAME AT ALL. Your right, it is no game and the fighters are the last to lean that, if they ever do at all. Going back to the Ali-Williams fight. Howard Cosell rose to fame and fortune on Ali's coat tails, and brain cells. I ask, why did it take Cosell; 16 years almost to the day to realize whata horrible "sport" boxing is.
Ali-Williams fought in the Astrodome in Nov of 1966. Cosell was right there on national TV hyping the fight for his employers, ABC network. He knew then how ill equipped Williams was. Three bullets shot shots, one still in his kidney. But, does Cosell tell us this noooo. He tells us what a great fighter Ali is. And how dangerous Cleveland "Big Cat" Williams. And then 16 years later same place the Astrodome, Larry Holmes fights Tex Cobb. And Holmes pounds Cobb for 15 rounds. And Mr."Tell like it is," decides he boxing is shameful and degrading and he won't be involved with it anymore. You mean to tell me that it took Cosell 16 years to learn how dangerous boxing. No, he was feigning integrity trying to show how noble and enlightened he was. He was typical of those sycophantic journalists surrounding Ali who described how beautiful Ali was pounding his opponents into submission. They could not control their glee, when a fighter was rendered helpless, and defenseless. The way they oohed and awwed when Ali was fighting, you would think it was better than sex. I always marveled at these wonderful enlightened people. They were always so sophisticated and urbane. I often wondered if they were "closet" cockfight fans? I will tell you why. You would never see them at the prelim fights leading up to the main event. God forbid, they find themselves mingling with blood thirsty commoners, watching two prelim fighter trying to earn $500 for a trip to the Jersey shore. No, they were too civilized for that. To them Ali was a beautiful hawk swooping down on ugly moles. Two cocks killing each other was cruel and inhumane. But watching Ali was sooo beyond description. Bullcrap the media elites cared more about two chickens, than they do about humans. If you think I am over stating my case. The next time you see Muhammad Ali, ask him to float like a butterfly and sting like a bee, just for 20 seconds.

You're Indian ancestors have discovered the symbol of dollar $, or anyway something very similar! They were not dumb at all!! can render someone knocked out if landed in the right spot. My trainer, if and when I ever make it to his karate dojo, is an expert at such centers in the body and he can render someone incapacitated just by pressing certain areas such as on the arms. When he gets one of his "spots" it is very hard not to go down. It has to be pressed on the exact spot otherwise it doesn't work.

How can you know the Indian language if they didn't use to write? "Scripta manent, verba volant " !

Even athletes in sports more known for joint and muscle damage than head injuries know that the pain they live with in their twenties or thirties gets a lot worse from 40 on, often "branching out." It's been shown that brain damage worsens too within this age frame. I read that back in the Liston days, Ali complained of dizziness and feeling drunk sometimes, and it was written off as "stress." He wasn't getting hit a lot in those days, but I saw a feature once on PBS stating that even bumping your head getting into the car does a teeny weeny, infinitesimal amount of damage. I guess it shows just how resilient we humans are, when we see fighters take what they do. There's also no doubt at all that some fighters are more prone to awful injuries and effects than others, just as some are more able to take punches. ~What~ is happening internally to make these things true is the million dollar question.

Taking a fighter who gets really bad later, and wondering if they would have gotten that bad if they'd quit way earlier is a good question. There's a possibility they would have anyway when they got older, or maybe not, but for sure, continuing to fight never ~helps~!

I might be in a minority when I say this, but I think Ali hit his prime when he ~returned~ to boxing, not before, when he was up against a lower grade of competition than before his exile. ~QUOTE~

I REMEMBER WATCHING THE FIGHT AND THINKING TO MYSELF THAT ALI'S MOVEMENT WAS LESS FLUID. HE APPEARED TO BE TENTATIVE IN HIS APPROACH AND AT TIMES UNCERTAIN. THIS MAY VERY WELL HAVE BEEN RING RUST, BUT HIS PERFORMANCES AGAINST QUARRY, BONAVENA, FRAZIER, NORTON ETC., WERE NOTHING COMPARED TO HOW HE PERFORMED AGAINST LISTON, PATTERSON, COOPER 2 ETC. NOW OVERALL, THE ONLY FIGHTERS IN PHASE TWO, THAT HE Fought, WHO I FEEL WERE SUPERIOR TO ANY OPPONENTS IN PHASE ONE, WERE FRAZIER AND HOLMES. HAD HE Fought THESE TWO, IN PHASE ONE, HE WOULD HAVE DONE MUCH BETTER.

I FIND IT DIFFICULT TO BELIEVE THAT ALI'S BROTHER IS HOMELESS IN LOUISVILLE. THAT SOUNDS LIKE CYBERSPIN TO ME.

I LIKE K.JOHNSON
TONIGHT BY TKO.

Don't you think Frazier, Norton, Foreman, Quarry, etc. are a bit of a cut over Liston, Patterson, Williams, Folley, etc.? I do - a ~big~ cut. I think a lot of the guys he beat or had tough fights with in career two, he'd have had a real time with in career one, almost certainly being unable to beat them. I also think Ali would have taken Clay.The long rest did him good. His tentativeness against Quarry was some rust, like anyone who hasn't done something skill-specific for a long time, but it was also because of who the opponent was. Without Quarry's cut, Ali would have had a looong night, and may not have won. Well, they might have given him the decision, but he might not have ~won~! He was under intense pressure to build up fast to Frazier. If he'd done it really right, he'd have eaten up two or three slow, light hitting stiffs, then maybe a really good guy who was fading, like Patterson or someone like that, ~then~ Quarry-Bonavena-Frazier. Does anyone really think any pre-Frazier fighters were going to be given a decision? :-)| some linguistic experts spent time with the various tribes who speak the same language and the linguistics people learned the language and created a writing system. The language, which was only spoken in parts of Southern California, was in danger of being lost forever as most of the people didn't speak it anymore, they all speak english. Only some of the older people spoke the native language. It is now a completely written language with an alphabet similar to english but with some subtle differences. I am not fluent in it yet but I have been taking a class to learn it and I am going to help pass it on to the younger generation or maybe they may end up teaching it to me as they have a teacher that is at their school who teaches them the language and they learn it faster than I do!

12/6/03 03:55:40 PM|KOOKOO|NY||KOOKOOCLOCK000@YAHOO.COM|||10|MASSINO , YOU ARE TRYING TO POSION THE MIND OF KENT,HE ALREADY HAS HIS OWN HERITAGE , STOP TALKING ALL THIS ITALIAN STUFF , THIS IS THE LAND OF QUARRY , THE WORLD I&lt;br&gt;LOVE BEING A PART OF , THE CLOCKMAN WILL HELP POLICE THIS&lt;br&gt;SITE. ALL DUMB, FAT, BALDHEADED PEOPLE NEED NOT APPLY, SPEAK &lt;br&gt;ENGLISH FOR GOD'S SAKE.
KOOCOO

12/6/03 04:07:13 PM|Jerrys Spirit|Valhalla||Angelwings@^^^.com|||10|Amen and thanks KOOCOO|

12/6/03 05:26:34 PM|Pete|Cleveland||pco@msn.com|||10|" Don't you think Frazier, Norton, Foreman, Quarry, etc. are a bit of a cut over Liston, Patterson, Williams, Folley, etc.? I do - a ~big~ cut. " Only Frazier was really at that top level. Liston would have beat Foreman easily. Patterson, I believe fought with Jerry the first time around(PATTERSON WAS FINISHED BY THEN) and was decisioned in their second fight, but I believe that he was above those you mentioned, where overall skill is concerned. Ken Norton, a sharp, heavy hitter, was not really championship material. He was put away by virtually all the top contenders. Williams, as stated, was all shot up and over the hill, but so were many of Ali 2's opponents.(BONAVENA, SPINKS, DUNN, QUARRY(sorry, but it's true), ELLIS, CHUVALO...THE ALI/FRAZIER TRILOGY, TO BE FAIR, SHOULD HAVE TAKEN PLACE, WHILE BOTH FIGHTERS WERE IN THEIR PRIME, BECAUSE FRAZIER WAS THE ONLY FIGHTER WHO GAVE ALI A RUN FOR HIS MONEY. FRAZIER WOULD NEVER HAVE BEEN ABLE TO REACH ALI 1.|

12/6/03 05:55:38 PM|KOOKOO|NY||KOOKOOCLOCK000@YAHOO.COM|||10|LISTON WOULD HAVE BEAT FOREMAN IN IF HE WAS IN HIS PRIME, I KNOW THAT THEY SPARRED IN 1968 AND LISTON GOT THE BETTER OF IT, BUT LISTON WAS FADED IN 68, I BELIEVE JERRY WOULD HAVE BEEN ABLE TO TAKE HIM OUT AT THAT POINT, AGE MAKES ALL THE DIFFERENCE, THERES A LOT OF FIGHTS THAT DID NOT HAPPEN AT THAT TIME, LISTON VS QUARRY, BONAVENA VS QUARRY , FRAZIER VS LISTON, ELLIS VS LISTON, HEY THERES ONLY SO MANY MATCHUPS THAT COULD BE MADE, THE REST IS FANTASY. KOOCOO|

12/6/03 07:01:39 PM|Forest Ward|South Carolina||joekevin@cs.com|||10|I think it's beyond question that the men Ali fought his 2nd time around were far superior to those he fought in his 1st go around, with the exception of Liston and possibly Terrell.Comparing: Doug Jones, Zora Folley, Mildenberger, Henry Cooper, Brian London, George Chuvalo. To: Quarry, Bonvena, Shavers, Norton,Young, Lyle,Foreman is quite a stretch.The second group of fighters were younger, stonger and more talented than the 1st group I named. Even using your logic, would anyone doubt that Floyd Patterson put up a better fight against Ali in 1972 than he did in 1965.Regarding, Rachman Ali's condition. I was out in Las Vegas 8 months ago. And I had a conversation with an old member of Ali's entourage, who has been living out in Vegas for the past 25 years. He is the one who told me that Rachman is homeless and living in his car. Also, at times Ali is unable to walk and uses a wheelchair. Just because the press does not report it, or it is not seen on TV, does not mean it's not true. During President FDR's terms in office it was never reported that he wasusing a wheelchair.Boxing is a great "sport," as long as you are not a fighter
My last sentence was Latin not Italian. My friend Evan B. spoke to me in Italian first, so I responded him in the Dante's language.

I'm gonna speak in American slang, with the Oregon's accent. I have just seen Carneravs Sharkey 2 and Primo was a very good heavy! Live with it and eat lasagne... Yo, KooKof!

My friend Evan B. spoke to me in Italian first, so I responded him in the Dante's language.

Ok, I'm gonna speak in American slang, with the Oregon's accent.

I have just seen Carneravs Sharkey 2 and Primo was a very good heavy! Live with it and eat lasagne... Yo, KooKof!

The second group of fighters were younger, stonger and more talented than the 1st group I named. Even using your logic, would anyone doubt that Floyd Patterson put up a better fight against Ali in 1972 than he did in 1965.

Patterson put up a better fight in '72, because Ali was spent; in '65, he wasn't.

Doug Jones was not a bad fighter and I would have to rank him above the likes of Bonavena and Young. Jerry was not unlike Chuvalo, in that they both had a lot of heart and courage. Jerry was a better box office draw, in much the same way that Bonavena and Young were. The only fighters from phase 2 that you mention, that deserve some recognition would be George Foreman (he became champion and was put down by Ali. This was Ali 2's greatest moment and it's a shame he didn't retire on the spot); Ron Lyle (he was tough and a hard hitter. He had great courage and heart, but I don't see him surpassing Doug Jones, when Ali fought him.) Ken Norton (who did he beat...Ali once and Jerry. He couldn't get past Foreman, Holmes or Shavers. He was a top contender for a while. His most impressive victory was probably over Duane Bobick.) Earnie Shavers (much over-rated because of his knockout power. Lost against Ali, Holmes, Quarry.)

Patterson clearly fought better against Ali the second time around because in the first fight, Patterson was suffering from back problems. His back went out on him early in the fight and while he lasted longer in the first fight, twelve rounds, as opposed to seven in the second fight, Patterson was never a factor in the first fight. It had little to do with Ali slipping in albillity.

Vitali Klitschko sure looked good tonight in knocking out Kirk Johnson inside of two rounds. But Johnson didn't help matters any by coming in at 260 pounds. I can't see how a fighter can be that much overweight for a major fight. At 6'7" 250 pounds, Klitschko went after Johnson and manhandled him, something that nobody has ever done to Johnson. Lewis had better look out if he decides to fight Klitschko again.

Maybe it's time again for each of us to publish our opinion of the top 5 (or 10) heavyweights of 1960-1980. Mine are:

1. Ali
2. Frazier
3. Foreman
4. Liston
5. Holmes
6. Young
7. Ellis

That's as far as I can remember with specificity. My feeling is that looking only a records, rounds, punches in fights, and comparing opponents and records against is a good objective basis but has two problems -- one if that it's more or less unlimited and tentative, for there are always more angles to look at for human beings without supercomputer data-crunching capability; and second that subjective judgments and intuition are more powerful and comprehensive. Different people also interpret data (like results or knockdowns) differently, especially when these events happened 35 or 40 years ago, when some of the people writing on this site were small children.

These are the strongest boxers as I remember them. I should say fighters because the point has been made that Ali did not know how to box in the traditional meaning of the word, and never learned.

Facing Muhammad Ali coming off a 3 or 4 year layoff was a perfect opportunity for Jerry, or rather the best he would ever get. He got beat, though -- if not "creamed", then at least beaten decisively. Being one punch away from winning, as a few of you have said, is meaningless and does not count anyway except in being close, in horseshoes. Jerry got beat up twice by Frazier. I think that's the difference for Jerry between greatness and a level of very good. During his prime years, Frazier showed against at least 2 opponents he was vulnerable and could be beaten. Jerry had two chances at him and could not convert. Many if not most of you will put Jerry in your top 5. I expect Roadscholarette to rank Jerry #2, behind only Frazier. Massimo will make Primo Carnera #1 in 1960-1980 simply because of his lasting greatness, then go to Ali as #2. So be it. Let 'em rip!More more thing -- I know you folks are mentioning hepatitis, bad backs, and so on as explanatory information, but in the only sense that really matters about this sport (or activity, Forrest, and I agree with you and Jimmy now), no excuse counts. A champion is someone who finds a way to win. Period. He overcomes all obstacles, including injury, illness, bad fortune and so on.More funny how this site has turned my stomach against boxing. I think it's the way you friends have explored it up close and shown how many of my old favorites have been ruined by it physically and mentally. I am interested in the older fighters but seeing current fights and new kids coming up, thanks, but this is where I came in.Massimo, il mio fratello, che l'espressione lo significa "ha cominciato a vedere il ciclo infinito a questo punto, grazie e non desideri vederlo diverse volte". Quello si riferisce ad entrare in un teatro di movie nel mezzo di un movie, vedente lo all'estremità, allora attendente per vedere che cosa avete mancato fino a che in primo luogo non siate entrato. Quello è come ritengo circa boxing -- un ciclo infinito che distrugge i giovani. Sono un amico codardo e anziano? Spero che non pensiate così. | 12/7/03 03:46:32 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com|||10|People seem to forget that 'arm punches' are also scoring hits. And what they may lack in power, they certainly make up for with surprise. Arm punches are delivered with much greater speed (because they travel shorter distances) and when they connect they usually totally surprise the opponent. He doesn't see it coming, he can't tense his neck and jaw, and the shock can put him out.....just like it did to Liston in the second Ali fight. That was no phantom punch. It was an instinct punch that found its totally unsuspecting mark. Had Ali loaded that punch up with shoulder and hip pivot then it would have had much more power - but it would not have landed. And even if it did land, the benefit of surprise was lost. It wouldn't have knocked Liston out. Look at Ali's lead rights. They were always arm punches and they nearly always landed. Ali's jab was virtually an arm punch too. The reason the jab and his lead right hurt (apart from surprise) was because Ali also did what most rookie fighters are taught but seldom do - he snapped the thumb downwards at the moment of impact. Even with a light 'arm' punch, this broke the opponents skin (usually white guys with their sharper features, eg Cooper, Quarry, et al). Someone said that Ali didn't have an uppercut. True. He didn't need one. Ali's great jab kept the opponent on the outside and the shorter, elbow bent nature of uppercuts would not have reached their chin. Uppercuts are an 'in' fighters greatest weapon, not a guy with a fast straight jab. The only time Ali let an opponent in close was to lean on them, tie them up, rest himself, but wear them out by making them wrestle to get away. Ali's jab, lead right, and right cross, were so accurately delivered, and so fast in transit, that he never needed an 'in' fighters uppercut. Also, Ali had the best balance in the business. RS said he fought "too upright". With respect, RS, that is untrue. Ali had a terrific stance. Anyone ever see Ali lose his balance or slip ? I stand to be corrected, but I can't. (It was also Ali's stance - left foot way forward and right foot back acting as a shock absorber that made throwing uppercuts more difficult). Ali could throw punches going backwards or sideways......all because of his superb balance. Call it throwing punches from 'crazy angles', RS, but superb balance let that happen and they were all scoring punches. Someone said that Ali didn't throw a lot of combinations. Mostly untrue. As Cassius Clay his combinations were blinding. But as age crept on he threw fewer because throwing combinations eats up a lot of energy. He took to throwing combinations at the end of rounds to impress judges, and he conserved energy doing that (as per Foreman). Also, in the heat of his last fight with Frazier, it was too damn hot to throw combinations. Who had the energy? So Ali threw lead rights (scoring 'arm' punches), and also jabs and right crosses. He didn't need fancy combinations (and it was too hot and energy sapping, anyway). RS wrote that Ali won that fight "after Joe's left eye betrayed him." Not so. Ali's lead rights and right crosses 'betrayed' Joe's left eye. There was nothing 'mickey mouse' about Ali, as someone wrote. Evan B - another very good 'arm' puncher was Australia's triple world champion Jeff Fenech. He threw 'arm' punches often and from all angles. Fenech mauled opponents into submission. Problem was, at the end of his career, he never had Ali's chin. Cheers.

12/7/03 05:04:17 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com||||10|Evans B - my top 7 heavies for the period 1960 to 1980 are:1. Ali2. Holmes3. Foreman4. Frazier5. Liston6. Patterson7. EllisI couldn't leave Patterson out, despite his smallness. He was the youngest heavyweight champion to that time, and he was also the first Olympic gold medalist (he won as a middleweight) to go on and win a world heavyweight title. | consistently take all the others, or in some cases ~many~ of the others, but everyone here did take some or most of the others on the list, and/or all the other contenders in their time. Of the ones they fought, Chuvalo beat only Quarry (officially at least), Patterson beat only Chuvalo, and JQ beat only Patterson, but how can you not include them? Lyle and Shavers were really tough guys and hard punchers, but were taken by everyone here who they fought. Both were incomplete fighters, either hurried along (both) or trained one dimensionally (Shavers).I didn't include Bugner, because potential aside, he didn't beat anyone here he fought, and really had ~only~ potential. Without results, that and a quarter will make a phone call.Excuses," reasons, mitigating circumstances, whatever, are part of every discussion of sports, of wins and losses alike. I think they can get out of hand sometimes, ie, Mike Tyson's KO of Woody Allen at 00:01 of round one: "Woody would have won if only he hadn't lost," LOL, but talking about other factors in wins and losses can also lend color, understanding, and often greater perspective to events that may not always be as black and white as the cold stats on a sports page. What involving humans ~is~ ever completely subjective?| |12/7/03 05:02:51 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com||10|SOUNDS LIKE A JAILHOUSE LAWYER, WHATS WITH ALL THESE LIST, WHO CARES :) ) ) ) ) ) ) )| |12/8/03 12:00:02 AM|Evan B|Belfast||evanb46@juno.com||10|Koo Koo, I don't think you're funny or entertaining at all. On the contrary, you're depressing to me, because you sound very much like a desperate alcoholic, prescription medicine abuser, or mental patient. Some of the people here have been patient with you, but clearly you are the one spitting in our communal bowl of soup. For a day or two, you cooperated and were polite, but now you're back abusing people, calling people assholes, and expressing your opinion as if we are somehow obligated to do your bidding. Would you please, as a holiday gift to us all, either mind your manners or stop posting? I mean this request seriously, and intend you no personal offense or injury. You'll feel a lot better about yourself, too, if you stop trying to insult people. The important word is "trying", because do not think Kent, Paul, Steve, Massimo, Jimmy, Sonia or Roadscholarette take your words to heart. And while I have your attention, what is your relationship to the Quarry family? Are you an old friend from Bellflower or Artesia, or did you meet Jerry as a fan, or are you an inlaw or cousin, or were you once a boxer or promoter, or what? Finding out would be interesting to all of us. Take care, my friend, and please think about what I suggest. | |12/8/03 12:11:33 AM|Evan B|Belfast||evanb46@juno.com||10|ON EXCUSES -- Yes, I know they are often real and unavoidable, Roadscholarette. The point I was trying to make (and I guess I failed) was that part of greatness is succeeding despite them, in my opinion. I'm certainly not saying every injury or illness is psychosomatic or a conversion reaction, but I believe the greatest champions somehow bypass these problems through their will and determination. True, we cannot explain this now, and certainly not prove it, so it's an intuitive idea. Great champions like Dempsey, Louis, Marciano and even Ali rarely if ever had excuses to make, or illnesses or medical conditions that stopped them. The same goes for champions in other sports, like Jim Brown or Rod Laver or Jesse Owens or Jackie Robinson or Marion Jones. It's true that some great champions like Sandy Koufax and Joe Namath did have injuries or conditions that slowed them down sometimes, but it seems to me the trend for the great is to overcome them. What I'm talking about is related to the old saying, "Never let them see you sweat." I know this idea is abstract and subjective, so I don't necessarily expect anyone to agree, but think about it. |
got any sweat left, anyway). I recall when Holyfield looked Tyson in the eye before their first fight and said, "You don't bother me at all" and he won the fight there and then. Clay deliberately went on like a lunatic before his first fight with Liston because he knew Liston wouldn't worry about a sane man. You never see lazy champions. All of them worked unbelievably hard to realise their dreams. They also had to have passion, and that's the same for anyone in any walk of life. JFK and Martin Luther King were so compelling and awe inspiring because they 'sweated' passion and self-belief. I don't like tennis, but I always found Agassi a real warrior. He had that look in his eye. I think Hewitt has it too. Greg Norman, however, is the very anti-thesis of "never let them see you sweat". You could always see when he was under pressure. His eyes would sink back in his head. That aside, you were a bit tough on poor old Koo Koo. You listed three reasons for his behaviour; a fourth possibility is that he is lonely and hasn't had recent practice relating to people and therefore doesn't know how to. We all annoy each other at times on this site. I regret the argument I had with Evren. We both touched a nerve on something we were passionate about. It was the same with Forest Ward earlier this year. I disagreed with his pessimistic views on boxing. But the more I think of Ali's present state (and, of course, Jerry Quarry), it becomes increasingly difficult not to have doubts. So I wish I had been more accommodating of Forest's view. Anyway, how come you live in Belfast, but spell words the American way. You asked a lot of questions of Koo Koo, too, but never answered any about yourself.

| 12/8/03 09:48:00 AM | John Gerard|NYC||rock289z@yahoo.com| | 10 | TONY ALONGI DEAD AT 64. Tony fought JQ and Chuvalo to a draw. He passed away in Florida on Dec. 3rd. |
| 12/8/03 10:59:54 AM | Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com| | 10 | The point I was trying to make (and I guess I failed) was that part of greatness is succeeding despite them... No, the point was made, and I know exactly what you meant. It just got me thinking. The really great participants do indeed go beyond anything considered reasonable or even sane by the average person, and this is part of the triad that makes them great - genetics, training, and determination. Without one of those, an athlete is just another "coulda." Something else, and I'm not basing this on any hard numbers, just observation, but it seems that the two sports in which the most excuses emerge are in boxing and tennis. Odd, the most brutal and the most gentle sport. Once more, there are many times when an "excuse" (which technically doesn't mean anything phony, but has ~come~ to mean that) is solid cause and effect, but can you imagine the hazing football or basketball players would get if they really said much at all about why they lost, that wasn't self effacing? You mentioned Namath. I met him at a sports/charity event many years ago, when he was out of football, via a guy my Dad knew who was then a sportswriter for the Chicago Trib. He's a very charming, nice guy. Other than his looks, money, and fame, it's easy to see why he was never without women. At halftime, he used to ride piggyback on the back of one of the big linemen down the steps at Shea, get his knees drained, and come back out ready to rip. I shudder to think what his life must be like now though. The Bear's great Dick Butkus has to have his wife help him put on his pants, and Ted "Mad Stork" Hendricks once said his five year old daughter could ride a bicycle farther than he could. :-( |
| 12/8/03 11:26:15 AM | Massimo|Rome||4| | 10 | Tony Alongi fought JQ 3 times: 1 draw, 1 loss on points and 1 loss by KO 4. |
| 12/8/03 11:53:34 AM | KOOKOO|NY||KOOKOOCLOCK000@YAHOO.COM| | 10 | EVAN , HOW CAN YOU ASK ME ALL THESE QUESTIONS, ALLI WILL TELL YOU IS THAT I AM JERRY'S GREATEST FAN, CRAZYHEY EVERYBODYS CRAZY THESES DAYS, LOOK AT THESE RAP ARTISTS, TRY TO PUT THEM AWAY THEY PUT A HIT ON THEPROSECUTER, I TELL YOU THERES A WHOLE SUB-CULTURETAKING OVER, GETTING BACK TO THE QUARRYS, NO ,
They don't know me, only on here, Evan, don't try to be more Quarry than me, it won't happen, I've studied this man's life, like some people study to be a doctor, respect your elders young man, listen to the clockman, you might even learn something.

Koo Koo Koo Koo Koo

12/8/03 01:20:15 PM|Evan B|Belfast, originally||evanb46@juno.com ||||10|Koo Koo, I apologize to you for saying those unkind things about you. I was wrong. I asked you those questions out of curiosity, because I thought maybe you were Jerry's accountant or one of his brothers in law, or something. I meant no offense by asking. 12/8/03 01:28:29 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com ||||10|Joke from another page:One night, a cop was staking out a particularly rowdy bar, figuring it was a good place to make his DUI quota for the month. At closing time, he saw a guy stumble out of the bar, singing in a slurred voice, tripping on the curb, and trying his keys on five different cars before he found his. After stopping to urinate, the man got in and sat in the front seat fumbling around with the keys for several minutes. By this time everyone had left the bar and driven off. Finally, he started his engine and began to pull away. However, the cop was waiting for him. He stopped the driver, read him his rights and administered the field sobriety test. The results showed a reading of 0.0. The puzzled cop demanded to know how that could be. With a smile on his face, the driver replied, "Tonight, I'm the designated decoy!" LOL!12/8/03 02:28:48 PM|Koo Koo NY||kookooclock00@yahoo.com ||||10|EVAN, I'M VERY SURPRISED, YOU SEEM TO HAVE A LOT OF CLASS, WE ALL MAKE MISTAKES, I USED TO BE MAD AT JAMES QUARRY, I TOLD HIM THAT HE WAS TO BLAME FOR JERRY NOT WINNING THE TITLE WHEN HE FOUGHT ELLIS, JERRY WENT TO HIT HIM AND JAMES PUSHED JERRY INTO A JUKEBOX AND HURT HIS BACK, I DO FEEL VERY VERY BAD I TOLD HIM THIS AS I KNOW THIS HURT HIS FEELINGS, IT JUST WASN'T MEANT FOR JERRY TO WIN IT I GUESS, HE WENT OUT IN A BLAZE OF GLORY THOUGH!

12/8/03 06:05:55 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com ||||10|Koo Koo, Mr. Jimmy said he wasn't hurt by the comments you made about him costing Jerry the title. But you are right, he may have said it didn't bother him and it really did bother him. The incident, for those of you who don't know, happened at the Quarry's family bar when they were celebrating Jerry's victory over Thad Spencer. After much booze, a fight broke out and Jerry tried to hit Jimmy, his brother, for who knows why. Jimmy did grab a hold of Jerry and pushed him into the Jukebox and Jerry injured his back. After the Ellis fight, Jerry found out he had a fractured vertebrae in his back. In Jimmy's telling of the story, he said the brothers used to fight a lot growing up but by the time Jerry got to be an experienced boxer, Jimmy could not compete with him. This is why he grabbed and pushed Jerry as Jerry would have "taken his head off!" He also said he regretted it a lot that they fought like that but it was part of their proof of their manhood when they were younger, who was tougher on any given day, and they would fight at the drop of the hat. Who was a better fighter, Jerry or Ellis? Well Jerry fought Ellis with a broken back and he still only lost by a split decision. I would say Jerry was the better fighter.

12/8/03 06:24:46 PM|Evan B|Belfast, I said!||evanb46@juno.com ||||10|Kent, Jimmy, Koo Koo, Paul and all you mugs! Where I come from in Ireland and even among my Los Angeles mick friends and cousins, pushing one another into a jukebox would not even make a typically violent day! I was fighting two round semi-mains in my Uncle Desmond's garden by the time I was 5, with no mandatory 8-counts and no neutral corner rule. The absolute worst whuppin's I've ever taken have been from my own blood kin. Whenever the Irish get together, the blood flows along with the whiskey, right, Steve? Most glorious damn race in the world! Jimmy, look at it this way, y'harp -- if you hadnna dunnit, one of the other brothers or cousins (or even a big girl cousin, maybe in training to be a nun) woulda. Bless the Quarrys, past, present, and forever!!

12/8/03 06:31:24 PM|Massimo|Rome||4||10|Why didn't Jerry delay the fight if he had a broken back? That was, by far, the most important fight of his career
!!!! I'd be curious to know the reason, thanks !!

12/8/03 07:07:56 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclockk000@yahoo.com||10|this is what i read once, that jerrys dad jack quarry told him that this fight was it and he had to fight it or he might not get another chance, jerry having too much guts as always went through with the fight, against his better judgement.

12/8/03 07:54:10 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA
CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||10|EVAN B: Being 1/2 IRISH and 1/2 STOOGE. I can relate, Really sad to hear about Tony ALONGI. Massimo that was Tony Doyle you were referring to and not Tony Alonei, Something about Doyle, Quarry was asked which former opponent he wanted to see, and he said TONY DOYLE. So it was arranged for the two to get together in L.A. at the CAULIFLOWER ALLEY CLUB, and Dole was sad saying JERRY QUARRY was not JERRY QUARRY anymore. Doyle was also quoted that Quarry was one heavyweight who could really hurt you, "Irish" GIL KING who sparrd a little with JQ, Told me he was simply "JUST AWESOME" WITH A PRO RECORD 36-5-1 (21 KO'S) KING OTTA KNOW. take care!!

12/8/03 09:06:08 PM|Pete|Cleveland||pco@msn.com||10|"Who was a better fighter, Jerry or Ellis? Well Jerry fought Ellis with a broken back and he still only lost by a split decision. I would say Jerry was the better fighter." I agree, Jerry was much tougher, much stronger. Ellis had a much overhand right, but who did he beat? He wasn't a legitimate champion and he really was just a blown up middleweight. Frazier was smart not to involve himself in that tournament back in '67, although it did provide some good television entertainment for fight fans.

12/8/03 10:21:02 PM|Forest Ward|South Carolina||joekevin@cs.com||10|John Gerard, how are you buddy? I was watching a tape over the weekend, Eddie Machen vs. Doug Jones, from 1962 in Miami Beach. In the prefight introductions the announcer introduced Willie Pastrano, and Tony Alongi to the crowd. What a coincidence.In fairness to Jimmy Ellis, he has a lot to be proud of.
He was an overachiever, big time! He got the most out of his ability. As a heavyweight, his record was not shabby. He beat: Johnny Persol, Leotis Martin, Oscar Bonevama, Jerry Quarry, and George Chvvalo.

12/8/03 10:54:56 PM|Evan B|Belfast||evanb46@juno.com||10|Maybe this would be a good time to go through some of the Jerry Quarry legends and find the truth. I remember around 1968 or so when Jerry had a big fight scheduled. Then he reportedly sprained or even broke his ankle sliding into second base in a family softball game. I think the big fight had to be postponed. I remember thinking, "What a dope!" but at the same time, I liked it because he was with his family having a good time, and not duking it out with vice cops at 3 AM in an alley in Hollywood, you know. It's a human mistake that could have happened to any of us.
But is it true? Koo Koo, Kent, do you remember that story? Jimmy? Besides, sliding in one of those games show A DAMNED HIGH LEVEL OF COMPETITIVENESS! I wonder who was on the teams.

12/8/03 11:12:09 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Evan, yes that doesn't sound like much of a brawl, Jerry falling into the jukebox but it could very well have cost him the title. It is not entirely Mr. Jimmy's (James Quarry) fault as he was protecting himself. In fact, Jerry was also to blame for throwing the punch in the first place. Forest, Jimmy Ellis was a good fighter. I just feel Jerry, overall, was a better fighter.

12/9/03 01:43:05 AM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree,
CA||Sonia90101@aol.com||10|I remember when I was younger, The Quarry's had a Reunion of sorts, and they played Football, and Uncle Jerry, and Uncle Mike, I believe were playing and damn it if they didn't run into each other, and only one was cut, that day was fun, listening to tunes, playing football, and of course eating. That was a cool time.

Koo Koo - you being acknowledged as the number 1 Quarryologist, which was the 'one too many' fight that Jerry had? Which fight should he have retired after? I was thinking about Ali. I don't think he sustained any lasting damaged in his first career as Clay. The hardest he got hit was Henry Cooper, but film of him speaking during his exile at a college reveals him to be articulate and fluent in speech so I assume he was okay. The first apparent damage to me was his ringside speech after he beat Foreman. His speech was awkward and slurred, and the sparkle in his eyes was dimmer. I think maybe the damage started in the first Frazier fight and was probably irreversible by the second Norton bout. Probably had a gene that meant he would have got Parkinson's anyway, and the damage he took in the ring just hastened the process. He should never have been allowed to continue after Foreman, but there were many snouts in the financial trough that only Ali could keep filling. Evren B - one side of my ancestry came from Ireland's County of Cork. Never been there. The other side was from England and got a free cruise to Australia on a convict ship. Were you in Australia for the rugby world cup singing 'Sweet Chariot'?

After Mr. Jimmy's memorial service, I was playing pool with Mike at Wilma's house and I said to Mike, "I don't really care if I win or lose this game." Mike looked straight at me, and he said, "show me a good loser, and I'll show you a loser!" He said it in a kidding, friendly sort of way but I could tell he was at least a little bit serious, that he was very competitive in even a back yard pool game with no money on the line. I said back to him, "Mike, I am just going to have a good time and while I am not going to let you win on purpose (which he did anyway, two games out of three), I still don't care if I win or not as it is just a pool game." He smiled and nodded at me and he respected what I had to say because in a way, his competitiveness was testing me and I stood up to his challenge anyway by sticking to my attitude, no matter what he thought.

I have heard people say that Jerry was the most competitive person they ever met. I believe Mike shares this competitive spirit. Something that is needed to compete at a world class level in a sport such as boxing.

I agree completely. Patterson won that fight and the judges handed it to Ellis. Ellis was at the top of the heap at the time and Patterson was well on his way out. I think that politics and future earning potential for all related to the fight game, were behind that decision. A lot of us tend to view Floyd as "The Rabbit"; a guy who lacked heart and courage. But he was actually a highly skilled fighter and a great champion, during his reign.

Ali may or may not have had a genetic tendency towards Parkinson's. As many times as he was hit over such a long period of time, he'd have had brain damage if ordinary men had been doing the punching, let alone the people who were. A lot of times, visible signs of brain damage show up many years after the injuries have occurred, and the fighters have retired. In truth, there's a microscopic amount of damage even from trivial household head bumping...
Everyone who boxes has injuries to the brain. Degree, how they present themselves, and how visible they are do vary though. The average fighter's career isn't that long, and symptoms start appearing about ten years after retirement. In most cases, that means they're mid-30s/crowing 40. Ali was still fighting then. That would make it more tempting to assign his condition to one particular fight, rather than to a whole career. I do think the heavy hitters of career two were mostly responsible, though all the fights against lesser opponents that went the distance contributed some too. I wonder how he feels about his choices?

Patterson ducked too many top contenders to be called a "great champion". Cleveland Williams would have run him out of the ring in three rounds and Cus Damato knew it and guided him accordingly. But Floyd was always a gentleman and a very gracious winner and looser. His title defense against Pete Rademacher who never had a pro fight was inexcusable even by today's circus standards.

I have read that Patterson fought very well in the rematch with Ali and that he was winning on points! Patterson was 37 years old and Ali only 30 years old at the time of the fight. Do you think that that was just a bad night for Ali? Ali defined Patterson the most skillful fighter he ever fought! He beat Johansson twice, Machen, Chuvalo and Bonavena and drew with Quarry... Not bad! Patterson was not a bad fighter by any means. He had very fast hands and a good left hook. I honestly believe had he fought as a light heavy he would have perhaps the greatest light heavy ever. Regarding the second Ali fight: I don't remember it being that close.

I agree with you utterly and entirely with both posts about Patterson. About 20 years ago I bumped into Patterson at some club fights and we had a little chat. I mentioned to him that he could have been the greatest light heavyweight champ ever. Floyd replied, "I rather be the heavyweight champion for one day, than the light heavyweight champion for 10 years." Floyd, certainly had a long and distinguished record. But John, your right! What Patterson and D'Amato did with the championship by ducking worthwhile challengers was a disgrace.

I haven't seen the second Ali/Patterson fight in years but while I don't remember it being as close as Patterson being ahead at the time Ali stopped him, Patterson did do better than in their first match. In the first Ali/Patterson fight, while it appeared embarrassing for Patterson to have to endure such a one sided beating, it is Patterson's corner and the referee who should be embarrassed for allowing the beating to go on for so long, 12 rounds. They should have stopped it a long time before they did. Patterson has nothing to be ashamed of as he showed a lot of heart in the fight and no one can question Patterson's courage. Patterson was a great fighter.

I agree that Patterson's reign was not one of the best because he avoided fighter such as Machen, Polley, C. Williams, and Liston (for a long time), but it wasn't his fault, it was Cus, his manager's decision, who by the way was not in the corner the night Ali fought Patterson the first time.

I WOULD SAY THAT JERRY HAD A LOT OF ONE TOO MANY FIGHTS FRAZIER 2, NORTON, AND THAT BUM RON CRAMER THAT HE Fought AT AGE 47!! I MUST SAY THOUGH IT WAS THE NORTON FIGHT THAT CAUSED THE MOST DAMAGE OF ANY FIGHT, I THINK JERRY TOOK ONE OF THE WORST BEATING EVER IN THAT FIGHT, IT SHOULD HAVE BEEN STOP AT THE END OF THE 3RD, I LOVED IT WHEN GERRY COONEY BEAT NORTON WITHIN A INCH OF HIS LIFE, HE WAS A SELFLOVING COCKY JERK, HE HAD IT COMING AND I LOVED IT!!! to the trash... I agree that Patterson wouldn't be heavyweight champion today, while a prime Liston yes. In his prime Sonny Liston was a top 5 heavyweight ever. The best left jab ever, powerful left hook, powerful right hook, iron chinned, very long reach, fearless... What a champion !

I wished Jerry'd retired at 33-3-4 and gone into engineering at UCLA or got into acting fulltime in 1969, he'd had plans to retire then, or maybe after his big payday with Ali in 70' where he netted only 85 grand. It shocks me that macho comacho, can take home more moolah (6 million$) in one fight then JERRY could his whole career. As a fan I was selfish to where I really wanted Jerry's 73' comeback to be big (and it was). But ultimately may have did more harm than good, for Jerry obviously physically, Everywhere the man went when he commented with Brookshier for CBS, people hounded him for a comeback, he looked like a stocky undestructable tank in a tux. the men whom were responsible for Jerry's fateful comeback in 1992, should be playing on Jose Conseco's softball team in prison!!!!

Jerry should have retired after Frazier 2. The Norton fight should have been stopped after the fourth round or during the fourth round, certainly Jerry should have not been allowed off of his stool to fight in round number five after the frightful beating he took in round four. Jerry was still winging punches in round five, even if they didn't have much force on them by that point but Jerry was still fighting his heart out and he went out of the fight a true warrior in every sense of the word. Jerry was even trying to push the referee away to get back at Norton, what a heart! The fight should not have been stopped after the third round though when Jerry and Norton went toe to toe for the whole round, with Jerry holding his own throughout. What a round, one of the best I have ever seen.

It was after this fight that Norton said all of his bad feelings towards Jerry went away. It would seem Norton couldn't help but respect someone with as much guts as Jerry had.

Koo Koo - thanks for your opinion. RS - head injuries can be a bit bizzare. I played a lot of rugby league football in my youth and I was knocked unconscious a number of times without any apparent ill effects. The weirdest time, though, was when I wasn't knocked out. I remember absolutely nothing about the second half of a game, even though I played the whole second half as usual without any sign of injury. The next I recall is talking to someone in the dressing shed afterwards. There was no headaches, nothing. And I recalled the first half of the game clearly. There's something I've noticed about people suffering dementia, Parkinson's, Alzheimer's, and those types of conditions. An in-law has Alzheimer's and so does the father of a close friend. Both have full heads of hair with a low hair line on the forehead..... just like Ali and President Reagan. Noticing this makes me wonder whether I've had too many hits to the head. Cheers.

MASSIMO: Liston was the prototype of today's large heavyweights, while Patterson represented the era smaller heavies of the 1950's such as Marciano, Charles, etc. When the two eras collided, Floyd wound up on the canvas. To some degree, a similar thing happened to Tyson when he fought Lewis.

RS - head injuries can be a bit bizzare. Lots of injuries can be strange. A guy plays in the NFL, never has a knee injury, then tears one up stepping off the bottom rung of a ladder wrong. I was knocked unconscious a number of times without any apparent ill effects. You can have a concussion and not be knocked out, but when you are, you always have one (and of course, there are different degrees of severity). It's a mystery why some people are relatively unaffected after many head traumas, and why someone else will actually die from an injury that's actually pretty mild compared to boxing or some hits in football. I knew a boy when I was in school who fell out of a tree, was unconscious for five minutes, and afterwards, his personality was completely different forever. His parents privately said that it was as if he'd been possessed. The next I recall is talking to someone in the dressing shed afterwards. There was no headaches, nothing. And I recalled the first half of the game clearly. That's really unusual - no dizziness, headache, nausea, memory loss, but it happens once in a while. It would be interesting to completely understand what's going on in there and why, and reasons for differences (which medicine doesn't). Both have full heads of hair with a low hair line on the forehead....just like Ali and President Reagan. Noticing this makes me wonder whether I've had too many hits to the head.

Cheers.

They're finding out more and more all along, but right now, it's still like a partly completed jigsaw puzzle. Taking that metaphor a step further, I imagine when the final answer to Alzheimer's and the other forms of dementia are finally understood, the final picture will be different than many would predict it would be at different points along the way to completion of the puzzle.

Hey Jimmy Dorsey, I agree with you, it makes me sick that Jerry made so little money in some of his biggest fights. Guys like Hector Comacho made 6 million bucks per fight because of several factors. Did he really make 6 million per fight? He was an arrogant, loud, and flamboyant fighter who got peoples attention, especially the networks. His ethnic origins, he became a hero to many Mexican people. He also could fight a little bit. He strung together a pretty impressive record before he actually fought anybody dangerous. Jerry, on the other hand, was put in with Machen way to early in his career. Especially given Machen's difficult, elusive, seasoned style. That lose hurt his career badly, in terms of financial marketability. The loss to Frazier, big mistake. There where plenty of fighters he could have developed on, while building his experience and public interest. The fight against Norton, was the biggest management mistake in his career! He gets a call while he's drunk on vacation, and agrees to a fight with Ken Norton, on two weeks notice. Norton's status, should never have had to take a fight on two weeks notice! Especially coming of a beating from Joe Frazier earlier that year. I really think that this is where the final, irreparable damage was done to that poor brave warrior.

Hey Evan B., my entire family comes from County Wexford. My mother was born there. I still have over 50 living relatives there. I hope your last name isn't Broder or Broaderick. I hope none of your mothers relatives were Doyles. If it turned out we were cousins, I'd have to shoot myself! Your right about the Irish being one of the truly blessed ethnic groups. We are literate, poetic, sensitive, (except for you), and incurably romantic. We also like the occasional wake, or wedding, where we at least have an excuse to drink whiskey and fight. On a personal note, since you asked the question, "where have I scuffled?" I did two tours in Vietnam with the 1st. Air Cav. I then spent 25 years in bar fights all over South Jersey. I've never laced on a pair of gloves in my life. Now are we done posturing?

Hey R.S., you still haven't responded to my questions about your assertions that there is clinical evidence proving, or even suggesting that N.Y. Mohawk American Indians have a different inner ear structure or a different hip bone structure that makes them superior to whites and black ironworkers in walking the high iron.
I realize it's easy to get carried away on an anynomous web site. Sooner or later, however, you might trip over someone else's area of expertise. With iron work, you tripped over mine!

Saying that some Indians have certain genetic advantages re high stell work isn't exactly my idea of a red hot topic to fake though, if I were prone to such things! :-) I really did read about this once. I'll get cookin' and see if I can find something on it.

I still have over 50 living relatives there. I hope your last name isn't Broder or Broaderick. I hope none of your mothers relatives where Doyles. If it turned out we where cousins, I'd have to shoot myself! Your right about the Irish being one of the truly blessed ethnic groups. We are literate, poetic, sensitive, (except for you), and incurably romantic. We also like the occasional wake, or wedding, where we at least have an excuse to drink whiskey and fight. On a personal note, since you asked the question, "Where have I scuffled? I did two tours in Vietnam with the 1st. Air Cav. I then spent 25 years in bar fights all over south jersey. I've never laced on a pair of gloves in my life. Now are we done posturing?" I'll bet you've got 6 or 7 lamebrained mick dipshit drunks like you. Vietnam was 28 years ago, you damned fool, and you're still taking brownie points off of that. I was there, too, in '67 and '68, and you're a disgrace to the good men there who never made it back.

Friends, when you read someone like Steve, just remember he's a sore-ass potatohead who couldn't tie his own shoes if his suffering wife didn't do it for him, and then he beats her up to prove how tough he is. I'll bet you've got 6 or 7 lamebrained mick sons, too, who like to pick fights. Contact me and tell me where and when. Bring your sons and all your prick harp friends, too, bitch. Everyone, it's been fun, and I bid you adieu.

Hey Kent, hey anyone! I was just kidding on my last post to Evan B. I swear it, I was just kidding! I honestly thought he would respond with some good family information. Hey, if my style of posting is that abrasive, someone please tell me about it!! The last thing I wanted to do is get Evan so damn mad he stops posting here! It's alot more fun to argue with him. I honestly didn't mean anything personal. Hey Kent, help me soothe Evan's feelings?! I love it, I love it, this is a lot like jerry quarry's life, things could be going along fine and then all hell breaks loose because somebody gets called a name, hey I never understood that mick thing, it really doesn't sound that bad compared to what they call some other races, lets have a race war on here, it'd be fun, I'll start.

I love it, this is a lot like jerry quarry's life, things could be going along fine and then all hell breaks loose because somebody gets called a name, hey I never understood that mick thing, it really doesn't sound that bad compared to what they call some other races, lets have a race war on here, it'd be fun, I'll start.

You'd never make it in America, stay where you are. Open a restaurant.
YOU CAN EAT FREE THAT WAY, I LOVE ITJ

I don't think Evan B is serious, Steve. He is just testing to see what sort of reaction he gets. But poor Massimo. Everytime someone gets testy, Koo Koo gives it to him. I find Evan's posts entertaining and I hope he stays. You keep posting too Steve. Ever been to Washington Square and the Silver Bullet Bar in Bangkok ?

I've just started reading a book on Joe Louis and it relates how his first professional trainer - a nasty little man named Jack Blackburn - doubted that the white establishment would give him the opportunity to win the title because of the legacy left by Jack Johnson. It says that Louis and his managers "carefully constructed a well-behaved" public image, by modestly downplaying his victories, complimenting his white opponents, marrying a "nice, black girl", etc. Even then, Louis was warned that he must make "his right fist the referee" if he wanted to win the title. It's shaping up to be a good book. Anyway, you've been on this site long enough to know that Koo Koo is only joking, haven't you ?

I'm not angry with KooKoo at all. I consider him a friend and I hope he consider me the same way ! I consider everyone on here a friend ! I'm on here to spend (a good time, relax, laugh, talk about boxing and life in general and improve my English. RS gave me some free English lessons on here. No other expensive English teacher in Italy would have taught me things like ain't and yo, simply because they are not known in Rome.
We Italians are all dumb, I'm smart to be ( or to being, or for being, or something else ) an Italian ! We have never had a painter, a sculptor, a poet, a novel writer or a scientist...
All we can do is pizza, spaghetti and mafia.
We all need you, you're cool ! Don't go away. We have verbal brawls in this site every day ! Ti ci devi abituare ! " Accustom " is the English traslation of "abituare", isn't it Evan ? I don't have a dictionary to control in this moment. You have to accustom yourself to these verbal brawls if you want to survive on this site !

I knew that Louis used to follow a long list of rules. He was a great champion, his combinations were the best in boxing history, even if I feel that his first fight against Conn ruined a little his imagine.

What does it mean ITJ ? Italian and something ? I challenge all the Italian English teachers to teach me that, for God's sake !

I don't know offhand what "ITJ" means. Thinking along the lines of IMO for "in my opinion," I started thinking "in the," but the J stumped me. I'll let you know if I discover the answer.
I don't speak Italian is like Spanish - a lot of the words have enough similarity to English (some English words have Latin roots) that you can figure them out.
One of my husband's buddies is Italian, and they argue about everything. This guy will laugh and say "one of the boys might be coming around to see you," and my husband replies that if that ever happens, he (buddy) knows what we Irish like to do to cars! :-)
Is it true that JQ and George Foreman once sparred in the gym? Does anyone know the details: where, when, etc?|
AT THE TIME.

Maybe the best way to discover what ITJ means is asking to KooKoo. Yes, Italian is pretty similar to Spanish, if I read a Spanish book I understand about 80%. But they have some words that are very different from ours. For instance, the Spanish version of "brother" is "hermano", while the Italian version is "fratello". The French written is very similar to Italian too. I have overcomen a French exam at University (it was about translating a French article) and I have never studied French in my life. I really want and don't understand why these 3 languages are so similar! I know that Giulio Cesare conquered Spain and France (Gallia at the time) but it was over 2000 years ago and that was Latin. Maybe Kent might help me on this subject. The major problem is when these language are spoken because that 80% becomes 30%. About English I understand without using dictionaries 90% of what is written on here, but if I listen to an English movie I understand about 40% and after an hour I'm damned tired!

---

PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Massimo -
One reason so many Hollywood movies have such a high ratio of action to dialogue, with much of the action self explanatory, is for marketability to the worldwide non-English speaking, or English-not-as-a-first-language countries. This approach makes them much less costly to dub later. The dubbed voice is almost never the actual star, obviously, since many Hollywood stars have enough trouble with English. One of your countrymen directors, Martin Scorsese said once that he was appalled at the simple words he had to pronounce and define for many top stars.I never knew Bugner sparred with Liston. I'll bet that redefined passivity, though Bugner wasn't that bad against the relentless Frazier. Maybe JB did fool everyone - a millionaire with no injuries.

---

PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Massimo -
What do the letters ITJ stand for? In the context of the tirade you were posting at the time, did ITJ mean 'imagine the joy'? It could also mean 'in the joint', but I don't think you meant 'information technology junkie'. You have to tell us. And I'm sure Sonia would love to play pool with you. Who wouldn't. Why did the turtle cross the road? To get to the shell service station. |
I am a former bar band singer and maybe a present and future one as well. It is a tribute to the sixties band. You've Lost that Loving Feeling or something like that. I can carry a tune well but people are usually surprised I am any good at all because I don't look like a singer. I look more like a "roadie" even though I know nothing about electronics and I am not too thrilled about lugging equipment around, etc.

If I was married, which I am not, if anyone else could take my wife from me, than she wouldn't be worth having.

I sure wish I would have had the chance to sing a duet with Jerry. I am sure he and I could have done a good job on something like the Righteous Brothers "You've Lost that Loving Feelig" or something like that. I look it's great you don't work, I HATE THE CORPORATE WORLD AND ALL THE UP ASSHOLE.. YOU MEET IN IT, LITTLE COLLEGE BOYS 25YRS OLD THINK THEY KNOW EVERYTHING, AT LEAST YOU DON'T HAVE TO KISS THE ASS OF SOME BRIEFCASE CARRYING, STUFFED SHIRT, THAT THINKS HE BETTER THAN YOU!! MORE EDUCATION IN A LOT CASES MEANS MORE EGOS, THIS IS THE WISDOM OF THE KOO KOO CLOCK

I'm not a very good Pool player, the person that was a great Pool player was Dad (Mr. Jimmy), my Father in Law, is pretty good too. I play it when I do for the fun of it. Anyways, yeah I'd play you for the fun of it. Kent, played with Uncle Mike, at Aunt Wilma's house the day of Dad's funeral. Hey all keep checkin out the website, and posting, but we gotta be good.

Koo Koo - with you talking about your library, are we to take it that writing your memoirs is in the offing? Include some of our favourites that you've posted here, and you could call it the 'Best of Koo Koo'. And I wouldn't give up on a singing career just yet. 'Kent & Koo Koo' sounds a bit like 'Simon & Garfunkle'. Reword the lyrics of 'Fifty Ways To Leave Your Lover' with some of your attitude and philosophy and it would be a smash hit (with the emphasis on 'smash'). Just a thought.

I just get P.O. when I think about corporate people, they sit behind their desks and make decisions about other people's lives, they want you to beg for a job, I say to everybody stop kissing ass and start kicking ass, getting back to some of my books, HOW TO MEET FAMOUS PEOPLE, THE SON OF SAM WAS MY FAVORITE. I THOUGHT HE WAS COOL AS HELL, HE DIDN'T BOTHER ME, I DIDN'T HAVE A GIRLFRIEND, I DIDN'T HAVE TO WEAR A BLONDE EITHER :))))))

I MEANT BLONDE WIG

Yes, musicians can be a strange bunch and while I am not a big fan of karaoke, at least the machine doesn't argue or have opinions, and I had a problem with some musicians in the past. Even so, karaoke is a substitute for the real thing, live music, and karaoke is nothing more than a practice tool and it is never magical, like a good band is when they are playing very well and I am singing at my best. The machine lacks the soul of the players, something the karaoke enthusiast who has never sang, other than karaoke, will never understand.
music.

KENT, I’M SURE THAT PEOPLE BOthered THE HELL OUT OF JERRY TALKING ABOUT MUHAMMAD ALI AND JOE FRAZIER, I HEARD HE PLayed GUITAR ALSO, THIS IS THE THING MOST PEOPLE MISS WHEN THEY LOOK AT JERRY QUARRY, THIS MAN COULD HAVE BEEN ANYTHING, HE HAD A GREAT MIND, YOU COULD TELL BY LISTENING TO HIM THIS WAS NO AVERAGE MAN, WE’VE ALL HEARD THAT ALI STORY, LETS GET JERRY’S STORY OUT SOMEHOW, THE MOVIES ABOUT ALI WOULD BE NOTHING COMPARED TO THE ROLLACOASTER LIFE OF JERRY QUARRY.

One of the saddest things about Jerry losing his cognitive ability was the fact that he had so much to offer---the music and also his commentary during boxing broadcasts. He was an intelligent, articulate guy who had "insiders" viewpoints of boxing. I think that had he retired earlier (much) and stayed retired, he would have become an elder boxing stateman and stayed in the public eye. I would LOVE to hear Jerry's take on today's heavyweights---even guys from the 80's to the present.

When Joe Frazier said once, "I wish I was smarter, had a degree," I hope someone explained the difference between intelligence and education. I think many people with multiple degrees would trade them for the richness of Joe's life. I think with any fighter, even those showing not a lot of multiple dimensions in their personalities, the person themselves would be more interesting to explore than just their careers as fighters. Wasn't Jerry also able to do the NY Times crossword? I do crosswords every day, and this is no small feat. After the second day at Gettysburg, Robert E. Lee was enthusing to his top general, James Longstreet about the day to come (fateful, as it turned out), saying "...as close as it was today." Longstreet answered, "It wasn't that close, sir," and Lee became angry. I didn't know Jerry Quarry, and even those who were close to him may not have known all of his secret feelings about his fights. Perhaps he saw the really important ones against the real t-rexes (Ali, Frazier, Norton, and Foreman, even though he didn't fight him) as being far different than the results. Who knows? I don't. Just wondering.

everybody can't be a genius, if joe frazier had not been a fighter i don't think he would have done too good, but i could be wrong as a man with that kind of determination might make something happen one way or another, i think that as of the last 7 or 8 yrs frazier's health has not been very good, i've seen pictures of him he looks very frail, he is diabetic.

There is often a difference between intelligence and education. Lots of academics might have high IQs, but many don't have any common sense. These people focus all their attention on one subject to the exclusion of everything else. While they become an expert in that particular subject, they often know nothing about anything else. Many academics have poor motor skills as well. They are boring one dimensional people. HOWEVER, Massimo is the obvious exception. I don't believe in IQ, I'm not going to explain why I don't believe in them because I don't want to offend anybody. I truly believe that intelligence is essentially a genetic matter! No baby can decide to become Mozart or Fermi or Leopardi. At six years old of age Mozart already was a much better musician than Arturo Toscanini at 50 or Von Karajan at 50 because he had a gift that almost nobody has: THE CREATIVITY. A lot of people can learn how to play an instrument decently but only A FEW HAVE THE CREATIVITY GIFT. This is true in music, physics, in everything. I know physicists that, with hard work, have learnt how to use very very difficult Mathematics but they have never had an original idea! There are other physicists that have a smaller culture, but have the gift. Einstein used to say: "Imagination is more important than knowledge". But this doesn't change that the study helps and improves anyone's brain. I realize that now, after years of study, I understand 10 times better Physics that 8 years ago. Not just in the sense that I have more knowledge but in the sense that now I'm smarter. The study helps you to reach the best of your mental native capacitives. If I had never opened a book I'd be surely still dumber than I am.

In the George Foreman site (www.georgeforeman.com) it's possible to write a letter to George Foreman. I haven't understood yet in detail how this can be done and anyway my post has always problems but it's possible. It'd be interesting to ask George about his relationship with Jerry or about other things of his career!

IQ is the best thing we've been able to come up with to measure intelligence, though the tests are do have their flaws. And you're right - no one gets up one day, quits their job and instead becomes Beethoven, Michaelangelo, Edison, or Jack Dempsey. Probably most people test lower than they really are for many reasons - difficulty taking tests, lack of education (they ~do~ have cultural and educational bias), learning disabilities, etc. and certainly all smart people don't function well in all ways, but one thing is true - no one who's truly dumb tests high. George Foreman seems to be going through a humble phase. I can't imagine him really ducking Jerry, having not ducked Frazier or Ali, Chuvalo, Lyle, Norton, or anyone else. I also can't imagine a Quarry fight not being a money maker. Maybe not Thrilla or Rumble in the Jungle, but a big gate nevertheless. In his list of top ten champs, he doesn't include himself, which is silly, further evidence of humble pie, for whatever reason.

In 1968 if George was only 20 when he sparred Jerry, Jerry was only 23, and only 19 or 20 when he fought Patterson the first time. Right or wrong?

Charles you're a nice guy, but you are wrong, Jerry was 22 yrs old when he fought Patterson, next question.

If you look at Foreman's record, he really only took the title from Joe Frazier. He defended his title 3 times (beat Norton and some other no namers) took on Ali and the rest was history. Likewise, Joe Frazier defended his title against Foster, Ali, Stander and Daniels. His final defense was against George Foreman. Foreman may very well have been avoiding Jerry. I think Frazier's better fights were up to and including the championship. He fought guys like Machen, Jones, Chuvalo, Bonavena. I think he became the well known champion that he was because of the Ali/Frazier trilogy, but certainly not because of how he performed as champion. George became a household word because of his destruction of Joe Frazier and his lean, mean grilling machine.

Foreman destroyed Chuvalo in 3 one-sided rounds in 1970, while JQ lost against the Canadian. Foreman beat Peralta twice also. However I think JQ would have had a serious chance against Foreman even if I think George would have been favorite (about 3-1). JQ beat clearly Ron Lyle who was almost as powerful and as big as Big George and not a worst boxer.KooKoo-Why did JQ fight Cramer in 1992? Did he need money?|12/12/03 04:58:39 PM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|PETE, PETE,WHAT I’M GONNA DO WITH YOU, YOU MEAN TO TELL ME YOU BELIEVE EVERYTHING FOREMAN SAYS, I’M JERRY'S BIGGEST FAN BUT I’M TELLING YOU ALMOST EVERYTHING THAT COMES OUT OF FOREMANS MOUTH SHOULD BE TAKEN W/ A GRAIN OF SALT, YOU WANT ME TO BELIEVE THAT HE WAS AFRAID OF JERRY, I WOULD LIKE TO BELIEVE IT BUT I DON'T, WE NOW KNOW THAT FOREMAN IS OUT OF JERRY'S WEIGHT CLASS, BACK THEN A GUY 180 COULD FIGHT A GUY >250, WHAT DO YOU THINK THE RESULT IS MOST OF THE TIME?? YOU DON’T HAVE THE MENTAL BOXING WATTAGE TO KNOW WHAT YOUR TALKING ABOUT, AS GREAT OF A GUY THAT FOREMAN IS I MUST SAY AT TIMES HE IS A LIEING FRAUD!!! KOO KOO||12/12/03 05:17:14 PM|charles anderson|ark.|ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|my bad koo koo. ithought they fought in 65||12/12/03 05:35:57 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentalleent@aol.com|||10|Styles make fights and Jerry's style was similar to Gregorio Peralta's style, who gave Foreman two very tough fights. Foreman was not fully developed as a fighter yet and Peralta was vastly more experienced. Peralta probably wouldn't have been as tough a fight for an in prime Foreman however, Jerry was a harder puncher than Peralta and stonger. He would have had a chance against an in prime Foreman but I would still favor George in this one.|12/12/03 05:42:45 PM|KOOKOO|ny||kookooclcock000@yahoo.com|||10|I'D SAY THAT'S ABOUT RIGHT, JERRY PROVED IN THE LYLE FIGHT HE'D HAVE A CHANCE AGAINST FOREMAN, YOU JUST NEVER KNOW IF HE COULD BE IN AND OUT ON HIM LIKE THE LYLE FIGHT HE STOOD A GOOD CHANCE,JIMMY YOUNG & ALI PROVE IF YOU CAN TAKE FOREMAN PAST 5 RDS YOU GOT HIM.||12/12/03 06:23:33 PM|Massimo|Rome||4|||10|Kent-That guys were pieces of shit. This is my personal opinion !RS--I need you! What's "conned" ? I did look for the verb "to conn" in my dictionary but I couldn't find it !You speak too difficult sometimes, my friend !Remember that I was born in Pisa not in Los Angeles ! Have mercy !Is "conned" something about Billy Conn ?|12/12/03 06:26:15 PM|Massimo|Rome||4|||10|Kent--Remember that I was born in Pisa not in Los Angeles ! Have mercy !Is "conned" something about Billy Conn ?|12/12/03 07:08:12 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Massimo: "Conned" is almost like being tricked or swindled.These guys basically used Jerry by misleading him into thinking that by taking the fight, it would lead to big, money-making future endeavors. It's a classic case of leeches feeding off someone else's reputation to make a buck---taking advantage of a good guy. Most of the fans on this site would love a few minutes alone with these idiots to give them an idea of what getting hit the head feels like. |
('s..t') is not polite. |
|12/12/03 07:39:28 PM|charles anderson|ark.||ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|i thought i was jerry's biggest fan! regarding big george and jerry, depends on which jerry comes to fight(foster,shavers,lyle)or the one that left his fight in the gym.|
|12/12/03 07:50:41 PM|KOOKOO|NY||KOOKOOCLOCK0008@YAHOO.COM|||10|CHARLES, YOU ARE WHAT I CALL A MIDDLE OF THE ROAD FAN OF JERRYS, I KNOW YOU COME HERE ONCE IN A WHILE, YOU DON'T CAUSE ANY TROUBLE, BUT YOU DON'T SEEM TO ADD THAT MUCH TO DISCUSSIONS ON HERE, WHY I NEVER SEEN YOU FIGHT WITH ANYBODY ON HERE , WHERES THE QUARRY IN YOU??|
|12/12/03 07:55:22 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|Massimo - Being conned almost always involves deception or shadowy truth, and even in cases where it may not, it will still include great amounts of manipulation to get someone to do something they probably wouldn't do if such coercion were absent. In his prime, Quarry with the flu could have taken a palooka like Cramner. His emotions may have taken him for the joy ride we've all been on with them, or if he thought logically, he may have thought he could do it with his mind, his experience and knowledge. Unfortunately, by that time, he had mostly turned into an ordinary man again, and his body could no longer cash checks his mind wrote.Is boxing a business or an emotional sport? Both, though the young men involved play on both sides of the fence. The big 3-1/2 (Norton being the 1/2) in the 70s felt the same fire from each other that the contenders did from them. Styles, emotion, business, all swirls of paper in a high, violent wind where anything could happen. Remember the scene at the end of the football movie, "North Dallas Forty," when the frustrated John Matuszak is having the tantrum in the locker room? To the coach: "Everytime I call it a sport, you say it's a business, and everytime I call it a business, you say it's a sport!" In his other choice words, he pretty much sums up the creatures who run all sports. What to do?|
|12/12/03 08:20:17 PM|Gerry Schultz|Cleveland,Ohio||jgschultz11@msn.com|||10|Some good comments about some classic topics here. Yes, George has been very respectful of Jerry historically but I would not call that fear. Fighting Quarry would be a risk for Foreman, though he would likely win. I've always said Jerry would have had a good chance versus Big George, Foreman himself supports this. I think Frazier may have been referring to the toughness of his life and the advantages he thinks he might have had with a better education. I hear he is going through real estate litigation now as some people have assumed Joe's ignorance and, allegedly, are trying to swindle him in a development deal. Some good comments comparing Joe's record versus George's, again, I've always had Frazier ahead of Foreman. He beat better guys and was a better champ, even though George totally had his number. Also, I give George credit for not including himself in the all-time Top Ten, he definitely isn't. George may overrate Lewis, among his many loopy comments, but Lewis is definitely Top 20 material. Massimo is correct about IQ tests in that they cannot measure creativity, Thomas Edison was considered very impaired in his youth, then became the great inventor we know him for, by virtue of his creativity. Still, IQ tests provide a good sample of knowledge in academic subjects or in conceptual intelligence, which is a valid way to determine someone's intelligence in a general sense, in my opinion.|
|12/12/03 08:27:30 PM|Gerry Schultz|Ohio||jgschultz11@msn.com|||10|Also, I heard Joe Mesi edged Monte Barrett recently, did anyone see this? Another fight in Joe's Buffalo backyard, probably. The Klitschkos also have matches coming up I think. Where's the division going, opinions? I haven't heard anything new on Lewis or Tyson lately.|
taught me at school!

Gerry, I saw the Mesi verses Barrett fight and I called it a draw with Mesi winning the first half and Barrett winning the second half. Both scored knockdowns. The judges gave Mesi the win by a slight margin by majority decision. One judge scored it for Mesi, one had it for Barrett, and the third judge called it a draw.

Mesi has a long way to go before he should try for the title.

Yesterday, I have seen on ESPN Classic the two knockdowns of the first Frazier-Bonavena fight. That was probably a great fight to watch... Have you ever seen the whole fight? Did Joe deserve the decision?

Massimo, why are you still posting? Your input is most welcome here.

Great
line in an otherwise terrible movie (The Great White Hype). A rock band member who beat the heavyweight champ when they were amateurs is brought back for a title shot. When he's introduced on the comeback trail, it's as "Irish Mike Conklin." The fighter whispers to his manager that he's not Irish. The manager replies, "Never mind - it just means you're white!" LOL!

[12/13/03 07:24:46 PM]Charles Anderson|Ark.|ctjjandfam@aol.com||10|Koo Koo, I thought we were all all the same side. Sorry I sounded too serious. I guess I found your glass jaw(ha) I wonder what ever became of crammer? Koo Koo, since you are the ultimate quarry historian, I will let you expound. Merry Christmas!

[12/13/03 08:01:17 PM]Massimo|Rome||4||10|RS=I think you have a little exaggerated with the "s" in my name, but it doesn't matter !Bonavena hit Frazier with a powerful right right (sorry) on the jaw. Soon after you can see Joe hopping trying to clear his head. About 10 seconds after the first knockdown Oscar hit Frazier with left hand ( not a great shot) and Joe went down again. In his auto. Joe says that he was hurt badly after the first knockdown, and this is true, and adds a little lie... he says that the second knockdown was a push. This is not totally true, it wasn't a great punch, but was a punch !

[12/13/03 09:07:36 PM]Kookooclock000@yahoo.com||10|Ron Cramer went on to fight 2 more yrs. Total of 12 fights lost 8 of them. Beat a Jerry Quarry that was already having mental problems, there's no way Jerry should have been anywhere even close to a ring, he was in all a round bad shape, Jerry would have knocked this guy out in less than a round in his heyday, Ron Cramer ain't sh...!

[12/14/03 12:18:30 AM]Kent|La Habra, Ca|Kentallenent@aol.com||10|No Koo Koo I am not taking anyone's side I just do not want to see anyone leave this site, even you, surprised?Besides, Charles can defend himself.

[12/14/03 05:26:13 AM]Massimo|Rome||4||10|RS=KooKoo said in his last post " Cramner ain't shit " !. Remembering your lesson this should mean "Cramner is not shit " ! I'm surprised and confused ! Is KooKoo a Cramner's fan ? I doubt ... I fear that I haven't understood ain't very well yet ...

[12/14/03 06:14:06 AM]Paul|Sydney, Australia||PIMls4@aol.com||10|Massimo - when Koo Koo said that, he meant that Cramer was worse than sh... In other words, sh... was better than him. It is confusing. Did you also get confused when Koo Koo described someone as being "cool as hell" ?

[12/14/03 08:24:15 AM]Paul|Sydney, Australia||PIMls4@aol.com||10|Yeah, it's confusing ! How the hell can the hellbe cool ? Maybe in an abstract sense ! What I have to say, Paul, English is a deep mystery...

[12/14/03 08:24:37 AM]Massimo|Rome||4||10|PaulYeah, it's confusing ! How the hell can the hellbe cool ? Maybe in an abstract sense ! What I have to say, Paul, English is a deep mystery...

[12/14/03 08:36:14 AM]Massimo|Rome||4||10|Now that Saddam Hussein is captured I doubt that he'll be the next President of the United States ...

[12/14/03 11:04:40 AM]Massimo|Rome||4||10|MISSIMO, I MUST SAY THAT I AM GETTING TIRED OF ALL THE PEOPLE ON HERE GIVING YOU A LESSON IN ENGLISH, YOU ARE WASTING OUR TIME, I MUST ASK THAT YOU LEAVE, IT IS THE KOO KOO CLOCK HAS TO POLICE THIS SITE, NOBODY ELSE WILL TELL YOU TO LEAVE, I FOR ONE WOULD NOT MIND IF YOU DID, DO YOU AGREE KENT??

[12/14/03 11:17:55 AM]Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||10|Massimo -Wow, that was some surprise to get up today and find out that So Damn Insane had been captured! One more to go.Slang terms involving obscenities have evolved to the point that they often convey a meaning that's different than the literal one you see ("cool as hell," for example), although saying "Cramner aint shit'' could possibly mean he isn't as good as ~even~ shit ~ shit's better IOW. Damning something isn't really, since use of "damn'' usually means the person isn't ~that~ angry. "Screw you'' in both its forms, and other sexual suggestions are a perfect example of non-literalness. Use of harsh expletives convey strong feelings, not a proposal to do actual events (some of which don't even make sense, such as "screw you"). Usually an obscenity is used to amplify feeling, not meaning.There was some protest when Frazier fought Cummings in Chicago, though he was only 38, not as old as Jerry when he fought last. I don't think opponents can be blamed for beating up a washed up fighter. If they take the fight, they can't afford to go easy. Joe Frazier at almost 60 is more dangerous than most 20 year old ordinary guys, and look at George Foreman when he was 45!

Do you use your ass in the right way ( to shit )? I tried to be your friend, but I can't change your brain... I'm sorry, but you are an idiot and you'll be an idiot for the rest of your ( I hope happy ) life !

The question is: would an inferior fighter going against an over the hill once top boxer be an even match? Would they have bragging rights, via a handicap system?" (QUOTE)

In a word "NO". These guys like Berbick, Spinks (both of them), Lewis etc., by defeating Champions who were great, but way past their prime, are not fooling anyone. The problem with boxing is that most fighters don't know when to quit and when they do, it's usually too late. They are either permanently injured or disgrace themselves at the hands of a lesser opponent. Most fighters only have a handful of good competitive fights in them... after that, it's time to retire.

I don't mean ~fooling~ anyone into thinking they were great. Obviously, they weren't. But wouldn't it even the field - palooka against over the hill? Like when Bobby Riggs used to play tennis against women, carrying a bucket of water, or with folding chairs set up on his side of the court.

These guys probably never become completely ordinary in real life though, ala Jack Dempsey when he was an old man, knocking out one of two punks who tried to mug him and his wife, not knowing who Jack was. Love it! :-)

The great comic Toto' used to say "every limit has a patiente !!!!!!!! ".

Pazienza speaking easily!

12/14/03 08:59:18 PM| kookoo| ny|| kookooclock000@yahoo.com | ||| 10| MASSIMO, THATS THE FIRST TIME YOU SHOWED ANY GUTS, YOU KNOW WHAT THAT IS DON'T YOU? EVERYTHING HAS TO BE EXPLAINED TO YOU LIKE A LITTLE KID, GOD BLESS AMERICA LETS CONTINUE TO CLEAN UP OUR ENEMYS HER AND ABROAD, I WANT ALL TO PICK SIDES HERE EITHER YOUR FOR THE KOOKOO CLOCK OR THAT BALDHEADED WACKO MASSIMO, NO. 1 QuARRY FAN BARRE NONE!!!!!

12/14/03 09:22:30 PM| Paul| Sydney, Australia|| PMLs4@aol.com | ||| 10 | Koo Koo - Massimo's written English is probably better than yours. Maybe you'd be better if you posted in Italian. I like reading both your posts. When Massimo mangles English it is entertaining, and your posts are fun, too, Koo Koo. No need for anyone to take sides. Anyway, the news today from Iraq is too good for us to be quarrelling. Remember, Koo Koo, that the Italians were one of the first countries to join the 'coalition of the willing'. And Massimo is the foremost Quarryologist in Italy and perhaps even Europe. So apologise to him, Koo Koo. Cheers. |
Rahman lost against Ruiz, I'm very surprised. I thought that Hasim was much better than Ruiz" (QUOTE)

I don't think that one is much better than the other, although Ruiz appears to be a more determined fighter. He's very awkward and tough in his own way. Rahman ko'd Lewis, but that could happen in any heavyweight fight. Ruiz was defeated by Jones, so that says a lot as well. I think that the winner should fight Mesi, that way we can clear out the dead wood.

PETE, WHEN YOU TAKE MY SIDE , YOU TAKE THE SIDE OF AMERICA, MASSIMO IS A FOREIGNER , HE DON'T BELONG, THE HANDS OF THE CLOCK POINT TOWARDS YOU PETE AS YOU BEGIN TO BE THE OLD KENT, MASSINO GET ROGAIN :)))))

PETE, WHEN YOU TAKE MY SIDE , YOU TAKE THE SIDE OF AMERICA, MASSIMO IS A FOREIGNER , HE DON'T BELONG, THE HANDS OF THE CLOCK POINT TOWARDS YOU PETE AS YOU BEGIN TO BE THE OLD KENT, MASSINO GET ROGAIN :)))))

Massimo - I thought that Rahman would win, too. What a joke boxing is today when someone as limited as Ruiz now has boasting rights to say that he is the two-time world champion. In yesteryear he would not have been considered talented enough to even get a title shot. If you say that Ruiz is truly a champion heavyweight, then how good does that make Roy Jones. As I said, what a joke.

Massimo - I haven't forgotten about your Carnera tape and will get to it when I can. Paul - At my dad's funeral we had a Muslim Imam (equivalent to a priest) saying prayers for my dad and also my brother in-laws father who is a reverend saying prayers for him too. Both parties were so respectful of one another and for their beliefs and views. When we told the Imam that the service would be held in a Chapel he didn't mind whatsoever - he viewed it as a place of worship and respected it for that. That is the way it should be...it never is. I thought of you Paul when this happened (strange I know, but that argument we had upset me so much).

I'm saying goodbye as it is goodbye from me. I'm tired of reading stupidness from people like Koo Koo - it's not an opinion or a view it is childishness to get conflict arising - how pathetic and I have had a belly full of it. See ya...massimo - you must reach me by e-mail. Thanks for everyones messages in regards to my father-not that anyone knew him but he was my hero and a very human being.

It isn't hard to figure out why boxing in general, and the heavyweight division in particular, is in a slump. There's a serious lack of talent or even charisma. The guys who ARE good (like Lewis) are basically boring to watch---Ruiz, I admit, is tough and determined. But that doesn't sell tickets when it's coupled together with a plodding, boring style. Tua is another guy whose fights end up being borefest. And when Lewis, who is at least 6'5" tall, muscular and athletic, fights with the caution of rabbit against an alligator---and he's the legitimate Champion no less---you end up with a disinterested fan base. Lewis-Holyfield were studies in boredom when compared with ANY good heavyweight fight of the 70's!

Welcome back ! Don't worry about that tape, there's no hurry. I sincerely love America and as an Italian I am grateful to America for many reasons and I'm not licking any asses. There are only 3 things I dislike of America: caution money, baseball, Mac Donald's ( blaah !) Paul--I really can't understand if Rahman is a good boxer or not. He is very discontinuous, in his last fight he drew with Tua and David is 100 times stronger than that semi-bum (Ruiz)PS; I love Italy still more, of course!
What's "caution money?" Baseball fans love the game any way they can get it. I personally only like it at the ball park, on a nice day. We don't go to that many games, because we don't like being ripped off by the high ticket prices. Football, basketball, and hockey are just as bad, plus the Chicago teams in those sports are atrocious on top of being expensive! I don't eat fast foods that often - part of my fitness regimen! McDonalds has been accused by some consumer watchdog groups of putting things in their food that's mildly addictive (just what Americans need - something to make them fatter).|

I have found in my dictionary that "caution money" is the possibility to go out from jail by paying some money. I guess I have to burn that dictionary, you are my ET and I believe only in you!|

I have found in my dictionary that "caution money" is the possibility to go out from jail by paying some money. I guess I have to burn that dictionary, you are my ET and I believe only in you!|

I have found in my dictionary that "caution money" is the possibility to go out from jail by paying some money. I guess I have to burn that dictionary, you are my ET and I believe only in you!|

Lewis-Holyfield were studies in boredom when compared with ANY good heavyweight fight of the 70's!

"QUOTE"

That's very true. These guys are less concerned with entertaining the fans and more concerned about the color of their trunks or the way their hair is styled. There's too much money in boxing, which makes it an easy payday for those fighters who lack character, determination, courage etc. |

Massimo, if you really are from Italy, you have a warped perception of The USA. Maybe you should come over here and see for yourself, rather than take the word of some of those who, may or may not be Americans themselves. If you want to know what the USA is all about, it comes down to one thing pal $$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$. It's the be all and the end all, it's the American Way, it's the bottom line, dawg!!!|

In looking over Jerry's record again, I looked into the guys JQ drew with. I was surprised by Tony Alongi, who had just two career losses and never seemed to go anywhere, can anyone comment on this guy? He was good enough to draw twice with Jerry, and draw with George Chuvalo, Yet he seemed to retire with a stack of wins and no real title chances, why? One of his two losses was to Billy Daniels, who Jerry wrecked in one round. Each of these guys Jerry drew with have some common opponents, and Jerry fought some of them as well, Yet Jerry clearly stands out among them, making these draws curious. I have read that Jerry did not take these draws very seriously, since they were not losses. Given that Jerry also had semi-plausible reasons for losses to Machen ( a fluke, laziness) and Ellis ( the bad back thing ) Jerry could argue he was undefeated until Joe Frazier in 1969. He was 26-1-4 for Ellis, and some did voice their suspicion of Jerry regarding these draws, though it was drown out by the hoopla of his wins over Spencer and Patterson. These draws and Jerry's attitude toward them must have been the subject of some extended conversations with Jerry, to keep him focused and hungry. I get the feeling this may have been a tough task. The press, though, seemed to buy into it too. When Jerry was finally decisively beaten, by Frazier, it was his 38th pro fight. He had three losses and four draws, but many acted like it was his first loss, and the bubble seemed to burst after that. It's almost as if the press paid Jerry back for giving him so much hype and credit early on, for buying into the idea that Jerry hadn't really been beaten or drawn on, an attitude that Jerry seemed to have himself going into the Frazier fight. Ellis and Frazier were Jerry's real chances, yet I have to wonder if this attitude, and all the hoopla, were real barriers for Jerry. His early rounds with Frazier are epic, but there's almost an unrealism in the idea that JQ could just run out and slug with one of the all-time sluggers and win, almost like a movie script. How grounded was Jerry? After Frazier, and his bizarre loss to Chuvalo, I've read where Jerry was clearly depressed after these fights. Muhammed Ali and Joe Frazier both seemed to be waiting for Jerry when JQ ran off a string of wins, but the press seemed to still be punishing Jerry and did not seem to give Jerry credit for becoming a better fighter in the 70's, I think. Jerry's record does show some real inconsistency, attitude must be a big factor in this. After 1975, it seemed Jerry did not get nearly the credit for his performances that he began to get in the 90's and still gets now. Did Jerry's early hype prevent him from fairly getting a title shot against Foreman? What kind of attitude did Jerry have going into the Norton fight? Like FrazierI, an unrealism seems to exist, where he can take a fight with a major contender on two weeks notice, go in out of shape and expect to beat him. Again, as with Frazier, there are some great moments, particularly round 3. JQ 's boxing talent in hugely obvious, all considered. But his attitude through all this, high and low, is something I'd like to know more about. There are some who've said Jerry made a lot of excuses and was not grounded enough to learn from these few losses and draws to become what he had the talent to become, champion. I ask these questions as a real fan of this guy, believe me. Any replies? | 12/16/03 04:12:18 AM|Paul|Sydney||PlMls4@aol.com||||10|Until the Iraqi Information Minister confirms his identity, how can we be sure that the right guy was captured? (((:| 12/16/03 09:39:19 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Gerry:Two of Jerry's greatest wins were against Lyle and Shavers. In my opinion, at the time, people knew they were nice, impressive wins---but thought that maybe Lyle and Shavers "must have been overrated for Quarry to beat them." Well, both of these guys picked up the pieces and continued on with their careers. Both of them got title shots and fought very well in these bouts against Ali. Lyle had the epic slugfest with Foreman. Shavers floored Larry Holmes---arguably one of the best Champions ever. Shavers KOed Norton in one round. In other words, it took a few years for people to realize that both Shavers and Lyle really were very good fighters and they proved themselves AFTER Quarry beat them. | 12/16/03 10:38:36 AM|Pete|USA||pco@intel||||10|"There are some who've said Jerry made a lot of excuses and was not grounded enough to learn from these few losses and draws to become what he had the talent to become, champion. I ask these questions as a real fan of this guy, believe me. Any replies?" (QUOTE)As great a fighter as Jerry was, I don't think that he was championship material. I don't mean any disrespect to Jerry or his many fans, but Jerry was a guy that champions had to get past, to become champions. When you consider how many heavyweights actually go on to become champions(not including these phoney paper champions & federations designed to make big money for promoters, while ripping off boxing fans), Jerry was very close to being there. When we start making excuses for fighters, we lose objectivity. Everyone here holds Jerry in high esteem; we liked his attitude, many of his fights were classic fights of the "GOLDEN ERA" of heavyweight boxing and he looked good, in and out of the ring. Unfortunately, he was not an Ali, Frazier or Holmes.| 12/16/03 11:15:48 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Possibly even more than the other forms of entertainment, athletes are victims of a Walter Mitty meat grinder created by a public that lives in shades of black and white - first place or last, winner and loser, ignoring their own travails across the range of human experience. It's sort of like creating Gods in a laboratory, and hoping we hit the jackpot of perfection and immortality, and will be allowed to ride in the car if we can ever figure out how to build it. Even those who endure and reach the top are recycled and subjected to a hierarchachal rating system against others who did likewise, or hypothetical comparison to people who didn't, or who they never met; when someone makes it through the gauntlet, it's as if "we" want to then deny them if we can't come too.Well, a person can get out of jail via bail (temporarily, till trial), with a payoff, or by being found innocent. Being rich and important doesn't hurt on any of those fronts!|

Jerry was my favorite boxer. I remember reading every article in every boxing publication I could get my hands on in which he was in. I think in one he stated that boxing was not his passion. He learned to fight at a very young age. No disrespect intended, but he had the tools to be world champion, but he did not love the sport well enough to be champion. I want to say again, no disrespect, I loved the guy.|

Jerry not of championship caliber? This is not true as Jerry was better than a lot of fighters who won titles. Not winning the title in an era when your competition was Ali, Frazier, Foreman, etc. is not something to hang your head in shame. Realize that six of Jerry's eight losses were to fighters listed in Ring magazine's top fifty heavyweights of all time (not counting the Crammer fight). His other two losses were to fighters who were at or near this level as well. In his original career, Jerry never lost to a fighter who was not a champion at some point in his career or who was not a legitimate long time top ten contender.

How many times do I have to point this out to some of you people?

Did Jerry pick himself up after losses and learn from these losses to make a charge at a title shot again? Yes he did this on no less than three occasions. Just because he didn't get his third shot doesn't mean he didn't earn it. In fact George Foreman told Jerry at ringside after Jerry destroyed (creamed) Shavers, that Jerry had just lost his title shot and this wasn't the nice, jolly Foreman of today who gives everyone credit. At the time Foreman was the mean, surly Foreman. Most of the people who have a low opinion of Jerry's ability have no idea Jerry beat fighters of the caliber of Lyle, Shavers, and Patterson. When I say Jerry fought these fighters, they assume Jerry lost to them. Of course, this is not true!

Jerry Quarry morally has been heavyweight champion! He just made the mistake of going (or to go) into the ring with a broken back! He would eat alive Ruiz, Rahman, this Holyfield. I'd love to see Lewis-Quarry!

Jerry not of championship caliber? This is not true as Jerry was better than a lot of fighters who won titles. "(QUOTE) Just to reiterate, Jerry was a great heavyweight. He was well liked & respected by all of us here. He had great heart & courage and will never be forgotten. But what fighters, who won legitimate titles were not superior to Jerry? I'm not referring to guys like Riddick Bowe, Michael Moorer, Mike Weaver, Big John Tate, Leon Spinks, Michael Spinks, Trevor Berbick...the list is endless. Would Jerry have taken out Louis, Marciano, Patterson (in his prime), Liston, Ali, Frazier, Foreman, Holmes, Tyson???|

In my opinion, Jerry was a great heavyweight. He was a major player during the most competitive era of boxing.
heavyweight boxing. As stated by many, including myself, he had great heart, tremendous courage; he gave everything and many of his fights were historically, very significant. So for everything that Jerry contributed to boxing, I consider him to be a great heavyweight. That doesn't mean that he is championship material, however. During Jerry's time, Frazier, Ali and Foreman were champions. Ali, in my opinion, was the greatest, because of what he did for boxing, as well as his boxing skills. Frazier was a great heavyweight, as well, although much of his greatness came as a result of his meetings with Ali. Foreman could also be considered great, because during his brief reign, he did dominate the imaginations of many boxing fans. But I see Jerry as greater than George, because the whole picture shows a man who gave it all, went out with nothing, but is remembered as one of the great heavyweights of a bygone era. | 12/16/03 09:47:58 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentalliente@aol.com|||10|Pete, Jerry was better than a lot of heavyweight champions. Was he better than the top ten of all time, which you practically listed in your post? No he wasn't, but he was better than other linear champions such as L. Spinks, M. Spinks (possibly, Quarry/M.Spinks- a competitive match), Johannson, Sharkey, Tommy Burns, Max Baer (Jerry would have outboxed him), an older George Foreman, Moorer, Jess Willard, Primo Canera, and maybe even Schemling. Jerry was also certain better than most of the split champions. Pete, championship caliber and the all time upper elite are two different things. | 12/17/03 12:37:05 AM|Gerry Schultz|Cleveland, Ohio||jgschultz11@msn.com|||10|As already said, I definitely feel JQ was championship-caliber, and better than Jimmy Ellis, who showed JQ a lot of respect in their match. Given that Ellis was a very good heavy, this is a real compliment. Also as said before, I consider JQ a former champ anyway. He certainly had the respect of every top heavy and champ in his era, which is almost certainly the best ever in boxing. My question was about the draws, how he looked at them (perhaps not nearly as seriously as he should have), and his mentality, attitude and confidence. It takes quite a bit of something to charge Joe Frazier, a top champ he nearly beat, or to take on Norton with virtually no preparation. JQ certainly had plenty of voices telling him how good he was, way more supporters than Joe Frazier or Ken Norton, each of who may have saw these fights more clearly than Jerry. There were these draws, and shrugging statements in losses to Machen, Ellis, Ali I, Chuvalo as well as his approaches to Frazier I and Norton that make me want to ask about how he saw himself and these matches. I don't feel Jerry could have beat Ali, two matches weren't necessary to prove that point, but Ali I's quick end gave him room to talk, I've read that Jerry really did believe he could have won, I guess I wonder where that comes from. He was as good as Frazier early in their matches, and was confident enough to try Joe twice. Again I think he could have beat Norton, but not realistically the way he ended up meeting him, where was he at, at this point? He had the talent to have great moments against these champs, was there something in the hoopla or his own attitude that prevented Jerry from going maybe a little further? As a fan, I guess that’s my question. He never flinched versus Shavers, who wanted a round-one KO, and ended up being one, and was just incredible against Lyle, yet gave much different efforts in other fights. Even at the Superstars, so way up one year, so down the other. I get the feeling Jerry was very approachable as a person, but a much different personality in the gym/ring. Again, I'd like to know more about his attitudes through all this. Thanks. | 12/17/03 05:30:34 AM|Massimo|Rome||4|||10|Yeah, Jerry Quarry was better than Carnera, but Primo was better than Ruiz, for God's sake! Don't you agree, Paul? What do you think about a matchup Carnera-Toney? Be carefully, our friendship (or friendship? I don't remember, anyway one of the two) is on the line! I'd love to see Chicago Bulls-Lakers once in my life! You have Eddy Curry "Baby Shaq". If you meet Eddy there in Chicago, look up and say " best greetings by Massimo Cini, but the true Shaq is gonna dunk right on your face, chump!”. Ken Reeves (Warren Coolidge's coach) was a fan and ex-player of the Bulls.

Look up if you are shorter than Eddy Curry... But if you are taller, look down, of course!

I think Primo Carnera was probably better than we give him credit for. People tend to ridicule really big people and expect too much from them and perhaps that has detracted from the modern day perception of Carnera's career. Carnera won the title from Jack Sharkey, and remembering that Sharkey easily beat Max Schmeling the year before, it was an impressive win. Because Carnera wasn't a hateful, snarling, vicious guy with a killer instinct, and was more the likeable giant, we have taken him for granted. He was badly beaten by a young Louis, but there's only been one or two guys in the history of boxing who could have withstood what that guy had. The loss to Max Baer (who put him down 11 times) might give us a clue to the outcome of a hypothetical fight with Toney. Baer had better skills than Toney, but Toney can be a fearless killer. I'd have to pick Toney (however, if Carnera got rid of those ridiculous socks he used to wear to weigh-ins is that an Italian thing - who knows?) Whatever the result, Italians have every right to be proud of him. By the way, Carnera retired in California after operating a liquor store before returning home. And how do I know this? I read it in my book! Cheers to Massimo.

The modern day perception of Carnera is a direct consequence of the fact that the only Carnera's fight they show over and over again is Baer-Carnera! Every fighter would look bad in his worst night! Ali looked an average fighter in his first fight against Cooper, Tyson looked a clown against Lewis!

I'm on your side regarding Carnera and I was just sitting here in front of the television reflecting on my picking Toney to beat him. I have to change that selection. 70 years on and we are talking about Primo. In 2074 will anyone be talking about Toney? No. So, if I was betting my last dollar, I'd put it on Carnera to beat Toney. And I have to disagree with you about Clay against Cooper. Sure, Clay wasn't all that impressive boxing-wise and we all know about the thumb in the glove time wasting tear. But I think that was the night Clay gave us a glimpse of why he would become the greatest..... his foolproof chin! Only the very elite in history were capable of getting up from Old Henry's Hammer when it connected flush. So the only reason I can pick Ali over Louis was because Ali was knockout proof. If the Schmeling knockout of Louis never happened, I couldn't choose between them. I just know that Ali would have picked himself up off the canvass had Schmeling knocked him down - like he did against Cooper and Frazier - but Louis couldn't get up. The different weapons and expertise that Ali and Louis both had cancelled the other's expertise and weapons out. Louis had the raw power, but Ali had the fool proof jaw. Louis had overwhelming 'bang' in both fists, but Ali had the jab, the balance, the timing, and the brains. The defining factor in Ali's favour was that he was knockout proof and Louis - as proved against Schmeling - wasn't. How sad is it that the two greatest figures in boxing history became so obviously impaired in the twilight of their lives? Anyway, Massimo, do you Italians have turkeys or spaghetti for Christmas dinner? Christmas in Australia is stinking hot and we are going to have seafood - prawns (Americans call them shrimps), oysters, and fish, washed down with a nice red wine. Only eight more sleeps.

Had Jerry peaked during this time period, I agree he would have been heavyweight champion, not in a unified sense, but I'm certain he would have had one of those belts. Most of those fighters mentioned Spinks, Burns, Sharkey, Carnera etc., were nowhere close to Jerry's level. But I'm talking about the very top, because I'm not interested in paper champions or guys who got there by default or by way of crooked promotion, management etc. The real, legitimate heavyweight champions were Johnson, Dempsey, Louis, Marciano, Patterson, Liston, Ali, Frazier, Foreman, Holmes, Tyson and Lewis.Massimo: Tyson looked like a "clown" against Lewis, because Tyson was washed up and had been for more than ten years. If Tyson & Lewis had met in the late 80's, Lewis would have been put into dreamland, early in the first round.| 12/17/03 11:46:48 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Massimo - As I said, we don't go to many sporting events any more, and haven't seen the Bulls live since their glory days back in the 90s. Shame they lost their fantastic coach, Phil Jackson, but nobody can get along with the Bull's awful owners, Slimesdorf and Tinhorn for long. I'm a little under 5'4", so I'm a ~lot~ shorter than "Baby Shaq." Sportmart (a huge sporting goods chain), used to have a life sized Shaq in the shoe department, and it was unbelievable to stand beside - so much so that there were actually people (myself included), who got their picture taken next to the cardboard figure! I imagine I could have put ~both~ my feet, with gym shoes on, inside one of his gunboat, size 22 tennies! :)Re Quarry: individual sports are so unforgiving. In a team sport, individual players can have an off day, and the team can still win, plus they have another shot the next week (in football, sometimes the next day/night in the others). Even in tennis and golf, you have many chances to get on top and stay there. No sport is crueler than boxing in this way, among others.I've said it before, and I'll say it again - if anyone were to ever get a handle on motivation and body chemistry to the point that performance could be predictable on demand, they'd make Bill Gates look like a beggar! Of course, everyone would have it though, from pee wee athletes to the pros.| 12/17/03 12:19:57 PM|Massimo|Rome||4||||10|Paul- You Australians are the smartest in the world! Sea food is my favorite food. We Italians use to eat a lot on Christmas dinner! As a first dish we usually eat LASAGNE or SPAGHETTI ( it's hard to say what's better of the two), as a second dish you can find everything you wish and in conclusion a lot of cakes and similar ( torrone, panettone, God knows the English traslation of these two words...). Torrone is a sort of chocolate with peanuts inside, panettone is... Too hard to explain! :)RS-If you think you are big, I'll let you know that I'm 5'6" without shoes! I know that's incredible, but I'm really 5'6"! I think I have a pituitary condition, acromegaly or something other... I'd jump 3 meals for having the joy of standing beside a life-size Shaq. If you think that Shaq is big, you should see Calvin Lane beside Shaq in Calvin Lane's site. Shaq has very large feet and hands in comparison with his (limited) height... Yao Ming is 7'6" tall and wears a 19 size shoe ( Cenerentola). I'm not going to say my shoe size because I don't want to scare anybody...| 12/17/03 02:06:48 PM|Michael Cobb|Chicago||mikekoob@yahoo.com||||9|Styles make boxing, and there were styles that gave Jerry problems, but there was one style that seemed to give him no problems: the straight-up, straight-ahead style. (Examples: Mac Foster, Ron Lyle.) For this reason, I always thought Jerry would have whipped George Foreman.| 12/17/03 04:19:23 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Pete, the Spinks brothers, Carnera, Burns, Sharkey, Johannson, older Foreman, Moorer, and even Hasim Rahman were all linear champions, they were not paper champions as they "beat the man who beat the man," meaning they were undisputed champions. For example, there was nothing political about Rahman's win over Lennox Lewis, an all time great, unless you think a right hand punch that knocked Lewis out cold is political! Sure Rahman lost the rematch but he was still a legitimate undisputed heavyweight champion of the world who earned his title in the ring and Jerry was a better fighter than him. Funny how you can put Riddick Bowe on your list of non championship caliber fighters as he is the one fighter on the list who Jerry probably wouldn't have been able to beat. Bowe, when at the top of his game, was hard to beat by anyone in any era.

Pete, I guess we are just going to have to agree to disagree on what championship caliber is because I don't think it should just be limited to the upper elite of all time and you think it should be defined this way. I firmly believe that an in prime Jerry would beat the older version of George Foreman hands down! Jerry's quickness and counterpunching style would be the difference in this one. If people think Jerry couldn't have coped with the older version's size advantage, as he was weighing in at the 250 pound mark, remember Evander Holyfield was giving away about forty pound in weight to Foreman and he outboxed Foreman. Moorer was also outboxing Foreman for most of the fight until he decided to be stupid and go for a knockout by standing directly in front of Foreman in the tenth round. Moorer also gave away a substantial weight advantage to Foreman.

KENT: Of course we can disagree; your points are as valid as mine or anyone elses. I'm simply stating my views and I'm happy to see that you are stating yours. Kent, I cannot take George Foreman the second seriously. Although he was a much smarter fighter, the second time around, it's apples & oranges. Of course Jerry would have done well against the re-furbished George, but would he have done the same with Foreman circa '72? I can't agree with you where Bowe is concerned. After seeing Golata punch that guy out (I'm disregarding the low blows) I'm convinced that he could be had. He also lacks courage and determination as shown by quitting the Marines.

Foreman 2 has been one of the best heavyweights of the first half of the 90's. Iron-chinned, sturdy, still very powerful and a better tactician than Foreman 1. He fought well against a prime Holyfield and gave him a competitive fight! Also he destroyed Bert Cooper, a limited but dangerous fighter and fought toe to toe against Stewart and Shannon Briggs. I suspect that Tyson dodged him...

George claims an interesting strategy for beating Moorer. Because of his otherwise brute power, Foreman's jab was often overlooked, but it was jolting, enough to knock many fighters off balance. What he did in secret ahead of winning the title the second time was to practice a slapping, namby-pamby jab, followed by a pile driving right. And it worked, resulting in a one punch KO. He said that if he'd used his treasured jab he'd honed for so many years, he'd have only succeeded in knocking Moorer out of the way, and causing him to continue to circle counterclockwise away from the right. Well done!

HEY, LET'S LET KENT SPEAK MORE, NOT MASSIMO, I LIKE PEOPLE THAT KNOW SOMETHING ABOUT THE WAY OF BEING MORE QUARRY LIKE, YOUR SMALL PASTA BRAIN WILL NEVER KNOW MASSIMO!

Wow, we're back to Quarry-Foreman. It's a lot to ask for JQ, tough as he was, to beat very talented fighters 20 pounds above him in the caliber of Ali or Foreman. He'd have his moments yes, he'd win a couple rounds, and scrap for several more, but come on... let's retire this old argument. Foreman 2, as you call him, is a couple of notches above Butterbean, and has not been a serious heavy since he beat Gerry Cooney in a straight-up slug fest he nearly lost. Tyson, with a hangover, would have mauled jolly George anytime in Tyson's career, and would have him prime vs prime as well. Tyson isn't coherent enough to dodge anyone. A prime vs prime Tyson Bowe match around 1992 would have been the fight of the 90's. Lewis against either about then would also have been good PPV. Holyfield, Morrison, others gave the division good depth at that time. Golota beat a cracked-out Bowe, just as Jimmy Young beat a stoned-out, depressed Foreman. Bowe and Foreman both share some similarities: big talents and appetites, nearly equal talent, each with brief reigns and remarkable transformations, though Bowe's was not for the positive. Guys, in discussing Foreman, how can you call this guy who was champ for just a short time one of the Top Ten when so many others dominated for much longer in their eras? He was a titanic puncher yes, but not a boxer, a great guy absolutely and fun to listen to, in short segments. But, like with JQ, we might need to reel in the respect a bit.

I recall Foreman once saying that Tyson's handlers should let him out of his cage every once in a while to perform a loop-the-loop before putting him back in the cage. My memory is that Foreman (2) was pushing hard for a fight with Tyson, but Tyson's management (led by Don King) refused to work with Foreman. It is odd that the fight never happened because Tyson was the devil and Foreman was extremely popular and it would have been huge money. Tyson might night have been coherent enough to duck anyone, but his management were (even though Tyson probably would have beat Foreman (2)).

Gerry-

Foreman lost the title early because he fought a super-motivated Ali', if not I think he would have kept the title for a long time! I don't agree that Big George couldn't boxe, if you watch Foreman-Frazier 2, Foreman-Chuvalo and Foreman-Norton you see a good boxer. His left jab, for instance, was a very good weapon.

Paul-

I have read that in his youth Tyson watched over and over again Foreman-Frazier 1 with Cus D'Amato and both were very impressed by Foreman! I think that that fight is very scary and I would not be surprised at all if Iron Mike didn't want part of Foreman...

RS-

I don't agree with you regarding Ali'-Foreman. I have recently seen that fight again and Ali' deserves credit for that performance! He fought a great fight and outboxed George. I think the fight was very close after 7 rounds. I have even heard that the loose ropes weren't Dundee's fault but a will of the local organizers. On the contrary, when Angelo Dundee discovered that the ropes were loose he informed the local organizers, but they didn't care... Foreman said that one of the body punch he hit Ali' with was the hardest punch he had ever thrown and that any other fighter would have collapsed to the canvas!

George could definitely box! Better than Ali, as a matter of fact. Ali did many things wrong, and was only able to accomplish what he did in the ring because of his speed in career one, and ability to take a punch (along with some speed) in career two. George's fundamentals are often overlooked because of his brutal power.

George vs Tyson in career two would probably result in a Foreman loss by UD. Tyson was too mobile. However, if George caught him, it'd have been, "Down goes Tyson, down goes Tyson..." etc. George fought 34 times in career two, losing only three times (Holyfield, Morrison, and Briggs). Pretty decent for a 45 year old!

Hypothetical fights are always fun, and I like talking about them as much as anyone, but in terms of real stuff, there isn't a champion in any time who wouldn't have been lucky to take a prime George Foreman (I don't count Ali, since that fight was fixed, IMO).

There's no doubt that Ali's ability to take punches, whether to the head or body, was his greatest asset. Even back in the old "float like a butterfly" days, before anyone realized this, it becomes clear in retrospect that while his speed was very useful against his (far lesser than in career two) opponents, his undiscovered durability kept him in fights that were at the time assigned to his quickness. In career two, his rock hard head was essential, both because he'd slowed down some, but also because of the tougher boxers he faced. Without his gift of punch-worthiness, Ali would have been just another showy speedball, waiting for the first Frazier/Foreman-type opponent to end the party. Actually, Ali doesn't do that much real boxing in the Foreman fight. He mostly lets George whale away on him, occasionally a combination. I'm not even sure I'd call them counters, as opposed to just survival replies, but I don't have a problem with "counter." I personally thought Rumble in the Jungle was a very dull fight. Let's put it this way - if you saw that same fight on an undercard somewhere, would you say it was a mind-blower? Only what the fight meant affords it any excitement at all. IMO, anyway.

To suggest that the Ali/Foreman fight was suited to an undercard...what are you guys & girls smoking??? That fight was a classic. Ali, back on top, outsmarting and outboxing "THE MUMMY". Foreman got what he deserved. George's greatest fight was against Frazier. Joe just couldn't get enough of that down home pounding and kept coming back for more. Who did George fight after winning the championship and before losing the championship to Ali...a nobody by the name of King Roman and of course Ken Norton. After losing to Ali he beat Joe again, Lyle(after Lyle kicked his ass through most of the fight), Scott Ledoux and was defeated by Jimmy Young. The Ali/Holmes title match was not fixed, Ali did a number on Foreman. It was one of the greatest moments in heavyweight boxing; too bad Ali didn't retire after that one.

RS's recent comments: "Foreman was a better boxer than Ali". "Ali v Foreman was fixed." "Ali did many things wrong (as a boxer)." "Without his punch worthiness, Ali was just another showy speedball." RS - this fluff that you write might sound good when you read it back to yourself, but it really is just unsubstantiated nonsense. You habitually make outrageous statements, either trying to get a reaction or more probably to try to convince yourself that you are an expert, but you never produce any evidence to back up your opinion. For instance, for the 'fix' allegation you only rely on your opinion that it was an improbable upset and that Ali was overrated. The comment about Ali being "nothing but a showy speedball" makes me wonder whether you have ever been to a fight. It's clear that for whatever reason (and I have my suspicion) you hate Ali and your jaundiced mind is intent on discrediting him. I'm sorry......but your repeated petty rubbishing of Ali is childish.

I apologize from the heart of my bottom. I forgot that it was verboten ever to criticize St. Muhammed.

I have recently just watched Foreman verses Moorer again and it was not just a one punch knockout as Foreman hit Moorer with some hard one-two combinations leading up to the final blow. Moorer appeared hurt before the knockout punch and he could not avoid the punch. Moorer said afterwards that it was not part of a plan Foreman had set up and that Foreman just got lucky. I agree with this assessment because why would anyone take a beating for almost ten rounds if he could avoid the punishment by winning earlier? I mention Foreman, version two, verses Quarry because I remember the talk going around that Foreman, when he won the title the second time, would destroy Tyson and I was laughed at when I said Jerry could beat him, Jerry's prime verses older Foreman and if Jerry could beat Foreman, then Tyson could also. I think Bowe's best days in the ring did not last very long but at his best, he was very hard to beat. The Holyfield fights took a lot out of him and he was not the same fighter by the time he fought Golota.
another RS clanger a month ago. You posted that "Joe's left eye betrayed him in the third fight." Fancy that. That wasn't a fair fight either. By some act of God Joe's eye got injured. It had nothing to do with Ali's right fist. You wrote that Foreman was a better boxer than Ali. Ali was just a showy punching bag. Ali couldn't throw combinations, etc, etc. If this is what your brain spits out about Ali, then you are better off speaking from the bottom of your heart! It's one thing to write legitimate opinion, but it's another to post silly inane insults. Anyway, if Ali was such a bum, then what does that make your hero? Cheers.

It's easy to concede Foreman could box to a certain point, he looked very good stalking Frazier in their second match, his best match in my opinion. But he was often troubled by good boxers, Peralta, Young, Ali, others. Could George box? Yes, some. Was he a good boxer? No, it wasn't what brung him there, as they say. He was big and he had the Hammer. To say his boxing skills got it done for him is simply inaccurate. Sorry Road'ette, Ali, who got away with a lot of crap in his fights, like laying on the ropes and leaning away from his opponent, or excessive clinching, did a masterful job of confusing and draining the non-boxer Foreman, who mindlessly chased Ali into the ropes again and again and rarely got anything for doing so. Frazier could get Ali off the ropes by going to the body and scoring, forcing Ali to fight. Frazier was a better boxer than Foreman, both are punchers almost exclusively as is Tyson. Tyson and Foreman did not have to face the music much in most of their fights because of the fear they inspired and the power each possessed. Why would they, like Shaq, develop the finesse side of their games when being so one-dimensional has brought them so far? JQ had to be a boxer to get where he did because he wasn't a gliding 6'3" like Ali and he didn't have the Hammer that punchers like Foreman/ Frazier/ Chuvalo did. Necessity breeds that kind of growth. Foreman had a rack of KOs to show for being the biggest baddest puncher in the ring, why would he turn Gene Tunney? It's like expecting Wilt to practice his free throws. Foreman, like Liston, could not change his spots after Ali, the consumate boxer who used psychology on the whole world long before rallying throngs in Kinshasa and psyching Foreman into defeat like he did so many others. Only Frazier saw Ali for what he was, if he had two good eyes he might have made Ali pay in all three fights. Foreman wasn't that sharp, and he still isn't.

It might, or might not, be worth mentioning that Ali psyched Jerry also for their second fight, the way he complimented the Quarry women for their looks, he knew Jerry was a fan and played on it, the same almost as the way Russell would invite Wilt to dinner and butter him along with his biscuits so that his fire might burn a little lower when it mattered. Ali was older when he gave Ken Norton his shot and clearly underestimated Norton. Knowing Norton had his number, Ali turned to other tactics, using his fame, the media, the clownish Cosell he so easily manipulated. His fame beat Norton when he couldn't, then he dodged him. But he couldn't dodge Joe, who saw him for what he was. He could only survive Joe.
fundamentals. Duh! I also said the same about Jerry Quarry once. Fundamentally speaking, most Olympians are more fundamentally sound. Ali's speed, craftiness, hard head, ability to handle himself when in trouble, and ability to avoid follow up punches were his fortes, not sublime boxing ~fundamentals~. Ali was just a showy punching bag. Ali couldn't throw combinations, etc, etc. Did I say that? Hmmm. No, I don't think I did. Y'all're embellishing my words a bit to try and make a counter point, when you didn't fully grasp my original premise(s). It's another to post silly inane insults. Anyway, if Ali was such a bum, then what does that make your hero? Cheers.You must not have read all my posts in which I lavishly complimented the man. Besides, I already apologized for criticizing St. Muhammad. Sheesh.So far I've said Foreman and Quarry were better ~boxers~ than Ali. Not necessarily better all the time in the full scope of things that go into a match, and sometimes never as good in some of the things Ali did well. ~But~, as far as the bread and butter, meat and potatoes of boxing fundamentals, George and Jerry made only a small fraction of the mistakes Ali did. MA had many things he used to compensate, and these stood him in good stead. It's a tragedy that in such a savage sport, one of fractions of a second and fractions of an inch, often with only one chance to get it right, that the "sweet spot," that magical night is often so elusive, or that little things, not even noticeable in everyday life, can conspire to change things just once.Hey Gerry, I think Frazier was underated as a boxer at his range. If he could keep you in that certain area where you could hit him, but he could hit you. He was excellent at pitty patting inside his range for 4 or 5 punches, and then loading up on a combination. He was excellent at slipping and rolling away from punches. To me, he was a very good boxer, when he got you withen range. He did seem to get everyone he fought in range, including Ali.What does being a better boxer mean? Every time Frazier got "within range," Ali grabbed him behind the neck, and pulled his head down! He elbowed, backhanded, held, and never lost a point! In Manilla, Frazier only lost by his corners' bad decision. Ali was spent!! Frazier would have KO'D Ali in the next round.Steve - Woulda, Coulda, and Shoulda, never won anything. The fact is that Frazier didn't come out for the last round and Ali did. Frazier's corner threw the towel in, and Ali's corner didn't. A loss appears on Frazier's resume; a win is shown on Ali's. End of story. Cheers.I still think that Joe Frazier vs Larry Holmes would have been a fascinating fight, both in their prime.Hey Paul, would you at least agree that a very fine line separated Ali and Frazier? If Foreman is used as a criterion between them, then I disagree. I don't fully understand what happened there, but it's not a good yardstick.

| 12/19/03 02:00:22 AM | steve | N.J. | drmrm@comcast.net | | 10 | Hey Gerry, I never heard that one! That Ali even mentioned the "Quarry women", in any way. That would seem to be highly inappropriate, even for pre fight hype. I did, however, hear that something along those lines took place preceding the Norton fight. All this leads me to believe, if your wife is insulted, hire a lawyer! |

| 12/19/03 03:20:26 AM | Paul | Sydney, Australia | PI1Ms4@aol.com | | 10 | Hi Steve - my view is that Frazier's absolute hatred of Ali drove him to superhuman efforts in those three fights. In my opinion, if you took the hatred away, and Ali was just another opponent, then no contest. And (this is only my view, RS, so take a couple of deep breaths and calm yourself) if you take the three Ali fights out of Frazier's resume, you don't really have a lot left. I just can't accept that Frazier was one of the all time greats. He didn't fight often enough and, unlike Ali, he didn't fight the best on offer. As I posted once before, there are big gaps in Joe's career, especially after he began fighting Ali. It seemed like he could only get himself up for the Ali fights. And it also seemed like it took him a lot longer to recover than it took Ali. Have a look at Joe's resume and take note of all the top heavies he never fought that Ali faced one after the other. Joe was running around fighting exhibitions when Ali was doing the real thing. Also, the depth of Frazier's hatred of Ali was there for all to see when he sneered and laughed at the debilitating effects of Ali's medical condition (even though Joe slurs his words, too). The way I see it, Ali had all the tools and he didn't need hatred's help. However this is only my view as a boxing enthusiast and I mean no offense by it and I have been wrong before, but I just think that Joe was overrated. Cheers. |

| 12/19/03 10:08:36 AM | charles anderson | Ark. | ctjjandfam@aol.com | | 10 | i'm going to change gears just for a second. let us take time out to remember our troops and their loved ones this holiday season. my son will be going to iraq in jan. MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL! |

| 12/19/03 10:49:34 AM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | | 10 | Steve - As I've long said, "classic boxer" was an illusion fostered by Ali's speed - he was a brawler, not a boxer. You're right about Manila. Very little ~boxing~ on his part, and of ~course~ no point deductions for the Saint. Even with an eye pounded shut, Frazier would have taken Ali in the 15th (if MA had even been able to get off his stool). I never heard that either, about Ali saying anything to or about the Quarry women. What did he do, compliment them? Paul - You must be related to Ali, or have pictures of him all over your walls. I never said George was in on the fix, but fix it was, sorry. Frazier had already beaten the crap out of him twice - no way they were going to let George inflict the humiliation of a 10 count on their baby. |

| 12/19/03 11:03:21 AM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | | 10 | Charles - My good thoughts for all those overseas are on the wind as we speak! So, what about your son? Army, Marines, Air Force? How old is he? What does he have to say? Boy, talk about carrying a weight on your back at Christmas, knowing you're shipping out in January! I can't imagine the loneliness of being in a strange land for months on end at ~any~ time of the year, much less at Christmas. |

| 12/19/03 11:36:38 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | | 10 | You guys have GOT to be kidding. You really think Frazier would have KOed Ali in Manila if there was a 15th round? Frazier would have been the one knocked out. Frazier's corner saved his eyesight and maybe more when they stopped it. I've watched the fight several times and truly believe this. As for Frazier vs. Holmes - I agree that this would be fascinating. Holmes never faced anyone who would put so much pressure on him. Holmes DID face bigger punchers, like Earnie
Shavers, but his style was very good to avoid guys looking for one big punch. Frazier would throw bunches at him, and keep moving forward. Holmes amazing left jab and great defensive/boxing ability might carry him through. I believe Larry Holmes is one of the best ever, based on his long title reign and the fact that he fought frequently and didn't duck anyone. Frazier didn't fight all the top contenders of his time (where was Lyle, Shavers, Norton, etc. on his record?), but I also consider him a great champion. In the grand scope of things, I rank Holmes higher than Frazier, but I have to say, this fight is almost too close for me to call.

| 12/19/03 12:44:53 PM | charles anderson | ark. | cttjjandfam@aol.com | ||| 10 | thanks rs, he is in the army nat. guard |

| 12/19/03 12:48:04 PM | charles anderson | ark. | cttjjandfam@aol.com | ||| 10 | rs, he is 24, went to bosnia in 98, he is ready to go. |

| 12/19/03 02:45:20 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | ||| 10 | To Charles and to other family members of our military, and to the enlisted men and women: Thank you so much for making the world safer and our country more secure. Many of us, me included, don't often think about the unbelievable sacrifice these people make day in and day out to protect us and our way of life. Our boxing heroes that we always discuss on the board are great athletes who give us their best for entertainment value. The men and women of the armed forces give us their very best to keep us alive and they're real heroes to me!

| 12/19/03 03:33:34 PM | Paul | Sydney, Australia | P1ML54@aol.com | ||| 10 | RS - Firstly, you list no substantiation of your claim that the Ali - Foreman fight was fixed. None at all. All we're left with is a biased hunch. You should be renamed BS. Your ignorance leaves me wondering whether you have even seen the third Ali - Frazier fight. Claims you make regarding it were lifted from Joe Frazier's own book. For instance, you wrote that "Frazier's eye betrayed him." At page 163 Frazier wrote, "Things were going my way, but then my face betrayed me." You accused Ali's punches of only being "pittypat". At page 146 Frazier wrote, "The punches Clay did throw were mostly pittypat." And by the way, BS, when Frazier's corner threw the towel in before the last round, all three judges had Ali well in front. Padilla had it 66 - 60, Quiazon 67 - 62, and Nadayag 66 - 62. But they don't know as much about boxing as you (or are you going to accuse them of 'fixing' the fight). In my view, by the end of that fight Frazier had nothing left except blind hatred and even that couldn't save him. Despite all the woulda, coulda, shouldas, Ali won that fight. Learn to live with it. Cheers. | ready to go to war. But it wasn't "pitty pat" punches that reshaped Frazier's eyes and face. It was lethal jabs and crosses from Ali that had Frazier on the verge of being knocked out. And yes, throwing in the towel saved Frazier from further punishment and possible humiliation (if Ali had the hutzvah) if that fight went into the 15th.

Roadscholarette: Firstly, you list no substantiation of your claim that the Ali - Foreman fight was fixed. Only your little kid idolotry of St. Muhammad keeps you from entertaining it. Your ignorance leaves me wondering whether you have even seen the third Ali - Frazier fight. Probably two or three dozen times, including twice in slow motion all the way through, with freeze frames here and there. Claims you make regarding it were lifted from Joe Frazier's own book. For instance, you wrote that "Frazier's eye betrayed him." At page 163 Frazier wrote, "Things were going my way, but then my face betrayed me." You accused Ali's punches of only being "pittypat". At page 146 Frazier wrote, "The punches Clay did throw were mostly pittypat." And by the way, BS, when Frazier's corner threw the towel in before the last round, all three judges had Ali well in front.

BS: I don't recall using the term "pitty-pat," but if you say I have, I have. You've reshaped enough else to suit your case without really anything else of much substance. Others have said as I have, which you'd know if you read much about the sport. Padilla had it 66 - 60, Quiazon 67 - 62, and Nadvayag 66 - 62. But they don't know as much about boxing as you (or are you going to accuse them of 'fixing' the fight)?

Roadscholarette: I wonder if they decided on this before the fight? It's like the arguments about whether Jerry Quarry would have taken Ali if he hadn't been cut. Short of knocking MA out, Jerry was never going to be given a win. Look at all St. MA's other bogus wins by decision. Maybe it'll be the first time you've ever seen them, huh?

BS: In my view, by the end of that fight Frazier had nothing left except blind hatred and even that couldn't save him. Despite all the woulda, coulda, shouldas, Ali won that fight. Learn to live with it. Cheers.

Roadscholarette: I completely withdraw my claims that the Foreman-Ali fight was fixed. It's much more peaceful to accept official versions of things, wouldn't you agree? In my present state of mind, I sure would have given all those heretics a piece of my mind who thought man could fly, that the Earth revolved around the sun, that disease was caused by microscopic organisms, or that TV would never catch on, among other insane ideas. I go on record one step further: Muhammad Ali is not only the greatest flawless boxer who ever stepped into a ring, but the greatest one who ever will, and he just graciously carried Joe Frazier in those three fights to give everyone a good show! What did he say before fighting Frazier the first time? "It'll take more than an ugly, slow, flatfooted, punchy, roundhousin, easy to hit Joe Frazier to beat me!" I'll be darned - a flawless, analytical prognosticator too!!

| 12/19/03 07:39:49 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 |

Oh, and throw in greatest human being who ever lived, or who ever ~will~ live too, while you're at it. Christ doesn't count, because He was sort of ringer, being the son of God and all. Do you think Muhammad Ali could have beaten Jesus too? I'm not sure a Rope a Dope would work, because God would probably be in JC's corner and tell him all about it.

| 12/19/03 08:38:35 PM | Paul | Sydney, Australia | p1mls4@aol.com | 10 |

Oh, and throw in greatest human being who ever lived, or who ever ~will~ live too, while you're at it. Christ doesn't count, because He was sort of ringer, being the son of God and all. Do you think Muhammad Ali could have beaten Jesus too? I'm not sure a Rope a Dope would work, because God would probably be in JC's corner and tell him all about it.

| 12/20/03 02:14:49 AM | FOREST WARD | South Carolina | JOE KEVIN .COM | 10 |

Regarding the statement by Angelo, that, "Frazier did not fight all the contenders of his time, Lyle, Shavers, Norton." Frazier lost his championship in Jan 73. Lyles first fight against a legitimate contender was in Feb of 73. Lyle was was soundly beaten by Jerry Quarry, Jerry won 10 of the 12 rounds. Shavers was not ranked in the top 10 when Frazier was champ. In Dec of 1973 in Shavers first attempt to crash the big time he was knocked out in the 1st round. Six months later in June of 1974 Quarry, as a result of his victories over Lyle and Shavers was matched with Frazier. Frazier destroyed Quarry. Generally speaking, on this web site there is so much rationalization for Quarrys defeats that it almost demeans Jerry's true ability. Invariably, Jerry is regarded as a near great fighter. While, on the other hand there is so much rationalization for Frazier's victories, that it demeans Joe Frazier. Frazier is regarded as an ordinary champion.

| 12/20/03 03:28:26 AM | Paul | Sydney, Australia | p1mls4@aol.com | 10 |

Frazier was a great champion, no rationalizations needed!

| 12/20/03 04:55:04 AM | Paul | Sydney, Australia | p1mls4@aol.com | 10 |

Kent - you have me wondering about something. In all my posts about Frazier I never attacked his character, his honesty, or his integrity. I strictly limited myself to comments canvassing my opinion as to his standing as a boxer - rightly or wrongly. I thought that was what this site is all about. But then you accused "some people" (obviously me) of "demeaning a great fighter" for making those comments. I find that a little odd. After all, "someone" else called another great fighter (Ali) a cheat and a fight fixer, etc, and you said nothing. Unsubstantiated personal attacks of a defamatory nature did not "demean" Ali, Kent? Interesting. Cheers anyway.
meant it more as Frazier not being respected as a fighter as much as I believe he should be not that anyone lately has attack Joe's person. Again, it was a poor choice of words.As I said in a private E mail to you, I haven't jumped into the Foreman/Ali fix idea as I don't believe it can be proved one way or the other. I don't believe the fight was fixed, but that is my belief, I can't prove it.| 12/20/03 07:04:41 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||P1Mls4@aol.com||10|What a weak ass piss response, Kent. If an allegation can't be proved one way or the other, then what the hell is it doing on a web site where it defames reputations? Whatever happened to the presumption of innocence. It's not as if there is ANY EVIDENCE that a fight was fixed by Ali. THERE IS ABSOLUTELY NOTHING MORE THAN BS'S BIASED HUNCH. If I am wrong, Kent, then please direct my attention to that evidence. At least show me something that would justify your silence. I have been begging RS to do that for days, to produce even one iota of evidence, but she produces nothing. There's no more evidence that Ali fixed a fight than there is that Jerry Quarry fixed one or that Frazier fixed one. And by the way, Kent, if you want to refer to private e-mails, then come out and say that you weren't referring to me as the person "demeaning" Frazier. You told me in an e-mail that you meant Koo Koo. Get a spine for Christ sake and criticise someone to their face or not at all. In the meantime, someone produce something tangible that Ali fixed a fight. If not, shut up. | 12/20/03 08:52:22 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Paul is correct. Ali is innocent until proven guilty. I haven't done enough research to prove my feeling that the fix was not in for Ali/Foreman. If I look further into this, my feeling of no fix was in will likely be stronger. As far as my statement about Koo Koo being negative about Frazier, I was stating a general feeling and maybe he hasn't attacked Frazier personally. I do know Koo Koo tends to be negative agout Joe as a fighter because Joe was a small heavyweight.Sorry about that Koo Koo but like I told Paul in a private E mail, my mind has been on other things than boxing lately and I need to read the posts more carefully. SOMETIMES I NEED TO TAKE A BREAK FROM ALL OF THIS AND RECENTLY, EVEN THOUGH I HAVE BEEN POSTING, I HAVE NOT FOLLOWED THE GOINGS ON VERY CLOSELY. | 12/20/03 11:21:36 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||10|Obviously:The A-F fight being fixed is technically not so till proven, which of course, it never can be. Lots of things that happen are unproven, just as some things that ~don't~ happen ~are~ proven. It's a flawed world. We've all smelled skunks in sporting events from time to time. We need to speak up, or the bastards get clean away (and usually will anyway). "Innocent till proven guilty" is a laudable philosophy, but as anyone knows, who has any contact with the "justice" system, that isn't really how things progress once you're in it.Not Frazier, not any champion, will ever get full credit by everyone for being great. There are always human flaws, someone they didn't fight, someone they looked bad against. And in boxing, you usually get just one chance. Even if Joe had been only a club fighter, one thing's certain, as sportswriter Mark Kram said after Thrilla, "He lay there on the bed, embodying the remains of a will never before seen in the ring, a will that had taken him so far, and now, possibly ~too~ far." Or as the ancient Spartans used to say, "Come home with your shield, on ~on~ it." That was Smokin' Joe. P (Pee?) - I believe we've met before in another forum(s). While you'll deny it, that became clear some time ago. You need to put that behind you (though I suspect you won't)! :-)) | 12/20/03 01:10:57 PM|Pete|USA||pco@home||10|" Generally speaking, on this web site there is so much rationalization for Quarrys defeats that it almost demeans Jerry's true ability. Invariably, Jerry is regarded as a near great fighter. While, on the other hand there is so much rationalization for Frazier'r victories, that it demeans Joe Frazier" (QUOTE)Good point. We can't deny Joe as one of the all time great heavyweights. Historically, he filled a void when Ali went into exile and played a very important role, where Ali's return to the ring, was concerned. He and Ali created the "BIG PAYDAY" in professional sports and without Frazier, Ali's comeback really wouldn't have been as exciting for the fans. For those of you who suspect a "fix" regarding Ali/Foreman, I would say you are having a difficult time reconciling Ali's second coming with reality. George was a powerhouse, but that's all he was. His persona was great for the heavyweight scene and his destruction of Joe Frazier, followed by the ultimate showdown, with Ali, places him close to the top of the heap of outstanding heavyweights. |

| 12/20/03 03:10:13 PM | steve | N.J.||drmsrm@comcast.net ||| |10|Hey Pete, God bless your son and keep him safe! If He's already been in Bosnia, he's earned his stripes. Tell him to avoid another combat zone, like Iraq! Don't push your luck!!!!!!!!!! |
| 12/20/03 03:30:13 PM | steve | N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net ||| |10|Hey Paul, I have an idea for your consideration. I would like you to list a series of fights for Joe Frazier, including all heavyweights from Ali on. Including the guys you say he dodged. I mean, I would like to hear your blow by blow on Norton, Shavers, Holmes, etc. |
| 12/20/03 04:10:34 PM | steve | N.J.||drmsrm@comcast.net ||| |10|Hey Paul and Angelo, I am forced to give Ali the edge over Frazier, against my will. I know he won the last fight. What you guys are missing is the sociological impact. Ali proved to most of our nation that "fighting those Vietcong was wrong" He beat Frazier in Manilla by a width of a hair. C'mon Paul, give him that! |
| 12/20/03 04:33:41 PM | Paul | Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com ||| |10|Hi Steve - It might be fun doing that if we stuck to debating the skills of 'make believe' fights between Frazier and others. The fun part would be that we probably all know enough about Frazier that we can guess how he'd perform, but a little research would be needed (by me, at least) to be certain about the others. I'm going away for Christmas, so maybe in the New Year. RS - I am a little confused. Am I the 'P' you refer to? I am uncertain whether I am or not, but let me assure you that I always give my correct name, etc, when I post. I'm sure that I haven't encountered you on another site. Cheers. |
| 12/20/03 08:17:34 PM | Paul | Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com ||| |10|By the way, it was wrong of me to say that Kent is "as weak as piss". I apologise to Kent for saying it. |
| 12/20/03 09:21:49 PM | kookoo | ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com ||| |10|KENT, WHATS GOING ON? DON'T LET THESE OTHER PEOPLE BRING YOU DOWN, MY MIND IS AND ALWAYS WILL BE ON JERRY QUARRY, WHAT A GUY, WHAT HE WENT THROUGH AND HOW HE LIVED, I ADVISE ALL BOXING FANS TO TAKE A CLOSE LOOK AT THIS MAN, JUST CHECK HIM OUT, HE WAS SO F'N COOL. |
| 12/21/03 12:20:32 AM | Forest Ward | South Carolina||joekevin@cs.com ||| |10|Lets stick to boxing. Regarding the statement "Ali proved to most of our nation that fighting those vietcong was wrong." Is not true. And in fact, during the Viet Nam war Ali was no wise elder statesman. Ali declared at the time that he would not fight in any war, unless he was directed to by Elijah Muhammad. Using Ali's logic from 1967, if the Twin Towers were destroyed in 1967 by Al Qaeda, and there was a war declared against Al Qaeda by the United States; Ali would not fight in the war unless directed to by Elijah Muhammad. It was not Ali who "proved" to most of the nation that fighting the vietcong was wrong. All Ali proved was that he was either a loyal disciple of Elijah Muhammad, or that he was a duped puppet for Elijah. Personally, I think Ali was a duped puppet for Elijah. Ali was managed by Herbet Muhammad, son of Elijah. At the end of Ali's career he was short on money and in bad health. You may say that Ali could have quit boxing sooner, and that it was his own choice to continue, true. But if Herbert the son of Elijah cared so much about Ali; then Herbert should have walked away from Ali. But, no of course not, Ali was a cash cow for Herbert son of Elijah. And as long as Herbert could make money off of Ali, he would. If anyone doubts my remarks read Ali's autobiography written by Tom Hauser. One more point about 10 years ago Ali sued Herbert Muhammad for back money owed to Ali from his boxing purses when he was managed by Herbert. Ali in 1967 was not the wise statesman people now make him out to be. There are many peculiar aspects to the career of Muhammad Ali. He claimed to be a staunch supporter for Blacks back in the 60's. But it's remarkable that he had 2 white guys in his corner. You mean to tell me out of all the black trainers in boxing at the time Ali could not find to capable ones to replace Angelo Dundee and Ferdie Pacheo, "Uncle Tom" Joe Frazier fought his whole career with all black cornermen. And finally regarding Ali's love for his black brothers. If my memory serves me correctly; when Ali fought white fighters in the 60's he went pretty easy on them. He would defeat them, and that's that. But, sometimes when he fought black fighters he was meaner than a Klansmen. Are we forgetting how he tortured and humiliated Floyd Patterson, and Ernie Terrell? The Ali of the 60's was nothing like the Ali of later decades who became a kind and generous man. And to pretend otherwise, is myth making.

| 12/21/03 03:00:21 AM| Paul| Sydney, Australia||PlMls4@aol.com|||10| Forest - You summed that up very fairly and accurately, and I especially agree with your comment about the war. I also read the book by Thomas Hauser and I recently lent it to a friend. It is the finest book about Ali. The spite he showed against Patterson was surprising, but I can't recall the reason for it. Regarding the men he had in his corner, I recall reading somewhere that Dundee felt a bit uncomfortable with the religious side of things. There were many hangers-on and all of them got a big piece of Ali. When the Vietnam war was on I was in high school over here and I was approaching draft age. I was such a dope I wanted to be drafted. There was a change of government here in 1972 and they pulled our troops out before I got to the right age. Anyway, that was a very good post. There were many things about Ali's personal life and beliefs that I didn't like. In fact, ironically, I'm more in tune with Joe Frazier's outlook on life than Ali's. |
| 12/21/03 05:14:32 AM| Massimo| Rome||4|||10| Paul- Ali's spite against Patterson was caused by the fact that Patterson said that it was not right that a Muslim was champion and that he wanted to fight for Christianity against the Muslim word! Cheers (you taught me this word, thanks ).|
hanging on the head of an unsophisticated 20 year old without much of an education. I don't agree with many of the things Ali did outside the ring and I am an atheist without religion and no fear of hell. But in my early 20s I had none of his pressures, no fear of a God or an Alah, and I STILL managed to get myself into a truck full of trouble. I lost count of the number of street fights I got into and I am now ashamed of the fact that I am not ashamed of that fact. If RS thinks me insufferable now, you should have seen me then. So I think that all things considered Ali didn't do too badly outside the ring and he is a much better human being now than he was then. Certainly he is a much better human being than me, and probably most people. Joe Frazier is a wonderful human being as well, perhaps even better than Ali. Anyway, Massimo, now that you understand the meaning of 'cheers', what does 'your shout' mean? Cheers.

I eat spaghetti every day of my life, at least once a day! I almost couldn't imagine my life without spaghetti... I never got involved in street fights for 2 reasons: 1) I'm a very peaceful guy 2) I'm small and weak. It's hard to find a guy weaker than me! You played football also! Are you big? I'd be curious to know!

In reality, Ali was given credit for deepness of thought and action at the time of the Vietnam war, as well as in regards to racial issues that he really didn't deserve. He could barely read and write, not to mention the fact that he was not really much interested in or curious about things that didn't apply to him (the reason for the real -big- interest in Vietnam). Whether the war was just or not, it must have made parents here feel real good, watching Ali, with their sons hunkered down in the swamps over there somewhere. The Muslims used him to stay on the political scoreboard, he used them for credibility - a classic symbiotic relationship. Re Frazier and Manilla. Believe it or not, the scores were 8-4 after twelve. Knowledgeable boxing people had it even after 10. Looks like the Phillipines rolled out the cream of the crop to "get the job done," as Joe would say. Both were outstanding, though I had Joe ahead by half a hair after 14. Two of the top three greatest fighters of all time, no doubt.

BTW, re Frazier and Ali. I noticed something that both did, and I'm sure with people like Futch and Dundee watching them, I'm not the first. Ali telegraphed a ~lot~ of his punches. A ~lot~ of them! While he was very good at not winding up with them, his face changed markedly just before he threw one. In fact, I can't think of any other top fighter who kept less of a poker face than Ali. Not ~as~ much with a jab, but a real lot of the time with the others. This is one reason Frazier's bobs and weaves made Ali miss so often, and not as much when Joe's eyes were shut. Joe, with some amount of regularity, would drop his right when he threw a left. His face didn't change at all though. He also kept his gloves lower more of the time than most fighters with his style, but the right did drop lower yet when a left was thrown. While little kids can have swelling in the face from being hit by another just once, Frazier's susceptibility to edema was absurd. Even Cobb and Wepner, two punching bags if there ever were any, didn't swell up a tenth as much. It's a miracle that swelling only cost him one fight.

RS - a lot of knowledgeable people had Ali on top, too. Just depends on your interpretation of 'knowledgeable' and who is objective and who isn't. Not every disappointment can be explained by alleging fixes or corrupt judges. That's often the easy way out. The one thing you can't speculate on is the result in the record books. Out of the ring, Ali has a lot of stock phrases for situations he was in or questions he was asked. Especially now with his speech problems he uses these phrases with repetition. For instance, how many times you heard him say, "You ain't as dumb as you look", etc. Much of his early stuff seemed to have been rehearsed with Bundini, and then Howard Cossell led them from there. Massimo - I like spaghetti too. My weight fluctuates between 15.5 and 17 stone depending on the amount of exercise and swimming I do. I've got weights to use at home. I'm 6 foot tall. I love food too much and when others are 'shouting', I drink too much. Cheers.

| 12/21/03 05:11:19 PM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 |

There was never anyone, bar none, who bobbed and weaved as effectively as Frazier, also possibly the best inside fighter ever, or certainly one of a handful of elite. One thing I suspected was confirmed by Eddie Futch, via some research I've been doing. Joe certainly bobbed to evade punches, and as part of his rolling rhythm. Whether intended or not, I also saw it as being a little in the genre of the sleight of hand employed by magicians; it intensified ever more the appearance of aggression (which was real enough ~without~ the bobbing and weaving!). IOW, illusion to enhance, rather than replace reality. I also used to think Frazier used bobbing to invite Ali to throw an uppercut (to which Joe would respond with a left hook). Futch confirmed this. He said they had two strategies. One was to wait for Ali to throw his (substandard) right uppercut at Frazier's bob (which he sometimes exaggerated for this purpose), then throw the left. The other technique was to step in, let the uppercut graze his chest, then let the left hook fly. He also doubled up a lot, most often body to head. Ali was, as we know, as impervious to punches as a human can be, but if Joe could get him to block one, he'd double up to the head (how he knocked Ali down in the first fight). |

| 12/21/03 09:27:27 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

RS, it doesn't matter if a person's self interest is the reason he or she does something. For example, Rosa Parks, the black woman who refused to stand up or go to the back of the bus, did so because she had just worked a long, hard day and her feet were tired. This one self serving act sparked the bus boycott, one of the turning points in the civil rights movement here in America. That Ali didn't really care about things that didn't apply to him or were not in his best interest (not going in the army) is not of significance as he was the individual caught up in the middle of the social events of the times. Also, just because Ali was not good at reading and writing does not mean he wasn't intelligent. Verbal skill is also reflective as showing intelligence and Ali was a very skilled speaker. Your comment that Ali was not a deep thinker implies he is not intelligent. Ali was not well educated but he was and is very intelligent. In addition to this, often the most simple statement is the most profound and being good at reading and writing does not mean someone has the common sense to say something like, "Aint no Viet Cong ever called me nigger!" One more thing to add, Ali stood his ground and he showed courage for standing up for his beliefs by not running to Canada like a lot of draft dodging cowards did. If these other individuals really believed that the war was unjust, and they had the guts to stand up for what they believed in, then they should have risked going to prison, like Ali did. I would also like to point out that the Nation of Islam, AKA the Black Muslims, was and still is an obscure sect with racially bised views that Ali does not associate with anymore and this group does not represeent main stream Islam in any way, shape, or form. RS, you should have clarified you were speaking about this obscure sect and not Muslims in general. My own beliefs are Christian but I don't lump other religions into one big group. I believe that extremism in any form, regardless of the belief, is a true enemy of humanity. NOTE: RS, I DON'T THINK YOU ARE BEING AN EXTREMIST JUST BECAUSE YOU REFERRED TO MUSLIMS IN YOUR POST. IT JUST NEEDED CLARIFICATION. |

| 12/21/03 10:00:12 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA |
CALIFORNIA| RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | KENT and STEVE (the CURLY Q.LINK AND SHEMP of our fearless leaders club). Just watched the Howie Steindler gig on "America's most wanted" about his murder, I remember it well in DELANO CALIFORNIA (I was a sophomore in H.S.) Probably around 1977. My old welterweight buddy Gil King said Stiendler was a gruffy old guy, but he liked him when he worked out at the main street gym on 18th and Grand. I just wondered what Jerry Quarry thought about that whole thing. Too Bad we do not have Moe to convey. Funny how those old fight trainers did not have a whole lot of loyalty back in the day. Case in point, Forest Ward and I had a discussion on how Gil Clancy could work JQ's corner in '69 against Frazier then worked Mac Foster's corner vs Jerry a year later while Quarry had Chickie Ferrara among others then just 4 months later, Chickie was one of Ali's seconds on his come back vs Jerry. Speaking of Forrest he could be the honorary "JOHNSON" (USUALLY A "three stooges" Boss) in our Fearless leaders Club! TAKE CARE!

RS - you're getting neurotic and spooky. You've blamed fixed fights and corrupt judges. Now you've found a new culprit......a lump. Not any old lump, either. It's an edema. Can you dispel this image I am starting to get of you? When the other girls in kindergarten were playing with dolls, were you inside the amenities block ritualistically sticking needles into the hated Ali voodoo doll screaming incantations like, "Substandard uppercut", "concrete head", "fight fixer", "grimaces before throwing a punch", "beat Joe", etc. Head spinning 360 degrees on your shoulders. Wide eyes rolling back in your head. Green muck pouring out of your mouth. Just like that cute little girl in The Omen. Also, you posted that you've watched the Ali v Frazier number 3 fight "dozens" of times in "slow motion". The picture I'm starting to get is your poor old husband doing old the household chores while you sit hunched over the remote, coma-like and staring, in some dank, dark corner of the house for weeks on end watching Ali in slow motion, frame-by-frame. By now we're all starting to visualise Glen Close from Fatal Attraction. And then comes the revelation in your latest post that you've been "researching" all this other stuff about Ali. For christs sake, RS, other housewives are out buying presents for loved ones with Christmas only three days away, AND YOU'RE DOING RESEARCH SO THAT YOU CAN THROW EVEN MORE SHIT AT ALI. SPOOKKKYYY! I've never heard of anyone like you. I surrender. E-mail me a draft copy of whatever you want me to post - that Ali burned babies, that he robbed old ladies, that Eddie the Eagle would have bashed him up in a fair fight, whatever you want - and I'll put my name to it. Anything for your black belt nagging to stop. PLLllleasssssse stop it, RS. I beg of you. Cheers. (((((((((:| ALI / FRAZIER I'M TIRED OF HEARING ABOUT THEM, LET ME SAY THISALI HIT FRAZIER MORE IN THE FIRST FIGHT BUT FRAZIER GOT THE KNOCKDOWNAND LANDED THE HARDER PUNCHES, WINNER FRAZIER, THE OTHER 2 FIGHTS ALIHANDS DOWN, BEAT FRAZIER TO A PULP IN FIGHT 3, JOE SO STUPID THAT HE STATEDONCE THAT "ALL YOU HAVE TO DO IS LOOK AT THE FILM AND YOU KNOW WHO WONALL OF THE FIGHTS , MEANING HIMSELF!!! FRAZIER IS OUT TO LUNCH, OVERRATED WHEN IT COMES TO THE ALL TIME GReATS, HIS LEFT HOOK WOULD MEAN NOTHINGON TODAY'S FIGHTERS, I KNOW PEOPLE WILL DISAGREE, STOP LIVING IN THE PAST,

Forest, it is true that other war protesters didn't have the means and lawyers to drag their case out but the threat of Ali going to prison was very real. But fighting for what one believes in doesn't always mean picking up a gun. It can mean risking going to prison, which a lot war protesters didn't do. There are some who did go to jail for refusing being drafted into the military and whether or not I agree that they were right for doing so, I respect them for standing up for what they believe in. Personally, I likely would have gone into the military but who's to say as I was too young when the Vietnam war was going on and I never had to face that decision, one way or the other.

I didn't know Rosa Parks' protest was organized. It still doesn't change the significance of what she did. I can understand why back in the sixties if black people didn't want to fight for a country that always talked about being for freedom while at the same time denying them a lot of basic freedoms.Even here in the Los Angeles area, blacks were not allowed to be in certain areas. My mother commented that as a little girl, she and her friends used to like sitting in the balcony at a movie theater, where all of the black people sat and she used to think it was lucky that these people got to sit up high. She didn't realize until later they were not allowed to sit down below. I HOPE THIS TALK OF RACE DOESN'T BREAK OUT INTO NAME CALLING AGAIN. I WILL ANSWER COMMENTS DIRECTED MY WAY REGARDING THIS ISSUE FOR A SHORT TIME BUT NOT FOR LONG.

Ali and Foreman both received IQ scores in the 70s via the military. All one need do is listen to either one to know that both are extremely bright men. When you could understand Ali, that is - one rather side note on that was one time when he was on, they had to close caption what he was saying on the screen. Their performance in the ring is further indication of their high functioning brains, as it is with any top athlete. However, IQ tests do have an educational and cultural bias, and both men were woefully lacking in both. Ali was basically a man-child, wondrous about elementary things, fearful of others on a childish level. He was afraid to go into the military for many reasons. My point was not an overlay or indictment of civil rights, but rather to dispel the notion of Ali as a serious and mystic thinker who "stood up for his beliefs" (also widely held to be deeply rooted), the source of much of his aura then in the radical 60s, more so today, now that legend has had a chance to hone the edge. I think it's also called being a phony! :-)

That was the Exorcist, BTW, not the Omen. Thanks for another entertaining rant though - beats the heck out of your "boxing posts!" :-) Anyway, I won't be able to play with you much longer because I have lots of work to do before Christmas. But that shouldn't affect you as I'm sure practice has taught you lots of ways to play with yourself ever since those kindergarten days when all the other kids were forbidden from playing with you and your voodoo doll of Ali the despised brainless moron. Just don't become neurotic about playing with yourself, as you have about Muhammad. Koo Koo - good to hear from you. Cheers. ({(((

|12/22/03 06:38:16 AM|Paul|Sydney, Australia||P1Mls4@aol.com|||10|RS - on a serious note. In my posts on Frazier I have always confined myself to comments about his boxing ability and I deliberately never criticised him as a person (I never wanted to anyway - I consider him a fine human being). I did so hoping that you might respond in kind towards Ali who, as you obviously know, has a medical condition that in the tiny minds of some exposes him to ridicule. I was therefore shocked that, in your latest post, you called him a phoney and sneered at the fact that his speech became so affected by his medical condition that in an interview on television they needed cards to inform the viewers what he was saying. That was an insensitive comment to make, especially on a web site founded in the memory of another great fighter afflicted with a condition similar to Ali's. I dare say that in the advanced stages of that illness, too, his speech would have been difficult to understand and I at least have some inkling as to the difficulties his family endured dealing with that shocking reality. I have a child nephew who got brain damage from a botched medical procedure. His speech is effected, just like Ali's. Medical impairments like that are nothing to be sneered at, especially by an intelligent person with all of her faculties. If you can't keep your comments about Ali within the bounds of common decency, then let's take Koo Koo's suggestion and move onto something else. Ali's medical condition shouldn't impinge on the perception of his ability as a fighter. In some posts about you I said some things that were deliberately insulting. If that provoked you into responding by ridiculing someone with a disability, then I went too far and I apologise to you. But please don't ridicule medical impairments again, even if it does involve a fighter you obviously dislike. Thanks.

|12/22/03 10:35:11 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|P - I originally thought you were just a wimpy flamer, but you truly embody a great deal of unresolved hate which you project into others, attacking it there where it's safe to do so. Combine that with a childish and blind idolatry for Muhammad Ali, and...well, the result is obvious. And, of course, there's our history in other places, I imagine, where no doubt you didn't fare too well in "discussion." I haven't been sucked into replying to someone like you in quite a while, but I too am very busy with Christmas preparations. I'll only reply to two items of your general foolishness, before jettisoning you into Internet space:- As far as I know, Jerry Quarry did ~not~ have Parkinson's disease, though the cause of the problems of both had the same root. I said that I thought it was very sad that they had to close caption Ali's words when he talked. And you suggested I was making fun of him? Once more, you reflect your own misery and unhappiness. - While I've observed some flaws of Ali's myself, everyone knows they're there, and some of my material was via Eddie Futch ("substandard jab," and the strategy of bobbing to set up the left hook were both discussed). Just type his name into Google. You can reply if you wish, but it'll be for naught. |

|12/22/03 10:40:05 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com|||10|From message to Kent:- one rather side note on that was one time when he was on, they had to close caption what he was saying on the screen.This contains a typo. The word, "side" should have been "sad," though this should be self explanatory in context. I've said this same thing twice before. |
As a youngster, I idolized Ali, and I still think he was the greatest heavyweight champion of them all---at the very least, in the top 3. I loved that he played the part of the villain with the bragging and poetry---he made it interesting and also made tons of money for himself and his contemporaries. Socially, he was a complex personality with faults (everyone has them) and also very good traits. I won't excuse the bad things he might have done, but I will say he also had a generous side and did a lot of good things for people of all backgrounds. I agree that maybe in hindsight, he's being made out as too much of a Saint and his shortcomings are glossed over, especially by the movie. But on the other hand, keep in mind that Ali represented something of great importance to many thousands (if not millions) of people around the world---and I'm not talking about winning some boxing matches---he was a guy who stood up to the establishment at a time when doing so made you larger than life. And yes, a couple pages back, I posted about how truly great our men and women in the military are, and how grateful I am for their service. And yes, now I'm posting about how great Ali was for not stepping forward when he was drafted. People, it was a different time, with different circumstances. Does this make Ali right? No, but it explains why he's held up as a hero by so many people for what he said and for what he did (or didn't do). When Ali passes, the tributes will be monumental. It will be headline news, not a story in the middle of the broadcast. He's bigger than boxing. Even now, over thirty years past his prime as an athlete and over 20 years since he's boxed or held a title, he's one of the most recognizable faces on the planet. I'll close by saying this: I think Ali has handled the Parkinsons with a courage and grace that makes him more impressive to me now than when he was winning titles as the world's greatest boxer.

Jerry Quarry's condition was similar to Alzheimer's disease. He progressively lost his short term memory and motor skills but as far as I know, he didn't have the shakes that are common to Parkinson's patients.

I don't see why we can't honor Ali and Frazier both as being brave and great fighters. It seems to be a prevailing theme around here that appears from time to time and it was a major source of conflict at the old Joe Frazier's gym site. Ali and Frazier have buried the hatchet, so why can't the fans of both do the same? Koo Koo, why do you say DKS is back here? He hasn't posted in over two years. Who are you saying DKS is?
Frazier site is no longer going? I haven't been able to find anything, other than Marvis's site, which deals more with Jacqui and Joe's lawsuit.Parkinsonian -symptoms-, ie those that are like Parkinson's disease (but isn't) isn't that uncommon among fighters, but it's only a coincidental similarity. Parkinson's, even in non-boxers, mimics the condition caused by too many blows to the head. Ali just happened to be one of those in whom the dopamine producing center of his brain was destroyed by the hammers of Mars.Why either happens more in one fighter than another is one of those many yet-to-be-solved mysteries by our doctors (spelled "G-O-D," by them anyway).Hey Forest, since we are not limiting this discussion to boxing any longer, I take exception to your statement, "Yup, in the late 60's, Ali stood up for what he believed in, just like Jane Fonda stood up for what she believed in. Do you not believe that communism during the sixties and seventies was a threat to our way of life? I always thought, if we go on with the Ali myth of him being a social hero, we would get to the green dream, Vietnam. Ali was exploited by his fringe, extremist religions group. Ali was not concerned with , nor did he understand, the political ramifications of his actions. If you really believe "Hanoi Jane" was correct in posing on a 37mm anti aircraft gun in Hanoi, North Vietnam while our pilots where being shot down, then I will respectfully disagree. |Yup ?!? Wimpy ?!? I already said this, I have to burn my dictionary...Last night I have seen a synthesis of Cooper-Folley 1 (October 1958) on ESPN. Interesting fight! I don't know why Bonavena got more credit for his career than Folley, Zora was still better than him !Steve, I was being sarcastic. If I had my way Jane Fonda would be charged and brought to trial for Treason. Frankly, I despise her.Steve, the point I was trying to make is, that the Ali of the middle to late 1960's; was not some wise athlete/stateman with wisdom and courage. Standing up to the US government, as the myth makers portray him. Frankly, he was a duped parrot, for Elijah Muhammad and that sect he ran with his sons. Remember what he did to Patterson in 1965; and Terrell in 1967, it was despicable. Who gave him the orders to do that, Elijah, or maybe his son Herbert? Ali's lawyers claimed he was a Conscientious Objector. They further stated that he could not fight in any war unless directed by Elijah. Torture your black "brothers" in the ring, that is okay. But, outside the ring your as peaceful as a Quaker, unless told otherwise by Elijah, father of Herbert. Ali was a class A hypocrite regarding the draft, and quite a few other things in his life. Steve, I an grateful to you for pointing out the confusion about my remarks. Once again, I despise Fonda. And, I have no problem admitting that it would not upset me to see her die a slow and painful death. She is a diabolical person. |Hey RS - can I make a quick suggestion before I go on holidays without you biting my head off? Unemployment seems to be feeding your paranoia, and sitting around all day surfing the web is only making it worse. Why not push the keyboard away and go outside and smell the roses and enjoy some sun? Who knows, if you drop that know-all pretence, you might even get some friends. But make yourself presentable first. Shave the legs and clip those armpits. Wash that matted mange, get some lice treatment and stop scratching. Scrub the nicotine off those fingers and stop biting them nails. Wear a long sleeved shirt to hide that Smokin' Joe tattoo. Definitely try some exercise. You'll feel better about yourself when shoppers stop averting their eyes and sniggering as you push that overloaded trolley down the sweets aisle. Consider coming to terms with your sexuality (yes, we all guessed). Getting some feminine interests might help too. I'm sure they'll let you be the 'alpha' female (so to speak). Anger management therapy is something else to think about. Anyway, off with the computer and to the airport holiday-bound. Happy Christmas to all, and I hope the New Year brings prosperity and good health. Bye for now.

Talk about being duped, Jane Fonda was a naive young woman when she pulled that stunt in Vietnam. She was duped by anti-American propaganda and I have heard she now regrets her actions. Nevertheless, at the time she was a legal adult and she should have been tried for treason. If posing with one of the very guns that was killing American servicemen is not giving aid and comfort to the enemy, than I don't know what is. Yes, the Nation of Islam used Ali for its own purposes but like I said in an earlier post, I understand why blacks of that time wouldn't want to fight for a country that talks about being for freedom and than denies them that very freedom. The comment made by Ali, "aint no vietcog ever called me nigger" makes sense in the context of the times.

Saying that I understand why blacks wouldn't have wanted to fight is not the same as saying I wouldn't have fought in that war. I am not black and even though some of my Native American ancestors were treated disgracefully, I am also white and I have never faced any kind of out and out racial biased treatment personally.

I have never heard of Jane Fonda making apology for her actions during the Viet Nam war. If she was to make an apology, that would require her to admit that she was wrong; and she has never done that. She was not a "young" woman when she made those statements. She was damn near 30 or very close to it. The soldiers who fought in Viet Nam were young persons they were teenagers or in their early 20's. She went to Vassar college. She was educated and priviledged She knew very well what she was doing. She is the type of person who in the year 2003 will tell you that Fidel Casto is a good man, and not a ruthless dictator. Tell that to the political prisoner rotting in the Cuban jails for decades

I suppose some of the people on this site would have liked to see her box. Me I would push her in front of a train.

Some good comments on Frazier-Ali. Sorry Kookoo, two of their fights are among the top five heavyweight fights of All-Time, have any of your muscleheads of today staged anything approaching their fights? No, not even close. Boxing fans will discuss Frazier-Ali in the next century. Ali had the big points lead because of his reach and jab. Frazier, like Marciano, lost a lot of points but won a lot of fights. That's because his 10-9s usually hurt more than the other guy's 10-9 round. Pointwise, he wasn't in control of Jerry in their first fight until round five, anyone watching could tell you it was practically over by then. Ali did eat some punches versus Foreman, good point, credit to Ali the fighter for handling George when that happened. I have never been an Ali fan, because of what he did to Frazier ( their hatchet is not buried, trust me ), for his plasticity, his overt racism and even anti-christian statements. In showbusiness, everybody uses and everybody gets used, the key is to get the benefit of both sides as much as possible. Ali clearly came out way on the plus side of it, Frazier, who was simply a fighter and not very self-promotional, did not. Joe, like Larry Holmes, came across as a very good blue-collar guy, down to earth, approachable the way Jerry was, I'm still a fan. Ali, meanwhile, ran a circus, and sometimes he had to let it run him. I give him major credit for his politics regarding Vietnam and he used his fame to impact America, which, agree/disagree with his views, is commendable. While I will never be a fan of his, he is the best boxer I've ever seen, even ahead of Leonard, Hearns, De La Hoya or Jones in their smaller classes. He took fights to exotic venues and made the matches spectacles. I have to give him his fair credit as a legendary figure in sports history, and again, I'm not a fan of his.
Too much personal sniping here guys, let's agree to disagree in this season of peace, most everyone here has contributed something worth reading, if we all agreed all the time it wouldn't be much of a discussion, would it? For Cleveland readers and others in the NFL-know, I've got to mention the recent passing of former Browns legend Otto Graham: 10 years 10 CHAMPIONSHIP GAMES, 7 Titles, oh yeah he starred in the NBA too, may have been better than another Browns legend, Jim Brown. Happy Holidays. |

Even people who were opposed to the war grudgingly acknowledge that Fonda was indirectly responsible for deaths. She's was/is nothing more than a "look at me, look at me" grandstander with the depth of a mud puddle. It wasn't about the war. It was about her. |

Massimo -When someone is "wimpy," they're foolish, a crybaby, a sissy, ineffectual, socially and usually physically clumsy, unpopular. A person can be some of those things and not necessarily be a wimp, but a wimp is all of them, sometimes more.|

Thanks for the kind English lesson! As a physicist I knew what WIMP (Weakly Interacting Massive Particles) but this didn't help me to understand the other meaning. Merry Christmas to everybody, especially to Evren who lost his father recently. Merry Christman to the n.1 Massimo's fan Kookoo also! |

FOREST: Jane Fonda is a traitor, pure and simple. She NEVER apologized for what she did, she gave some bs, half-ass comment such as if she offended people she was sorry, but not for what she did or said. I will never forget the sight of her sitting on a VC anti-aircraft gun battery and grinning. Don't get me wrong, it is her right as an American to protest the war and she is entitled to her opinion. but there is a line between protest and traitor. And I also think that Ramsey Clark has crossed than line more than once. I did not mean to get political on a boxing site, but I really detest that woman. |

One other point on Ali avoiding service in Vietnam: He was practically "guaranteed" by the military powers that were, that he would not in any circumstance face front line fighting or even hostile areas. There was every reason to believe that he might stay stateside for his stint, or that if sent to Vietnam, he would be in the safest possible areas and give exhibitions or be a source of a morale boost to the troops. I think Ali was wrong for not going, but that's just my opinion. Millions of Americans stood with Ali as he objected. But really, my point is that it wasn't fear of death or lack of courage that prompted Ali's refusal to go, because he would have been safe and he knew it. It was pure and simple that he just didn't believe in the cause or even people that were pushing the cause and he wasn't alone in his beliefs. On Frazier: I think he should have mellowed out after the Thrilla. To this day, I watch the video of the fight and the post-fight comments. Ali was very complimentary to Frazier, calling him the "Joe Frazier: The greatest next to me." | as a "minster" in the sect, that Macolm deserves to be killed, prior to Malcolms murder. And its core belief's are the same today as when Ali was a member in the 60's. For the record Ali is no longer a member of the sect.One more question about Ali. Am I the only person on this site who remembers Ali imitating punch drunk fighters. He would sometimes press his nose in with one hand, thereby giving the image of a flat punched in nose. With the other hand he push his ear out thereby giving the image of having a cauliflower ear. And then he would start speaking with slurred speach. Was this kind, was this sensitive? Making fun of formers boxers who took too many punchers. How many times would he do this for cheap laughs.Ali would always claim it would never happen to him. Well, it did happen to him. Am I sorry it happened to him? Yes!!! But, I can't stomach the the way history is being rewritten regarding Ali. Was he a great fighter? Yes. Was he entertaining? Yes? Was he a statesman? No!! Was he a kind benevolent person? Nope, he could be wicked and mean while trying to promote his own agenda.Does anyone on this site remember when President Carter sent Ali to Africa as a pseudo diplomat? The African nations were insulted. They asked how can the President of the United States demean our people and our goverment sending a prizefighter to our nation as a diplomat. Ali made a fool out of himself, and Carter for selecting him. The trip was cut short and he was sent back to the USA. Ali was a great fighter and a personality; no more no less.In the 60's and the 70's, Ali did not demonstrate much sincerity, or depth. Did he change throughout the 80's and the 90's and right up to this very day? Yes!! But, it's funny illness and injury always have a way of humbling people.Angelo, I don't dislike Ali as a person or an athlete. What I dislike, are his fan who either ignore or deny his action in the 60's or 70's. Angelo, I stand by every point I made in my last post. It is not me who is in denial about Ali. But his fans who cannot be objective, and are stuck in a child like awe of the boxer. The guy was a class A hypocrite.

My husband remembers Ali mocking punchy fighters. Also, the laughable trip to Africa. Ali was told he wouldn't be around hostile action in Vietnam, but didn't believe it. He was fed all kinds of scare scenarios by the Muslims who wanted to control him, and believed them. I don't see Ali as having the depth to opt out of the war for the reasons he gave, and know what it really meant. He could do nice things, and he could be cruel and sadistic. He also seemed to enjoy being cruel so much more. The cohabitation of both tends to negate the former. Could he have been told how bad it was to carry and torture inferior fighters? What to say re the war, in order to look good? Other little PR moves? Whoever told him to denigrate Frazier, and emphasize black stereotypes was a real genius, or maybe the real Ali was coming out. Once more, when such radical opposing behaviors both present themselves, you're usually right to look to the dark side as the real person. Star-struck America, and really the whole world is so desperate for idols, custom-made ones yet to whom they assign God-like qualities, that Ali's legend will only grow.

I don't know which is worse - waay back, olden times, when record keeping was shoddy or non-existent, or today, when it's slick and smooth, and history is edited and reshaped, fictionalized even, till it becomes sufficiently legendary or fulfills some agenda.

Ali is a paradox---but I'd stop short of calling him a Class A hypocrite. I'm sure that 25 years ago, when I was younger and more in awe of him as an idol and an athlete, I would find no fault with Ali and would be in the total denial you talk about. Now, I can stand back and agree with you on some of your assertions. Ali made some mistakes and did exhibit some hypocrisy at times---He's not "Saint Muhammad" by any means. I still regard him as a great boxer and sometimes great man who in a lot of ways, changed pro sports. He and Cosell weren't just in the right place at the right time---they MADE it the right place at the right time.

One thing they CAN'T change about history is the films (Well, on second thought, they probably can do that too!). But when you watch Ali and Frazier "get it on" you see what heavy boxing used to be! The tape doesn't lie: These guys put it on the line like very few fighters today ever will. It was a different time---and it makes me laugh when I read the posts claiming that Tyson would be so scary to someone like Joe Frazier. Tyson couldn't gut it out against Holyfield.

FOREMAN---OLD FOREMAN---gutted it out against Holyfield and damn near beat him.

HOLMES---OLD RETIRED HOLMES---gutted it out against Holyfield and took him the distance. Put Tyson in with one of the in-prime 70's heavies and provided the fight went more than a few rounds, he'd lose the battle of the wills.

Lots of times, people fall into the "good old days" syndrome, a trap where things from the past gain an aura and take on qualities they really didn't have when they were actually happening. However, 70s boxing isn't that way - top champions for any age, top tenners all, with contenders who would have been champions in many other eras. Every single champ & contender had the guts and fighting heart of a timber wolf, did in fact, raise the bar in that regard. Sometimes too, people will do the reverse, and devalue past athletes and events in comparison to the star of the present. I like Evander Holyfield immensely, and think he was a great champion. Tyson had his time as well, and was a devastating boxer. However, what two "old men" did with them indicates that the going might have been considerably rockier yet, had Evander and Iron Mike been transported by time machine back to the 70s!

| 12/24/03 03:36:20 PM | Andy | LA | Andyrockster@aol.com | 3 | Anyone of you guys know that Clay registered for the army when he was 18. He later became a moslem. When Ali refused to be drafted he said "I was a christian then and knew nothing about islam and had I been drafted then I would have gone." Was Ali the only black boxer to be drafted. Wasn't he the only one who wasn't scene as compliant. Did any of the other blacks express a different view to the white establishment. Cant it be possible that Ali was only drafted because of his different religious or war belief. Wouldn't you guys get upset if the govt. drafted you 'cause of your religion or for not being compliance. If you guys were very keen on a religion wouldn't you do something the cardinal sayed to do. Maybe Ali wasn't being brave, maybe he was just indignant at being picked for being outspoken when none of the other boxing blacks were picked. Also, something else to think about. If Frazier had 3 years off in his prime before the first Ali fight just like Ali had them off, would he have won? |

| 12/24/03 03:51:49 PM | Andy | LA | Andyrockster@aol.com | 4 | One moore thing. Ali used religion as his excuse to not being drafted. That was in '67. Almost 40 years on his still a moslem. Doesnt that show that he was sincere. Im argueng with my pals reading this that some of you guys just dont like ali 'cause he waasn't a compliant nigger. Youd like him better had he shut his mouth and sayd the same things as you about the war and religion. He was diferent and you dont like that. He should have been a white nigger like Sonny and Joe. |

| 12/24/03 05:57:01 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Andy, I understand why you support Ali but why pick on Sonny Liston and Joe Frazier as being so called "white niggers?" Sonny had some questionable character traits, criminal activity and mob connections but what does this have to do with "how black he was?" As far as Joe Frazier is concerned, he is a fine man, a true warrior in every sense of the word. I am assuming you are a black man yourself and you accuse some of the people here of not liking Ali because he didn't act and believe like they do. You then put down Joe for not believing and acting like you do. This is not fair to Joe. Realize, I disagree with a lot of the negative talk that has been directed at Ali recently and have and never have had a desire for any group of people to be compliant (in this context subserviant)with anything, or anybody. People should only be true to themselves. Of course, all people should obey laws that are set up for the common good of all, but we are not talking about this here. Joe Frazier is a fine man and he shouldn't have to answer to anyone like you about how black he is. This kind of talk against Joe is very tiresome and it should be given a rest, once and for all! It is total BS! Andy, I can respect Ali and respect Frazier at the same time and I have always done so! |

| 12/24/03 09:17:26 PM | Charles Anderson | ark | ctjjandfam@aol.com | 10 | how did jerry stay out of the armed forces? |

| 12/24/03 11:08:40 PM | Andy | LA | Andyrockster@aol.com | 3 | U guys dont get it. Were not saying that Frazier was a white nigger. Thats crap. But lots of white folk thought of Joe as a white nigger. He wasnt a noisy, troublemaking black like Ali. So lots of white people took Joes side and look at whoe is being posted here. That bull lesbean with the make believe husband all she ever does is throw crap at Ali every day. Never stops, Hates him. Ali was the only one in his day outa all those black boxers who got the drafted. All because he was noisy. Had he just shut up like Joe then no problem. Just cause he didnt wag the red white and blue flag like Foreman at the olympics. Just cause he didnt have connects to the white gangsters like Sonny. Just cause he wasnt compliance to whites. The white establishment made an example of him. Im gonna count the number of posts roadscoleratte has done and tally up how many is slagging at Ali. Its alright to say anything bout Ali but nothing bout Joe. Anyways none of my questions been answered. Guess this sites only good for ripping reputations down and belittling people like Ali. Some folk here think it funny that he got punchdrunk. Im outta here fore i catch sumthing.

As some of you may know, the Professional Boxing Amendments Act of 2003 did not pass the U.S. Congress this year. To those of you who did express your support for its passage, thank you. Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to all of you!!!

ANDY, WE WHITE PEOPLE DON'T CONSIDER FRAZIER WHITE IN ANY SHAPE OR FORM, MANY BLACKS DUG ALI BECAUSE HE DISRESPECTED WHITEY AND GOT AWAY WITH IT, FROM WHAT I UNDERSTAND ALI IS 1 SIXTHTEENTH WHITE HE HATES THAT PART OF HIMSELF IF YOUR BLACK YOU CAN BE RACIST AND NOBODY SAYS SHI. BUT IF YOUR WHITE YOU WILL EVAPORATE, BLACKS ALWAYS WILL BE THEIR OWN WORST ENEMYS, BLAME WHITEY, THATS THE STANDARD PLAN FOREVER!

Hey everyone, Merry Christmas to all you fascinating, diverse, great fun people on this site! A very Merry Christmas to the Quarry Family! I can't begin to tell you how much I respect your family! An especially Merry Christmas to Evren, I hope you don't think we dislike you because of your faith. Also a very Merry Christmas to THE STOOGES, JIMMY DORSEY, KENT, AND MR. JAMES QUARRY. Merry Christmas to Paul from DOWN UNDER, Forrest, Rhoadscholarette, Kookoo Clock, Angelo, Bob, and Evan B.

Hey Andy, I was gonna get of with a simple Merry Christmas. I gotta tell you, though, I can't imagine anyone in his right mind calling Joe Frazeir a "white nigger", to his face. Joe Frazier was a Mans, Man! He shouldn't be defined by racists, black or white, in the context of his contrast with Ali.

Hey everyone, Merry Christmas to all you fascinating, diverse, great fun people on this site! A very Merry Christmas to the Quarry Family! I can't begin to tell you how much I respect your family! An especially Merry Christmas to Evren, I hope you don't think we dislike you because of your faith. Also a very Merry Christmas to THE STOOGES, JIMMY DORSEY, KENT, AND MR. JAMES QUARRY. Merry Christmas to Paul from DOWN UNDER, Forrest, Rhoadscholarette, Kookoo Clock, Angelo, Bob, and Evan B.

Hey Andy, I was gonna get of with a simple Merry Christmas. I gotta tell you, though, I can't imagine anyone in his right mind calling Joe Frazeir a "white nigger", to his face. Joe Frazier was a Mans, Man! He shouldn't be defined by racists, black or white, in the context of his contrast with Ali.

Hey Massimo, you crazy Italian fool, Merry Cristmas, or whatever holiday your allowed to celibrate in your socialist country.

Merry Christmas to all of the regulars who post here, and to everyone else also! May you all have a safe and happy holiday season!

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO THE QUARRY FAMILY, all of the regulars who post here, and to everyone else also! May you all have a safe and happy holiday season!

MERRY CHRISTMAS SHEMP (STEVE) CURLY Q. (KENT) FOREST WARD, PAUL, ROAD, KOO KOO, GERALD, MASSIMO, AND EVERYONE ELSE ON THIS GREAT SITE. BEST "FITE SITE" ON THE WEB, BUT I COULD BE A LITTLE BIASED ON THAT ONE, I HAVE TO THROW ONE IN FOR ALL AGAINST JERRY AND HIS QUOTES ON THE QUARRY WOMEN, HE WAS SIMPLY COMPLIMENTING THEM THATS ALL, TOLD JERRY'S WIFE HE DID NOT SEE HOW JERRY GOT ANY TRAINING DONE ETC. TOLD JERRY'S MOM SHE WAS YOUNG LOOKING NOTHING NODDY BUT NICE, I THINK HE WAS JUST BEING CHARMING UNLIKE KEN NORTON AND HIS QUIPS IN 75'. WHOM HE MADE COMMENTS TO EITHER ONE OF JERRY'S SISTERS OR 2ND WIFE I'M NOT SURE, AND IS REALLY JUST WATER UNDER THE BRIDGE ANYWAY.

A very Merry Christmas to all of you too - hope Santa was good to you! Re Sonia's message: husband and I were talking along those lines today. As the years go by, it's too bad that holiday times have to be so bittersweet - those here, but those not here any longer too.

Merry Christmas, guys... Jimmy D. pretty well sums up the Ali thing with Jerry, it was never insults or anything derogatory, as some have curiously thought. He charmed them, or more importantly, used them to charm Jerry, which was my point: He knew Jerry was a fan, and took him out of the mindset Jerry needed for that fight, to some degree at least, by playing on that fact. Joe Frazier he totally enraged, by asserting that Joe was an Uncle...
Tom for not acting out in the activist late 1960's, as well as dehumanizing him to a horrible degree. Kent if you can respect someone who would use his fame for such a purpose, you have your right to. I certainly have the right not to. Joe was caught in the shadow of both Ali and Jerry when he fought them, Ali's tremendous fame and politics, and Jerry's fervor created by his becoming the great White Hope of his time. Joe never had the fans or media appeal of either of those men, but proved to be a courageous fighter and a very good guy when given his chance. What more can be asked? I'll always be a Frazier fan, I'll never be an Ali fan, though I am cognizant that Ali was an unbelievably great fighter and one of the most compelling personalities of the century... I cannot comprehend the mindset that would call Joe a white n---, I think those were just anti-Ali guys, I got some curious looks when I rooted for him because he was black and I'm not, I never let that get in the way of my being able to see that he was a good guy and a hell of a fighter. A great many blacks and whites have been able to see good in each other since those days, one of the best things sports have contributed to America.

Steve-

Our country is not a socialist one, it's a free, great and beautiful country! Merry Christmas to all of you on this site, and if someone of you will get married in these days... Merry married Christmas! Merry Christmas to Shaquille O'Neal, I don't dare to imagine how much he is gonna eat... Merry Christmas to the great Paul from Australia and to my sweet and kind English teacher Roadscholarette too.

Gerry, some of the reasons I respect Ali as a person are because he showed a lot of courage in the ring. The man has a lot of heart. Also, although I realize the Nation of Islam did use Ali for their own self serving purposes, I believe the threat of his going to jail was very real as the NOI was extremely unpopular with most of America and I don't think he got a break from going to jail by being associated with them. I think the mainstream establishment tried to stick it to him because of this association. Originally, the government said he didn't score high enough on the written test for the armed services to be drafted and then they reclassified his status, why?

Also, his religious beliefs were not just a sham because as someone pointed out, he was a muslim back then and although he is more in the mainstream now, he is still a muslim today.

It could very well have been that Ali, back in the sixties, feared the NOI more than he did the government, so he went along with their plans. after all, when Malcolm X saw the truth, that there is good in all groups of people, after praying with all kinds of people in the middle east, including white people, he was killed when he saw talked about this truth.

Was Ali perfect, by no means and he did do and say some hurtful things in the past but people can change and I respect him for that reason also. If he really didn't believe in the NOI rhetoric that whites are inherently evil and he didn't stand up against them like Malcolm did, I understand this as the NOI may have tried to kill him as well. I do know he doesn't spew such nonsense now and he hasn't done so for many years.

Trash talk in sports is ferocious. Most players/participants wisely shed it, like water off a duck's back. There's an old saying, "Those who the gods would destroy, they first make angry." That's really true - make a person lose their cool, and they usually don't do as well. Except for Joe Frazier. In some people, pressure of any kind fans the fire, and they use the energy to focus further. In truth, he probably did better. Both men were unbelievably tough, but they seemed to go that extra mile against each other. We know where Joe's fire came from. I wonder where Ali's did? He'd denigrate Joe as a Tomming idiot and an ape (none true), yet seemed endlessly fascinated by him.
fully grasped the theater part of sports. He seemed slightly puzzled at times that he didn't have the charisma Ali did. What he didn't realize was that he was getting all due respect from the fan. The Ali circus brought in people who didn't ordinarily pay that much attention to boxing. He borrowed his tricks from many other people, but he pulled them off well. He was a true Narcissist, perfectly suited for the role, but what was interesting was that he was always winking at us all! Joe understood Jerry's appeal, I think. He himself said, "Jerry's a tough fighter with a boy next door face, and an engaging manner." I think he also realized that the novelty of being white (and good) brought in the curious, but among serious boxing fans, I'm sure Jerry had black fans, just as Joe and Ali had white ones.

Say, I heard Stallone is pushing hard for Rocky 6. I liked the Rocky movies (except for five), even though we know we had to suspend disbelief to a degree at times. However, I wonder what he'll do for six? He's still in shape, and actors portray roles as younger men than they actually are all the time. The fact is though, he's still in his mid-50s. Say he plays Balboa as a mid-40s fighter. Rocky 1 was based loosely on the Ali-Wepner fight, so I wonder if six would be based on a boxer in his forties who comes back and takes the title? Not that anyone's ever done that! :-) George Foreman could play Don King! If Stallone wants me as his challenger in Rocky 6 I'm ready to kick his ass and to gain the money! He is the ITALIAN STALLON but he is not really Italian! If he is Italian then I'm American!

If Stallone wants me as his challenger in Rocky 6 I'm ready to kick his ass and to gain the money! He is the ITALIAN STALLON but he is not really Italian! If he is Italian then I'm American!

My God, ANDY from LA, why don't you get a dictionary?!!!?? And, a Merry Christmas, to you, Max Hord, from FLA.

Special thanks go out to Mr. George Otto for all of his hard work on behalf of TJQF. Although it is a disappointment that the latest bill to reform boxing failed to pass the United States congress, I am sure it hasn't seen its last days and hopefully we can reintroduce it again in 2004. Mr. Otto's hard work reminds me that there is something much more important involved here than our sometimes petty squabbling about issues on this letter's page and it is because of his work that we even have this letter page. Mr. Otto gives up his own time to carry on Jerry's and Mr. Jimmy's legacy of trying to make boxing better for future fighters. My hat is off to you Mr. Otto for a job well done!

For those of you that don't know, Mr. Otto and our own James Quarry (Mr. Jimmy) were instrumental in passing three key pieces of boxing reform bills in the U.S. congresses, including the Muahmmad Ali Boxing Reform Act of 2000.

Mr. Kent--Thank you for your kind words. Despite what occurred in 2003, other legislative developments will occur in 2004, and TJQF will be there to participate in the legislative process!! Happy New Year to all!!

Hey guys hope every one had a nice Christmas. Im sitting here watching an old tape of Pinklon Thomas vs Mike Weaver what a fight. Any way i was sitting thinking of a few things about the 80's heavies vs the 90's and 00's heavies and came up with a few fights as i try to play match maker with the variety of champs from that period with a few fantasy match ups let me know what you guys may think and which way youthink these fights would have went. Larry Holmes (1981) vs Lennox Lewis Mike Tyson (1987) vs Evander Holyfield
(1983) vs Hasim Rahman
Pinklon Thomas  (1985) vs John Ruiz
Mike Weaver
(1983) vs Oliver McCall
Michael Dokes  (1982) vs Chris Byrds
Gerrie Coetzee  (1982) vs James Buster Douglas Greg Page  (1983) vs Frank Bruno Tony Tubbs  (1984) vs Bruce Seldon
Riddick Bowe
Trevor Berbick  (1986) vs Michael Moorer

Im maybe forgetting a few but this was the card i came up with was just wondering what everyone thought.

| 12/29/03 01:17:46 AM | u.s.arun | india | | usarunraavan@yahoo.co.in | | | | 2 | i like to have your edition .at times so send it to me in address 3/430,gandhi puram
 .br> gandhi nagar (p.o) udumalpet-642154. | 12/29/03 10:16:31 AM | Massimo | Rome | | 4 | | | | 10 | Sean-- Pinkon Thomas would have beaten John Ruiz easily ! Last night I have seen on ESPN Classic Joe Louis-Tommy Farr and I can say that Farr gave Louis a very close fight ! Sometimes I think that Louis is a little overrated... Billy Conn almost whipped his ass in the first fight, Schmeling knocked him out, Tommy Farr ( a guy with 30 losses in his record) gave him a very close fight and, dulcis in fundo, Walcott knocked down him 3 times ! What do you think about , Paul ? Anyway, his combinations were the best in boxing history, that's for sure !!
| 12/29/03 10:29:00 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | | funktron@yahoo.com | | | | 10 | Wow, Sean's list will give us something to write about for the next month!!! Holmes would take Lewis, in my opinion, without much trouble. True, Lewis is bigger and stronger, but Holmes would break him down like he did Leroy Jones. Jones was also taller and substantially heavier than Holmes and Larry found a way to neutralize him. And before everyone starts saying Leroy Jones is no Lennox Lewis, I'll beg to differ with that as well. Jones was fat, but had speed and boxing skills and could double and triple up on his jab as well or better than Lewis. Holmes would use the entire ring to outbox Lewis and would probably win an easy decision. Let's put it this way, if Holmes could survive Earnie Shavers best punches, which he did, he'd have absolutely NOTHING to worry about with Lewis' power. And if Holmes best punch could knock out Mike Weaver (which he did), he could also KO Lewis, whose chin is suspect. Also, Tim Witherspoon, a very good and underrated fighter, would beat Hasim Rahman. The contemporary fighters have the big size advantage, but that's about all. Witherspoon had very good boxing AND fighting skills and his career was stalled because he was on Don King's bad side. Witherspoon would have been a great champion if his management/promoters circumstances had been better. |
| 12/29/03 10:50:15 AM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | | | | 10 | Of course, far be it from me to be one-sided in favor of yesterday's fighters. From Sean's list, I'd pick the following contemporaries: Roy Jones over Michael Spinks (Jones is simply better), Riddick Bowe over Tony Tucker (Bowe is simply better), Frank Bruno over Greg Page (Bruno would out-work Page) and likely, Moorer over Berbick (Close one). Page and Bowe were two big and fast guys, with good fundamentals, who might have been long time Champions if they had a harder training and work ethic. In his prime, I believe Bowe would have trained furiously and beaten Lewis. But that was the problem with Bowe: He trained when he was motivated. For the most part, Lennox Lewis, while not my idea of a great champion, has come prepared and proven himself to win his fights in some way, shape or form. Lewis hasn't always won impressively, but he manages to get the wins and hold the belt and that's pretty good. Page and Bowe let themselves get out of shape in between fights and sometimes didn't even get back into good shape for the fights. If these two were primed for a war, I think it would be a good fight with Bowe getting a middle round knockout win.

Anyway, I think that Joe Louis is rated by many the best heavyweight of all time because he beat the great Primo Carnera...

Just as Ali and Frazier defined the greatness of each other, there's no doubt beating da Preem defined Louis's greatness! Sssh, this is a little known fact! :-)

Happy new year to everyone on this site without any distinction of colour of the skin, race and shoe size !!!! In particular, happy new year to Ernie Terrell, who made us a present of the "What's my name " fight!!

Happy New Year 2004 to all on the Quarry site... I was reading thru the archives a little y'day, rereading the postings of James Q, Kent, Paul, Joe and even George Foreman, pretty cool stuff. Many of the same topics, yes : Jerry versus everybody, the family, Joe Frazier stuff and so forth. This has been a great place for opinion and I've been grateful for it. Jerry's era had so many great figures and moments, and it has been alot of fun discussing and allowing all the opinion that has flowed. I've met some intersting people here and learned some things. Frankly, I was amazed that a site like this would exist for my favorite boxer, given that he never became THE Champ and that his actual abilaty still remains a secret to many when his famous losses are what is usually presented. I still consider Jerry a former champ, and Mike too, and am glad they were there for me to watch when I was a kid in the 70's. I still watch Jerry's highlight tape about once a month or so, surprised it hasn't worn out. It may seem like living in yesterday, but I'll watch something better in the heavyweight division when it shows up, and I'm not holding my breath waiting for it. Jerry and his contemporaries were good heroes whose era lives on and on. It's been fun discussing and challenging things here, and rekindling the life of Jerry, his time, and all those who were part of it. Hopefully, it will continue just as well in 2004. Peace guys, and Happy New Year!

Also, I join others in thanking Mr. Otto for his efforts this past year in advocating positive changes to the sport and those who participate in it. Boxing is a tough sell today, and getting the mainstream to care enough to improve it's condition is a steep hill to climb. But boxing is a reality that will not go away, and I think eventually people will see that, and the need for the kind of legislation being presented. Thanks Mr. Otto for continuing to fight the good fight.

HAPPY NEW YEAR'S TO ALL! TAKE CARE AND BE SAFE. WE ALL MISS DAD, AND UNCLE JERRY, AND WE ALL STILL LOVE YOU ALWAYS!

Sad New Year to Saddam Hussein and Bin Laden! They ain't shit !!!!!!!!

Yes Gerry, the archives can be quite fun to go through. I wish I could go to the old Joe Frazier's gym site again but it doesn't exist anymore. We had some wild discussions there, to say the least and it would be quite entertaining to read some of those posts again.MR. OTTO, LET US KNOW WHAT IS ON THE POLITICAL ADGENDA SO WE CAN START WRITING LETTERS AGAIN.I know people say that boxing can never be safe, completely, but it is still worth the effort because as Gerry says, boxing is not going away and we can work towards making it safer.I do know that the situation of Jerry Quarry fighting at the age of 47, when he should have never been allowed in the ring would not happen today (that is if the states are indeed enforcing the laws now on the books). TJQF did a lot towards acheiving those goals.

| 1/1/04 08:20:50 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Libiamo and cheers ! |
| 1/1/04 10:35:11 AM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 | Happy New Year 2004! Anyone do anything spectacular? |
| 1/1/04 01:39:33 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | RS-Yesterday I have bought the newspaper " USA TODAY "! I was curious! Do you consider this spectacular? Today, I have bought a book about the divine Mozart! |
| 1/1/04 11:55:27 PM | Gerry Schultz | Cleveland, Ohio | jgschultz11@msn.com | 10 | To clarify, Kent et al, I don't feel Boxing should be improved or better handled just because it isn't going away. Boxing has a lot of problems, some very serious, some just plain ridiculous, but like many sports fans, I watch it --- even today's guys. Boxing, like baseball and horse racing, is a throwback sport to an America that has faded away since the 1950's. It was a sport of poor immigrants, poor urban people with little access to anything else to elevate their chances in this money-is-king country. But it has provided great moments and figures who have transcended the sport and made impressions on those of us who have seen it or read about it. That being said, I think saving Boxing and improving it's current state has real value that goes beyond those directly connected to it or it's fans. I have a few ideas, I'd like to know if anything like them is being incorporated in the bills presented. I know a manifesto has been presented which I've read some of, apologies if anything I suggest is redundant: I think pro boxers should be at least 20 years old, and should have at least 15 pro wins before they can fight for a belt in the United States. Those 15 wins would consist of 4 4-rounders, 8 8-rounders, and finally three 10 rounders. The 10-rounders would be contender matches for the sake of establishing rankings for title matches. Championship matches would be 12 rounds. I think each of the various commissions should use a ranking system similar to college football, where opponent strength, records and other criteria are examined to fairly and more accurately rank fighters so that the best guys are getting the best matches. The USBF then would compile all of the commissions and rank for the whole country, the NABF for the whole continent. Europe would do the same as would other parts of the world for one set of world rankings, the WBA for example. A federal agency would allow only those groups to sanction fights in the U.S., forcing conformity. The same federal agency would license promoters, monitor physical exams for fighters, school and certify judges, and observe the various associated legal issues. Really bad record fighters and those with a pile of KO losses would be weeded out, a senior division would be set up for those over 40. A dethroned champ would have to win two 10 rounders to be considered for another title fight, a champion would have to defend his belt three times in a given year minimum and face the #1 at least once in that time or be stripped. Purse would contain incentives, and include small percentages for chosen charity or causes... I have other ideas also, like mandatory headgear, pensions for retired fighters, med benefits they could pay into, etc., but I don't want to take up a pile of space ( I have already ). I know some of these things are being discussed already in some form. I'd like to know more about what is being submitted, to whom and the process involved. What do you guys think? What other ideas do we have that might improve the sport? One more thing, we need to get away from the PPV concept a little and allow casual fans greater access to big fights, which will increase the sport's exposure and
Some good points Gerry. I especially agree with doing away with PPV except for the biggest possible fight in a given year. Ironically, by trying to cash in on PPV, the boxing industry is limiting the amount of money they could make in the long run because the broader the appeal of a sport, the bigger the audience and the more money to be made. PPV, by its very nature limits widespread appeal.

A fair ranking system is a good idea and I have some ideas of my own. The problem with making ranking fairer is promoters would lose control of the sport and they will fight it with all of the influence they have. The sanctioning bodies would also lose power, so they are against it. It doesn't mean we can't point out the problems and work towards fixing them.

I will map out my ideas on how a ranking system can be run in another upcoming post.

Everyone who goes to a ballpark or tunes in to a game on TV isn't a rabid enthusiast, but is still part of the fan base, and the same would be true of boxing, as it was in days past, when fights were on TV, or people in big cities could actually go to one. Most people today couldn't name more than a couple of fighters, and they'd probably be Tyson and Ali, not necessarily for their boxing either.

One thing that hurts boxing enormously is that it's such a dangerous sport. I suppose it's naive to ever hope for centralized authority, but if there was, they could not only enforce fair matchups at appropriate times, but also mandatory layoffs after knockouts (gym and in fights), as well as forced retirement after X number of KOs in a given time frame, and after a total number across a career, period. They could also go with headgear and large gloves, though those don't afford the amount and type of protection people generally think they do. Besides, denials aside, fans like the excitement afforded by the possibility of a knockout. "We" humans are not as civilized or compassionate as we like to congratulate ourselves on being.

Boxing is a little like drugs were when they started. When drugs weren't affecting rich white kids, nothing was done, no one cared. They only became a crisis when they moved out into the suburbs. Lots of people know there are problems in boxing, that it's corrupt, unregulated, and that men get really messed up, but it's out of sight, out of mind. The average person doesn't relate - they might have seen a bout or clips on television, but they've never even been in a real fight, much less in the ring.

Yesterday I've seen Quarry-Shavers... WOW! Quarry was unbelievable in that fight, what a fighter! Probably he wasn't a one-punch knockout artist, but was fearless, with great hand speed and great talent! He humiliated Ernie Shavers! What does it mean "manifesto"? No, I don't need you for "manifesto"!

Massimo himself admits that he was an underdeveloped fighter, concentrating too much on his tremendous power, and not enough on technique. It would figure that he'd have trouble with someone like Jerry Quarry, who was impeccably skilled in boxing fundamentals, moves, tricks, and was more experienced as well, and with better fighters. He caught Shavers, and Ernie didn't have the wherewithal to recover. If Shavers had caught Jerry, it might have been a different story, though JQ could almost certainly take a punch better than ES.

"Ernie hit me so hard, he shook my ancestors in Africa!" - Ali
"If Ernie Shavers hit any harder, I'd shoot him!" - Tex Cobb
"I'm not going to fight you Ernie - you hit too hard!" - George Foreman

A manifesto is a body of belief, generally held to be true, but in any event, a statement of intent and guiding principles, usually by a group... or government, that will be put into operation. A manifesto -isn't- always true (Nazi Germany's agendas, for example), but if it's held to be by a particular side, it's still a "manifesto."

I am very surprised by your answer because "manifesto" is an Italian word, for God's sake! In English you say manifest! Thanks, anyway!!

"Legitimate manifesto" is a fluid thing too. It belongs to the winner, and to whatever/whomever lasts. If Nazi Germany had won and their agendas prevailed, it would be "legitimate" in the same historical way that others have been in their time, even if they were viewed as inappropriate later. Look at your country, the mighty Roman Empire - we'd never condone that way of life today, but it lasted and had the official seal of approval for centuries. If the United States were obliterated, many of the things we do and have done would not be treated kindly by the history of whoever the new "big dog" was. Sadly, through human history, the biggest and meanest have made all the rules.

Control, Kent, is actually the key to reforming or improving boxing. It's why there's now a push for a pension system for fighters, they want a piece of the power. Imagine the NBA or the NFL having to go to these lengths for player benefits. But those leagues/sports enjoy public legitimacy, boxing does not, it's seen as something crude and cultish, if not simply as ridiculously violent. A federal agency, which might bring some regulation to a range of entertainment and revenue from gambling to rock concerts, as well as boxing, would consolidate that power, and disseminate it to those who know there's money to be made by playing with the system. Who the hell would care about the objections of a Don King, a Cleveland who has ruined the sport for his own sake? Imagine what might have happened if an official was made aware of the treatment of Mike Tyson, or the rehab of Aaron Pryor, or the condition of Jerry before that Crammer fight. Preserve the Golden Goose and make money, put fights before more perspective fans and increase the sports appeal, keep the talent clean and hungry, promote the development of talent, give the fans what they want. It's really not that hard to do, Boxing simply must become smart enough to make these moves... The Shavers fight, I think, isn't just one of JQ's best moments because he dominated a very, very good heavyweight, but how and why it happened. Jerry was underestimated as he often was, yet was near his peak at that time, such a smart, skilled counterpuncher, very quick and very tough. Shavers had Don King in his ear, and the three of Ali, Frazier and Foreman at ringside. Racial arrogance was in the air also, with Jerry simply a well-known hurdle for Shavers, like he was for Foster. The play-by-play practically conceded the fight from the first bell. Shavers bullrushed Quarry fearlessly, and God, did he get taught. They all did that night. I think it's one of Jerry's 3-4 best matches, even though it didn't last that long. Jerry never flinched, showed his chin and put on a clinic with the reckless Shavers on how to counterpunch. That fight alone would've made me a fan, but that's just a piece in the guy's puzzle, as far as I'm concerned.

What is amazing about the Shavers fight is that Shavers had won, going into the fight, 33 fights in a row, 32 of those by knockout! Among his victims were Jimmy Ellis and Jimmy Young. In Shavers' mind, Jerry was going to end up on the floor in less than one round, just like Ellis. Jerry was just another big name to add to Shavers' resume on his march to the title. Boy, was he wrong about that one as it was he, Shavers, who ended up on the floor, the victim of a first round Knockout!

Jerry had just beaten Ron Lyle in Feb of that year 73 was his best year with 2 major upsets. They underestimated him. Jerry was the No. 1 contender of that era. Whenever he was challenged by a new hyped contender (Foster, Lyle, Shavers) He showed he was the boss and in doing so showed his skill. When he fought the champions he had problems even though it appeared he had the ability to beat them. If he won a few more rounds against Ellis, Breaks Joe's ribs in Frazier one, he was champ and he came close. 68 Ellis 69 Frazier and 70 Ali (even though no title was at stake it would have been big) he was so close to being Champ. 71 and 72 were just cashing in on what he did before. 73 Under Gil Clancy he makes another run. Who else scored 2 big wins of that magnitude in the same year. Both fights he was the underdog. What was his mental frame of mind during those years. 68 Ellis 69 Frazier and 70 Ali (even though no title was at stake it would have been big) he was so close to being Champ. 71 and 72 were just cashing in on what he did before. 73 Under Gil Clancy he makes another run. Who else scored 2 big wins of that magnitude in the same year. Both fights he was the underdog. What was his mental frame of mind during those years. Hope everyone had a great holiday season.

To Joe frazier's credit, he did take some great body shots off Jerry, you could really hear 1 of them, if there was a way to have beat Ali and Frazier Jerry would have found it, THERE SIMPLY WAS NO WAY, (Frazier to much pressure) (Ali to much reach).

Jerry Quarry seemed to make people nervous. With some, he was sort of like an unwelcome guest who won't leave, and no one quite knows what to do about it. There were those who wanted to make his wins into near flukes (the ~other~ guy had an off night), and those who waited for a Frazier 2 to color an entire career. The big three, and some below them didn't suffer this fate. So many people wrote him off so many times, and judged him by harsher standards than others (especially ~one~ particular other), yet he kept coming back and winning. He didn't do flashy things ala Ali, have frightening power like Foreman, or have a trademark unique style like Frazier, and maybe some people didn't see him coming. That was their problem. If you're in a business like boxing, and don't know your competition, you deserve what you get.

It's a tragedy in boxing that usually the greatest virtue in a fighter - his toughness - so often becomes his greatest enemy.
respect of these two and to defeat so many others, which again is why I am/was a Quarry fan in that amazing era. He was ranked how high for how many years?!

I agree with you that JQ and KooKoo that JQ would never have beaten Ali', but not just (or only) because Cassius was 6' 3" 220. You know better than me that JQ beat several big guys! The real reason was that Ali' was too good and too expert and JQ would never have survived Ali' s jab and would never have been able to hurt (or of hurting) him because Ali' could take a hell of a punch. I don't agree that Ali' treated Jerry with respect. He played with JQ in the first two rounds of the second fight and this was not polite by him. You shouldn't do this against any opponent and especially if this opponent is such a great fighter as JQ.

You Guys have great points and its great to hear them because you are all JQ fans like me. I just want to add a few things about how close he was. His tremendous strength boxing ability and heart took him so close and I really think that there were a few factors that could have taken him to the top and beat Frazier and Ali.

1. Gil Clancy or a trainer with the ability to dissect Fraziers and Ali's style and prepare him for what he was about to face. Nothing against his trainers but some trainers have more experience than others and that can make the difference. Boxing is like a high speed violent chess game and at the level Jerry was at he was up against guys who were scientists when it came to strategy.

2. Training camp. Can you imagine Jerry training for Ali at Joe Frazier's gym with Ken Norton and Jimmy Young sparring with him every day. In that kind of environment. The best we saw of Jerry was his dramatic rise back to the top with Gil Clancy training him. The Lyle fight was probably Jerry's best he was in great condition kept his cool and worked his game plan for 12 rounds.

The first Ali fight was Jerry's. That was the worst break he ever got by getting cut. That fight defined him as a bleeder. Ali was coming back and his people were arrogant. All Jerry had to do was pressure him make him work and the fight was his.

As I said in my most recent post, the big slide can come at any time. Sometimes though, it's hard to tell when a fighter is beginning his return to becoming an ordinary man again, in a game with such a short life. Sometimes, what appears to be a slide may not be, but rather simply an off night or one in which styles have come heavily into play.

It seems Gil Clancy was a good thing, but timing is another question. Too late, or close to it? Jerry with Eddie Futch, the "Ali killer" at Joe Frazier's gym, ahead of the first Ali fight would have been something to see!

I think the reason Jerry was just an afterthought in the movie Ali was that the fight only went three rounds, and while Jerry was cut, all that has faded into just a night of faded and haunted memories, becoming just another easy and expected Ali win in history's lovestruck eyes.

I'm sure JQ trained like a maniac, and that Ali was looking two fights ahead. As I've said before, Jose Torres said he felt Ali would have won in 10 rounds, looked bad doing it, but even he said this wasn't a sure thing, and he was a super Ali fan. I do think Jerry would have had to absolutely beat the crap out of Ali to get the verdict though, probably even knock him down, ala getting a decision over a South American, Mexican, or Panamanian fighter, in their home country. That probably would not have happened. Ali was too tricky, too big, had too much reach, and was nearly indestructible, as we now know.

Torres offers a pretty fair accounting of the Atlanta fight in his book Sting Like A Bee. In the first round, Ali had things pretty much his way, but things began to turn after that. He was out of breath, was missing, and wasn't discouraging Jerry at all. The average fan saw what they wanted to see - Ali beating up another bum, but that wasn't the way it was at all. Anything could happen when Ali and Frazier got in with each other. What people don't realize, is that this view is in retrospect. With two fighters of any quality at all, this can always be true. People often assign truths to an event in the past as having existed at that time, that ~hindsight~ has given them after the time has passed. JQ was probably a half click off what he needed to get past Ali or Frazier. Sometimes that's all that's needed in boxing, but at the same time, if that half click were food, a mouse couldn't live on it for long!!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/4/04 11:52:21 AM</th>
<th>Roadscholarette</th>
<th>Chicago</th>
<th>roadscholarette@hotmail.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Fran -              | Forgot - I asked once before how many fights Jerry had in which he was cut, particularly in which this was or could have been a factor? Ali and Frazier were masters at cutting fighters. They knocked heads and threw elbows at each other like mad, but of course neither were bleeders, and it didn't work. You'll notice this ebbed cosiderably as the fights went on, pretty much stopping altogether past the middle rounds of Thrilla.

JQ was probably a half click off what he needed to get past Ali or Frazier. Sometimes that's all that's needed in boxing, but at the same time, if that half click were food, a mouse couldn't live on it for long!!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/4/04 04:48:27 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>La Habra, Ca</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Jerry already had the skills before his association with Clancy. Note his fights with Spencer, M. Foster, and Patterson, in which he used his skills to gain good wins. Jack Quarry and Johnny Flores did a good job of teaching Jerry the fundamentals that came to fore in the Lyle and Shavers fights. It was Jerry's overall experience that won these fights for him, experience that gave him an advantage over both Lyle and Shavers, not some magic worked by Clancy.

Sure Jack did not have the business experience or knowledge, and maybe Jerry was rushed too quickly into big time fights, but Jack still deserves credit for doing something right, schooling Jerry in basics, early on.

If Clancy was any kind of manager, he would have never let Jerry off of the stool for the fifth rounds of both the second Frazier fight and the Norton fight. Everyone always blames the referees, Joe Louis in particular in Frazier/Quarry 2, but Clancy and the corner should carry a lot of the blame for Jerry taking unneeded pushiment in these fights. Clancy's job was to protect his fighter and even though Jerry would have complained, as he was even shoving the referee away in the Norton fight in order to get back at Norton, Clancy still should have not let Jerry back out of the corner. I will never be a fan of Clancy's because of this. In both Frazier 2 and in the Norton fight, Jerry was a beaten fighter before the fifth rounds started.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/4/04 06:08:50 PM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A curiosity: Don King was the Shavers' manager in the Quarry fight! That wasn't a happy night for him...</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/5/04 10:45:59 AM</th>
<th>John Gerard</th>
<th>NYC</th>
<th>rock289z@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>KENT: Gil Clancy said that if he were in Frazier's corner in the Thriller in Manilla he never would have stopped the fight the way Futch did. He would have let Joe come out. That tells me all I need to know about him.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/5/04 02:01:13 PM</th>
<th>Roadscholarette</th>
<th>Chicago</th>
<th>roadscholarette@hotmail.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I've heard Clancy talk on TV a number of times, and get an odd feeling about him. He obviously is a super knowledgeable guy, and is objectively aware of what can happen to boxers, but in practice, I always got the idea that he tended to minimize this. Nothing specific he ever said, but rather an overall feeling from everything put together. Times I've seen him with Al Bernstein, he continuously harped on more fights for different fighters, more this, more that, talking about heart, and so forth. I know these things are important, and that if someone doesn't want to get hurt, they won't get in the ring at all, but I got the idea he'd be like football coaches who try to be macho and say anything that hurts is all in your mind, and can be overcome, with no price to pay later. Once more, just impressions...</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/5/04 02:01:13 PM</th>
<th>Roadscholarette</th>
<th>Chicago</th>
<th>roadscholarette@hotmail.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| It might have been his place to stop Jerry Quarry from going out after a point against Frazier (or other fighters he might have had in similar situations), but in the end, the ref's got to have his head in the game too.

Maybe the right thing would have been to stop Thrilla after 8 or 9 rounds, but once you have let the two guys fight for 14 rounds... Maybe the right thing would have been to let them fight the last round. In this way they have ruined the best fight of all time, and we'll never know who really won the Thrilla...

Some say Ali wouldn't have come out for round 15. This is a minority opinion, and we all know the saying about opinions anyway. I think he probably would have gone on. I'd have let it go. If Ali had come out, Joe would have either put him down, or Ali would have pounded on him for three more minutes. It was hardly a torrid pace by that time, plus Padilla, the ref said he'd have been watching closely. Joe would have had to have KOd or TKOd Ali though, because all the Phillipino had Ali ahead by a ridiculous margin.

To say Joe Frazier should have been allowed to fight in round fifteen just because there was only one round left ignores the fact that Joe was in terrible shape. His eye was almost closed and he wasn't firing punches back hard in round fourteen like he usually does. His legs were also very unsteady and it is a miracle that he didn't go down after the pounding Ali gave him. Fighters such as Frazier and Jerry would have died in the ring, and in a way in the long run Jerry did just that, rather than admit defeat. It is up to the officials, doctors, and cornermen to protect the fighters, sometimes from themselves. Eddie Futch did what was right because there are some things more important than winning any fight, the fighters themselves!

I also think the corner and the referee in the first fight Frazier had against Foreman were negligent in allowing Frazier to continue after suffering three knockdowns in the first round. Joe would have tried to get up ten thousand times or die trying. His corner, especially knew this but why make Joe prove it by his dying just to try and keep his title. Once again, there is one thing more important then even the heavyweight title, in this case it is Joe himself!

Do you think that Ali's cornerman should have stopped the fight? I also think the corner and the referee in the first fight Frazier had against Foreman were negligent in allowing Frazier to continue after suffering three knockdowns in the first round. Joe would have tried to get up ten thousand times or die trying. His corner, especially knew this but why make Joe prove it by his dying just to try and keep his title. Once again, there is one thing more important than even the heavyweight title, in this case it is Joe himself!

Happy New Year to all. Regarding Ali - Frazier 3: at the end of the 14th the referee actually escorted Frazier back to his corner showing lots of concern. The referee had his hand on Frazier's back. He showed that concern because Ali was hitting Frazier 4 to 1 and at times Joe wasn't able to throw any punches back. He kept getting hit on both left and right sides of his face, not only with rights, but also with lefts. He could see the left hooks coming, but didn't have enough in the tank to get out of the way. Even without a knockdown the 14th was a 10/8 round to Ali. At the end of the 14th Ali walked unaided back to his corner. He sat there normally and was not getting any special attention. Neither his cornermen, the referee, or the doctor were inspecting him with a view to determining whether he was fit to continue. That was because he was fit to continue and they all knew it. Ali was waiting for the bell to come out for the last. No one was even considering him not coming out. Look at the video of it. When the fight was stopped, Ali stood straight up (unaided) and looked over towards Frazier's corner. By then Frazier had his head down and was allowing his corner to take his gloves off. The correct decision was to stop the fight. Frazier had had enough and there was no question about that in the minds of ring officials and Frazier's corner. Letting the fight go any further risked serious injury to Frazier. The referee, doctor and Frazier's corner should have been charged with manslaughter had they let it go any further. Frazier was behind on all three cards at the finish, he couldn't win it on points, didn't have a knockout punch left in him....in other words, he didn't have a snowflakes chance in hell. Had the 15th happened he would at the very least got lots more(unnecessary) punishment but, more likely in my opinion, he would have been knocked out and perhaps badly injured. Stopping it was in Joe's best interests. As brave as Joe was, and I've never said otherwise of him, he just wasn't good enough on that particular night. And it's not like he got beat by a bum, anyway. Joe has every right to hold his head high even though he got beat fair and square. End of story. Look at the record books. Massimo, how was your festive season ? Did you go away on holidays ? I got back to work yesterday and that was lots of fun.

1/6/04 05:25:06 AM Massimo Roma 410 Hi Paul, how you doing ?

1/6/04 05:32:15 AM Massimo Roma 410 I have spent a pleasant festive season in Rome, thanks ! I have eaten good food, listened to great music and made good walks for Rome ( former caput mundi ).

1/6/04 09:17:32 AM John Gerard NYC 410 I too had Joe a hair ahead in Manila, ~before~ watching it in slow mo - that made it even firmer in my mind. Of course, the Phillipino officials had him hopelessly behind. Joe's eyes were in bad shape, but I think he was in better shape otherwise. Ali staggered him in the 13th, and just stood there, unable to follow up, and was slumped badly in his corner after the 14th, fainting after the fight was over. I suspect he'd have come out. Then it's anyone's guess what would have happened. No question if Frazier had had his eyes.

1/6/04 12:18:22 PM Massimo Roma 410 In your list of the fighters who would have died rather than quit, you forgot the bravest of all time: Primo Carnera. Look at his fight with Max Baer... He fought with an injured ankle almost all the fight and was knocked down 11 times but...At the end of the night he was still up on his feet ( ... On his big feet ... ). He fought almost all the fight against Joe Louis bleeding for a large cut on his lip ! He fought the second fight against Paulino Uzcudun with the right hand injured ( since the forth round ) and won clearly on points. He fought all the first fight against Uzcudun ( Barcellona,1930) with too small gloves because the local organizers gave him too small gloves! You see that Joe Frazier was a chump in comparison!

1/6/04 12:27:17 PM Massimo Roma 410 How could I have forgotten the Frazier killer, da Preem? Seriously though, Carnera was indeed a very tough man. Actually, Italians have a long and... proud heritage of tough as nails fighters in many divisions. Only one heavyweight champion after Carnera, but Marciano was in a truly elite group. Some guys who aren't of championship caliber might rank as high or higher than many champions, since they don't have the skills to avoid ferocious punishment from really good boxers, yet don't quit.

Massimo, in the past, managers, promoters, and officials cared less about the fighters. The further in time we go back, the less they cared about them. Just because Carnera fought in a tough era and had people who didn't care about him around him, who just cared about making money, doesn't mean that because Eddie Futch cared about Frazier that Frazier is a chump, as you say. Frazier would have fought on through the same kind of adversity that Carnera did, if given a choice. Both Carnera and Frazier were/are brave men. Muhammad Ali for that matter also has the heart of a lion.

Ali was in much better shape after the fight in Manila than Frazier was but if he did collapse after the fight, that is understandable as it was one of the most brutal, toughest heavyweight title fights of all time.

I have never said or thought that Frazier was a chump, I should be crazy to say something like that! Joe Frazier was the second bravest fighter of all time...

Hi Kent - when exactly did Ali collapse after the third fight against Frazier? It certainly wasn't at the end of the 14th or before the 15th would have started as the video clearly shows him standing up unassisted from his chair when it was announced that Frazier's corner had pulled the plug. The referee obviously had no concerns about Ali's condition as he did not assist him back to his corner at the end of the 14th. Instead, the ref assisted Frazier to his corner. We can therefore safely assume that Ali was ready to go for the 15th and final round. We can all debate the state of the cards at the finish (as people have done with the Leonard - Hagler fight). But the referee and two judges had Ali in front and the ref certainly seemed sympathetic to Joe. In the second round he warned Ali for holding and that was to address Joe's complaints about the holding in the second fight. So there was not much holding in the third fight and that excuse was removed. Cheers.

No, Ali did not collapse in the ring at all. I am not sure he did afterward at any point. I was saying if he did, with if being the key word here, it is understandable as it was a very tough fight. Again, if it happened, it would have to have been in the dressing room. Massimo is the one who said he collapsed, not me.

Thanks, Kent. It was so damn hot in that fight that you couldn't blame anyone for collapsing from heat exhaustion. I looked closely at the video and never saw Ali collapse. I've heard people speak of it, but none have specified when it allegedly happened. From memory, I think that Frazier said in his book that he had "heard" that Ali collapsed, however he didn't expand on that. Not that it matters, but I don't think Ali did collapse. It's extremely hot in Sydney at the moment and I'll collapse walking down to get the newspaper. I will need a beer to revive me. Imagine fighting 14 rounds in oppressive heat like Frazier and Ali did. Maybe Ali was a little more used to it than Frazier after his fight with Foreman in Zaire. We can all have views on their skills as boxers, but there is no doubting their courage. Cheers.
I've seen this on a British video commemorating the fight and Reg Gutteridge describes Ali's collapse.

Yes, in fact professional Ali shill, Don Dunphy made sure to tell everyone that Ali was "just trying to escape the crowd in the ring," when he fainted. He stays down for a little while, and even talks from the canvas. The brutal pounding he took, and possibly the heat both had an effect. He commented that before the end, he felt like fainting and throwing up, along with the "close to dyin'" remark. He looked terrible after the fight. Not just the beaten up look - Frazier looked worse, as he always did after a fight - but that intangible "something" when you know there's something really wrong with someone.

Are you sure you are not getting Thrilla mixed up with Kinshasa? I think that Mark is right while I was partially wrong. Ali collapsed to the canvas in Kinshasa, but he didn't in Manilla. In Manilla he collapsed after the fight, before giving an interview.

Massimo -

Yes, exactly. While his corner was grabbing him when Thrilla was stopped, it also appeared they were sort of lifting him a little two - both guys were dead - and it was shortly after that that he fainted momentarily, then stayed down with his seconds fanning him with towels, and talked for a bit from that position. I can't imagine what must have happened to both men internally, from that fight alone.

My husband has always subscribed to Playboy, and they really do have some great articles and fiction, this month a good feature on the great Johnny Tupia.

Just for fun:

Look at this word : ANILINA

What do you get if you write this word from right to left, RS? I wonder if in English there are words with such a peculiarity! What do you have to say about RS, my ET?

Thanks Mark. My video of the fight stopped a minute or so after Frazier's corner threw in the towel and in any case before the so called Ali 'collapse'. People who have been involved in contact sports would understand that sometimes you get a little light headed shortly after the exertion or contact has ended. Your blood is in different areas other than your head. It is a normal bodily response to great exertion especially in heat. Marathon runners collapse when no one has punched them. In Ali's case he returned to his corner unassisted after the 14th, rose from his chair unassisted when told that Frazier's corner was pulling the plug, and he was obviously ready for round 15. His 'collapse' (or rush of blood from the head) was minutes later. The other thing that must be said is that if Frazier's corner thought that he was winning, or a chance of winning, then they most likely would have sent him out again rather than throw the towel in. As it was, none of his corner argued among themselves as to the appropriateness of that decision. Heads were down and gloves were coming off because they accepted the situation was hopeless and in went the towel. Ali and Frazier fought for 44 unbelievable rounds and there was finally a definitive result as determined by Joe's own corner. That was the beauty of the Thrilla - Joe's own corner became the judge and jury. It is not possible to get a more definitive result. But Joe has nothing to be ashamed of because he fought wholeheartedly for every one of those 44 rounds.

"Able was I ere I saw Elba." A word or phrase such as this, or what you mentioned, which is the same read either way, is called a palindrome. Here's a web site on them:

http://www.palindromes.org/
tape a copy of Frazier vs. Jimmy Ellis (their second fight). As I recall, this one was outdoors, in a hot climate. I remember that Ellis fought his best, though Joe caught him and TKOed him in the middle rounds (maybe round 9). Ellis is underrated, having fought in the toughest era and winning most of his fights, losing mostly to great champions. |

1/8/04 10:28:13 AM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Jimmy Ellis fought Frazier in Melbourne the second time. Joe said the fight was a breeze. Ellis was, though, an excellent fighter, and sort of in the same boat as Jerry Quarry - a small heavy in boxing's toughest age.I'll tell you a division that's never gotten its due, and has had some great boxers through the years - the light heavyweights. It used to be said that middleweights were popular because the average man was that size (and for the great fighters too), but that isn't true anymore. The average man who isn't overweight (rare these days) is lightheavy-sized.1/8/04 11:56:00 AM|kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com||||10|ALI BEAT FRAZIER IN MANILA HANDS DOWN, ANY DUMBASS WHO THINKS IT WAS EVEN CLOSE IS CRAZY, FRAZIER GETTING HIT 5 TO 1, STOP TALKING ABOUT THAT BUM PRIMO , IT'S A WASTE OF SPACE ON HERE, MASSIMO , IF YOU TALKED ABOUT ROCKY MARCIANO I WOULD UNDERSTAND, BUT PRIMO ??? GET REAL OR GIVE IT UP!! |

1/8/04 01:04:56 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Without Carnera boxing would be so boring !Just like wrestling without Andre' the Midget, tennis without the great Mc Enroe or soccer without Maradona ( Pele' was the greatest, but Diego was the most funny to watch, he made the ball sing, a real genius ! ). How many Carnera' s fights have you seen ? I guess just 1: BAER-CARNERA.Do you know that Primo fought is first fight against Sharkey just a few hours after having had a serious car accident in which he lost senses ? That means having guts ( and being crazy, as well...).PS: yes, Manilla was a walk in the park for Ali'... I don't understand why he trained for that fight ))))|

1/8/04 03:12:57 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Frazier said his Melbourne fight with Jimmy Ellis was easy, yes. Oh, of course Manilla was easy for Ali. Muhammad probably just played ping-pong to get ready for it, and of course won every round, laughing at Joe Frazier's punches. He probably could have fought again that very night, one or two more times, maybe, or maybe juggled at the same time he was fighting Smokin' Joe. Everyone knows that.Seriously though, I had the fight 7-6-1 for Joe. I could be talked into the same score the other way though, even if it'd take some smooth talking. Very close, and begging for round 15, which would have been basically a blind man against a thoroughly beaten one. Foreman was the only Frazier opponent not forced into Joe's rhythm, fighting for his own survival.| name calling that started it off. Frazier's reported reactions behind the scenes, and to this day, say to me that he was really hurt and angry, and never got in the groove of building the gate, at least not on Ali's terms. There aren't any dumb athletes at that level, but Frazier didn't have Ali's gift of articulation. If he had, he could have nailed Ali back just as hard. I also always wondered if Ali was -really- "kidding" to promote the rivalry. He could have hit on so many other things other than stupidity, ignorance, Tomming, gorilla racial stereotyping, punchiness, etc., and still put on a show for the public. If I were a black person watching, Ali's spiel would have offended me. I'd have thought, "Hey champ, aren't there enough white people talking this trash? What's with you?."

It could be that Joe was in on a staged act ahead of fight two, but could have been surprised by Ali's material, and got lost in a Twilight Zone between real and make believe. Funny that the virtually illiterate Ali, who actually became a poster boy for the ravages of boxing used to hit Frazier most often for being punchy and dumb and a primitive gorilla.

Far from being "thoroughly beaten", Ali was able to stand unassisted immediately after Frazier's corner threw the towel in. Call round 15 and Ali was there, upright, gloves up, waiting to fight on - but there was nobody there to punch back! After his victory, Ali called Frazier's son, Marvin, to his dressing room. Ali then graciously congratulated Marvin on his father's performance. Ali lavished praise on Joe Frazier to Frazier's son in a gesture of great sportsmanship. As I said before, the beauty of the Thrilla was that Frazier's own corner made the decision by stopping the fight. Put bluntly, they surrendered (even though that term unfairly describes the situation for the great warrior Joe Frazier). The reality of Frazier's corner throwing the towel should make the result tamper proof, but there are full mooners out there, revising history, overflowing with excuses to try to cushion reality for fallen heroes (even though Joe Frazier does not need to be protected from it - he fought extraordinarily bravely but just wasn't good enough). Yet the full mooners dream of corrupt judges, biased referees, fixed fights, a "thoroughly beaten" victor, a legally blind boxer who only lost because viciously biased officials barred his labrador from the ring...... and on and on and on the conspiracy theories flow. At least the fluff and bubble of all those excuses make life entertaining and it's enjoyable reading, too. And it tutors Massimo in his English.

Agreed---it was a good fight. Ali had his way in the early going, Frazier heated up and "started smokin'" later, pressing Ali to the limit. But it can't be denied: Ali won because Frazier couldn't continue. If there was any way he could have come out for the last round, his corner would have let him fight on. He was a sitting duck and Ali had enough gas in the tank to seriously hurt Frazier had there been a 15th round. I truly believe Frazier would have been knocked out because the fight was headed in that direction. Pure and simple, his corner stopped Frazier from being knocked down and possibly knocked out and might have saved further damage to his vision and serious injury. Clearly, Ali had been in a fight and clearly he was physically extended beyond his own limits, but he was ready to continue and Frazier wasn't. A victory couldn't be much clearer than this one.
Ali where his hatred made him fight with almost supernatural courage. But (and it's only my opinion), I can't put Joe in the top 10 ever for skills and ability. As far as courage goes, though, Frazier was right up there. No doubt about that. Cheers.

Ali where his hatred made him fight with almost supernatural courage. But (and it's only my opinion), I can't put Joe in the top 10 ever for skills and ability. As far as courage goes, though, Frazier was right up there. No doubt about that. Cheers.

|1/8/04 06:53:23 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Paul—we know that Frazier never fought Norton (the two were friends). Had they met, how do you think the fight would unfold? RS, what about you? For my part, I think Norton's biggest failures were against devastating power punchers, and Frazier, even with his great hook, wasn't usually a one punch power KO artist. Also, Frazier wasn't a fast starter (another weakness of Norton was getting caught early against fast starters). For these reasons, I'd actually give Norton a chance. In the end, Frazier's constant pressure might unravel Norton. The record shows that if Norton or Frazier hung around long enough, they'd start to turn the fight to their favor in the later rounds. Norton did this Larry Holmes (though he lost) and to a lesser extent, Jimmy Young. Frazier showed this in several fights, especially Ali III, though HE lost! That's what makes this fantasy match up so intriguing to me. Their styles were very different, but their pace and results were so similar and both were excellent fighters. I think Frazier would probably win a decision, based on landing more power punches and being more aggressive overall.

|1/8/04 07:38:58 PM|Paul|Australia||PlMls4@aol.com||||10|Angelo—off the top of my head I would have to go for Frazier over Norton and I'd be fairly confident. But I will have to think about that some more and get back to you. In regard to Norton and Frazier not fighting, Frazier denies that it was because of their friendship. Frazier says in his book that the fight never happened because there was never a big enough financial offer to make it happen. That seems a bit odd, but it might be so. The friendship things doesn't wash for me. After all, Ali and Ellis were close friends. By the way, reading back through the posts that happened while I was away on holidays, someone mentioned about Frazier not being drafted like Ali was. Frazier says that this was because he was ineligible for the draft as he was married with children. That explains that, but I can't recall any other boxers at that time being drafted like Ali. My memory is that the authorities also lowered the IQ threshold especially so Ali could be drafted. Even though I don't agree with what Ali was doing outside the ring at that time (in fact, I strongly disagree with some of the stuff he was involved in), in my mind I can't entirely discount the possibility that he was singled out and given special treatment by being drafted. Maybe he has a big mouth to thank for that. Cheers again.

|1/8/04 08:02:11 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Paul—I know that you consider Ali' the greatest of all time and maybe you' re right, as he was surely a top 3 ! But I' d be curious to know ( or of knowing ) where do you rate Norton, who fought Ali' so amazingly well for 3 fights. How do you think he' d do against the modern heavyweights ? Norton b Norton KOT 9 or 10, I swear !|

|1/8/04 09:16:42 PM|Forest Ward|new york||nyc.com||||10|Muhammad Ali was not singled out. In 1966, the growing war in Viet Nam required more soldiers. Instead of doing away with college deferments in order to increase the pool of available bodies. President Johnson and his sidekick Robert McNamara decided to lower the test scores for the draft. The people who were screwed were the farm boys in Iowa and elsewhere... who did not get to college. They got drafted. The people who were given passes, were the people in college.

|1/8/04 11:23:18 PM|Roadscholarette|Chicago||roadscholarette@hotmail.com||||10|Angelo—Frazier knocked Norton out in the gym once. Norton couldn't cope with pressure, and as we know, no one, save George Foreman (who's in a class by himself) could keep Frazier off them. Traditional jabbing to keep him away just didn't work, nor did combinations, since he, like Ali was hard to hit with a followup. Norton had an odd style sometimes, of mirroring an opponent's moves.
This confused Ali (the reason for the first official defeat, and the second one too, though Ali got the nod). Frazier was hard to mirror or predict. He came from reverse sides, over, under, doubling hooks, all from that crazy bobbing (always with a step in). I don't think Frazier-Norton would go the distance. You're probably right that Frazier would have continued to be pot-shotted, though other than Joe's eyes, Frazier was in better shape. Ali was a wreck. He was collapsed in his dressing room afterwards, skin gray, puking, when he heard JP was out talking to the press. Then he went out. Good thing this one wasn't in an alley. Of course, Ali is lucky he never fought Quarry out behind the "Drink 'Til 2:00, Pistol Dawn" lounge either! In the second Ali-Quarry, it was interesting that when Jerry tackled him, Ali didn't respond instinctively as a street fighter would. Back to Norton - I always saw Norton as a superb athlete who functioned well in boxing on that natural ability, but that this wasn't quite the right sport for him (he took it up out of more desperation than anything).
might have seen how a perpetually mobile ~boxer~ would have done against Joe, without the bogus rope a dope garbage.

| 1/9/04 10:57:16 AM | Fran | philly | plc7755@aol.com | 10 | The Frazier that fought Ali in 71 or Ellis in 70 would have destroyed Larry Holmes on Holmes best night. Holmes was not in the same class as Frazier. Norton was a perfect sparring partner for Frazier because Frazier could unload on him but when I saw them sparring before Frazier fought Foreman they were rockin each other. |

| 1/9/04 11:26:33 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | RSAnyway Marvis Frazier can be proud of his career! He beat James Broad, Joe Bugner, Jose' Ribalta, Boncrusher Smith and the Golden Gloves title! That's nothing to be ashamed of!! After all, surviving (or to survive) a 19 years old Tyson would have been hard (or difficult) even for the iron chinned Primo Carnera... |

| 1/9/04 11:33:16 AM | Massimo | Roma | $ | 10 | RSAnyway, Marvis Frazier can be proud of his career! He beat James Broad, Joe Bugner, Boncrusher Smith, James Tillis and the Golden Gloves title. That's nothing to be ashamed of! After all, surviving (or to survive) a 19 years old Tyson would have been hard (or difficult) even for the iron chinned Primo Carnera... |

| 1/9/04 11:38:14 AM | Roadscholarette | Chicago | roadscholarette@hotmail.com | 10 | Massimo - Marvis has nothing to be ashamed of, for sure. He's a rich man, and likely will not have to suffer the woes Joe will as he gets older. Mike Tyson was not only one of the all time greats, but one heck of an intelligent guy. Mad as a loon, but he's really said some bright things. The highly educated boxer is practically nonexistent, removing that context from conversation, and certainly the gym is not a hotbed of traditional intellectualism. However, sportswriters and fans often treat anything smart they say as sort of like a roller skating bear - you clap because the bear can do it at all, not because it does it well. If they bothered to listen closely or further, they'd realize these are not only bright guys natively, but almost always fun and good hearted men away from the ring. I guess for too many people, it's hard enough to accept that these guys could take them in a fight without having to accept the possibility that they may be smarter as well! Intelligence is something a person ~has~, not education per se, social skills, or grammatical speech. I think everyone just sort of accepts that da Preem could take anyone, and just reconciles themselves to talking about all "the other guys." :-)|

| 1/9/04 01:07:13 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | RSI think too that intelligence is essentially a native matter! Diracs are not made, they are born! But believe me, education helps! Spending a little time of your life thinking to not totally trivial things fortifies your brain a little, just as spending time in the gym fortifies your muscles! PS: if you are born Stan Laurel (the actor not the man, for God's sake...), you can do all you want, but you'll be essentially Stan Laurel for all your life!! |

| 1/9/04 01:51:15 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | RS"Just sort of accepts"... Is this correct English or were you drunken? ))) I'd never have said that in that way in a million years!!!!!!! Anyway, I have intuited what you meant. ! |
