This is getting ridiculous. In my post I asked a question directly to you whether that fight was an official elimination. It was not meant to be rude and could not be read as such. However, Groupie 2 (Forest) decided to interrupt, abusing me for asking you the question. In some irrational hissy fit he became abusive. In reply, I explained that the question was not meant to be rude and that I didn't understand how it could be interpreted that way. I then commented that I didn't think that Kent would have been offended and questioned whether you were offended. You didn't bother to address that question. The first question was just a simple question querying whether that fight was an elimination. As it turns out, I had good reason to question it. No big deal. I've learnt that Groupie 2 is just sitting on the sidelines waiting to jump in and criticize. He doesn't begin topics of conversation. He merely jumps in and abuses when someone says something he disagrees with. He's like a king hitting vulture, and that doesn't bother me because every site has one. Everyone can go back and read the post and judge for themselves whether I was being rude in asking the question, and whether Groupie 2 was justified in the abusive interruption. You will also see that I asked Kent whether he took the question as offensive but he didn't answer. It went on from there. This is getting boring and repetitive.

3/6/05 03:31:18 PM Kent, La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 Noam, finally we can agree on something! This getting boring and repetitive. The problem is, I missed the point you made about asking me if I thought it was rude of you, which I have since said I don't think it was rude of you for challenging my statement. I probably missed you saying, "is it rude" the first time because there are so many posts that are very long and it is easy for someone to miss one point out of a lot of points people are trying to make. You assumed I was siding with Forest when I didn't answer the question the first time but how can I answer why I didn't notice it when you said it? I think if the question was in a post when you were arguing with Forest about things that didn't directly have to do with the subject we were talking about, this is why I missed it as the argument between you two is not important to me and maybe, just maybe I just skimmed that particular post. Like I said, I ain't no damn referee.

3/6/05 04:48:19 PM Massimo, Roma | 10 I have just seen Nicolay Valuev vs Attila Lavin. Attila fought well for two rounds but in the third Nicolay overpowered him by way of a third round stoppage (hoping that "by way" is correct English, I think I have seen it written on here). This Nicolay Valuev is strong, can punch with good power and can boxe quite well for a guy that wilt. Attila is 6'4" but looked very andre' in comparison. I'd like to see him against top contenders such as " The bouncer" Mc Cline, "Yawn" Ruiz and the others. The guy is ready! He is wilter than Terrell and even than Kent's friend in Boston.

3/6/05 05:30:05 PM Fan, Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 Kent and Noam are both o.k in my book. Speaking of o.k, It's ok to have differing opinions without condemning the others viewpoint. I think Joe Frazier would have beaten Larry Holmes. Most wouldn't agree with me, but it's my educated opinion based on watching much film.

3/6/05 06:35:24 PM Angelo, dc | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 Fan: I'd pick Holmes to take Frazier in a fairly easy decision, something like 8 rounds to 3 and 1 even. How do you think Frazier would do against Cooney?

3/6/05 06:54:36 PM Fan, Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 Frazier would knock Cooney out pretty early. Back to Holmes, Holmes was at his absolute best against Norton and won a very close decision. Frazier at his best would give a prime Holmes more trouble than Norton. Frazier before 1971 was much better than 1978 version of Ken Norton. This is even taking into account Norton's brillance against boxer/punchers which is his great trademark. Frazier in 1971 beats any fighter except huge punchers which he would be more susceptible against and of course Prime-Ali. I would pick only the following fighters against Joe in 1971. Prime Ali, Foreman, Liston, Marciano, Tyson a pick-em. That's it.

3/6/05 07:08:24 PM Kent, La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 Angelo, prime verse prime, Holmes verses Frazier would likely play out as Holmes barely pulling out a decision by say 8 to 6 rounds and if the two, like Ali and Frazier, fought multiple times, then a Frazier victory in at least one fight, would not be surprising.

I rank Holmes number three on the all time list behind just Ali and Joe Louis.
3. Holmes 4. Foreman 5. Marciano 6. Frazier 7. Liston 8. Dempsey 9. Tunney 10. Bowe. Just below the top ten would be Lennox Lewis, Holyfield, and Tyson. I am going by how good I think fighters were at their very best, no matter if their very best in prime years were not long. An exception to this would be Buster Douglas who had one great fight, verses Tyson because one great fight is not measured in years. This would also leave off fighters such as Hasim Rahman and Oliver McCall, who both had knockout wins over L. Lewis but who lost in rematches with Lewis. Although Rahman's story may not have completely written yet as he may be a late bloomer. He really looked good in his last fight verses Kali Meehan. I look for Rahman to be a sleeper in the current mix and if he cleans up the division by beating the Klitschko brothers, Byrd, Ruiz (who he really beat no matter what the judges said) or whoever else is put in front of him, then his rating could move close to the top ten. Of course also Joe Louis would have beaten Frazier too. My mistake.

I'm not that sure that Joe Louis would have beaten Joe Frazier. He almost got his ass whipped by Tommy Farr and Billy Conn. I can see no Billy Conn and no Tommy Farr whipping Joe Frazier. As far as boxing skills go (good English !) Louis was much better than Frazier and probably hit a little harder, but he wasn't as tough as Joe Frazier. In a "guts battle" Joe Frazier would have won. I aint saying that Joe Louis wasn't a warrior! As he showed for instance in his fight against Ezzard Charles, he was a lion! But Joe Frazier was two lions.

I am posting a message I got from Alex Ramos of the Retired Boxers Foundation about a boxing movie with a limited distribution. I hope you can see this movie in your area, if it is there. I will be making the drive to Los Angeles for a showing around 8 PM, or closest to this time. Also, if it gets wider distribution, then I hope you can see it then. Retired Boxers Foundation promotes Rick Schroeder’s Movie: “Black Cloud” Retired Boxers Foundation calls Rick Schroeder’s independent film—“Black Cloud”—A Real Drama of Life in the Flesh (Two Page Press Release + Movie Information—May be reproduced and posted) FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE March 7, 2005 [Simi Valley, CA] Alex “The Bronx Bomber” Ramos, Founder and President of the Retired Boxers Foundation, announced today that the Retired Boxers Foundation is undertaking an unusual tactic to promote the true heart and soul of boxing by publicly supporting Actor Rick Schroeder’s directorial debut of an inspiring drama—“Black Cloud.” Black Cloud is a movie about boxing, a real drama of “life in the flesh.” The movie, opening in selected theaters on March 11, 2005, is about Black Cloud (Eddie Spears), a spirited young boxer who backs down from no one. This movie speaks to me and every boxer who has entered the ring with conviction, said Ramos. “Real fighters know boxing isn’t just about knocking somebody out— it ain’t about street thugs and violence. It’s about our hearts and our determination to climb that mountain to a better place in life—out of the ghettos and the barrios and the streets.” The trailer for “Black Cloud” says, “The will of a warrior. The heart of a champion.” This pretty much sums up boxing for the real boxers,” continued Ramos. “Personally, I heard one line in that movie that tells me that Rick Schroder knows what he’s doing with this movie: “You have to lose yourself before you can find yourself.” This is a movie about becoming a man as much as it is about becoming a champion. The Retired Boxers Foundation and the thousands of fighters we represent will be there for Rick and for the movie, which will educate the public about the heart of the boxers who risk everything—the ones who fight with conviction.” Rick Schroder is best known for his acting, most recently in NYPD Blue, and as a child in the 1979 classic, “The Champ,” starring Jon Voight about a boxer raising his young son. It is considered to be one of the best movies of all time, not to mention one of the very best boxing movies ever made. “The Champ” was one of the only films ever to show the emotional magnificence of the sweet science—the relationships and the struggle to succeed. The Champ epitomized the famous Joyce Carol Oates theory on the relationship between boxing and the people who love it, and is now brought to you in “Black Cloud”: “…for the mysterious solace of those who can participate only vicariously in such drama: the drama of life in the flesh.” Schroder told Alex Ramos, “People still stop me to tell me how “The Champ” changed their lives—how it made a lasting impression on them. I know that “Black Cloud” will do the same thing.”

Rick Schroder and Alex Ramos were introduced by the Retired Boxers Foundation’s newest Honorary Board Member, Kerry Daigle, a proud Cajun from Opelousas, Louisiana—and a successful entrepreneur since 1965. He hosts a weekly radio show “Keep Punching with Kerry Daigle”, writes books, keeps a hectic speaking schedule and is a frequent guest on radio and television. Daigle has been a mentor and advisor to Alex Ramos and the Retired Boxers Foundation for many years. Daigle’s website is www.keeppunching.com. The Retired Boxers Foundation will have retired boxers at all of the theaters where Black Cloud opens on March 11th. According to Alex “The Bronx Bomber” Ramos, “Rick Schroder and Black Cloud represent everything that is important to the brotherhood of boxing. He tells our story in a beautiful film about the dignity of a young warrior and the determination that makes a man a champion—not just in boxing, but life. Our motto is “The Undisputed Champions for Dignity!” If you don’t know what I mean, you need to see this film,” said Ramos. The Retired Boxers Foundation mission is to assist retired professional boxers in the transition from their glorious days in the ring to a dignified retirement. For more information on the Retired Boxers Foundation, founded by Alex “The Bronx Bomber” Ramos, visit their site at www.retiredboxers.org.

Black Cloud
Director: Rick Schroder
Writer(s): Rick Schroder
Cast: Rick Schroder, Eddie Spears, Julia Jones, Tim McGraw, Russell Means, Peter Greene
To view the trailer, go to www.blackcloudthemovie.com
Black Cloud is a movie about spirited young boxer—“Black Cloud” played by Eddie Spears, who backs down from no man. In addition to directing the movie, Rick Schroder also plays Eddie Young, a gritty rodeo circuit cowboy, who tries to reclaim the beautiful Sammi Haskie (Julia Jones), with whom he has a son. Tim McGraw joins the cast as Sheriff Powers who intervenes and a vicious fight where Black Cloud savagely beats Eddie. When he comes after Eddie, he is blocked by Bud (Russell Means), Black Cloud’s mentor and seasoned boxing coach. The sheriff and his deputies cruise the boundaries of the reservation and bide their time. Meanwhile, Olympic boxing scout Norm Olsen (Peter Greene), who had witnessed Black Cloud destroying opponents in a Golden Gloves Boxing tournament, offers the fighter an opportunity to fight his way on to the Olympic Boxing Team. Black Cloud defiantly declines, willing to fight only for his homeland, the Navajo Nation.

THE CAST
Branscombe Richmond as Peter Eddie Spears as Black Cloud
Julia Jones as Sammi
Nathaniel Arcand as Jimmy
Peter Greene as Norm
Pooch Hall as Rocket Ray Tracey
Rick Schroder as Eddie Russell Means as Bud Saginaw Grant as Grandpa
Tim McGraw as Sheriff Powers
Wayne Knight as Mr. Tipping

Black Cloud wraps up the story of “Black Cloud,” with a new beginning for Eddie. Black Cloud is a movie about spirited young boxer—“Black Cloud” played by Eddie Spears, who backs down from no man. In addition to directing the movie, Rick Schroder also plays Eddie Young, a gritty rodeo circuit cowboy, who tries to reclaim the beautiful Sammi Haskie (Julia Jones), with whom he has a son. Tim McGraw joins the cast as Sheriff Powers who intervenes and a vicious fight where Black Cloud savagely beats Eddie. When he comes after Eddie, he is blocked by Bud (Russell Means), Black Cloud’s mentor and seasoned boxing coach. The sheriff and his deputies cruise the boundaries of the reservation and bide their time. Meanwhile, Olympic boxing scout Norm Olsen (Peter Greene), who had witnessed Black Cloud destroying opponents in a Golden Gloves Boxing tournament, offers the fighter an opportunity to fight his way on to the Olympic Boxing Team. Black Cloud defiantly declines, willing to fight only for his homeland, the Navajo Nation.
Angeles, CA 90048
310-854-0071
Manhattan City Cinemas Village East
14 Travis St
New York, NY 10036
Staten Island UA Movies at Staten Island
10314 New Park Avenue
Hartford, CT 06106
Loews Plainville
220 New Britain Avenue
Plainville, CT 06062
New Haven/Branford Showcase Cinemas
Orange100 Marsh Hill RoadOrange, CT 06477
Branford Stadium 12325 E Main StBranford, CT 06405
203-481-2711
North Stonington Area85 Voluntown RdPawcatuck, CT 06379
860-599-0400
Rhode Island Showcase Cinemas Seekonk, Route 6One Providence PlaceRevere565 Squire RoadRevere, MA 02151
Liberty Tree Mall TheatresLoews Theatres100 Independence DrDanvers MA 01923750-9019Loews at the Loop30 Pleasant Valley StMathuen MA 01844(877) LOE-WS10
TERMS OF USE &© Old Post Films, Inc.
All Rights Reserved.
Old Post Films, Scottsdale, AZIf you have trouble viewing this message, please click here.
This email was sent to you because you opted in to receive updates about Old Post films. To unsubscribe, click here
Newsletter Design/Marketing Lighthouse GroupTERMS OF USE PRIVACY POLICY™ & © Old Post Films, Inc.
All Rights Reserved.
Old Post Films, Scottsdale, AZIf you have trouble viewing this message, please click here.
This email was sent to you because you opted in to receive updates about Old Post films. To unsubscribe, click here
Newsletter Design/Marketing Lighthouse Group---
| 3/7/05 09:39:43 AM| Forest Ward| New York| jkevin@cs.com| 10 | Fan, regarding your picks of Frazier against the past champs, I am in total agreement with you. I think Dempsey in his prime would have beaten Frazier in his prime. But, what a fight it would have been, shades of Dempsey-Firpo. I always felt Cooney was overrated big punch, but no fire in his belly. |
| 3/7/05 03:01:43 PM| Steve| N.J.| NA| 10 | Forrest, while I do agree Dempsey was something way beyond what we are seeing today, I believe his career would have been short circuited very early on by today's ring rules. |
| 3/7/05 03:10:13 PM| Steve| N.J.| NA| 10 | An Eight count, or even a knockout when a fighter takes a knee, can mean a whole lot if you've gotten your bell rung! By the time the ref gets to you, and chases the other fighter to a neutral corner, we could be talking about a lot more than a ten count. |
| 3/7/05 03:23:40 PM| Steve| N.J.| NA| 10 | Forrest, I think part of the problem in boxing is the very poor control boxing authorities have always had over an important match. If anything unexpected happens, it takes fifteen minutes for an official to take control. All this while we listen to the commentaters give their unofficial opinions of what should have happened. |
| 3/7/05 04:35:51 PM| Forest Ward| New York| raymccormack2003@yahoo.com| 10 | Steve, that questions been asked a lot about Dempsey, how good would he have been if he could not stand over the fighter after he knocked the fighter down. I think Dempsey could of adapted to present day rules with similar results. Dempsey, always received credit for his punching ability. I think what was often over looked about Dempsey was the fact, that he was not a catcher, that he avoided a lot of punches. The reason I can say this with some authority is because I met him twice in his restaurant. Once in 1967, and the last time in Oct 1974, the night his restaurant was being closed down. Both times the man showed good mental health. No slurring of words or other such symptoms of taking to many punches. And God bless he was well on into the years at that time |
| 3/7/05 04:42:33 PM| Massimo | Roma| 4| 10 | Mickey: "I fought in the same night when Firpo knocked Dempsey out of the ring. Who (do) you think became (or got) famous ?Rocky: "Dempsey". Mickey: "And why ?". Rocky: "Because he was a champion". Mickey: "Nooooooo !!!!! It's because he had a manager". Rocky: "The fight is fixed, I don't need a manager !". I think Dempsey is a little overrated. He won the title against a good but not great heavyweight, he was knocked out in 1 by little Fireman Jim Flynn in 1917 (the year of my grandmother's birth in Florence), his best wins were against Bill Brennan, Billy Miske, Fred Fulton and Carl Morris, not all time greats and... He was having a boxing lesson by Jack Sharkey. He retired from the ring to not fight the rising star Primo Carnera.

Interesting side note on Dempsey. Reportedly, when he was in his seventies, a couple of young thugs tried to pull him out of a cab to rob him. Dempsey hit one of them with a left hook and the other with a right hand, knocking them both out! Proof that the big punch is the last thing to go from a fighter's skills! I guess those two idiots never tried to rob an old man again did they?

They picked the wrong senior to rob! Forrest: That's amazing that you met this legend twice---and my bet is that he didn't catch many punches because opponents were too occupied with covering up from his attack!!

How wilt was Jack Dempsey ? I have seen him standing next to Nino Benvenuti in a picture. Nino is 5'10" 1/2 wilt, Jack looked to be about 6'1".

How tall was Dempsey ? I have seen him standing next to Nino Benvenuti in a picture. Nino is 5'10" 1/2 wilt, Jack looked to be about 6'1".

Dempsey's story was one of resilience and perseverance. He was 9th of 11 children from a dirt poor family. To make money he fought in bars as a teenager and turned pro at 19. Imagine the boasting rights being the world champion from that upbringing ! Wow. He invested his money wisely but innocently lost most of it in the stockmarket crash of 1929.

Showing the same courage fans witnessed when he boxed, he regathered and then prospered that bar Forest wrote about. Everything I've read about Dempsey praises him as a decent person AFTER he stopped fighting. In his bar he was respectful to everyone who approached him. Even Red Smith liked him ! To be so thoroughly decent from a terrible upbringing teaches us that no one has an excuse for being a bad person later in life no matter what happened earlier on.

Dempsey closed his bar in 1974. Forest should be honored to have met him and I'm sure he is. The Manassa Mauler died in 1983 leaving a modest estate of between $100,000 and $200,000. Apparently it wasn't hard to be treated to a free drink from Dempsey.

When he died, he was such a prestigious identity that even President Reagan spoke with sorrow of his death. None of us have done anything in life when compared to guys like Dempsey. Whatever we think of his place in the top 10 of great boxers, we should all be awed by his achievements.

Fan - I think you and Kent are okay guys as well. Maybe even Forest, too (but I'm gonna have to finish reading the 'O'Reilly Factor For Kids' before making a definitive decision on him). However, I don't like being blamed for something I didn't do. I posted to Kent querying the elimination thing in good faith and without trying to be a smart ass. Forest intervened and abused me, unfairly I thought. I asked Kent to confirm that he wasn't offended to show Forest I wasn't deliberately being insulting. I was ignored by Kent, who instead went on to make some disparaging and impatient comments, consistent with what Forest was obviously prompting him to do, and then Forest abused me again. What am I, a punching bag ? So I gave Forest some back plus some. I thought I made a pretty decent go of it, too. I'm not pissed like Steve says.

Forest, did you get your photograph taken with Dempsey, or get his photograph? If you didn't, I bet in hindsight you wish you did. If you did, I envy you.

Interesting comments on Jack Dempsey. He is one of my favorites. Both for actions in and out of the ring. I agree with Angelo, the reason why Dempsey did not take many punches is because his opponents were to busy covering up. As the saying goes, "a good offense is the best defense." Dempsey, was well regarded by almost everyone, once he retired. When he died I was told that he left $250,000 to his estate. Whether it was $100,000 or $250,000 that was still relatively modest for a man who had a good steady income after boxing; and lived as long as Jack. But, who knows how much money he gave away to relatives, friends, hid from the tax people re: estate taxes.

I have scrapbooks going back to when Dempsey was a contender right up until the 1960's. Also, I was a close friend of Bob Sheperd, who died last July. Bob, had an extensive Jack Dempsey collection. Which I now have.

Jack Dempsey's personal life was shaky. He was always on the road after retiring from boxing, he could not stand still. Obviously, that makes for difficult relationships. I know one of his daughter's has been dead for some time, and she had a drinking problem. Don't know about the other daughter, the same may be true. I got the impression from his last book and from Bob Sheperd that his relationship with both daughters was rocky in the later years.

I don't have time here to go into details about the 2 times I met Jack in his restaurant, but, yes, I did get pictures taken of him and I; the night his restaurant closed. One of my big regrets was that I did not go to his wake or funeral. John Condon of MSG Boxing, remarked to me sometime later, that few people attended. His reason, Jack outlived most of his friends and associates.

Among the many things I find remarkable about Jack Dempsey, is the good mental health he had late into his 70's, and maybe beyond. I find this remarkable for a few reasons. He had no rules barroom brawls when he was coming up. And he fought a lot of "exhibitions" after he retired from boxing during the great depression. I am going to take a guess here and give my reasons why Dempsey had good mental health late into life. Most of his fights did end early, even his "exhibitions" during the great depression (he knocked as many as 3 people out each night). He probably had good genes (excluding Tunney). And, probably most important of all he was not a drinker. Many fighters, after they retire take up drinking full time, and this has a terrible effect on their brains late into life. Joe Frazier and Emile Griffith did not drink during their boxing days, but, boy they more than made up for it after they retired. And, I will be presumptuous and guess that is partly the cause of their problems today.

How many fights have you seen? I have only seen the Willard fight and sintesis from both the Tunney fights, the Sharkey fight and the final punch in the second Brennan fight. From this fights I got the feeling that he was a big puncher with poor boxing skills. I think Ali would have played with him. I mean no disrespect by saying that, it's just my sincere opinion. But probably I haven't seen enough of him in the ring.

Luck of the draw, heredity, apparently has a lot to do with how a fighter holds up mentally after retirement. I remember Mr. Jimmy saying that there was a gene that predisposes a person to either Altzheimer's Disease or Parkinson's Disease and that a fighter who has this in his family history is more likely to develop the punch drunk symptoms that are the same as either of those two afflictions, but earlier in life than usual. Alchoholic drinks in large numbers no doubt help bring on the affliction. It would be interesting to see if Altzheimer's or Parkinson's are more likely to be brought on by excessive alcohol consumption in non boxers with the heredity towards those diseases. My guess is it probably doesn't help any to be a heavy drinker and this could be the case. People often ask, "why is that fighters like Jerry and Mike Quarry become damaged from boxing but others like Dempsey, George Foreman, and George Chuvalo don't become damaged?" As stated above, heredity, luck of the draw. But also a fighter can have only so many fights in him and once he is over that limit he receives damage that increases with each fight past that limit. This limit is different for each fighter. One fighter can have 30 fights and be damaged while another can have 100 and not be damaged. Of the Quarry brothers, Jimmy boxed as an amateur and he had many fights but he never had a professional career and he did not have damage from the ring. Bob (Robert) Quarry had about 24 professional fights and contrary to some reports, appears undamaged. He denies he has any ring damage and he says he took an MRI to prove this. Bob also was under his limit of number of fights and even though he was not as succesful as a boxer as either Jerry or Mike, he did not receive the damage they did because like Jimmy, he got out of the game early. Same heredity among the brothers but different outcomes. Would I recommend to Bob Quarry that he return to the ring because after all if he can pass the tests to show that he doesn't have damage, and if he can meet the physical demands, then him being in his early forties is conceivable? The answer to this is HELLO NO! Why play with fire and tempt fate?

Who would win, Ivan Drago or Ken Norton?

I've read that although Dempsey lived very comfortably at the time of his death, his Estate was relatively modest. Marciano died almost penniless officially. He didn't have a Will and no one could find where the bulk of his money was hidden. Small amounts were found rolled up in curtain rods but they couldn't find the secret bank accounts that he kept. Rocky apparently lent 'friends' large amounts of money without signed agreements. When he died those 'friends' claimed they paid him the money back a week or so earlier. Unfortunately, when Rocky died he virtually left his struggling parents nothing. That would have upset him because he had promised to look after them for life. His father had worked in a factory very hard looking after his big family. I've read that Rocky didn't trust banks and the government so he hid his money. He hid it so well no one admitted ever finding it. To think that undeserving people got the fortune Rocky worked so hard to get is extremely sad. He had ties to the Mob so probably that's where the loot was hidden.

My understanding about Marciano's finances is similar. Some people have gone as far as calling him a miser. My feelings are if he was one, GOOD. So many fighters were ripped off throughout their careers by managers, freeloaders... that if he was able to avoid this pitfall, all the more better. Marciano was good friends with the owner of Castro Convertibles, a big furniture company in the 1950's and the 60's, I believe it is still around today. I understand that Rocky's daughter believes that Rocky buried the bulk of his money in an air raid shelter (remember them) built on Castro's property in Florida. Once Rocky died, that was the end of the money, it was never returned. Like a lot of people Rocky did not like to pay taxes, and as a result to avoid paying taxes, he was involved in a lot of shady deals with a lot of shady people. He also demanded always to be paid in cash. There was a great book written about Marciano in the 1970's, I think it was called, "Native Son." If just half of the book is true, it is worth reading. Rocky was not a simple guy, he was very complicated. If Rocky did not die so young, I think his life wood have paralleled Jack Dempsey's life after boxing. But this is only idle speculation on my part.
scandalous and should not have been printed. Personally, I thought it was great. To me it made Rocky more genuine and human like the rest of us. But, once again, Rocky was a very complicated person.

The 6'6" Ivan Drago would kill Ken Norton just like he killed the about 6'1" Apollo Creed. I remember that Apollo made love just before dying in the ring (he had a movement on the canvas). Ivan just hit too hard for Kenny, he hit twice harder than Ernie Shavers. The williams is that Rocky's jaw was much better than Chuvalo's. Heck, Chuvalo had a glass jaw in comparison!

In accordance with the benchmark that seems to have been set during this discussion about who avoided who. Sometimes shrewd management can bring out a fighter's true potential, and not squander it. I think if Jerry's career, handled differently, could have gone alot farther. If he hadn't fought Frazier when he did the first time, and taken a pretty bad beating, he might have had more in his gas tank for Ellis, when it really counted in terms of just getting a title. He might have been stronger, more mature, more confident, and definately smarter about playing to his opponent's strengths. Gill Clancy said, "Jerry always took every fight as a personal challenge of manhood. His opponent was a boxer, Jerry would go out and try to box with him. If he was a slugger, Jerry would go out and attack." I remember hearing this. I'm not sure about avoiding a fighter, it's about timing, knowing when to fight him in your career. Isn't it wiser to get to the title the safest way you can? Then you can fight all contenders for as much money as you can get. Prize fighting is not about being brave to the point of stupidity. In the final analysis, IT'S a business. We who enjoy the mayhem should judge more gently.

Clubber Lang or Frazier?

Clubber Lang's punches were really impressive during the entire ROCKY 3 from the beginning (when he told Mickey "I want Balboa!") to his second fight with Rocky for the title. I think that Mr. T has to be very strong in (the) real life. What a power! Frazier would have to be careful (or careful) in the first 3 rounds; if he is still on his feet after 3 rounds, Clubber is in trouble. Clubber has never fought more than 3 rounds in his entire career. So, or Clubber by KO in the early rounds or Frazier by mid round stoppage (somewhere between the 6 and the 8 round). Ali' would have no problem at all with Clubber! He would use the "rope a dope" strategy and would tell him "that's all you got?" and "what's my name?". He would knock Clubber out in eight to show he is great!

I invite all of you American people in my home because tomorrow ESPN shows 2 out of the 3 Norton-Ali' fights (probably the first and the second). Kent, I know that Los Angeles-Roma is a bit of a trip but Ali' and Norton are worth a little sacrifice. | 3/10/05 09:18:15 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentalleent@aol.com|||10|Steve, I think it should read,"amends" the 2000 Muhammad Ali Reform Act," instead of how it is written on the home page of TJQF. Because amends means adds to the law that was passed that year and the amends to was brought out in 2003 but didn't get to the floor of the senate for a vote.I agree that a national commision goes a long way towards the improvement of boxing here in the U.S. and other governments could pass similar laws to improve it in their countries.| 3/10/05 01:57:04 PM|Forest Ward|New York City||raymccormack2003@yahoo.com|||10|Steve, I agree with you 100%, I believe Jerry Quarry was mismanaged on his way up. A friend of mine who is a boxing writer, visited Jack Quarry a few months back. And even Jack Quarry now admits he was out of his league when he handled Jerry's early career. Jerry for many years before he died, admitted the same.It's my understanding that when Jerry fought Jimmy Ellis he had a back injury, and the fight should have been postponed. Jerry fought Ellis before he fought Frazier. The reason Jerry gives why it was not postponed was that the purse was so big and Jack Quarry and Johnny Flores never saw that much money before. The fight was still relatively close. Jerry staggered Ellis in a late round (I think the 13th), but he could not follow up. It was a terrible fight.Jerry's original trainer when he turned pro was Bill Slayton, who later handled Ken Norton when Eddie Futch and Norton parted ways. My recollection of Bill Slayton was that he was a gentleman, and even after he was let go by Quarry's father: Slayton still had fond feelings for Jerry, and he felt that Jerry was mishandled, at least in the beginnig of his career.| 3/11/05 02:11:31 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Moosygoop@aol.com|||10|Mass,Thanks for the invite. U want me to bring the beer? Oh and give me the address so i can look it up on mapquest. One other thing, i dont speak Italian, will that be a problem?You don't need my address. Why ? Because I'm very famous in Roma, about as famous as Shaq is in Miami, a true Roman legend. There are only two guys more famous than me in Roma: Francesco Totti and Giovanni Paolo II. All you have to do is to ask:" I'm looking for M.G.L. (Massimo Giulio Leonardo)". They will answer (or respond) "Aaaah, the boss !". When I walk in the street I have to put black spectacles on...But when you are 5'6" 135 pounds is hard to hide. The language is not a big problem, not a big deal. Most Italian speak a bit of English, at least some sort of Italo-English, it's the language we "learn" in school. I didn't learn "ain't,chump,bum,ass and wimp " in school tough, I learnt them on here. Muhammad Ali' taught me a few words such as "sucker and humble". Yeah, Muhammad Ali'. I'm waiting for his fight with this guy Ken "Who" Norton. Ali' is given 7-1 favorite against this marine, he should not be fighting this unrated duck ! Norton had his ass kicked by Luis Garcia 3 years ago. I think it is not going to take more than five rounds for Ali' to destroy this bum !| 3/11/05 06:32:24 AM|Smokin'Joe Frazier|Philly, Pennsylvania||legends@lefthooks.com|||10|Ehi Massimo look, I have been sparring for five yaers with Kenny and he definetely got the stile to give Ali' trouble. I will be at ringside for this fight rooting for my buddy Ken.| 3/11/05 06:33:48 AM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|Come on Joe, be serious ! This guy Ken has no chance in hell !| 3/11/05 11:20:25 AM|English Professor|Anytown USA||blahblah.com|||10|Massimo, you didn't learn, "whoever smelt it, dealt it," in school? Very important English term.| 3/11/05 11:54:43 AM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|English professorI understand every single word in that sentence but I'm not sure I understand what that sentence means as a whole. | 3/11/05 12:07:09 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|At least 75% of the time, Quarry would have taken Ellis in that era (late 60's). I don't know if it was the back injury, an off night, or something else, but the failure to follow-up on that late round punch that shook Ellis cost Jerry a piece of the title. Frazier would have beaten Jerry to unite the title, but Jerry would have still been a Champion. Watching that fight frustrates me to no end---almost to the point that I expect a different outcome every time that punch lands. It's hard to believe that Ellis got off the hook. The shocking part is that Ellis didn't do anything brilliant to survive, it was just lack of follow-up by Jerry to put Ellis away. Ellis was a nice fighter, but in my opinion, didn't bring as much to the table as Jerry. I wish they had a later rematch.

Has anyone here actually seen the Frazier-Jumbo Cummings fight? I ask because Boxing Times magazine listed it as one of the top 20 "most controversial draws" in boxing history. The fight took place in 1981, when I was really following boxing----but for some reason, the whole thing escapes me. I knew there was a draw, but didn't know anything was that controversial about it. What happened?

The book I read on Rocky was simply titled 'Rocky Marciano' and was written by Everett M. Skehan. The foreward says that it was written with "family assistance by Peter, Louia, and Mary Anne Marciano". It was a very easy book to read and one of the most enjoyable and informative on boxing I've read. The book tells in a very simply way about what Rocky the man was like. I've begun to read one on Jack Dempsey, but it is harder to get into. I'll persist. Dempsey's upbringing as a child was so hard and deprived that it's a wonder he survived it. On the score of toughness, he'd kick all our butts. I think Cloverlay was good for Frazier and there is no doubt that they saw him as a commodity, while leaving the duty of care bit to Yank. Cloverlay made lots of money from the deal and I understand Joe eventually considered that they were taking too much from his pay packet. The contract expired just before the second Ellis fight. Joe says that he didn't want it renewed because they were taking too much money. An alternative view (and I'm not trying to be unkind here) is that Cloverlay realized that Joe was all but a spent force. By the way, in last month's Ring Magazine there is a photograph of Frazier posing with a very good looking blonde model. Joe's dressed in all black with a black cowboy hat on. He looked well which, despite my thoughts on his career, is very good.

I CAN'T BELIEVE IT ! THE GREAT MUHAMMAD ALI' GOT HIS ASS KICKED BY KEN NORTON. I think now he should retire, he is not going to get his title back. Everything is possible but against George Foreman ? So big, so strong, so young, so fearless ? Against George Foreman who knocks his opponents out one after the other one (I mean "uno dopo l'altro") in less than 3 rounds ? Not very likely !

Hey Smokin Joe Frazier, did you avoid fighters like Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers, and Mac Foster because they were big punchers? I say Bligh me, I will be kissing the Blarney Stone this week and hoisting a couple of pints of ale for what ails me.

Awe, c'mon, Kent! Now you've even managed to offend me! Do you really think all Irishmen speak like drunken 1700th century sailors? I've always been respectful of your murdering, savage, redskin heritage. Now you start calling us drunkin sailors. I sorta take offence, I think. Even if it's partly historically accurate. Does anyone here really think any OP of the seventies fighters avoided each other out of fear, or for business reasons? Get to the title first, then fight all comers for big bucks.

Kent, happy Saint Patty's Day!

Nah, it's just one big strange unexplainable almost unbelievable coincidence that every fighter of Joe's era that he didn't fight just happened to be a puncher. The sticking point seems to be the word 'avoid'. What we must all agree on is that he didn't fight them. He preferred tomato cans like Daniels and Stander and the second Ellis who was winless for his four prior fights. Boy, that was a great fight. Anyone got a tape of it? Did anyone bother to film it?

Honestly, guys, you can bet your life Joe was ducking guys after the first Ali fight. He was shot. He saved himself for the big fights he had to have. But he didn't explore new horizons or take any risks he didn't have to take. HE DUCKED THEM ALL! Norton, Shavers, Lyle, Foster. QUACK. QUACK. QUACK. QUACK. WADDLE. WADDLE. If it quacks like a duck, if it waddles like a duck, IT'S A FRIGGIN' DUCK. GOT IT!!!

My place in history? Somewhere above that scamboogah! I won each of those 3 fights, the tapes are still there to show that.!

Don't delude yourself, Kent, Joe was very vulnerable after the first Ali fight. His management knew it and that's why they kept him away from the big hitters when they had other options. Mac Foster would have held off Smokin' Joe's onslaught? Sure Foster might have gotten lucky and landed one or more of his bombs early and hurt Joe but odds are this would not have happened. I think Joe would have overwhelmed Foster by the mid rounds, much like Jerry Quarry did when he hit Foster with everything but the kitchen sink in the sixth round for a KO.

Steve, Lore and behold! You haven't partyed until you partyed with some Navajos fresh from the rez (the reservation) up from New Mexico way. Those boys sure can party and they are a fun bunch! But the Irish know how to party too. When I met our Jerry Q, he could put away a few pints and not be worse for the wear. This despite the fact that besides his Irish blood, the Quarry clan has a wee bit of the Cherokee blood in em.

Don't delude yourself, Kent, Joe was very vulnerable after the first Ali fight. His management knew it and that's why they kept him away from the big hitters when they had other options. Mac Foster had something like 30kos from 31 fights. Answer me this Kent: Who was the most dangerous opponent - Stander or Norton, Daniels or Shavers, the second Ellis or Lyle? Mix them around a bit and you still get the same answers.

It's funny that Frazier huggers find it so unbelievable that their Joe might be vulnerable to guys like Norton and Shavers and Lyle and even Foster, when a tomato can named Bruce knocked Joe down and Oscar Bonvena dropped him twice. Frazier huggers are like that Japanese soldier found in the jungles of Borneo some 25 years after WW2 ended.
He was still wandering around thinking the war was still on despite the fact that his side had been thoroughly beaten a lifetime before. And when you debate topics around Frazier, you are like that knight from Monty Python getting hacked to pieces on the bridge. After he lost both his arms, he warned that he'd kick the guy to death. Off went his legs, and he'd bite you to death, and on it went. That's what you guys remind me of. As each piece of your argument is demolished under weight of facts, you move onto some other silly fantasy. It's fun though as you're giving me a laugh.

How dare you question Frazier's opponent selection. Let's see, he took on heavy hitting KO artist Joe Bugner and the in-prime and dangerous Jimmy Ellis in 1975. If only he had fought Horshack from "Welcome Back Kotter" that would have been THREE very tough fights! For the big comeback, it was Jumbo Cummings---and if he had waited a little longer, he could have taken on Screech from "Saved By The Bell."

After watching Norton-Ali' 1 twice I really don't understand how the judges could score it a split decision. The fight was pretty one-sided, I think Ali' only won round 11, while Norton won at least round 2,4,5,9 and 12. Ali' fought one of the worst fights of his career but, on the other hand, showed a lot of courage by fighting with a broken hand. Norton won easily the first fight in my book. The second fight was a classic, one of the best heavyweight fights of the 70's. It was very close and could go either way. I think that probably Norton was ahead by 1 point at the end of the fight, but many rounds were close and I can see how the judges could score it a split decision win for Ali'. Norton threw the hardest shots and in the seventh round Ali' was really in big trouble. I have rarely seen Ali' so close to being knocked down. Norton was really a great fighter, had heart, could punch hard, could jab, could boxe, was a great body puncher...If he had had Chuvalo's chin he would have been the greatest heavyweight of all times.

After watching Norton-Ali' 1 twice I really don't understand how the judges could score it a split decision. The fight was pretty one-sided, I think Ali' only won round 11, while Norton won at least round 2,4,5,9 and 12. Ali' fought one of the worst fights of his career but, on the other hand, showed a lot of courage by fighting with a broken hand. Norton won easily the first fight in my book. The second fight was a classic, one of the best heavyweight fights of the 70's. It was very close and could go either way. I think that probably Norton was ahead by 1 point at the end of the fight, but many rounds were close and I can see how the judges could score it a split decision win for Ali'. Norton threw the hardest shots and in the seventh round Ali' was really in big trouble. I have rarely seen Ali' so close to being knocked down. Norton was really a great fighter, had heart, could punch hard, could jab, could boxe, was a great body puncher...If he had had Chuvalo's chin he would have been the greatest heavyweight of all times.
breathing room to unload his bombs and although Shavers would have a chance to hurt Frazier, particularly in the first two rounds, Shavers didn't have the huge height advantage that Foreman had over Frazier which Foreman used to catch Frazier coming in before Frazier could crowd him, much like Thomas Hearns did to Pipino Cuevas as Cuevas like Frazier never landed his best punches to get into the fight after being badly hurt early in the fight. This would make Shavers much less likely to catch Frazier with his bombs like Foreman did. I see a Frazier/Shavers match up ending up like the Frazier/M. Foster fight, by a mid round knockout win for Frazier, which might come in Shavers' case as early as the third round when Frazier got to "smokin" full steam ahead. Remember if Jerry Quarry could hurt and overwhelm Shavers for a knockout win just like Quarry also did to M. Foster, then Frazier certainly could do the same thing. Next up I will give my views on a Frazier/Ron Lyle match up but first you will have to dispute my take on Frazier verses M. Foster and Frazier verses Shavers. My point is I don't think Frazier was avoiding the sluggers you guys point out in the relevant period, before 1975 because I flat out don't think these fighters could have beaten Frazier and also the public wasn't calling for such fights. You can argue that Lyle might be an exception as he had wins over Shavers, Bonevena, and Ellis but this would have made such a match with Frazier attractive in 1975 after Frazier had already beaten Quarry, who had beaten Lyle and while I can't say for sure if Frazier's fight with Quarry in 1974 was an official title elimination fight, Frazier certainly deserved a title shot with his win. So which fight should Frazier take next? A title shot verses Ali or a fight with contender Lyle? I realize you will likely point out again that he took the Ellis fight instead of a fight with Lyle as Lyle beat Ellis but that was for preparation for the Ali fight and Frazier was entitled to a tune up against a faded Ellis, which makes complete sense because of Ellis' simlilar style to Ali's, because Frazier had already earned his title shot. Again at the time in question the public was calling for an Ali/Frazier fight much more than they were for a Frazier/Lyle fight. What the public wanted is the paramount issue here. I think my main point is that we can't just lump all of the sluggers together and make a general statement that Frazier couldn't beat them, so his management knew this and avoided them, just by how the the first Foreman fight turned out as Foreman, unlike Shavers, Lyle, and M. Foster, was an all time great while these other fighters could hit hard but were flawed fighters Frazier likely would have beaten. You also shouldn't include Norton in this group as although he hit hard, he wasn't the pure slugger Foreman and these other fighters were.
in him after this. But boxing is also a money game and I believe that Joe would have taken fights with at least some of the fighters the critics say he was avoiding if the money was there.

Joe did pick and choose the most money he would make but that doesn't mean they were not dangerous choices. The Quarry fight was not a sure thing as their first fight was, contrary to some opinions here, not an easy fight. It was a war that saw Joe outlasting Jerry.

The second fight turned out to be an easier fight but nobody knew that beforehand as a lot of the media and fans were predicting a Quarry victory.

The second Quarry fight was also by far the more lucrative fight in 1974 than either a potential Frazier/Lyle or a Frazier/Shavers fight. Especially since they had both lost to Quarry the year before and Shavers was an even less attractive opponent financially for Frazier as he lost to Bob Stallings as well (who?).

Special thanks to whoever the poster "Smokin Joe Frazier" is for starting up again the argument that will never end.

| 3/15/05 02:40:33 AM | Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville | Massimo - I don't doubt what you say about Ali v Norton. Whether you are right or wrong, I think you are the fairest guy (as in honest, not blond hair colour) on this site. However, if Norton did all that against Ali (and he did), then why didn't Frazier fight him ? By the way, Massimo, I once read you commenting on Mac Foster. What did you say about him, because Kent thinks he's a bum.

Kent - I admire your loyalty, but all you do is speak about what might have happened. We know how Ali went against these other guys. He fought them all. We don't know how Joe would have gone against them and you are only guessing. Perhaps he might have beaten most of them - who knows - but he would have had at least one loss, given that he was vulnerable to big punchers.

If Norton could beat Ali at least once, how can you say he wouldn't have beaten Frazier ? Likewise, if Shavers could deck Foreman and Holmes, why couldn't he have done the same to Joe ?

I believe that Joe, through no fault of his own, had a weak constitution that further deteriorated by the terrible damage he sustained in the first Ali fight when he also dealt out terrible damage to Ali (who just happened to have a more durable constitution and, incidentally, it was Ali's incredible tolerance to punishment that has him in the wheelchair he is in today).

Frazier, at a very young age, suffered from high blood pressure. He also suffered eye problems, such as cataracts that usually happens at a more mature age. His recovery rate after fights was poor and slow.

I'm not trying to be controversial, but Joe was nearly absolutely shot after that first Ali fight. Sure, he could get up for the really big fights once every so often, but he couldn't do it consistently.

That's why he chose to fight tomato cans in between Ali and Foreman. He dodged fighting some of the most significant fighters of his time, instead choosing to fight a guy like Ellis whom he had beaten easily before and who hadn't won for four prior fights.

Look, even in his prime, Joe did not have an 'all time great' jaw. Bruce put him down. Bonavena put him down twice and nearly stopped him. Foreman knocked him down 6 times - every 45 seconds - in their first fight when Joe, according to his legion of lovers, was still in his prime.

Kent knocked him down 6 times - every 45 seconds - in their first fight when Joe, according to his legion of lovers, was still in his prime.

If Michael J. Fox was available, heck Joe would have picked him instead of Lyle or Shavers or Norton or Foster, if he could get away with it.

Joe became a very protected fighter. His management was extremely careful about who they put him in with. I'm sorry you don't like that, Kent, but when you leave gaps in your resume, as Joe did, then you leave yourself open to criticism.

So, Kent, and other Frazier huggers, put the jungles of Bornea behind you. Get someone to carry you off Monty Python's bridge while you still have that dumb melon on your shoulders. Because Joe's status in history has been determined and (listen up to the grammar Massimo) it ain't at the very top !|
Thanks for the very nice words! Mac Foster was one hell of a fighter! He was too slow to be called a champion, but, with that power and those long arms he was not an easy pick for anyone. Nobody could step into the ring against Mac Foster whistling, you had to be well trained and focused on the fight.

I will say this. If Frazier went in and tried to storm Foster early, which he would have, he might not have made it to the middle rounds. The Foster that fought Quarry knocks out Norton that night, that is not a question. Quarry took one hell of a shot, that's the only reason he could come back to win.

No Howard I don't think Mac Foster was a bum. In fact I think the Quarry win was a big one for Jerry. I do think Foster was limited as a fighter especially as far as mobility is concerned and hand speed as well, two key points that would make it more difficult to nail Frazier if such a match up had occured. The key time would be if Foster caught Joe in about the first two rounds and if Foster could finish him if Joe was hurt. After this, when Joe was completely warmed up, I see Joe swarming and overwhelming Foster much like Jerry did in the sixth round of his fight with Foster.

I still see the whole point about how Frazier would have done against the other sluggers besides Foreman as not how Joe did in that fight as Foreman was one of the best finishers and an all time great while the others, being good fighters were not in big George's or Frazier's for that matter, league.

I also don't believe that a Frazier verses Foreman fight always ends up so one sided in favor of Foreman. The key is Joe never hit him with his best shots and Foreman could be hurt, as seen by his being hurt by Ali, Lyle, and even Jimmy Young. Frazier did land one token left hook in the first round before he was badly hurt by Foreman but in wasn't his best shot, the kind that floored Ali, tore down Buster Mathis, dropped Ellis like a shot from a high powered rifle, or tore up Jerry Quarry.

Again the key to the perception of how Frazier would have done against the fighters the critics say he avoided is based on the image of seeing Frazier go down six times versus Foreman and if the referee and/or Joe's corner had seen fit to properly stop the fight, then the image in people's minds would be less severe. People would see that Joe got caught and hurt early and he was never really in the fight, which is what happened and they wouldn't image Joe as being as helpless as he appeared.

If I had been in Joe's corner, I would have stopped it at least after the third knockdown or if I gave Joe a minute to recover between rounds, at the absolute very most I would not have let him endure three more knockdowns as one more with have been enough to verify Joe was in great danger.

What would have happened if Joe had somehow surived Foreman's early attacks and he hit Foreman with his own power shots? It is quite possible that the fight would have been much like the Foreman/Lyle brawl, a possible even fight with both fighters hurt, hard to pick a winner but ending in a mid round knockout. Now if it goes more than about seven rounds I would pick Frazier to win this one because of his advantage in stamina.

Of course the critics argue that everything I am saying is hypothetical and while it is true we don't know for sure if Joe would have beaten the fighters in question, we also don't know if he would have lost to any of them.

I saw a film of Ali vs. Mac Foster and Foster did really well. He lasted the full 15 and I believe that loss was the highlight of his career. He was not a bum.

Something strange I did notice about Foreman is that his capacity of taking a punch did seem to improve with age; I think Foreman 2 could take a punch better than Foreman 1, I don't know why. He took some very good shots by Cooney, Moorer, Holyfield, Gunn etc. and didn't go down, not even once. I wonder how Foreman 3 would take a punch, maybe better than Chuvalo !!!!! Of course, I'm joking, I hope we are not going to have a Foreman 3 and that Foreman is not going to fight in the future. | |3/15/05 03:12:45 PM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville||10|Kent, I am disappointed in you. I know that you try your hardest to be fair and honest (most of the time, anyways), but you are falling deeper into the hole you have dug for yourself over Frazier. ||Not only do Frazier fans dismiss the fights he ducked by saying, "Oh well, Joe would have beaten them easily anyway", but you have now begun to try and reconstruct fights he lost. |We now have Kent saying, in reality, that the Foreman victories over Joe were unconvincing and that if they fought 10 times Joe would have won some of them. Really ? When Joe fought Foreman he wasn't able to stand up for longer than 45 seconds straight before George knocked him down again and again and again and again and again. SIX TIMES. |(By the way, included in that 45 seconds between knock downs, was the 10 second referee count. So, in actual fact, there was only 35 seconds fight time in between knock downs.)When Foreman knocked Joe down SIX TIMES in their first fight, Joe (according to his fans) was in his prime and at the pinnacle of his career after beating Ali. Yet Foreman knocked down a supposedly in prime and peaked Frazier SIX TIMES.George wasn't the fastest puncher around. We all recall Ali going "whoosh, whoosh" as he mimicked Goegre's punching style before Zaire. George was a very big puncher, but he wasn't a fast puncher. Why then do Frazier fans think it ridiculous to say that Mac Foster posed a threat to Joe ? Foster wasn't a fast puncher either, we know that, however he had power. Enough power to knock Joe down (remember Bruce and Bonavena) and perhaps knock him out (especially early when Joe was extremely vulnerable).Kent also notes that Joe never got to land his famous left hook on Foreman. He does this to try and leave a doubt in our heads that maybe Joe was a little unlucky against George. Kent thinks if they'd fought a third time Joe could have turned the tables. Baloney ! How many chances does he want ?What do you expect Foreman to do, if they fought a third time, Kent ? Stand still and stick his jaw out so that Frazier can left hook him ? Gimme a break. That's not how it's supposed to work.And even if Joe lands the hook and George goes down, George more likely than not gets up before stopping Frazier (again). Foreman managed to get up after Shavers hit him, right ? Bet your house he gets up after Frazier.Simple logic, Kent, destroy the various scenarios you suggest trying to defend Frazier from the justifiable critizism.| |3/15/05 04:14:25 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|Howard C.-Foreman never fought Shavers, he fought Lyle. I think that the correct English for that is "Howard C., you're mixing Shavers up with Lyle" or something similar. But I do believe that Foreman was ahead against Frazier in Kingston at the time of the stoppage.| |3/15/05 04:16:20 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|Howard C:It was Lyle who was able to knockdown Foreman, not Shavers. But other than that, your points are well taken. Foreman would have pole-axed Frazier each and every time, no matter how often they would fight. You know, both Frazier-Foreman fights, especially the first one, looked like an adult abusing a small child. That wouldn't likely change—the third time, the fifth time, the tenth time they fought. Frazier was helpless against Foreman's size and power. True, Shavers wouldn't have the height advantage over Frazier that Foreman enjoyed. True, Lyle wasn't the closer that Foreman was. I don't know if they would beat Frazier or not—and we'll never know because the fights didn't happen. As for Norton, I think Joe would have won that one, but again, as Howard C pointed out, it's a guess, because the fights were never made. Thanks Yank. | |3/15/05 07:14:16 PM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net||10|Angelo, I'm glad to know your not a Frazier hater. I really enjojed that analogy about Frazier being beating like a small child by an adult. Of course your not trying to belittle Frazier in any way. At least Frazier had the courage to get back up six times. What other fighter even had the balls to fight Foreman again. I didn't see
Ali scrambling for a rematch against Foreman. | 3/15/05 07:29:00 PM| Steve| N.J.| dmmsrm@comcast.net| | 10 | Howard C., If Frazier was absolutely shot after the first Ali fight, then what's that say about Ali in the "Thrilla In Manilla". I guess two shot fighters put on the greatest heavyweight fight of all time. |
3/15/05 08:09:18 PM| Kent| La Habra, Ca| Kentallenent@aol.com| | 10 | No Howard, I never said Foreman wasn't completely dominate against Frazier. What I said was Frazier was out of it by at least the third knockdown and it should have been stopped sooner and that Joe was never in the fight. I also said if the referee and/or Joe's corner had properly stopped the fight sooner, the image of Joe being helpless verses Foreman would not be so firmly in people's minds. They would see that Joe got caught and badly hurt very early in the fight and he was never able to mount an offense. My scenario is based on what might happen if Joe had somehow survived and mounted an offense and that Joe hit very hard. Foreman could be hurt and Joe was almost as hard a hitter as Lyle, who hurt Foreman badly and Joe was a much harder hitter than both Ali and Young, who also hurt Foreman. \\
I don't count the second Foreman fight as that was not the real Frazier but it was a shell of the real Frazier and that fight should never have happened. \\
But you argue that Foreman did destroy the real Frazier, close to Joe's prime and while this is a good point, my point is Joe got caught and hurt early and he never recovered and this can happen to any fighter at any time, especially heavyweights. Would it happen every time Foreman fought Frazier? Possible because of styles but we don't know for sure as they only fought one time when Joe was still near his prime. \\
Because of similar styles, would Rocky Marciano fair any better than Frazier did verses Foreman? Maybe not but I don't see a lot of the Frazier critics saying the same thing about Rocky and it wouldn't surprise me that they would rate him higher than Foreman on the all time list even though I believe the outcome might be the same as the Frazier fight. \\
Rocky was also short and he had to get in close to his opponents to do his damage and he also may not have made it out of the early rounds verses Foreman but if he did, he had the power to hurt Foreman and win the fight. \\
Yes M. Foster put up a good fight with Ali but he was far behind on the scorecards but he was game. \\
I think Foster was slower than the young George Foreman was though and less likely to catch Frazier early the way Foreman did. Did he have the power to hurt Frazier? Of course he did but I still think Joe would have outhustled him. |
3/15/05 09:18:54 PM| Steve| N.J.| dmmsrm@comcast.net| | 10 | Hey Howard, no offence, but you southwestern native americans have no idea how to party. I was a journeyman ironworker for 18 years. I worked out of Camden, N.J. I worked with quite a few Mohawk Indians from New York. These are the first Indians to encounter and fight the white man. They softened us up for you Apaches. They were excellentconnectors and were fearless on high iron. I worked with a Mohawk who wore sneakers on the iron. He also had very long hair, which he wore in a poney tail. He was a great guy to work with. |
3/15/05 10:20:41 PM| Kent| La Habra, Ca| Kentallenent@aol.com| | 10 | Hey Steve, the Mohawks didn't wear their hair in their namesake Doo? You gotta admit, they had some funky hair, the first punk rock look.My buddy out from the Arizona Rez would differ with you about who the bad asses were. Our Apache brothers sure didn't mess around with no Geneva Convention when it came to prisoners of war. The soldiers or settlers who got scalped were the lucky ones as the southwest natives often would "stake" a captive out in the desert naked, with his eyes forced open all of the time facing the fierce desert sun. This would leave him in the open for the elements to slowly consume him.Most of my native blood is from California where our ancestors greeted the Momnax or ocean people, which is what they called the English speaking people, with open arms only to end up losing the land to the newcomers. To this day, English is called by this word which also means sailor as the first Englishmen they met were sailors.Hey Kent, no, in the early seventies, the Mohawks who came to our union hall didn't wear their hair in the traditional Mohawk "doo". If they ever really wore it that way? All the guys I knew had normal haircuts, but were very proud of their heritage, and would tell you about it in heartbeat. The guy I worked with was a biker. I shouldn't have used him as an example. He was an excellent Iron Worker, but a party monster beyond a white man's comprehension.Hey Kent, ever hear of the , Lena, Lenapies? They were the native americans who inhabited New Jersey. That's not a misstype, Lena Lenapies.Hey Howard C., thank you for apologising for that billy the squid joke. Jeez, that was pretty bad. Kent, so your saying that "Mommox", means drunken Irish or English sailors who are here to defile our virgin wilderness?
how George Foreman avoided other big punchers during his first career? With the exception of Ron Lyle, who gave George the fight of his life and damn near knocked George out, which verified what George's management knew all along that George was vulnerable to other pure sluggers, George never faced another big slugger during this time. George took fights with light fisted Joe "King" Roman, in a title defense when he could have given Mac Foster a shot if he wasn't avoiding Mac, and fighters like Dino Dennis, Scott Ledoux, and Pedro Agosto, when he attempted a comeback after losing to Ali. How come he didn't face pure slugger Earnie Shavers during this period? After all, Shavers was better than light fisted Roman, Dennis, Ledoux, and Agosto. Also, when George was coming up, Sonny Liston was still around and he could have faced Mac Foster at that time as well but George's management was avoiding big sluggers even then. Instead he took on Ted Gullick, who presented no danger but who was a short swarm in type fighter. There is no way possible Foreman took the Gullick fight to prepare for a title shot against Frazier because of Gullick's style, right? George could have fought slugger Jeff Merrit, who was around then, instead but he was avoiding sluggers. Also, George took on George Chuvalo too, the same George Chuvalo who Frazier had fought and Chuvalo was not a pure slugger and a safe fight for George, right? I believe Cleveland Williams was still around then as well but George didn't fight him either. Another pure slugger George avoided? As for the title shot verses Frazier, Joe was no threat to George as George could beat Joe seven days a week and twice on Sundays like Joe was a little kid and Geogre was his daddy, no risk for George there, right? After all, Joe was not a pure slugger for George to avoid and there was no way Joe punched hard enough to hurt George if he had landed his best shots, right again? MY POINT IS WE CAN TAKE ALMOST ANY FIGHTER AND APPLY THE SAME LOGIC THE FRAZIER CRITICS USE ON JOE AND SAY THAT FIGHTER AVOIDED CERTAIN FIGHTERS AND WE CAN COMPARE THAT FIGHTER'S RECORD TO MUHAMMAD ALI'S RECORD, WHO WAS THE EXCEPTION TO THE RULES AS HE DID TAKE ON JUST ABOUT ALL COMERS, JUST AS SOME HAVE DONE WITH FRAZIER'S RECORD AND THE OTHER FIGHTERS WILL COME UP SHORT AS COMPARED TO ALI, JUST LIKE FRAZIER. I really don't believe Foreman was avoiding other sluggers but that Foreman took certain fights and not others because boxing is a business and he took what would make him the most money in the long run. SOUND FAMILIAR? | debate goes on, the more Jerry Quarry and Joe Frazier's stock and punching power seem to diminish. I am starting to believe that Norton, Shavers, Lyle, and Bruce were much better fighters who where cheated out of there shot at greatness.

[3/16/05 02:52:48 AM] Kent same||same||||10||Howard, I just used the same logic you applied to Frazier's career but I applied it to Foreman's career. If this logic holds water for Frazier's career, then why not for Foreman's as well?
[br]So answer why George didn't fight Earnie Shavers, Mac Foster, Cleveland Williams, Sonny Liston, and Jeff Merritt, and when he finally fought Ron Lyle, he took a lot of punishment and he was badly hurt. He came very close to losing. His management knew all along he was vulnerable to sluggers and the Lyle fight verified it.
[br]Again, he took on Ted Gullick when he could have fought Foster and it isn't possible that this was a tune up with a fighter with a similar style to Frazier's style, right?
[br]None of you guys answered my question about whether Rocky Marciano would have suffered the same fate verses Foreman as Frazier. It is quite possible if such a match up were possible it would have ended the same say for Rocky, an early knockout victim to Foreman but none of you want to be as critical of Rocky as you are to Frazier.

[3/16/05 03:15:46 AM] Ed Cicero NY | MOoseygoop@aol.com ||||10||Kent, I look at Frazier like this... He beat a lot of top fighters. But most of all he beat Ali when Ali was at or near his peak. The fight was considered by some as the biggest sporting event in history and Joe won it. Did he leave a lot of himself in that fight? Yes, which is why Ali won the next two battles and Joe was never quite the same fighter. Did Frasier dodge some of the big punchers? Probably and most likely because of the punishment he absorbed in fights shortened his career (whether he won or lost) so his management was careful with him.
[br]But think about it... could Joe louis, Dempsey, Marciano, Johnson or (Carnera.. for u Mass) have ever beaten a prime Ali? Most think not... but Joe Frazier did and Ali had no excuses the night he lost to him.

[3/16/05 04:11:50 AM] Massimo Giulio Leonardo Cini (that's my name !) | ShaqGOAT.com ||||10||Kent-I wouldn't trust the scorecards when Ali' is involved. Did you ever see the Ali'-Mac Foster fight? I didn't, so I don't know if it was close or not, and I will never know until I watch the fight. Do you know what were the scorecards of the Ali'-Bonavena fight at the time of the stoppage? 12-2, 10-3-1, 8-5-1, all for Ali'. Ah, ah, ah, ah !!!!!!!! Anybody who saw the fight knows well how ridiculous that scorecards are ???? I think that the judge who said 12-2 should be in jail yet (or should still be in jail)! I'm not even sure that Ali' was ahead at the time of the stoppage and if he was, definitelly not for more than 2 points. In Manilla the scorecards were 66-60, 66-62, 67-62 for Ali' ah! ah! ah! ah! I had Ali' 1 point ahead. Norton-Ali' 1 a split decision ?????????????????????????????
[br]Ah, ah, ah !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!Ali' was one hell of a champion, maybe the greatest of all times, but never trust the scorecards when Ali' is involved !

[3/16/05 04:15:43 AM] Kent La Habra, Ca | Kentallenent@aol.com ||||10||Ed, I agree about the significance of Frazier's win over Ali and I think some people here have singled out Frazier and they are more critical of him than other fighters.
[br]This can be shown by an example of me taking a look at Foreman's record and applying the same scrutiny they use on Frazier's record and the same conclusion, but not necessarily true, can be made about George avoiding punchers too as both (if we are talking about George's first career) only fought one big slagger. Frazier, Foreman was this opponent, and regarding Foreman, Ron Lyle was the only puncher he faced.
[br]They point out how Frazier's overall record can't compare to Ali and how Ali took on all comers but not many fighters can compare to Ali. That is why Ali was called the greatest as no one, with the possible exception of Joe Louis can measure up to him. Even Marciano, with his perfect record, can't measure up as Marciano left relatively early after only
Some fighters are more durable than others, that's for sure. Joe Frazier was not the same man after 15 rounds with Ali, when, heck, Archie Moore fought almost 300 fights, including some very good heavyweights (Marciano, Valdes, Baker, Lavorante, Cassius Marcellus Clay etc.).

Kent -- the reason why a young George Foreman never fought Liston was that both men were managed by Dick Saddler who obviously did not want either one to lose.

John, you miss my point. I was playing "devils advocate" by showing we can make the same arguments the Frazier critics are using concerning Joe avoiding all punchers with another fighter, in this case Foreman. I really don't believe Foreman was avoiding punchers like Liston. That he, like Frazier, picked opponents for other reasons besides avoiding a group of fighters because of a certain skill they had in common. I think both fighters, in general, fought certain opponents to make the most money in the long run.

Sure Frazier because of his style and training habits in the gym, ie the Philadelphia gym wars, was limited to the number of fights he had in him but I don't believe he avoided all big punching heavyweights but that he if there was more money in it for him, he would have fought the fighters in question.

When speaking of Foreman, I am talking about the first phase of his career. When he was older, ten years after his first retirement, he did face pure punchers Tommy Morrison and Gerry Cooney, losing to Morrison, who fought more like a boxer verses George by back pedaling and jabbing, and beating Cooney by knocking out Cooney after nearly going down from a huge Cooney left hook.

I understand that you are trying to explain the omissions in Joe's resume by saying, "Hey guys Foreman didn't fight everyone either." Well, Kent, that wasn't the argument. The topic was Frazier. Anyway, I don't agree with your comments.

Foreman shocked the world by beating Frazier in January 1973. George thought he was bullet proof and then knocked out Jose Roman (yes, Kent, an easy one) and then in March 1974 he knocked out Norton (a hard one). The much harder one against Ali followed in October 1974. That was a shocking loss for Joe. It sapped his confidence. He took 1975 off fighting exhibitions and when he came back he wasn't dodging anyone. Foreman beat Lyle in January 1976 and Frazier in June 1976.

By then Foreman was personally struggling and we know that after the Young defeat in March 1977 he was seeing visions and other things that made him join the church and he didn't fight again for 10 years.

After Foreman beat Frazier in the first fight, he had another nine fights. His opponents included Norton, Ali, Frazier, and Lyle. Gee, that's not too bad, is it, Kent? After all, Frazier never fought Lyle or Norton. He ducked them.

Kent asks about Marciano v Foreman and I say this. Marciano had a greater capacity for absorbing punishment than Joe did. I think that would be the big difference because Marciano was capable of pushing Foreman into the later rounds and Frazier wasn't.

In the later rounds, Marciano, in my view, was capable of taking Foreman (who lacked stamina) out with his huge right (followed by an elbow, of course). I can't be sure that Rocky would win, because George was such a murderous puncher.

But Rocky's 49 nil record grants him the benefit of the doubt, while Joe's 32-4-1 record doesn't give him the right to any presumptions. In fact, quite the opposite.

To me, comparing Marciano to Frazier is like comparing chalk with cheese. Marciano won 100 % of his fights, Joe only 86 %. Rocky never got stopped. Joe got stopped three times. Ones a legend; the other doesn't deserve to be.
fighting Liston. Foreman was one of Liston's sparring partners and he was in awe of Sonny. And then Sonny's decline was so fast, and Foreman's rise so sudden, that they never met in the middle and it was never feasible for them to do it. Thanks.Steve: No, I'm not belittling Frazier per say, but I am belittling his performance against Foreman and his management's apparent aversion to guys more threatening than a 1975 version of washed-up and anemic Jimmy Ellis. When Ellis was actually good, Frazier pulverized him. What's the deal with fighting him in '75, when he had nothing at all left? As for the Foreman fight(s), Frazier was courageous but overpowered and outmatched. And he has nothing to be ashamed of because he fought his hardest and kept getting up to try to defend his title in the first fight---and had the balls to take on Foreman again and actually do better the second time. Sorry if the analogy offended the Frazier faithful. By the way, Frazier has always been a great guest on Howard Stern's show. I don't think he's been on lately, but was a funny and interesting guest in the past.Bowe-Zumbrun confirmed for 7 April. Sad thing.Joe Frazier was very good. Everyone has favorite fighters. Mine was Floyd Patterson. I will argue for Floyd Patterson forever. I know that he wasn't the greatest or anything, but he was good enough for me. I wish Floyd wouldn't have have fought so long. I like to think Floyd would always be remembered.I've been away from the board for almost a week. I come back and the Ali Worshippers #2 #3 are still at it. I come back and the Ali Worshippers #2 #3 are still at it. you guys give new meaning to the expression "Chinese water torture." Pan, you are one of the more knowledgeable and reasonable persons on this site. Help me with this question. What is wrong these people, worshippers #2, #3, what is their hangup with Frazier? |Actually Forest (Frazier Lover 1 and hall-of-famer), I know you must get sick of us correcting you, but I have to do it again. The Frazier subject was gone and then Frazier Lover 2 brought it up again. He got it wrong, same as you, so in the interests of accuracy, we had to correct him. You guys have got me scratching my head. First off, you Lovers said that it was wrong to compare the careers of Ali and Frazier. So we stopped doing it. Now Frazier Lover 2 wants us to compare Frazier with Foreman. Whatever suits your case, I suppose, regardless of the hypocrisy. Frazier Lover 2 says, "Joe ducked a lot of punchers, but so what, so did Foreman." Not so, Lover 2. Foreman fought Lyle and Norton, and Joe didn't. Frazier Lover 2 complained that maybe Joe could beat Foreman if he'd fought him a third time because Joe never got to land a decent left hook. Hey, Kent, show me the rule where George has to stand still and stick his jaw out for Joe to hit. If Joe couldn't land it in two fights, HE AIN'T NEVER GONNA CONNECT WITH IT. So Frazier Lover 2 wants to compare Frazier to Foreman. Foreman two knockout wins over Frazier. Frazier no wins. Foreman knocked Joe down eight plus times, Joe never knocked him down once. Comparison finished. George wins by knockout (again). (Oh by the way, Frazier Lovers, George could stand up for more than 35 seconds straight against Joe. Frazier couldn't. Every 35 seconds down he went.) We don't need to guess about Joe and George. We know the result. But we don't know about Joe versus Norton and Lyle and Shavers and Mac Foster and Listin, et al. Joe ducked them. Fact not speculation.Don't blame me. I haven't written anything for days. I'm not getting involved this time round. |Actually some poster who called himself Smokin Joe Frazier brought up the topic again. I thanked him for it, though somewhat sarcastically, for starting the topic again.Smokin Joe (the poster) is not me as even I am not nutty enough to talk to and answer myself.Howard, comparing Foreman not fighting other sluggers, and I don't call Norton a pure slugger, he hit hard but was, like Jerry Quarry and Smokin Joe himself, a step below Lyle, Foreman, Shavers, Liston, etc. in the power department. So Foreman only faced one slugger, Lyle.I don't believe it is important that Foreman didn't face other sluggers as there are likely other reasons why he didn't face them, just like Frazier. But bringing it up is relevant because if your argument works for Frazier, then why not for Foreman too? Using your logic method, then why did Foreman fight Ted Gullick instead of Mac Foster and why did he fight Scott Ledoux and Joe Roman instead of Earnie Shavers? It is exactly like saying about Frazier, why did he fight Terry Daniels instead of Lyle and why did Joe fight Ron Stander instead of Shavers. Although in Stander's case it makes more sense that Joe would give him a title shot instead of Shavers as Stander had knocked Shavers out!!Howard, that your logic is faulty can be seen by pointing out that it isn't fair to compare anyone's record to Ali's; Frazier, Foreman, or anyone else. That is why he is in a class by himself in that he did take on all comers and this is one of the reasons Ali is the greatest.But we can compare Frazier and Foreman's records and I believe I have shown by doing so that there can be other reasons both of these fighters didn't fight certain fighters other than because they were avoiding punchers. The main one being boxing being a business and fighters at the world class level take fights that are more attractive monetarily.I am amazed about how people here can't see that I wasn't putting down Foreman to build up Frazier. I was making an analogy for argument's sake. I don't use what is known as the either/or fallacy. That just because something is true doesn't mean something else always has to be false.I also don't consider that Frazier and Foreman fought twice as the second fight had Frazier as a washed up shell of himself. I am talking about a Frazier right around his prime and if he had landed and hurt Foreman first, then maybe the outcome might have been different or if he had survived early knockdowns as he did against Bonevena, this too can change a situation.I have to point out too, that pointing out Frazier got knocked down by some guy named Bruce in his second professional fight is the height of absurdity. Anyone can get knocked down at any time but what matters is how he reacted to it. I assume Joe got up and won as although I never saw the fight, Joe was undefeated when he fought Foreman for the first time.Another comparison we can make concerning Frazier and Foreman concerns something that Foreman says he regrets to this day and that is says he could have gotten up after his knockdown verses Ali. He says he should have died in that ring before admitting defeat and Frazier would have willingly lost his life. That is one thing no one can deny, Frazier's bravery and I am not questioning Foreman's bravery as I am just repeating what Foreman said.I also still say that the image of Frazier going down six times is what sticks in people's minds- that the first Foreman fight should have been stopped much sooner and if Joe had been decked two or three times, and if the fight was properly stopped, then it would have been an impressive win for Foreman but the image of a helpless Frazier would not be in people's mind. Again, they would say he just got caught and knocked out as that is what happened.
silly arguments again and again and again.You wrote that you "don't consider that Frazier and Foreman fought twice" because Joe was not in his prime the second time around. Fine. Let's just delete any fights Joe had when he was out of his prime. While we're at it let's do the same for everyone else. Kent's going to rewrite everyone's boxing resumes. That's journalism for you. Gimme a break.Kent also writes that the Bruce knockdown was irrelevent and mentioning it is the "height of absurdity" because it was only Joe's second fight. Someone hit me on the head with a hammer. That fight doesn't really count because Joe was too young and inexperienced. After Kent finishes rewriting record books deleting out-of-prime fights, he's gonna delete knockdowns and other incidents that happened early in careers. After all, non-prime fights late in Joe's career, and pro fights early in his career, don't count. According to Kent. And then Kent gives us his coup de grace (excuse moi, my French is as lousy as Kent's logic). Kent says it is unfair that people have the image in their minds of Joe going down six times against Foreman because the referee should have stopped the fight after the third knockdown. Hello ! Knock, knock. Are you there Kent ? I have an announcement. JOE WAS KNOCKED DOWN SIX TIMES BY FOREMAN. THE IMAGE IS REALITY. But reality doesn't count either because Kent's gonna rewrite the record books again and delete the last three knockdowns in the Foreman fight (remembering of course that the second Foreman fight never really happened because Joe was out-of-prime).After Kent's finished with the 'white out', there's nothing much left. If Kent has his way, the record books will show that Joe ducked more guys than he actually fought.Kent was also the guy who complained that the Foreman/Frazier fights meant little because Joe never got to land his left hook properly. Kent thinks prize fighting should be some schoolyard game of Jackass where you stand there without moving and let the other guy take his best shot at you. Kent criticized Foreman for not standing still to allow Frazier to hit him, he criticizes the referee for not stopping the fight after the third knockdown, and he's criticizing the history recorders for including Joe's out-of-prime later fights as well as his early fights.And just to show that Frazier Lovers don't have a sense of humour, in comes Forest (Lover # 1). He kicks me and others for saying things about his beloved Joe.Forest, the topic of Frazier was dead and gone. And then Steve and Kent and someone posting as Smokin Joe began making comments again. Kent (Lover # 2) then specifically criticized me for not answering his questions. And when I did as he wanted and answered the questions, Forest (right on cue, enter stage left) came in and king hit me for doing it. Obvioualy you guys can't handle counter punchers. You and Kent think that I should just stand still with my chin out while you throw your best shot. And I was just starting to like you guys. | 3/17/05 02:44:33 PM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|I do believe that if the referee hadn't stopped the fight, George Foreman would have kept knocking down Frazier and at about the twenty-first knockdown Joe Frazier would have died. | 3/17/05 05:29:45 PM|Steve|N.J.||na|||10|Hey Ed from Cicero,very well said!| 3/17/05 05:44:39 PM|Steve | N.J.||na|||10|Angelo, Jimmy Ellis wasn't that bad as a heavyweight. He did knockout Bonevena. The guy you keep reminding everybody knocked down Frazier twice. | 3/17/05 06:05:11 PM|Steve | N.J.||na|||10|Hey Howard, your correct about me. I just can't let this debate about Frazier go. Consider my position, I watched Frazier come up live and for real in Philly. In his first 20 fights, He was a nonstop punching machine! He generated more excitement on the east coast than Steve Carlton, the pitcher for the Phillies. I have a personel attachment to Joe. I will always think he was in the top fifteen all time. You will never change my mind. That said, I am declaring a unilateral truce with you. I won't argue with you about Frazier anymore. | 3/17/05 06:43:16 PM|Steve | na|||na|||10|Hey Massimo, Your last post about Frasier wasn't that funny. I agree with Kent. The Foreman vs Frasier fight was a typical example of referee ineptitude! The fight should have been stopped before the second round! Frasier lost a lot by getting battered around for three merciless knockdowns in that second round. It brings to mind Quarry's second fight with Frasier. Quarry took an unnecessary beating, because Joe Louis was an totally inept referee.

3/17/05 07:21:22 PM | Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville
I have no issue whatsoever with you having a different opinion to mine, even when it involves Joe Frazier. I admired Joe Frazier, but I just think his place in history is inflated.

3/17/05 07:53:22 PM | Kent | LA HABRA, CA | kentallenent@aol.com
In 1972, before he got his title shot verses Frazier, George Foreman fought: Joe Murphy Goodwin, Clarence Boone, Ted Gullick, Miguel Angel Paez, and Terry Sorrell.

3/17/05 08:14:37 PM | Ed | Cicero n y | mooseygoop@aol.com
Thanks Steve.

3/17/05 09:18:43 PM | Steve | NA | NA
Hey Kent, whatever happened to Jimmy Dorsey? Do you remember the conversations we used to have about Mike Nixon? He was Jerry's brother-in-law back in the day.

3/17/05 09:36:43 PM | Kent | La Habra, CA | kentallenent@aol.com
I haven't heard from Jimmy D lately. Last I heard he was in Seattle, Washington state but I am not sure now.

3/18/05 01:13:38 AM | Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville
You're starting to come off like a madman, what with all the upper case stuff. CALM DOWN. I think you are a good guy, but you just have to get over this Joe Frazier fixation which has turned into some sort of unhealthy obsession with George Foreman.

3/18/05 01:13:38 AM | Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville
You're starting to come off like a madman, what with all the upper case stuff. CALM DOWN. I think you are a good guy, but you just have to get over this Joe Frazier fixation which has turned into some sort of unhealthy obsession with George Foreman.
The parrot was hanging upside down from its perch, unblinking eyes staring straight ahead, birdseed uneaten in a container, it can't fly, feathers stuck together with riga mortis (Massimo ?), it's not breathing, no pulse, stone cold dead, kapput.Anyway the store owner was trying to sell the dead parrot to some pinhead with cash in his pocket who walked in wanting to buy a live parrot. The store owner kept trying to convince him that the dead parrot was really alive and was just having an afternoon nap.Well, Kent, the dead parrot is Joe Frazier after Ali 1, and you and Forest remind me of the store owner. The pinhead with the cash are those still unconvinced about Joe and who are listening to your excuses. SQUAWK. SQUAWK. SQUAWK.By the way, Kent, I sincerely hope I have not upset you by mucking around here. I am not taking it entirely seriously and I hope that you stop doing that. It should be an open discussion without the tension. It is not personal. You have my best regards. So does Forest.Steve - yes, I agree about a commission to control boxing. The current set up is a joke.|
you can use the information to discredit Frazier, you should be able to use the same type of information to discredit Foreman as well. IN REALITY I DON'T BELIEVE EITHER FIGHTER WAS AVOIDING THE FIGHTERS IN QUESTION. Angelo, I am amazed a fan with as much knowledge as you have doesn't recognize the second Ellis fight was a tune up to prepare Frazier for Ali because of Ellis' similar style to Ali's style. Joe got some much needed rounds to keep him sharp while waiting for Ali. You must recognize Frazier had already earned his shot by the Quarry win, the highest available contender. The other high level contender at the time, Ken Norton, was regrouping after his own devastating knockout loss to Foreman and it is highly like that Norton wouldn't have taken a Frazier fight at that time because he needed to take lessor opposition during this period to get himself ready for another title run. Fighters often do this after a devastating loss as a confidence rebuilder.

I must add on to my last post that Ron Lyle too might not have wanted to fight Frazier in the period of mid 1974 to mid 1975 because he also got a title shot in 1975, before Frazier got his shot and fighting Frazier at that time was too much of a risk for him. Of course I am only speculating as far as Lyle is concerned but it could be the case. My main point is there is more than one interpretation of available information and the Frazier critics are sticking to one circumstantial conclusion that doesn't hold up. The only thing we can truly say for sure is we don't know why some fights happened and others didn't. I just don't believe that by simply saying Frazier avoided all sluggers except for Foreman that this makes it true. I understand your points---and misunderstood your position on Foreman---you weren't knocking Big George, but you were using the logic to show why Frazier wasn't ducking anyone either. We might need to agree to disagree on that, as I still believe it's all too convenient that Joe never got in against big punchers after Foreman, except for Foreman II. As for Ellis, I do understand the need for tune-ups and the fact that when preparing for a big fight, the boxers try to put opponents in the ring who are similar in size and style to the guy they plan to face in the "big fight." I guess I don't understand why Frazier would literally travel half way around the world, practically as far away from Philadelphia and the U.S. as civilization exists, to accomplish this against Ellis---a guy who couldn't win a fight to save his life---pitifully washed up and not even a shell of the fighter who Frazier had already destroyed years earlier. Couldn't "Smokin' Joe" have done the same thing to "stay sharp" against sparring partners (guys who could probably whip Ellis by 1975)? What about Jimmy Young, a slick PHILADELPHIA boxer who could move, and without huge KO power? I don't buy the notion that this work was needed to sharpen the tools for Ali. More likely, it was an easy payday against a shot fighter who had practically no chance of winning. A good idea? Sure. Bad for Frazier's supposed legacy? Definitely. | and Mac Foster and Liston and Terrell might have given more of the same. It is entirely coincidental that every fighter Joe didn't fight just happened to be a big puncher.

8) It is entirely coincidental that the guys Joe fought instead had morgue technicians with "toe tags" chasing them around at the weigh-ins.

10) The image fight fans have of Joe hopelessly floundering around on the canvass against Foreman should be expunged from minds because it was unfair that the referee didn't stop it earlier.

11) Joe's management was being smart in babying Joe's career and keeping him away from punchers.

12) Joe's management was dumb for not stopping the Foreman fight earlier.

13) Yank's dog ate the fight contracts for Liston, Terrell, Lyle, Shavers, and Mac Foster before Joe got the chance to sign 'em.

Kent you've become the patron saint of the Dead Parrot Society. Congratulations. Time to move onto something else?

3/18/05 03:46:36 PM|Steve |N.J.||NA|||10|Howard, thanks for reminding me of that skit. Apparently you have as strange a sense of humor as I do. That scene, the dead parrot, I can't even write about it without having to stop and laugh, was from Monty Python's weekly show on BBC "And Know For Something Completely different." That scene had me falling out of my chair. I guess it's an acquired taste.

3/18/05 03:55:04 PM|Steve |N.J.||NA|||10|Hey Noam, I agree with you that these ladies are beautiful and are well conditioned athletes, with great bodes. Especially the girl who was a Playboy Centerfold, she always wore pink in the ring. However, maybe it's deeply ingrained, old fashioned male chauvinism, but I cringe every I see a female fighter get punched in the chest area. That can't be doing their breasts any good.

3/18/05 04:11:11 PM|Howard C. |Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Steve - I recall another very funny skit which was set in ancient Rome. These two Romans went to a stoning, as you would I suppose had you been living then and had nothing else to do on a Saturday afternoon. Anyways, there was a bunch of bad guys tied to posts waiting to be stoned. I guess they'd done something wrong like stealing the emperor's grapes. Or perhaps they were Christians.

3/18/05 04:39:35 PM|Steve |N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Hey Howard, don't knock free enterprise. The offbeat, ironic humor is great, though, ain't it?

3/18/05 05:21:40 PM|Steve|N.J.|NA|||10|Hey Kent, I tried to call you the other day, but your number is now unlisted. While I agree with you completely on Joe Frazier not ducking Lyle, Shavers, and certainly not Norton, you've got to admit, this debate has taken on a life of it's own. It's starting to get a little weird between you and Angelo and Howard. All three of youse guys are starting to come off as being stubborn to a fault. I'm sure I'd rather talk to you about Native Americans, and old stories about the wild adventures of Jerry and his brothers. Like we used to do.

3/18/05 05:25:38 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Angelo, Jimmy Young in early 1975 would have been a good opponent for Frazier to take to prepare for Ali but Young may not have been the safe opponent, which for preparations purposes is OK. After all, Young was fresh off an upset win over Lyle. I know someone will jump all over this point but I think even they acknowledge Joe deserved his title shot on the basis of his win over Quarry and also by his good performance verses Ali in their second fight.

Still, Ellis, for a guy who had nothing left, fought well verses Frazier the second time around, in fact better than in the first fight.

What a lot of people forget is a fighter, for one last chance, can rise to an occasion because he knows it is his one last chance at the big time after a few losses in a row and Ellis did this. Ellis won the first five rounds by outlanding Joe behind a good left jab and the fine use of the right hand lead, which Ellis, at his best, was famous for. It was called a "sneaky right" that caught many an opponent by surprise and it is what put down Oscar Bonevena twice when he fought Ellis. Joe started smokin big time in the sixth round and he wore Ellis down on the way to a ninth round stoppage win for a TKO. I haven't seen the scoring on the fight but it wouldn't surprise me if Ellis still had a slight lead at the end of the fight or maybe the scorecards were even, he had built up such an early lead. There could have been some 10 to 8 rounds for Frazier in the later rounds though.Also, Ellis was a harder puncher than Young and I am not sure why people paint him as having no punch at all. Bonevena knew he could punch and Shavers knows it too as Ellis almost had Earnie out on his feet from punches of his own before Shavers landed the tremendous right uppercut out of nowhere. If Ellis lands two or three more punches and Shavers doesn't land the uppercut, we would have had Shavers as the first round knockout victim.I agree with you about women boxers. My view is best put this way. If I was ever lucky enough to be in the ring with say, Anna Nicole Smith, my priority wouldn't be punching her in the chest. I'm not suggesting that Joe was ducking her, though.Yet you Dead Parroters are sticking to your silly beliefs about Joe not ducking anyone. You're as outdated as that Japanese soldier wandering aimlessly around the jungles of Bornea thinking that the wars still going. Setting you guys straight is almost becoming a full time career for me. Gerri, Forest, what are you guys doing ? Kent needs some help here.Your are right Howard going into their second fight Ellis seemed like a safer opponent then Lyle, Foster or Shavers but as it turned out, Ellis, a former heavyweight champion, something none of those other fighters can claim, fought very well. I was just saying, anything can happen in any fight and it turned out to be not as safe for Joe as it seemed beforehand. I am just pointing out other possibilities than the conclusions you come up with. Howard, have you ever heard of a tune up fight taken because of similar styles to the fight someone is preparing for? That is what the second Ellis fight was intended for, to keep Joe sharp as he waited for Ali. I also can't see why you are not open to the possibility of Lyle, who got a title shot before Joe, not taking a possible fight with Frazier as he knew he would be fighting Ali and he didn't want to jeopardize it. I am not sure if Frazier/Lyle was ever in the works but Lyle being the one not wanting the fight is in the realm of possibilities, especially after seeing how Frazier beat up Quarry, a fighter Lyle had lost to just about a year before.

| 3/18/05 07:49:51 PM | Steve | N.J. | NA | 10 | Noam, your pretty good. I myself wouldn't get into the ring with anyone at my advanced age. Well, maybe if the money was right, maybe a 35 year old girl, who weighs in at a strapping 115 lb. Only if she fought Frazier first. Oh, it would have to be mud wrestling. Otherwise, I'd punch her right in the chest area. |
| 3/18/05 08:07:48 PM | Steve | N.J. | NA | 10 | Hey Noam, I'll bet R.S. is out there somewhere grinding her teeth together. |
| 3/18/05 08:21:06 PM | Steve | N.J. | NA | 10 | Hey Noam, I strongly resent your veiled implication that Frazier was ducking Anna Nicole Smith. Remember, Frazier easily KO'd, Ron Stander, who fought a disputed draw against Ms. Smith. |

| 3/18/05 08:41:39 PM | Steve | N.J. | NA | 10 | Frazier ducking these guys for whatever reason is a moot point. It didn't happen! Now, for whatever it's worth, which I know ain't much. Lyle was too slow of hand and foot, it would have been a replay of Jerry Quarry vs Frazier. Shavers couldn't handle a pressure fighter, he did well against boxers who were leery of his punch. Norton, ah, Norton. I read somewhere that Frazier beat up on Norton on a regular basis in the Philly gym wars. I also read that Jerry Quarry knocked out Norton in a sparring session. It might be hearsay, but it's better than the opinions you guys have, which are based on nothing. |
| 3/18/05 09:37:47 PM | Steve | N.J. | NA | 10 | Here's a thought just thrown out there. How would Ali have done against Foreman in a rematch within say, six months of their first fight? In, let's say, Madison Square Garden? |

| 3/19/05 01:12:06 AM | Kent | La Habra, ca | same | 10 | Steve, Ali likely would have wanted a venue in a hot climate because George literally couldn't take the heat. The talk of a fix makes no sense in Zaire as I believe somehow Ali knew Foreman's stamina would be even less in that hot climate and true to form Foreman wilted in the 80+ degree heat even at four o'clock in the morning. |
| 3/19/05 02:29:04 AM | Massimo | former caput mundi | 4 | 10 | The answer to your last question is: DOWN GOES ALI', DOWN GOES ALI', DOWN GOES ALI', THE HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION IS HELPLESS WHILE FOREMAN IS HITTING HIM WITH HUGE SHOTS !!!!! All jokes apart, I'm not sure how this fight would have gone, it's hard to say. Ali' fought one of his greatest fights in Kinshasa, he went toe to toe for 7 rounds with "Small" George Foreman and then knocked him out in eight, to show he was great! Did Foreman see God after the Young fight? Oh really? Interesting! How will he be? I see the Madonna every day. She's as wilt as Kent's friend from Boston. She is pretty wilt for a woman! |

| 3/19/05 03:07:40 AM | Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville | 10 | Kent - you're like a one legged duck waddling around in circles with your defense of Frazier. That second Ellis fight was a post mortem that Joe was trying to pass off as a contest. He had to take it to the other side of the planet to fool people into buying tickets for it. Foreman certainly had more room for improvement than Ali did after that first fight. If Foreman wised up and got away from the hot, humid conditions for the second fight, then I think he probably beats Ali. Ali wouldn't have got as pumped and motivated for the second fight, while Foreman would have been given the humiliating loss. |
Foreman would have paced himself better and Ali was probably out of tricks. Had they fought a second time then history might have changed. Foreman would never have retired like he did, and Ali probably would have been sent into retirement earlier. However, with Ali you never knew. He could always spring a surprise. I don't think that George really had his mind on the job after that loss. He didn't chase Ali for the rematch.

Had they fought a second time then history might have changed. Foreman would never have retired like he did, and Ali probably would have been sent into retirement earlier. However, with Ali you never knew. He could always spring a surprise. I don't think that George really had his mind on the job after that loss. He didn't chase Ali for the rematch.

Steve, I thought Anna Nicole Smith deserved the verdict over Stander but the more interesting story was who was fatter as it was before Anna lost a lot of weight. All kidding aside, Stander was a good prospect who never really lived up to his potential because of his poor training habits, ie, like not training at all for a fight with Ken Norton, which of course he lost. It was a very painful win for Norton though as Stander repeatedly hit Norton low on the way to a mid round KO loss. | 3/19/05 06:32:51 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Steve, I thought Anna Nicole Smith deserved the verdict over Stander but the more interesting story was who was fatter as it was before Anna lost a lot of weight. All kidding aside, Stander was a good prospect who never really lived up to his potential because of his poor training habits, ie, like not training at all for a fight with Ken Norton, which of course he lost. It was a very painful win for Norton though as Stander repeatedly hit Norton low on the way to a mid round KO loss. | 3/19/05 06:32:51 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|

Guys: I'm fighting some late Winter flu or cold, and literally hacked my lungs out and almost fell out of my chair laughing while reading Howard C's post on the Dead Parrot's Society, and also Steve's views on how wierd our stubbornness is getting. I will say, wierder still is how well Frazier was able to perform against Ali out of pure hatred. Because Kent is right---I have Ellis-Frazier II. on tape and Ellis fought surprisingly well for someone who was done, and make no mistake about it--he was done. Bette Midler would have KOed him in '75 and it wouldn't have been pretty either. Then, even after Frazier has his hands full with punchless Jimmy Ellis, he fights Ali tooth and nail in Manilla, giving us a classic, and it's got to be the hate factor. I'll also say this---Frazier often criticizes Ali for the insults leading up to the Frazier-Ali fights, and I admit they were over the line. But Joe, Ali was just promoting the fight and got carried away. Meanwhile, Frazier calls Ellis "pudding" after beating him. Is this sportsmanlike? No, it isn't---it's childish and unnecessary. It's also a lot worse for one's manhood, when you're a professional boxer being called pudding by someone who beat you---than it is when you're a champion, and the challenger is mocking you by calling you Uncle Tom, which was clearly done tongue in cheek, to get a rise, not because Ali meant it. And after Manilla, Ali stood in the ring and called Frazier "The greatest of all time next to me," which is what a sportsman does to honor someone he just beat...not liken him to pudding. | 3/19/05 11:21:58 AM|Angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Guys: I'm fighting some late Winter flu or cold, and literally hacked my lungs out and almost fell out of my chair laughing while reading Howard C's post on the Dead Parrot's Society, and also Steve's views on how wierd our stubbornness is getting. I will say, wierder still is how well Frazier was able to perform against Ali out of pure hatred. Because Kent is right---I have Ellis-Frazier II. on tape and Ellis fought surprisingly well for someone who was done, and make no mistake about it--he was done. Bette Midler would have KOed him in '75 and it wouldn't have been pretty either. Then, even after Frazier has his hands full with punchless Jimmy Ellis, he fights Ali tooth and nail in Manilla, giving us a classic, and it's got to be the hate factor. I'll also say this---Frazier often criticizes Ali for the insults leading up to the Frazier-Ali fights, and I admit they were over the line. But Joe, Ali was just promoting the fight and got carried away. Meanwhile, Frazier calls Ellis "pudding" after beating him. Is this sportsmanlike? No, it isn't---it's childish and unnecessary. It's also a lot worse for one's manhood, when you're a professional boxer being called pudding by someone who beat you---than it is when you're a champion, and the challenger is mocking you by calling you Uncle Tom, which was clearly done tongue in cheek, to get a rise, not because Ali meant it. And after Manilla, Ali stood in the ring and called Frazier "The greatest of all time next to me," which is what a sportsman does to honor someone he just beat...not liken him to pudding. | 3/19/05 11:21:58 AM|Angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|

Pudding? Maybe it was butter? Whichever, it's a pretty piss-poor insult toward another professional figther.| 3/19/05 11:47:17 AM|Massimo|morituri te salutant, Caesar||Colosseo.com||||10|Guys: I'm fighting some late Winter flu or cold, and literally hacked my lungs out and almost fell out of my chair laughing while reading Howard C's post on the Dead Parrot's Society, and also Steve's views on how wierd our stubbornness is getting. I will say, wierder still is how well Frazier was able to perform against Ali out of pure hatred. Because Kent is right---I have Ellis-Frazier II. on tape and Ellis fought surprisingly well for someone who was done, and make no mistake about it--he was done. Bette Midler would have KOed him in '75 and it wouldn't have been pretty either. Then, even after Frazier has his hands full with punchless Jimmy Ellis, he fights Ali tooth and nail in Manilla, giving us a classic, and it's got to be the hate factor. I'll also say this---Frazier often criticizes Ali for the insults leading up to the Frazier-Ali fights, and I admit they were over the line. But Joe, Ali was just promoting the fight and got carried away. Meanwhile, Frazier calls Ellis "pudding" after beating him. Is this sportsmanlike? No, it isn't---it's childish and unnecessary. It's also a lot worse for one's manhood, when you're a professional boxer being called pudding by someone who beat you---than it is when you're a champion, and the challenger is mocking you by calling you Uncle Tom, which was clearly done tongue in cheek, to get a rise, not because Ali meant it. And after Manilla, Ali stood in the ring and called Frazier "The greatest of all time next to me," which is what a sportsman does to honor someone he just beat...not liken him to pudding. | 3/19/05 11:47:17 AM|Massimo|morituri te salutant, Caesar||Colosseo.com||||10|

Now you are saying that Frazier was a bum and that his only weapon was his hatred verses Ali' !!!! Come on ! If Frazier was a bum how did he beat Jerry Quarry twice convincengly ? Come on (again)! Frazier and Ali' were different fighters ! Ali' could take a punch better than Frazier, but Joe could hit harder. Frazier had a much wider arsenal of weapons. 95 % of Ali's punches during a fight were jabs, he almost never threw an uppercut or a hook. Joe could knock a guy out with a left hook. I rate Ali' above Frazier mostly (or especially) for their slightly different behaviour against Foreman, but Joe Frazier was no bum !| 3/19/05 03:27:28 PM|Angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Pudding? Maybe it was butter? Whichever, it's a pretty piss-poor insult toward another professional figther.| 3/19/05 11:47:17 AM|Massimo|morituri te salutant, Caesar||Colosseo.com||||10|Now you are saying that Frazier was a bum and that his only weapon was his hatred verses Ali' !!!! Come on ! If Frazier was a bum how did he beat Jerry Quarry twice convincengly ? Come on (again)! Frazier and Ali' were different fighters ! Ali' could take a punch better than Frazier, but Joe could hit harder. Frazier had a much wider arsenal of weapons. 95 % of Ali's punches during a fight were jabs, he almost never threw an uppercut or a hook. Joe could knock a guy out with a left hook. I rate Ali' above Frazier mostly (or especially) for their slightly different behaviour against Foreman, but Joe Frazier was no bum !| 3/19/05 03:27:28 PM|Angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|
Shavers, Cooney) pummeled Norton relentlessly and knocked him around the ring. In Ali's book, he wrote that he feels that Norton would have beaten Foreman had he known that the winner would defend the title against Ali in Zaire. Now, I don't believe that for a minute. I believe that ten times out of ten, Foreman would have crushed Norton or Frazier. But I do buy into part of Ali's point—-motivating factors improve a guy's performance and make them achieve things they wouldn't ordinarily be able to. Frazier was certainly no bum, but his resentment of Ali helped him focus during training and fight like an animal against Muhammad. And Massimo, taking their careers into a thorough and careful consideration, Frazier doesn't even come close to Ali's legacy. Look at their records, opponents, common opponents, longevity, duration of holding the title, number of title defenses---Frazier isn't in the same stratosphere. Yes, Frazier did beat Jerry Quarry twice and that's impressive considering that he fought Quarry at two dangerous times---when Quarry was a hot commodity. Yes, Frazier beat Ellis twice, though the second time, Ellis was realistically no longer a top 30 fighter. Frazier beat Ali once and gave him a good run two other times. But had his career not been so meticulously planned and copiously protected, he would have been knocked out probably 2-3 more times by the guys they kept him away from. He might have lost another decision or two to some others. And before anyone argues that this wouldn't be the case, I submit that had Frazier fought the long list of combatants that Ali did, I couldn't even make my assertion. Since instead he elected to fight guys like Terry Daniels, it leaves him open to my criticism and second guessing and for the umpteenth time, that's the whole point.

Yes, Ali's career was indiscutibilmente better than Frazier's, Ali' fought all the dangerous guys who were around, while Frazier only some of them. But with an exception: Joe Frazier won the gold medal in the heavyweight division, while Clay won it in the flyweight :-) division in my hometown. But you may answer that if Buster Mathis hadn't broke his hand before the 1964 Olimpics, Joe Frazier wouldn't have gone to the Olympics at all ! I think that the easy way Frazier beat George Chuvalo was impressive and Joe didn't have any reasons to hate Chuvalo. Ali' is above Frazier in my all time list, but Frazier is a true champion. Muhammad Ali', George Foreman, Joe Frazier, Larry Holmes and Ken Norton are CHAMPIONS FOREVER ( I saw a TV show years ago with all these guys together entitled CHAMPIONS FOREVER !But Muhammad Ali' ain't the greatest heavyweight of all time ...Clifford Etienne is !!!!!!!!!!)

I agree with Angelo. I'd say it probably began after the first Ali fight, but was definitely evident by the time of the Foreman fight. Frazier really only had hatred and courage left. His hatred of Ali was the only thing that sustained him.In regard to his legacy, Frazier's reputation will stand or fall on who he fought and didn't fight. As eye witness memories fade, or those who saw him first hand die, or others like Forest get more dotty in the brain and can't post anymore, or if Gerri can't find any more sites to post at, fight fans of the future will rely only on the record books.They will read about a guy whose biggest achievement was winning one from three against a fighter many believe to be the greatest. They will read that he won only one fight from five against Ali and Foreman. They will read about a guy who got knocked down every 35 seconds against Foreman. They will view pictures of him floundering around on the canvass like Berbick did against Tyson. And they will be left wondering about the no-names he fought and the big names he didn't fight.Or perhaps they won't, if the Dead Parrot Society gets its way. All that bad stuff will be wiped out and only the happy bits will be left.The record will read that he only got knocked down three times against Foreman. There will be no image allowed of Frazier hopelessly floundering around on the canvass. And Bruce and Bonavena never knocked him down.
dead. He's in prime health. He's just training for the hanging upside down olympics". And the Dead Parrot Society says, "Joe wasn't knocked down six times by Foreman; he was only down there because his contact lenses kept falling out"... "Joe didn't get knocked down against Bruce, he was only doing up his boot laces"... "Joe was looking for big punchers to fight so he picked Standers and Daniels"... "Jimmy Ellis was a completely legitimate opponent; the Coroner's Office didn't object to the match-up." That will be the low down on Smokin Joe if the Dead Parroters have their way! The biography channel can have a documentary about Joe with Shirley Temple doing the narrative and 'The Hills Are Alive With The Sound Of Music' as the background tune.

| 3/19/05 05:25:06 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Angelo, a while back you asked about the Frazier-Cummings (the second greatest heavyweight of all times after Clifford) fight. The scores were&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;45-46 for Cummings&lt;br&gt;47-47&lt;br&gt;46-46|

| 3/20/05 01:01:42 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Howard, fight fans of the future will not just rely on the record books because videos of the fighters of the past, especially from the era after television was invented, will be available.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;The way you are overly critical of Frazier's ability makes it seem as if you are only going by the record book but that only tells part of the story. One has to see how Smokin Joe Frazier fought at his best to see how really devastating he was.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;If you sat down with me and we watched the Mathis fight, the Quarry fights, the first Ellis fight, the Chuvalo fight, the Machen fight, all of the Ali fights, the Bonevена fights, and a few others of Joe at his best and then you continue to downgrade Joe's ability, then you would have more credibility. It seems as if you never saw Joe fight.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I go by how difficult a fighter would be for other fighters to beat when that fighter is at his very best and at Joe's very best, that number or fighters who have ever lived is very small, a handful at most. &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Effective longevity, although a consideration is not the most important factor. Of course a fighter needs to have been great for a period measured in years, not months or one fight. So I would not rank fighters like Buster Douglas and Oliver McCall high on the all time list for one great fight or in McCall's case one great punch, but Frazier's period can be measured in his best years, circa 1967 to 1972.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I also don't rate a fighter lower for staying around to long so even Ali, the greatest himself, for losing to Leon Spinks and Trevor Berbick or Evander Holyfield for losing so many fights late in his (still going?) career still rank very high on my list because at their best they were hard to beat by anyone.

| 3/20/05 02:57:08 PM | Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville | 10 | Kent, logic sometimes vacations from your posts.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Like the latest one. First of all you (correctly) point out that fights fans have videos of past fighters to assess their true ability, then in the next sentence you accuse me of criticizing Frazier without ever seeing him fight.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Well, Kent, if I wasn't old enough to have seen Joe fight live, like Noam, there are videos of him to watch. However, I dare say that I am older than you and might even have watched Joe more often than you have.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Unlike the Dead Parroters I did so with eyes wide open. I didn't shut my eyes when Bruce knocked him down, when Oscar put him down twice, when Ali beat him on points once and stopped him once, or when Foreman sat him on his backside every 35 seconds.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I had my eyes open also when Joe was at his devastating best against second tier fighters like Stander and Daniels. And while I had my eyes open and was looking around furiously, I never got to see Joe at his devastating best against punchers like Lyle and Shavers and top shelf fighters like Terrell, Liston, Mac Foster and Norton.&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;SHOW ME VIDEOS OF THOSE FIGHTS, DEAD PARROTERS. &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;But the Dead Parroters never saw those fights either, yet you brazenly challenge anyone speculating on the result, "Are you crazy enough to suggest that those guys could really beat Smokin' Joe ?"&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;When we say that Joe was not bulletproof, as shown by Bruce and Bonavena, and that all those guys he didn't fight were capable of knocking him out because they punched harder, the Dead Parroters move onto a new excuse.

Kent, my eyes were wide open in disbelief when Frazier fought Ellis the second time. Ellis was entirely shot. Hanging upside down from his perch. Yet Joe fought him instead of Norton or Lyle or Shavers or Mac Foster. Fighting Ellis at that stage of his career was like shooting Lassie, or stabbing Santa Claus at Christmas, or spraying graffitti on the Van Crapp family home (they were the family in the Sound of Music movie).

Not sure the Van Crapp analogy hit the mark, but you know what I mean.

---

I have a tape of Joe Frazier vs Ernie "Clay" Terrell, it's very rare! Maybe I have the only copy of that tape in the world! I think that it is just too painful for many of us to admit that Joe Frazier was a bum! It's like admitting (or to admit) that Wilt was a bum!

---

Howard, I wish you wouldn't bring me into it. While I'm here though, could you clarify something for me. You previously said that Joe was nearly a shot fighter after the first fight against Ali. Now you say that Ellis was totally shot by the time of the second Frasier fight. It follows, therefore, that in the second Ellis fight, we had an almost dead parrot versus a totally dead parrot. That is the logic of your argument.

I still don't understand who the Van Crap family is. Does it have something to do with the mafia? Was Mr Crap a made guy or the Don?

---

I started this whole Frazier debate by posting that Ali fans don't like Joe Frazier. They still hold a grudge for beating Ali in '71. They make some valid points, but really it's all just opinion. I have seen all his fights and know what he was compared to other fighters. He was a great fighter with a short shelf life. He was truly great at his peak. Joe is often ridiculed for many different reasons and many have been brought up here.

---

Fan you are right, it is real only just our opinions but the Frazier critics speak as if what they say is fact and the only possible interpretation of the information. I will admit that it is possible Frazier avoided some of the people in question but I have also given reasons why this may not be so yet Howard, especially, refuses to entertain more than one conclusion.

His esoteric analogy about the "dead poets society" works both ways. He could be the one believing there is only one way to see things, that the parrot is still alive, in this case that the only interpretation is his interpretation, when in fact one than one conclusion is very possible.

If I got the meaning of his "dead poet's" comment wrong, it is because I have never seen or read it.

---

I wrote of the DEAD PARROT SOCIETY, not the dead poet's society. That's your problem. You see things you THINK are there, instead of seeing what ACTUALLY is.

You see what you desperately want to believe is a live parrot, while everyone else sees a parrot hanging upside down from his perch, hasn't eaten for years, eyes glazed open, doesn't fly or chirp. Dead as a dodo. But you don't see that.

Same with Frazier after the first Ali fight. Same with Standers and Daniels. And especially the same with Ellis (number 2). They were all dead or almost dead but you don't want them to be, so you won't admit that they were.

Hence the Dead Parrot Society. I don't hate Frazier. Far from it. I just came into the debate to debunk the snivelling reverence with which he is treated by the Dead Parroters despite the obvious holes in his resume.

Joe had one great night. Against Ali in 1971. He hit those heights fueled by hatred. Joe couldn't rise to that level again. There's no hatred in those comments. Just a cold, hard assessment of the facts.
"The Bruce knockdown doesn't count because Joe was before prime." And, "The second Foreman fight doesn't count because Joe was after prime." And, "The six knockdowns don't all count because the ref should have stopped it after the third knockdown." And, "Joe didn't fight Norton because he liked him too much." And (my favourite), "Ellis had one more great fight left in him and he was a perfect tune up for Joe." And, "Stander and Daniels were perfect tune downs for Joe.So Fan, how do you deal with that delusional mindset? Just ignore it and let the Dead Parroters rewrite their own silly version of history?cb>The Dead Parroters refuse to let Joe's record speak for itself. They keep making excuses for the deficiencies everyone else can see......................I don't know about any parrots. Whoever they are they can defend their own opinions. Joe was great for a short period of time, he never ducked Earnie Shavers. He could have fought Lyle, he didn't. Norton wanted no part of him, he was more adamant about it then Joe. He fought some stiffness, all champs did. He's a top 10 heavy of all-time. Ali was better, not by much prime vs prime, but better. Joe's biggest weakness was his short prime. He was never the same after Ali I. He always had a layer of fat and was never as sharp. He left it all to beat Ali that night, and he did.OK Howard, you got me, sort of. I met to say Dead Parrots solciete but I did understand the analogy and it does fit your stubborness of not accepting any possibilities but your own opinions.|I met to say Dead Parrots soliciete but I did understand the analogy and it does fit your stubborness of not accepting any possibilities but your own opinions.|Need you to take things less seriously. Trying to have a sense of humour would help, too.Fan, I can't have Joe in the top 10 for reasons that have been canvassed way too many times. At least you don't come up with the looney excuses that the Dead Parroters invent.You guys can have the last say, if you'd like, because the lemon on this issue has been squeezed dry. A pleasure, I'm sure.|I don't know about parrots, but I do know that the Schrodinger's cat was neither dead nor alive; its own state was a combination of the "DEAD STATE" with the "ALIVE STATE". Maybe it's the same with parrots and with Joe Frazier as well.|Fan: Saying "(Frazier) could have fought Lyle, but didn't"----what does that mean? Of course he could have fought him. I'm asserting that he SHOULD HAVE fought him. It's why "he didn't" that makes this discussion so intriguing. Now, a little prose dialogue of my own, taking place in 1975 on the plane to Melbourne:Joe: "Yank, why is this trip taking so long? Last time it was just a few hours and now we've been in the air 14 hours."
Yank: "Joe, this isn't a train to New York or a plane to Las Vegas---we're going to Ausatralia buddy!"
Joe: "Why?"
Yank: "Well, news gets their slow. They just heard that Ellis won that WBA tournament---so they actually believe he has a chance to beat you. They haven't gotten the news yet that he's washed up."
Joe: "Gotcha. He's butter, pudding, but they don't know that. I'll spot him a few rounds to make it interesting."
Yank: "Easy does it Joe, you're no spring chicken. Get in there and get the job done."
By 1975 I think Yank had already died. |Perhaps Joe hired a medium and Angelo's reported conversation really did happen. After all, facing Ellis was like fighting the dead, so why couldn't he speak to them as well? Now we're getting somewhere.|
|3/21/05 12:54:33 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Okay then, we'll have to replace "Yank" with "Futch" in my verbiage below!|
|3/21/05 12:56:47 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Question: Speaking of trainers, what did Sam Solomon have in the "little black bottle" during the first Spinks-Ali fight? He gave Spinks little snorts from that bottle---was it just water? Speed? Coke? Spinks was super that night! |
|3/21/05 02:44:08 PM|Steve |N.J.||na|||10|Massimo, Quantem Pysics will ultimately help to explain the theory of everything. I believe Foreman lost to Ali in Zaire because a butterfly was disturbed in Mexico, and it caused excessive heat and humidity in Zaire on the night of the Ali vs Foreman fight. What do you think about Chaos Theory? What about shapes in nature re-occurring from the macro to the microscopic level. (i.e.), a mountain ridge? |
|3/21/05 02:54:28 PM|Steve|n.j.||na|||10|Angelo, get real! What about Panama Lewis? That's why we need a Federal boxing commission. Only the federal government could afford to, or have the resources to have enough people to police every aspect of boxing, including corrupt promoters and trainers. Of course the taxpayers would ultimately pay for it in increased boxing ticket prices, but I think it would be well worth it. |
|3/21/05 03:02:43 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Steve: Or, did Foreman lose because of the "loose rope theory" that gave Ali that little springy cushion while absorbing Foreman's onslaught from rounds 2-7? George punched himself out, while Ali's back rested on the loose ropes, and when Foreman pounded him, the ropes absorbed some of the punch too. I've heard that one many times. That, and some voo-do played on Big George in San Juan, when Young managed the win. Yes, it was heat exhaustion both times, but mixed in with loose ropes and voo doo, George couldn't win. Now, when Foreman beat Frazier the first time, it was voo doo as well---some kid with a Frazier doll kept throwing it around the room, and well, look what happened! |
|3/21/05 03:05:36 PM|Steve|nj||na|||10|howard, to paraphrase a line from the Dead Parrot scene. Joe Frazier was NOT knocked down six times against Foreman! "Ee was just taken'a couple of rests". Howard, I, myself am proud to be a member of the Dead Parrot's society. I would like to be recognized as dead parrot number three.'|
|3/21/05 03:22:18 PM|Steve|NJ||NA|||10|Angelo, I'm glad your starting to show a sense of humor about this really getting creepy argument. I acknowledge that Ali was the better man that night in Zaire. I just put forth the opinion that Foreman might have done better in a rematch in New York, in a cooler climate. Without the entire population of the country shouting, "Ali, BOOMBAYAY", or Kill Foreman. I think if Foreman had won, he'd have been lucky to have gotten out of Zaire with his life, and he knew it. |
|3/21/05 03:41:24 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Steve: As a young fan of Ali back then, I did not want to see a rematch. I think the worlds came together for Ali that night and with some sort of divine intervention, he got out of there not only with a win, but with a KO over an invincible force. People were actually afraid for Ali's health---thinking Foreman might hurt him badly. What a surprise he pulled (again) on the world. But I thought his luck would run out in a rematch. Still, Foreman, to this day, thinks he would have lost again because he was "too stubborn and too stupid" to change his style. He would have gone after Ali again, throwing punches and tiring himself out, and still without the patience, pacing and stamina he showed in his second career. I'm not so sure. I think Foreman could have stalked Ali, paced himself a little better, and caught him. On the flip side, damn it was hard to KO Ali---he might absorb even Foreman's head shots, come back with bunches of his own, and win the battle of wills. Young did it. |
With the Chaos Theory you need NOT LINEAR DIFFERENTIAL EQUATIONS and a pretty big brain !!

Not linear problems are UN GRAN CASINO (very difficult). As far as I understand about shapes re-occurring in Physics [and I'm not the Ali' of Physics, I'm just a Frazier (a bum)] they are only a coincidence because the micro and the macro words work in a quite different way. Quantum Mechanics allows you to understand the micro. In the macro world you have (say) $1,1.00000001, 1.00000002, 1.00000003$ while in the micro one you have (say) $1.5, 10, 15$ speaking very brutally. Micro and macro worlds are deeply different.

The most likely time a Frazier verses Ron Lyle fight could have happened would have been in 1975. Lyle had rebounded from the loss to Quarry with wins over Ellis, Bonevina, Peralta, and Kirkman and he ended up fighting Ali in May of 1975. The Frazier verses Ellis 2 fight happened in March of 1975 and although some of you think Lyle should have been Frazier's opponent instead, it could have been possible Lyle didn't want a fight with Frazier at that time. Lyle likely knew he was getting the title fight with Ali in May, despite losing to Jimmy Young in February and that taking the Frazier fight could have resulted in two losses, causing him to lose his title shot. Plus it was too short of a time to prepare for Frazier. Before 1973 and even 1974, Lyle was too inexperienced for his management to put him in with a former champion like Frazier and this was obviously not a money fight from Frazier's point of view. This might have been different if Lyle didn't lose to Quarry but he did lose. Shavers, also was not an attractive money opponent for Frazier in 1974 to 1975 because he had lost to Quarry in December of 1973 and to Bob Stallings in 1974 as well as fighting a draw with Young. Shavers might have been a decent money fight for Frazier briefly in 1973 after he had knocked out Young in their first fight and Ellis but he blew this chance by losing to Quarry and Stallings. The draw in the second Young fight didn't help him any either. Before 1973, Shavers was a non entity who had a loss to Ron Stander, who is being maligned here by some in these pages for being a bum. If Frazier was still a viable fighter in 1976 and afterwards, and he didn't fight Lyle or Shavers, then I would say he was avoiding them but by that time he had faded from the scene with only his ill fated second fight with Foreman, which we would never have taken if he was avoiding punchers.

Hey Massimo, then why bring up the Schrodinger's cat phenomenon? I don't see the relevance.

Hey Massimo, I've got a scoop on the show down 'down under' between Frazier and Jimmy 'The Second Coming' Ellis. I just got off the phone from my Aussie 'mate' and he saw the show down live. He gave me the low down on it.According to him, the controversy surrounding the fight began when Jimmy's plane touched down in Malburne. Not only did he have a cut guy with enswell to work his corner, he brought some guy named Marcus Welby to monitor his vital signs. After the anthem, there was a lull in the noise and Welby was heard to yell, "BP 20 over 5, no sinus rhythm. STAND CLEAR". The stunned crowd stood numbed as they watched Welby apply electric paddles to Jimmy's prone body which suddenly convulsed up from the canvass. They smeared grease over Jimmy's eye brows and pushed him out of his corner towards center ring telling him, "You da thireman. Go douse da flames, champ." And just as the referee was about to warn, "Seconds out", Yank's medium screamed, "HEY MARCUS. GIMME A HAND OVER HERE, WILL YA." Welby rushed over and saw Joe slumped comatose on his stool in his corner. He wasn't smoking, far from it. After Marcus gave him a quick shot of adrenaline (and some other stuff he borrowed from Elvis's physician in Memphis), Joe's eyes suddenly sprung wide open. The medium, relaying instructions from Yank, pushed Joe towards the center of the ring saying, "Time to smoke that scamboogah, baby." Of course, the rest is history. An historic event smacked with controversy on the other side of the world and we're still talking about it 30 years on. My Aussie buddy told me, "You Yanks underplay the significance of the show down. You guys had the 'Thrilla' and the 'Rumble' and 'Gunfight at OK Coral. But we Aussies had the decomatose Joe fighting a back-from-the-dead Ellis and it was a REAL HOOT. It's written into Aussie folklore as the Undead Duel Down Under." So it's time to recognize that the Dead Parroters were right all along. Frazier v Jimmy 'Second Coming' Ellis was a real fight with a real referee, real judges, real crowd, and a real cuts man. There's absolutely no truth in the rumour that it was an elimination fight sanctioned by MSG and the New York Boxing Commission for the winner to fight Rocky Marciano for the WBC Not Breathing and No Pulse Heavyweight Championship of the Afterworld. The truth is that, while it took the news a long time to reach state side, what with the long distance from Down Under and everything, this fight has been officially sanctioned as an X FILE FIGHT, right alongside Iron Mike snacking on Evander's ear and Ali's phantom punch on Liston. It is now recognized as the X FILE FIGHT OF THE 1970s. There's a lesson to be learned from it, too. Monty Python's knight on the bridge missing his arms and legs wasn't entirely defenseless. He could still bite people. Thus, the decomatose Joe fighting the back-from-the-dead Ellis was a real contest, too. They weren't shot fighters. Far from it. Not on Marcus Welby's watch. Thanks for setting us straight Dead Parroters. | interesting if Quarry had met Foreman before he fought Frasier that second time. | 3/21/05 09:18:41 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Steve, actually I did a piece on a west coast boxing venue, not east coast. I read Jim's article on Jerry and Foreman. He does a fine job and he seems like a decent fellow. He and I have exchanged E mails on occasion.HOWARD: can you please stop with the Jimmy Ellis is dead jokes! I know you mean no harm. That you are just joking about Jimmy's ability in the second Frazier fight. But realize Jimmy Ellis has suffered some damage from the ring and while I don't know the extent of Jimmy's condition, at any time we may find out that Jimmy has actually died.I know you are probably a fan of Jerry Quarry. Can you imagine how Jerry's family would have felt when Jerry, before he died, and he was suffering from damage from his years in the ring, and someone was making jokes about Jerry being dead during the second Joe Frazier fight? I am sure they would have been hurt by it.Now consider how Jimmy Ellis' family would feel if they read what you have been writing.I have never met Jimmy Ellis but from what I understand, he is a fine gentleman and I think he deserves our respect as he gave his life's blood to the sport we all enjoy. Jimmy was a brave warrioor and he deserves to be treated as such.| 3/21/05 09:47:05 PM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|Steve, thanks for the explanation, I needed it! I hadn't understood well what this story about (the) parrots was all about. I'm a paisa'.| 3/21/05 11:11:49 PM|Steve|NJ||NA|||10|Kent, sorry, I mean't to say your article appeared on the East Side Boxing web site.| 3/22/05 12:56:53 AM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Steve'Scamboogah' is Joe's favourite word in his autobiography. That's what he kept calling people. Almost every page. It puzzled me, too.You desperately need a sense of humour or some very good sex or both. Everyone here would realize that I was joking, having some fun......except you.I earlier said that you are like that Japanese soldier wandering around the jungles of Borneo not knowing that the war ended 25 years earlier. I take that back.You are nothing like him. Everyone told you that the war was over but you wouldn't listen. Everyone else was having fun with the subject but not you. Serious as always.It's like Ground Hog Day. I log in and surprise, surprise, there's Kent droning on with supposed facts showing that Joe didn't duck anyone. Log in next time and same thing. I have to ask this, Kent: are you feeling okay? Because you don't sound so good.Have some fun, laugh a little bit, get rid of all this hangdog sullen stuff. Don't take this Frazier thing too seriously. Before we got onto this subject you were a rational, reasonable, likeable guy. Now it's like you're on a search for the Holy Grail.I'll submit to your wish. You are now officially Dead Parrot # 3. Please tell your comrade, Dead Parrot # 2, that it's time for him to have some FUN.| 3/22/05 01:22:43 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||same as before|||10|Howard, I know you were just kidding but I hope you have the decency to stop as some people might not think it is funny. You wouldn't tell the same type of joke about Jerry Quarry on his own website, would you? Also, will you still be telling the same joke about Ellis if he does end up dying soon? I would hope not.Fighters getting injured from their time in the ring is no laughing matter and it is the reason this website was created in the first place.| 3/22/05 03:10:46 AM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|KentIt wasn't written in the expectation or hope that someone would soon die and your inference as to that does you no credit. You just don't like the fact that my posting highlighted as satire the ludicrous arguments you tried to make regarding the guys Joe ducked or chose to fight, and you are now trying to take focus away from your own shortcomings. Listen up, Kent. When guys take money to prize fight they expose themselves to criticizm from the fans and journalists alike. Boxers are not a protected species. So when Jimmy took the dough to fight Frazier he opened himself up for critical comment. Ask fellow journalists for confirmation of the principle I am telling you.\n\nFrankly, Kent, you became a figure of some mirth with me with your looney efforts to portray the Frazier v Quarry second fight as a sanctioned eliminator. When challenged on whether world bodies sanctioned the fight, you backtracked, arguing that it might have been sanctioned by MSG and the New York State Boxing Commission.\n\nThey have no authority to sanction a world title fight. You know that. But you wouldn't withdraw. You proved that you wouldn't admit being wrong even when you were proven to be wrong.\n\nYou ceased to have credibility at that precise moment on the Frazier issue. And now you have demonstrated that you have no sense of humour. It's a pity because the rest of us are having fun.\n\nYour excuses and explanations regarding Frazier became farcical. Do you want me to list them again? That's why we had so much fun with them at your expense.\n\nComparatively, Kent, you are a whipper snipper. So a word of advice. You shouldn't let good stories (read excuses) interfere with the truth. Make that a rule in your journalism if that's what you opt to continue in. Don't take things personally. And don't write stories about subjects you admire too much to be objective about.\n\nWhen you write about your idols, Kent, you take the chance of being called a Dead Parrot. I like you anyway.\n\nComparatively, Kent, you are a whipper snipper. So a word of advice. You shouldn't let good stories (read excuses) interfere with the truth. Make that a rule in your journalism if that's what you opt to continue in. Don't take things personally. And don't write stories about subjects you admire too much to be objective about.\n\nWhen you write about your idols, Kent, you take the chance of being called a Dead Parrot. I like you anyway.\n\nComparatively, Kent, you are a whipper snipper. So a word of advice. You shouldn't let good stories (read excuses) interfere with the truth. Make that a rule in your journalism if that's what you opt to continue in. Don't take things personally. And don't write stories about subjects you admire too much to be objective about.\n\nWhen you write about your idols, Kent, you take the chance of being called a Dead Parrot. I like you anyway.\n\nComparatively, Kent, you are a whipper snipper. So a word of advice. You shouldn't let good stories (read excuses) interfere with the truth. Make that a rule in your journalism if that's what you opt to continue in. Don't take things personally. And don't write stories about subjects you admire too much to be objective about.\n\nWhen you write about your idols, Kent, you take the chance of being called a Dead Parrot. I like you anyway.
don't think he means any harm. Howard C's comments on Jimmy Ellis are a comic farce, parody, sarcasm about Jimmy Ellis in 1975, when he was a young man still fighting—he isn't making fun of a retired fighter with a degenerative brain condition or other lasting health problems from his time in the ring. The joke is that Ellis was not a "live" fighter in 1975 and yet Frazier's camp picked on him, of all people (not Shavers, not Young, not Lyle, not anybody who had won in their last four fights) but no, it was Jimmy Ellis. It's such an extreme comment to say a coroner was chasing Ellis around with a toe tag—it's just a joke, nothing to take seriously or get upset about. Again, we're talking about a 1975 Jimmy Ellis who was handpicked to be whipped by Frazier, not a 2005 suffering Jimmy Ellis.

By the way, do we even have any reliable, confirmed reports about Ellis' current condition, or is this all hearsay?

Fan, I am your #1 fan. I always look forward to reading your posts. They are always sound and reasonable. But, I must disagree with you regarding Ali Worshipper #2. Worshpper #2, constantly insults people on this site, especially Kent. Worshipper #2 will apologize before he attacks Kent. And then in the next sentence heap scorn upon Kent. I don't buy that routine. First he apologizes, and then he delivers the insult. That's shallow and insincere. No apologies from me. I find Ali worshipper#2 to have limited boxing knowledge, and no analytical ability. And that is what separates the ignorant from the enlightened.

Angelo, I spoke to someone who met Jimmy Ellis at the Boxing HOF, and he is suffering.

Any praise I offer Kent is sincere, and so are the critical remarks. I think being capable of offering both, when warranted, is called being fair and balanced. I also happen to think that Kent is undoubtedly a very decent and kind hearted man who, in my opinion, makes fatuous remarks when discussing his favourite fighter (Frazier). And when those fatuous remarks places him at a disadvantage, he resorts to emotive arguments to tear at heart strings (falsely) accusing me of teasing damaged fighters and reminding us (time and again) that he gives to charities. When guys feel a need to resort to emotive accusations and self-praise, it's usually because they've run out of cogent issues to argue. Regarding Dead Parrot # 1, I don't think he is a decent guy at all. He's the type he sneaks up behind you in the dead of night, hits you in the back of the head, and then runs off. Dead Parrot # 1 doesn't like to be fair and balanced. When the young guy, Noam, offered him some nice comments, in an effort to smooth relations, the parrot ignored him. Personally, I think dead parrot's knowledge of boxing is confined to a few drunken visits to fight venues in the 1970s, added to by hazy bar conversations he's had with other drunks since then.

Rather than continue with all of this dead parrot talk, what about a different bird analogy---the proverbial canary in a coalmine? I haven't worked it all out yet, but somehow, I see Jimmy Ellis as the canary and they threw him in with Frazier to see if Frazier could still fight. It's like the old days, when they would send a canary in a coalmine to see if it was safe to send men in. I could see the fight posters to promote the fight: "The Canary Flies to Melbourne To See if Frazier Still Has It!" The Aussies get rowdy with some six packs of Fosters and shower Ellis with a few cold ones to wake him up---and that's BEFORE the fight!

I was a little hard on you but it is a pet peeve of mine that too many people forget our fighters when they are no longer able to perform and I was thinking about how Ellis might be these days and your comments magnified that. It looks like I took your comments out of context and I apologize for that. I hope you understand where my head is at now. Riddick Bowe is fighting again. The same Bowe who kidnapped his wife and children but had his sentence reduced by a judge who sighted Bowe having behaviour problems from damage he suffered in the ring. While I am not at liberty to discuss my personal finances, if I stand to profit even in the least from a Riddick Bowe fight, which I believe shouldn't take place as he left a big part of himself in the ring during the Holyfield fights, I would put the money to good use instead. The Golota fights hastened his downfall and he likely has a lot less now and in my opinion he should stay retired.

I mention donations not to lift myself up but to encourage others to do the same.

I apologize to you as well. Some of the comments I posted about you were too critical in the circumstances and I shouldn't have said them. I do understand that you are a decent man and that is why I qualified my earlier posts by pointing that out. There wasn't an ulterior motive to praising you, as Dead Parrot # 1 suggests. In hindsight, I went too far with what I said about Dead Parrot # 1, too. So, Dead Parrot # 1, I apologize for calling you a drunk and, what was the other thing I said, something about punching guys in the back of the head in the dead of night, I apologize for that, too. I don't know that stuff for certain. However, I don't apologize for thinking that you are ignorant, a Frazier apologist, too scared to face the facts, an Ali hater, and too stubborn to acknowledge your mistakes. There's some other issues too, but now isn't not the time and. anyways, I don't want to clutter your mind with too much stuff all at once. They actually used canaries in WW1 when the Germans used gas. I'd think that WW1 soldiers are probably better than some of the guys here in realizing when a canary (or parrot) is really dead and not just hanging upside down to rest (or doing yoga). I drank Fosters once and too much knocks your socks off. The strongest drink I've ever had was Mekong Whiskey which they sell in South East Asia (as Dead Parrot # 3 Steve would
Some of the beer over there makes you sick and you wake next morning feeling bloated and swollen. I learnt later that they put the preservative formaldehyde in the beer, which is a chemical meant to preserve dead bodies in morgues. I wonder whether it'd work on dead parrots.

Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)
Joshua Tree, CA
Sonia90101@aol.com

Hi All. How's it going? Been a couple months since I've been on computer has been down. So what's new? I sure do miss you Dad, Uncle Jerry, Mom, and Aunt Brenda.

Angelo
Washington, DC
funktron@yahoo.com

We all miss the Quarry family members who have passed on, and for me, especially miss James (aka Mr. Jimmy). The "Letters" section here has taken on a life of its own—we're like children whose parents have left us alone! If Mr. Jimmy were here, I have a feeling he'd be keeping us all in line. I had some contact with him a few years ago when ordering the "Best of JQ" fight video and also an uncut video of JQ vs. Ellis. James Quarry was a really kind and decent gentlemen and intelligent as well, and I'm sure I speak for a lot us when I say how badly he's missed.

Fan
Fandom
Fan@Fandom.com

James was a great guy that I had the pleasure of speaking with on a number of occasions.

Kent
La Habra, CA
kentallenent@aol.com

Mr. Jimmy was more than a moderator of this site, he was our friend and he had a way of steering us in a more positive direction when we were getting restless. He handled much more rowdy threads than the recent one and I am sure he would have let us have our say but somehow nudged us to move on. Jimmy's legacy is he helped get the ball rolling on legislation to improve the sport of boxing. He strove to make it safer in memory of his brother Jerry and if we keep the ball rolling, by making it as safe as possible, then Jerry's passing away will not be in vain.

Brenda, who I met on a couple of occasions, was a decent person who liked to help people. She also added a lot to this site by dropping in and having her say and she helped pick up some of the slack when Jimmy passed away from lung cancer. I know she also helped take care of him at the end when he was very sick. She sent me a very kind E-mail around that time and I have kept it to this day. The world could use a few more people like her.

Forest Ward
New York City
raymcormack2003@yahoo.com

It will be 36 years ago tomorrow that I saw Jerry Quarry fight Buster Mathis in MSG. Sadly, from what I understand, there is no tape of that fight available. Let me tell you what I remember about that night.

I went to the fight hoping for a Quarry victory, but I was afraid that Mathis was too good for Jerry, and I picked Mathis to win. Buster was coming off a good win over Chuvalo the month before, and I was impressed with Mathis (although, now when I look at the Chuvalo-Mathis films, the win does not seem quite as impressive as it did at the time). As Mathis was entering the ring, I notice the basketball player Cazzie Russell of the NY Knicks sitting in the working press section with crutches. As Mathis was climbing into the ring he noticed Cazzie and Cazzie gave him a clenched fist acknowledgement and Mathis nodded. Apparently, since they both came from Michigan they were friends.

Now both fighters are in the ring and the former champions in attendance are being introduced into the ring. Well, normal practice is for the champions to come up into the ring and wish both fighters luck. Johnny Addie introduces Rocky Marciano into the ring, and there is a roar from the crowd. Well, Rocky climbs up onto the ring apron in Quarry's corner and leans over and puts both hands around Quarry's head and say's something to Jerry. The next thing I see is Rocky leaving the ring, he did not go over and wish Mathis good luck.

The fight begins and Jerry is the aggressor, marching fearlessly into Mathis and throwing left hooks into Buster's belly. In the 2nd round Jerry lands a left hook on Quarry's jaw and Busters staggers back puts a hand on the rope and goes down to one knee. And for the remainder of the fight all Jerry did was march forward and pound his left hook into Mathis's belly. It was without a doubt one of Jerry's easier fights. Poor Buster, he could not win for the sake of losing. Midway through the fight his boxing trunks split up the middle and his backside was exposed. Suprisingly, his cornermen had an extra pair of trunks and slipped them over the torn trunks a few rounds later.Sometime later I learned the reason why Jerry had an easy time with Mathis. Buster was terrified of Jerry. A few weeks before their fight Buster came to Quarry's camp at Grossinger's for a pre-fight physical with the press in attendance. Mathis tried to pull an "Ali". Mathis started chucking and jiving, and he expected Jerry to play along. Jerry got into Mathis's face and told him something to the effect, "get the fxxk out of here or I will kick your ass right now". Mathis was never any good after that.

Sometime later I learned the reason why Jerry had an easy time with Mathis. After the fight I am in the subway going home and guess who I see? Joe Frazier and Yank Durham. I ask Joe, "What are you going to do against Quarry?" Joe replies, "I am not going to run from". It was a great night.

Sometimes a story begins as an unfounded but juicy rumour and then it slowly snowballs into fact as people repeat it. But many can't tell the difference between nervousness, which all boxers experience, and genuine terror.

I thought Frazier was a bit unkind to Mathis, and the opponents Mathis fought, when Joe belittled them in page 57 of his autobiography, "Mathis? Oh, yeah. He's the one who fights those guys that get carried in on crutches."

Later, at page 61, Joe said, "as a fighter I always suspected he (Mathis) was operating with, as they say, a defective ticker - no heart."

It would have been better had those unkind things been left unsaid. In my mind, anyone brave enough to voluntarily get in the ring with heavyweight monsters, as Buster so often did, doesn't deserve that said about him. I can't think of any justification for saying it, especially since the fight happened decades ago. By all reports Buster was an exceptionally nice man. Most who met him were very complimentary of him. Sadly, he has passed away and he has no right of reply.

I'd like to wish everyone on this site a happy and safe Easter. I don't know what you guys are doing, but I'm knocking off work early. This time of year is all about resurrection. So I suppose hope still springs eternal for some parrots hanging upside down from perches. Angelo -can a dead parrot be resurrected? Only joking, guys. :)))))

Mathis was very fast for a big man, and certainly brave enough to just get in the ring, but I remember Jerry predicting an easy victory and stating that Mathis "had dog in him". The fight confirmed that assessment, however cruel it may sound now.

It is refreshing to hear recollections about Jerry Quarry for a change. Isn't that odd for a Jerry Quarry site? In the past, various posters have made reference to one fight or another, there is usually no follow up. There are many of the big fights at MSG too. It was a great period to be a fan. Johnnie Addie's "let's meet some of the boys" was classic, and fans got to see many, many contenders, champs and former champs in the flesh. No fight night was ever better in that regard than Jack Dempsey's 75th "birhtday party" at the Quarry-Foster fight. I suspect Forest was there too.

Mathis was very fast for a big man, and certainly brave enough to just get in the ring, but I remember Jerry predicting an easy victory and stating that Mathis "had dog in him". The fight confirmed that assessment, however cruel it may sound now.

Mathis-Quarry. Only copy is in the hands of Mathis' family. They won't release it because Buster was a complete disaster that night.
Fan, when you mentioned Quarry-Foster, you brought chills down my side (honest to God). Remember all those oldtime champs that were there. Sadly they are all gone. And the ones who were young champs are now old time champs.

When I used to buy fight films, I would tell the person I was buying them from, "leave the pre-fight introductions on the tape, if necessary I will pay extra". Fan, did you see the prefight introduction on tape before Patterson-Chuvalo. Talk about all time greats at that fight. I remember the night of that fight, I was rooting so hard for Floyd. I stayed up waiting to hear the results of the fight on the local news. I went to bed not knowing who won. I did not learn the results until the next day.

Quarry-Foster, I did not know much about Foster at the time except that he knocked out everyone he fought. Although, I did go down to the Felt Forum and watched Foster train. I remember he was breathing hard after 2 lackluster rounds with Charlie "Emperor" Harris (JQ old sparring partner). I remember Foster tagging Jerry that night in I think it was the 2nd round (I may be wrong), and sadly I thought the end was near for Jerry. Of course I was wrong! The Jerry Quarry who fought Foster that night was 25 years old and in fantastic shape. If that Quarry fought Ken Norton in 1975, I have no doubts that he would have knocked Norton out; and probably in the same round he knocked Foster out.

Fan, did you see Dick Tiger- Frankie Depaula? The 1st 5 rounds of that fight rivaled Foreman-Ron Lyle for excitement.

Fan, did you see the prefight introduction on tape before Patterson-Chuvalo. Talk about all time greats at that fight. I remember the night of that fight, I was rooting so hard for Floyd. I stayed up waiting to hear the results of the fight on the local news. I went to bed not knowing who won. I did not learn the results until the next day.

Quarry-Foster, I did not know much about Foster at the time except that he knocked out everyone he fought. Although, I did go down to the Felt Forum and watched Foster train. I remember he was breathing hard after 2 lackluster rounds with Charlie "Emperor" Harris (JQ old sparring partner). I remember Foster tagging Jerry that night in I think it was the 2nd round (I may be wrong), and sadly I thought the end was near for Jerry. Of course I was wrong! The Jerry Quarry who fought Foster that night was 25 years old and in fantastic shape. If that Quarry fought Ken Norton in 1975, I have no doubts that he would have knocked Norton out; and probably in the same round he knocked Foster out.

Fan, did you see Dick Tiger- Frankie Depaula? The 1st 5 rounds of that fight rivaled Foreman-Ron Lyle for excitement.
Kent, I just read an article in US News and World Report. It was about the Senate hearings investigating Steroid use in Baseball. As usual, the players stonewalled, and these grandstanding political hearings accomplished nothing. In light of these hearings, I don't hold out much hope for a Federal Boxing Commission. I think the chowderheads in congress sure seem to run in circles and not get much done, don't they? It doesn't hold well for them passing the national boxing commission law soon. It was such a magic moment when Mark McGuire and Sammy Sosa chased the single season home run record held by Roger Maris and surpassed it. And recently Barry Bonds has been closing in on the all time record for a career held by Hank Aaron but if these guys real were juiced up, then the new records don't mean much and it sure makes the marks made by Maris, Aaron, and Babe Ruth that much more amazing as they didn't have steroids to use. I read somewhere that before the 1980s it only happened about fifteen times when a batter hit fifty or more home runs in a season but since then the number of times it has happened has about doubled. Something has to be wrong with that as I know training methods and nutrition have produced stronger, more durable athletes but they shouldn't be that much better where the amount of home runs increases that much in that short of a time.

Yes, it was a magic season when McGuire and Sosa smashed the record. There is a graph on MSNBC showing the homers hit per decade. If betting on pro sports is becoming legal, then the government better wake up to drug abuse! I say, drug testing on a regular basis, in all sports. If the ball players don't like it, let's see how many high school and college players are willing to step up, and play in the big leagues drug free.

Kent, have you ever gone to a batting cage? A 90 MPH fastball is almost impossible to hit. You can't even see the ball! I used to play baseball and I used to be able to hit an 80 MPH fastball, which is standard at the high school level but those days are long gone! I don't know if I ever hit a 90 MPH fastball live against a pitcher but I could handle them in a controlled situation like at a batting cage versus the machine. I can't even hit a 70 MPH machine these days.

Yes, hitting a major league fastball, and the 90 MPH fastball is the standard major league level, is a very specialized skill that steroid use wouldn't help if an individual didn't have the ability to hit in the first place. However steroid use does help those players who already have some talent to begin with. It makes them less prone to injury during the long season and their healing time becomes faster when they do get injured. Also, those fly balls that are caught by the opposition at the warning track next to the outfield fence for long outs are more likely to go over the fence because of the added strength from the drug use, hence more home runs. For Massimo who awhile back was asking questions about baseball, a home run, also known as a homer, is when a player hits the ball safely and runs around all of the bases to score a run (a point). A home run most of the time occurs when a player hits the ball over the fence bordering the playing field inside the base lines known as fair territory in back of where the opposing defending players stand. A home run can also occur if a player hits the ball inside the playing field if he can run fast enough to get around the bases before the defending players can get him out but this doesn't happen very often.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/24/05 08:08:31 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Roma</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

KentThank you very much for the kind explanation, but I just can't swallow baseball. I like many sports BOXING, SOCCER, TENNIS, BASKETBALL, PING PONG etc. but I don't like BASEBALL, RUGBY and GOLF (the most boring sport in the world) and all kinds of races (car races, horse races, human being races...I just don't care about who is first and who is second...). Maybe it's just because BASEBALL is not popular at all in Italy, but I don't find it attractive or funny. For me Joe Di Maggio could get a real job !

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/24/05 10:43:28 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>La Habra, Ca</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Massimo, soccer has never caught on here as a spectator sport and although a lot of people play it as children in school or in recreation leagues, as far as watching professionals, most people here don't pay very much attention to it and this will likely never change.

Massimo, I wish I could sit with you and we could watch a baseball game and I could explain what is going as it is happening. You might like it better if we could do this. You still probably wouldn't like it as much as other sports but you might appreciate it more. Why would you want Joe Dimaggio to get a real job if he could make more money doing what he likes? By the way, Joe Dimaggio's brothers, Dominic and Vincent were also professional baseball players for many years so none of the brothers for a long time had real jobs. Dimaggio, if he were playing baseball today, would be a very wealthy man but even he might not be able to save baseball for the fans here. This steroid use problem if true will cause a lot of damage. Ironic, in that if it were shown it is widespread in American football, which I think is likely, I don't think it would hurt football as much as it will baseball. Probably because football is seen as a game to smash into guys while baseball is seen as a specialized skill.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/24/05 10:51:20 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>La Habra, CA</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Oh by the way, what kind of cars does everyone here drive. I picture Massimo in a small red sports car such as a Fiat or Ferrari. He is short with a slightly balding receding hairline and he kind of looks like the character George on Seinfeld but not as fat as George is. He also wears a white scarf around his neck when he drives. I drive an SUV, a 2003 Honda Element, silver in color. What about everyone else? I

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/24/05 01:19:20 PM</th>
<th>Forest Ward</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>New York City</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Fan, remember Jose Gonzalez, the top ten rated middleweight from PR who was a NYC favorite throughout the 1960's, and into the early 70's. Boy, was he tough. He never ducked anyone in the 1960's.
Some of the names I remember on his dance card in the 1960's: Joey Archer, Dick Tiger, Hurricane Carter, Emile Griffith, Don Fullmer, Benny Briscoe, Jose Torres. Jose Gonzalez, always came into the ring in top shape, and gave 100%. I would be hard pressed to think of a more durable or rugged middleweight contender in the past 45 years.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>3/24/05 01:29:43 PM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Roma, not Arcore</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

KentA Ferrari
?!?!? Who you think I am ? Francesco Totti or Silvio Berlusconi ? What's my name ? What's my name ? My name is Massimo Giulio Leonardo Cini whatever Terrell thinks about it and I am not wealthy. No physicist is wealthy, unless you win the Nobel Prize, but that ain't easy. You become a physicist for passion, because you are interested in the subject, not to make money. Physicists aren't treated very well in Italy ! They are treated much better in the USA and in fact, many Italian Physicists go (or settle) to the USA to make money. I drive a small Fiat (Fiat Uno), but almost never. I hate to drive (or driving) in Roma, there is always a lot of traffic... Roma is a pretty decent city to make good walks and I walk very often, but it ain't good to drive (in). I use the subway, it is always full of people of all nationalities, but at least you can think to whatever you want to think and it's more relaxing. I think that you Americans are probably as much human beings as we Italians are (I have met an American once when I was a child whose name was Bill Gazuc and he looked like a human being. I remember that my English teacher in High School was an American from New Heaven, Connecticut and she looked like an human being too. So, if you like baseball so much I'm sure there are good reasons. For what I understand, soccer is at least 100 times more beautiful than baseball. I remember all (of) the great champions that (or who) played in Italy: Falcao, Platini, Van Basten, Maradona. I still remember each and every goal Maradona scored in Italy, playing for Neaples. They were all masterpieces ! I don't like Diego Armando Maradona that much as an human being, drugged, comunist etc., but, as a soccer player, he was a great genius. |
| 3/24/05 04:36:03 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||10|Jerry fought when boxing was still important. When contenders still mattered and fight night was the night. That's why I can never forget Jerry and the rest, the best sport, the best time, the best division, the best fights, the best of times. Thanks Jerry, God rest your soul and all the rest of you noble warriors. Eddie, Zora, Cleveland, Sonny, Jimmy, we remember you.|
| 3/24/05 04:57:37 PM|Fan|USA||n/a|||10|I started following boxing big time in the late 1960's, so I don't remember much (except Clay/Ali of course) before then. Forest, you were lucky to catch the Rock at the Mathis fight, didn't he die just a few months later? Kent, my impression in 1970 was that Jerry and Jimmy were throwbacks with their slicked back hair. This was still the Woodstock era, it occurred only the year before. Yet the Quarrys seemed more in tune with The King and his style. Not to resurrect this well beaten horse, but....I found an advertisement for Quarry-Frazier II closed circuit locations which referred to the fight as a "heavyweight elimination" bout, whatever that is. However, I also found an interview with Edwin Dooley, the NYS Athletic Commissioner at the time, about the upcoming fight (mainly about the fact that Joe Louis was going to ref). He never mentioned anything about any official status as some kind of elimination fight, which would have seemed natural were it the case. My conclusion is that is was advertised as such, but neither the Commission nor any sanctioning body recognized it as an official elimination bout, if there is such a thing. I suspect that is probably what Kent recalls.|
| 3/24/05 07:33:38 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Fan, yes Jerry was very into Elvis and when I met him in the early 1980s he and I discussed music. He favored Elvis and I sided with the Beatles.|
| 3/24/05 07:33:38 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|After Mr. Jimmy's graveside service I was standing in Wilma Quarry's backyard talking to Mike and Bob Quarry and I asked Mike if he could sing well as Jerry was a good singer. Mike said he had hurt his voice when he was younger so he really couldn't sing (I didn't ask him how he hurt his voice, the ring maybe?) but then he belted out some song, I don't remember the song but I think it was an Elvis tune and although his higher voice sounded weak, he was joking around and he then sang a few notes in his lower register and he actually didn't sound bad. Untrained, yes but not bad. Did the Quarrys miss their calling as a singing group? I do remember their sister Diana was a good singer. One thing you don't say in a backyard full of Quarrys and that is, that you like the Beatles better than Elvis. I got five different voices at the same time telling me, "Elvis is a lot better!" |
| 3/25/05 09:50:07 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Steve: I feel strongly that an in-prime JQ could take an in-prime Ken Norton. The key for Jerry would be to stay free of serious cuts around the eyes---no small trick. He was a better boxer than Norton and had enough power to keep Norton honest. When they fought, Norton was at or near the top of his game and Jerry wasn't---plus Jerry took the fight with little notice and wasn't even in top condition. This isn't to take anything away from Norton, but I think JQ matched up well against him prime vs. prime.Kent: My cars include a new Saab 9-5 wagon, '93 BMW 325i and 1978 Cadillac Sedan DeVille. My work vehicle (company car) is a 2001 Dodge Caravan and that's what I drive the most. My wife drives the Saab wagon and I tool around in the BMW (her car) and my old Caddy on weekends. My car of choice if I were buying new, just for myself, would probably be something like the new Buick LaCrosse. Fantasy car? Probably a '63 Corvette, but I'd settle for a new Vette! |
Mike and Bob Quarry have also said Jerry had a bad back in the Ellis fight. Mike can be heard saying in an interview on one of the Jerry Quarry highlight tapes that Jerry fought with a broken back. It is a shame that they didn't postpone the fight as I think Ellis would have had to fight Jerry as they were the finalists in the WBA tournament.

If Jerry did have a back injury, then it might just have been Quarry "Hard Luck", as his dad has tattooed on his hands. I can't blame his management, because, as I said, back injuries can seem to go away, then come back at any time.

If all the eight fighters involved had signed contracts with the TV Network and the promoters of that elimination tournament, wouldn't Ellis have been forced to wait for Quarry to heal from a prefight injury, in order to finish the tournament? So, there was no danger of Jerry being eliminated because of a training injury?

Monzon vs Hopkins? Hopkins vs Sugar Ray Robinson? Here's a good one, Hopkins vs Dick Tiger?

Thanks guys I forgot about the back injury. Regardless, if you watch that fight from start to finish, it was as close as they come. Ellis fought his ass off and so did Jerry. Both took tremendous hard shots to the head and body. It wasn't a slugfest by any means but the combination punching was as good as it gets.

I'm eating lasagne right now! What a break! Ester is to eat good stuff! I have a question for Angelo, or anyone else who might know the answer. You mentioned having spoken to James about obtaining uncut versions of fights. Were you successful, i.e. do you know whether the complete versions of the fights which are included on the highlight tape (including introductions, post-fight interviews, etc.) are available through TJQF?

Thanks and Happy Easter to all.

I bought the highlight tape---and then asked James Quarry if he had Quarry-Ellis in its entirety. He made that tape for me---at my request, even left in all the old commercials from the 60's. It's a lot of fun to watch. It has Cosell giving a pre-fight analysis and the commercials are really interesting. Too bad the fight didn't have a different outcome though.

If your interested in old tapes contact Dana Smith from Dana's boxing on VHS. He will give you a deal if you bulk order. It costs alot to get a complete collection, however it is fun to go back and watch every couple months or so. I own every fight in the career of Ali, Norton, Shavers, Frazier, Foreman, Lyle, Chuvalo, Quarry, Liston, Patterson, Johannson, Holmes, Machen, Folley, C. Williams, Bugner, Bonavena, Ellis, Cooper, that is available on tape. It constitutes 56 total tapes and about 120-130 hours of run time. The following Quarry fights are available somewhere. Tony Alongi I, Eddie Machen Highlights, Joey Ozbillio, Brian London I, Alex Miteff, Floyd Patterson I, Billy Daniels, Floyd Patterson II, Thad Spencer, Jimmy Ellis, Joe Frazier I, George Chuvalo, Mac Foster, Muhammad Ali I, Jack Bodell, Muhammad Ali II, Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers, Joe Alexander Highlights, Joe Frazier II, Ken Norton, Lorenzo Zanon. Good Luck!

Now, that's a collection! My own collection sucks (it's slang...) in comparison! Have you seen the fight between Ron Lyle and Joe Bugner? Was it close or not? Among the fights in your collection what (or which) are the most exciting? How was Frazier-Chuvalo? One sided? What about George Chuvalo-Cleveland Williams and Chuvalo-Folley? Thanks!

ESPN Classic has shown a couple of Jerry's fights recently. They ruined my St. Patrick's Day by showing Ali I, and over the weekend featured Frazier II, one of my more depressing visits to MSG. I was convinced Jerry could win both of them at the time. But then, about the only one I ever thought he would likely lose was Norton, having taken the fight on two weeks notice and already shot. In his prime, Jerry would have taken out Norton in my opinion, a la Shavers. The second Ali fight bothers me to no end as Jerry, for whatever reason didn't pursue Ali as hard as he was capable. For most of the fight he just plodded after Ali throwing ineffective punches and eating a lot of leather in return. Jerry's fire just wasn't there in Ali 2.

I agree re: the first Ali fight. It was pretty risky for Ali to take on Quarry in his comeback fight. Jerry had a real shot that night. He looked to be in great shape, and he was starting to land. Then came the damn cut. I remember Jose Torres called it "a gift from Allah" in his book "Float Like A Butterfly, Sting Like A Bee", and Torres was a huge Ali supporter. Another instance of the patented Quarry "hard luck".

Yes I read (Dempsey was one i saw) that old timers did soak in brine or salt brine to toughen their hands and their skin...i remember Vito Antuofermo had his forehead scraped so he wouldnt cut in fights against Marvin Hagler. If I do go over there, and I probably will, I also intend to visit Phenom Pen. The history of that place interests me and the Killing Fields was one of the most tragic events of our time and I know I'm not telling you anything you don't already know. I often wonder whether Fonda and her ilk ever look back and feel guilty about the fall out they caused. Don't get me started on that.\n\nAnyway, Monzon came from a terrific era in boxing. He's one of my favourites. He was the middleweight champion from 1970 to 1977 and defended successfully 14 times. Nine of his defenses were knockout wins. He faced huge punchers like Bennie Briscoe and Valdes.\n\nBut Hopkins compares more than favourably. He's been the middleweight champion since 1995 and has defended 19 times (or is it 20?). He unified the title. However, until he beat Trinidad in 2001 the quality of the challengers weren't much. The Ring magazine, which has got its act together again, had a terrific recent article on both of the above.\n Ed, yes I have heard too that Jerry was worried about Mike after the Bob Foster knockout and he wasn't able to focus at the task at hand verses Ali. But for whatever the cause, Jerry just didn't have it in the second fight with Ali and it really pisses me off that stations such as ESPN only show this fight, which is one of the worst, if not the worst of Jerry's career. Jerry was much better than this fight showed.\n
Yes, Carlos Monzon was one of the greatest ever, but what upset me a little bit is that he couldn't manage to dominate Emile Griffith. Nino Benvenuti beat Griffith 2 out of 3 times (cheers) and Carlos Monzon was so much stronger than Nino. Kent, you're right, the second Ali' fight was the worst fight in Jerry Quarry's career. He only showed some of his fire in the sixth round, when he managed to bother Ali' with a couple of good left hooks. But that's too little for (or in) an entire fight and, anyway, Ali' clearly won that sixth round. Jerry fought many great fights, but on that night, he was only a shadow of himself.\n
However impaired Jerry was in his last years, he was fortunate to have such a caring family, particularly brother Jimmy who I understand was living with him before his death. For anyone who has relatives or friends suffering alzheimers or similar diseases like Jerry had, the burden on those caring for them is enormous. It's not just about feeding or running errands for them, looking after them also comes right down to the very basics, such as bathing and the like. The responsibility is not only the most difficult imaginable, but it would also be soul destroying when it involves a loved one. I've read accounts about Jerry's condition near the end, and his family can take solace that they were there for him. Regardless of his illness, it can be said that Jerry was a lucky guy because of his family.\n
I say this because there are many out there suffering like Jerry, but they don't have caring families. Someone said that Jimmy Ellis is similarly ill, so I hope that he has someone looking after him too. Steve, there are several popular Vietnamese beers. There is the Three Three Beer, the Tiger Beer, and the Saigon Beer. The most popular wine is called Snake Wine, so named because a snake is fermented in a bottle for months before it becomes drinkable. It's alcoholic bite is potent, but it doesn't taste so good.

Lyle-Bugner was a close fight with both men exchanging aloot. Lyle was a little more aggressive and took a razor close decision. Chuvalo-C. Williams was way past both men's peaks. It was a slow boring affair that Chuvalo was more active in. He won a pretty easy decision. Chuvalo-Folley shows how good Folley really was closer to his prime. He would not let George get started and just picked him apart from long range. Chuvalo was dominated. Chuvalo-Frazier was a unknown classic. They stood toe to toe for every second and just wailed away. Chuvalo hit Frazier aloot and actually looked pretty good until a sick 4 punch combination that completely shredded George's eye. The fight had to be stopped as Chuvalo's eye was smashed.
to smitheerens. The best unknown fights were probably-Liston-C.Williams I- Williams in his prime was an offensive monster. You should see his his triple left hook!Frazier-Chuvalo- An absolute war- No sound howeverPatterson-Jackson I- The Hurricane felt no painShavers- Roy Williams- The best round of all-time round 10 of this fight.Quarry-Patterson I- A brilliant barn burner Norton-Jose Luis Garcia II- Norton avenges previous loss with absolute brillance.I'm sure there are many others as well.|3/29/05 10:33:43 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Thank you very much Fan, it was very interesting! So Joe Bugner fought well against Joe Frazier, Muhammad Ali'(first fight) and Ron Lyle. Maybe he wasn't so plodding and harmless as (or like) so many people keep saying. I do believe that Zora Folley in his prime was better than Oscar Bonavena in his prime.|3/29/05 11:09:12 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Joe Bugner often gets a bad rap but he was a very good fighter. He took one hell of a punch as he took some very hard shots against Lyle and Frazier and only went down once, in the last round of the Frazier fight, as I remember it, and he also traded with those guys, so he had more heart than he has been given credit for.Bugner also won a decision over Henry Cooper very late in Cooper's career but even though Cooper probably didn't have much left, and I have never seen the fight, Cooper still was dangerous and punched hard. Which means Bugner was likely hit with some hard shots in this fight as well.|3/29/05 12:38:19 PM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|Who hits with triple left hooks, gets hit with triple left hooks. Williams hit Liston with three consecutive left hooks and got hit by Ali with 3 consecutive left hooks as well. In other words (paisan words) chi di spada ferisce, di spada perisce. Yeah, it works that way...|3/29/05 01:41:58 PM|Steve|new york||Quarry53@yahoo.com|||8|We talked to Jerry before the Alexander fight about the second Ali fight and many of his fights. He told us that he was pressured to be under 200 lbs. So he took water pills that dehydrated him and sapped him of his endurance. In the first fight he had a great chance and gets the worse cut of his career. Just another set back in what was a great career.|3/29/05 07:13:55 PM|Steve |NJ||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Howard, that was an interesting post. Have you ever been repulsed by something and drawn to it at the same time? That's how I feel About the green dream. I never heard of the battle of Coral. That could also be what we referred to as the rockpile. Different units, different terminology and nicknames. If you have a chance to visit there you should definitely do so! It's like stepping foot on another planet. I hope you go. Then I can pick your brain when you come home. Now, c'mon, Howard, be serious now. Are you just pulling my chain about this snake wine? That's one I never heard of. Jane Fonda, commited treason!|3/29/05 07:37:44 PM|Steve |NJ||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|Howard, do you know what unit your friend's brother was in? I am very involved and active in the Vietnam Veteran's Association. I have developed some contacts and procedures for acquiring detailed information on individual casualties. Strictly for helping other Vets with disability claims.|3/29/05 07:39:31 PM|Fan|USA||n/a|||10|A headline on CNN today - "Jesse Jackson Weighs In" (re: the Shiavo matter) - reminded me of the Reverend's two turns at boxing cornerman. One was the forementioned Ali-Quarry bout. The other was Holmes-Cooney. I don't think any of my parish priests has ever worked a fight. He's quite a guy. |3/29/05 08:38:20 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Jane Fonda was very naive but that doesn't excuse the fact that she posed on top of an enemy anti aircraft gun that was there for the sole purpose to shoot down American aircraft. She gave aid and comfort to an enemy of the United States during war time and that is treason. Although I have questions about whether we should have gone into Vietnam militarily, that doesn't mean I support what I consider one of the most shameful periods in U.S. history and that is the treatment of soldiers returning from the battlefield. It was just disgraceful that our troops were subjected to harassment as they returned home by protesters because although I believe protesters had a right to state their views, they should have not directed them at the troops and especially they should not have abused those returning troops as the troops don't set policy, the government does and that is where the protesters should have directed their opposition, in a peaceful, lawful manner. SHAME ON THE ANTI WAR MOVEMENT FOR LARGE NUMBERS OF THEM MISTREATING OUR FINE MILITARY PERSONEL AND THOSE THAT DID THIS OWE OUR SOLDIERS A LONG OVERDUE APOLOGY.

3/29/05 09:12:07 PM|Steve|N.J|dmsrms@comcast.net|||10|I just reread Ken Norton's book, "Going the distance" Even though Norton was never one of my favorite fighters, his book is only moderately self serving. Here's a revealing glimpse into the man's character. "I'll admit freely that I did not like Jerry Quarry. Quarry was the one man I fought in anger, and I went in to punish him." I wanted Quarry to be carried out on a stretcher! These are quotes from the book, folks. See page 97.

After the Tex Cobb fight, Cobb confronted Norton in the hotel lobby. Cobb wanted to settle things "mano a mano". To quote Norton, "frankly, he scared the piss out of me. I wanted no part of him, so I called the cops" page 168.

3/29/05 09:35:31 PM|Steve |NJ|dmsrms@||||10|Kent, a sincere, heartfelt thank you very much for your post. I feel no regret for my actions in that place. I was only 19 yrs. old in my first tour. I was young, dumb, and full of come, to quote an old Army saying. Government policy means nothing when you are there. It was strictly a struggle to fight for the survival of your squad and yourself. I never gave a fuck about how civilians felt about what we did. I met the finest, toughest men in my life in that place. God Bless and protect all our troops in harm's way.

3/29/05 10:50:24 PM|Steve |NJ|dmsrms@comcast.net|||10|Hey, all you younger guys and gals on this site. Technology is a wonderful thing. Even if it does cost us fight fans an arm and a leg! Get ready for an old timers sob story. I listened to Ali vs Frazier on a radio station, they gave the blow by blow during the one minute break between rounds!

3/29/05 12:14:43 AM|Steve|nj||dmsrms@@||10|Kent, while I realize this is not the appropriate forum for that war, I have, what I feel is an anecdote to your post. On Jan. 11, 1969, my flight home was rerouted from Oakland to Port Lewis, Washington, because of anti war demonstrations that had turned violent. Go figure that one?

3/30/05 02:32:54 AM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|Who is Jane Fonda, a baseball player?

3/30/05 02:51:14 AM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Steve, I will obtain the information regarding my friend's brother, who died in the battle of Coral. That was a battle, I understand, that mostly involved Australian soldiers, and my friend's brother was John O'Brien. He was a mortar guy.

There is most definitely snake wine in Vietnam. My friend who lives in Saigon half the year drinks it. He drinks anything, in fact. In my opinion, the Vietnam War was noble and necessary. Had it never happened then communism would not only have spread through Vietnam, Laos, Cambodia, and Burma, but most probably would have gone into Thailand and down through Malaysia as well. The resistance in Vietnam was a 'speed bump' that slowed communism sufficiently to prevent it getting a hold in Thailand and Malaysia (in my opinion).

I think the effect the anti-war campaigners like Fonda had was disgusting. In South Vietnam alone hundreds of thousands were interned, tortured, or slaughtered after the pull-out. The victims were allies. The vacuum the pull-out created allowed Cambodia to be overrun by murdering mongrels who slaughtered two million people. That tragedy never worried Fonda and her
ilk. I never saw them protesting against the murderous Khmer Rouge.I'll always believe that the Vietnam War was honorable and that it served a vital purpose. There's no shame or blame for anything that happened over there on our part.| 3/30/05 03:51:57 AM | Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville | 10 | Steve, I've made some telephone calls and my Aussie friend, Ray O'Brien, tells me that his brother Private John O'Brien was with the 1st Royal Australian Regiment (known as 1 RAR), Mortar Platoon.He was based at Fire Support Base Coral, Bien Hoa province, north-east of Bear Cat (US 9th Division) and Black Horse (US 11th Cavalry). On 13 May 1968, Fire Support Base Coral was overrun by Vietcong and John, 21 old, was killed.It was called Battle of Coral and a guy named Lex McCauley wrote a book about it. He also wrote a book called Battle of Long Tan, which also mainly involved Aussies. If you need any more information then let me know. Hope this is of interest to you. || 3/30/05 04:26:22 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Howard, yes it is disgraceful how far out kooks like Fonda can protest one thing and ignore something as tragic as the killing fields in Cambodia. This tragedy is one of the worst genocides in history yet the far left politicos are strangely silent about it.Ironically, if they did mention the murder of millions of people in Cambodia, they would probably find a way to blame the United States for it. They often turn things around to support their world view. || 3/31/05 04:43:50 AM | Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville | 10 | Would Jerry have beaten Ellis if he slugged it out with him rather than boxing? Would he have beaten Frazier had he boxed rather than slugged it out? Was there any tactic he could have used to beat Ali? || 3/31/05 10:15:21 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | Howard—I think that JQ would have never beat Ali' and Frazier in their primes, because they were too good for him. But, on the other hand, I think that the Jerry Quarry of the Mac Foster, Lyle or Shavers fights would have found a way to beat Jimmy Ellis, regardless of the style. || 3/31/05 10:27:33 AM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 | Early Clay was impressive in spurts, but hardly awe-inspiring. Against Alonzo Johnson he moved alot but had no power in his punches on his way to a somewhat close decision. He looked better against the slow Alex Miteff and Willi Besmanoff, both plodders. Sonny Banks woke him up with the knockdown, but Banks was a plodder too and Clay just picked him apart after the knockdown. Billy Daniels gave him all sorts of trouble before the fight being stopped on a cut eye. That was one of the last fights at old St. Nicholas arena. Ali killed the slow, plodding Moore. Then Clay had trouble with Doug Jones and Henry Cooper both. Clay always had trouble with Cooper's style even in '66. At this point Clay was thought of as a nice heavyweight, but would get squashed by Sonny Liston like a bug, not a bee. Clay's most impressive performances after he won the title before his exile were Williams, Patterson, Terrell. He never looked as good as he did against Williams because Williams was so slow that Ali could do whatever he wanted without fear of being hit. Williams, Folley, London were all painfully easy defenses. He fought Williams and Folley because they never were given a chance to fight for the title before, and he respected them. They also had no chance to beat him. London was a farce, he was better than Terry Daniels, but less dangerous than Ron Stander when Stander fought for the title. |
Howard, thank you for your info. on Pvt. John Obrien, of the 1ST RAR. Battalion. Your correct about the defense of firebase Coral. It took place from May 12th to May 16th. If that was John Obrien's second tour, it lasted from March, 1968 to his death. The actions resulted in 54 men killed in action, and 295 wounded in action. Enemy casualties weren't counted, but were considerable. I will try to get details on KIA's, but I doubt I'll have much success. If I do, I'd prefer to contact you on e-mail.

Fan, I was watching the Cassius Clay-Alonzo Johnson fight the other day. What was truly impressive about Clay in that fight was the fact that he was a professional less than a year and it was his second time going 10 rounds. That's a pretty good jump in one year, especially for a guy 19 years old. Although the competition was not too steep, Alonzo Johnson was unranked and not a threat. But still 10 rounds at the age of 19, that's admirable.

Jerry Quarry made the jump quicker than both of them. He went 10 rounds in the 6th month of his career, and he was only 20. I am not making excuses for Jerry. He had a very good career, some might say great, I would not argue with that. But, if his handlers only showed the same amount of care and caution that Ali's and Frazier's handlers did on their way up; his career and certainly his life might have been much different.

Jerry Quarry made the jump quicker than both of them. He went 10 rounds in the 6th month of his career, and he was only 20. I am not making excuses for Jerry. He had a very good career, some might say great, I would not argue with that. But, if his handlers only showed the same amount of care and caution that Ali's and Frazier's handlers did on their way up; his career and certainly his life might have been much different.

The thing that strikes me about JQ, when you assess his record, is the quality of fighter he fought, almost from the day he become a pro. Tony Doyle (three times), Al Jones, Eddie Machen, Brian London (twice), Patterson (twice), Thad Spencer, Ellis, Mathis, Frazier (twice), Chuvalo, Mac Foster, Ali (twice), Lyle, Shavers, and Norton.

That is a pretty impressive array. I suppose the only real name he didn't face was Foreman. But Foreman didn't come of age until 1973 and by then JQ was winding down.

The other thing that has always interested me was how regularly JQ fought. In his prime he was averaging six fights a year. In 1969 alone he took on Mathis, Frazier, London, and Chuvalo (among the 7 fights he had that year).

He was certainly busy and he backed himself against the best. Perhaps he was too game.

Why is Ken Norton such a jackass? He crowed about "always wanting to fight Jerry Quarry," was proud as a peacock about his win over an obviously out of prime, untrained, two-weeks notice JQ---and now Steve's post tells about Norton fighting Jerry in anger and wanting him carried out on a stretcher. Ironically, Jerry finished his fights on his feet. Conversely, Norton ended up horizontal against every big hitter he faced. Shavers was spot on when he said (before their fight) that he would beat Norton because Norton doesn't have heart. Then Shavers went out and proved his point, blasting away at Norton---who midway through the first round was clearly not interested in gutting it out to try to fight back. He folded like a table tent. Foreman? He made Norton look ridiculous---not just outclassed and outpunched, and in over his head, but ridiculous---a sad sack. Cooney? Norton had about as much left when he took on Cooney, as Quarry did when he took on Norton. The difference was that Norton actually had time to prepare and get in shape. The result? Another first round lost, and the expression on Norton's face when he went down was priceless—he looked like he was just hit by a train. I always pegged Norton as cocky, arrogant and more than a bit full of himself—Hollywood Kenny—and I think maybe the jealousy was the root of his hatred for Quarry, never a Champion, but voted "most popular." Maybe that's what Norton needed. Instead, he couldn't even have a civil relationship with his son. Jerk. I hate to make comments like this about someone I never met, but his behavior and his own words have fired me up. Sad irony that Norton, articulate and craving the spotlight, had that car accident that messed him up.

| 3/31/05 06:16:31 PM| Fan| Fandom|| Fan@Fandom.com | ||| 10 | Ken Norton had tons of heart, he just froze and got clobbered against huge hitters. To say he didn't have heart shows a lack of knowledge about Ken's career. It would be like saying Jerry didn't have heart because he got cut in big fights. Also, it hasn't been pointed out all the good things Ken said about Jerry after actually getting to know him. Ken had a lot of respect for Jerry. |
| 3/31/05 06:51:10 PM| Steve| N.J.|| NA || ||| 10 | massimo, if you ever want to save a tape of Ali at his absolute finest, the very peak of his talent, then the Cleveland (Big Cat), Williams fight was the best, showcase example I've ever seen. Williams was an old, shot fighter. However, that's not the point. Ali was so fast and accurate, he was a blur of motion. |
| 3/31/05 07:52:41 PM| Steve| NJ|| NA || ||| 10 | The only good thing Norton said about Quarry in his book, was that they hugged in mid ring, and all animosities were forgotten. Norton also stated that Quarry grew up in a tent in Oklahoma. While he himself grew up in a wonderful middle class family. I don't see how just freezing and getting KO'D, against those nasty bullies like Foreman, Shavers, Garcia, and Cooney, would lead you to believe that Norton had tons of heart. Quarry fought Norton and Frasier until he was cut to pieces. Now that's heart! Quarry would have walked through Norton in his prime. |
| 3/31/05 10:52:13 PM| Howard C.| Louisville|| howardc@louisville | ||| 10 | Strong comments about Norton! Before he beat Ali in 1973 he hadn't really done anything and his reputation was made overnight on that victory alone.

His best fights apart from Ali, were Quarry, Young, and Stander but, as Angelo rightly says, he was slaughtered by big punchers like Foreman, Shavers, and Cooney (admittedly when his career was all but over).

I'd always thought that if you had a boxing Mount Rushmore of the 1970s you'd have Ali, Frazier, Foreman, and Norton (if you consider Holmes an 1980s fighter).

However, in hindsight, reconsidering Norton's career on reading Angelo's comments, I don't know whether he deserves to be there. Maybe Jerry deserves the fourth place because, apart from his tremendous ability and courage to face anyone, he was also one of the most popular fighters of that period.

When Norton beat Jerry, Jerry was past his prime. In the two preceding years he'd beaten Lyle and Shavers. So although it's surprising that Norton ko'ed him in 1975, I suspect that by then all the wars finally caught up with JQ.

Most fans think of Jerry and Norton as having their careers quite a distance apart. But Jerry turned pro in 1965 and Norton only two years later in 1967. In fact, Jerry was only three months older than Norton.

Yet these are the 'name' guys that JQ fought and Norton didn't: Machen, Patterson, Spencer, Mathis, London, Chuvalo, Mac Foster, Lyle, and Joe Frazier.

Joe had 183 amateur fights and 66 pro ones (249 total), while Norton had only 26 amateurs, and 50 professional fights (76). Norton certainly had a lot less mileage on his clock when he fought Jerry in 1975.

| 4/1/05 02:00:39 AM| Massimo | Roma | ||| 10 | During an interview Norton was asked what are the main differences between 70s boxing and today boxing. Ken said that the 70s fighters had to fight 15 rounds for a title fight and were always in very good shape, while now the fighters are already tired after 7 or 8 rounds. He also said that in the 70’s there was much more dedication to the sport and then cited the great fighters of that era, "Ali", Foreman, Frazier, Larry Holmes, Ron Lyle, Ernie Shavers, Jerry Quarry and myself, everyone of whom could have beaten all the others in a given night. He showed respect for Jerry Quarry. I have checked up Ali's record and I think that only 31 out of his 56 wins were ratable EASY WINS. That's just a little more than 50%. So, as great as Ali was (and he was really great), the legend of Ali's dancing and dominating fights is only a legend. He won a good part of his fights with a lot of sweat. Also, I wonder how Ali would have done against a 1960 version of Cleveland Williams, a 1959 version of Zora Folley, a 1961 version of Eddie Machen or a 1959 version of Sonny Liston. Who knows?

PS: by the way, I think it's a very good thing that the title fights don't last 15 rounds anymore, but only 12.

| 4/1/05 03:13:57 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Not sure what to make of it, but the news of the Hagler v Leonard fight is interesting. The Italian promoter who put the deal together must have lots of the folding stuff to offer the 7.85 million dollars winner take all. |
| 4/1/05 03:25:20 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | I have no desire to watch a Hagler-Lightweight rematch. La Spezia is a city in Liguria, in North-West Italy. |
| 4/1/05 07:42:06 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Fan: Norton showed heart against Holmes and to a lesser extent, against Ali. Both Holmes and Ali were brilliant boxers, tremendous champions—and in my mind, easily in the top 5 heavyweights ever. But, neither of them were feared power punchers. Norton could take their punch and fight back. He didn't fear them. Part of "heart" is overcoming intimidation and adversity to rise up—even if you end up losing. Jerry Quarry had tons of it. Jimmy Young showed it against Foreman, in a big way. Norton? Against guys who intimidated him, he folded. It's reminiscent of Michael Spinks against Tyson: No heart. Look at Buster Douglas against Tyson—it's not just that he won, but it's that he stood there and traded punches with him. He got clocked and got back up to fight back. So many times, Jerry Quarry was hurt badly but kept plowing ahead, trying his best to compete. That's heart. |
| 4/1/05 08:57:30 AM | Forest Ward | NYC | raymccormack2003@yahoo.com | 10 | It's interesting that we are talking about heart. I agree with much of what I read. Last night I was watching Cooney-Spinks. Cooney had no fire in his belly. Cooney had the opportunity to trade punches with Spinks mano a mano after the 1st knockdown. After all, prior to that knockdown Cooney was stalking Spinks the whole night with no success. Instead Cooney gets up and offers no resistance, and fold like a cheap suit. Cooney did the same thing with Foreman. Mr. Cooney was deficient in the "heart department."

Jerry was beyond shot when he fought Norton in late 1975. He was already shot in 1974, when he was decked by Joe

| 4/1/05 11:17:38 AM | Fan | USA | n/a | 10 | Jerry was beyond shot when he fought Norton in late 1975. He was already shot in 1974, when he was decked by Joe |
Alexander at the Nassau Coliseum and then, later that summer, destroyed by Frazier. I even think he was past his prime in December, 1973, when he beat Shavers. I know the KO of Shavers was huge, but look at the tape. I'm not sure that Jerry could have gone many more rounds had he not dispatched Ernie so quickly. He did not even look the same physically as he had at the beginning of the year when he gave Lyle a 12 round boxing lesson. I remember Mike saying that Jerry had prostituted himself by taking the Norton fight on two weeks notice in the condition he was in. Let's face it, he was not taking care of himself at the time, it is apparent by just looking at him in the films. That's why that fight bothers me so much. He was a faint shadow of the guy who fought a toe to toe war with an in-the-prime Frazier '69. Norton, on the other hand, with many fewer miles on the odometer, was obviously a dedicated fitness fanatic, probably driven by a huge ego.

Which is all a long way of saying that I agree with the poster who called Norton a jackass for the comments he made. It would be like Cooney writing a book in which he crowed about his destruction of Norton - talk about someone in need of a stretcher - as if he had beaten a Norton who was at the top of his game. Say what you want about Gerry Cooney, at least he never made the type of vicious comments about an opponent that Norton did about Jerry Quarry. Maybe Gerry didn't have enough killer instinct, but he was, and is, a decent person who continues to work helping former boxers who are in need, rather than shooting his mouth off for pay.

PS How many times did Jerry Quarry go out on his back, Ken? Oh, right, that's what I thought.

I agree with Forrest Ward, Jerry would have had a much better career if he was handled better, say like for example Carlos Palamino, but L.A. has always been a big fight town, number 2 to New York in my opinion, the L.A. press a bunch of chicken shit fools were vicious to JQ, Los Angeles Fighter's 90% end up punch drunk and broke, and nearly all were gladiators, very sad. Norton has disappointed me in his comments of JQ, but I respect Kenny even so, he did go out on his back, and like Jerry who had more guts then the French Foreign Legion combined did not. Take care!

I agree with Fan, Norton had a lot of heart and it was his chin that folded, not his will against punchers like Foreman, Shavers, and Cooney. Norton did show Jerry some respect in his book when he said that his bad feelings for Jerry went away after they hugged in the ring after a tough battle. I think his respect for Jerry resulted from him seeing how much guts Jerry had. Norton does acknowledge Jerry had a lot of heart in his book. I will be attending Riddick Bowe's fight on April 7 against a guy I have never heard of and can't think of his name off the top of my head. It is still more dangerous for Bowe to be getting in the ring again then when he was at or near his best and even though the opponent is a journeyman, Ron Cramner was a journeyman too and look what he did to Jerry when Jerry shouldn't have been in the ring. Also, Dale Crowe was a journeyman when he fought Greg Page and look what he did to Page. Let's hope Bowe doesn't get hurt in this one.

I have heard that Evander Holyfield will fight the German Heavyweight Champion (whose name I don't remember, he is less famous than Muhammad Ali') very soon. This guy is the same age as Evander and has a record of 25-6 or something close. Hey folks, what's going on in the boxing world? Today the average professional fighter is 61 years old!
with the Hagler/Leonard rematch thing.

About Norton. I looked up his record. He turned pro in 1967 and had 30 fights by the end of 1972. He won 31 of them but was ko'ed in 1970 by Jose Garcia. This was before my time and I've never heard of Garcia. Has anyone? I would have thought that if it was a lucky ko then Norton would have chased a rematch but there was no rematch.

Going through his first 32 pro fights, I don't recognize any of the names of the guys he beat. Reno, Clark, Woody, Herschel Jacobs, Massimo Cini, Vic Brown.... I mean, who were these guys?

It seems to me that Norton was plucked out of nowhere to fight Ali in March 1973. To be fair, given what I said about Frazier, I'd say that Norton was meant to be Ali's Stander or Daniels.

But Norton wasn't a lamb to the slaughter and he won. But he only did so over Ali who had a broken jaw and excuses. After the Ali victory, Norton virtually won nothing.

Sure he was more than competitive against Ali in the other two fights, but Ali suited his style. However, Norton only lasted 2 rounds against Foreman, he lost to Holmes and in the same round by Cooney.

As someone already said, when Norton beat Jerry in 1975, Jerry was already over the hill.

Comparing their careers, I believe, favours Jerry over Norton. Of course, I didn't live through that era and as such don't have real live memories as guys like Fan have, but Norton's record on paper is disappointing.

He then fought Ali in March 1973. I suppose by sheer weight of the number of his fights he had a ranking, but the quality of the opposition he fought raises doubts as to whether he deserved it.

Norton did beat Ali, but Ali had a broken jaw and had excuses.

So, between 1967 and 1972 did Norton win 31 out of 30 fights? He was really good! :-)

Norton fought Garcia a second time a few years later and knocked him out in five in an exciting slugfest as Fan from Fanland has kindly pointed out to us a while back.

I looked up Garcia's record and I learnt he was a wilt (6'4") but not very heavy guy (but in the second half of his career he got heavier by about 20 pounds (reaching about 210 pounds). His win against Norton was his best win, he had a good but not great career.

So, by using the slang "caught Massimo out" I guess you meant that the Hagler-Leonard rematch story was not true! I have to admit it, you made a fool of me. Pesce d'Aprile! Me an heavyweight I hope is good English, it sounds good a heavyweight I think we should go back at least at Leonardo Da Vinci's times!

Ken Norton did have a rematch with Jose Luis Garcia and knocked out Garcia in the 5th round in 1973 or 1974 or thereabouts.

Garcia was a South American who had a good punch but little else.

Henry Clark was a good heavyweight, I think he was even rated in the top 10 somewhere in his career and beat Machen twice, if I remember correctly. Norton also owes wins over Duane Bobick, Randall Cobb and Jimmy Young. What maybe I like the most in Norton's game are his body attacks, he was one of the best body punchers of the 70s.

Norton just got plain lucky and broke Ali's jaw early in their first fight? What if his awkward, crablike defence, from an enormously strong guy, just happened to protect him from Ali's particular brand of offence? Norton surviving Ali three times doesn't mean much to me. After all, other than the broken jaw, when did Norton ever really threaten Ali?

Who did
he ever beat?

| 4/2/05 03:20:28 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 |
| 4/2/05 04:57:53 PM | Noam | same | same | 10 |

Massimo, now you've caught me out. I meant he won 30 out of 31, of course, and I didn't read Norton's record properly when I said there was no rematch with Garcia. I must pay more attention and today I wear the dunce's hat. I still say that Norton's opponents in his first 31 fights were generally very substandard. Steve, I agree with what you are saying. Did you hear about the guy who swallowed the snooker ball? When he went to the crowded hospital the doctor told him to go wait on the end of the cue. Anyone know why Norton never fought Machen, London, Patterson, Spencer, Ellis, Mathis, Frazier, Chuvalo, Mac Foster, and all those other 'name' guys that Jerry fought but three months younger Norton didn't?

| 4/2/05 05:58:04 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 |

Noam- Me a Pope? No way! I have no religious believes and I think a good Pope should have religious believes. Religion is something totally out of my mentality. I think to be a very good guy, but dedicating (or to dedicate) all the life to something that (or which) doesn't even exist, I don't think is a good idea. I prefer to dedicate myself to other things. I had all the respect in the world for the Pope (even if I didn't always agree with him) and I am very sorry for what happened to him, but in my book he was just another human being, like me, you, Shaquille O'Neal, or Christ. I don't mean to be disrespectful with the believers, I am not Massimo "the truth" Cini, I am only (or just) Massimo "Who" Cini.

| 4/2/05 07:09:27 PM | Angelo | dc | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 |

Massimo---the nice thing about this Pope was that he agreed with you---he thought he was just another human being and that showed through in the places he visited and the people he stood up for. I'm Catholic---not the most religious guy in the world---try to do the right thing---and didn't always agree with this Pope either. But he really was an amazing man who will be missed. By the way, in his prime, he could have taken Norton easily!

| 4/2/05 07:55:10 PM | Fan | USA | n/a | 10 |

And, had he written about it, he would no doubt have had kind words for the vanquished Norton. Has any one noticed the late, great Holy Father's resemblance to another Son of Poland, Tony Zale? They were both as tough as nails.

| 4/3/05 02:11:44 AM | Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville | 10 |

You don't have to be religious to admire someone like the late Pope. I've never been a believer, but I think this guy was the genuine thing when it came to putting others above his own welfare. It's a sad time. If all religious leaders had this guy's beliefs, then the world wouldn't be in the state it is currently in.

| 4/3/05 08:04:32 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 |

Thanks for the kind words. I know something about boxing because I like this sport very much, but there is people on this site who (or that) knows much more about boxing than me (Jimmy Dorsey, both fans, Kent etc.). I think the best fighter pound for pound was Sugar Ray Robinson. I haven't seen much of him, but what I saw was really impressive. He had all the weapons: he was powerful, could dance like Sugar Ray (oh what a fool, he was Sugar Ray), could take a punch, he could hit you with a left hook while he was going backwards etc. I think he was a much better overall fighter than Muhammad Ali'. But people like Bob Foster and Archie Moore are pretty close. This is my all time top ten heavyweights list
(but I change my mind very often on this issue)1) Muhammad Ali' (maybe and however not by much)2) Joe Louis3) George Foreman4) Sonny Liston5) Larry Holmes6) Rocky Marciano7) Joe Frazier8) Mike Tyson9) Lennox Lewis10) Riddick BowePS: since I love Mozart's music with all my heart, I propose to dedicate the wonderful and immortal "Lacrimosa" from the wonderful and immortal Requiem k 626 to the memory of Giovanni Paolo II.

4/3/05 09:05:17 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Massimo, although I am a protestant christian, it is not my calling to convert you into believing there is a God. It is a personal belief based on faith. However, since there is no direct physical evidence to support whether there is a God or not, than the best we can do scientifically is to say that we don't know if there is a God or not. Consider this though, the statement that "nothing can come from nothingness" is scientifically sound. So in other words the universe had to come from somewhere so even science points the way towards the possibility of a creator, hence a God of the universe who designed and created the universe and everything in it, including us, human beings.

4/3/05 11:33:29 AM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Kent Wondering about what happened before the Big Bang is nonsense because before the Big Bang TIME DIDN'T EVEN EXIST !!!!!!!!!!Matter and time are not separated things. This Universe has 4 strictly connected (or bound) dimensions (the String Theories says that they are more than 4, maybe 11 if I remember well, but this is not proved yet, it's speculation). You can't have time if you don't have matter. That's absolutely sure ! At the time scientists cannot know whether on some planet in some other galaxie there are elephants with 3 legs and 8 eyes. There are billions of things that we can't know whether they exist or not. Also, even admitting that God exists, how do we know that He cares about us ? I think it's more likely that He doesn't care about us !!!!!!!

4/3/05 01:29:25 PM|Steve |NA||NA||10|Noam, sounds like a Brittish joke. I don't even know what snooker means. I do know that a cue is the Brittish term for a line. Noam, I had to laugh, but that joke was pretty bad.

4/3/05 02:15:15 PM|Steve|na|na||10|Massimo, did all time, space, matter, which are the same thing, spring forth from a singularity. A point from God, which creates matter from nothing, which you say is impossible. God doesn't choose to allow you or I, or Einstien, to comprehend the "THEORY OF ALL THINGS." Will your ego really allow you to believe that in your little box of life, oh, say, 80 years, you will be allowed to understand the vastness of God's universe? Of time and space, and why the velocity of light is a rule God has chosen for us, to keep us in our humble little place in this vast universe. WONDERS TO EXPLORE!!

4/3/05 02:45:56 PM|Steve |NA||NA||10|Massimo, don't let your Education blind you to the beauty of life. Where do you think human kindness, morality, the beauty and incredible diversity of life on earth came from? Darwinism was one of God's tools!!

4/3/05 04:02:03 PM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville||10|Massimo - I assume Mozart called it the requiem because it was his final work.Steve - human kindness means more when it comes from an atheist. Believers are kind because they fear unkindness will see them punished in hell. Atheists are kind because they believe it is the right thing to do. And if God wants the praise for creating kindness, then he must also take the blame for all the acts of unkindness in the world today.Kent - the "nothing comes from nothingness" has relevance to religion as well. What contemporary proof exists that God (if he/she/it ever existed) is still alive today ? There is no proof. In fact, Kent, your "nothingness" rule disproves his existence. If God in fact exists, then he wouldn't allow all the atrocities in the modern world to have been committed. A loving, kind God would have intervened and stopped, for example, the Holocaust.When I was raised a catholic, I often asked Marist Brothers questions and, when they couldn't answer with proof about some religious belief, I was always told to have faith. But faith has no wordly, tangible existence. I'm an atheist, Kent, not because I don't want to believe, but because religion has such a nothingness about it. There is no proof other than faith, and faith is nothingness.

You show me the proof and I'll happily convert. In the meantime, I'm going to enjoy watching men beat up on each other (boxing), and I'm going to keep gambling, and drinking too much beer, despite the 10 Commandments.

If God is going to send me to hell for doing those things, then I'm gonna have plenty of drinking and gambling buddies doing time with me discussing Rocky, 'The Greatest', the punchers Frazier ducked, made guys in the Dead Parrot Society, etc. Just like I'm doing now.

It's hard to predict how much we human beings will be able to understand of the Universe. But look, if you think about it, Physics started with Galileo Galilei only about 400 years ago. It's really impressive how many things we have been able to learn in 400 years. 400 years are almost nothing. What will we be able to do in, say, 1000 years, or 10000 years or 100000 years? It's really impossible to predict! All the human emotions and feelings are somewhere in our brain, the most sophisticated object in the Universe. That's no doubt about it. That's why an ictus often change a person's emotivity and caracter (or temper). Physics doesn't destroy the poetry of life, absolutely not!|

Yes, it was his final work and one of the greatest things ever written, as well. Unfortunately he wasn't able to finish it, and died at 35. He was the greatest! There will probably never be another Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart.

27 Genuary 1756- 5 December 1791|

I was thinking, following the so common logic that in a single moment God created the Universe, I wonder... What was He doing before creating the Universe? Was He reading a book? And before? And before? And before? Don't you see how all this story sounds weird?

It will make you a stronger, better man or women. I'm not stupid, I don't practise any formal religion, and I don't believe in hell. I believe our time here on earth is just an obstacle we must get through, and then God will forgive us all. All the bad stuff that happennd in your life won't mean a thing when you draw that last, scary breath, and meet your maker.

One more thing, where do people like Mozart get their incredible gifts to create such beautiful music and often with such ease, while others, as hard as they try and want to do the same thing but never will be able to?

I believe the beauty
that was in Mozart came from God. | 4/3/05 08:11:17 PM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Steve - not for one second am I suggesting that you are stupid, or that anyone else here is stupid simply because they have a differing view on religion to me. Perhaps there is a God, and I am the stupid one, but I don't think so based on the information I have and the proof religious theorists can't give me. You say that you can't prove your love for parents. I think you're wrong. You prove love by the way you treat people, the same as you prove hatred by the way you mistreat people. Love and hate are for all intents and purposes tangible things that you can prove exists by your behaviour. Likewise, someone can prove they have faith by praying a lot. Whilst that proves they are faithful to their God, it doesn't prove that the God exists. It merely serves to prove that they believe it. I can't imagine what you went through with war, but I've been in life threatening situations and I've seen people die numerous times, from natural illnesses, extreme violence, and accidents. Some involved innocent youngsters and harmless elderly. My views about religion strengthened through those experiences. It was through those experiences that I discarded the catholic beliefs I was raised on. But that's just my personal opinion on religion and, while I hope there is something nice after this life, I can't believe that there is. The important thing, in my opinion, is how people are character wise, despite religious beliefs, or culture, etc. For my part I've never been a thief or a criminal and neither have any of my family and friends. I think that everyone who visits this site (made up of the Dead Parrot Society included) are also good people, even if our views on life, politics, religions, and boxing differ.

| 4/4/05 03:22:23 AM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Steve - I'd like to add one more comment before never mentioning the subject again. Recently a relative of mine, who was deeply religious all of her almost 101 years, got very sick. I never told her that I was an atheist because, given that she went to Mass nearly every day of the week, it would have upset her. I also figured how comforting religion was for her. She was on her death bed with the absolute belief that because she had lived such an honest life (pure as you can be she was), she was destined for heaven. I knew I couldn't discourage that wonderful belief. Even though I don't believe in it, religion is a good thing because practitioners of it try to be honest. If it gives them comfort on their death bed, then that is good too. Atheists like Massimo and me will not have that comfort, but at least, in our minds anyway, we won't die deluded. I hope this makes sense.|

| 4/4/05 05:04:23 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|THANKS FOR THE KIND WORDS MASSIMO, YOU SEEM LIKE A VERY NICE GUY, WHO LIKES BOXING, AND A GOOD LAUGH. AND ALTHOUGH I'M NOT THE FAN, I ONCE WAS. THIS SITE IS VERY ENTERTAINING, I JUST HATE HOW THESE GLADIATORS GO OUT. AND 90 % OF THE TIME, WITH NOTHING $$$.HEY HOW'S STOOGE STEVE??AND KENT?|

| 4/5/05 01:46:54 AM|Kent |Murrieta, Ca||Kentallenent@aol.com|||10|hEY JIMMY D,
SHUT UP YA LUNKHEAD! WOB WOB WOB A KNUK KNUK KNUK!OH A WISEGUY EH? EYE POKES ARE IN ORDER![4/5/05 03:26:15 AM]Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|10|Angelo - I hope your right and I'm wrong. Perhaps you, Kent, and Steve have convinced Massimo and he has decided to apply for that other job and that explains why he isn't posting.|[4/5/05 05:22:52 AM]Massimo|Roma|10|I would have liked to be a Pope in the ancient times when they have money, power and women, but not now.|[4/5/05 11:04:48 AM]Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|If anyone is interested, I have an article on the Retired Boxers Foundation website in the RBF news section about the Riddick Bowe fight that is happening this week.No, the photo on the top of the news section is not me, but it does kind of look like me when I was a little thinner. The photo is of the guy who edits the news section.There is also a photo on the site of Alex Ramos, former middleweight boxer who is director of the foundation. Alex is a great guy who does a lot to help fighters who need help after they retire.|[4/5/05 03:58:01 PM]Steve |NJ||dmmsrm@comcast.net|10|HEY, JIMMY D.WHERE THE HECH YOU BEEN? I JUST HIRED A GUY TO FIX MY COMPUTOR! I HOPE I CAN E-MAIL YOU NOW. YOU KNUCKLE HEAD! |[4/5/05 04:24:45 PM]Steve |NJ||NA|10|I would not for a moment presume to impose my beliefs on Howard, Noam, or Massimo. Except in boxing, where I am almost always correct. These posters are obviously very intelligent people with a pretty well balanced outlook on life. Their experience's in life have led them to their own philosophies and accomadations for the way humans and nature behave. I'm sure they've all pondered the question of way bad and good stuff happens. Is it luck, fate, or probability? Hey Kent, I can never remember who recorded that song, "I've been searchin, so long, to find a meaning". Was it the Beach Boys or Chicago?|[4/5/05 05:29:48 PM]Kent|same||same|10|Steve, you chowderhead, for the fifth time, it is Chicago.|[4/5/05 06:36:47 PM]Noam|same|10|Massimo\If you want money, power, and women, you should want to be the two Dons: Trump and King. You shouldn't want to be like say, Mike Tyson, who has run out of money, his power is on the wane, and his women don't always volunteer. You shouldn't want to be like Michael Jackson either. There is speculation about his money, I'm not sure about his power, and I think women are not on his mind, especially at the moment.Kent has plenty of money. As a boxing writer he is powerful. As a single and rich and powerful guy, he has single women falling over themselves. Therefore Massimo, you must want to be Donald Trump, Don King, or even Kent.[4/5/05 06:37:53 PM]Steve |nj||dmmsrm@comcast.net|10|Kent, yes, I am a chowderhead, as you so kindly put it, without an inch of compassion for my failing memory. My problem is, I can't find the album. What's the name of the Chacago album? I always knew you American Native savages were without remorse.|[4/5/05 07:03:32 PM]Steve |NJ||dmmsrm@comcast.net|10|Kent, since you've chosen to hurt my feelings by calling me a chowderhead, which, even though I don't what a chowderhead is, I can only assume is not a compliment. Do you know, that almost all of the trouper at the "Little Big Horn" where dumb ass Irish conscripts, fresh off the boat, who had no Idea of combat against skillfull, expert combat infantry, and calvary, which is what the sioux warriors where?|[4/5/05 08:34:43 PM]Kent|same|10|Steve, a chowderhead from one stooge to another is an honor. A KNUCK! KNUCK! KNUCK! Just like when I called Jimmy D a lunkhead.I don't know what album that song is on either but I do have it on a greatest hits CD.[4/5/05 08:49:51 PM]Kent|La Habra. Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Noam, while I am doing better fianaically than I used to, I am not really rich, yet. In ten years, who knows? No sadly, the women don't throw themselves at me.
Maybe because I have the same tail as Michael Moore (but not most of his views about things).As far as power, I am a small fry in the boxing scheme of things just hoping to continue to get my passes into events. | [4/5/05 08:58:59 PM]Steve | nj||dmmarm@comcast.net| | 10|Hey, Kent, I'm just fooling around with you. Don't take a lot of what I say too seriously. | [4/6/05 08:01:14 AM]Angelo | Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com| | 10|Kent: If Riddick Bowe gives an impressive performance, is that a bad thing or a good thing? I hate to say it, but I almost think it's a bad thing. It will be encouragement to keep going and eventually get in the ring with someone who could mess him up. Even worse, can anyone say "Golata Rematch"? | [4/6/05 08:39:21 AM]Massimo | Roma||4| | 10|I was rewatching Ali'-Norton 2, one of my favorite fights. I think Norton deserved at least a draw, but anyway the fight was so close that it could go either way and the judges didn't deserve to go to jail for scoring it in favor of Ali' by a split decision. It's really impressive how tough that fight was for Muhammad; it was much tougher than the Foreman fight. Ali' took some terrible shots in that fight! Norton won his rounds in a far more convincing way than Ali' did. At the end of the fight Ali' was so upset by his own performance and so angry that almost hit Bundini Brown with a right hand lead. | [4/6/05 03:13:05 PM]Noam | same||same| | 10|Massimo, I just realized that for 44 years the popes have been named John or Paul. Isn't it time we got a Ringo or George? Regarding Ali....because of his celebrity, his opponents were at their best to fight him. Before they got in the ring against Ali, they trained much harder for him than they did for other fights. | [4/6/05 03:46:48 PM]Noam | Roma||4| | 10|That's one of the reasons I rate Ali' as the no.1, even if not by a wide margin, as (or because at 25%) he didn't dominate the heavyweight division and won many fights with lots of pain and sweat. | [4/6/05 08:41:27 PM]Steve | NA||NA| | 10|Hey Noam and Massimo, It's great to hear that you very intelligent posters are having such a good time with the death of the Pope. Hey Noam, I've never heard of a Muslim terrorist who didn't have Muhammad in his name. Yeah, a freak of nature basketball player, or a sixties rock-'roll drummer would be a good name for a new Pope. How about Pope Shaquille Muhammad, or Pope Ringo Shaquille? Massimo, you really seem to admire American basketball players. Consider their all 6'8", playing on the same courts, same basket heights as every 5'10" kid in America. If Jerry Quarry was 7'2", and weighed 300 lbs., he'd have biff slapped O'Neal to death. | [4/7/05 12:39:14 AM]Noam | same||same| | 10|Steve, I get no pleasure from the Pope's death, but I always look on the bright side of life. As popes go, he was a good one, although I don't know much about them. | [4/7/05 01:45:18 AM]Steve | Roma||4| | 10|I admire Shaquille O'Neal because, besides being such a dominating player [but anyway a bum in comparison to (or with) Wilt], he is a very generous guy, never involved in bad things, always helping people when he can and with a very good sense of humor. The Lakers with him won 3 consecutive NBA titles, without him they are not even able to get the playoff. Who ever heard about the Miami Heat before Shaq? Now they have a record of 82-0! Besides that, he wears a size 22 shoe. I think I would wear 7 or 7.5 in Arizona. | [4/7/05 11:03:30 AM]Fan | Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com| | 10|Enjoyed the replay of Braxton-Saad Muhammad I (Franklin) from the other night. Light Heavy was incredible in the late 70's-early 80's. Marvin Johnson vs Saad-Muhammad II is one of the better action fights in history. Throw in the rest of the contenders and it was the best era ever for light-heavyweights. Two Quarry's fought in the golden era of their respective divisions! |
4/7/05 11:11:56 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Pope John Paul II how about Pope George Ringo 1?

4/8/05 01:18:09 AM|Noam|same||same|||10|Way to go Kent, now you're getting the hang of things. I'd prefer Pope Ringo George. Perhaps even Pope Oscar after you-know-who from the Mustang Ranch.

4/8/05 04:48:51 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|I have a report up on the retired boxers foundation website about the Bowe card. It is in the RBF news section.Bowe, at times showed a good left jab and he landed a few, but only a few right hands that hurt his opponent, Billy Zumbrun, but Zumbrun hurt Bowe on more occasions and I had him winning the number of rounds 5-4-1. Bowe did knock him down once with a hard body shot and Zumbrun had a point deducted for using his shoulder on Bowe, so Bowe on my card wins by only one point.Two of the crazy judges saw Bowe winning by four points while the third judge voted for Zumbrun. The crowd loudly booed the verdict.I hope Bowe retires but if he doesn't, he had better fight in better shape. He weighed 280 pounds.If you saw the broadcast on Fox Sports Network, then you heard James Toney, the guest commentator, say Bowe should go back to the institution. John Salley, former basketball player who is about as Wilt as Wilt also said Bowe lost.I watched the broadcast that I taped at home after I sent in my report and Bowe looked a little better on TV than in person but I still think he needs to stay retired before he gets hurt. | 4/8/05 07:56:11 PM|Steve |NJ||NA|||10|Hey Noam, Kent, and Massimmo, I can take a hint, and will back off religion if you guys will. I just watched guys who looked like they were in shape, but had zero boxing skills, in a ring closed in with wire, beat each other to a pulp. The strategy seems to be, land one good punch, then throw your opponent to the floor, and jump on top, and punch his face off. Hell, I could have done that in high school. If that's the new sports entertainment, then we have zero chance of cleaning up boxing.

4/8/05 08:06:37 PM|Steve|NA||na|||10|The very strict rules or boxing, are what keeps it such a demanding, restrictive sport. I hate to see these watered down versions on TV.

4/9/05 01:24:04 AM|Ed|Cicero n y||mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|Kent, I saw part of Bowe fight and I thought he looked horrible. He let his unknown opponent pin him to ropes and hurt him. Bowe should definitely retire. Of course an argument could be made if he should retire what about the guys he is beating.

4/9/05 02:02:34 AM|Noam|same||same|||10|Steve, I wasn't trying to be offensive with that stuff, I was just playing with the subject. I hope you didn't take me wrongly, as I meant no disrespect to anyone's beliefs. I think I'd feel sorry for Bowe if I saw him in the ring again. I don't want to watch him fight. He never seemed like a guy who fought because it was in his blood and he loved it. So I guess he's doing it again for money. Anyone know his reasons for coming back?

4/9/05 02:38:38 AM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|Steve - I don't pretend to be the truth on the religion subject, I just think what my poor, small and limited brain suggest me to think. I'm free to be what I want to be and to think what I want to think, just like everyone else. And my name is Massimo Cini. I'm worried for Bowe, for Tyson and for Evandro "the Real Nut" Camposanto. Michele Geraldo is gonna (and not pantaloni) fight a guy in June (whose name is Kevin McBride) who is twice wilter and andreeer than he is. I don't think it's gonna be an easy fight for Tyson. Boxing is such a dangerous sport (although it's so exciting also) for everyone, let alone for these old fighters who have already taken millions of punches throughout (or even during) their careers.

4/9/05 12:41:37 PM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|Kent - I was wondering, did you stand next to John Salley?

4/9/05 12:45:46 PM|Steve |NJ||NA|||10|Hey Noam and Massimo, jeez, are you guys touchy? Noam, your sense of humor is irreverent and incorrigible, and that's a good thing! I think Howard C. should include you as a made member of the Dead Parrot's...
Society. You've even got Kent cracking jokes!!!!!
Hey Massimo, I didn't mean to imply that you personally had a small brain. Your brain is probably only slightly larger than mine. You just use a lot more of yours than I do mine.

| 4/9/05 01:24:18 PM | Steve | nj | dmmsrm@comcast.net | | | 10 | Kent, in my opinion, the reason you can't drum up any interest in the Retired Boxer's Foundation is because guys like Bowe and Hollyfield keep fighting. Who wants to donate money to a retirement fund when there is no legal way to make these guys stop fighting until they destroy themselves? I would have gladly given money to Jerry Quarry, but what happened to him was before anyone except Sen. John McLain ever seemed to understand the severity of the boxing problem. |
| 4/9/05 01:30:05 PM | Massimo | Roma | | | | 10 | Steve—>br>I know that you didn't mean to imply that, Steve, my brain is big enough to understand that. No problem, I just wanted to say that my opinion ain't that important. |

| 4/9/05 02:38:31 PM | Steve | nj | dmmsrm@comcast.net | | | 10 | Massimo, yes, you dumbass, your opinion does mean a lot on this website! I value your opinions on every subject we discuss on this website. Even though your a communist non believer. |

| 4/9/05 02:49:58 PM | Steve | NJ | dmmsrm@comcast.net | | | 10 | Massimo, I am not a very good typist, and sometimes I kid too much. In Jersey, if you a good piasan, we bust each other's balls. I think of you as a good friend. |
| 4/9/05 03:18:38 PM | Massimo | Paisaland | | | | 10 | Grazie Steve, it's the same for me! Yes, I'm a non believer, but I'm not a communist. I just hate communism. It's a wrong and illogical way of thinking which did never work in this world. It did never work for one simple reason: IT'S ILLOGICAL AND WRONG! Alex P. Keaton |
| 4/9/05 05:44:01 PM | Noam | same | same | | | 10 | Tiger Woods will win the Masters. Why not name him as pope? Think about it. Catholics with big butts would be motivated to exercise more by playing golf. And it would be good for golf because more people would be playing it. A win/win situation. Pope Tiger! |

| 4/10/05 04:33:15 AM | Dikembe "Big finger" Mutombo | Paisaland | | | | 10 | Cat Woods is the greatest champion in the most boring sport in the world... Baseball is a thrill in comparison !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! |
| 4/10/05 06:19:07 PM | Noam | same | same | | | 10 | Massimo, that play-off wasn't boring! Go wash your mouth out with soap. I wonder whether Pope Tiger can box too. |
| 4/11/05 12:43:44 PM | Steve | na | na | | | 10 | Noam, I guess I know what your second favorite sport is: What make's you think playing golf will get rid of a big butt? C'mon, these guys drive around in carts! There's only one way to have a nice, taut, shapely butt, and that's to be less than 45 years old! |
| 4/11/05 01:18:13 PM | Steve | na | na | | | 10 | Kent, I've just read an article on Eastside boxing. There is talk of a Hollyfield vs Tyson 3! Now, Hollyfield's gotta be worth a few million dollars, and Tyson's making a comeback, which will probably net him a few million. Nothing personal against you, but how can we expect any one to take the retired Boxers program seriously, when these guys are still getting state approved permits to fight? |
| 4/11/05 03:12:49 PM | Massimo | Paisaland | | | | 10 | Tyson is gonna have his ass kicked by Kevin McBride in June, while Hollyfield is gonna lose against a German guy whose name I don't remember. Ich kenne seine name nicht! I think Evandro wouldn't be able to beat me in this moment of his career! So, I don't think there will never be Holyfield-Tyson 3. At least, not soon. |
| 4/11/05 03:18:40 PM | Howard C. | Louisville | | | | 10 | Anyone remember a guy named Jeff Feneck or Fennech? Not sure of the spelling. He was a dual or triple world champion in the lower weights from Australia. Feneck is over here training Tyson for the McBride fight. I suppose anything is worth a try. |
| 4/11/05 03:41:57 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | | | | 10 | What's the deal? Will Tyson fight on network television? HBO or will it be pay per view nonsense? If he's the headline, who will pay to watch him? Why would anyone pay 40 or 50 dollars to watch a 40 year old guy whose best years were in the 1980's? Is it people who want to see him get trounced? | 4/11/05 04:08:47 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Steve, The Retired Boxers Foundation does all that it can to help fighters who need help after they retire. Even great fighters can often be forgotten when they are no longer of use to the promoters and the fans. Sure there is a lot of work to do but Alex Ramos' group, does all that it can help fighters in the mean time and it is up to the rest of us to try and get legislation passed for the improvement of boxing. TJQF, with a lot of help from George Otto, has and will continue to press for better governing in the sport.RBF (retired boxers foundation) still is needed to help the fighters and likely still will be needed even if legislation is passed for things like a national commision.I hope people visit RBF's site and at least read Alex "The Bomber" Ramos' story. He is absolutely an extraordinary man and he has my full support in any way I can help him and his group and their cause.A national commision would go a long way to make licensing requirements strickter and as Mr. Jimmy here at TJQF supported and I continue to support, is a rule that fighters should have to pass a yearly brain scan exam and if any sign of permanent damage is found, then that fighter would no longer be allowed to get a license to box regardless if the fighter showed no symphoms. Jerry Quarry actually took a brain scan in 1983 and he showed signs of damage, even if physical signs were not visible, but he was still granted a license to fight twice that year. Shame to those who that let it happen in Colorado in 1992, he was allowed to fight there and I believe this was the straw that broke the camel's back to cause his downward slide in just a few years later.If Jerry would have been denied a license to fight anywhere when he first showed brain damage in 1983, then I believe he would still be with us today.| 4/11/05 06:36:42 PM|Fan|USA||n/a|||10|  Re: assistance for former fighters, you can also check out Gerry Cooney's FIST (Fighters' Initiative for Support and Training) at www.helpboxers.org. It's a pretty interesting site, with a number of photos, including Gerry and his present day pal Larry Holmes. Nice to see them working together for a good cause.| 4/12/05 08:56:33 AM|Forest Ward|NYC||raymccormack2003@yahoo.com|||10| Fan, you are my man, I think you know that by now. But I got some bad news. Cooney's program FIST is basically a vehicle to promote and enrich Gerry Cooney. Most non profit organizations (at least the legitimate ones) are very willing to open their books and let the public see where the money is going. This is especially important when looking at the nonprofit's ratio of expenses vs. donations to charity. Cooney's organization is very secretive about this. I remember learning Fist's ratio for a given year and it was something like 85% for expenses and 15% for charity. That is pathetic! Cooney's wife is on the payroll for FIST and is getting big bucks, certainly a lot more that she would in the real world, and for a lot less work.Cooney uses FIST to promote himself. If you ask Gerry Cooney to appear at an event he charges for his appearance. No problem with that, right? Wrong! The public assumes Cooney's appearance is gratis, or that any fee he receives goes to FIST. It doesn't, any fee he gets goes to Gerry Cooney.Now, I know some people on this site will say to me, where is your proof? Well, it is not up to me to prove it. It is up to Cooney to open up his books and disprove what I and other are saying. How did I learn this? I learned about this at RING 8 in NYC from someone who knows the whole story, and told this to me off the record. RING 8 is an organization that actually helps down and out fighters. They recently had Kid Gavilans body removed from a basically unmarked grave to a beautiful grave sight, at considerable expense. Cooney is running a hustle.| 4/13/05 12:43:29 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||moosey goofy@aol.com|||10|Forest, Good points u bring up about fake charities and ripping people off. Its especially galling when done by a celebrity who people tend to trust. Lets hope if what u say is true, he gets enough negative exposure that people won't contribute.

Let's hope people will be careful who they give to on things and check expense ratios...imo if its a charity nearly 100% should be distributed, somebody shouldn't be begging money from people and then drawing big salaries.

Forest, I don't doubt that you have been told what you've related here. However, before we convict Gerry Cooney (and his wife) of what are reprehensible criminal offenses, let's check our facts. I will attempt to do so on this end, if for no other reason than it seems other posters are willing to condemn Cooney based on no more than what you've heard. Right off the bat, I would consider motive. I question whether Gerry is in such dire need of money that he would jeopardize all by committing the felonies you've ascribed to him. As far as self promotion, I'm not sure this effort, if it's what drives him, has been successful. When was the last time you saw Cooney in the public eye?    I must also infer that Larry Holmes and the other fighters and public figures who are involved in FIST are either Cooney's naive dupes (however, I presume that in their circles, they would be privy to what you've heard) or are co-conspirators and criminally liable as well. Frankly, neither interpretation holds water. I will endeavor to learn more and get back to you. I would close by suggesting that common decency demands that SOME credible evidence (not rank hearsay) be presented before slandering the good name of another.

Pan, you made a lot of good points. And I hope your are successful in getting to bottom of this. What Cooney is doing to my knowledge is not a crime. There are a lot of charities that exist that do not break any laws. But there distribution of donations are horrible. Look at the scandal with the 9/11 charities not too long ago. Organizations such as the American Red Cross, the Hollywood telethon, the Firefighters Union among others were accused of diverting the donations for other purposes rather than they were intended for, namely, the victims families. This only became clear when there was such a loud out cry from the media (especially Bill O'Reilly), that they opened up their books, and then admitted to their wayward ways. Cooney's ratio of expenses to charitable donations is terrible.

Regarding Larry Holmes any other celebrities involved in this cause, they are getting paid to make appearances at Cooney's events. Why should they complain, and I doubt that Cooney has shown them his books and finacial statements. This whole matter could be settled if Cooney opened his books up. Fat chance of that. Cooney does not need the money? Few wealthy people do not want to make more money, including Cooney. Finally, Cooney craves attention, this is way of staying in the spotlight, and having people say what a nice guy he is. Believe me Cooney and his charity are not what they are cracked up to be.

I do know that Gerry Cooney does some good but it is wrong if he is making a lot of money for doing so. A modest salary would not be a problem though. I hope that allegations of Cooney, at the least, making more money than he should does not discourage people from giving to some of the other organizations we have mentioned. If there is actually a bad apple in the group, it doesn't mean they all are bad.

Forrest's information is wrong---but I suspect that where there's smoke, there might be fire. So many charities end up top heavy---paying for administrative fees and salaries, while very little money goes for the actual cause, that it wouldn't surprise me if what Forrest says is true. On the other hand, I hope it's just someone with an axe to grind against Cooney, and they are blowing it out of proportion. From what I've seen of Cooney, he seems sincere. If his wife draws a salary, even a bit puffed up, I don't mind as long as she's working. If Cooney charges for personal appearances, again, it doesn't matter, as long as a good portion of donations make it to former boxers in need. I read in the Wall Street Journal recently that Don Imus' Ranch (Charity Ranch for kids with serious illness) is corrupt. Imus has cronies on the payroll and uses the ranch as a personal getaway—they use charity funds to hire a chef and assistants, and Imus goes there and has the chef make meals for him and uses the amenities. Illegal? I doubt it. Unethical? Depends who you ask. The cost factor is upside down—millions of dollars raised, HUNDREDS of kids served per year—but parents say the kids experience there is first rate. Same might hold true for Cooney. By the way, I was having lunch at a DC institution, Ben's Chili Bowl on U Street, and a FOX News reporter came in to ask me for some comments on Mike Tyson's upcoming fight in DC. I gave her a quick interview, but I don't think they used it on the newscast. Who knows, maybe they'll use it when the fight draws closer.

4/15/05 01:36:30 AM|My name is Massimo|del bel paese la' dove 'l si' sona (XXXIII, Hell)||warrencoolidgeisthegreatest.com|||10|Yesterday night, in Paisaland, ESPN showed Marvin "Humble" Hagler vs Eugenio "Ciclone" Hart. What a great fight it was!!!!! It was a Frazier-Quarry 1 for smaller people. The heavyweight division is my favourite division, but I like very much the 70's and 80's middleweight division too. Marvin Hagler, Roberto Duran, Tommaso Hearns, Iran Barkley, Zucchero Ray Leonard, Eugenio Hart, Benito Briscoe were all exciting fighters. Eugenio was a very dangerous puncher with probably a weak chin. He fought a great fight against Hagler; he fought toe to toe (it means "alla pari") with one of the greatest pound for pound: MARVIN "HUMBLE" HAGLER. When he quit on his stool, for no apparent reason, after the eight round he was doing very well. Marvin Hagler vs Eugenio Hart was a great fight, a fight for collectors, a fight to watch over and over again.

4/16/05 05:03:34 AM|George Otto|Youngston, Ohio|ehnpbsa@aol.com|||10|A recent article and comments posted on the East Side boxing site regarding the federal government controlling boxing contains many good ideas and thoughts. Let me add a few more as one who has reviewed the boxing organizational scene and commented on it for almost 10 years for no pay as the chief counsel/legislative director of the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing and the Jerry Quarry Foundation. Since WWII, boxing has declined to the level of a niche sport—one that only attracts attention at periodic periods of time. College athletics, basketball, football, baseball, golf, hockey, tennis, and other sports have long surpassed boxing as an object of consistent interest. Furthermore, proportionately, the boxing business has declined. A huge reason has been a lack of credibility and honesty and integrity that other sports have—along with a central authority over the bulk of the matches/games/contests. This has happened even on an international basis. Boxing has never had a central authority to bring order to its chaos. The people making the most money have earned it today with no thought or concern about the future or the ongoing growth of the sport—which has inevitably resulted in its overall decline. That is why boxing needs a central authority. And, if the private sector refuses to do it (which it has for more than 60 years), then having the federal government, which does some things well when the public holds it accountable, constitutes the only viable alternative. For those who want change this has to happen. For those who do not want change, they will see a continued decline in the overall condition of the sport—particularly in terms of making money and taking care of the fighters. Finally, as is true of most solutions such as this, there are both winners and losers from a financial and emotional standpoint. However, the mission and purposes of TJQF (the Jerry Quarry Foundation) and the AAIB (the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing) are to improve boxing, not to make everyone happy, glad, prosperous, amused, or feeling fulfilled. And hence these comments. Finally, the John McCain bill to set up a federal boxing commission is back before Congress again this session.
Thank you for the update Mr. Otto. I have written articles for Eastside Boxing for four years and recently I have been covering boxing for The Retired Boxers Foundation, Alex Ramos' group, who help fighters when they are in need after retirement.

I know Alex would like to see some sort of retirement packages for fighters and I agree wholeheartedly. Recently I covered the Riddick Bowe fight and I walked a fine line between stating that I don't think Bowe should fight again while at the same time not being critical of the promoter, the TV network, and the venue, which could make me lose my passes to events. I have mixed feelings about this but what can I do? I would like to see fighters have to pass brain scans and be denied licenses if damage is at all present. Would a national commission help in doing this?

I'm looking forward to see Giacomo "Luci spente" Toney vs Giovanni "Yawn" Ruiz. The most talented and bragging heavyweight in the world against the most boring one. They almost had a brawl in the press conference. Giacomo is gonna take Giovanni to school, I think is gonna be an easy fight for Giacomo. But I don't think Giacomo can beat Vitali.

Hi everyone. I'm in Rome, applying for a job. I won't know for another week whether I'll get it, but the gig will set me up for life if I do and I'm quietly confident. Pray everyone.

Roma, welcome in Roma and good luck for your job !!!!!!! Unfortunately, it's raining hard today in Roma (SOB ! ).

I've found a nice bar to while away the time and keep dry. I'll walk outside occasionally to see whether smoke is coming out of that chimney. It's in God's hands how much I'll drink.

Roma has some good things and some bad ones. The city ain't ugly but there is a lot of traffic and the buses and the subway don't work very well. You need a lot of patience to live in Roma.

Are you really in Roma or are you fooling me around ? Ma che me stai a pia' pe' culo ? (Roman Slang).

Now I see, so you are in Roma for the Conclave and to have fun ! A lot of people is coming in Roma in these days, I hope everything is gonna be all right ! Roma has some good things and some bad ones. The city ain't ugly but there is a lot of traffic and the buses and the subway don't work very well. You need a lot of patience to live in Roma.

Are you really in Roma or are you fooling me around ? Ma che me stai a pia' pe' culo ? (Roman Slang).

I have at least five candidates as "PINNACLE" of the sport. Ali'-Foreman 1974; Mc Enroe b Connors 6-1/6-1/6-2 Wimbledon final 1984; Warren Coolidge humiliates Bill Russell 1982 (5 Luglio 1982); Rossi 5', Socrates 12', Rossi 25',
Falcao 68', Rossi 75' |
[4/19/05 10:57:26 AM] Massimo | Roma | LoquisneLatine?.com ||| 10 | NUNTIO VOBIS GAUDIUM MAGNUM, HABEMUS PAPAM !!!!  Er habt immer recht !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! |
[4/19/05 04:20:36 PM] Noam | same | same ||| 10 | Massimo, I guess you know by now that I missed out to Cardinal Rapsinger from Germany. The Hitler Youth bit in his cv did it for him. Still the conclave has been great party and I can't wait till the next one. Ciao. |
[4/19/05 05:15:41 PM] Abner Goldstein | Carver High School | whiteshadow.com ||| 10 | I was there when Warren C played Bill Russell one on one and Russell was a lot better than Coolidge was. |
[4/19/05 08:28:00 PM] Steve | NJ | dmmsrm@comcast.net. ||| 10 | Angelo, I read with great interest your post from 4/13/05. Since I have never been approached by a reporter, and asked for an opinion on an upcoming fight, I can only assume you are a well known boxing celebrity. Are you Angelo Dundee? If you are, you have my utmost respect and admiration. I must ask about Ali's much vaunted ability to twist his punches in some way to cause cuts. The little boxing experience I've had, led me to believe that you should always turn your fist over when connecting. That is, palms down, knuckles on the target. |
[4/20/05 04:01:42 AM] Massimo | Roma ||| 10 | How wilt is Raitzinger? I wonder why nobody seems to care about that! What really impressed me in the Coolidge-Russell one on one legendary game was that Russell was wilter than Coolidge! Unbelievable, wilter than Coolidge!!!!!!! Bill Russell is one hell of a wilt guy! |
[4/20/05 07:18:37 AM] Massimo | Roma ||| 10 | Last night I have seen George Foreman in a show on NBC. He talked about his grills and other things. George said that he was ready to come (or coming) back in the ring when he was 55, but his wife didn't allow him to do that. He was asked: what's the right age for a fight to retire and he answered: "The fighter has to be married, if he ain't married he can keep on fighting forever!". He also said that Tyson is still a dangerous fighter and that he is sharpening his teeth to get back in the ring! I was impressed about George Foreman's English. George Foreman can actually speak a very good English! I have been studying English for a while now (even if not regularly) but my English is nowhere close George Foreman's English. |
[4/20/05 04:16:55 PM] Angelo | Washington, DC || funktron@yahoo.com ||| 10 | Steve: No, I'm not the famous Angelo Dundee. Actually, the reporter from FOX was desperate (and she was not bad looking!) and came to my table asking if any of us had a reaction to Tyson fighting in DC. My co-worker said "You've GOT to talk to her--you're a big boxing fan" and that was all the reporter needed to hear to practically take my food away from me until I gave her the interview. The angle she worked was that a few years ago, Tyson tried to sign to fight in DC and there were a bunch of protests and the fight was moved. She asked if the controversy would continue and I said no, people have short memories and the fight will happen. I told her that since Tyson is a knockout artist, people will always pay to see him with the hopes that the fight will end in a KO--and that he can still be dangerous. It was actually a somewhat bogus reaction from me and it was weird being put on the spot like that--I imagine with a lot of practice I could put my words together to be a good public speaker and I have called into radio shows numerous times and did a good job--but the camera and lights and microphone shoved in my face got me a bit nervous! It was fun though, even though I don't think they used the clip on the news. |
[4/21/05 12:05:22 AM] Ed | Cicero n y || mooseygoop@aol.com ||| 10 | Mass,  George was born in U S so of course he speaks good English...I guarantee your English is better then his Italian. |
[4/21/05 02:56:27 AM] Massimo | Roma ||| 10 | Ed -  I like this new Pope very much, Ed!  It's so funny to have (or having) a Pope who speaks Italian with German accent. I like the German Language and I actually have been studying German in the last few months but... The Italian Language in the mouth of a German guy is so funny! "Questo giorno di gioia" in his mouth becomes "Qvesto ciorno di cioia " Ah! Ah! Ah! Ah! Ah! Anyone see "Ring of Fire," last night on USA, it was great. I met Emile Griffith for the 1st time in 1968. Over the years I have run into on many occassions. The show presented him very accurately. You will be hard put to find a nicer person than Emile. He has always been a decent and wonderful person.

Anyone see "Ring of Fire," last night on USA, it was great. I met Emile Griffith for the 1st time in 1968. Over the years I have run into on many occassions. The show presented him very accurately. You will be hard put to find a nicer person than Emile. He has always been a decent and wonderful person.

Read the new book about Jim Braddock by Jeremy Schaap. The book was excellent. I found it interesting and historically accurate. I would recommend it.

Anyone see "Ring of Fire," last night on USA, it was great. I met Emile Griffith for the 1st time in 1968. Over the years I have run into on many occassions. The show presented him very accurately. You will be hard put to find a nicer person than Emile. He has always been a decent and wonderful person.

Read the new book about Jim Braddock by Jeremy Schaap. The book was excellent. I found it interesting and historically accurate. I would recommend it.

Anyone see "Ring of Fire," last night on USA, it was great. I met Emile Griffith for the 1st time in 1968. Over the years I have run into on many occassions. The show presented him very accurately. You will be hard put to find a nicer person than Emile. He has always been a decent and wonderful person.

Read the new book about Jim Braddock by Jeremy Schaap. The book was excellent. I found it interesting and historically accurate. I would recommend it.

Anyone see "Ring of Fire," last night on USA, it was great. I met Emile Griffith for the 1st time in 1968. Over the years I have run into on many occassions. The show presented him very accurately. You will be hard put to find a nicer person than Emile. He has always been a decent and wonderful person.

Read the new book about Jim Braddock by Jeremy Schaap. The book was excellent. I found it interesting and historically accurate. I would recommend it.

Anyone see "Ring of Fire," last night on USA, it was great. I met Emile Griffith for the 1st time in 1968. Over the years I have run into on many occassions. The show presented him very accurately. You will be hard put to find a nicer person than Emile. He has always been a decent and wonderful person.

Read the new book about Jim Braddock by Jeremy Schaap. The book was excellent. I found it interesting and historically accurate. I would recommend it.

Anyone see "Ring of Fire," last night on USA, it was great. I met Emile Griffith for the 1st time in 1968. Over the years I have run into on many occassions. The show presented him very accurately. You will be hard put to find a nicer person than Emile. He has always been a decent and wonderful person.

Read the new book about Jim Braddock by Jeremy Schaap. The book was excellent. I found it interesting and historically accurate. I would recommend it.

Anyone see "Ring of Fire," last night on USA, it was great. I met Emile Griffith for the 1st time in 1968. Over the years I have run into on many occassions. The show presented him very accurately. You will be hard put to find a nicer person than Emile. He has always been a decent and wonderful person.

Read the new book about Jim Braddock by Jeremy Schaap. The book was excellent. I found it interesting and historically accurate. I would recommend it.

Anyone see "Ring of Fire," last night on USA, it was great. I met Emile Griffith for the 1st time in 1968. Over the years I have run into on many occassions. The show presented him very accurately. You will be hard put to find a nicer person than Emile. He has always been a decent and wonderful person.

Read the new book about Jim Braddock by Jeremy Schaap. The book was excellent. I found it interesting and historically accurate. I would recommend it.

Anyone see "Ring of Fire," last night on USA, it was great. I met Emile Griffith for the 1st time in 1968. Over the years I have run into on many occassions. The show presented him very accurately. You will be hard put to find a nicer person than Emile. He has always been a decent and wonderful person.

Read the new book about Jim Braddock by Jeremy Schaap. The book was excellent. I found it interesting and historically accurate. I would recommend it.

Anyone see "Ring of Fire," last night on USA, it was great. I met Emile Griffith for the 1st time in 1968. Over the years I have run into on many occassions. The show presented him very accurately. You will be hard put to find a nicer person than Emile. He has always been a decent and wonderful person.

Read the new book about Jim Braddock by Jeremy Schaap. The book was excellent. I found it interesting and historically accurate. I would recommend it.
he has worked with since Rooney, and now I think the right trainer can make a big difference.  Tyson will do fine until he is hurt and fighting on automatic and then his bad habits that have become automatic over the years take over such as, loading up and throwing one punch at a time and trying to bail himself out with his power. He also forgets to take advantage of his short height and he forgets to fight out of a crouch and he doesn't move his head enough when he comes in to avoid punches.  Tyson at his best was a well-oiled fighting machine who gave plenty of movement as he pursued his opponents and he worked in behind the jab, throwing combinations to the body and head, not just loading up one punch at at time but he stopped doing these things on a regular basis and he became beatable.  Sure he still destroyed lower ranked opponents that were put in front of him but he lost the edge that he needs at the upper level of the sport and that combined with age makes me think he will never get it back. | 4/24/05 12:56:11 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Cus D'Amato has been the greatest trainer ever, he was more important than Tyson himself early in Mike's career. I have seen some footage of the first Tyson's fights (or of Tyson's first fights) and he was really scaring. Just think of his fight against Reggie Gross and how he was able to avoid Reggie's punches in the second round just before the knockout punch... Really amazing! Maybe Reggie Gross, David Jaco, Jose Ribalta, Eddie Richardson and Jesse Ferguson weren't all time great stuff, but they were good fighters. The only fighter who was able to fight toe to toe with Tyson in those years was Giacomo "Quick" Tillis in 1986. Sure Mitch Green went the distance with Tyson in the same year, but from what I heard the fight wasn't that close. I think Cus could have stepped into the ring and beaten Tyson whenever he wanted to. | 4/24/05 04:12:45 PM | Noam | same | same | same | 10 | Kent - you described the situation with Tyson very well. He went downhill when he stopped throwing combinations and it was around the same time that all head movement stopped and he became easier to hit.  Good trainers keep the minds of lazy fighters on the job. With guys like Tyson - who have an extremely brief attention span - that would not be easy and you'd need a very strong character to do it.  Someone, I think it might have been Howard, mentioned that Tyson has a new trainer in Jeff Feneck, the former triple world champion from Australia. He was the guy who fought Azumah Nelson a couple of times. Feneck didn't have a lot of natural talent and instead relied on fitness, stamina, strength, and mental toughness.  If Feneck can get Tyson fit, and perhaps imbue in him a few of those other traits, then he might be more than just competitive, even though he'll never relive his glory days.  Tyson has no choice but to fight. He needs the money. So his desire is not fueled by ambition; it all revolves around money. Whether that's enough incentive to keep him fighting when he's hurt, I guess we will soon find out. | 4/24/05 04:55:03 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Kent - even if Silvio Berlusconi gave Tyson all of his money, Mike would be poor again in a couple of months! | 4/24/05 11:55:21 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | Kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Noam | It all centered around Tyson losing his connection to Cus.  Kevin Rooney was a former Cus fighter, a junior welterweight, who trained Tyson from the later part of his amateur days until the Michael Spinks fight. Rooney was the kind of guy who was not intimidated by Tyson and he would tell him what was up, not what Tyson wanted to hear but Tyson didn't want someone to tell him the truth anymore so Rooney was fired.  Don King had a lot to do with it reportedly saying, "why pay Rooney three million dollars a fight?" It seems King wanted that share for himself and it was around the time that King got more influence with Tyson that Tyson started to go down hill.  Rooney was sorely missed, especially during the Buster Douglas fight, when Tyson had his buddies Rory Hollaway and Jay Bright, an assistant from Cus' camp but not an experienced trainer, in his corner. They didn't know how to handle things when things were going wrong.Tyson, from time to time, has hired experienced trainers like Richie Giacetti, formerly Larry Holmes's trainer and more recently I think Freddie Roach has worked with him but I don't think Tyson has actually listened to anyone since Rooney was in his corner.Maybe he will do what Fenech says but it may be too late for him to comeback.| 4/25/05 02:02:55 AM|Noam|same|same||10|Massimo, Tyson's wasted over 100 million dollars. I wouldn't know how to do that. I could have lived fabulously just on the interest. The mind boggles. |

| 4/25/05 05:19:24 AM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Noam--I think that both Bill Gates and Silvio Berlusconi are better business men than Tyson is.| 4/25/05 02:24:53 PM|Noam|same|same||10|Someone just told me that Tyson earned more than 600 million dollars so far in his career, not 100 million like I earlier posted. He's blown the lot. I know he had white tigers and Don King, but how do you spend that much money. Was he a gambler ? |

| 4/25/05 10:32:07 PM|Noam|same|same||10|By the way, what do you give athletes' shoes to drink ? Running water.| 4/26/05 12:28:57 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||mooseygoop@aol.com||10|I learned something watching tape of the Emile Griffith story. Benny Paret died after Griffith beat him but the show told and showed how Gene Fulmer beat Paret up horribly a few months before Paret fought Griffith. Fulmer said it was the worse beating he ever gave a fighter. The Fulmer fight probably had more to do with Paret's death then Griffith did...something I never knew all these years.| 4/26/05 01:32:00 AM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Ed--I have seen the Fullmer-Paret fight once and it was hard for both fighters. Gene Fulmer was a pressure fighter, ala Joe Frazier, and one of the greatest middleweights of all time. Paret held his own for most of the fight (it was a very spectacular fight) but in the last rounds Gene dominated him. If I remember well, the fight ended with a triple knock down in round 12. |

| 4/26/05 07:19:54 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@aol.com||10|Mass,Thanks for filling me in..Paret being smaller and not considered a hard puncher makes it surprising he could have given a much bigger and stronger Gene Fulmer a hard fight. I only seen small part of fight on Emile Griffith documentary and it showed Paret taking a real bad pounding. Gene Fulmer had a brother that was pretty good too.| 4/27/05 01:26:39 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|I'm not shedding tears for Tyson, but realize that the good ole government takes 50% off the top. Then you pay managers and trainers and promoters (King gets a lions share!). So sure, you're left with millions. But athletes like Tyson have hangers on and an entourage. That gobbles up more. Then divorces, taking another huge chunk. Again, not a lot of sympathy, but I think it's easy to see how he blew through all this money. A small part of me feels bad for him. I wish he would have managed his affairs more closely and told the scumbags around him to piss off. |

| 4/27/05 02:01:01 PM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Come on, Angelo, Tyson made a huge amount of money. No other fighter in history made as much money as Tyson did ! Frazier and Ali' were ragamuffins in comparison ! Diego Maradona was a ragamuffin too (or also). Shaq is not a ragamuffin, not even in comparison with Tyson, and I don't know if Wilt was. Nino Benvenuti made 1/100 of the money Tyson made and he is still rich and there are many others . I think Michele Geraldo will have financial problems for the rest of his life, no matter what happens.| 4/27/05 03:43:25 PM|Noam|same|same||10|Massimo, what is a ragamuffin ? In your finest English, please define.Angelo, a part of me feels bad for Tyson, too. He never had the sophistication to deal with the extraordinary life his boxing skills brought him. I wonder whether Cus D'Amato deliberately didn't educate Tyson in life skills so that he was entirely dependent on Cus for advice and guidance. Had Cus not died, that would have left him in charge of the purse strings of an unbelievably lucrative career. Tyson will beat McBride as I think he will go into this fight fitter than he has been for years. But facing reality, Tyson is still a car crash waiting to happen.

4/27/05 03:55:26 PM|Noam|Vatican City||same||||10|Kent - I watched a replay of the Bowe v Zumbrun fight. I agree with your comments about it. I had Zumbrun winning. Bowe is completely shot. It was sad to watch. I suspect he's fighting because without the money from boxing he will be a ragamuffin. I saw your pal 'Lights Out' being interviewed, too. He has a good sense of fun but a bad dress sense. What is it with all that jewellery Toney wears. Kent, when you go to fight nights do you wear lots of jewellery? Do you wear an earring? I was looking for you in the crowd but I'm not sure whether it was you that I saw. 4/27/05 04:32:17 PM|Massimo|Roma, not Los Angeles||4|||10|Noam - I will be honest with you. I didn't know the word "ragamuffin", my English ain't that good, but I have an excellent English-Italian/Italian-English dictionary. A "ragamuffin" is a guy who wears "rags" (I didn't know the word "rag" too). I bet that in Roma and Pisa there isn't plenty of guys who know these two words... "Ain't" is already pretty tough...

4/27/05 06:13:17 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Noam, I never wear jewellery. I was seated at the press table in the second row but almost behind Bowe's corner. So I don't think I was on camera this time. I actually scored the Zumbrun fight for Bowe by one point as he did have a knockdown and Zumbrun was penalized a point for using his shoulder in clinches. But Bowe did look bad and although there were times when he showed flashes of his own self, he used his jab well in some rounds and of course the knockdown, he did not convince me his career should continue. I am afraid he is going to get hurt if he continues. The crowd was very pro Zumbrun after giving Bowe a good ovation when he came into the ring and Zumbrun hurt Bowe more than Bowe hurt him. I talked to some of the fans after the fight and some of them were very disappointed that Bowe could come in so heavy, 280 pounds. They were not very kind to Bowe, screaming at him, "retire Bowe" and booing him but they can boo if they want to. They pay the bills.

4/27/05 06:29:36 PM|Kent|same||same||||10|Noam, my "buddy" Toney was not too friendly when I wished him luck in his fight with Ruiz. He shook my hand but I don't think he has much respect for me. If you wonder why, read my article at Eastside Boxing called, "my answers to James Toney's challenging questions." It should be in the archives at eastside and I think you can get it if you google search on my name (advanced specific search on my name only) or put that title in a search. I had a run in with him but since I am only a "small fry" in the journalism business it didn't get much attention.

4/27/05 06:35:47 PM|Noam|same||same||||10|Kent - with a makeover you could be the next big thing as a boxing writer. A stud through your tongue and a ring in your eyebrow is what you need. With new clothes, you'd stand right out at press conferences and guys like Toney would be whistling, "Who's that cool dude with the groovy threads." At least think about it. It could be the turning point in your career. Massimo - that would make Kent a groovamuffin, not a ragamuffin.

4/27/05 08:05:14 PM|Noam|same||same||||10|Kent - I went through and read some of the stuff you have written and it is impressive. Congratulations, you are doing a good job. I hope you realize I am only joking about the makeover thing. You should not take me seriously a lot of the time.

4/27/05 11:59:33 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|One thing about my articles, they are usually much better grammatically than my posts as I check them before I submit them.Regarding James Toney, it is not just me he doesn't respect, he doesn't respect anyone who has not boxed competitively. He thinks we have no right to express our opinions. He said so again recently in a teleconference that I was not a part of.Toney gets angry at anyone who doesn't say exactly what he wants to hear anyway so we really can't take what he says to heart.A friend of mine, a local Riverside county newspaper reporter, asked him about the condition of his leg after Toney was returning from an injury last year and Toney told him, "bend over and find out!" Toney then explained what he meant by adding, "I'll shove my foot up your ass and you will see how healthy it is!"Funny how I am still rooting for him to beat Ruiz. I guess I am just sick of Ruiz holding a belt.James Toney weighed in at 233 pounds while John Ruiz weighed 241 pounds for this Saturday's WBA heavyweight title bout. It will be shown on HBO. I am not attending as I don't go beyond the western states and this card is at Madison Square Garden.I think Toney has the skills to beat Ruiz if he suddenly hasn't gotten old but I do still think he is too heavy at 6'10" tall. Ruiz, at anywhere from 225 to 240 fights about the same, sloppy. His weight will not be much of a factor.Kent:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>4/28/05 02:41:09 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>Murrieta, CA</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>4/28/05 02:41:09 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>Murrieta, CA</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Regarding James Toney, it is not just me he doesn't respect, he doesn't respect anyone who has not boxed competitively. He thinks we have no right to express our opinions. He said so again recently in a teleconference that I was not a part of.Toney gets angry at anyone who doesn't say exactly what he wants to hear anyway so we really can't take what he says to heart.A friend of mine, a local Riverside county newspaper reporter, asked him about the condition of his leg after Toney was returning from an injury last year and Toney told him, "bend over and find out!" Toney then explained what he meant by adding, "I'll shove my foot up your ass and you will see how healthy it is!"Funny how I am still rooting for him to beat Ruiz. I guess I am just sick of Ruiz holding a belt.James Toney weighed in at 233 pounds while John Ruiz weighed 241 pounds for this Saturday's WBA heavyweight title bout. It will be shown on HBO. I am not attending as I don't go beyond the western states and this card is at Madison Square Garden.I think Toney has the skills to beat Ruiz if he suddenly hasn't gotten old but I do still think he is too heavy at 5'10" tall. Ruiz, at anywhere from 225 to 240 fights about the same, sloppy. His weight will not be much of a factor.Kent:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>4/29/05 02:01:25 PM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>4/29/05 02:01:25 PM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Toney is by all sense of reasoning, better than Ruiz. But why do I get the feeling that I'll wake up Sunday morning and somehow, some way, Ruiz will still have the belt? After a borefest that will cause the great northeast to fall asleep while watching, judges and referees in catatonic stupors from Ruiz awkward, boring style, Ruiz will hypnotize the world into letting him hold the title.That he is injury prone tells me age may be catching up to him.Yet even at the higher weight, he has far superior skills to Ruiz and if he hasn't lost a step or two, I think he will dominate Ruiz. I am picking Toney by decision.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>4/30/05 01:55:00 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>4/30/05 01:55:00 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

I think you can sleep quietly. Giovanni Ruiz has no chance in hell (and no chance in heaven too) ! As (or like) Giacomo Toney would say: " That big bum is gonna get his ass whipped". I could see Giacomo saying also: " Primo Carnera ? Big bum ! Giorgio Eduardo Foreman ? Big bum ! Joe Louis ? Big bum ! Muhammad Ali' ? Big bum ! " . Giacomo is not very humble, he thinks everyone is a bum but him. Unfortunately I think I will not be able to see this fight. Why the Madison Square Garden ? Why not Roma, Pisa, Caianiello, Catania or Lecce ?I need your company and of the other guys on this site tonight as I have a terrible tooth-ache and so I can't sleep (second straight night that I can't sleep). Most of the time I wander for "my" home in pain, when the pain diminishes I can write.There is the dentist waiting for me tomorrow. What happened in the Toney-Ruiz fight ? I guess it was a boring fight. I didn't see the fight, I only know that Giacomo knocked Giovanni down in the seventh round. Thanks ! Ahi ! Ahi ! Ahi ! Ahi ! Sob ! Sigh ! Ahi !

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/1/05 04:22:43 AM</th>
<th>Howard C.</th>
<th>Louisville</th>
<th>howardc@louisville</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/1/05 04:22:43 AM</th>
<th>Howard C.</th>
<th>Louisville</th>
<th>howardc@louisville</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

A couple more fights like Ruiz-Toney and the sport will officially dead. Ciao!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/1/05 05:33:46 PM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/1/05 05:33:46 PM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

I need your company and of the other guys on this site tonight as I have a terrible tooth-ache and so I can't sleep (second straight night that I can't sleep). Most of the time I wander for "my" home in pain, when the pain diminishes I can write.There is the dentist waiting for me tomorrow. What happened in the Toney-Ruiz fight ? I guess it was a boring fight. I didn't see the fight, I only know that Giacomo knocked Giovanni down in the seventh round. Thanks ! Ahi ! Ahi ! Ahi ! Ahi ! Sob ! Sigh ! Ahi !

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/1/05 05:57:06 PM</th>
<th>Joey</th>
<th>Canada</th>
<th>jco@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>5/1/05 05:57:06 PM</th>
<th>Joey</th>
<th>Canada</th>
<th>jco@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
champion? How bad is the heavyweight division going. Toney would have been lucky to be rated in the top 10 when Ali was ruling. Quarry would have given him a boxing lesson "Yet even at the higher weight, he has far superior skills to Ruiz and if he hasn't lost a step or two, I think he will dominate Ruiz. I am picking Toney by decision." Very true. Nothing against Toney, but he's 5'9", way over weight and out of his league. What does that tell us about the heavyweight division today? That fight was poor. Ruiz is a poor excuse for a Heavyweight Champion. It takes an aged, blown up middleweight to outpoint him for the WBA title. The only heavyweight who looks half way legitimate is Chris Byrd and that's not saying much.Bring back Ali(pre-1970), Quarry, Liston, Holmes, Tyson(pre-1990)... Bring back Ali(pre-1970), Quarry, Liston, Holmes, Tyson(pre-1990)...First of all, welcome ! I think Vitali Klitschko is very strong indeed !I thought the Toney/Ruiz fight was better than I expected, not a great fight but not a bad one either. Ruiz fought his heart out and even though he is a limited fighter, he has nothing to be ashamed of as he showed a champion's heart in trying to keep his title.Toney as a middleweight typically had to lose 30 to 40 pounds for each fight so he is at least a natural cruiserweight. He has superior skills compared to most of the crop of heavyweights today and he would have a good chance to beat anyone. He can't help the era he is in and I like him as a fighter. I don't think he needed to be so hard on Ruiz after the fight though. He totally disrespected him when he could have just as easily honored the effort Ruiz put out. Him saying Don King should throw Ruiz in the trash can was totally uncalled for.

I got to disagree with you on this one. Ruiz has a lot to be ashamed of. Consider this for almost the whole fight he was being backed up by a 37 year old, over weight, former middleweight champ. I can't imagine Holmes, Frazier Ali, Liston, Marciano, Dempsey, Walcott, Louis... Even Jerry Quarry would not allow Tooney to back him up for almost the whole fight. My lasting memory of Ruiz will be of him always trying to win a fight on a foul, and always complaining to the referee about his opponents transgressions, but obviously never his own misdeeds ie. hitting and holding, rabbit punches, hitting on the break, low blows... Goodbye and good riddance to Mr. Jab and grab.

I think unfortunately when a division within a sport is under the monopoly of crooked promoter(s) a lot of champions tend to surface in order to create a lot of pay per views that aren't worth the money, not to mention ringside seats. Generally there is 1 heavyweight per era who dominates the division. The last one I can remember is Tyson during his golden years. Lewis deserves an honourable mention but who did he really fight; an aged Holyfield and a washed up Tyson (I will give Lewis a lot of credit for retiring when he did and staying that way). With the exception of Klitschko and perhaps Chris Byrd as a strong contender, I don't see anything out there. If Toney wants to fight a washed up heavyweight, he should give Tyson a shot at his title. I think it would be a good fight, more or less even size wise and I'm certain that Tyson would take Toney's head off.

Generally there is 1 heavyweight per era who dominates the division. The last one I can remember is Tyson during his golden years. Lewis deserves an honourable mention but who did he really fight; an aged Holyfield and a washed up Tyson (I will give Lewis a lot of credit for retiring when he did and staying that way). With the exception of Klitschko and perhaps Chris Byrd as a strong contender, I don't see anything out there. If Toney wants to fight a washed up heavyweight, he should give Tyson a shot at his title. I think it would be a good fight, more or less even size wise and I'm certain that Tyson would take Toney's head off.

I think Ruiz showed heart against Toney and that is why he has nothing to be ashamed of. He is a limited fighter who only held a belt because the division is weak, but I believe he did the best he could, he threw more punches than he usually does and he didn't hold and foul like he has before and for this he has my respect.

Joey: Right on target. Forrest: Right on target. Kent: Ruiz is a classic has been who never was. At his best, this guy wouldn't make a good heavyweight sparring partner in the 60's or 70's. At his worst, he was indeed Mr. Jab and Grab aka Mr. Borefest----somehow a Heavyweight champion who somehow lost to a couple natural middleweights. What other heavyweight champion has that distinction? No, he's not a bum, but a champion? Hardly, except for at a pitiful time in the division.

One of Lennox Lewis's greatest fights was his 2 rounds demolition of Donovan Ruddock. Ruddock was rated as the "n.1 contender " at the time, but Lewis destroyed him. What's amazing about Toney is that he seems undestructable. I have never seen Giacomo hurt or in danger in the ring; it seems like nobody can hurt him. Evandro "The real nut" Camposanto hit him with terrible shots but Giacomo didn't even blink! Tyson-Toney would be an interesting fight! The question would be: can Giacomo Toney take Michele Tyson's best shots?

Massimo: I don't believe Toney could absorb Tyson's best punches, even at Tysons advanced age/deteriorating skills. However, who's to say weather Tyson could even LAND his best punches on Toney? Toney would give him some awkward angels, tie him up, probably move well---might frustrate Tyson. But I contend that if Tyson landed a couple on him, Toney would be in trouble. Of course, I feel that if somehow, someway, Cooney landed his best punches on Larry Holmes, he could have hurt Holmes. But as we all know, Holmes superior boxing skills made it impossible for Cooney to get untracked.

Massimo: I gotta say that you are probably right, but I am not totally sure...Heck, Michele Geraldo could never hurt Camposanto in two fights... I know that Michele Geraldo can probably hit even harder than Alessio Vinci, but Giacomo got a pretty chuvalian chin. One thing is sure: Toney is not scared of anybody, but God (maybe). Since I think Tyson is not God, Giacomo wouldn't be afraid of him; and if you are not afraid of Michele, Michele gets sissy (it's Slang) and you can beat him. Don't worry about your English, I find your English pretty good, you could probably give me some lessons. I would need it a lot, as I write often in English on this site, I listen to CNN and BBC, Family Ties etc. in English, but I have almost never a chance of speaking English here in Paisaland. I think that in my entire life I have spoken English for not more than half an hour (apart in High School, when my Italo-American teacher Cellini from New Heaven, Connecticut asked me questions). Anyway, "weather" does exist in English, it's a word often used in forecast (you know, it rains, it's sunny etc.).

Toney does take a good punch, it would be interesting to see how he handles punches from Vitali Klitschko, Tyson, up and coming Samuel Peter, or David Tua. Tua is frustrating to watch as he has a huge punch but he is a short heavyweight who seems to have picked up all of Tyson's bad habits that a short heavyweight shouldn't do, like standing straight up and loading up and throwing one punch at a time and not moving his head as he pursues his opponents. Tua needs to take the short heavyweights brawlers training course and watch and learn from the tapes of Marciano, Frazier, and Tyson (at his best). Watching light heavyweight/cruisorweight Dwight Muhammed Qawi, AKA Dwight Braxton, would also help Tua.
He had one of the best jabs in the business, was very smooth in the ring, and had great stamina and of course the ability to get up from a demolishing knockdown (SHAVERS). I would place him right up there as one of the "GREATS", even though CARL 'THE TRUTH' WILLIAMS came very close to de-throning him.

I rate Larry Holmes at a crystal clear top five all-time heavyweight, possibly top three. On any given night, Holmes could win a decision against any heavyweight in history. I agree that he's underrated. Part of the problem is that he followed perhaps the best, most popular heavyweight champ, Ali. But in a weird way, it was perfect---after Ali's brash/bold over the top personality, Holmes provided a low-key, blue collar approach. Holmes quietly went about the business of defending his title---over and over and over, for what, seven years? He was a humble contrast to Ali, a lunch pail guy who stayed in Easton PA instead of going Hollywood---or at least getting a Hollywood attitude. No, Holmes didn't marry a sitcom actress, didn't go to jail, didn't TALK much about what he would do in the ring and didn't bite ears---he just won. And won some more. And won a few more after that. Hats off to Larry Holmes, who was clearly the best heavyweight in the world for a long period of time.

Angelo, your synopsis of Larry is a good one. He was one of the greats for sure. The only thing that bothered me about him was his remark concerning Rocky Marciano (after Holmes was defeated by Spinks or Tyson???). Marciano was, in my opinion, an outstanding heavyweight. His two greatest assets were his knockout power and his stamina. There was no quit in this guy and I think that this was a key factor to his success as he was able to hang in there, even when he was being soundly beaten (Marciano/Charles2) to ultimately overpower his opponent. He was also smart enough to retire undefeated and stay that way.

Hunter Fikes: This might not be the right place to ask this but then again it might be the perfect. I am doing some research on a boxer named Jimmy Heair. He fought mainly out of Los Angeles in the 70's and was a top lightweight before stepping up to the welterweight division latter in his career. Any info would be greatly appreciated thanks Hunter.
and proudly looking on as the dumb questions were asked. Excuse for Holmes? No, Holmes gave a dumb answer to one of the dumb questions. But to an extent, it explains the anger Holmes felt when he made the comment. Holmes later apologized and acknowledged that he has tremendous respect for Rocky Marciano and even had a large photo of Marciano looking over him at his training site.

Kent, I cannot find your article, titled "My answer to James Toney's Challenging comments" on Eastside Boxing. Do not listen to Noam! TRY to get noticed on TV by getting a Ranger haircut, which will make you look mature and forceful. Buy a 1500.00 Italian wool suit, [you can wear it year round]. EXCELLENT INVESTMENT! No ear rings, no studs! Always project yourself as a gentleman. Oh, bye the way, I think any heavyweight legitimate contender who has enough balance to throw a punch without falling into his opponents arms or falling down, can whip Toney.

Put Toney in with Samuel Peters, or either Klitcko. After all, he is the heavweight champion now. Hey, put him in with Cris Byrd!

I've read that Jerry Quarry was slow of foot, especially against Ali, but having fast hands. I don't believe that's accurate. Jerry had educated foot movement, cutting off the ring, moving in and out. He did have way above average hand speed. These two attributes made him one of the best counter punchers I've ever seen. He could hook of a jab, but more impressively, he could hook to the body and then the head. That takes real fast hands. He seemed to be slow in upper body movement, meaning his head. He relied too much on his counter punching power and his ability to take a punch. If he fought everyone like he fought Joe Frazier, he would have won a title.

I found your article on Toney. Sounds to me like you two have something to be settled in the ring. It was a well done piece. Look Kent, lets talk business and money. If you persist in harassing James Toney every time you get near him, maybe we could set something up! I could help you with balance, you know, keeping one foot on the ground, or even both feet, maybe for a left hook. That would be more than Toney had to face against Ruiz. I could even help you with roadwork. I could escort you on from my car. Just doing roadwork would give you an edge on Toney. I would only ask for my fair share, say 40% of your purse. After Taxes. Oh yeah, I'd probably need an option on your next two fights.

I have recently returned to training but low impact for the foreseeable future. I signed up for six months of Karate lessons in an effort to trim my weight.
Serious, if I was ten years younger and I could get down to say 220 pounds, I would enter Toney's media tournament. As far as me verses Toney, I don't think I or anyone else on this board could hope to even coming close to beating Ruiz let alone Toney. Challenging Toney to a bout is funny though. I would think about making my pro debut verses the Koo Koo Klock though. You out there Koo Koo?
Hee! Seriously, for some strange reason I kind of like the Klockster and his alter ego or my other buddy Foolface.
| 5/5/05 03:14:05 AM | Muffin Man | have a guess || yeah yeah ||| |10 | someone mention names of my buddies. what's your problem kent |
| 5/5/05 04:02:36 AM | Massimo | Roma |||4 ||| |10 | Steve -- br> br> I know that Giacomo Toney is a very brave fighter, but... Facing Kent ? Kent "The singing destroyer from California" Appel ? Are you kidding ? Toney just doesn't have the guts to face Kent in the ring ! |
| 5/5/05 05:16:09 AM | Oswald P Finkermeyer | Finkville, USA ||| |10 | Hey, the Muffinman surfaces? br> br> I think he is an imposter. He is not the Muffinman, the Muffinman, the Muffinman! |
| 5/5/05 02:16:23 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC || funktron@yahoo.com ||| |10 | Kent: If you train hard, keep your balance, stay on the balls of your feet and throw punches crisply, I have all the confidence in the world that you can give Toney a boxing lesson (April Fools---Oops, wrong Holiday! Cinco de Mayo!) |
| 5/5/05 04:12:45 PM | Massimo | Roma || wewon'tseethisfight.com ||| |10 | Even if Kent is wilter than Giacomo (5'11" against 5'9" 1/2) and from California, I would see Toney as the favoured to win in this fight (say 40000000000-1). That's because Kent has been out of the ring for too long now, and he is a little arrugginito (don't know the English for this one and I'm too lazy to check the dictionary). I'm sure that if these two guys fought each other Toney would call Kent a "big bum" in the pre-fight conference. br> br> ES: no bad intentions at all Kent, I'm only joking. By the way, I'm sure that you can kick my Italian ass whenever you want to ! |
| 5/5/05 04:32:38 PM | Noam | same ||| |10 | The right nickname for Kent would be "The singinig destroyer" as he is an hard puncher and a good singer, as well. |
| 5/5/05 04:53:54 PM | Noam | same ||| |10 | Massimo - a prime v prime, Appel and Toney, would be touch and go, but I reluctantly have to go with Toney stopping Kent late. Stamina will be the key. Toney's been active, but Appel has been in more restaurants rather than gymnasiums. br> br> 'Splatterbean' might be Kent's new name if he's stupid enough to step in the ring against Toney. I visualize Kent trying 'rope a dope' tactics, not because he's trying to win, but out of pure exhaustion. Kent doesn't have much of a jab. It's more like he's fanning the air trying to cool down his face and get oxygen into his lungs. br> br> Kent's best chance is to lean all over Toney and try and tire him out. If that doesn't work, I'd kneel him in the groin as hard as you can (and then run away as fast as you can). br> br> So, Kent, your best chance is sprint training. Get as far away from Toney as you possibly can ! 10 Hail Marys might help too. |
| 5/5/05 06:07:41 PM | J. Tooney | champion ||| |10 | Yeah its me. This fight with Apple will have 4 parts. Before the fight Apple is the Neverbean. After I move him round the ring for 4 or 5 rounds he will be the Splutterbean. By the end of the fight he'll be the Batteredbean. And if he tries kicking me in the nuts he'll be the Neverbeenseenagainbean. I'll be putting Apple out with the trash. Got it. |
| 5/5/05 08:48:23 PM | Kent | La Habra, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com ||| |10 | Everyone knows I would have no chance verses any experienced professional. br> br> I would like to see the Muffinman fight Toney instead. AFTER ALL, HE IS THE MUFFINMAN! THE MUFFINMAN! THE MUFFINMAN! How about it Muffy? br> br> As far as my singing goes, I made a half hearted attempt last year to try and get something happening musically but it didn't work out and people are hardly busting down my door to hear me. I can carry a tune though but I have to stay within my own style and range limits. I don't practice much and I rarely sing at karaoke bars as I don't consider that real music, "it's gotta be live music, if you wanna hear me sing!"I was performing every Saturday night with a local Orange County band until the end of last year but haven't been this year at all. It was a long time friend's band but I got bored with it as I only did one set and the same songs every night.But if anyone lets me know they will be in the Orange county Cal. area, and my friend is appearing anywhere, I will let my friend know I am coming down and he always puts me on stage with him.I was performing every Saturday night with a local Orange County band until the end of last year but haven't been this year at all. It was a long time friend's band but I got bored with it as I only did one set and the same songs every night.But if anyone lets me know they will be in the Orange county Cal. area, and my friend is appearing anywhere, I will let my friend know I am coming down and he always puts me on stage with him.Actually Noam, I have a surprisingly quick left jab and quick straight right hand. What I don't have is stamina. Of course I lack the technical knowledge and experience pros have.I like the name Splatterbean and its take on the name Butterbean, but in all fairness to me, if I was crazy enough to fight a pro like Toney, I would not come in at 300 pounds. But since I am at least ten years past fighting anyone, even amateurs, it is not likely I will be in that kind of shape any time soon. So no fights for me.I remember talking to Mike Quarry about his power and he said he didn't have a very big punch. I told him he had enough of a punch to knock me out easily, which is true. He is a true professional and with the possible exception of Max Hord, who visits here from time to time, none of us on this board could stand up to a pro's punch.Maybe you are not Sinatra, but you are probably the best singer on this site and the best singer in (or on) La Habra. Maybe you should try with Italian songs, for instance "Azzurro" sung by Adriano Celentano, maybe the most famous Italian song ever (maybe tied with "Volare" by Domenico Modugno)."Azzurro, il pomeriggio e' troppo azzurro e lungo per me,mi accorgo di non avere piu' risorse senza di te,e allora, io quasi quasi prendo il treno e vengo, vengo da te il treno dei desideri, nei miei pensieri all'incontrario va...".Ain't these words beautiful ?I have been hearing this song since I was, say, 4 years old. Steve, my friend from nothing less than New Jersey, please ask your wife whether she knows the song "Azzurro", I'm sure she does ! Betcha she knows this song ?Kent, do you think a professional journeyman flyweight could knock me and any other guy on this site but Max Hord down with one punch ?

I'm sorry, a correction is needed ma il treno dei desideri AND NOT il treno dei desideriSorry again, I apologize, but it was obvious. Who doesn't know that song ?

Since Kent's last name is similar to "apple" I think his ring name should be, simply, "The Core" With the proper training, the right diet, lots of rest---and no distractions (Kent, that means no trips to Wendy's Late Night Window and it also means no more sex), Kent can win one of the many heavyweight title belts in less than two years. Kent should challenge the winner of Tyson's next fight.

Speaking of Sinatra, I do one of the best non Sinatra versions of New York, New York. The key is I don't do imitations so I do it my own way, in my own style.So in a way, I am more in tradition of Sinatra than the imitators because Frank always did things his own way (My Way). He didn't copy other singers like Cole Porter, Bing Crosby, and Dean Martin, he did Frank Sinatra. Same as I don't do Frank Sinatra, Elvis, or other singers. I may sing their songs but I do Kent Appel as no one is better at Frank than Frank and no one is better than Elvis than Elvis, even the best copy cats.I read somewhere, but I don't remember where so I don't know the accuracy of the information but Elvis, before he died of course, entered a few Elvis contests and he never won. He reportedly entered in disguise. He didn't sound like the copy cats idea of what Elvis sounded like. Massimo or anyone else, if you want a cassette tape of what I sounded like, I don't have a CD, though I am considering doing one this year, send me an E mail with an address I can send it to you and I will send it free of charge. The tape features background music from karaoke disks and while I don't often do karaoke in person as I in general don't like it, it was cheaper to record the songs with the background already done than to pay musicians to do it (I would rather use musicians though and will if I do my own CD). Interesting, there is a guy named Kent Appel-Doom, I am not sure what the name Doom is but the rest of his name is almost like mine, but he does a tribute to Roy Orbison and he is quite good at it from what I hear. If you hear about him, he is not me. He may be the real MUFFINMAN though, HA! HA! HEE! HEE! I HOPE NO ONE IS PUT OFF BY US TALKING ABOUT THINGS THAT HAVE NOTHING TO DO WITH BOXING AND JOKING ABOUT ME FIGHTING TONEY, BUT WE ARE OLD FRIENDS HERE SO PLEASE BE PATIENT WITH US.

Kent: You fighting Toney has taken a turn from being a joke to being an obsession. All of us here think you have a shot at smashing Toney's face in and we're not going to rest until you guys sign a contract. Toney is going to be a stepping stone for you---next, Byrd, then a Klitscho and finally, after Tyson has a few tune-ups and you've cleaned up the rest of the division, it's "The Core" vs. Tyson. My pick? Kent by TKO in round six.

I'd be glad to receive your cassette, thank you very much. I will try to send you my e-mail and my address. The fact that you didn't achieve a huge success as a singer doesn't mean that much in my book. What I mean is that I know many Italian singers who have very bad voices and still are famous and wealthy. For instance, Enzo Iannacci, one of the worst voices ever is a famous singer in Paisiland and is very wealthy as well. After all, Mozart died with no money and Primo Carnera died with no belts (or belt).

Besides that, I think that talking about Mozart, Chamberlain, Salieri, Andre' The Midget, Alex P.Keaton, Shaq or Warren Coolidge doesn't prevent us from talking about boxing. Talking about this stuff is always better than not talking at all. What I mean is that we are all sincere boxing fans and so if anybody asks something about boxing we will be willing to discuss the subject with him.

I think you should go training in Russia like Rocky did! That's the only way you got to whip Giacomo.

40 YEARS AGO TODAY. JERRY QUARRY'S PRO DEBUT AT THE L.A. COLISEUM. JERRY WEIGHED IN AT 183|

If you didn't see it I just saw one of the best fights in boxing history. Corrales vs Castillo deserves it's place with Hearns vs Hagler and the rest. It makes me believe this sport isn't dead yet.
view! Your absolutely correct, fights like this one could help save boxing!

[5/7/05 11:25:55 PM | Steve | nj || na || | 10 | Hey Fan, I'm still out of breath from watching that fight! I know there will be questions about the ref. stopping it, but it was a perfect move! Castillo was a rag doll and Tony Weeks saved him to fight again another day. I'm glad you appreciated what you just witnessed as much as I did!

[5/7/05 11:40:50 PM | Steve | N.J. | NA || | 10 | Kent, did I misunderstand? I only offered to train you for a tournament against Toney's group of sportswriters who constantly harass him, as you apparently do. Don't listen to Angelo. He only wants to exploit you, and leave you a broken man.

[5/8/05 12:12:57 AM | Steve | N.J. | NA || | 10 | Noam, are you kidding? No, I'm not a runner anymore. I'm just an old man who walks as fast as he can, as I have a titanium knee. I still feel, however, that I should be Kent's official trainer against other sportwriters, since I suggested it first. How dare you say you don't picture me as a runner. I'm a 57-year-old, rompin', stompin', 260 lb ex ironworker, who walks and hits a heavy bag regularly, and eats even more regularly.

[5/8/05 01:20:57 AM | Steve | N.J. | NA || | 10 | Massimo, my wife loves to dance, even stupid eighties disco. We were in Austria and Switzerland in the middle eighties. Do you mean i venti d'Azzurro? Wasn't it a form of Italian disco dance music? My apologie's if i'm misundersading you.

[5/8/05 02:04:34 AM | Steve | N.J. | NA || | 10 | Massimo, ma il treno dei desideri. Is this a song or a poem by Adriano Celentano? "I try the summer all the year and to the unexpected eccola here."

[5/8/05 03:48:55 AM | Massimo | Roma || azzurro, il pompergiggio....com || | 10 | What about Kent Appel vs Don King? I know you don't like him Kent, he talks too much, he beats up people half his size to death too much... So I think you would fight him with the eye of the tiger! I don't know what "I venti d'azzurro" are.

[5/8/05 04:39:00 AM | Jumpity Bruce | eekville USA || eek eek a eek eek eek eek || | 10 | leave the task of fighting Don King to the Muffinman. Because he is the Muffinman, the Muffinman, the Muffinman!

[5/8/05 01:03:56 PM | Massimo | Roma || 4 || | 10 | What's "eek"? Slang?

[5/9/05 12:21:23 AM | Steve | NJ || NA || | 10 | Early today, getting ready for a Mother's day dinner, I caught part of Ali vs Chuvalo. I saw an interview with George Chavalio many years after the fight. He lost a son to heroin addiction, and another son. I didn't catch the reason for the other son's death. His wife later committed suicide! He spoke freely about his loss. He is still a big, strong, articulate man. I cannot begin to understand his personal strength and will to go on.

[5/9/05 03:14:40 AM | Noam | same || same || | 10 | Steve - just getting into the boxing ring takes a lot of courage which carries over into normal life with guys like Chuvalo. His world has fallen in and he still battles on. It's beyond my understanding how guys like him have the strength to keep going.

Steve, I am now beginning to visualize what you look like. You are a youngish 57, still reasonably fit, but with a bit of a paunch from beer drinking and gluttony. You probably have tattoos on both forearms, you need glasses for reading the sports section, and you like dogs. The biggest problem is your hair. You've started a comb over. Not from the side, however, but from the front of your forehead backwards, ala Donald Trump. When it's windy, your hair blows down your face to your chin, making you look like Cousin It.

Further, your teeth are like stars; they come out at night. Your brain is like a diamond; it's very hard to find. And your face is like a half sucked mango.
as a baby that when you played in a sand box, the cat kept covering you up. When you were growing up they wanted to make you the poster boy for birth control. And last time you went to the doctor you complained, "Every morning when I get up and I look in the mirror, I feel like throwing up. What's wrong with me?" The doctor replied, "I don't know but you're eyesight is perfect." Please don't take offense, Steve, as I am only guessing. For all I know, you might look like Robert Redford, but I don't think so. Am I close?

5/9/05 04:53:22 AM|s|na||na|||10|Noam, thank you, this is the kind of lively discussion I enjoy. You have nailed me! Are you a criminal profiler? I love dogs, I have three Siberian huskys. I have Ranger tattoos on my left arm. I wear bifocals. I have all my real teeth, except for my second right molar. How did you know about my hair? I comb what little hair I have left straight back. Are you looking in my bedroom window? Your starting to scare me, only a little. Please don't be concerned, I don't take offence. Your pretty darn close about my looks. Remember, Noam, you'll get old some day too. I really resented that remark about my teeth.

5/9/05 08:27:19 AM|Joey|Canada||aol.com|||10|" Early today, getting ready for a Mother's day dinner, I caught part of Ali vs Chuvalo. I saw an interview with George Chvalo many years after the fight. He lost a son to heroin addiction, and another son. I didn't catch the reason for the other son's death. His wife later committed suicide! He spoke freely about his loss. He is still a big, strong, articulate man. I cannot begin to understand his personal strength and will to go on." (Steve's quote)

Chuvalo visits high schools across Canada and speaks to students about his personal tragedy and the dangers of drug abuse. His efforts are well received and he is highly respected throughout the country. He hosted a tv boxing show for a period of time and attended a televised function with Ali at the Skydome in Toronto a while back. He has one surviving son who is a high school teacher in Toronto and a daughter who owns a restaurant in T.O.

5/9/05 03:42:55 PM|Steve|nj||na|||10|Hey Joey, thanks for that update on George Chuvalo. It's great to know that his son and daughter are both so successful in their lives. George sure deserves that much!

5/9/05 04:09:01 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Steve, it seems that I have a future as a profiler. Thanks for not taking offense and realizing that I was only joking. The humour was stolen from the late Rodney Dangerfield, one of the funniest men who ever lived, in my opinion. Some of his other stuff, "I was so poor growing up.... if I wasn't a boy I'd have had nothing to play with." "A girl phoned me the other day and said, "Come on over, nobody's home." I went over. Nobody was home." "One day I came home early from work.... I saw a guy jogging naked. I said to the guy, "Hey buddy, why are you doing that?" He said, "Because you came home early." "I could tell my parents hated me. My bath toys were a toaster and radio." "I remember the time that I was kidnapped and they sent a piece of my finger to my father. He said he wanted more proof." Sorry for getting away from boxing, but Dangerfield was a very funny man.

5/9/05 05:29:02 PM|Steve|nj||na|||10|Noam, you are just too good, child! Poor Rodney never did get any respect. Those jokes are great. The problem I have with my small, diamond like brain, is that every thought I have, comes out of my mouth. Noam, how come I cant get a response on this site whenever I talk about boxing? Did you see the Corrales vs Castillo fight? What do you think? It had to be one of the top fifteen best fights I've ever seen.

5/10/05 02:31:54 AM|Noam|same||same|||10|Steve - I didn't see the fight you are in raptures about but I will make some enquiries and get back to you. I am surprised that Massimo didn't see it. Where is Massimo? I hope he hasn't been kidnapped. By the way, is it true that you got lost as a young boy and when you saw a policeman you asked him to help you find your parents. You said, "Do you think you'll ever find them?" The policeman replied, "I don't know kid. There's so many places they can hide." You must have been a real ugly kid. There's not enough in the world to laugh about so it was sad to lose someone like Rodney Dangerfield. He was hilarious.

Steve, you said that you have tattoos on your forearms. Do you have body piercings, too? You sound like a cool dude. I wonder if 'Hard Core' Kent Appel has any piercings or tattoos.

Angelo, I'm thinking 'Hard Core' is a better ring name for Kent than just 'The Core'.

It was amazing how differently people looked at me. Police slowed down and stared at me and little old ladies looked at me scared and clutched their purses tighter as I walked by in the mall. I wore blue jeans, a black leather jacket that said Harley Davidson on the back and I also had a fake beard (I am usually clean shaven).

Imagine this: you could be the new fight doctor. Forget Dr Ferdie Pacheco, we'd have Professor Massimo Cini, doing commentary in broken language. It would work.

Kent 'Hard Core' Appel. You know I'm only joking, right? I think it's great you are working out. You shouldn't get any tattoos or piercings. Looking like Steve isn't the aim.

You got it right, Los Angeles will be my next home town. I'll buy an apartment close to (or even near) Hollywood. Okay folks catch ya later, I gotta go now!
after such a long lay off)Duran and Hearns (a war)Douglas v Tyson (wow)Very few of the modern fighters interest me. I am impressed that De La Hoya will fight anyone. Felix Trinidad is exciting. Tzoo is great to watch.5/11/05 01:27:38 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|I don't recall seeing an E mail from you Massimo. I hope I didn't delete it by accident as I often delete things if I think i don't know where they came from. try sending it again. Make sure I know it is you by the title of it.|5/11/05 02:48:19 AM|Wolfi|Salzburg, Austria||whatagenius!@whatagenius!.com|||10|Even Ali'-Frazier 1 and George-Ron were decent fights after all !|Very few of the modern fighters interest me. I am impressed that De La Hoya will fight anyone. Felix Trinidad is exciting. Tzoo is great to watch.5/11/05 04:31:02 AM|Massimo |Roma||backtoRuiz.com|||10|From Boxing record archive:Toney has been allegedto have failed drug test. If the reports are right Toney could face a ban of up to two years.5/11/05 10:43:01 AM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Unless it is officially confirmed, then we can't say Toney used Steroids. 5/11/05 07:42:39 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Kent - maybe that's why Toney makes outbursts against you. Steriods rage. I think it's more likely than not that he was on them. If steroids isn't the reason for his silly behaviour, then he has MASSIVE problems.5/11/05 09:21:28 PM|Kent|La Habra, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Noam, yes it is possible Toney used steroids but if so, we have the champion that won't go away, John Ruiz. I wish Jerry Quarry was around now. He would defeat Ruiz and take what is rightfully his.|5/12/05 02:48:28 AM|Massimo |Roma|||4|||10|I don't know well what the steroids are and how they work, but I find hard to believe that Giacomo's weight could increase that much and so quickly without losing power. Come on (it's an interjection), he weights over 220 lbs now, while he used to weight about 170 lbs. Noam, no doubt in my mind that Joseph (Joe) Frazier was a bum! :-).|5/12/05 09:34:31 AM|Joey|Canada||aol|||10|I don't feel that Joe Frazier was any where close to being a "BUM". He was the dominant heavyweight of his era and it was a fairly competitive time for heavyweight boxing(68-71). I think that if Ali had not been stripped of his license, Ali would have peaked around '68 or '69, which would have given us a much better version of Ali/Frazier 1 regardless of the outcome.I agree that Jerry Quarry was around now. He would defeat Ruiz and take what is rightfully his.
now is more emphasis on grooming amateur boxers with potential to go on to the Olympics. This was a great pre requisite for many heavyweight champs of the past. There seems to be an emphasis on fast money but not so much on developing boxing skills. I think this is one of the reasons the heavyweight division is lacking talent today.}

| 5/12/05 11:42:05 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Joey-- &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;I was only joking, Joe Frazier has been so much criticized on this site !|
| 5/12/05 12:57:51 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Oh no, Ruiz, again. Ruiz, Heavyweight Champion of the World... again. He keeps finding the most creative ways to keep that title. What's Tex Cobb doing? Can he come back to beat Ruiz? What about Leroy Caldwell?|
| 5/12/05 03:54:54 PM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Hi Joey, welcome to the site. I wonder what your take is on Joe Frazier not entering the WBA elimination tournament to decide the new champion after Ali's forced exile when Joe had not fought most in the tournament. &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;What's your take on Joe not fighting Ken Norton, Mac Foster, Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers and the other guys of his era that he never faced ? Is it possible that he ducked them ?&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;Why do you think Frazier fought Stander and Daniels immediately after the first Ali fight instead of much better credentialed heavies that were available ?&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;What do you think about Frazier fighting Ellis the second time around ? After all, Ellis hadn't posted a win for his previous four fights. Is it possible that Joe was ducking the big punchers to fights deaduns like Ellis at that stage of his career ?&lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;These subjects have been debated at length here. I was just wondering what your take is. &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt;|
| 5/12/05 06:19:16 PM | Joey | Canada | aol | 10 | Sorry Massimo, I guess I opened up a can of worms! &lt;br&gt;NOAM; regarding the elimination tournament, I felt Frazier was playing it smart by staying out of it. He was the top heavyweight at the time and the logical conclusion would be Frazier vs. the winner (ELLIS) for the title (Frazier was NY and PENN. Champ ??). Within that tournament you had Jerry, Floyd Patterson and Jimmy Ellis. The others weren't particularly noteworthy. If Frazier had entered that tournament, he would have won and there would have been very few opponents for him or the boxing world to consider for future bouts. &lt;br&gt;Ron Lyle was a great contender; his fight with Foreman confirms this and a contest with Frazier would have been a worthy one. &lt;br&gt;Frazier claimed Norton was his personal friend and wouldn't fight him for that reason (lame excuse). &lt;br&gt;A matchup with Earnie Shavers would have been a fight worth seeing but where was Earnie ranked at the time? &lt;br&gt;Joe fought a lot of mediocre opponents but so did they all. Marciano didn't want Patterson, Patterson didn't want Machen or Liston, but got him regardless. Liston didn't want anymore of Ali and Ali fought some of the least qualified fighters during his second phase. Lewis didn't want Tyson until he was washed up and it goes on and on. &lt;br&gt;Don't misunderstand me, I'm not a big Frazier fan, but he was a big part of boxing history during that era and even if Foreman demolished him and took his title, Foreman himself went on to many questionable performances as well. &lt;br&gt;We wouldn't have had the return of Ali, the trilogy with Frazier, Frazier's defeat at the hands of George Foreman and finally Ali defeating Foreman to regain the title which made for a very exciting period of heavyweight boxing. (better than RUIZ/TONEY) &lt;br&gt;|
| 5/12/05 08:52:22 PM | Angelo | DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Joey: Good appraisal. I'm in the camp that, let's just say, believes Frazier was "handled carefully." Frazier was a very, very good fighter of his time and a fine Champion. He had the legendary bouts with Ali and the win in 1971 can't be taken away from him. But along with this praise, I balance it with the fact that Foreman blasted him into orbit twice, he did lose two of three to Ali and for one reason or another, he managed to stay out of the ring with Lyle, Shavers, Norton and other notables. While all these guys were fighting eachother, none of them fought Frazier. As pointed out, he did fight Terry Daniels. Seems to me his management wisely kept him out of trouble, especially after realizing that he was a pitifully slow starter who could be walked over by a real power puncher. Foreman nearly literally killed him—and that was probably enough to scare the daylights out of his handlers and keep him in with washed up Jimmy Ellis instead of power punching contenders like Lyle. We've been over the timing of it and it's true that "Lucky Joe" was either on the way up when others were on the way down (like Liston) or on the way down, when others were hitting their stride (like Shavers) but again, it's simply incredible that these guys all fought in the same era, all fought against each other, and Joe was missing in action, taking on Terry Daniels and electing to sign for rematches against guys he had already knocked out instead of trying his hand at knockout artists.

Firstly, in his book, Frazier said he didn't fight Norton because there was no money in it. That's a lame excuse, too, in my view. Even if he was friendly with Norton, Ali fought Ellis and they were very close as well. Neither excuse cuts it with me.

Anyway, thanks again.

Recently we had a long extended debate about Joe Frazier's ability as a fighter and I was one of the leaders of the pro Frazier side. I don't want to get in that again so I guess it is up to you.

The archives have the debate all recorded and, with all due respect to Kent, who is someone I do respect, it wasn't one of his finest moments. He captained a ship that is now sleeping on the bottom of the ocean gathering rust and barnacles. Kent—some of your explanations and excuses regarding Frazier's failure to fight some of the guys we mentioned bordered on the farcical and absurd. You are normally a rational guy but I suspect you got so hyped up that you lost all perspective and objectivity.

I don't want to put you through that again because that ship of yours has so many holes in it that it can't ever be refloated and the Dead Parroters used all your life rafts.

Tyson ducked Foreman when George was already washed up (it means "finito", "mal ridotto", "un rottame", "pronto per la pensione", "pronto ad appendere i guantoni al chiodo"), while Frazier fought Foreman again in 1976 at a time when Giorgio was still an ass kicking guy. And Joe fought him having serious eye problem. I think this shows he was no chicken. You don't get up six times against Foreman if you are a chicken. I'm sure that if Lyle had beaten Ali in 1975, Joe Frazier would have fought Lyle for the title instead of Ali and then Foreman for a second time. But, on the other hand, to be honest, I don't think that Joe was that kind of guy who was always looking for trouble and looking forward to try his hand against the most dangerous guys. He needed a good reason to fight a dangerous guy, he didn't fight him to have fun or to prove himself. If he had had the chance to choose (or pick, I mean "scegliere") between George Foreman or Clifford Etienne for a title fight, I think he would have chosen (or picked, I mean "scelto") Clifford.

You've all made some very valid points. Sometimes we can be blinded by the past (talking about myself). The first time I saw Frazier fight was on a televised bout with George Chuvalo. Being a Canadian, I was of course pulling for George but at the same time I was very impressed with Joe Frazier's performance. He stopped Chuvalo big time and I thought to myself this is the best heavyweight I've seen since Ali! The heavyweight tournament was on that same summer. I liked Ellis and Quarry but neither of them seemed to be in Frazier's league. I actually thought that Jerry won the Ellis fight but either way you cut it, I think it was close. The first Ali/Frazier fight, I felt, could have been better but I consider it to be the best of the three, simply because neither fighter was in a damaged state. Frazier was at the top of his game, Ali was back into the game. I don't think that Ali took it seriously enough however and perhaps required a couple more tune ups (Personally I thought Quarry/Ali 1 was a better fight). When they(Ali/Frazier) met again, I believe neither was champion and on the third occasion, although it was very entertaining, I think we were watching two guys who were really spent, although I give them both credit for their display of courage etc. So I guess what I'm trying to say is that for his brief reign, I thought that Frazier was outstanding in his division. It's true that he didn't fight Lyle, Shavers and Norton but I believe those fighters became valid contenders after Foreman de-throned Frazier. It seems to be a syndrome with heavyweights when they are defeated as champions, many of them are finished (physical, psychological???) Patterson, Liston, Foreman, Tyson to name a few (Ali was probably an exception). It was the Golden Era of heavyweight boxing though and all of those guys put on memorable performances.

5/13/05 10:20:43 AM Massimo |Roma|4|10|Joey--Interesting post ! I heard on this site that Frazier-Chuvalo was a very exciting fight and that George held his own. Our friend "Fan" (one of the two "Fans" in this site) told us that ! Do you confirm ?

5/13/05 12:31:37 PM Massimo |Roma|drugs.com|10|It's official, Toney-Ruiz has been declared NO CONTEST so, I guess, Giovanni Ruiz is still HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION OF THE UNIVERSE, for Angelo's joy !By the way, I have just seen 1991 fight between Toney and Dell'Aquila, it's just impressive how small Giacomo used to be and how andre' he is now...It's unbelievable that it's the same person. If somebody in 1991 would have told me "Toney will be heavyweight champion some day (or someday)" I would have answered (o responded) "Are you nuts or what ?". Is there some flyweight outta there who wants to be the next heavyweight champion ?

5/13/05 12:35:43 PM Massimo |Roma|4|10|Correction--If somebody in 1991 had told me etc. Sorry !

5/13/05 04:22:59 PM Joey|Canada|aol|10|"Interesting post ! I heard on this site that Frazier-Chuvalo was a very exciting fight and that George held his own. Our friend "Fan" (one of the two "Fans" in this site) told us that ! Do you confirm" (Massimo's post)It was an exciting fight and George generally held his own in most fights but unfortunately in this one he was swarmed by Frazier, had his eye socket broken up and quit (wisely). In his career, George was never knocked off of his feet. He was stopped a few times (FRAZIER, FOREMAN), went the distance with Ali, Patterson & Terrel (the Patterson fight was a good one for George and a lot of fans felt that George should have had the decision. His fight with Terrel; I thought George definitely won that one but the judges saw it differently. Oh well that's boxing for you!)5/13/05 04:53:55 PM Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|10|I watched Frazier-Chuvalo again recently and George had some good moments. Frazier was winning, but it was back and forth action. George Chuvalo was rarely in a bad fight, Zora Folley being one of them. Old Zora was rarely in a good fight. I don’t believe George Chuvalo ever quit in his life. I haven’t seen the Frazier fight in years but as I remember it, his corner stopped the fight when he had his eye badly damaged. He didn't quit.Also, when he fought Foreman Chuvalo was taking a bad pounding and the referee stepped in and stopped it. Chuvalo commeted that the ref was crazy for stopping it. He obviously wanted to continue.5/14/05 09:08:18 AM Massimo|Santa Monica beach, Ca (and now, beat me !)||10|Fan--What do you mean "old Zora was rarely in a good fight" ? I think Zora was an excellent heavyweight ! Although he was in bad shape and old, he gave Oscar Bonavena a boxing lesson in 1965. Zora has been a top 10 contender for many years, in his prime, he would have played with Ruiz! In Florida they have even dedicated a square to Zora Folley!

| 5/14/05 09:38:45 AM | Joey | Canada | aol | 10 | Kent, as I recall the fight (I could be mistaken) George turns away from Frazier and kind of waves him off. Later he said he thought Frazier had knocked his eye out of his socket. In the Foreman fight, George's wife was screaming for the fight to be stopped. I thought his trainer Urv Ungerman showed the ref the towel but you may be correct about the ref taking the initiative. According to a TV interview with George, he turned to the referee and said, "What are you, nuts??" (lolol) But you are right, there was no quit in Chuvalo and even though he lost most of his big fights, Canadians always viewed him as "THE CHAMP"! |

| 5/14/05 11:47:32 AM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 | Zora Folley was not an exciting fighter. I have seen 4 of his fights and he was very defensive. He was a very good fighter, probably a great one, but would not conjure images of Rocky Marciano if you know what I mean. |

| 5/15/05 06:34:39 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10 | I do believe MR. JERRY QUARRY was to be 60 today, (where have the years gone- fast for one thing). Watched some old classic Mildenberger-Clay on ESPN, It always surprises me how those heavyweights were in such great shape (run a marathon, then stop to cut wood) I could see how Milde got his NO.1 ranking although not a big puncher, Jerry would have locked and loaded over in Europe, and did in England, HAPPY BIRTHDAY JERRY, we all wished you were here. |

| 5/15/05 06:58:23 PM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | SabrinaLPorter@aol.com | 10 | HAPPY BIRTHDAY UNCLE JERRY. WE LOVE AND MISS YOU ALWAYS IN OUR HEARTS!! |

| 5/15/05 07:06:19 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | 10 | JERRY QUARRY TO TURN 60 TODAY, WILL NOT BE FORGOTTEN, JUST SAW A GREAT PICTURE OF ALI-QUARRY IN ATLANTA TAKING INSTRUCTIONS, MORE LIKE STARING EACH OTHER DOWN TAKE CARE. |

| 5/16/05 05:22:57 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Honour to Jerry Quarry! I wish he could be here with us speaking about his fights and joking with us folks. It would have been great! Regarding Carlo Mildenberger, I have his fight with Oscar Bonavena and, although Oscar's win was well deserved, Carlo showed some good skills, especially a very accurate right jab (Carlo was the very first southpaw to fight for the heavyweight title)! Although he wasn't a big puncher, he managed to hurt Bonavena with a straight left (hand) in the ninth round! That left hand smarts !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! |

| 5/17/05 12:52:22 AM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | I feel lucky to have met Jerry Quarry in the early 1980s. Jerry had a way to make you feel comfortable with him as he didn't act like he was above his fans. He was a regular guy who was easy to talk to and he greatly appreciated his fans. JERRY IS NOT FORGOTTEN! |

| 5/17/05 03:22:07 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Massimo - Winky's jab beat Tito's power. |

| 5/17/05 04:23:34 AM | Massimo | Roma | history.com | 10 | Noam - What are you talking about? I only know two Titos in history. One was a Roman Emperor in the first century A.C., the other guy was a crappy communist who killed thousands of innocent Italians in Istria. Who is Winky? A baseball player? A golf player? In my previous post I forgot about saying that "southpaw" means "left-hander". I realize that sometimes I take things too much for granted and use too much the Slang and probably this ain't good! |

| 5/17/05 04:01:44 PM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Massimo - Winky Wright and Tito Trinidad, but you already knew that. Another wonderful fight is coming up with the Russian guy Kostya Tszyu and Ricky Hatton. Tszyu's lost one prior fight; Hatton won all 38 of his bouts. This one will have plenty of action. Tszyu will be too strong for Hatton. |

| 5/19/05 01:37:39 PM | Massimo | Roma | legends forever.com | 10 | Noam - Very honestly, I never heard of Winky Wright! My boxing knowledge has some holes here and there! I love the legend, Clay-Liston 1 (I shook up the world!), Ali'-Terrell (What's my name, sucker?), Foreman-Frazier 1 (down goes Frazier!), "Wilt scores!", "sky hook Kareem!", "Shaq dominates", "Benvenuti is champion of the world!", "Hulk Hogan lifites Andre' the Midget in the air". That's legend!

Villaraigosa is the new sindaco of Los Angeles! I hope he is gonna make a good job. I love Los Angeles, even if I have never been there. Los Angeles owns a big part of my heart, below Pisa, Roma and all the other Italian cities, Los Angeles is definitely my favorite. One day I will be one of the many big fishes there and I will have my name written on that famous pavement! So I hope Villaraigosa is not going to hurt this town.

I was watching sports classics last night. Quarry-Frazier II. The ring announcer announced the fight as "a heavyweight elimination match."

The commission recognized a world heavyweight champion, along with several other states and other countries that rivaled the WBA title and Frazier held that title before unifying the title with his win over Ellis in 1970. Part of the group that recognized Frazier before 1970 later became part of the WBC. Yes, the NYSAC could have likely recognized a fight in 1974 as a title elimination bout, something they couldn't do today.

Anyone can recognize a fight as an elimination bout, title fight, etc. Ring Magazine, USA Today, WBC, WBA, IBF, NABF, ABC, NBC, Michael Jackson, you, me, Forrest Ward, Liz Taylor---anybody can assert a rankings system, name a leader, start a website and become "legitimate." It's the population of fans who either reject it or lend validity. To a certain extent, I agree with you that the NY State Commission was a big fish back then---I was a young kid back then and even I knew about the commission and it's power. But with that said, calling something an "elimination bout" is like the NABF having a title fight: What does it mean exactly? In the late 70's, Mike Weaver was the NABF Champion. So what? When he fought someone, it was just two guys fighting. The title meant very little to me, it was just someone making something up. Likewise, an "elimination" bout doesn't hold water with me if in my opinion, the participants haven't both earned the right. As was said in the movie 48 Hours, "Just because you say it with conviction, it don't mean (expletive) to me."

Tonight I saw again the Clay-Moore 1962 fight, Cassius completely dominated Archie. Although Archie was already 91 years old, he had just fought to a draw with Willie Pastrano and beaten some good heavyweight. Before the fight Clay said: Archie must fall in four... And actually Archie fell in four! I wonder why every time they show this fight, the rounds are not 3 minutes long as they should be... Why nobody does have the entire fight? It was a short fight, for God's sake! I'm top 5 stuff, cheers! Angelo is the bummest in the list! Tonight I saw again the Clay-Moore 1962 fight, Cassius completely dominated Archie. Although Archie was already 91 years old, he had just fought to a draw with Willie Pastrano and beaten some good heavyweight. Before the fight Clay said: Archie must fall in four... And actually Archie fell in four! I wonder why every time they show this fight, the rounds are not 3 minutes long as they should be... Why nobody does have the entire fight? It was a short fight, for God's sake!
ain't no nothing we can't love each other through...) with Italia, I could almost say this is an Italiano site !!!!!!!! Paisa' !

| 5/21/05 06:28:15 PM | Steve | NA | NA | 10 | Kent, boy, are you opening up a can of worms that can cause hard feelings! I love this site. I enjoy every one who posts here. However, hard feelings aside, in terms of dedication to the meaning and spirit of this site, and the knowledge, and fun they bring to the site, I must have my say. 1, Kent, 2, Forrest Ward, 3, Angelo, 4, Noam, 5, Jimmy Dorsey, 6 Massimo, 7, Fan, 8, Joey, 9, Me, 10, anyone else who has something new to say! |
| 5/21/05 09:42:35 PM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Steve, boy, are you opening up a can of worms that can cause hard feelings! I love this site. I enjoy every one who posts here. However, hard feelings aside, in terms of dedication to the meaning and spirit of this site, and the knowledge, and fun they bring to the site, I must have my say. 1, Kent, 2, Forrest Ward, 3, Angelo, 4, Noam, 5, Jimmy Dorsey, 6 Massimo, 7, Fan, 8, Joey, 9, Me, 10, anyone else who has something new to say! |

| 5/21/05 10:10:44 PM | Steve | NJ | NA | 10 | Kent, boy, are you opening up a can of worms that can cause hard feelings! I love this site. I enjoy every one who posts here. However, hard feelings aside, in terms of dedication to the meaning and spirit of this site, and the knowledge, and fun they bring to the site, I must have my say. 1, Kent, 2, Forrest Ward, 3, Angelo, 4, Noam, 5, Jimmy Dorsey, 6 Massimo, 7, Fan, 8, Joey, 9, Me, 10, anyone else who has something new to say! |
| 5/22/05 02:16:41 AM | Gino Mastroianni | San Leandro, XA | gmast49@juno.com | 10 | Steve, my list is not important as I didn't even put myself on it. How can you leave off the Muffinman and Koo Koo Klock? I realize the Clockster is not here much and neither is Muffy but they are the best! |
| 5/22/05 04:06:33 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Steve, boy, are you opening up a can of worms that can cause hard feelings! I love this site. I enjoy every one who posts here. However, hard feelings aside, in terms of dedication to the meaning and spirit of this site, and the knowledge, and fun they bring to the site, I must have my say. 1, Kent, 2, Forrest Ward, 3, Angelo, 4, Noam, 5, Jimmy Dorsey, 6 Massimo, 7, Fan, 8, Joey, 9, Me, 10, anyone else who has something new to say! |

Gino-Saw Brewster demolish the big Russian tonight. Jerry would have, too. Hey, Zora Folley was a top contender for quite a few years. By the time he got his shot, he was way past his prime. Not every excellent fighter is also exciting. Bonavena, Chuvalo, Machen, Jimmy Young, many others not very exciting. You guys think Toney is done now? Looks bloated. Have you been talking about "The Contender"? I've only seen 2 shows, and the kids have all the heart in the world, but sometimes they seem to stop fighting and free-style almost as if they're acting. You know, the fake Rocky-style haymakers and roundhouse punches. Could be wrong, but does anyone else think so? Great site! When are you comin' to live in LA, Massimo? You can hang out at the Hoover Gym with Scrap Iron Johnson! |

| 5/22/05 06:17:02 AM | Massimo | Roma (means Rome) | 4 | 10 | Saw Brewster demolish the big Russian tonight. Jerry would have, too. Not every excellent fighter is also exciting. Bonavena, Chuvalo, Machen, Jimmy Young, many others not very exciting. |

| 5/22/05 10:43:58 AM | Joey | Canada | aol | 10 | Saw Brewster demolish the big Russian tonight. Jerry would have, too. Not every excellent fighter is also exciting. Bonavena, Chuvalo, Machen, Jimmy Young, many others not very exciting. |

| 5/22/05 02:16:41 AM | Gino Mastroianni | San Leandro, XA | gmast49@juno.com | 10 | Steve, my list is not important as I didn't even put myself on it. How can you leave off the Muffinman and Koo Koo Klock? I realize the Clockster is not here much and neither is Muffy but they are the best! |

| 5/22/05 04:15:29 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Steve, boy, are you opening up a can of worms that can cause hard feelings! I love this site. I enjoy every one who posts here. However, hard feelings aside, in terms of dedication to the meaning and spirit of this site, and the knowledge, and fun they bring to the site, I must have my say. 1, Kent, 2, Forrest Ward, 3, Angelo, 4, Noam, 5, Jimmy Dorsey, 6 Massimo, 7, Fan, 8, Joey, 9, Me, 10, anyone else who has something new to say! |

| 5/22/05 06:28:15 PM | Steve | NA | NA | 10 | Kent, boy, are you opening up a can of worms that can cause hard feelings! I love this site. I enjoy every one who posts here. However, hard feelings aside, in terms of dedication to the meaning and spirit of this site, and the knowledge, and fun they bring to the site, I must have my say. 1, Kent, 2, Forrest Ward, 3, Angelo, 4, Noam, 5, Jimmy Dorsey, 6 Massimo, 7, Fan, 8, Joey, 9, Me, 10, anyone else who has something new to say! |

| 5/22/05 09:42:35 PM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Steve, boy, are you opening up a can of worms that can cause hard feelings! I love this site. I enjoy every one who posts here. However, hard feelings aside, in terms of dedication to the meaning and spirit of this site, and the knowledge, and fun they bring to the site, I must have my say. 1, Kent, 2, Forrest Ward, 3, Angelo, 4, Noam, 5, Jimmy Dorsey, 6 Massimo, 7, Fan, 8, Joey, 9, Me, 10, anyone else who has something new to say! |

| 5/22/05 10:10:44 PM | Steve | NJ | NA | 10 | Kent, boy, are you opening up a can of worms that can cause hard feelings! I love this site. I enjoy every one who posts here. However, hard feelings aside, in terms of dedication to the meaning and spirit of this site, and the knowledge, and fun they bring to the site, I must have my say. 1, Kent, 2, Forrest Ward, 3, Angelo, 4, Noam, 5, Jimmy Dorsey, 6 Massimo, 7, Fan, 8, Joey, 9, Me, 10, anyone else who has something new to say! |

| 5/22/05 02:16:41 AM | Gino Mastroianni | San Leandro, XA | gmast49@juno.com | 10 | Steve, my list is not important as I didn't even put myself on it. How can you leave off the Muffinman and Koo Koo Klock? I realize the Clockster is not here much and neither is Muffy but they are the best! |

| 5/22/05 04:06:33 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Steve, boy, are you opening up a can of worms that can cause hard feelings! I love this site. I enjoy every one who posts here. However, hard feelings aside, in terms of dedication to the meaning and spirit of this site, and the knowledge, and fun they bring to the site, I must have my say. 1, Kent, 2, Forrest Ward, 3, Angelo, 4, Noam, 5, Jimmy Dorsey, 6 Massimo, 7, Fan, 8, Joey, 9, Me, 10, anyone else who has something new to say! |

| 5/22/05 06:17:02 AM | Massimo | Roma (means Rome) | 4 | 10 | Saw Brewster demolish the big Russian tonight. Jerry would have, too. Not every excellent fighter is also exciting. Bonavena, Chuvalo, Machen, Jimmy Young, many others not very exciting. |

| 5/22/05 02:16:41 AM | Gino Mastroianni | San Leandro, XA | gmast49@juno.com | 10 | Steve, my list is not important as I didn't even put myself on it. How can you leave off the Muffinman and Koo Koo Klock? I realize the Clockster is not here much and neither is Muffy but they are the best! |
mean POLISH rather than RUSSIAN??? Brewster was impressive. If he can maintain his current mindset, he might go all the way. They may not have been as exciting as ALI, TYSON, FOREMAN but they did provide some exciting moments... (FOREMAN/YOUNG, CHUVALO/QUARRY, MACHEN/FRAZIER)  | 5/22/05 02:30:47 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 | Yes, Brewster jumped right on the big Polish guy Golatta and he caught him cold, three knockdowns in the first round and a KO win for Brewster. Brewster did this in Chicago where a lot of Polish immigrants live, right in front of a lot of Golatta's fans. Brewster was quite impressive in not letting his opponent into the fight at all. | | 5/22/05 04:10:01 PM | Massimo | Roma || 4 ||| 10 | I just saw De La Hoya vs Sturm and it was a very good fight. Very close too. I think Oscar should retire, he is not the great champion he used to be anymore. Oscar threw too many body shots and too few head shots in this fight. Andrea Golota really disappointed me! He had all the weapons (punching power included) to be a champion, but he turned out to be just a journeyman. Now he can try to get (or getting) a job as a bouncer. I wonder if (or whether) my former English teacher from Chicago Roadscholarette went to the Brewster-Golota fight! My best greetings to Roadscholarette! | | 5/23/05 06:52:26 PM | Steve | na || na ||| 10 | I'm strange how short boxing fans' memories are, including myself. I got excited watching Brewster. Then I remembered that Golota was never more than a big, strong, psychologically unfit fighter who could not be taught not to hit low, or foul in any way he could, even when he was winning! The guy was crazy when he was in his prime, which was what, six years ago? He was a straight up sitting duck for Brewster. Now Brewster is the latest hot prospect, because he beat up two European robots, Golota, and Klitchko. Brewster vs Samuel Peters should happen, but probably won't. Peters is the next big heavyweight star. Remember, you heard it first from me! Not that it matters, no one listens to me on this site anyway. | | 5/24/05 12:12:50 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA || sonya90101@aol.com ||| 10 | Hello to All. What have I missed, computers been a real bear. I'm back. Hope everyone is getting along, and we're back to boxing. I love & miss you Dad, Uncle Jerry, Aunt Brenda, and Mom. | also, and it is titled 'How To Talk to a Liberal, if you must'. Exciting. Thanks.

| 5/24/05 10:58:17 AM | Steve | na | na | ||||10 | Kent, since Noam chooses to ignore my comments about Samuel Peters, the guy just won't "LISTEN" to me. I'll ask you, because I know you keep up with the current crop of upcoming young heavyweights. What are your impressions of Samuel Peters? In the few fights I've seen him in, he really impressed me. Do you remember the first few times you saw Frazier fight? You could tell you where watching somebody special. This kids got the heaviest hands I've seen in a long time. Kinda like a George Foreman type puncher, not a sharp, high velocity puncher like a Tyson or a Jerry Quarry. |
| 5/24/05 11:18:39 AM | steve | NA | na | ||||10 | Hi Sonia, wellcome back. I've never posted to you before, but I gotta tell you something! The older I get, and the more heavyweight boxing I pay a fortune to watch, the more I miss your Uncle Jerry. There will never be another heavyweight as unique, charismatic, or exciting and unpredictable as was Jerry Quarry. At least it sure seemed that way to me when I was in my twenties. |
| 5/24/05 11:44:45 AM | Bob Bumbera | NC | ||||10 | Steve, I've seen Peter fight several times as well and so far the only things that impress me about him are his power and ability to take a punch. He has been in with limited competition though. He has a tendency to loop punches and wing from the hip, not good if your fighting someone who can box well and has a good jab, like a Calvin Brock for instance. I have seen Peter fight 3 times and he looked a little heavy around the middle as well. If he can learn to shorten up his punches he may be a factor for a while, but his people now need to step up the competition. |
| 5/24/05 11:50:59 AM | Massimo | Roma | | | | |10 | Samuele Pietro, who? Welcome back Bob Bumbera! Any new shoe sizes to talk about? |
| 5/24/05 02:32:59 PM | steve | NA | na | ||||10 | Hey Bob Bumbera! Where the heck have you been? I'd almost forgotten about you. I think Peters is a diamond in the rough. He hasn't had many fights, with the correct trainer, he can get conditioned, lose that soft midsection, as best as a short guy can. Did Joe Frazier ever have a six pack? He can also be trained to move in much closer, balance himself, and shorten up those piledriver punches before unloading. I just got a feeling about this guy. |
| 5/24/05 03:40:30 PM | Joey | Canada | | | | |10 | NOAM said... Joey knows his stuff, too. But I have reservations about people from Canada after reading Bill O'Reilly's books ("O'Reilly Factor For Children", "Who's Looking Out For You", etc). I read Ann Coulter's book also, and it is titled 'How To Talk to a Liberal, if you must'. Exciting. Thanks. O'Reilly discredited himself with his maid, nanny whatever, Ann Coulter, although she is pretty cute, she's also way out in left field (better make that right field).We are not extreme LIBERALS up here, but the only ones that are extreme CONSERVATIVES are located in the province of Alberta. George Chuvalo was approached to run for the Conservatives as a political candidate but turned down their request.I like the USA though. It is a great country to visit and spend time in; a very interesting culture. Great sense of history, politics, boxing, music, entertainment in general... I better quit, I'm getting off topic. |
| 5/24/05 03:52:37 PM | Noam | same | same | ||||10 | Hey Joey. I was joking. And it was Bill O'Reilly's staffer - sort of like Clinton's intern - making the allegations against him. I'd only worry about that if it was a guy making the complaint. Otherwise, who cares, about from misguided lefties. Ann Coulter is cute. Smart too. I like Canadians, mostly. I don't like the way you cull seal pups. Steve - I haven't seen that guy fight yet. I'll be looking out for him though. |
| 5/24/05 04:01:50 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | | | | |10 | Joey: Don't be scared of American conservatives. Really, I consider myself a right leaning moderate---not a died in the wool conservative, but certainly closer to conservative than liberal. Unlike some others, I don't find the right wing scary and radical---I reserve that for the other end of the spectrum, people who have to define "what 'is' is." People who let murderers out of prison in 7-14 years because "we have a responsibility to rehabilitate them and the death penalty is cruel" but on the other hand, these same lefties do not have an issue with starving an incapacitated woman to death even though her parents and siblings want her to live. That scares me more than the right.Speaking of rights, Jerry Quarry had a pretty good one! He'd be a top heavyweight today and would go through most of the division like a buzzsaw.

George Otto: since I sent off for Microfilm of all of Jerry's bouts and to the town he fought them in I was surprised of the discrepancies on his record, mostly just dates, and there are at least ten that need corrected, here are the ten, 1-JUNE 3 1965 KO 4 John Henry Jackson 2-June 24 1965 W6 Dave Centi 3-August 2 1965 KO 4 J.P. Spencer (this bout in Las Vegas AND NOT Los Angeles) 4-SEPT 23 1965 KO 3 Ray Ellis 5-OCTOBER 18 1965 KO 1 Milton Manley 6-OCTOBER 28 KO 6 Al "Tiger" Carter 7-DECEMBER 23 1965 KO 3 Roy Crear 8-MAY 27 1966 Tony Alongi DRAW 10 9-NOVEMBER 28 1966 KO 5 Leslie Borden 10- NOVEMBER 22 1983 W 10 James Williams. these are all the correct dates of those bouts, also AUGUST 9 1965 WAS a Decison over 8 rounds in a Quarry rematch with John Henry Jackson and not a third round knockout, like their first bout, So JQ OFFICIALLY WAS 53-9-4 32 KO'S. ALSO found out Oscar Bonavena's bulging biceps were 16 1/2 opposed to Quarry's 17 1/2. Jerry had bigger guns then both George Foreman and George Chuvalo, I have to admit they did not look it, of course sometimes looks are deceiving!

Joey, I agree with you too. My only query regarding Jerry Quarry would be his size. He wasn't tall and I don't know whether too much more bulk would have fitted his frame. Even so, his size would probably not have stopped him dominating most of the heavyies around today, but I would have worried about him against really big guys like Lewis. Still, JQ had all the heart in the world, and some bigger guys don't.

Lewis would have been a difficult fight for him but he isn't around now as he is retired. His size would be an advantage against a lot of heavys out there today as he would have a quickness advantage. That was the point I was trying to make with James Toney, that it is better for a smaller heavyweight to be fairly light because of the speed factor. Vassily Jirov only weighed about 210 when he knocked down Joe Mesi, 235 pounds, three times late in the fight that ironically Mesi won by building up an early lead. He was definitly strong enough to hurt Mesi. In fact he could have been even lighter, about 200 pounds, and he might have not bee as sluggish as he was in the earlier rounds and the extra weight may have cost him the fight. I feel he would have been strong enough to still hurt Mesi but faster.

Today the heavyweights are TOO HEAVY!

Mike Tyson has always been way too heavy. How can a 5'9" 1/2 guy weigh 220 lbs ? Come on, the monster Giorgio Foreman, at 6'4" weighted 217 in his first fight against Frazier (and he still was competitive in that fight). I don't know why the fighters today are that andre'. Here's a list of some of the hardest hitters ever: Marciano (184 lbs), Satterfield (170), Dempsey (190), Jersey Joe Walcott (190), Joe Louis (202), Archie Moore (190), Ernie Shavers (210), Ron Lyle (216), Oscar Bonavena (205), Jerry Quarry (195), Julius Garcia (185), Joe Frazier (203), Ken Norton (210), Henry Cooper (185), Ingemar Johansson (195), Floyd Patterson (his left hook was pretty heavy, ask Ingo, 190), Sonny Liston (210). I think a 180 lbs guy can be powerful enough to knock anyone out with one punch, if that punch lands well. I think today Jerry Quarry would have beaten all the heavyweights outta there, with the exception of Vitali Klitscho. Jerry would have had no problem with guys like "the bouncer" Mc Cline or Andrea Golota. I also think he would have easily out-boxed Davide Tua and taken his best shots. A fight with Toney would have been very close and very exciting to watch.

The real wild cards with Jerry Quarry sort of cancel eachother out: They are, Wildcard #1) You couldn't knock this guy out. He would not quit. One aspect of Quarry that would give him a chance against guys like Tyson and Foreman is that I truly believe he could take their best punches and live to fight another round, however, Wildcard #2: He cut too easily. Against a guy like Lennox Lewis, Jerry could hold his own by pressuring Lewis and forcing Lewis to retreat. But a few Lewis punches to Jerry's eyes could end the fight on cuts. That's the paradox---a guy who could hang around in a fight against Foreman, go on the offensive late and get a KO, or lose to someone he should beat due to cuts. With that said, he'd beat most of the division today without much trouble. Lennox Lewis would be a major hurdle due to his size, reach and good boxing ability. But if Jerry caught Lewis flush, we all know the result would be a KO. Lewis had an issue with losing unexpectedly by KO. The fight I would have liked to see was Lewis/Bowe early 90's. They were the two most interesting and maybe the two best fighters for a brief period of time and they didn't meet. That's inexcusable. We can say what we will about Frazier, Holmes, Norton, Ali---the fact is, the best usually always end up facing off against eachother. Why did Lewis-Bowe get a pass? The only other fighter I consider close to the best of his time, at least for a very brief period, was Tim Witherspoon. He didn't get the opportunity he should have when he was at his best. Maybe that's a Don King issue?

It's very true about Jerry, there was no quit in him. Unfortunately, his tendency to cut, I feel, limited his potential, not unlike Henry Cooper, who was not a bad heavy for his age and time.
Mike Tyson has always been way too heavy. How can a 5'9" 1/2 guy weight 220 lbs? I think a 180 lbs guy can be powerful enough to knock anyone out with one punch, if that punch lands well. I think in Mike's case, he was a very broad framed fighter, kind of like a little bull. Also I believe there is a greater deal of weight training today, which will increase weight considerably, whereas back in time, very little if any. Just my guess. I agree that a lighter guy can knock out a heavier guy. It's in the leverage, starts from the feet, generally telegraphed as a short, on the button connection. (MARCIONA, LOUIS, TYSON)KENT..."Jerry Quarry was very strong for his size. Just about his only dominant moment in Ali/Quarry 2 was when he picked up Ali and sat him almost on top of the ropes in the first round. His size would be an advantage against a lot of heavys out there today as he would have a quickness advantage. Good point! I remember Jerry doing that against Ali. That was actually a very good fight. It's too bad that it was stopped on a cut, but both fighters looked very good that night. Still, JQ had all the heart in the world, and some bigger guys don't."I believe that was the key to Jerry's success. In the early days, he had the aerobic fitness to compliment those strengths, but as he got older and lazier and trained less, he didn't. Because he doesn't have the mental strength of guys like Quarry and Ali, he tended to quit when he became fatigued. We initially saw that against Douglas. That's what happening with him recently. When he can't knock a guy out early, he gets fatigued and gives up. Also, because he doesn't train hard, he is more prone to injury. I'm told that before his most recent fights he'd only spar a few rounds and then give training away. Former world champion from down under, Jeff Feneck, went to his training and made him hit the pads hard and Tyson was so unfit he threw up. He then went out and lost. Apparently, Feneck is now training Tyson and has him working very, very hard. We might see a different guy in his next fight. Tyson might have more options if he doesn't tag McBride early.

Steve, Frazier had a six pack...in 1966 I think. I like the thoughts on the size of today's heavyweights. When Brewster blasted Golota he said that smaller heavyweights like him would be back to rule the division. Now to me Brewster ain't all that "small" at 6’2" 240 but when you have guys like McCLine and the brothers Klitschko I guess he is kind of petite. I don’t think Jerry would have much success vs. Klitschko or Lewis or somebody mentioned Riddick Bowe. All three have a powerful accurate jab, a reach of near 7 feet and at least a 5 inch height advantage over Jerry. And lets not forget the 50 or so pounds. To me that spells bloody mess for Jerry. He would have had a better time of it with Jirov, Mesi, Ruiz, and Rahman etc. Toney vs. Jerry would be a good one as well. Now whether he would be able to walk in there today and, as someone said beaten all but Klitschko, I don’t know about that. Jerry at 197-198 was a pretty sturdy guy but fighting someone who is 3 or 4 inches taller and 35-40 pounds heavier would not be a walk in the park for anyone.
He moved well too. His great head movement made him very hard to hit and predict, and he had tremendous leverage and balance based around those thick legs.

In the early days, he had the aerobic fitness to compliment those strengths, but as he got older and lazier and trained less, he didn't. Because he doesn't have the mental strength of guys like Quarry and Ali, he tended to quit when he became fatigued. We initially saw that against Douglas.

When he lost that head movement, he became a sitting duck. It was Mike's overal power, hand speed and head movement which made him what he WAS! It's a shame that Cus D'Amato wasn't around for a longer period of time. Mike really needed a strong, positive influence or mentor in his life, both private and personal. I can't get on track with putting TYSON down, he was just too good and fell upon negative times due to his lack of guidance and direction. A real loss for heavyweight boxing.

When I look at a young Foreman and at a young Tyson, I can't help being surprised that Tyson is the heaviest (or heavier) of the two. Foreman was much wilter than Mike, had huge arms and broad shoulders! Muhammed Ali is 6'2" 1/2 with broad shoulders and looked much heavier than Tyson! Mac Foster looked very big in his fight against Quarry and was about 6'3" wilt, but only weighted 210 lbs. By looking at him I’d guess about 230! Ron Lyle, at 6'3" 1/2 looked heavier than Tyson too.

When I look at a young Foreman and at a young Tyson, I can't help being surprised that Tyson is the heaviest (or heavier) of the two. Foreman was much wilter than Mike, had huge arms and broad shoulders! Muhammed Ali is 6'2" 1/2 with broad shoulders and looked much heavier than Tyson! Mac Foster looked very big in his fight against Quarry and was about 6'3" wilt, but only weighted 210 lbs. By looking at him I’d guess about 230! Ron Lyle, at 6'3" 1/2 looked heavier than Tyson too.

Ken Norton looked heavier than Tyson as well. It's a little surprising to me, but the truth is the truth. Chris Byrd is considered today a very small heavyweight, but at 6'2", 210 is was only a little smaller than Ali, who was considered a big guy back in the 60s and 70s.

I don't think that guys like Mc Cline, Briggs, Botha, Brewster, Ruiz and probably even Tua and Rahman would have been dangerous for Jerry Quarry. I would bet on Jerry. But, very honestly in a Lewis-Quarry fight I'd bet on Lennox. I would hit Jerry with a flurry of jabs and uppercuts. But Jerry's left hook could win him the fight. Of course you can never be sure in boxing.

Bob B, Brewster weighed in at 224 not 240 as compared to 248 for Golota. So Brewster is on the small side compared to a lot of the guys around today.

A lot of the extra weight these guys are carrying today may be the result of weight training, which they didn't do much of in Jerry's day as well as improved nutrition.

Still the smaller guys seem to be more than holding their own. Byrd at 213 over McCline 265, Brewster over Golota, Brewster over W. Klitschko 243, Davarroyl Williamson 215 barely losing to W. Klitschko by tech decision and scoring a knockdown, Brock 217 over McCline, Jirov 210 beating up Mesi 235 badly in the last few rounds and though he lost a close decision, who came out the worse for wear afterwards? Mesi of course.

Tyson not only started to go down hill when he didn't move his head as much, he also began to stand too straight up, dangerous for a short heavyweight, and he began to throw only one or two punches at a time. At his best Tyson would move in behind multiple jabs, a lot of head movement and combination punching to the body and the head.

After the Michael Spinks fight Tyson seemed to pick up the bad habits. Any connection to him firing Kevin Rooney as his trainer, a long time Cus fighter, who had trained in the gym since before Cus found Tyson and who had trained him until the M. Spinks fight? I think so as it was the last direct connection to Cus.

Tyson was everything Noam and yourself described him as. He was a real physical phenomenon. He lost all his upper body movement, all his ability to throw combinations up and down, to head and body. You can say he lost these skills due to the loss of his mentors, Gus and Teddy Atlas. However, he's been officially diagnosed as having Bi-Polar Disorder. That's not a cheap excuse for the desintegration of his personal and professional life. He's a textbook case. Which is where I got my information. Medication can almost completely control behavior in most cases. Trouble is, it's very hard to keep someone with this disorder on their medication. The very nature of the disease makes them and their mood swings hard to control. Very often they just won't take their meds. This mental disorder usually strikes people in their late twenties and early thirties. I feel very sorry for Tyson. He's in the wrong racket for a guy with a serious mental disorder. I hope he doesn't continue to be exploited and meet a bad end to his life.

5/26/05 11:49:23 AM|Steve|na||na||||10|Joey, Tyson was everything Noam and yourself described him as. He was a real physical phenomenon. He lost all his upper body movement, all his ability to throw combinations up and down, to head and body. You can say he lost these skills due to the loss of his mentors, Gus and Teddy Atlas. However, he's been officially diagnosed as having Bi-Polar Disorder. That's not a cheap excuse for the desintegration of his personal and professional life. He's a textbook case. Which is where I got my information. Medication can almost completely control behavior in most cases. Trouble is, it's very hard to keep someone with this disorder on their medication. The very nature of the disease makes them and their mood swings hard to control. Very often they just won't take their meds. This mental disorder usually strikes people in their late twenties and early thirties. I feel very sorry for Tyson. He's in the wrong racket for a guy with a serious mental disorder. I hope he doesn't continue to be exploited and meet a bad end to his life.

5/26/05 11:49:33 AM|Steve|na||na||||10|Joey, Tyson was everything Noam and yourself described him as. He was a real physical phenomenon. He lost all his upper body movement, all his ability to throw combinations up and down, to head and body. You can say he lost these skills due to the loss of his mentors, Gus and Teddy Atlas. However, he's been officially diagnosed as having Bi-Polar Disorder. That's not a cheap excuse for the desintegration of his personal and professional life. He's a textbook case. Which is where I got my information. Medication can almost completely control behavior in most cases. Trouble is, it's very hard to keep someone with this disorder on their medication. The very nature of the disease makes them and their mood swings hard to control. Very often they just won't take their meds. This mental disorder usually strikes people in their late twenties and early thirties. I feel very sorry for Tyson. He's in the wrong racket for a guy with a serious mental disorder. I hope he doesn't continue to be exploited and meet a bad end to his life.
Tyson was everything Noam and yourself described him as. He was a real physical phenomenon. He lost all his upper body movement, all his ability to throw combinations up and down, to head and body. You can say he lost these skills due to the loss of his mentors, Gus and Teddy Atlas. However, he’s been officially diagnosed as having Bi-Polar Disorder. That's not a cheap excuse for the desintegration of his personal and professional life. He's a textbook case. Which is where I got my information. Medication can almost completely control behavior in most cases. Trouble is, it's very hard to keep someone with this disorder on their medication. The very nature of the disease makes them and their mood swings hard to control. Very often they just won't take their meds. This mental disorder usually strikes people in their late twenties and early thirties. I feel very sorry for Tyson. He's in the wrong racket for a guy with a serious mental disorder. I hope he doesn't continue to be exploited and meet a bad end to his life.
won't fight that f--g animal". I also know that when Tyson was a teenager, he used to watch often the Foreman-Frazier first fight and he thought that George Edward was really scaring. Tyson-Louis ? I don't know, but let me say that if Joe Louis knocked out Carnera in the way he did he couldn't be too bad!

Tonight I saw Vasilij "The Tiger" Jirov vs Forrest "Clifford is my hero" Neal. Neal had no desire to fight and so Jirov won easily by KOT 3. I also saw Bowe vs Zumbrun and...My God, Riddick is a shell of the fighter he used to be. He weighted 280 lbs for this fight, heavier than Wilt was.

Tonight I saw Vasilij "The Tiger" Jirov vs Forrest "Clifford is my hero" Neal. Neal had no desire to fight and so Jirov won easily by KOT 3. I also saw Bowe vs Zumbrun and...My God, Riddick is a shell of the fighter he used to be. He weighted 280 lbs for this fight, heavier than Wilt was.

Tonight I saw Vasilij "The Tiger" Jirov vs Forrest "Clifford is my hero" Neal. Neal had no desire to fight and so Jirov won easily by KOT 3. I also saw Bowe vs Zumbrun and...My God, Riddick is a shell of the fighter he used to be. He weighted 280 lbs for this fight, heavier than Wilt was.

Tonight I saw Vasilij "The Tiger" Jirov vs Forrest "Clifford is my hero" Neal. Neal had no desire to fight and so Jirov won easily by KOT 3. I also saw Bowe vs Zumbrun and...My God, Riddick is a shell of the fighter he used to be. He weighted 280 lbs for this fight, heavier than Wilt was.

Tonight I saw Vasilij "The Tiger" Jirov vs Forrest "Clifford is my hero" Neal. Neal had no desire to fight and so Jirov won easily by KOT 3. I also saw Bowe vs Zumbrun and...My God, Riddick is a shell of the fighter he used to be. He weighted 280 lbs for this fight, heavier than Wilt was.

Tonight I saw Vasilij "The Tiger" Jirov vs Forrest "Clifford is my hero" Neal. Neal had no desire to fight and so Jirov won easily by KOT 3. I also saw Bowe vs Zumbrun and...My God, Riddick is a shell of the fighter he used to be. He weighted 280 lbs for this fight, heavier than Wilt was.

Tonight I saw Vasilij "The Tiger" Jirov vs Forrest "Clifford is my hero" Neal. Neal had no desire to fight and so Jirov won easily by KOT 3. I also saw Bowe vs Zumbrun and...My God, Riddick is a shell of the fighter he used to be. He weighted 280 lbs for this fight, heavier than Wilt was.

Tonight I saw Vasilij "The Tiger" Jirov vs Forrest "Clifford is my hero" Neal. Neal had no desire to fight and so Jirov won easily by KOT 3. I also saw Bowe vs Zumbrun and...My God, Riddick is a shell of the fighter he used to be. He weighted 280 lbs for this fight, heavier than Wilt was.

Tonight I saw Vasilij "The Tiger" Jirov vs Forrest "Clifford is my hero" Neal. Neal had no desire to fight and so Jirov won easily by KOT 3. I also saw Bowe vs Zumbrun and...My God, Riddick is a shell of the fighter he used to be. He weighted 280 lbs for this fight, heavier than Wilt was.
Maybe we pay too much attention to weight, or how much weight of boxers has increased. I think most of them fight differently, too, compared with the 60s or 50s. I think there was much more craft then, and today there is a little too much emphasis on bulk and strength. Some people enjoy boxing matches about power, bulk and strength, with the biggest possible guys bludgeoning each other until one of them drops. That's OK but I prefer matches decided by skill, speed, footwork, smarts and strategy. Maybe I'm not a true heavyweight fan. JQ did have incredible power and he was strong, but what impressed me more about him were his heart, boxing expertise, fundamentals and aggressiveness, plus killer's instinct. I think we had better boxers, or more good boxers, when guys really had to work their way up to being contenders, with at least 20 or 30 fights. The way the promoters and the media work now, if a new kid can be sold in big fights, they rush him into the Top Ten before he's really ready. Did anyone say anything about "The Contender"? I don't like to see young children watching their dads get walloped and bleeding. Sonia, did you ever see Jerry fight when you were little? Great site as always. Hello to Massimo!

Can anyone explain why boxing or fighting in movies never looks the least bit realistic? You'd think after so many years they'd get it right. John Wayne is the prime example, and he was so slow you could have a beer before his next punch came. Like most Hollywood fighters, he also telegraphed his punches. Jim Garner, Steve McQueen, Bruce Willis -- all the same. The worst of all may be Sylvester Stallone, who should know better after so much time spent in gyms. They fight like they imagine the way good fighters would fight, but it's all haymakers, Sunday punches, roundabout rights. (Massimo, these are slang terms for very slow, deliberate, hard punches where the guy really loads up, or concentrates to put all his strength into it -- as if the other guy would really stand there and wait for him to do it!)

Gino, fights on the big screen are the directors idea of will entertain the audience and they are not meant to be realistic.

Even Chuck Norris, a real life five time world amateur middleweight karate champion, I don't think he ever fought on the pro circuit but he knows his stuff, has unrealistic fight scenes.

Gino, can Harvey Keitel fight? I've been a fan of his since his film The Dirty Lieutenant. I've watched re-runs of the Rockford Files and James Garner throws a nice punch. His offside Angel doesn't, though. Greg Brady hit Marsha in one episode I remember and that didn't look staged.
weeks ago, but weighted 103 Kg (about 230 lbs) for his last fight and now he could almost be employed as a bouncer. I think an actor who can boxe quite well is Mickey Rourke. I bet he lives in Los Angeles. And Kim Basinger lives in Los Angeles too.

The answer to my question: the legendary FRANCO (FRANCESCO) DE PICCOLI. This guy won the gold medal in the heavyweight division with ease. Yesterday I saw the final match which he won by first round knockout. Franco was a devastating puncher, too bad that he couldn't take a punch well...As a professional, after a brilliant start, he was knocked out by Wayne Bethea and Joe Bygraves.

Luan Krasniqi knocked Whitaker out in 6 rounds !!!!!!!!

I think he will play a very important role (ruolo) in the heavyweight division from now on.

The former wrestler Zeus (I can't remember his real name in this very moment) Calvin Lane 2) The former wrestler Zeus (I can't remember his real name in this very moment) Calvin Lane 2)

A couple of other actors that boxed well, Robert Conrad and Robert Blake. Ryan O'Neil had his neck dislocated while sparring with Joe frazier.

In celebrity boxing matches he defeated Donny Osmond, a singer with a karate background, by decision and Bonaduce actutally knocked out Barry Williams, who played Greg Brady on the Brady Bunch. Bonaduce also has a martial arts background.

James Carne fought well as Sonny Corleone in The Godfather. When he was beating his brother-in-law it looked real. Those 'spaghetti westerns' when Bud Spencer punched his horse didn't look like acting either. Next thing some of you guys are going to tell me that the wrestling isn't real when they jump on someone's head from the ropes.

Gino, you've opened up a can of worms.

Bud Spencer, real name Carlo Pedersoli, born in Naples (Naples is a difficult way to say Napoli) in 1929, he is one of my favourite actors. His life is very interesting too, he was a great swimmer (first man in Italia to swim 100 m in less than 1 minute). He wrote the music of some nice songs for his own movies. He went to college at 17 studing chemistry but had to quit because his family settled (or settled down, but not settled up) in South America. Then, years later, he took a degree in Law. He played in 4 movies with Joe Bugner, beating him to a pulp in each of these movies. A very interesting person. Today he is old like hell and is involved in Politics. A legend. I saw so many of his movies, how to forget "Trinita'" or "Continuavano a chiamarlo Trinita'" with Terence Hill (real name Mario Girotti) ?

Bud Spencer. I'm surprised he could float let alone swim. Spencer is not built like a swimmer. He looks like a wrestler. You sure you're not mixing him up with someone else, perhaps Johnny Weismuller.

Gino, I think you are wrong saying that movies don't make fighting look real. John Holmes did okay in his movies.

Noam, there have been specials that have celebrity boxing on T.V. Some of the match ups featured those I mentioned plus others such as, "the battle of the nerds, Dustin Diamond (Screech from, I forget the name of the show) vs. Ronald Pallilo
(Horshack from Welcome Back Kotter), 8 foot tall Manute Bol vs William "The Refrigerator" Perry and others.The best action was Bonaduce vs. Osmond, a close fight between two men who have at least some fighting skills, that was won by Bonaduce. I don't know Bonaduce's exact background but I do know that Osmond, along with his family, were long time students of Chuck Norris. Norris mentions this in his autobiography.Bonaduce was impressive in knocking out Williams, "Greg Brady" who outweighed "Danny Partridge" by about twenty pounds. "Screech" vs "Horshack" was a mismatch as Diamond was much bigger and younger than his opponent.|
| 5/30/05 01:49:29 AM | Massimo Giulio Leonardo Cini | Roma | || 4 | | 10 | Noam-
| 5/30/05 10:01:17 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | | Sonia90101@aol.com | | | | 10 |
| | "Next thing some of you guys are going to tell me that the wrestling isn't real when they jump on someone's head from the ropes.""PS: Noam, I know that WRESTLING is a fake, but I remember when Hulk Hogan lifted (or raised) Andre' the Midget and that wasn't an easy thing to do. Actually Andre' was a very short guy, but still (or yet) weighted about 520 lbs!"
| 5/30/05 10:01:17 AM | Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | | Sonia90101@aol.com | | | | 10 |
| | "PRO WRESTLING is scripted. The athleticism that you see is real. The punching and kicking are pulled. The slaps are real, the leg drops are an illusion, the holds are real, but in most cases are executed in such a way as to cause no pain. When you see blood, it is deliberate. When they pick each other up, it's real, but assisted somewhat. The outcome is predetermined. It's kind of like smoke and mirrors with a touch of reality, but don't ever ask a wrestler if it is fake because he will deliberately stiffen you."|
| 6/1/05 10:47:48 AM | Joey | Canada | | AOL | | | | 10 |
| 6/1/05 12:04:10 PM | Jimmy Magkabo | obvious | | other25000years.com | | | | 10 |
| 6/1/05 06:54:27 PM | Kent Appel | Murrieta, Ca | | kentallenent@aol.com | | | | 10 |
| | "Wrestling used to be VERY REAL; it was very real when Primo Carnera was a wrestler! How many of you know that Primo Carnera became the undisputed heavyweight wrestling champion in 1957? Primo made way more money with wrestling than with boxing. No, honestly speaking, wrestling has always been a fake, but I wonder why guys like Joe Louis weren't as good in wrestling as Primo Carnera was. Probably it's just because Primo being bigger was more likely to be a wrestling world champion than Joe Louis was. His weight was nothing less than about one half of the weight of "The Midget" 270 lbs vs 520 lbs. I don't know who was the wilter (or wiltest) of the two. Shaq would be one hell of a wrestler!"
| 6/1/05 06:54:27 PM | Kent Appel | Murrieta, Ca | | kentallenent@aol.com | | | | 10 |
| | "I am probably going to be attending the Audley Harrison fight card here in California on June 9. Harrison was the Olympic gold medalist from Britain in 2000. He is 17-0 as a professional and he is one of the up and coming heavyweights to watch. I don't know who he is fighting without looking it up."On the undercard is former national heavyweight golden gloves champion Malcolm Tann, who is 15-1 as a professional verses former heavyweight title Challenger Vaughn Bean, who has over 45 professional fights and about five losses.
| 6/1/05 06:54:27 PM | Kent Appel | Murrieta, Ca | | kentallenent@aol.com | | | | 10 |
| 6/1/05 10:47:01 AM | Massimo | Roma | | || 4 | | 10 | Wrestling used to be VERY REAL; it was very real when Primo Carnera was a wrestler! How many of you know that Primo Carnera became the undisputed heavyweight wrestling champion in 1957? Primo made way more money with wrestling than with boxing. No, honestly speaking, wrestling has always been a fake, but I wonder why guys like Joe Louis weren't as good in wrestling as Primo Carnera was. Probably it's just because Primo being bigger was more likely to be a wrestling world champion than Joe Louis was. His weight was nothing less than about one half of the weight of "The Midget" 270 lbs vs 520 lbs. I don't know who was the wilter (or wiltest) of the two. Shaq would be one hell of a wrestler!"
| 6/1/05 10:47:01 AM | Massimo | Roma | | || 4 | | 10 | Wrestling used to be VERY REAL; it was very real when Primo Carnera was a wrestler! How many of you know that Primo Carnera became the undisputed heavyweight wrestling champion in 1957? Primo made way more money with wrestling than with boxing. No, honestly speaking, wrestling has always been a fake, but I wonder why guys like Joe Louis weren't as good in wrestling as Primo Carnera was. Probably it's just because Primo being bigger was more likely to be a wrestling world champion than Joe Louis was. His weight was nothing less than about one half of the weight of "The Midget" 270 lbs vs 520 lbs. I don't know who was the wilter (or wiltest) of the two. Shaq would be one hell of a wrestler!"

Happy birthday CNN. Happy 25th birthday! Ooh say, can you see ...?"
Was ist das? Was ist "eek, eek a keek"? Ich verstehe nicht! Konnen Sie erklaren, bitte? Ich bin der Papez, ich bin sehr wichtig! Max Schmeling war besser als Ali! (oder Cassius Clay? Wie heissen er?!) Auf wiedersehen!

Was ist das? Was ist “eek, eek a keek”? Ich verstehe nicht! Konnen Sie erklaren, bitte? Ich bin der Papez, ich bin sehr wichtig! Max Schmeling war besser als Ali! (oder Cassius Clay? Wie heissen er?!) Auf wiedersehen!

I hope we can start some interesting topics soon.

I have never seen Harrison fight. All I know about this guy is that he is a big fella (it's Slang for "fellow") and that he won the golden medal in the Olympics by beating quite easily Paolo Vidoz in the final fight. But Paolo turned out to be much weaker than I thought as a professional so...I can't judge this Audley yet!

Speaking of legendary fights, what about Baer-Schmeling. It was a fight to pick up (I hope is good English) the challenger for the KIng of the world, Primo Carnera. Massimo Baer beat Massimo Schmeling up like he was his daddy (even if my daddy never beat me up that hard) in the first 2 rounds, Schmeling came back well in the middle rounds, but in the tenth he took the worst beating of his life! It was really a good fight (and 63000 persons saw it live). This is legend in my book.

I invite all of you 280 millions Americans in “my” home in Roma (it's in Italia) for a special occasion: on next Thursday on ESPN Italia there will be MUHAMMAD ALI' vs JOE FRAZIER 2. If this ain't legend, what is legend all about?

Which were the most exciting knockout wins in Jerry Quarry's career? I think those in the Mac Foster and Shavers fights were very thrilling. Others? Which were other great fights JQ was involved in rarely shown on TV?

Yes, Kirk Johnson has been added to the card. He isn't fighting anyone of note though, a tune up for him, like Davis, Harrison's opponent, who I couldn't remember off the top of my head even though I got a bout sheet listing the fights from the promoter, I can't remember who Johnson is fighting.

Malcolm Tann is about 6'6" tall and he is always in good shape at about 230 pounds. His problem is he needs to use his jab and his height more. Bean is about 6 feet tall and if Tann can utilize his height, he may be able to handle Bean.

Tann has sparred with some talented fighters like Toney, Johnson, and Wladimir Klitschko but is he ready to step up the live competition level? We will find out, this bout is the most interesting on the card to me.
Dumphy said, "prepare for a punchfest" and that's what it was.

Kent---I doubt I'll be going the Tyson-McBride fight (I have an eight month old and my wife would KO me if I hightailed it on a weekend to go to MCI center.)---but I did see some photos of Tyson in training. At least for physical appearance, this is as good as I've seen him look in as long as I can remember. I don't think he's been this chiseled since before the prison sentence. If his head is in the fight and he actually does more than wind up for one punch at a time---he'll walk over McBride and if he can somehow stay focused, who knows? Certainly, this is all speculation on my part, but he really looks better than I expected at this point. | 6/5/05 11:34:50 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Angelo, it will interesting to see how much Tyson has left. If things are going his way and then is no adversity, we could see an early Tyson win. But if he gets into trouble, will we see the bad habits come out? Like winging one punch at a time and trying to bail himself out with one punch and also not using head movement.I see it as if McBride gets Tyson into trouble and hurts Tyson and Tyson still is coming in and moving his head and throwing combinations like he is supposed to, then Tyson still has something left.But if the bad habits that have been around for years, since the Buster Douglas fight, are programmed into his brain, then we will never see any hint of his past greatness as a fighter again.| 6/5/05 11:44:41 AM|Kent|same||same|||10|Double congratulations, one to Angelo for his eight month old child, whcih we didn't know about and the other to Ricky Hatton for his 11th round TKO of Kostya T(pronounced Zoo, I never know how to spell it).Hatton surprised me as I though Kostya T would have too much experience for him and I didn't think Hatton's defense was good enough for him to get a win. Huge win for Hatton and a good fight for boxing as Hatton is a decent fellow, humble and not a trash talker like so many around today.| 6/5/05 04:16:49 PM|Uncle Tom |How beautiful is Roma at night !||Have you ever walked for Roma at night ?.com||||10|I think that Tyson can beat most of the guys outta there, but not the very best ! He can't beat Vitali, not even in his dreams. And if he dreams that he is whipping Vitali, he should wake up and apologize to him. Angelo---I have never seen the Quarry-Lyle fight. Did Jerry win comfortably or after a rough and close battle ? Was this fight exciting ?| 6/5/05 04:45:46 PM|George L. Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com||||10|To the readers of this site, and especially Mr. Jimmy Dorsey and Mr. Bob Bumbera, I offer the following responses to your comments made recently and in the distant past. Mr. Dorsey, thank you for your research efforts concerning JQ's record. While I have no control over the overall content of this website, Mr. Carl Weingarten has rather magnificently handled that duty in the past. What I will do is forward your posting regarding JQ's record to Ms. Linda Quarry, the widow of Mr. James Quarry. She, in turn, can bring this issue to Mr. Weingarten's attention.Regarding Mr. Bumbera's question as to why the AAIB's Manifesto (as published on this site) calls for championship bouts to last 13, instead of 12 rounds, I do not know the answer. However, I would suggest that Mr. Bumbera, or anyone else who has any questions at all about anything in boxing, call Mr. Steve Acunto, Sr. For those of you who do not know this fine gentleman or his reputation, he is not only the primary author of the Manifesto, but one of the most knowledgeable persons of all time concerning professional boxing. Among his many accomplishments, he served as a member of the New York State Athletic Commission for more than 50 years. He can be reached at 914.664.4571; furthermore, he welcomes any and all questions directed to him concerning the Manifesto or any other boxing topic.| 6/6/05 09:07:45 AM|Fran|Philly||plc7755@aol.com||||10|We saw the "Cinderela Man" over the weekend it was a great movie my wife loved it, very realistic, great acting and Russell Crowe was perfect for the part. I was thinking of the similarites in Jerry's comeback year of 1973 when he lit up the Garden with those big wins oner Lyle and Shavers. Jimmy Braddock was brought back to life in this movie and even though I knew who he was and what he did this movie was like being in a time machine. Hope everyone gets a chance to see the movie. |

| 6/6/05 11:32:27 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | How good was Jim Braddock? Hard to say! His punches were less hard than Angelo's son (who is less than 1 years old) but, after all and all in all, he knocked Joe Louis down and beat Massimo Baer (the guy who beat the greatest of all times Primo Carnera). I think he wasn't a bad fighter at all, but on the other hand he was pretty boring to watch. |

| 6/6/05 01:09:05 PM | Steve | NJ | NA | 10 | Kent and Noam, jeez, that's the last time I listen to a fight prediction from you two guys! Hah!, I predicted Hatton would swarm all over Tszyu! The heavyweight scene is so bad it defies any kind of intelligent discussion or predictions even from Noam or Kent! Kent, remember when you and I had a discussion about fighters getting old all of a sudden between fights? I think that's what happened to Kosta Tszyu. I hope and pray that Samuel Peters is the next Joe Frazier. He'd be perfect against Klitchko. We'd have Ali vs Frazier all over again. Only on a skill and gut level about 200% below the originals. |

| 6/6/05 03:28:02 PM | Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com | 10 | Massimo, Braddock was a good fighter that had bad hands. He had a whale of a right and a good solid jab. As a light-heavy he won 11 of his first 12 by KO, 8 in the first round. A few years later, he KO'ed Tuffy Griffith and one of the all time great pure boxers Jimmy Slattery. He won a decision over John Henry Lewis. Joe Louis' handlers had so much respect for Braddock's toughness and courage they told Joe he would have to KO him to win the title, which he did, the only time Braddock was counted out in 84 fights. Braddock knocked Louis down with a right hand in the first round and if his left hadn't been "coked" he may have put Joe out with a follow up hook. Had Max Baer taken Braddock seriously and respected his ability like the Louis camp did maybe Braddock would have been defeated and gone back to work on the docks a few years earlier than he did. Braddock may have lost more fights than any other Heavyweight Champ but he was no looser. What a story his life makes though. I haven't seen the movie yet, I usually wait until I can rent them but I may go see this one. Besides anyone who calls Jersey home is ok by me. |

| 6/6/05 05:15:19 PM | Massimo | El Paso, Texas | 4 | 10 | Steve-Why are you hoping Samuele Pietro to be (or do you hope Samuele Pietro is) the new Joe Frazier? Why do you wanna have another bum in the heavyweight division? ;-)|

| 6/6/05 05:49:55 PM | Steve | na | na | 10 | Massimo, are you kidding me?? I just can't get over how many people on this site belittle Joe Frazier's skills and psychological profile. He makes Mike Tyson look like a little girl in terms of mental strenght and toughness! |

| 6/6/05 06:14:14 PM | Steve | El Paso, Texas | 4 | 10 | I was only joking, of course, Joe Frazier is one of my favourites fighters, I rate him in the top 10. I think throughout their 3 fight Ali' and Frazier fought essentially EVEN: Joe clearly won the first fight, the second was very close and the third was a life and death stuff, so the name of the winner wasn't that important (cause it was a massacre for both fighters, the winner and the loser). I rate Ali' above Frazier because he fought all in all better fighters than Frazier did and did a little better than Joe against George Foreman...But Joe Frazier is still a great champion in my book.}

Massimo, in terms of mental toughness, consistent boxing skill levels over a long career, I would give Jerry Quarry a shot at beating Tyson. At his best, Quarry took Earnie Shavers best shots. I saw him get clocked at least three times in that first round, and not even blink. I give Tyson an advantage in power, but nothing Quarry couldn't absorb or roll with and neutralize. I don't think Tyson could have taken Quarry's power counter punches over fifteen, or even twelve rounds. |

The point could be made that Tyson threw combinations much faster than Shavers. However, Quarry was also very fast with combination power punches, as shown against Frazier and Ron Lyle. |

I think Jerry Quarry in his best days (Mac Foster, Shavers, Lyle) would have had a pretty good chance at beating a prime Tyson (even if, honestly, I would have still bet on Tyson). I think a prime Quarry would have beaten an after Desiree' Tyson most of the times. Jerry would have told him "you don't bother me a bit" in the pre-fight weight in like (or as) Evandro Camposanto did and then kicked his ass. |

Something you all have surely noted: Evandro Camposanto was a type mistake! I should have said Evandro Camposanto. Sorry grande padre DANTE! Good night, it's damn late here in Paisaland and I gotta go (or get) to my huge bed (where I use to sleep diagonally). |

Jerry Quarry was a master of the stare down during the ref's instructions. If you want to see a really scary dude, watch Quarry's stare down on any of his fight films. He would have intimidated Tyson, and handled his power during the first round, much as he did
Shavers, Lyle, and Joe Frazier. |

Pardon my spelling, I meant that Quarry would have intimidated Tyson, because Quarry feared no one. Tyson won most of his early fights on the fear factor alone. I often wonder who was the better all round fighter, Quarry or Hollyfield. |

Yes, I saw Jerry's glance in the Mac Foster fight and it was intimidating, but I find that Mike Tyson's glance is intimidating too. If he looked right in my eyes in Bronswill (spelling) at 3.12 in the morning, I think I would be scared. On the other hand, the less (or the least) intimidating person on Earth is my mom, Anna Ursino from Campobasso (not exactly Los Angeles), Molise (not exactly California). She wears a shoe size 35 in Italia (4 or 5 I guess in Wyoming) and has the smallest hands I have ever seen in an adult human being (even a little smaller than mine) and the body strenght of an average 7 years old male. |

I just saw the already legendary Nicola Valuev vs Clifford Etienne fight. Clifford fought a pretty good first round, but Nicola won easily by KOT 3. He is freaking big (always the same size as Shaq) and can really punch. Clifford at 6'2" is the same wiltness as my old friend at college Fabrizio (sorry, I don't know his surname) and at 98.7 Kg, looked like an idrogen atom in comparison to Nicola. Very honestly, I don't think there are many heavyweights outta there who could handle
this guy... |

Kent and Noam, what gives? I've been waiting for you two guys to climb all over me for that blatant lie I told when I said I predicted Hatton to beat Kosta Tzu, or whatever his name is. I actually picked Kosta to walk through Hatton in a few rounds. |

Angelo, in terms of longevity of successful careers. Joe Frazier fought Ali the third time with all the fury, quickness, and determination he exhibited through his entire career. This even after a fearsome beating from George Foreman.

Mike Tyson, on the other hand, seemed to desintegrate after his loss to Buster Douglass.

---

Steve, I honestly didn't remember you picking Hatton to lose. I just remember I did.

I am attending the Audely Harrison fight card Thursday. My pal Toney will likely be there. I think he is innocent of his steroid charges as he didn't have the steroid look verses Ruiz as he looked chubby.

I have a feeling his postive test was due to leftover residue from the legal prescriptions he was taking when he was being treated for his arm injury.

I got an E-mail from the promoter with and updated bout sheet for the card and Vaughn Bean is not on the card. Tann is fighting a journeyman fighter instead. Don't know yet why Bean is not fighting.

Why don't you ask your brother James what he thinks about Audley Harrison. I already know he'll say: "Harrison is a big bum!"

Aren't the tests sophisticated enough to distinguish between medication (especially residual) and steroids? I'd like to believe that Toney is the victim of a mistake, but generally, after all is said and done, most pro (or amateur) athletes accused of banned substance use are generally guilty. The first thing you hear from guys like runner Ben Johnson? "It was cold medicine."

I'm not saying I believe with 100% certainty that Toney is guilty of steroids, but on the other hand, what more do you have than a hunch, that he's innocent? The fact that he wasn't chiseled doesn't tell the whole story. Remember Tony Mandarich, drafted by the Packers (I believe out of Michigan State)? In college, he was just bulky, not muscular, but huge and bulky. He had incredible strength, stamina and intensity, even though he didn't have Ken Norton's body. When he went to the NFL and got off the juice, he shrunk a few sizes and Reggie White got the assignment against him one afternoon and threw him around like Raggedy Ann. Mandarich did improve and actually had a decent season or two, but was never the dominating player he would have been if he stayed on steroids. At least that's the word from insiders. I think Toney might have juiced to gain weight and strength—-the weight doesn't always go on solidly, but it works.

Steve: Your post is accurate. I think that the difference between Frazier and Tyson (and the reason Frazier was able to go to war late in his career and look good) is mental. Frazier was one of a select few who, in the ring, didn't let my all time favorite, Ali, mess with his mind. Frazier had focus and a sense of purpose that Tyson lost very early. Is it too late for Tyson? Probably. I have to say, Tyson is saying the right things now, and reportedly has trained like a maniac for this fight against McBride. The knee is healed, Tyson is in shape and apparently at peace with himself for now. He needs the money and has that motivation going for him. If he wins this one and one or two more tune-ups against stiffs, he'll get another crack at one of the titles. Oh boy, we're in for some fun.
Thanks! I can't even imagine what James "Cassius Clay was humble" Toney would say if you asked him "what do you think about Primo Carnera?". He probably would start vomiting!

I don't agree with you that Tyson needs money. No matter how much money he gets in his next fights, he'll throw it out of the window just in the same way he did with the money (maybe what 200 millions?) he got (or even gained) throughout the rest of his career. He should quit his career and care about his own health. He got a choice: being a healthy and poor man or being a poor and ill man.

Haven't been by in a while, friends. Several items:

1. Anyone see Big (really big) Riddick Bowe just barely get by Billy Kudrun or whatever? Billy did well for a guy who's really only part-time -- almost finished Bowe in one round. James Toney shrewdly observed that Bowe should lose weight (from 280). I noticed again the announcers got many details and observations wrong, probably to hype the fight. If Riddick wants to come back, why not? Just about all the other heavyweights now are stiffa.
   3. Kent, I disagree about Hollywood directors not wanting boxing movies to be real. I used to be a grip and heard directors talk about making the fights and boxing "more realistic". They just don't know what it is. Most of them are pansies.
   4. Steve, were you the one who said Frazier didn't let Ali mess with his head? He sure did, buddy. He was mad and distracted as hell when Ali called him ugly, and the ugly gorilla. He still hates Ali to this day and never misses a chance to put him down. That's messing with a guy's head.
   5. Who was it who said JQ was a master of the stare down? Give me a break. For one thing, Jerry was white, if you haven't noticed, and no black fighter is going to find any white guy fearful or scary. These black guys are usually from the street, everybody, where people carry guns and shoot people with them. By the same token, Massimo, what Italian is going to be intimidated by an Irishman? No offense. Besides, Jerry was a small man. Do you think Lennox Lewis or Riddick Bowe or other big guys would find him intimidating? Or Frazier or Toney or Trinidad or any Motown fighter or any other black guy in any division? For that matter, Latinos, too. Do you think Roberto Duran's gonna wet his pants if somebody looks mean at him? Except for Liston and Foreman, nobody scares anybody in staredowns. That's kid stuff. Give it up.

Gino: I'm the one who said Ali didn't get in Frazier's head. I wasn't quite right about that---he did get in Frazier's head, as evidenced by the fact that 35 years later, Frazier still can't let go. But what I meant is that Frazier didn't get rattled enough to let it affect him in the ring. He managed to beat Ali once and fought him twice more, performing well both times. For my money, Ali is the best ever. Frazier gave him fits three times (especially their first and last fights). As well, Norton didn't buy into Ali's routine and he performed well too. As for JQ's stare down technique, I don't think it necessarily scared or intimidated anyone, but it served the purpose of showing that JQ wasn't intimidated himself. Watch the JQ/Shavers prefight. During instructions, JQ is staring him down while Shavers is giggling. Three minutes later, Earnie wasn't laughing anymore! But I agree, the stare down is mostly macho crap. When the bell rings, the better fighter, not the better actor, usually wins.
up in Beverly Hills.... Was it? As far as Jerry holding his own with the "big guys", Jerry thrived on that!!! Ask Mac Foster, Ron Lyle or Earnie Shavers among others. Well I've said enough...Once again, GREAT to see the site againand hope to get back again soon.Jerry, in my mind, You were The Greatest!!!!!!!

[6/9/05 09:07:57 AM]Patrick J. Gibbons

Ken Norton couldn't care less about Ali's psychological tactics! He gave Ali' hell for 3 fights! On the other hand Frazier suffered Ali's verbal attacks outside the ring, but didn't let them affect his performances in the ring. I'm looking forward to see Ali-Frazier 2 tonight on ESPN.

[6/10/05 03:39:00 AM]Gino Mastroianni

Bellflower could probably rank with most "mean streets" around the country. I don't think Jerry's early background was growing up in Beverly Hills.... Was it?"No, Patrick, Bellflower was a solidly blue collar town nearby the big Firestone, Goodyear; US Steel and Bethlehem Steel plants operating at the western edge of LA in the 40s and 50s when Jerry was coming up. Then it became more and more Hispanic, as it is today. It was rough and tumble but never a ghetto or a bi city barrio, and never even remotely comparable to Bed-Stuy or Brownsville in Brooklyn; South Bronx; Hell's Kitchen in Manhattan; Southwest DC; Roxbury or Dorchester in Boston; South Side in Chicago; Tommy Hearns' Detroit; or George Foreman's Fifth Ward in Houston -- or the gritty slums of Napoli or Rome or Firenze or Turin, right, Massimo? To call Bellflower a place of "mean streets" doesn't work at all. Not all great fighters need to psych themselves up by having a baad stare, either. How do you guys know whether JQ or Ali or anybody else got into the heads of anyone else? Let's not mind-read here, OK? Le's stick with what we actually know. Right, Massimo? We know Ali riled up Frazier because of what Frazier did and said. DOES A FIGHTER REALLY FIGHT BETTER MAD? I don't think so, not after a short surge of angry energy.
It;s much, much more important to be a smart fighter and to stay cool. That was a major part of Evander Holyfield's strength: he could THINK and ADJUST while he fought. Very few fighters can do that. Jerry Quarry wasn't very good at it, either. He seemed to fight a lot of the time on raw emotion. Correct me if you have real evidence. By the way, the southern part of Beverly Hills is now full of gangbangers passing through. Los Angeles has 100,000 gang bangers. too.
Maybe not mean streets everywhere, but respectable. Still no comments on Riddick Bowe. Could JQ have beaten him? Hell no. Bowe would take Jerry's shots and laugh. Or most of them -- yeah, Jerry might have put him away, but I would have bet on Bowe.

[6/10/05 05:20:53 AM]Massimo |Roma|4||10|Gino--

From my personal experience, Roma is not a particularly violent city. You only (or just) must be carefully when there is an important soccer game (especially Roma-Lazio or Roma-Juventus). All you have to do is staying away from the Stadium. A lot of people go to the stadium with the purpose of kicking policemen's ass and so on. On the other hand unfortunately Napoli is a pretty violent city: there are wars between Camorra gangs, thieves everywhere, guys driving too fast and respecting no rules etc. I would never live in Napoli. That's a real shame because (or as) without those problems Napoli would be a really lovably city, with great food (pizza and caffe' in particular), beautiful nature, the sea etc. I love (the) Napoletani (they are Italianni like me) but I don't like their mentality. They don't like working, they all believe in Horoscopies and San Gennaro and they are fatalist.
They believe in San Maradona also (or too). Firenze is one of the most beautiful cities I have ever seen. The problem in Firenze is there are a lot of gays, so you have to take care of your own ass.I don't know how many of you 230 millions Americans care about that, but that's the way I scored the second Ali'- Frazier
bout.1)EVEN2)ALI'
3)FRAZIER4)EVEN5)EVEN6)ALI'
7)FR
AZIER8) FRAZIER9) ALI'10) FRAZIER11) EVEN12) EVEN|
| 6/10/05 06:46:55 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | CORRECTION !ALI' WON ROUND 11 SO ALI-FRAZIER 2 WAS A DRAW IN MY BOOK ! THE JUDGE WHO SCORED IT 8-4 ALI' SHOULD GO IN JAIL ! |
| 6/10/05 08:20:40 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Gino: Whether or not Ali got into opponents heads we can't say for sure---but could surmise whether he did or not based on how they performed. Some guys fought angry and actually, anger/rage hurts a boxer much more than it helps. I think Ali's goal was to rile up his opponent and cause them to fight uncontrolled---he would then take advantage of their mistakes. Some guys fell for it and others didn't. Earnie Shavers seemed to keep his composure though Ali's superior skills, experience and stamina overcame Shavers power and determination. Quarry vs. Bowe? Both guys, at their best? Bowe would probably win because of physical superiority. Bowe is a much bigger man than even Ron Lyle. But the fact is, on most given nights, Bowe was NOT at his best. Quarry always came to fight, while Bowe looked unfocused and lethargic more often than he should have. Based on this belief, on MOST nights, I think Quarry would perform better. He might lose to Bowe on cuts, or he would beat Bowe by out hustling him and wanting it more. |
| 6/10/05 01:42:24 PM | Steve | na | na | 10 | whichwwGino, I was the one who wrote that Quarry's stare down was so fearsome and effective. I am probably incorrect about the purpose of Jerry's stare down tactics. I agree with Angelo and Patrick, it was not meant so much to scare the other guy, but to let the opponent know, "I'm not afraid of you and I'm going to hurt you!" I agree with Patrick and Angelo that it was some internal process Jerry went through to prepare himself. I gotta say, I'm not crazy about your references to Black and Hispanic fighters not fearing or respecting white fighters. As for your comments about, "the mean streets", Ali and Norton both grew up in middle class, hardworking families. I grew up in Camden, N.J., |
My experience in being around fighters of all races is once the bell rings there is no color, just an opponent in front of you who is trying to hurt you. Fighters in general are a special brotherhood who have mutual respect for other fighters regardless of what trash talking may take place and regardless what race the fighter is. They respect each other for putting their personal safety at risk. I think it is the press and the fans who bring up the race issue most of the time, not the fighters. Massimo, I didn't get a chance to speak to Toney or Kirk Johnson last night. Audley Harrison paced himself against Robert Davis, giving away some rounds but exploding in the seventh round to kayo Davis. Kirk Johnson dominated Yanqui Diaz but it was a somewhat sloppy fight with Johnson getting penalized for low blows and the end of the fight was due to an accidental head butt that caused a cut. Johnson won every round for a five round tech. decision. Malcolm Tann almost didn't make it out of the first round as he got caught with a big punch from Derek Bryant. But Tann rallied to win a unanim. dec. It was the best fight of the card, a lot of action. Also on the undercard, heavyweight prospect Travis Walker flattened opponent Carlton Johnson in 48 seconds. Walker caught him with a perfect left/right combo for a knockdown at the opening bell and he finished him with a combo for a second knockdown. It is a shame more of the card wasn't televised.

I didn't get a chance to speak to Toney or Johnson either (GREAT, first time in my life I use "either", I'm almost ready to settle to Los Angeles). Thanks for trying, next time! I read that Tyson called McBride "a bum". I don't think this was a smart behaviour. If he wins he has beaten a bum. On the other hand if he loses... I wonder, if he is in such a terrific shape, why does he weight 104 Kg? He is a little overweight, he should weight 100 Kg. He is in better shape than he was against Daniele Williams, but he is not in great shape.

I have just discovered that Kevin McBride wears a size 16 shoe, the same as Tim Duncan and Kareem Abdul Jabbar and 10 more than Roadscholarette (who, as everyone on this site knows, wears 6). Tyson is in trouble!

I have just discovered that Kevin McBride weighs in at 233 lbs... He is definitely not in great shape. He is the same height as Andre' was.

Tyson in 1

A few months back by accident I saw Kevin McBride fighting on one of the cable channels. He is one of the biggest bums I have seen in recent years. He is so bad that on a good Saturday night I think I could beat him. Anyone who pays money to see that fight has no value for money, especially when there is a free fight on HBO. Tyson will destroy this guy. And then the promoters will prop Tyson up again and more suckers will pay to see him fight someone else. Tyson is a joke and a cheap hustle. It's funny, now that it's time to say goodbye, Tyson has become polite and is saying hello to everyone. The man has no shame. Tyson is pulling the old Floyd Patterson routine from the late 1950's, he fighting white guys who can't fight. And we wonder why in the year 2005 boxing has less credibility than roller derby.

I couldn't agree with you more completely.

Guys, I agree, McBride is slow and easy to hit. The only way he wins is if he gets lucky. Funny in that if Tyson destroys this guy, some people will be impressed because McBride is a big guy, about 270 pounds. But the old saying,
"the bigger they are, the harder they fall" is fitting here.

A good bigger boxer will usually beat a good smaller man, but seldom are two fighters totally equally matched---and a good smaller man beats a big stiff every time. McBride is a big stiff. Tyson is short, but a heavy, hungry bulldog. This one might beн over by the time you get back to your easy chair with the Doritos.

Kevin Mc Bride is just another big bum! That scambooga, Tyson, should be ashamed of stepping into the ring with such a jerk! This Tyson-Mc Bride fight stinks, I could beat both these guys in the same night! I am the most talented fighter in the history of boxing! Joe Louis couldn't fight a bit! I have been wordl champion since I was 22, something that sucker Mc Bride can't even dream of! Let me tell you something straight brothers, without me the boxing game would be dead and buried. James "Lights out" Toney!

Hey James, I have lost about 20 pounds, now only 100 more to go and you will be able to run but you can't hide! Shocker, Tyson quits on his stool after six rounds! Sound familiar? If anyone saw it, what happened?

That small bum, Tyson, is the new Sonny Liston (a bum from the past). Kent, I won't fight you cause you are the closest friend I have in the world, but I would have beat you cause you are a big bum! Now it's time for Laila Ali vs Mike Tyson. If Mike beats Laila and then other 4 or 5 male bums all over the world, he can get a shot to the title. I gotta go now. Be good everyone, bums!

That small bum, Tyson, is the new Sonny Liston (a bum from the past). Kent, you're a big mouth? Paolo Vidoz is the new European Heavyweight Champion. He beat Timo Hoffman on points after having knocked him down in the sixth round. Timo had just fought a draw with Luan Krasniqi.

Hats off to Massimo. Massimo smelled a rat, while I (and some others here) were in denial. Massimo sensed that Tyson really was washed up, and was tricking us (again) and Massimo was right. Kudos to Massimo! Let's see, it wasn't a bum knee, it wasn't a long layoff, it wasn't a pre-fight argument with Robin Givens---it was an old, washed up has-been with no heart. The guy never had heart. At one time, he had a tremendous punch and he had a killer intimidation going for him. Buster Douglass did away with the intimidation factor forever, then the killer punch went away and all that's left is a has-been. I was actually afraid for George Foreman when there was talk of a Foreman-Tyson fight. I actually thought jolly old George Foreman could get hurt. You know what? If these guys faced off, Foreman would have literally destroyed Mike Tyson, even though he was much older. Foreman doesn't have quit in him at this point, and it seems as though all Tyson has is quit. Hmmm. . . . . wait a minute. . . . maybe I'm wrong. Maybe the real answer is that by a shocking coincidence, these guys Tyson has been fighting are truly great fighters---Danny Williams and Kevin McBride are the next generation of great heavyweights, we just didn't know it! Lennox Lewis was a great champion, so no surprise he destroyed Tyson. And by a miracle of a coincidence, they just happened to pick on Williams and McBride, who are just becoming truly great---the next Ali-Frazier will be Williams vs. McBride. Yeah, that's it---Tyson isn't finished yet, they just need to start him against an easier opponent than the great Kevin McBride or Danny Williams. What's Jimmy Ellis doing?

Oh well, another mistake on my part.

Max: Don't feel bad.
I'm fairly knowledgable about boxing and have called some fights when others didn't (picked Ali over Foreman, Leonard over Hagler, Pryor over Arguello, Hearns over Cuevas (not an upset, but many picked Pipino) so I'm not an idiot fan. But I admit to thinking Ali, at under 220, had a legitimate chance against Holmes---and the record shows that just cause you look like you can fight, doesn't mean there's any fight left in you. Ditto for Tyson. I watched his training for this bout, at least clips, and looked at his physique, and saw a guy fighting heavy, but solid, well conditioned weight---and as you get older, you get heavier, so I didn't think it would be a factor. Plus, I figured how important would an extra few pounds be when the fight would end in two minutes. Tyson, his camp and the media made a sucker out of me. I was taken for a ride, like many others. The "new" Tyson training and attitude made me think he had some juice left in him and could put together a few wins. Okay, I'm a dummy. I forgot that the guy has looked ridiculous in the ring for the last 10 years, biting and fouling cause he can't beat a decent fighter. Now, he can't beat a presumably not so decent fighter (club type, like Williams or McBride), so again he tries to foul his way to a win. Tyson is on empty. His punches didn't even seem to have an affect on McBride, and that's shocking to me. I figured if Tyson has anything left, at least he can score a surprise KO against a good fighter. Well I learned (or I should say, I RE-learned) that he can't score a surprise KO against an unranked opponent, so how in the world could he stun someone like Lennox Lewis? I honestly thought he'd KO Lennox Lewis. After seeing him lose to Williams, I blamed it on the knee. I made excuses for him, remembering the terror who ruled the division 15+ years ago. But put a fork in him, he's done.

| 6/12/05 11:55:30 AM | Massimo | Roma || 10 | Angelo |
---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 6/12/05 11:55:30 AM | Massimo | Roma || 10 | Angelo |Thanks for the hat off! I knew Tyson couldn't win, Mc Bride wears a shoe size 16, too much for Mike to handle! All jokes aside, what really impressed me was not the fact that Tyson lost to Lennox Lewis (or Tyson losing to Lennox Lewis), but the way he lost. Lennox literally played with him for almost the entire fight. I am very happy that Tyson lost. Now he is not going to take other punches and he will enjoy good health (or, at least, I hope so) for many years. Angelo, may you tell me please what happened in the Mc Bride-Tyson fight in detail? Did Mc Bride show any skills? I couldn't see the fight.Thanks.| 6/12/05 01:20:24 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca ||| kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | My friend bought the pay for view broadcast and he made a tape for me, which I just finished watching. Tyson didn't look that bad until the sixth round. He landed some hard body shots but didn't really connect with them to the head too much and it still seemed at any moment he could put together a combination to take McBride out of there. McBride also landed some hard shots but mostly he clinched. One thing I did notice is every round, McBride seemed to be connecting more, his game plan was to survive the early rounds and come on in the later rounds. I had McBride ahead after six rounds by one point as Tyson had a two point deduction for an intentional head butt, so Tyson was actually winning the fight on points in actual boxing, without the foul, the judges scores were similar. Tyson at one point, when McBride started landing more punches, tried to break McBride's arm like he did to Frans Botha and this is when he also head butted McBride. Near the end of the sixth and final round Tyson fell to the canvas, pushed down by McBride so it was a slip not a knockdown. Tyson just sat there, not wanting to get up. I could tell then that something was terribly wrong with him. But still him quitting surprised me because how can someone quit in a close fight, one that was still his to win? It is not that Tyson has no skills left, it is he has no heart to deal with any kind of adversity in the ring. When an opponent doesn't fall in a few minutes, he doesn't know what to do and apparently he never did have the heart. Remember when James Quick Tillis went the distance with Tyson before Tyson won the title? Tillis fought a defensive fight but counter punched enough to win about four out of the ten rounds, with Tyson winning the decision. In hindsight I think if Tillis would have been just a little bolder and just a little bit more offensive minded, he would have beaten young Tyson and exposed Tyson's lack of championship heart back then. There were times in that fight when Tyson looked utterly lost. Can you imagine what kind of fighter we would have if you could put Jerry Quarry's heart in Mike Tyson's body, unbeatable!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/12/05 02:07:32 PM</th>
<th>JIMMY DORSEY</th>
<th>VENTURA CALIFORNIA</th>
<th>RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>HI STEVE (AKA SHEMP) I'VE been off the site a while, JERRY QUARRY was officially beating Chuvalo 4-1-1, 4-1-1, 3-3, respectfully so if he could have and would have finished that bout, it's okay to say Jerry would have probably won at least a split decision, on round basis MADISON SQUARE GARDEN scoring system. Tyson did not surprise me, what big punchers did he ever beat? BOWE, MERCER, MORRISON, FOREMAN, MOORER ETC. OKAY lets say he would have ran rough shot over them all, and been favored to do so, I'd rather see him in there with a few gutsy punchers then say FRANK BRUNO, Again who was Mr. Tyson's big win?</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/12/05 04:55:46 PM</th>
<th>Bob Bumbera</th>
<th>NC</th>
<th>renfbera@aol.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I thought Tyson would flatten McBride in one round. Oh well... I had seen McBride fight once before and he is truly terrible. I'm fat, out of shape have a bad hip and a little arthritis in my hands and I still think I can whip his ass right now. Someone mentioned Tyson was shot when he came out of prison, I think that's a pretty fair statement. He has been fight on vapors for the last ten years and, you can see it in his most recent fights, just doesn't care anymore. As for Tyson taking anyone for a ride or trying to deceive people. Hell, he's just trying to make a buck, and if people want to pay 35-45 bucks to watch so he can rake in 5 or 6 million more power to him. Kent, I did see the Tillis fight and thought at times Tillis could have at least done some damage when, as you said Tyson looked lost in there. Another telling fight Tyson had was with Bonecrusher Smith. A mostly boring fight up until the 11 and 12 rounds when the Crusher finally threw some meaningful punches and hurt Tyson. If he had done that earlier in the fight we might not be talking about Tyson now.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/12/05 05:56:25 PM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>memories.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Tyson had a few really shining moments in his career. I still remember when he destroyed the strong Carl &quot;The Lie&quot; Williams in less than one round with an explosive left hook. That was the peak of his glory. I swear, in that very moment I thought he was the greatest of all times, the invincible. I thought he was going to retire undefeated. One fight later he lost to someone named Giacomo Douglas. Nowadays even my mother could whip his ass with no sweat.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/13/05 02:12:02 AM</th>
<th>Ed</th>
<th>Ciocero NY</th>
<th>Mooseygoop@aol.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Thanks for the rundown on the Tyson fight.. I trust your take on it more then the newspapers. What gives with these stiffs taking Tysons punches? Most of these type fighters are picked as opponents because they fold as soon as they're hit. You think Tysons power is gone too?</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/13/05 07:41:23 AM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Oh, how the mighty have fallen. You're dead-on about opponent selection---these guys have been KOed by lightly regarded competition and hand-picked to make Mike Tyson look like his game is back. Instead, he's ended up on the losing end, again. He landed punches---and didn't score a knockdown, much less a knockout. Early in his career, good fighters were folding when Tyson hit them with the same volley of punches he landed on McBride. I honestly believe James Douglas opened the door for everyone else by winning the mental game---Douglas figured something out---that Tyson is just a man, short for a heavyweight, never tested, winning on intimidation---the bully factor. Douglas thought to himself, why not me? I could win this. Instead of just trying to survive, or getting scared into an early KO like Spinks, Buster Douglas took the fight to Tyson. From that point forward, Tyson's edge has been pretty much gone. Before Douglas, Razor Ruddock wouldn't have fared well against Tyson. After Douglas though, Ruddock thought, why not me? And he almost won too. Holyfield, Lewis, Williams, McBride---the list goes on and on. When everyone in the schoolyard sees the bully get his ass whipped, suddenly he's not so scary anymore. I wonder if Tyson will fight again?

Well I see that everyone is eager to slam MIKE TYSON.Let's not overlook the fact that MIKE is way past his prime(16 or 17 years?) and he was at one time a real powerhouse, a great entertainer and I feel, one of the great heavyweights of modern times. He destroyed so many fighters back in the 80's(Holmes, Frazier, Williams, Berbick, Thomas, just to name a few) by way of knockout that he did seem invincible to most boxing fans.Fighters deteriorate, some quickly, some not so quickly, but they all go down ultimately, and sometimes not so graciously(ALI, FRAZIER, LISTON, FOREMAN, LOUIS, QUARRY, TYSON, just to name a few).If your head is not there, you won't succeed and MIKE has not been in the game psychologically for quite some time. This coupled with the fact that he is pushing 40 is what contributed to his ultimate demise. There aren't many heavyweights who got out in time but they all deserve some recognition and applause for the great moments they gave all of us in the ring.

It occurs to me that someone like Ron Cramner (in his prime, whatever that means) could take today's Tyson. How sad.

You know, landing some hard body shots but most of the shots to the head he landed were not the short powerful punches that take people out. McBride did a lot of holding and hitting in the clinches and leaning on Tyson, the weight advantage wore Tyson out. While I don't condone Tyson fouling, using the arm bar and the head butts, the referee continually let McBride get away with holding and hitting.But like I said in the earlier post, I had McBride slightly ahead because of the point deduction for the head butting. Two of the judges had Tyson slightly ahead, by one or two points, while the third judge favored McBride.My point is that Tyson's loss was mainly mental because what fighter quits in a close fight that he could likely win if he just sucks it up and guts it out? Tyson admitted to not having the desire or the stomach to fight anymore. In that the one thing that had kept Tyson centered mentally before, boxing, will not be a part of his life anymore but he may have actually finally found peace with himself. I hope this is the case.

It's not that I'm eager to slam Tyson, but exactly what makes him an all-time great? Was it the impressive KO win over Marvis Frazier? Was it the one round KO over terrified Cruiserweight Mike Spinks? The four round knockout over lightly trained and heavily aged Larry Holmes? Beating Trevor Berbick? Beating Robin Givens? The "greatness" we all saw early in Mike's career was really promise and potential, not greatness. Greatness is born when someone is challenged and overcomes the challenge, or is so great that they're never challenged and never lose. Instead, you have a guy who was a powerhouse who walked over questionable competition to build his resume. He did have some great and impressive wins. But when Douglas stood up to him, he crumbled. After that, Ruddock gave him all he could handle. Beyond that, Holyfield was superior. Beyond Holyfield, there's no reason to document it all. Lots of losses against the good, the bad and maybe the ugly too. Tyson was a POTENTIAL great. So was Greg Page. So was Tim Witherspoon. That's about where I rate him, with that group.
I have just listened to (on the Internet) "Night train" written (or just sang, I don't know) by a guy named Oscar Peterson (Sonny Liston's favorite song). It's a nice music, not bad at all, very suitable (dictionary, it means "adatta") for training. If I was a boxer, maybe I would train with "Night Train", just like Sonny used to do. I'd like to see more Sonny Liston's fights on TV. He was a great champion, but the only fights they show are those with Clay (no Muhammad Ali', Clay was his slave name and he is no longer a slave) and with Patterson.

Angelo, in the Pinklon Thomas fight, the first Frank Bruno fight, and the Tony Tucker fight, Tyson showed that he could at least overcome some adversity and still win and while none of these fighters are all time greats, they were legitimate world class fighters in any era, good opponents, capable of beating, on their best nights, an all time great. The Michael Spinks fight was also an impressive win because Tyson defeated a fighter who had beaten long time champion Larry Holmes.Tyson had a period where he could be considered for great status, no matter that the period didn't last long. I rate him about the top 20 of all time, no less than number 25.

Frank Bruno was NOT capable of beating an all-time great on a good night. That's ridiculous. Somehow, on his best night, I couldn't see Bruno finding a way to beat, for example, George Foreman, Muhammad Ali, Joe Louis, Larry Holmes---fill in the blanks. Frank Bruno? Pinklon Thomas and Tony Tucker? Names Kent, you're listing names. They were contenders of their era, pretty good fighters. I'll agree with you that Tucker made Tyson work for the win. But I don't think he made Tyson "overcome adversity." Horace Robinson made Gerry Cooney work for a win. That's what trial horses do. Joe Frazier made Muhammad Ali overcome adversity in Manilla. There's a gigantic difference. But your assessment of Tyson being Top 20, no lower than 25 isn't far off the mark. 20 year old Mike Tyson was an intimidator with power, speed, focus and most importantly, an abundance of confidence. Tyson was also smarter than people give him credit for---he knows boxing history, knows the heavyweights in particular. He wanted a place in boxing history books and he got it, though not the way he probably envisioned it 15 years ago. On any given night, Tyson could get someone good in trouble and finish them off with a furious exchange of punishment---he had leverage on his punches that spelled lights out for a lot of opponents. But when tested, really tested, he didn't have the extra intangible needed to elevate himself over the rest. Kent, Tyson could, on any given night, beat all except 5-10 heavyweights ever. But based on performance, consistency, record, etc., I'd put him no higher than 15 and maybe lower. He could probably beat someone like Frazier, but I'd hesitate to rank him higher than Frazier on an all-time list.

Kent, I respectfully disagree with you on your opinion of the top eighties fighters that were fed to Tyson during his heyday. They would not have been considered world class contenders in the seventies.Pinklon Thomas, Tony Tucker, Frank Bruno, Razer Ruddick, and, c'mon, Michael Spinks? Do you really think any of these guys, especially Michael Spinks, could whip Frazier, Norton, Quarry, Foreman? As for fighting through adversity in Tyson's fights, isn't that what he's supposed to do? Unless the fights were mismatches.

Kent, Angelo beat me to the post with the exact same opinion. I still think Quarry, Frazier, and Foreman would have had a better than even chance of beating Tyson at his best. Please don't say that Quarry caught Lyle or Shavers as they where coming up. The fact that they did so well after losing to Quarry, only reinforces my high opinion of Quarry.
greats, even on their best nights, but they all did provide Tyson with difficulties and Tyson was able to come out on top. I would also add Razor Ruddock to that group. Tyson might catch Frazier early but if not and Joe got to smokin full steam ahead, Tyson wouldn't have the heart to hang tough with Joe. I agree, Tyson is below Frazier on the all time list.

As far as TYSON'S opponents are concerned, who did he fight?? Well he fought most of the top guns of his era and put most of them away very decisively. Now I know many of us will say, but who did he fight??? Well who did FOREMAN fight...ALI & FRAZIER, who did FRAZIER fight...
ALI & FOREMAN, who did LISTON fight...PATTERSON & ALI, who did MARCIANO fight...LOUIS, CHARLES & WALCOTT, who did ALI fight...LISTON, FRAZIER & FOREMAN.

MOST champions have maybe 2 or 3 really big fights, with the balance being not much of a contest. TYSON fought a few big names...HOLMES(out of retirement, rusty, but LARRY was one of the all time greats in my opinion)...SPINKS(as stated, dethroned LARRY questionably, a fighter I never admired, yet he was champion) HOLYFIELD(both were over the hill when they met, with TYSON further over the hill than HOLYFIELD) and finally LEWIS, a fight which happened a decade too late, lucky for LENNOX unlucky for a washed up MIKE TYSON). We all know the outcomes of most of the above stated contests and of the group mentioned, ALI was the only one to defeat his three greatest opponents(honourable mention to MARCIANO). The problem with most of these guys is that they don't seem to know when to throw in the towel and it leaves them looking like bums quite often, through the eyes of boxing fans, but check out their victories on film, it's a healthier perspective.

Joey and Kent---your points are valid. Tyson in the 80's did fight whoever they put in front of him and did destroy them. He couldn't help it if the level of competition didn't measure up to the previous decade. The overlap in careers meant that Tyson, had he not been in jail, might have fought Lewis earlier or even Riddick Big Daddy Bowe---and these would have been interesting tests. But post-Douglas, I don't know how well Tyson would do. In fact, Kent is correct that Tyson did face some adversity against Ruddock and overcame it. But the same adversity against Bowe or Lewis? Maybe Tyson would have had more trouble. Logic says that the old Tyson could blow Lewis out with an early KO, but you never know, you just never know. Tyson seemed so invincible at one point, who could ever imagine the losses piling up late in his career? Hey, maybe it's not too late for Tyson vs. Bowe! They could call it "Loser Stays Retired" and write that into the contract!

Quarry had a decent chance against Tyson. Frazier was more of a volume pressure fighter than Tyson ever was. I think Tyson would lose to Quarry at any point post-Douglas. Before Douglas Tyson is a small favorite. Quarry dealt pretty well with this type of fighter.

Yes a fight with Lewis early in Tysons career would have been interesting, but if i remember right Tyson or his promoter paid millions to side step Lewis in the 90's. It was so Tyson could fight another opponent (Holyfield?) but it also indicated Tyson was reluctant to fight Lewis. Kent,I see your points about Tyson knocking off those contenders early in his career. It wasn't just that he beat them its how he beat them...with lightning fast punches and everyone on edge of there seat wondering when Tysons bomb would strike. A savage attack fighter like Tyson doesn't come along all that often and when one does people don't want to believe its over for them...Tyson had tons of faults but he gave me and millions of others plenty of thrills when he was the champ.
What can be honestly said is that Tyson was NEVER involved in really legendary fights, classic battles to watch over and over again. Joe Frazier had the 3 with Ali’, 2 with Bonavena, the first with QJ, the first with Ellis (a VERY enjoable fight to watch). I think his most exciting fights were the 2 with Ruddock, especially the first one. I thought Ruddock won the second one (but I saw it only once or twice back in 1991). He gave a lot to the boxing world between 1986 to 1991. Before 1986 I didn't even know who Mike Tyson was, after 1991 he fought once a year or even less and most of the times in feak fights against bums. After 1991 he essentially fool us all and all the boxing world around. Do you remember Tyson-Clifford or Tyson-Savarese or Tyson-Norris ? :-(

Jerry Quarry verses Tyson at his best makes me favor Tyson for his accurate punching. I see Jerry giving Tyson one hell of a battle but getting cut.

The post Douglas Tyson, Jerry all the way! I remember asking Mike Quarry the question about how Jerry would do against Tyson. Mike Q thought his brother would have beaten Tyson hands down. Mike Q was biased but he knows boxing, a real expert.

"Jerry Quarry verses Tyson with Tyson at his best makes me favor Tyson for his accurate punching. I see Jerry giving Tyson one hell of a battle but getting cut."Sorry KENT but with all due respect to JERRY, I think he would have gone down like a ton of bricks as would JOE FRAZIER and GEORGI. If you examine those early fights of TYSON'S, as stated previously, the hand speed, head movement, aggressive mind set and tremendous knockout power, the only top fighter of that era who could have taken TYSON pre '90, would have been ALI, '64-'67(just my personal opinion).

Joey, Frazier would have been vulnerable early to Tyson's onslaught but if he makes it out of the first two rounds and it gets to be a fight of wills, Frazier would prevail. If you mean Foreman by Georgio, it could very well be a slugfest like Foreman/Lyle, with both fighters going down more than once. Again, Tyson's mindset, which was always with him somewhere in the back of his mind but wasn't really tested in his prime as the opposition wasn't of the caliber of a George Foreman, would let him down. Joey, Jerry Quarry took one hell of a punch, shots by Shavers, Lyle, and Mac Foster, caught him right on the button. So he would hang tough with Tyson but his tender skin likely would let him down due to Tyson's precision punching. But as in Frazier, if he is still there after a few rounds and not cut, then Jerry would have a real shot at pulling off what would be considered an upset. Tyson was just not as mentally tough as Jerry was. If you think Jerry wasn't strong enough to hang with Tyson at his 200 pounds, consider that James Tillis at about 207, counter puncher but not the banger Jerry was and actually probably not as strong as Jerry was, hung tough with Tyson to go the distance right before Tyson first won the title. The key was Tillis was not afraid of Tyson and Jerry wouldn't have been either. Any fighter with of course some good skills would give Tyson a tough battle if he wasn't afraid. |
Tyson's precision punching. But as in Frazier, if he is still there after a few rounds and not cut, then Jerry would have a real shot at pulling off what would be considered an upset. Tyson was just not as mentally tough as Jerry was. If you think Jerry wasn't strong enough to hang with Tyson at his 200 pounds, consider that James Tillis at about 207, counter puncher but not the banger Jerry was and actually probably not as strong as Jerry was, hung tough with Tyson to go the distance right before Tyson first won the title. The key was Tillis was not afraid of Tyson and Jerry wouldn't have been either. Any fighter with of course some good skills would give Tyson a tough battle if he wasn't afraid.

Mike Tyson prime vs prime. Shorter fighters were at George's mercy for his sweeping uppercuts. Plus George was so much stronger in his base he would have pushed Tyson off with ease when he got to close. Foreman NEVER loses a fight to a slugger in the history of boxing in his prime. Prime is pre-Ali of course.

Prime vs. Prime, I couldn't see Foreman losing and in fact, Old Man Foreman might have a chance too. Quarry would be vulnerable to Tyson because of cuts and Frazier would be very vulnerable since he was a slow starter. Ali/Clay would outbox Tyson and maybe pitch a shutout. Holmes in his prime would avoid Tyson's big punch and pile up points with the jab--maybe end the fight like Douglas did against Tyson. There are plenty of heavyweights, mentioned above---RECENT heavyweights who I would favor against Tyson. I also think Liston and Marciano would have a chance. Tyson was a prodigy as a kid---and some puncher---but not an alltime great. He didn't ever measure up to the hype--didn't reach his potential. Massimo is right: Fighting once a year doesn't cut it. Tyson, early on, did things right and was on the fast track to greatness. But things went terribly wrong. Right now, my thinking is that history will not judge him well, as an individual or as a great boxer.

George Foreman destroys Mike Tyson prime vs prime. With all due respect to "GEORGIO", who did he beat...JOE FRAZIER. RON LYLE gave him a run for his money as did JIMMY YOUNG, neither of whom were big name fighters but both were worthy opponents, particularly LYLE. It gets back to the question that has been raised here on a number of occasions, WHO DID HE FIGHT?? Not only who did he fight, but who did he beat(I'm speaking of fighters in general now)? Who did LOUIS beat, who did MARCIANO beat, who did LISTON beat, who did ALI beat, who did FRAZIER beat, who did FOREMAN beat, who did HOLMES beat, who did TYSON beat...and we could add on the top contenders of the time...QUARRY, MACHEN, LYLE, SHAVERS, BONAVENA, CHUVALO, ELLIS just to name a few...

To the readers of this site, below is a copy of a letter sent to many U.S. Congressional leaders to begin TJQF's legislative campaign for this session:

American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, Incorporated
86 Fletcher Avenue, Mount Vernon, New York 10552, 914.664.4571, www.aaib.org

The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia, Incorporated, 549 10th Street, Northeast, Linton, Indiana 47441 812.847.4137, www.jerryquarry.com

The Honorable John McCain
United States Senate
Washington, DC 20210

Dear Senator McCain:

Below is the first in a series of letters concerning the past accomplishments and current positions of the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) and The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia. The purposes of these letters are to inform you concerning these items. The American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, Inc. (AAIB), founded by former heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano and Stephen B. Acunto in 1969. Thus it came into existence before the Foundation. Since its inception, the AAIB has relentlessly focused on the safety of boxers by promulgating information in a variety of ways. Additionally, Steve Acunto has been interviewed by television, radio and other sectors of the media relating to medical safety. Over the entire history of boxing, its proponents of reform had attended many hearings and supported many bills introduced to improve this important sport. History indicates that U.S. Senator Estes Kefauver introduced the first federal boxing bill in 1961 that Congress did not pass. In 1965 the U.S. Congressman Oren Harris introduced another bill. Concerning that legislation Stephen B. Acunto and Rocky Marciano went to Washington to testify in favor of its passage. Other people from the boxing community who testified included Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney, and Joe Louis. When Congress failed to pass this bill, Marciano and Acuento established the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, Inc. They then obtained a charter from the State of New York State shortly before the former champion’s tragic death in a plane crash. While Rocky Marciano has always been ranked as one of the greatest fighters who ever lived, the real fruition of his unique contribution to boxing has evolved through the special efforts of the AAIB, to include working in tandem with The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia (TJQF) while trying to improve boxing. If you want to provide feedback or ask questions concerning this letter or any other related subjects, I can be reached at ehnpsa@aol.com, 330.743.2898, or 142 Upland Ave., Youngstown, Ohio 44505. Furthermore Mr. Stephen Acunto, Sr., Co-Founder of the AAIB, and other individuals connected with that formidable organization, also stand ready, willing, and able to help with these legislative matters concerning this great sport. I am sincerely yours, GEORGE L. OTTO, BCD, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LICDC, LISW, MSUS, SAP Chief Counsel/Legislative Consultant Cc. Other members of the U.S. Congress in a brawl. He could take a punch and could hit harder than my mother. Cassius Clay (he wasn't Muhamad Ali' yet, he still had his slave name) outboxed and outquicked him in their first fight. I think Liston was badly trained but still close to his prime in that fight, as he came from 3 straight first round KO wins (Westphal, Patterson twice).

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/16/05 05:05:13 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I have seen Davide Tua's comeback fight against Griffis. Tua looked good. I think Davide is probably the only real threat to Vitali Klitschko's title (I said &quot;probably&quot; because I was thinking of Kent Appel's best friend). Tua is a great finisher and can throw a flurry of devastating punches. Tua-Tyson around 1996 would have been another Ron-George! In a Vitali-Davide fight I would bet on Vitali cause he is so much wiler than Davide and has a longer rich, but this would be a dangerous fight for Vitali. It's really impressive how heavy David Tua is! He makes Mike Tyson look thin. What an explosive fighter Tua is!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/16/05 05:47:00 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I have seen the Liston-Harris fight, but that was not a fight, that was a walk in the park for Sonny.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/16/05 10:14:15 AM</th>
<th>Joey</th>
<th>Canada</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>MASSIMO, you should check out the LISTON/MACHEN fight and also LISTON/MARTIN(Sonny goes down for the count in that one).</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/16/05 11:08:47 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Carlo Liston was 72 years old when he lost against Martin! Anyway he was way ahead on points when he got hit! I think that Machen was afraid of Liston and fought to survive, a very defensive fight. It's not easy to look good when the other guy doesn't want to fight...</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/16/05 12:12:57 PM</th>
<th>Theodore</th>
<th>San Jose</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Everyone seems to think that the decade of the 70s was the high-water mark for the heavyweights. However, my feeling is that this perception is based more on the events surrounding the major fights of the 70s rather than the fighters themselves being any more gifted than the fighters of other eras. Leading up to the &quot;Fight of the Century&quot; (Ali-Frazier I), you had two undefeated champions. Although both fighters had faced many top ten challengers (same as Tyson did in his heyday), only Liston as an opponent might have been considered to be exceptional. What made the fight so interesting to not only boxing fans, but to virtually everyone at the time, was the fact that the loud-mouthed draft-dodger Ali represented the anti-Vietnam war crowd, and Frazier represented the conservative red-neck crowd. The country was in turmoil from the war and these two fighters became symbols. Anyone who is old enough to remember, remembers that the fight was played in movie theatres for months after it had already taken place. Joe, of course, won and was considered a great champion. But then only one fight later the Olympic Champ, Foreman, dribbled Frazier around the ring like a basketball for two rounds before the fight was stopped. So, now Foreman considered almost invincible. Meanwhile, Ali had lost to Ken Norton. As such, Norton was considered a worthy opponent for George. But George then easily crushed a terrified Norton in two rounds. At this point everybody is saying Foreman is greatest ever, and people don't want Ali to fight him because they're afraid he'll kill Ali. Then when Ali beats Foreman, Ali is now raised to mythical status. Of course Foreman twenty years later became the oldest heavyweight champion at age 45. Hmmm....so, maybe Ali and Foreman were the greatest fighters ever. But wait!........Foreman relied on his punching power to regain the title, and punching power is the last thing to go. An in-prime Tyson may have been just as good as an in-prime Foreman or Ali. Actually boxing is a cruel sport and I don't know why I'm writing this stuff.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/16/05 12:16:08 PM</th>
<th>Fan</th>
<th>Fandom</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| I have seen many Liston fights. Whitehurst II, Bethea, Williams I, II, Harris, Machen, Westphal, Patterson I, II, Ali I, II, Zech, Bailey, Rush, McMurray, Clark, Scrap Johnson, Martin, Wepner. Liston was very similar to Tyson in terms of demeanor. They were both front-runners. Liston quit against Ali when things weren't going right, he fouled against Machen when Eddie put up a good fight. They both used intimidation, but when that didn't work they turned on themselves and showed they were both mentally weak. The one time Liston made a stand was against Williams the first go. Cleve threw one of the most beautiful triple left hooks I have ever seen. Liston was hurt and composed himself and came back later that round. Sonny would be a favorite over Tyson for me, but either one of them could wilt when faced with real pressure.

|6/16/05 01:18:57 PM|Massimo |Roma||4||||10|Could wilt ?!?!?! I didn't know that "wilt" was a verb ! I thought it only was the name of the greatest champion in sport history: WILT CHAMBERLAIN !|
|6/16/05 01:56:06 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Fan-You missed two of Liston's most important fights...Those against Mike De John and Zora Folley. What happened in the Liston-Bethea fight ? I know that Sonny won in 1 round but I don't know the details. Wayne Bethea was a tough guy who knocked Franco De Piccoli out in 4 in Italia (probably Roma) in 1963. His brother, Tom Bethea, was knocked out by Nino Benvenuti (an Italiano guy). Thanks.|
|6/16/05 04:05:27 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com||||10|There is no film of Liston-Folley or Liston-DeJohn. What I remember about the articles about those are interesting though. I guess Liston was having trouble with Folley the first couple rounds then Folley complained he couldn't see in between rounds two and three (sound familiar?). Liston then swarmed at the beginning of round three and knocked Folley cold. Liston dominated DeJohn who really wasn't that good fo fighter. I have Dejohn vs Hunter and Dejohn vs Chuvalo. Big Mike could wallop, but other than that didn't have a good chin or any other plus skills.|
|6/16/05 08:36:36 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Massimo---I wonder if that was the same Tom Bethea (Tom "THE BOMB" Bethea) who was beaten by Michael Spinks, early in Spinks' pro career?Regarding Liston, I've seen a few of his fights---believe it or not, one that impressed me was his last---against Chuck Wepner. Why? Liston was probably old enough to be Wepner's father, but he still had that jab working and went the distance---getting a nice win. Liston showed stamina and still demonstrated some of the skills that made him a champion years earlier. Not to revisit a sore subject, but if somehow, some way, Liston and Frazier would have crossed paths in the mid to late 60's (say 66-68), I think the outcome would be in question. Frazier, the younger guy, would be favored, but if Liston got out of the gate fast (like Quarry did against Frazier) Joe might have been iced by the old timer. Kent, you're the go-to guy for all the reasons Frazier didn't happen to meet all the usual suspects---knockout artists, power punchers, guys who gave better than they took---what kept him from meeting Sonny in this period? Did Sonny lose one of the years so that made the fight too uninteresting to sell tickets? Was Frazier too young in '66 to fight the dangerous big bad wolf? Was he too busy in '68 and waiting in line for the Jets-Colts game in '69?|
|6/16/05 09:35:09 PM|Steve|na||na||||10|Joey,I haven't watched any of Tyson's earlier fights lately,so I'm just posting from memory.He was a monster to behold,upper body movement,always throwing combos out of a crouch.Lightning fast hands,except for an occasional lazy follow up left hook.He had the ability to absorb a very hard single shot,as he did against Razor Ruddick,as long as he was in his rhythm,or game plan.Untill Buster Douglas,nobody had even attempted to through him off script.After that fight,he was a sitting duck for Hollyfield.Hollyfield got away with the same pushing off as Foreman did against Frazier.He pushed away any attempt to get in punching range,then landed punches off the seperations,just as Foreman did against Frazier.In this way ,he slowed Tyson up and controlled the pace of the fight.Tyson and Frazier where not highly adaptable to chances in thier style, or getting pushed back,which is illegal,and then getting hit with pinpoint jabs ,upercuts,and over hand rights.Joey,I respectfully disagree that Joe Frazier,Ron Lyle, and Jimmy Young where not big Angelo, why in the heck are you so angry about Joe Frazier's career? Leotis Martin finished off an already obscenely old Liston. Would Frazier, Quarry, and Foreman have to have taken turns beating that old guy up to be legitimate contenders to you? Your philosophy seems to be, that to be a great champion, you have to bend over backwards, make financial concessions, to make sure you beat everybody in the top 15 rankings.

Angelo, not to revisit a sore subject, but do you honestly think Liston had anything left after the first Ali fight, in what, 1966?

Hey Angelo, say what you will about the longevity of a career, but wow, Frazier sure had plenty left for Ali in the "Thrilla in Manilla", didn't he?

Massimo, I disagree with you about Eddie Machen. I watched him box and counterpunch his way through a loss to Liston. I also watched him box and hang on to a young Joe Frazier and survive for ten rounds. He gave Frazier the nickname, "Smokin Joe". He took a young Jerry Quarry to school. He was a pretty darn good little heavyweight.

I don't know much about this Tom Bethea. I have only seen a synthesis of his fight with Nino Benvenuti which Nino won with a great left hook in the eighth round. I agree that Eddie Machen was an EXCELLENT, if not GREAT, fighter of the 50's and 60s. His record was fascinating and amazing! I was referring to something Sonny Liston said about the fight about the way Eddie Machen fought. I have seen only a synthesis of the Liston-Machen fight and was pretty boring. Maybe the best performance of his life Ingemar Johansson knocked Machen out in 1 round.

Yesterday night I saw the Krasniquist-Withaker fight and it was impressive how easily Krasniquist dominated and eventually knocked Lance out cold! Lance "Mount or Goofi" Withaker is really a big guy. At 6'8" he is two inches wilter than Ernie Terrell and just once inch andree than Kent's friend from Boston and weighs 115 Kg. That fight showed me one more time that being big means nothing in boxing if you can't fight. Eddie Machen at 6', 190 lbs would have literally played with this bouncer! Now Krasniquist will fight Lamon Brewster for the WBO heavyweight title.

Joey, I respectfully disagree that Joe Frazier, Ron Lyle, and Jimmy Young were not big name fighters.

STEVE, I was suggesting that JOE FRAZIER was the only big name that GEORGE FOREMAN beat. LYLE and YOUNG were excellent fighters but when I refer to big names I can list them as follows; JOHNSON, DEMPSEY, LOUIS, MARCIANO, LISTON, ALI, FRAZIER, FOREMAN, HOLMES, TYSON, LEWIS (I'll include him) ... let me know guys if I left any out.

I'm not angry about Frazier's career---but just exposing the fact that many, many heavies with reputations as big hitters never ended up in the ring with him and I'm just curious why. All of us Ali fans have a little unfair anomousity toward Joe---I admit that---but I think pointing out these omissions from his fight schedule is totally fair and not based on anger. It just seems like so many of these guys we've discussed fought against eachother, but he managed to fight only two of them, Foreman and Ali, and had a combined record of 1-4. I believe Frazier does belong in elite company, but not top of the top, just because he had Ali's number (and was still 1-2 against him).
Steve: I agree. Ali's #1 status is by a whisker, not even by a nose. He lacked one-punch KO power—and hung around too long (later in his career—1976 and beyond, too many of his defenses against guys like Young, Shavers, Norton, etc. exposed how badly his skills had deteriorated). Still, he made up for the lack of true power by razor sharp, speed punching that took its toll on his opponents, getting him the knockout wins. His hand and foot speed and coordination, head movement, rock solid chin, strategic ability, heart—these all added up to an almost unbeatable and nearly complete package. He had nice size and weight—and most importantly, took all comers. He fought often and didn't duck the best—tack on clever boxers like Jimmy Young and Jimmy Ellis, all-time KO artists like Shavers and Foreman and the guys in between like Quarry, Frazier and Norton. He had an amazingly long career (again, too long). With all this said, I still think someone like Larry Holmes is mighty close to being even with Ali. Joe Louis? Right there. Marciano? Undefeated record, a buzzsaw with a tough chin, like Frazier, who would charge Ali and pressure him relentlessly, like Frazier did. Still, for sheer entertainment value, I'd take Ali over anybody else.

I also rate Ali'(or Cassius Marcellus Clay) as the n.1 (whatever that means exactly) essentially because he beat Foreman. If Ali' and Foreman had never fought each other or if George had beaten him, I would still rate The Liousville Lip as a great champion, but not the greatest. He couldn't manage to dominate Frazier, Norton, Cooper, Chuvalo, Mac Foster, Shavers, the strong but clumsy Bonavena, Doug Jones, Billy Daniels and many others.

Angelo and Massimo the shamless wife stealing Italian womanizer. First, I find myself in the weird position of defending Ali. Massimo, he did defeat all the names you put out there. Sometimes very close wins, but eventually he defeated every top fighter put in front of him in his prime years. Angelo, your correct, he hurt his own legacy of greatness by staying around way, way too long. Angelo, Just so you and I understand each other, I would have loved to have seen Jerry Quarry tear both Ali and Frazier's head's off!

Massimo, ALI beat LISTON twice, FRAZIER twice and FOREMAN to regain the heavyweight championship. The other fighters you mentioned were all pretty much top ranked fighters... he beat them all, some more than once. Personally I would rate ALI as the "GREATEST HEAVYWEIGHT OF ALL TIME". His speed, heart, mental toughness, ring presence and personality all contributed to his very unique place in boxing history. I agree with the others that he stayed on way to long and should have pulled the plug after the FOREMAN fight. Later in his career he became less credible fighting guys like Webner, Dunn etc. Losing the title to Leon Spinks was a clear sign that this guy was well beyond his prime. For all the good he did in the world of heavyweight boxing, he also damaged it somewhat by hanging around and clowning around. But he was, in my opinion, the greatest heavyweight champion the world has seen to date.

Maybe I can't explain myself clearly enough in English, but I said (or, at least, I meant to say) that I rate Ali' as the N.1, the greatest of all times. I was trying to say that to (or for) me the Foreman-Ali' fight was a turning point, probably the most important fight of all times. Ali' won it and so I rank him as the N.1. After all Foreman had trashed people like Frazier, Chuvalo and Norton. But without that huge win in his resume (or record), I'm not sure Ali' would be worth of the N.1 ranking. Foreman beat Frazier, Chuvalo and Norton much more Joey, I like your list of great fighters, even if it is a little hard to judge guys from too far back. Dempsey vs Hollyfield or Frazier, who knows? I disagree with you on two of your picks. Tyson was only great until he ran into Douglas, and especially Hollyfield. Hollyfield clearly belongs ahead of Tyson on anybody's list. I also disagree with your choice of Lennox Lewis. He got his head handed to him by two average fighters. Why don't you give Hollyfield at least top ten or fifteen respect?

If it weren't for the fact that Ali beat him in their one and only fight, I'd rate Foreman as the greatest of all time. Joe Louis was a small heavyweight. Foreman would have crushed Louis quickly and Ali would have outboxed him Louis. Larry Holmes? Holmes lost to a light heavy (Spinks) twice for chrissake. He barely beat an over-the-hill Norton.

Ted: Holmes beat the CHAMPION Norton, far, far from an over the hill Norton. Norton had just beaten Jimmy Young, who had just beaten George Foreman and Ron Lyle. Norton had also given a good account of himself against Ali (I believe) less than two years earlier. Young Larry Holmes beat an in-prime Norton in a thrilling fight—one for the ages. Holmes also beat tough Earnie Shavers twice and proceeded to beat every other relevant fighter of the era, except for maybe John Tate, who was iced by Weaver (who Holmes beat). As for the "losses" to Michael Spinks, give me a break. I'm as big an Ali fan as you're going to meet—but Ted, Ali's wins over Jimmy Young and Norton at Yankee Stadium were not nearly as impressive as Holmes' two losses to Spinks—especially the rematch, that Holmes clearly won. And in the first fight, I'm sorry, but Spinks performance should have never unseated a Champion. I'm not much for conspiracies, but I've got to wonder if protecting Rocky Marciano's legacy had anything to do with Holmes being robbed? Holmes was a hell of a fighter.

Ted: Holmes beat the CHAMPION Norton, far, far from an over the hill Norton. Norton had just beaten Jimmy Young, who had just beaten George Foreman and Ron Lyle. Norton had also given a good account of himself against Ali (I believe) less than two years earlier. Young Larry Holmes beat an in-prime Norton in a thrilling fight—one for the ages. Holmes also beat tough Earnie Shavers twice and proceeded to beat every other relevant fighter of the era, except for maybe John Tate, who was iced by Weaver (who Holmes beat). As for the "losses" to Michael Spinks, give me a break. I'm as big an Ali fan as you're going to meet—but Ted, Ali's wins over Jimmy Young and Norton at Yankee Stadium were not nearly as impressive as Holmes' two losses to Spinks—especially the rematch, that Holmes clearly won. And in the first fight, I'm sorry, but Spinks performance should have never unseated a Champion. I'm not much for conspiracies, but I've got to wonder if protecting Rocky Marciano's legacy had anything to do with Holmes being robbed? Holmes was a hell of a fighter.

Massimo: You're correct in saying that Ali's win over Foreman cemented Ali as the greatest. The fact is, this guy found creative ways to upset Liston and Foreman, found almost super-human courage to gut it out against Frazier in Manilla, absorbed ridiculous punches against Earnie Shavers, but was full of vigor at the end of the fight while Shavers barely held on (Ali won a unanimous decision—would have scored a KO if the fight lasted another 20 seconds). And Ali fooled Father Time by beating Spinks in the rematch, after fighting courageously against the much younger Spinks in the first fight, even though he was not in good shape. But you're right—it all goes back to beating Foreman. If Foreman won that fight, I'm not sure who would have beaten him, and when. Clearly, Norton and Frazier didn't belong in the ring with Foreman. I believe Foreman would have taken Shavers the way he took Lyle—in a slugfest. Jimmy Young might have never gotten the opportunity to fight Foreman if Foreman had remained Champion (remember, Young made a name for himself in the bout against Ali). Foreman could have held that title another five years. My belief is that the first guy to come along who would take him was Larry Holmes. A 1979 version of Holmes would outbox, outjab and outscore an aging Foreman in '79—I THINK!

STEVE, Holyfield had some great attributes. However, he wasn't always consistent in the ring and when he took out Tyson, Tyson was already well spent. When he drew with Lewis, I felt Lewis deserved the decision. The rematch, I felt Holyliefield outpointed Lewis but I guess I didn't see it right. So Evander has always been puzzling for me.

As I have stated previously, Tyson was a very unique individual. When he was focused and at the top of his game, he was virtually unbeatable. He went through his opponents systematically with the greatest display of speed and knockout power.
He was defeated by BUSTER DOUGLAS, who performed magnificently that night, but my guess is that had they met again, TYSON would have taken him out. TYSON'S loss to DOUGLAS and his subsequent incarceration was the beginning of the end for him. He was never the same.
You are correct when you suggest that fighters going way back in time are difficult to judge relative to today's fighters. We can only view old fight films or if you are as old as KENT, then maybe a first hand account would be in order.
Re. LEWIS, I've never been a fan of LENNOX LEWIS. He grew up in KITCHENER ONTARIO, which is not too far from TORONTO. I saw him box a few times as an amateur up here. He was very big and powerful, even back then and as you know, went on to win a GOLD MEDAL for CANADA at the OLYMPICS. When he left CANADA and returned to ENGLAND (where he was born I believe) he started talking like an Englishman. I thought it was ingenuous and took a dislike to him. I was pleased when RAHMAN stiffened him. But as I look back on LEWIS, I would have to say he was quite an accomplished fighter. Not in the league of ALI, FOREMAN or HOLMES but he was up there. As far as being ko'd, it happens (LOUIS, LISTON, FRAZIER, FOREMAN, HOLMES, TYSON...) but LEWIS was able to come back and eventually retire without completely disgracing himself.

Ah, Joey, you wicked young man! How dare you suggest that Kent is old enough to give first hand accounts of those fights from the thirties, forties, and fifties! Although I do know what he looks like, and think I saw him in the crowd photo at the first Ali vs Liston fight. I don't think Kent is any older than, about sixty three or four. Joey, I think you owe Kent an apology. Kent probably won't find this post very amusing, since he seems to have been genitically deprived of a sense of humor.

I agree with Ted from San Jose' (with all the respect in the world, I wonder where this place is) regarding Ali' and Foreman. In Kinshasa Giorgio Eduardo Foreman wasted like a fool the ALL TIME GREATEST MATCH POINT !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! Kent, did you see the Willard-Johnson fight live? Was very hot that day, wasn't it?

Joey: I agree with you on Lewis—-I think he's a good ambassador for boxing and he did bring class back to the title—-but I've never held him in very high esteem and though he held his title and defended it well, there are holes in his resume. Also, you mention that even the greats have been KOed, but remember, Holmes loss to Tyson was when Holmes had been way past his prime and not even prepared 100% for that fight. Also, it happened to Lewis not once, but twice. As well, Lewis did not face Tyson and did not face Bowe, two of the best of his era—-even though they might have ducked him, we'll never really know. Holyfield did enough to win the second fight. Lewis frustrated me in those fights—-he was a much bigger man who fought so cautiously, it was boring to watch. I think it's fun to watch a smaller guy like Jimmy Young find a way to escape Foreman and pile up enough points to win—-but watching a big guy like Lewis tower over his opponent, but refuse to mix it up is annoying.

ESPN in Italia showed Lewis vs Dan Murphy, Lennox's eleventh professional fight. Although this Dan Murphy was a complete bum who absolutely refused to fight, it took 6 rounds for Lennox to stop this harmless guy. It is true, sometimes Lennox was too cautious in the ring. But, on the other hand, he was a true manual (or handbook) of boxing. He had one of the best uppercuts in the game, Manute Bol's reach and so a great jab, a right hand from hell (sorry, Slang) and a shoe size 15 1/2. As far as boxing skills go he was a fantastic and terrific boxer. He lacked one thing: a great chin. With Quarry's chin he would have been the greatest. Maybe he lacked a big heart too. Where the heck is Kent?
think it is safe to say that nobody has come along to take his place in the heavyweight division YET..., although the one KLITSCHKO who LEWIS busted open, seems to be a possibility.To compare fighters of different periods of time is difficult. It's kind of like comparing a MODEL T to a LAMBORGHINI. Everything evolves over time and what is considered state of the art today, will probably be nothing more than an obsolete remnant from the past 10 years later.So I feel that the legitimate champions of the past and present were all great; some were greater than others, but each in his own time was the greatest.

Hey youse, Smokin Joe would whip Tyson's behind anytime he came near Philly. Is a joke that they are actually compared. Frazier beat Ali, Tyson beat Bums you follow?

By Jim Adamsjadams@courier-journal.comThe Courier-JournalA respected boxing advocacy group in New York is paying homage to Greg Page by using his name to promote boxing reform. "Greg's Law" is the name the nonprofit American Association for the Improvement of Boxing has given to its campaign for a federal law requiring all 50 states to use the same medical standards in licensing professional boxers. Stephen B. Acunto -- who along with Rocky Marciano co-founded the association in Mount Vernon, N.Y., in the 1960s -- is in his 80s and still carries the title of deputy commissioner of the New York State Athletic Commission. Boxing, Acunto says, needs a new vision. Congress passed bills in 1996 and 2000 setting some standards that states must meet -- the 1996 law, for example, requires an ambulance or medics with resuscitation equipment at every fight -- but Acunto said more needs to be done. "There's a link missing," he said, "and the link is to have mandatory standardization of physical examinations in every boxing commission in the country."

In New York, for example, all boxers must undergo multiple medical exams before being allowed to box for the first time, including a magnetic resonance imaging scan of the brain (MRI), an ophthalmologic exam, an electrocardiogram, a full physical and a blood test for HIV and hepatitis. In Kentucky, a boxer under age 40 can be licensed to fight after a percutaneous physical exam by a physician in the locker room just before a match. Such "mini-physicals" are the sole requirement to fight in at least a half-dozen other states, including Tennessee, West Virginia and Virginia. Bills already before Congress may provide a vehicle for accomplishing uniform medical requirements. Unlike other professional sports, boxing has no centralized governing body. It is regulated entirely by state commissions. But bills introduced in January in both the House and Senate would establish a three-member U.S. Boxing Commission, appointed by the president, to oversee the sport.
The bill's Senate sponsor, Arizona Republican John McCain, has been pushing such a step for years. Once a boxer, McCain has argued that fighters are vulnerable as "the least educated and most exploited athletes in our nation" and that the sport has been plagued by "fraud, corruption and ineffective regulation." His current bill is nearly identical to one he sponsored and successfully guided through the Senate in 2004, only to see it die in the House, where Republican leaders have balked at the idea of federal regulation of boxing.

Under McCain's bill, the national commission would license all professional boxers and maintain a medical registry of them. It also would "promulgate uniform standards for professional boxing" and "enhance physical, medical, financial and other safeguards" to protect professional boxers, the bill says. The federal commission would have jurisdiction over all professional boxing, but would leave regulation of most fights to state commissions. The bill cleared the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science and Transportation in March.

George Otto, general counsel for the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing and legislative representative for the Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistic Dementia, said both groups support the idea of a central, national authority for boxing. But both also believe that "anybody who turns a profit in a boxing match" should be considered a promoter of the fight and be held responsible for how it is staged, he said. That would include cable television networks that broadcast fights, and the casinos and hotels where they are held, Otto said. McCain has opposed that position, Otto said, and his bill does not include networks, hotels and casinos in the definition of a promoter.

However, his bill -- unlike its 2004 version -- provides for congressional hearings on how to define a promoter.

---

The knock on Lewis has been his supposedly weak chin. He got clocked by McCall and Rahman, both of whom are hard right hand punchers. Both times Lewis got up and was ready to continue when the ref waived the fight off. Lewis was in much better shape than Holmes was when he was knocked down by Shavers and Snipes. If the Holmes fights were held today they would have both been stopped by the more cautious refs we have today. In both cases, Rahman and McCall, I think Lewis should have been allowed to continue to defend his title. The outcome may have been much different in those fights if Lewis had to fight for his life as Holmes did.

---

Mr. Otto: Regarding Greg's Law, would the reforms now being discussed kept Greg Page from fighting on the night he was so seriously injured? Thanks for continuing to post here---the work you're doing will save lives.

---

Bob: I think it's an unfair comparison (Holmes knockdowns vs. Lewis' knockouts). First, Lennox Lewis probably wouldn't have survived either fight (Rahman or McCall) had they been allowed to continue. I don't think he got up ready to fight the way Holmes did against Shavers and Snipes. Also, in the comparison, Snipes and McCall are... probably similar in accomplishment—but Earnie Shavers is either the #1 or #2 all-time hardest puncher in boxing history. Rahman has a decent punch, but Bob, he's not close to Earnie Shavers in this respect. I think it's a bit of a cop-out to say that Holmes came back to win his fights and Lewis didn't—because the referee wouldn't let him. Also, if fights were still 15 rounds, I wonder if Lewis would be more successful or less successful? He was well conditioned, so maybe he would actually perform better in rounds 13-15??? But for my money, Holmes had the heart of a lion and Lewis, while very good, falls short of Holmes.

I don't think Lewis was ready to continue in the Rahman fight; look at his eyes, he was badly hurt, I could have finished him after that punch! Besides that, Lennox fought a poor fight from the beginning to the end. I think he was in slightly better condition in the Mc Call fight, but I still bet that Oliver (not Hardy but Mc Call) would have finished him.

Who is this new character "the Italian Stallon"? Is maybe Kent? What's your name? What's your name?

The idea that the 60s were best for heavyweight may be true but only marginally. When guys were hungry in the 30s there were many excellent heavyweights, too. Beyond what the gentleman said, I think the better 60s fighters looked even better to us was that for the first time, modern advertising and PR overwhelmed us in touting them. Remember how ABC-TV and Howard Cosell would get you believing for months and months that when Karl Mildenberger or Henry Cooper fought Ali, it would be a titanic struggle? What bullshit, but it was hard then not to believe it. But I think every decade had plenty of strong fighters in every division. Some decades better, some weaker. Got to go, will be back later.

What's a mug, Sir? I guess LA will wait for me a little bit yet (or more). I ain't ready yet!

Gino---I've never said the 60's were the best---I've said the 70's were the best decade for boxers and for heavies in particular. Ali, Foreman, Frazier, Norton, Holmes, Young, Lyle, Shavers---the champions and contenders were among the best ever. And beyond heavies? Duran, Leonard, Hearns, Hagler---true, some of their best fights were in the 80's, but they did start in the 70's.

Yo Adrian, I am not the Italian Stallion. I have been off line since Friday as I was out of town.

Hey Massimo, are you Jumpity Bruce?

Welcome back! We were starting to worry about you---Massimo thought you came in as The Italian Stallion. I thought you had it out with James Toney and were left for dead in a ditch somewhere. Glad you're okay. Lots happened while you were away, but to summarize: Who would win Tyson vs. Liston?
Warren Coolidge and many others, but I can't be Jumpity Bruce! There is only one Jumpity Bruce! For those who are interested, yesterday I found a very nice site about (or on) a very good (and probably great) fighter of the past. So if youse wanna see a warrior in action, www.sandromazzinghi.com

> 6/20/05 04:17:31 PM | Steve | na | na | 10 | OH, UH, Hi Kent, I guess your back as the voice of reason. I just want you to know that all those insulting things I said about you while you where gone, well, I was just kidding. Angelo tried to take over the site as being the most fair and reasonable guy on the site, but I want you to know I fought him every inch of the way. |

> 6/20/05 04:27:30 PM | Steve | na | na | 10 | Kent, how do we know it's really even you? You could be James Toney just trying to pretend to be you, to cover up the fact that you finally asked one too many insulting questions? Think about that before you just decide to take off from this site again whenever you feel like it without an explanation! C'mon, say something that proves your really Kent! |

> 6/20/05 05:13:28 PM | Steve | na | na | 10 | Hey, Mr. so called Kent. I think Angelo is a hard headed Ali fan who refuses to give Joe Frazier his due respect for taking Ali to his very limit for 44 rounds. What do you think? |

> 6/20/05 05:30:02 PM | Steve | NA | na | 10 | Angelo, even though I know you didn't ask me for my opinion, I think Liston, at his very best, mind you, would have slowed up Tyson in the first round with his unnaturally long and devastating jab, then knocked him out in the second round with those surprisingly fast, powerfull combinations that everyone who hasn't watched a Sonny Liston fight in his prime forgets about. |

> 6/20/05 06:21:38 PM | Massimo | Roma | legends.com | 10 | I know a way for Kent to show he really is Kent! Tell us the Lakers' Roster for the season 1968-69. I'm sure Giacomo Toney doesn't know those bums! Liston vs Tyson? Ah, ah, ah, ah!! More seriously, what about Laila Ali' vs Tyson? Laila is still undefeated! |

> 6/20/05 07:23:03 PM | Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com | 10 | Angelo, I would never say that Lewis was better than Holmes... I don't think he is. Holmes showed his heart plenty of times, Lewis really never did. Holmes, in my opinion, is top five all time. Lewis doesn't make the list. We will never know if Lewis had the heart or the ability to come back from being knocked silly, maybe he didn't. I do know this though, if the Holmes - Snipes or the 2nd Shavers fight had been fought last night, Holmes would not be champion today. |

> 6/20/05 08:57:57 PM | Angelo | DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Bob: You might be right about the TKO point--- I'd have to watch those fights again. It's true that referees would let the fight go longer back then, and give the guys a chance to fight their way out of trouble or tie up the opponent to make it to the end of the round. Now, thankfully, they're quicker on the trigger to end the fight and in the long run, this is far better for the health and safety of the boxers. I haven't seen the Holmes-Snipes fight since the night it happened, so my recollection is foggy. But I do remember clearly Holmes being on another planet after Shavers tagged him. I don't have any clue how he got up from that punch and survived long enough to turn the fight back in his favor. Sometimes it takes adversity to prove how good you really are--- and Holmes proved it many times in his career. Steve: I'm very surprised at your analysis of the fantasy match between Tyson and Liston. I think Liston could take him, but I don't know if it would be that easy. I think that if the fight really ended in two rounds, Tyson would have at least mixed it up enough to power his way in on Liston a couple times and land some hard punches. To think that Liston would measure in the first round, then KO Tyson in the second round makes it seem as though Tyson was a spectator, not in the fight. I could see Liston winning in the middle rounds--- possibly just having more will than Tyson. |

> 6/20/05 11:25:43 PM | Kent | Murietta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Massimo, 68/69 Lakers: Wilt Chamberlain at center, Elgin Baylor and Tommy Hawkins at forward, Jerry West at guard, Johnny Egan at guard. Off the bench: Mel Counts
at center and sometimes forward, Keith Erickson at guard and sometimes forward, Bill Hewit at forward and others I can't remember. Chamberlain, Baylor, and West played the most with the others coming in and out a lot. Chamberlain, Baylor, and West played the most with the others coming in and out a lot. Chamberlain, Baylor, and West played the most with the others coming in and out a lot. Chamberlain, Baylor, and West played the most with the others coming in and out a lot.| 6/21/05 02:21:48 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Steve | &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt; Now you have the proof... He is the true Kent! Kent, another way of saying the same thing is: &lt;br&gt; 68-69 Lakers: Wilt and bums...| 6/21/05 07:15:00 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Massimo: Jerry West was no bum! He might not have gotten 20000 women like Wilt did, but he was a clutch shooter!| 6/21/05 07:37:22 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Angelo &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt; Everyone was a bum in comparison to Wilton Norman Chamberlain, no matter how great he was! &lt;br&gt; Over 50 points average in a season. That's superhuman... He would have knocked Muhammad Ali out cold in less than 30 seconds... I don't think Wilt got 20000 women, I think he was somewhere between 16755 and 18210. Elgin Baylor was once a guest in the White Shadow TV show. He was introduced as one of the greatest players of all times! But still he was a bum in comparison to Wilt...| 6/21/05 12:10:13 PM | Joey | Canada | aol | 10 | "I could see Liston winning in the middle rounds—possibly just having more will than Tyson." &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt; Oh I don't know about that ANGELO, LISTON didn't show much will in his two fights against ALI... I think he may have been as much or more of a quitter than TYSON... | 6/21/05 01:22:53 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Joey: That's interesting---but I think Liston showed some quit against Ali (first fight) because he was being outboxed, not outpunched (Similar to Duran-Leonard II., it was starting to become somewhat embarrassing.). Liston-Tyson would be a punchfest, Liston might control it with his jab and I think Tyson has shown that when things aren't going his way, he'll foul or quit. Granted, when Tyson was younger, things ALWAYS went his way, so it wasn't a factor. But let's just say that Liston is "of higher caliber" than, say, Marvis Frazier. | 6/21/05 11:00:31 PM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Massimo, Wilt and bums? West and Baylor were all time greats and Mel Counts was listed at 7 feet tall and he may have actually been as wilt as Wilt. I also remember hearing Counts had a size 17 shoe size! Counts was also able to play forward in addition to being a back up center to Wilt and he had a good medium range jump shot.| 6/22/05 02:44:52 AM | Massimo | Roma, but not forever | 4 | 10 | Kent &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt; Yeah, man, you're right, that one was a very good team indeed! A team composed by at least 4 stars, where Wilt was the big dog. Mel Counts, another legend, 17 is indeed a very respectable shoe size, the same as Ian Thorpe and Primo Carnera! I wonder how good were the Boston Celtics that season (they beat the Lakers 4-3). Bill Russell, Coolidge's conqueror, was there! But a tragic doubt is crossing my mind... Was Wilt only 7 feet wilt? Another midget? | 6/22/05 10:20:11 AM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Massimo, Counts was not a great player but he was a good team player, he hustled a lot and he was adaptable because a lot of big men in basketball have been centers their whole lives and one that can also play at the forward position is valuable. It is more common today but back in Wilt's and Counts' days, they didn't have many players that size who could do it. &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt; Wilt was at least 7'1" wilt, I was saying Counts might have been taller than 7 feet tall, maybe one inch taller. He seemed the same size as Wilt standing next to each other. &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt; The Celtics of that year were getting older but they still knew how to play as a team and they pulled off the win. &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt; It was the moment in the last game when Wilt hurt his knee in the last quarter and he asked to be taken out with the Lakers behind by about ten points. Wilt, with a few minutes to play left in the game, then asked the coach to go back in as the injury wasn't serious but the coach felt they could win without him, in fact Counts hit a shot that pulled the Lakers to within one point but they lost by two points. &lt;br&gt;&lt;br&gt; The coach let his personal feelings, he didn't like Wilt, get in his way and he wanted to prove they could win without him. But there is no way someone like Wilt Chamberlain should not have been in the game if he was able to go back in with the championship on the line.

I think this coach was a bad ass and a nut at the same time !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Talking about Wilt is never a waste of time! Wilt was Wilt, all the rest is in the shadow...

Hi everyone. I have been away from a computer for weeks and that's why I haven't emailed. I personally think that if Ali was not in Frazier's resume, that Joe's career would be thought of in terms of a Jersey Joe Walcott or similar.

In defense of Frazier, you also have Joe's wins against Jerry Quarry. He beat a quicker, young JQ and then an older/more powerful JQ who was on an impressive winning streak. Add to that, Joe's first win over Jimmy Ellis, who was a slick boxer. Frazier KOed him impressively (The second win over Ellis was meaningless, as Ellis had only won one of his last six fights and the rematch with Frazier was ridiculous for both fighters.). Hauser might have been better served to do what WE do: Talk about the Frazier fights that for some reason, NEVER HAPPENED---the list of power punching contenders of the 60's and 70's who are missing from his resume. But Hauser's real point is well taken---doesn't Frazier understand that without Ali, he would be a somewhat forgotten athlete, known only to boxing purists? Because of Ali, Frazier is a well known ATHLETE and an icon of his era---known to sports fans in general and not just boxing fans. Ali made Frazier richer and better known and yet Frazier has this odd resentment. The insults that sold tickets---even the hurtful ones? Joe, it was only words, and it was 35 years ago. Get over it.
Oscar Bonavena was powerful enough to hurt Ali in the ninth round of their fight (and Cassius wasn't hurt too many times throughout his career. Probably he wasn't the puncher Ron Lyle was, but certainly could punch. Well, Joe beat him twice. George Chuvalo was another good puncher. Also, Frazier stopped in five Doug Jones, a guy who gave Ali one of the toughest fights of his career and almost knocked him down in the first round. But I agree that Frazier never went after the big punchers just to prove himself throughout (or even during) his career; or maybe this happened only (or just) once, when he fought Giorgio Foreman the second time. | Jumbo Cummings? Well, one thing that can't be debated is that Frazier earned immortality by beating Ali in the first fight—the knockdown being the exclamation point on his win. And he cemented his immortality in the loss to Ali in Manilla. One thing it isn't fair to accuse Frazier of is being a quitter. He gutted it out against Ali and would have answered the bell for the 15th if his corner didn't wisely overrule him. Against Foreman, he would have continued to climb up off the canvas to get pummeled some more. In this regard, he was the antithesis of Tyson. Frazier didn't quit and didn't resort to fouling when things weren't going his way. | I was watching tv last night Frazier-Quarry I. That fight was 36 years ago tonight, I attended that fight. Regarding Tom Hauser's remarks about Joe Frazier, maybe true maybe not true. That's for the reader to decide. But, Tom Hauser the good writer that he is, is also Ali's official biographer. Even saying that, Tom Hauser gives more credit to Joe Frazier talent than any of the Ali sycophants I see on this board. Fellows, you can write all the nonsense you want about Joe Frazier. At times even pretending that you are complimenting Frazier when you are just being condescending toward Frazier. The only people you are convincing are yourselves. Which really isn't necessary. You guys are anti Joe Frazier koolaid drinkers to begin with. | Some of you guys just love to continue to be critical of Joe Frazier but remember except for Ron Lyle (I am talking about the prime Foreman in the first phase of his career), Foreman didn't face pure punchers either and that is fine as fights are made that are attractive to the fans and to make people money and that is usually why fights happen. But nobody is critical of Foreman for this. We don't see the names Mac Foster, Earnie Shavers, Sonny Liston, or Cleveland Williams (who were both still around when George was coming up) on his record either. Timing is also a consideration why some fights didn't happen. Consider Shavers, before 1973 he hadn't faced anyone of note and he was an unproven commodity, the public was not calling for a Frazier/Shavers fight because of this. He in fact had a knockout loss to Ron Stander! The guy Frazier fought who some here said didn't deserve a title shot. It would seem he deserved to fight Frazier more than Shavers at that time. Shavers had two important wins in 1973, knockouts over Jimmy Ellis and Jimmy Young but late in 1973 he suffered a first round knockout loss to Jerry Quarry and 1974 was a bad year for Shavers in which he had a decision loss to the immortal Bob Stallings and a draw with Young in a rematch and he dropped from the ratings. Frazier during this time lost his title to Foreman, defeated Joe Bugner, lost a rematch to Ali, and defeated the victor over Shavers, Quarry. The only time period where a Shavers match with Frazier might have been attractive was briefly in 1973 but that didn't last long because of his loss to Quarry and his bad year in 1974. Frazier for his part was trying to get a rematch with Ali, which he got in early 1974. So which fight would he go after? An Ali fight or a Shavers fight? No contest there as anyone would take the Ali fight. Shavers climbed back up the ratings ladder, starting in 1975, the year in which Frazier had his one last chance versus Ali.
But except for that, by the time Shavers was a valuable commodity, Frazier had faded from the scene. Here is a top ten list I found in a sports almanac that shows the top ten contenders from Ring Magazine as of January 1, 1975: (champion Muhammad Ali) contenders-1. George Foreman 2. Joe Frazier 3. Ron Lyle 4. Joe Bugner 5. Oscar Bonevena 6. Ken Norton 7. Jerry Quarry 8. Chuch Wepner 9. Henry Clark 10. Larry Middleton. No Earnie Shavers on this list? No, he didn't deserve a ranking at that time. Frazier during the period preceding the above rankings fought four fighters on this list, Foreman, Ali, Quarry, and Bugner. He was not taking it easy. Shavers didn't deserve a fight with Frazier! I can go through all of the people some here say Frazier avoided and make cases as to why fights didn't happen. Mostly it is the time periods involved and whether the public was calling for them and for the most part, the public wasn't calling for them. Just making a general statement such as Frazier avoided all sluggers without going over the facts of each case doesn't prove anything. I don't really want to get into a long drawn out debate about this again but refute my analysis of the Shavers situation. I don't think anyone can.

| 6/23/05 01:51:56 PM | Joey | Canada | [aol] | 10 | JOE FRAZIER...let's not allow JOE'S personal gripe with ALI to tarnish his place in boxing history. JOE was one of the greats, perhaps not the greatest, but certainly one of the greats. He handed ALI his first defeat(granted ALI took him on too soon and I feel, did not take the fight very seriously), fought some top notch contenders(QUARRY, CHUVALO, ELLIS) and lost the title to one of the biggest powerhouses in heavyweight boxing GEORGE FOREMAN. The ALI, FRAZIER, FOREMAN combination made boxing what it was in the 70's. We wouldn't have had the build up to the full circle with ALI defeating FOREMAN for the title without FRAZIER defeating ALI, FRAZIER being defeated by FOREMAN and finally ALI defeating FOREMAN. I don't see how FRAZIER ducked the top shelf fighters of that era. He fought ALI 3 times, FOREMAN twice, QUARRY twice. All three beat RON LYLE, ALI beat LISTON twice, ALI & QUARRY both defeated SHAVERS. Let's not base FRAZIER's career on "THE SUNSHINE SHOWDOWN" with FOREMAN. |

| 6/23/05 02:04:46 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Kent, let's try a different approach then. For arguments sake, I'll give you the point that Shavers "wasn't worthy" of a fight with FORMER Champion Frazier---and besides, as you said "the public didn't want it." Were Ron Stander and Terry Daniels worthy of Championship bouts with CHAMPION Frazier? Were these fights the ones that "everyone wanted to see?" Was Jimmy Ellis "worthy" in 1974, riding an insane, nearly winless streak into the "Austraillan Dream Match" with Jupiter Joe? You're better than F. Lee Bailey at making some nice sounding arguments, so if somehow, someway, you can show that a guy who was 1-4-1 in six fights deserved a shot at Frazier more than Shavers did, answer this: Was the public crying out for Jimmy Ellis-Joe Frazier II., "The Rumble Down Under?" Okay, it was a "tune-up" for Frazier against an Ali clone, we've all heard that. And there was no Frazier-Norton match because they liked eachother, we've heard that too. There was no Lyle-Frazier match because, I guess, the timing wasn't right. Young and Frazier didn't fight because they both loved Philadelphia and Tastykakes. First, Liston was too old and Frazier was too young, then Frazier was too young and Liston was too old, just a couple owls who passed in the night. Jeff Merrit was having a bad hair day. Wilt Chamberlain was a basketball player, Lucille Ball had a hit TV show and Merv Griffin was gay. And I've posted before that Frazier would have lost to Shavers and Lyle---and that was impulsive. I didn't think it through---it's easy to say Foreman beat Frazier so any slugger could, but in reality, Frazier WAS an accomplished heavyweight champ who was durable and who beat some very, very good fighters. So in retrospect, I might have been wrong to assert that Lyle and Shavers would take him out---but I stand by the assertion that at least one of these fights probably should have been made, and that a legacy is incomplete when some bigger names of the era don't appear on your resume. Say what you will about timing, wins and losses---as I've said before, they were all active and overlapped each other for about 6-7 years. They all seemed to fight each other at one point or another---and Frazier seems to be the only one who missed some of the biggest hitters. The other interesting match that never happened was Norton-Lyle and I truly believe that's a fight that Norton's handlers wouldn't allow. Look at the rankings through the years, and the bouts taking place---it just seems as though Norton and Frazier passed over dangerous foes biding time for Ali. I don't think Norton took on Mike Weaver or Leroy Jones either.

| 6/23/05 04:01:54 PM | Fan | Fandom | [Fan@Fandom.com] | 10 |
| 6/23/05 04:01:54 PM | Fan | Fandom | [Fan@Fandom.com] | 10 |

| 6/23/05 04:36:29 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | [funktron@yahoo.com] | 10 |
| 6/23/05 04:36:29 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | [funktron@yahoo.com] | 10 |

Fan: No, the world wasn't clamouring for Ali vs. Brian London or Holmes vs. Lorenzo Zanon. But here is the difference: Ali and Holmes might have fought the "soft touches" as you call them, but they also fought every single relevant fighter of their respective eras, both with title defenses and when they didn't hold the title. Ali and Holmes took all comers, no exceptions, and even fought each other when Ali should have been planning for grandchildren. Let's review: Ali took on Frazier three times, Norton three times, Quarry twice, Foreman, Shavers, Lyle, Young, Holmes, Liston twice and for Christ's sake, he even took on Antonio Inoki! Holmes fought Shavers twice, Norton, Weaver.EVERY heavyweight champ fought some soft touches. Here are some more |

| 6/23/05 04:43:00 PM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | [kentallenent@aol.com] | 10 |
| 6/23/05 04:43:00 PM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | [kentallenent@aol.com] | 10 |

Fan, Kent, Joey et al. Believe me I wasted enough time on this site arguing the merits of Joe Frazier without diminishing the accomplishments of Ali. The kool aid drinkers are unable to do this regarding Joe Frazier. They refuse to see duplicity in there own logic and fail to understand the most basic dynamics in handling a fighter and making matches. How can anybody boast about all the top fighters Ali fought, and fail to realize that is why he is in shape he is in today. His handlers made bad matches for him and kept him around to long.God bless Joe Fraziers managers. Frazier fought the TOP contenders of his era. Became Champion. And made a lot of money. Frazier takes great pleasure in seeing Ali stagger around with his hands shaking and not being able to talk. Joe glady takes the responsibility for a lot of Ali's bodily damage. If the kool aid drinkers resent Frazier for that. That is understandable. But don't try and pretend he was not a great fighter |

| 6/23/05 04:48:52 PM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | [kentallenent@aol.com] | 10 |
| 6/23/05 04:48:52 PM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | [kentallenent@aol.com] | 10 |

Fighters do take tune up fights to stay busy and stay sharp and that is what Frazier/Ellis 2, Ali/London, Foreman/Roman, etc, were. That still doesn't show that Shavers was a viable opponent for Frazier during the period when Frazier was still a champion or a top contender any more than other fighters. Frazier avoided all sluggers is just a blanket statement. Just because someone feels this is so just because Frazier didn't perform well verses Foreman, a pure slugger, doesn't mean the same thing would happen verses other pure sluggers. An example would be that while Jerry Quarry defeated both Shavers and Ron Lyle, it doesn't mean he would beat Foreman if they had fought. It would give Jerry a chance of winning because of styles but most people believe Foreman would have had the edge in this one. Shavers peaked after Frazier had faded from the scene and for that manner, so did Ron Lyle. That Ali fought so many fighters shows that often just having Ali on a card was a huge selling point just because he was such a huge draw no matter who he was fighting. As I have often said, Ali was the greatest because he did things other fighters didn't do and just because Frazier didn't measure up to him doesn't mean he wasn't great in his own way.

Funktron@yahoo.com

Kent/Forrest: We all know Frazier was a Champion and Forrest, as an Ali fan, I hate to see him in his current condition (with the same affliction those sluggers, Janet Reno and Micheal J. Fox have). It's hard for me to see Ali in this mummified state and I can honestly say that I'm happy that Joe Frazier is NOT in this condition. I wouldn't wish it on anyone. I haven't seen Frazier lately, but it was good to see him clowning around with Howard Stern a few years ago, still sharp and still having fun. Ali's penalty for the abuse his body took is probably his condition today. Frazier's penalty for NOT taking the fights Ali did is that he can't be talked about in the same context as Ali and some other GREAT Champions. Frazier was very good, but not at the highest level. Presumably, he's in better health because of it. I would gladly trade "super champion" status to still have good health at an older age. Hooray for Joe. But while I called him "immortal" for his fights with Ali, that's in a boxing insider context. To me at least, Ali, Louis, Holmes---they're on one level while guys like Frazier and Patterson, they're one rung down.

Forest - 'Dead Parrot' syndrome is coming out in you again. Just because we disagree with you on Ali doesn't make us sycophants. It just means that we disagree with you.

Noam

Kent: Someone on this site did the research once before---these guys we're referring to were ranked fighters in '71, '72, '73, '74, '75, '76. Frazier was either a Champion or top ten guy himself all of those same years. Just because Lyle, Shavers, Young and the others hadn't "peaked" yet, doesn't mean they weren't worthy of a match with Frazier—as much so as Joe Bugner or 1-4-1 Jimmy Ellis (and by the way, you can tune up with sparring partners or fight an exhibition---you don't need to go to Melbourne to get ready for Ali). Fact is, during these years, the guys I mentioned were active, live opponents. This notion that "the timing wasn't right," or that Frazier "didn't HAVE to fight them---he only had to fight Quarry because Quarry beat them" is equally debatable. Of course he didn't HAVE to fight anyone. It's not about mandates, it's about choices, testing yourself, boldly going where you haven't gone before, rather than picking on rematches against guys you've knocked out. Why is it so important that Frazier had to fight all these guys at their peak? You take guys on when they're coming up, peaking, or declining. Was Terry Daniels at his peak?

You are right in saying that Thomas Hauser was one of Ali's (many) biographers. It seems that everyone wants to write about him, no doubt because there is a huge market to buy the books. Hauser also worked as a journalist and he once wrote a story after asking Eddie Futch who were the greatest heavies of all time. Futch ranked Louis as the greatest with Ali and Jack Johnson tied for second place.
Oddly, he didn't place Frazier up there with them. Is Futch also an Ali sycophant?

You rightly implied, Forest, that Frazier had smart management who protected him from the kind of damage Ali seemingly got from boxing. (I say "seemingly" because Ali says Parkinson's Disease would have happened without boxing anyway and, while, I think he's wrong, I can't be certain). I suppose your point, Forest, was that while Ali was fighting Norton (x 3) and Shavers and Lyle, in all those wars, the pitter pats that a clapped out Joe was having against Stander and Daniels and the blockbuster in Australia against Ellis (who hadn't won for over four years) did him no harm. But I have to say, with sadness, that I heard Frazier interviewed a few months ago. He was slurring his words and his articulation was awful. The interviewer had to keep repeating Joe's words just so the listening audience could understand what the hell Frazier was going on about. It was sad.

Also, Forest, you mentioned (I think) that you saw the first Frazier Quarry fight. Did you attend the second fight as well (you know the one .... was a sanctioned eliminator by the YMCA)? Did you also attend the Frazier v Stander and Daniels fights? Were they exciting, too? Tell us about them please, because there hasn't been too many books written about them.

Thank you for your kind words and feedback. regarding the Greg Page situation, current litigation that may be decided in 12 months may indicate that merely the enforcement of the 1996 PBSA may have protected Mr. Page from injury. Below is another letter for everyone's consideration.

The American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, INCORPORATED,
86 Fletcher Avenue, Mount Vernon, New York 10552,
914.664.4571, www.aaiib.org

THE JERRY QUARRY FOUNDATION FOR PUGILISTICA DEMENTIA, INCORPORATED
549 10th Street, Northeast, Linton, IN 47441, 812.847.4137, www.jerryquarry.com

24 June 2005

The Honorable Bill
Frist
Majority Leader
United States Senate
Washington, DC
20210

Dear Senator Frist:

Below is the second in a series of letters concerning the past accomplishments and current positions, of the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) and The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia (TQF). The purposes of these letters are to inform you concerning these items. In continuing to explain the efforts of the AAIB, its efforts since 1965 to improve have been exhaustive. In 1985 much of the sports media discussed the issue of banning professional boxing. The AAIB's Steve Acunto responded to this by producing in 1986, a remarkable document titled, On Banning Boxing. In this unique and remarkable publication, he put forth many important ideas on how to re-regulate professional boxing, as opposed to banning. And essentially, this document has provided many important recommendations that have been ether proposed or approved. These included, advocating that far greater emphasis be placed on the science of the sport, bonding promoters and managers, terminating the options and monopoly of boxers by promoters, conducting an authorized study of participants, and calling for a C.A.T. scan of every fighter before every match, as a way of ascertaining whether a fighter had incurred a brain injury in a previous contest. Mr. Acunto also advanced safety in boxing by proposing having state athletic commissions throughout the country employ neurologists at ringside, dental surgeons, eye, ear, and nose specialists, orthopedic doctors chiropodists, and general practitioners who deal with sports medicine. Furthermore, this document called for some private or public National Boxing Commission, optimum medical safety throughout the country, and the establishment of a center from which the results of all boxing contests can be immediately announced. Since the AAIB has published and distributed this document, it has served as the source of many ideas and concepts to reform the great sport of boxing. Finally, The Jerry Quarry Foundation has repeatedly supported the passage and implementation of all of these suggestions when presented as legislative items. If you want to provide feedback or ask questions concerning this letter or any other related subjects, I can be reached at ehnbp@aol.com, 330.743.2898, or 142 Upland Ave., Youngstown, Ohio 44505. Furthermore Mr. Stephen Acunto, Sr., Co-Founder of the AAIB, and other individuals connected with that formidable organization, also stand ready, willing, and able to help with these legislative matters concerning this great sport. I am Sincerely yours, GEORGE L. OTTO, BCD, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LICDC, LSW, MSUS, SAP>Chief Counsel/Legislative ConsultantCc. Other members of Congress|6/24/05 09:59:14 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|To George Otto: Regarding the CAT scans---how extensive would the brain damage need to be to prohibit a person from boxing? In other words, wouldn't most boxers (especially those who have been knocked out) and also many football players (especially QBs who have suffered concussions) show some irregularities of brain function? I would think that a CAT scan might turn up some damage that is irreversible in many boxers and other athletes. I wonder if there would be a way to allow a certain amount of what would be considered "normal" damage (as strange as that sounds) and only prohibit someone from fighting if there was evidence of extensive and irregular damage that was degenerative? This is a very complex issue and it is very impressive that you are able to write concise verbiage to representatives like Bil Frist---I think that sometimes, it seems like a never ending battle to get professional boxing under control, especially the financial aspects, monopolies promoters have, etc. But you have shown a steady energy and commitment to this cause to keep awareness up and drive the proposals forward.|6/24/05 10:43:21 AM|Kent|Murrieta, ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Angelo, before 1973, believe it or not, Lyle and Shavers were not better known than Stander and Daniels to the general public and in fact Shavers had a loss to Stander, which everyone here seems to ignore.I am surprised that since you were around then that you can't remember that the public was not calling for a fight between Frazier and either of them. The reaction before about 1973 would have been, Frazier verses who? I know they were ranked fighters during the times you mentioned but that doesn't mean anyone wanted those fights.Let's see, it is mid to late 1973 and they are trying to work out the details for a second Ali/Frazier fight, which did happen in early 1974, so someone says, "I got an idea, I think Joe should fight Earnie Shavers or Ron Lyle instead." The promoters would have said, "what are you crazy, there is no money in those fights when we can get Ali."Lyle had been knocking out almost everyone put in front of him when he fought Jerry Quarry but except for Larry Middleton, he still hadn't beaten anyone of note. So yes about this time people were starting to pay attention to him. But after he lost to Jerry, his status went down, the general feeling was Jerry had exposed his inexperience and if someone had said, "hey we should put him in with Joe Frazier." I think people would had thought that it didn't make sense as Lyle had lost to Quarry who had been beaten before by Frazier. Same with Shavers, he had been knocking everyone out but there were no big names on his resume until 1973 when he knocked out Jimmy Ellis. Even his knockout of Jimmy Young in the same year didn't bring him more notice as Young had not emerged as a contender yet. Again I will mention that in 1974 Shavers didn't deserve any big money fights as he had lost to Quarry in December 73, lost to Bob "Who" Stallings, and had a draw in a rematch with Young. As I have said numerous times, Lyle and Shavers are much better known now, after the fact, then they were before about 1975, when Frazier had, except for his one last chance against Ali, had faded from the scene. If Joe had anything left in say, 1976, then he would have had to fight the fighters you mentioned as the public would have called for those. As it was, Frazier had a one shot deal to fight Foreman a second time but no one really took him seriously by this time and he had little left in another loss. But if Frazier avoided punchers, then why did he fight Foreman twice? Also going back to an earlier time in Frazier's career. If Joe always took it safe, then why did he fight Oscar Bonevena a second time? Their first fight was hardly an easy fight for Frazier
as Bonevena had knocked Joe down twice and Joe rallied to barely win a split decision and some people thought Bonevena won. So the second fight was hardly a for sure Frazier win going into the fight.

If Joe had anything left in say, 1976, then he would have had to fight the fighters you mentioned as the public would have called for those. As it was, Frazier had a one shot deal to fight Foreman a second time but no one really took him seriously by this time and he had little left in another loss. But if Frazier avoided punchers, then why did he fight Foreman twice? Also going back to an earlier time in Frazier's career. If Joe always took it safe, then why did he fight Oscar Bonevena a second time? Their first fight was hardly an easy fight for Frazier
as Bonevena had knocked Joe down twice and Joe rallied to barely win a split decision and some people thought Bonevena won. So the second fight was hardly a for sure Frazier win going into the fight.

As I have said
numerous times, Lyle and Shavers are much better known now, after the fact, then they were before about 1975, when Frazier had, except for his one last chance against Ali, had faded from the scene. If Joe had anything left in say, 1976, then he would have had to fight the fighters you mentioned as the public would have called for those. As it was, Frazier had a one shot deal to fight Foreman a second time but no one really took him seriously by this time and he had little left in another loss. But if Frazier avoided punchers, then why did he fight Foreman twice? Also going back to an earlier time in Frazier's career. If Joe always took it safe, then why did he fight Oscar Bonevena a second time? Their first fight was hardly an easy fight for Frazier
as Bonevena had knocked Joe down twice and Joe rallied to barely win a split decision and some people thought Bonevena won. So the second fight was hardly a for sure Frazier win going into the fight.

As I have said
numerous times, Lyle and Shavers are much better known now, after the fact, then they were before about 1975, when Frazier had, except for his one last chance against Ali, had faded from the scene. If Joe had anything left in say, 1976, then he would have had to fight the fighters you mentioned as the public would have called for those. As it was, Frazier had a one shot deal to fight Foreman a second time but no one really took him seriously by this time and he had little left in another loss. But if Frazier avoided punchers, then why did he fight Foreman twice? Also going back to an earlier time in Frazier's career. If Joe always took it safe, then why did he fight Oscar Bonevena a second time? Their first fight was hardly an easy fight for Frazier
as Bonevena had knocked Joe down twice and Joe rallied to barely win a split decision and some people thought Bonevena won. So the second fight was hardly a for sure Frazier win going into the fight.

As I have said
numerous times, Lyle and Shavers are much better known now, after the fact, then they were before about 1975, when Frazier had, except for his one last chance against Ali, had faded from the scene. If Joe had anything left in say, 1976, then he would have had to fight the fighters you mentioned as the public would have called for those. As it was, Frazier had a one shot deal to fight Foreman a second time but no one really took him seriously by this time and he had little left in another loss. But if Frazier avoided punchers, then why did he fight Foreman twice? Also going back to an earlier time in Frazier's career. If Joe always took it safe, then why did he fight Oscar Bonevena a second time? Their first fight was hardly an easy fight for Frazier
as Bonevena had knocked Joe down twice and Joe rallied to barely win a split decision and some people thought Bonevena won. So the second fight was hardly a for sure Frazier win going into the fight.

As I have said
numerous times, Lyle and Shavers are much better known now, after the fact, then they were before about 1975, when Frazier had, except for his one last chance against Ali, had faded from the scene. If Joe had anything left in say, 1976, then he would have had to fight the fighters you mentioned as the public would have called for those. As it was, Frazier had a one shot deal to fight Foreman a second time but no one really took him seriously by this time and he had little left in another loss. But if Frazier avoided punchers, then why did he fight Foreman twice? Also going back to an earlier time in Frazier's career. If Joe always took it safe, then why did he fight Oscar Bonevena a second time? Their first fight was hardly an easy fight for Frazier
as Bonevena had knocked Joe down twice and Joe rallied to barely win a split decision and some people thought Bonevena won. So the second fight was hardly a for sure Frazier win going into the fight.

As I have said
numerous times, Lyle and Shavers are much better known now, after the fact, then they were before about 1975, when Frazier had, except for his one last chance against Ali, had faded from the scene. If Joe had anything left in say, 1976, then he would have had to fight the fighters you mentioned as the public would have called for those. As it was, Frazier had a one shot deal to fight Foreman a second time but no one really took him seriously by this time and he had little left in another loss. But if Frazier avoided punchers, then why did he fight Foreman twice? Also going back to an earlier time in Frazier's career. If Joe always took it safe, then why did he fight Oscar Bonevena a second time? Their first fight was hardly an easy fight for Frazier
as Bonevena had knocked Joe down twice and Joe rallied to barely win a split decision and some people thought Bonevena won. So the second fight was hardly a
for sure Frazier win going into the fight.
argued, was the real winner in two of the three matches with Ali. That too, is an argument which may never be settled. Frazier was deeply offended by Ali and rightfully so. He clearly has a right to remain offended, whatever is said to explain what Ali said and did. Frazier had a hard time getting fights in the 60's --- he was not a draw, was not considered beatable, and did not promote well. It worked for him after made it to the top because he avoided a lot of guys who may not have wanted him anyway. His reign as champ is a little sketchy, but his ability is not. I put him on par with Foreman because he beat Ali...

People want to continue to dump on Tyson, which is easy to do. 1985 was a long time ago. Mentally, the guy is a mess, people have known that for years and never cared to help the guy. They just used him and now he's spent. He has my sympathy... Tyson over Foreman in my book... Massimo, I never called Wilt Chamberlain a great champion. Just a phenomenal athlete and a great player --- still the best ever, no matter how many times his teams lost to the Celtics and their seven Hall of Famers. Nobody else beat them either. Thanks. | 6/24/05 03:33:37 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Buster Douglas, on his best night, could beat Joe Louis, Rocky Marciano, Lennox Lewis---so yes, Frazier, at his best, beat Ali and very well could have beaten most great heavyweights on a great night. The fact, as Kent has pointed out a few times---that Frazier's straight ahead style shortened his career (and probably contributed to his handlers' choice of opponents) doesn't change what I've been saying: A somewhat shorter career and key opponents MIA from his schedule diminish his accomplishments at least a little bit. It isn't that hard to break this down and shouldn't be that hard to understand. Look, Gayle Sayers is a hall of fame running back and was, at his best, brilliant. But there's an asterisk---his career was seven years, 4 1/2 of which were productive. He's not even on the radar of all-time leading ground gainers such as Walter Payton, Jim Brown, OJ Simpson, Tony Dorsett, OJ Anderson, Barry Sanders, Emmitt Smith, etc. He might have been a more exciting and even better runner when he was healthy---but you take a career and look at it as a whole---and the guys I mentioned are more accomplished because they won Super Bowls (OJ Anderson for example, was a Super Bowl MVP who SHOULD BE in the Hall of Fame). Sayers was great, and so was Frazier, but there are factors preventing me from cementing them as the top of the top. In Sayers case, it was a career shortened by major knee injuries. In Frazier's, it was the fact that he never made it into the ring a few key peers that nearly every other champion or contender of his era faced---and the fact that his title reign was cut short by a devastating and lopsided loss to Foreman. Much the way Patterson was shelled by Liston---it literally knocks you down a few pegs. | 6/24/05 05:01:20 PM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|I do believe that Joe Frazier would have beaten Shavers 9 out of 10 times. Earnie even lost against the clumsy Randy Cobb, no Joe Louis in my book. Ok, Earnie might have hurt Joe and even knocked him down but...Everyone knows Joe had the heart of two lions...He would get up (as he did in the first Foreman fight and in the first Bonavena fight) and kicked the hell out of Earnie. Earnie wasn't the finisher Foreman was and had a fragile chin. Frazier's left hook would have knocked him down. Earnie was very dangerous for everyone and a legitimate top contender, but in a Frazier-Shavers fight I would bet on Frazier all the time! But, anyway, I agree that if Frazier had actually fought and beaten Shavers, his place in history would be half a step higher. Gerry-I love to joke but there's no doubt in my mind that Wilt was a great champion. I am not sure he was the greatest as I never saw him play, but his records and achievements speak for themselves. I also think that he would have given Ali' some trouble, as Ali' was not a big hitter and, in particular, not a big body puncher and...Wilt was just too wilt to be hit to the head!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! | 6/24/05 05:51:14 PM|Forest Ward|NYC||NYC|||10|Angelo, on one of your recent posts you wrote one of the most ridiculous posts I have ever seen. You put Joe Frazier in the same category as Floyd Patterson. Angelo, let me give you some background on Floyd Patterson as the Heavyweight Champion. I am not going to write about Joe Frazier. Looking at the champions from Dempsey to Holmes, Patterson without doubt was the biggest cheese champion of all time. He won the championship against Archie Moore, no problem with that. Then after winning it he avoided every legitimate contender available. Patterson reinvented the color line, he would not fight black fighters as a champion unless someone put a gun to his head. During the approximately 5 years he was champion he fought two black fighters. One, Patterson had already beaten prior to winning the title, Tommy Jackson. And the other, Sonny Liston, had to wait 4 years before Patterson would fight him. Patterson would only fight white stiffs. But even that was not a foolproof method. Ingo managed to knock Patterson out. It wasn't enough that Patterson fought bums and amateurs, remember Pete Radermacher? His 1st pro fight was against Frazier's fights with white stiffs such as Stander and Daniels. You don't bring those up, and I won't bring up Ali's fights with: London, Coopman, Evangelista, Wepner, Dunn. Although in fairness to Ali towards the end of his career, his manager Herbert Muhammad knew Ali was falling apart and he did not want to risk Ali losing his championship to a white guy. Otherwise, I am sure Ali would have gave Scott Leadoux a chance instead of Leon Spinks. Is your bias against Frazier that overwhelming? Or is your knowledge about boxing and boxing history that limited that you put Patterson in the same category as Frazier? Is it that you read boxing record books and then draw your own conclusions without any historical data to support your conclusions. Angelo, really your placing Patterson and Frazier on the same plateau answers a lot of questions about your judgement regarding boxing. There is no motive alterior behind this Chinese Water torture you put me through every time you write these mostly unfounded remarks about Frazier. You know very little about what you are writing about.

Forest - it's the timing of the fights he had and the timing of the fights he ducked, as well as the quality of the opposition he fought and didn't fight, that matters, but these are just some more points about Frazier you Dead Parroters don't want to accept. When he fought Stander and Daniels he had the title. He was the champion fighting relative nobodies when much better performed contenders were ready and waiting. When he fought Ellis the second time, Ellis hadn't won for over four years. Ellis was completely clapped out. To sell the fight Frazier had to take it to the other side of the planet. Gerry - Ali said offensive things about Frazier BEFORE they fought, not afterwards. It sold tickets and made them the biggest fights in history. Not a hard concept to understand, I would have thought. Frazier dumped on guys before AND after he fought them. The offensive things he had to say about guys were offensive and also personal. He called guys tomato cans and speed humps and punching bags, etc. Given the poor quality of some of the opposition he chose, maybe he was being truthful but it was still insulting. Frazier's hatred of Ali is jealousy. He is jealous that Ali is so widely revered and that most good judges place him as either the best or second best while Frazier was largely ignored, even by his own Eddie Futch. I know that you guys lived through that era, and that you desperately wanted Joe to shut Ali's mouth. But just because it never happened you guys should let go of the grudge - it all happened 30 years ago. The gaps in Joe's resume are obvious.
and Patterson and my putting them on the same level---it's not that I think Patterson was nearly the fighter Frazier was---for God's sakes, I think MARVIS Frazier might take Patterson. I was just saying that Patterson and Frazier had title runs that included defenses against some questionable competition, then the title reigns were ended in KO fashion by big punchers (respectively, Liston and Foreman, who also drew some similarities back then). Please, if I said it wrong, consider this my retraction---Floyd Patterson was NOT Joe Frazier. If these two guys faced each other, Patterson would outbox Frazier for about three rounds, and when the "smokin'" started, Patterson would end up on Pluto from a left hook.

Frazier's hatred of Ali is jealousy. He is jealous that Ali is so widely revered and that most good judges place him as either the best or second best while Frazier was largely ignored, even by his own Eddie Futch. "NOAM, I believe this to be true. I also believe that FRAZIER was hurt to the core, as a human being, by being belittled by ALI over the years. JOE did not have the level of intellect to cope with ALI's attempts at promoting their three fights. I feel that at the same time, ALI was psyching himself up, as he did against many of his top opponents. I've never liked FRAZIER particularly, I was and continue to be a big ALI supporter, but I can't jump on FRAZIER's back over this because I see him as being limited, as far as his understanding of ALI is concerned. FRAZIER was a great fighter in his time and without his input, we wouldn't have seen ALI at his best, post '67. If you consider GEORGE FOREMAN, his two biggest fights were JOE FRAZIER and MUHAMMAD ALI. 1 win, 1 loss. GEORGE went down at the hands of JIMMY YOUNG, but whatever became of him? I don't think that FRAZIER would have had much of a problem with YOUNG, nor would he have had much of a problem, I feel, with RON LYLE, yet LYLE came very close to taking FOREMAN out and it is a tribute to GEORGE that he could get himself up off the canvas and continue on to finish LYLE. It's also a tribute to LYLE for creating one of the most exciting heavyweight contests since FOREMAN/FRAZIER.

Maybe we could bring FRAZIER, LYLE and SHAVERS out of retirement to settle this matter, create a mini tournament with the winner challenging the victor of FOREMAN/HOLMES (I know that LARRY is always ready to go).

fighters bums, stiffs, tomato cans and those other terms. Look. Anyone with the balls to step into a ring and fight deserves at least some respect. This isn't tennis or swimming that we're talking about, where no one is trying to hit you. Anyone who has a real boxing match with a referee and judges for 3 rounds or 4 or 6 or 10 or 12 or 15 is someone I respect. I will not call him a bum or anything else. OK? I'd like to ask the other guys (and gals) here who have actually had fights -- real boxing matches -- if you agree. I had 61 but no pro fights and it was something. I respected all my opponents and gave them credit, whether their skills were excellent, average or poor. Second, we are talking about the cream of the crop here. Each one of us had known probably 300 or 400 boxers in our time. Somebody like Kent or Jimmy, probably way over a thousand. OK, how many of those guys were even good enough to fight in a semi? Maybe 20% at the most. How many made it to main events, even in small cities anywhere? I doubt if even 10%. From that 10%, not all were consistent winners, guys who actually dominated their cities or states or countries. When we come to fighters like Jumbo Cummings, Ron Stander, Gerry Cooney, Henry Cooper and others that some of you don't think much of, these guys are still in the 98th percentile. ANY CONTENDER IS AMONG THE BEST OF THE BEST OF THE BEST. The top contenders and champions like Ali, Frazier, Holmes, Foreman, Quarry, Holyfield and others are VERY, VERY RARE. A fraction of 1% at the top. Let's use that as a framework, OK? Of all boxers, I was probably in the 8th or 9th percentile!
Outside my own neighborhood, I wasn't ranked! How many of you guys were? Do we have any main event fighters here? I sparred with one guy who sparred with JQ, so that's as close as I ever got. Please, I know I'm sounding like an asshole for lecturing you, but all these fighters are worthy of honor. Let me give you an example. George (Scrap Iron) Johnson was a journeyman LA heavyweight in about 1967, when Joe Frazier was starting to attract national attention. He came out to LA and then signed Scrap to fight him, a heavy favorite. Well, Scrap fought a terrific fight, Joe couldn't put him down, he had Joe in minor trouble a few times, and Joe won the 12 round decision at the Olympic Auditorium. Here's my point: if you see that fight listed in Frazier's record, you're likely now to think, "Hmmm, another opponent, a ham and egger, a setup for young Joe." WRONG! Scrap fought a great fight, did his best, showed courage. How many of us would have the hair to mix it with Joe or the ability to go 12 with him? I rest my point, friends. Floyd Patterson may not be your favorite champ, or the best, but you'd have to say he was better than 99.99999% other heavyweights who laced on the gloves. I am sure JQ would agree in a minute. Thanks for listening! (You agree with me, Massimo?)

| 6/24/05 11:05:01 PM | Gino M. | San Leandro, CA | gmast49@juno.com | 10 | I more idea, please. I know plenty of you are young Turks who could my ass with one hand tied behind your back, but young or old, we do need to know the context of any fight and the history around it when it was signed and fought. Brian London was a leading heavyweight in the UK when Ali fought him. Karl Mildenberger was the European champs. Zora Folley was a #1 to #5 contender for years before he got his shot. Jimmy Young stayed in the top 10 for probably 8 or 9 years. Once in a while there is a Butterbean or a Lyle Alzado (please that bi gman's heart) who gets a match, but usually the guy chosen has superior ability. Now the real problem is when top contenders don't get the shot, and somebody much lower --or even a newcomer with a big name -- does. I don't know if we can blame that on boxing, guys. That's life -- that's reality -- that's just the way the world is. You can work someplace for 20 years and never get promoted to VP because when there's an opening, they hire some young kid with a fancy MBA from Harvard. I don't see a problem like that ever disappearing from boxing. OK, I'm done. |
| 6/25/05 01:31:19 AM | Ed | Cicero N Y | mooseygoop@aol.com | 10 | Forest, Your comments about Floyd Patterson ducking top fighters during his reign certainly is true. Also did you ever see his title winning fight against Archie Moore? Moore seemed to go down awfully quick against 2 left hooks by Patterson..the same Archie Moore that took what seemed like hundreds of punches in a losing effort against Marciano. This was an era where according to what i read,where there was a lot of fixed fights.But putting aside Floyds safety first management policy, how do you think he would have done against the toughies of his era i e Zora Folley, Cleveland Williams, Eddie Machen (who Floyd did beat after he lost title)ect.? Floyd did have a very exciting style and a very hard punch. His fights after his title reign were better then during his prime years. I think hes underrated as a fighter mainly because of his two 1 round loses against Liston. |
| 6/25/05 01:59:53 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 | I think Patterson did well with the tools he had. He was prepared to take chances and fight the top guys, unlike some. Not bad for a relatively small guy who wasn't a heavy hitter. People can say he was scared against Liston, but he was courageous enough to get in there (twice) and that deserves respect. To say that he was a "cheeseburger" (or words to that effect) is very disrespectful to a decent human being and fighter and I'm surprised that Kent - who was keen to protect Jimmy Ellis from similar harsh words - hasn't jumped in.Joey, you are right with your intellect comment about Frazier and Ali (of course, people can't help that).I suppose the most well known example was when Ali (before a fight) was teasing Frazier about being an "Uncle Tom". Frazier believed that Ali was calling him a "Peeping Tom". I've often wondered whether Joe knew what "Uncle Tom" meant.Joe fought some great fights against Ali but, takethose fights out, what have you got? I would have liked to have seen Frazier,after the first Ali fight, in against Norton, Shavers, and Lyle.Sure, we'd all make Frazier favourite, but there are no certainties with big punchers.With Frazier in the damaged state he was in, vulnerable to big punchers asForeman (and even Bonavena proved), I think there'd be an upset or two inthere.I'm confident that Larry Holmes would have beaten Frazier withouttoo many problems. The jab would have kept Frazier away and Holmes would haveconvincingly outboxed him.Noam, you are right, no one should say anything bad about Floyd Patterson as the man had guts toeven get in the ring with Liston and also by taking a rematch with Johansson afterbeing knocked down seven times in their first fight. I must have missed thecomment about Floyd.I was at a fight card last night. It was a goodcard but off the top of my head, I can't remember who fought. I have to do areport on the card in the morning but I hadn't heard of anyone, the information is in my notes. Give me a break it is late at night after a long day and a long drive home.I don't have to know who the fighters are to know there were four out of five fights on the card that were good fights, very competitive withthe outcome in doubt during most of the fights.I asked long time referee and official Lou Filipo if Frazier had ever ducked anyone. Filipo said, "Joe never ducked anyone, he was one tough guy and it was the other way around, people avoided Frazier." I also asked some reporters on press row the same thing and the people I talked to, nobody famous or anything but regulars on the local circuit, all agreed with me and Filipo about Frazier.I'd like to add something to what you said. I think there was not that much difference between Frazier and Scapriron Johnson. Frazier was better, but not THAT MUCH better. What I mean is that life is a non linear process. Sometimes if you are a bit better you become a legend, if you are a bit worse you get nowhere! I mean, Frazier got 1000 times more respect and glory from boxing than Scapriron did, but he was not 1000 times better! Another example: our friend from California (he really is from there !!!!!) Kent Appel is an amateur (or, at least, I guess so) singer. Frank Sinatra is 1000000000 times more famous than Kent is as asinger, but I'm sure he was not 1000000000 better. Another example: Carl Lewis ran the 100 m in about, what, 9.89 ? How many unknown athletes outta there can run 100 m in, say, 10*30 ? That's a small difference! In tennis the n.1 ranked player in the world is not 1000 times better than the n.1000 !!!! He is clearly better, but not 1000 times better ! There are many important exceptions to this rule, but I think it works most of the times, especially when we are referring to sports.In defense of Patterson, when he was 37 and over the hill he beat quite convincingly a 30 years old Oscar Bonavena. He also beat George Chuvalo in the best fight of 1965. I wonder what would have happened if he hadn't get injured in the first Ali' fight. I think that Ali' would have beaten him clearly, he was too big and quick for Floyd, but maybe we would have had a good fight.A lot of the recent posts make good sense. I think it was Gino who asked how many of us have been inthe ring. I've never fought in front of more than 10 people---friends oronlookers in a gym. I've fought against people smaller and without my skills,and bigger and with 5 times my skills. You know what? It's intimidating andscary to be in the ring. I was just messing around for three rounds withfriends or guys in the gym. I can't even imagine what it's like to go againstsomeone trying to take your head off, in front of hundreds or thousands ofpeople. So sure, a guy like Terry Daniels or someone like Jumbo Cummingsdeserves a lot of respect from a layman. No doubt about it---I wouldn't lasthalf a minute with either of them. But we are talking about the very best of the very best. A high school football team couldn't stay on the field with the worst pro team, but does that mean the top three pro teams deserve accolades for beating up on the worst pro team? In other words, Jimmy Ellis in 1974 might have been better than 99% of the heavyweights in the world, but we're talking about the top tenth of one percent—the top 5 or 10 guys—and Ellis was not in that category. I respect him as being much better than most, even when he was shot. But he had declined to the point of not belonging in the same ring as Frazier. No, the public wasn't interested. Even with Ellis having a name and being a former Champion, the public at large smelled rotten eggs and had zero interest. So the fight was sold to boxing starved fans an 18 hour plane ride away and actually, for a few rounds, it wasn't bad. Order was restored and Frazier did what every single boxing fan knew he would do—the same thing he did years earlier when Ellis was a live fighter—he landed heavy leather and dropped Ellis like a 50 pound sack of beans. Hooray. Aussies got to see a KO! Great tune-up guys. Without it, maybe Ali would have pitched a shut-out in Manilla.

Kent, by the way, before you chastise me for not knowing enough about boxing to understand the need for tune-ups leading up to a big fight—yes, you've explained it and I know. But Frazier fighting Jimmy Ellis, at that point in their careers, was not even a tune-up. That was an exhibition or sparring and the same thing could have been accomplished in a gym with no-name partners. A better tune-up for Frazier with a little intrigue would have been Jimmy Young, well known in Philadelphia, ranked, accomplished—but beatable in 1974. He was young, crafty and might have actually had a chance—a formula to offer U.S. fans something to buy tickets to, something to turn the television on for. Ultra conservative/ultra cautious doesn't even begin to describe the selection of Ellis. And by suggesting Jimmy Young, I'm not even suggesting Lyle or Shavers—I think most of us are confident that Frazier wouldn't be knocked out by Jimmy Young, but the fight would actually hold some drama.

Angelo, there was no money for Frazier fighting Jimmy Young. Jimmy Ellis while on the down side, was a name fighter who promoters could still make some money off of. I tend to agree with Kent and Forrest on Joe Frazier...we've all argued the merits of Frazier's career here before and seem split into two camps. I will say this though, at the time Ron Stander was no stiff. He built his record the same way Ernie Shavers did and knocked out Shavers to earn a shot at Frazier, who I believe actually signed a tentative contract to fight Shavers before he contracted hepatitis, and Shavers was KO'ed by Stander. I do also believe in 73-74 Frazier could have beaten Ron Lyle, Kenny Norton would have been no contest for Joe and he would have followed Jimmy Young out of the ring in to the third row to knock him out.

I think the jealousy issue is a good and valid point. Frazier was built to be the blunt object he was and must have seen in Ali not just things to dislike. But to brush off Ali's comments and actions as simple fight promotion is a big stretch, it just doesn't fly. Ali may not have seen the offensiveness or stupidity in his remarks, but many others did, and I'm sure it got back to him. Did he clarify at that time or call Frazier personally? No. He didn't care about Frazier, who he probably saw as another tool to another payday. Frazier did America a good favor by beating this guy, and I salute him ... Massimo, Wilt gets some criticism for his easy going nature in defeat and just two rings, so few see him as a champion. But I can't think of another team athlete who did more to make his team a contender or a winner. Maybe that is the champion you refer to... I agree, comparing Joe to Floyd is also a stretch. I enjoyed Floyd, a class guy and a great boxer, but Joe is several notches higher for his wins and the way he won them, at least to me.
rhetoric---the idea that Frazier "did America a favor" by beating Ali. Why?
How was it a favor? Did the Red Sox "do America a favor" by beating the Cardinals in last year's Series? Look, we all have favorite teams and favorite athletes. It's nice if your favorite wins and stings if a team or athlete you dislike beats your favorite. But it's just old, some would say racist rhetoric to believe that Frazier was fighting for white America and Ali was fighting for black America. I don't buy into that. It isn't fair to either of them.
Frazier was fighting for himself and his family, not America. Those who wanted to see Ali lose got what they wanted. Of course, it burned them to no end when three years later, Ali was back on top of the world by defeating the "unbeatable" guy who dropped Frazier six times in five minutes.

Saying that Frazier did America a favor by beating Ali is silly. At no time in history was Joe ever even 1/1000th as popular as Muhammad. Measured economically, Ali's fights brought in much, much more business to the USA. Ali single-handedly enlivened boxing and made it a sport EVERYONE paid attention to, more than any boxer since Joe Louis. Now if you still think Ali was a draft dodger, then you'd also have to condemn about 30 million American men who also did what they could to get out of military service during Vietnam. I was in the First Marines in Da Nang, and I now wish to HELL I hadn't served. But if you base your opinion on which fighting style or personality you like better, then you can try to attach that to which guy is "better for America", but good luck. What is doing the USA a favor, anyway? Now we definitely know that just by being alive and pollinating hundreds of thousands of beautiful Italian young women, our own Massimo has done a HUGE favor to ITALY!!!I strongly suspect that most of you guys who discredit Patterson or consider him mediocre were not alive as adults when he fought and don't really grasp the whole boxing scene in those days.
Right, Kent? The heavyweight division was at one of its low periods, maybe in a let down to the great Marciano Era. There were some good fighters like Polley, Machen, light heavy Archie Moore (although about 45 years old) and others, but none with star appeal to bring in the numbers for big profits. Boxing has always been a promoter's sport and always will be. Patterson measured up as one of the better ones for quite a while and was fortunate enough to become champ. By the way, Kent, could you please explain what ducking a fight or fighters really means? We need to know that the process of putting together a big fight, especially a championship fight, is a lot more than 2 guys signing a contract and showing up in their trunks. You need backers, you need a venue, you need an expectation of people coming, you need a card, your main event fighters must have some drawing power, and you need positive press coverage. You need a license for the fight and you need 2 kids who can get licensed. You need draws for each kid, and they have to pass. You need to find a time when other things going on will not steal away your crowd. You need to "make a fight" with guys who will be interesting to watch, if you're a good promoter. In many cases, you'll have a rising young kid and you want to find an older opponent who will put up a good fight but probably lose, to boost the kid. Whether we like 'em or not, promoters work hard. Somebody's got to make money for boxing matches to be put on. So it's oversimplified to think one guy is chicken about fighting other guys, or wants only easy opponents, or even wants guys who will throw a match. Sure, sometimes those things happen, but there's a LOT more going on. Is that fair to say, Jimmy?

Angelo, I am not saying you don't know boxing. On the contrary I think you know a lot about boxing and that is why I am surprised you don't recognize Ellis 2 as a tune up for Frazier. Ellis, in his last chance, fought well, better than he did verses Frazier in their first meeting and I agree with Bob B that Ellis was still a better commodity than Young in early 1975 but later made people notice him with his decision over Lyle in 1975 and again in 1976.Lyle to this day thinks he won both Young fights and I guess it is what the judges like, more punches landed, quantity, favoring Young or harder punches landed, quality, favoring Lyle. By the way, Lou Filippo seemed surprised that some people think Frazier avoided fighters.The card I was at was the NABF bantamweight title between Adam Carrera of California now 18-1, 8 by KO verses Julio Gamboa of Nicaragua 26-10-2, 16 by KO. Good action fight won by Carrera by 7th round TKO. It was shown on cable TV network Hombre TV and is being reshown a couple of more times I am sure.I was sitting to the right of one of the corners, next the ring if anyone happens to catch the broadcast. I am the heavy guy who is taking off and putting on his glasses, I need them to read or write but I don't need them to see the action.I am to the left of the older gentleman ring judge, Filippo, next to two other guys next to the judge. The directions are from my direction, not the TV camera, which would be opposite. On that channel (Hombre) but I do get boxing cards weekly on a Hispanic/Spanish speaking cable channel in the DC area---maybe this is syndicated from Hombre? I will see if I can catch this week's card and see if you're there. BTW, I know you aren't talking down to me/us about boxing---I was just writing "for emphasis" I guess! But speaking of Ellis/Frazier II., if Ellis actually pulled the shocker and earned a decision, what would have become of the two fighters? Would that have blown Frazier's last title shot? Would Ellis, who had been losing fight after fight, suddenly be a hot commodity again? Look, the fight was made because the likelihood of Frazier losing was nil, but anything can happen anytime. How did Mike Tyson try to break the arms and wrists of his opponents? Is that true?Ronald McDonald and Mr Ed could could swear that Frazier didn't duck anyone but when things quack and waddle they are generally ducks. In Frazier's case, it also had a Chinese chef chasing it with a wok, a can of sweet and sour, and chop sticks. Frazier ducked fighters before the first Ali fight and again after it. His career is littered with him picking and choosing who he fought, and let's not forget that he refused to participate in the elimination tournament when Ali's license was pulled. The others were all game to take Frazier on but he didn't show up. Sure, he probably would have beaten them but who can know that for sure?This excuse that "there was no money" for a particular fight is nonsense. The Dead Parroters all say that Frazier didn't fight Norton because they were friends and Frazier liked him too much. In his book Frazier gave a different excuse. He wrote that he didn't fight Norton "because there was no money for it." Yeah, like there was more money fighting blockbusters against Standers and Daniels and the clapped out Ellis in Australia.Gerry, after again reading your remarks about Ali's pre-fight insults to Frazier (which he made with the purpose of promoting the fights), I repeat that he didn't make those comments afterwards. In fact, Ali was so gracious that immediately after the third fight he told Frazier's teenage son that he should be very proud of his father. May I suggest, Gerry, that you buy Frazier's book. Throughout that book, which was only written a few years ago, he ridicules Ali most ungraciously and even jokes at his medical condition. The book stank of poor sportsmanship in that 30 years on Frazier hasn't got over the losses. Frazier's only purpose in continuing those insults is to demean, hurt and ridicule. There can be no other purpose. At least Ali's insults had a purpose and they stopped when that purpose was achieved. Frazier will go to his grave bitter and jealous and that's sadder than Ali's medical condition. It's funny that Dead Parroters all recall what Ali said over 30 years ago before his fights with Frazier, but their ears are conveniently closed to all the ungracious and bad sportsmanship insults that Frazier has continued uttering to the present day. Sounds like hypocrisy to me.

---

Welcome Lee, yes Tyson got both Frans Botha and Kevin McBride in arm bars when he got frustrated. In Botha's case, Botha had won every round through four rounds and Tyson got frustrated. He only beat Botha because he caught Botha with a punch in round five, he bailed himself out with his power in that one. In the recent McBride fight, McBride was fighting back with increasing regularity and Tyson again was frustrated. Tyson also butted McBride and he lost two points on the scorecards as the referee called it intentional. We can also attribute Tyson biting Evander Holyfield's ear as frustration. Tyson just doesn't seem to have the mental discipline to deal with adversity in the ring very well. I not sure if he ever had it.

---

Noam, using your logic, because if it works for Frazier, then you must conclude (but I don't, I am just making a point), that George Foreman avoided most big punchers. Where are the names Mac Foster, Earnie Shavers, Sonny Liston, Cleveland Williams, Jeff Merrit, Bernardo Mercado, and Jose Luis Garcia on Foreman's record. If you think your logic makes sense, then you have to conclude that Foreman avoided punchers. If it works for Frazier, then it has to work for Foreman also. My point is, your logic doesn't hold water and we can't just make a blanket statement covering everything. Foreman did not avoid these fighters as the public was not calling for those fights or in the case of Liston, Foreman didn't have the experience early in his career to face Liston, a former champion, sound familiar? When Foreman did have the experience, Liston was already gone from the scene (he was dead but if he had been alive, he still would have not been on the scene at that point). Also, Donald Duck, Ronald McDonald, etc, don't have over fifty years experience in refereeing and judging professional fights and Lou Filippo does have that experience. He is a bona fide expert in the field and he agrees with me that Frazier didn't duck fighters. He has seen everyone from about Joe Louis to the present.

---

Ronald McDonald's only experience is hawking hamburgers!!

---

Noam: I'll add that in the ring, after the TKO win over Frazier in Manilla, Ali spoke to the world and said "(Frazier)is the greatest...next to me." I face up to the fact that before the first Ali-Frazier fight, Ali crossed the line by encouraging the very thing I criticized a few posts back---making the fight a social battle instead of two guys fighting eachother. He prided himself on being the "black is beautiful" representative and Frazier as Amos and Andy or Uncle Tom. This was uncalled for, unnecessary and hurtful/damaging to Joe Frazier. A few years later, in Zaire, Ali painted himself as a legitimate African descendant, while Foreman was representing America carrying the little flag around the ring in the Olympics. Again, it was vintage Ali, having fun, promoting a fight and angering his opponent. When Ali told Africans to be vigilant because Foreman was going to leave the country on the back of an elephant before the fight (he was so afraid), Foreman took it in stride and tried to just focus on the fight. But the Frazier pre-fight comments by Ali were far more hurtful and serious and again, I'm the first to admit it. But Ali paid Frazier back and then some, with kind words to his family, more money than Frazier ever would have made without these bouts—and amazing tributes, in the ring, to the guy he beat. Frazier needs to let it go already. It was okay to hold the grudge until, say, 1980---now it's time for Joe to offer an olive branch, to have some sympathy for Ali's condition. If the brain damage/Parkinson's was caused or expedited by boxing, Frazier needs to recognize Ali as a fallen foe, a victim of the sport they both made livings on. He's showing no class by gloating about Ali's poor health and in fact, he's just making himself look really sad.

And regarding the fights that were never made, I think we've all spoken out on it. Some of us here just think it's all too convenient that Frazier flew under the radar for so many years, lining it all up perfectly—and missing guys that every other contender and champion of the era slagged it out with. Others (Kent, etc.) offer logic/reasons why each and every one of the fights just never came off. I'll go along with the guy who said that Frazier's management did him a favor by carefully picking and choosing his opponents, not just throwing him in with everyone, like the others were. This was his defense of Frazier—his management was concerned for Frazier's longevity, health and career, and they put these factors first, over some macho notion that we have to take everyone on to prove something. That's perfect—couldn't have reasoned it any better myself. I'll go along with it.

Whether Joe Frazier ducked the big punchers or not, we'll never know if he could survive to a devastating puncher and eventually beat him. He beat many good punchers (Bonavena, Chuvalo, Ali...) but only fought one ELITE-PUNCHER (Giorgio) and got his ass kicked twice. On the other hand, Giorgio Eduardo Foreman proved he could beat an ELITE-PUNCHER when he knocked Ron Lyle out.

So by your lamentable logic, we can't say that Frazier ducked anyone unless we also accuse Foreman of the same thing. Why must you compare Frazier to Foreman? That's apples and oranges. We're comparing Frazier to Ali. Get with the programme.

Your logic doesn't make sense. You said that Frazier didn't fight Norton because he liked him too much, he didn't fight someone else who just happened to be a big hitter because there was no money for it, with some other heavy puncher it was because it was a lead-in fight, and then with some feathered fister it was because he was allowed an easy fight after winning the title. (It would have been easier for a big puncher to arrange a fight with Hayley's Comet, which visits planet earth every 75 years by last count.)

By coincidence, as Kent would have it, Frazier did manage to fight non-punchers like Daniels and Standers as well as Ellisburger (as opposed to Forest's cheeseburger) in Australia, while studiously avoiding Norton, Lyle, and Shavers among others.

It's really cry baby stuff with you Dead Parroters. Sometimes it's like being transported onto the Brady Bunch set and arguing with Marsha and Cindy about boxing.

And when Kent felt that his opinion could not defeat the logic, he rolled in some supposed expert, who apparently got a Masters in Frazier at Harvard, who Kent claims denied in a private conversation that Frazier ducked anyone. Kent, the boxing community is close knit and Professor Expert isn't going to tell you anything controversial that might annoy others, especially when you are a journalist likely to write about it. Professor will say the first thing that comes to mind that isn't controversial and that will placate everyone.

Anyway, facts are facts. Look at Frazier's resume. Consider the omissions. Compare it to Ali's fight roster. And also recall that a very respected journalist and writer Thomas Hauser, first among equals in the boxing fraternity, says that Frazier DID duck big punchers.

By the way, you still haven't told me why you Dead Parroters can recall precisely what Ali said 30 years ago about Frazier and condemn him for it, but you can't recall what Frazier said yesterday about Ali ridiculing his medical condition. Ali hasn't ridiculed Joe for more than 30 years, but the Parroters still haven't gotten over it.Ali must have whipped Frazier's arse more than I realized!

6/26/05 06:40:09 PM|Steve|nj||nj||||10|Hi, Noam, glad to have you back! I just watched Ali vs Frazier in Manilla. It's too bad that, using your new hero, Thomas Hauser's book, as a criterion for greatness, if fighters are only judged by their hardest fights, and Angelo is also correct. He believes that Frazier's and Norton's careers were defined only by their fight's with Ali, then your both correct. Frazier and Norton were bums. Angelo, I really appreciate you giving Frazier credit for his courage against Ali and Foreman. It's too bad he ducked those immortal greats who really gave Ali a rough time. Liston, Lyle, Shavers. Oh, I'm sorry, he did fight Foreman twice, and Quarry twice. He obviously new that Quarry just got lucky in all his big wins against those guys like Lyle and Shavers, and Mac Foster, so he fought Quarry twice instead.

6/26/05 06:52:23 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fandom@Fandom.com||||10|There are not many in the world that have my knowledge of this period of heavyweight history. I have written articles and been quoted in books, been involved in game production and have spoken to several of the fighters from this time period. Joe Frazier was at his best pre-Ali 1 a top 5-10 heavyweight of all-time. His prime was short because of his all out style and also his other physical problems. Ali was better, there is no doubt. Anyone that says otherwise is ludicrous. However, Frazier never avoided Shavers, he may have avoided Lyle (I doubt it though). Stander was thought of as a decent puncher when they fought he was 23-1-1 with 15 ko's including a 5th round stoppage over Earnie Shavers. |

6/26/05 06:56:03 PM|Steve|nj||nj||||10|Noam, you probably weren't around in the late 60's and early 70's. In that highly charged environment, calling another black man an ignorant gorilla, or an uncle tom, or the white man's nigger, where just about the worst insults you could throw! It was the ultimate humiliation for Frazier. I don't blame Frazier for carrying a grudge!!

6/26/05 07:56:42 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Steve: Actually, Lyle did give Ali a very good fight and probably could have continued though the referee stopped it. Shavers gave Ali all he could handle and then some---though this fight took place after Frazier was washed up. Liston? He hit Clay well in the first fight and dove in the second fight, but his track record was that of a fierce puncher. A slow starter (i.e. Joltin' Joe) could face a horrendous disaster against even an old Liston, provided he had some firepower left. Actually, Shavers and Lyle had a slugfest for the ages (like Foreman-Lyle) and if Joe's "team" saw that one, it might have occurred to them that these were much more similar to Foreman than to Ali---Frazier could come forward and absorb Ali's sharp punches, thrown as Ali backed up. The world knew that Frazier seemed to have a more difficult time staying vertical with an imposing brawler in his face, moving forward, throwing bombs. So sure, I don't care if Ali had his way with some sluggers, Foreman included---Frazier's style didn't lend itself to defending against this type of onslaught, even if he performed well against Ali, who beat these guys. As for Norton, he could punch, but I don't think he liked guys who pressured him either. Thus, I think Frazier would beat Norton, but we'll never know since that's ANOTHER fight that didn't happen. As for our own Jerry Quarry, true, Frazier fought him twice. What were their weights? I'd venture a guess that Frazier was bigger? Quarry was known as a puncher, but not a KO artist in the image of Foreman, Shavers or Lyle. Quarry KOed Shavers in the first round, I know. Styles make fights, we all know. Earnie Shavers would have been a problem for Joe Frazier. Ron Lyle would have been a problem for Joe Frazier. We'll never know who would have won these bouts, but there's not a doubt in my mind that either one of these guys would have presented a "bigger" challenge to Frazier, and a more interesting fight that Ellis II., the "Melbourne Melodrama." Australia---home of Foster's Beer, Rick Springfield, AC/DC, Paul Hogan and heavyweight fights that can't generate a lick of interest in the continental U.S.

Fan and Kent, I respect the expertise of both you guys. Therefore, I'd like your critiques' on what I think I saw yesterday in a replay of Ali vs Frazier. Ali smothered Joe's attack, while taking a lot of punishment in the first six or seven rounds. He only threw his combinations off the ropes at about two-thirds power, and while he danced through the middle rounds, he relied on his surprisingly stiff jab. He started going flattopped and actually outpunched Frazier, alternating power with holding and boxing, from rounds nine through twelve. Then he applied pure power and actually pounded Frazier into a TKO.

Fan, you are a fan of Frazier, so of course you will agree with Kent. No surprise there. I also think Fan and Forest are the same guy. Steve—good to hear from you. You are the only sane Dead Parrot. I wouldn't have called you a Dead Parrot but, if I recall rightly, you asked to be made a member of that nefarious club. I granted your wish. Your welcome.

I still disagree with Kent. Frazier liked eating too many burgers rather than taking on real fights. He had the Standerburger, the...
Danielsburger, and then later the Ellisburger (with fries and supersized) in Australia. While Ali was off fighting Norton (3 times), Shavers, Lyle, and all the other hard punching monsters, Frazier was eating burgers. Another thing. Noticed how when Ali made comebacks he always took on hard opposition. When he came back from exile he fought Jerry. After he retired he came back and fought Holmes and Berbick. Perhaps if he'd had his comeback fight against the Jumboburger (as Frazier did), he may have prolonged his career. Only joking.

Steve, I was wondering whether you were a Tiny Tim fan in the 1970s. I can just imagine you singing Tiptoe Through The Tulips in falseto.

Noam, Frazier didn't take any real fights? What? Have you seen all three Ali fights, the Bonevena fights, the Quarry fights, the Chuvalo fight, the first Ellis fight, and yes even the Stander fight?

I don't know folks, maybe Noam just gets a kick out us responding to his nonsense as he couldn't possibly believe some of what he comes up with. It defies all logic.

I have just discovered that Ron Stander was ranked n.30 when he fought Joe Frazier.

Hi Massimo, are you still up? What's the time in Roma. Did you watch the Tyson fight? The Tzsyu fight? The Mayweather v Gatti fight?

I think Mayweather might well be the best pound-for-pound fighter in the world at the moment. There's talk that Mayweather will fight Hatton soon. That would be a great fight, but only if Hatton can get himself up for it. He has a history of slackening off between fights and putting on heaps of weight.

I'd pick Mayweather to stop him, especially if it's not fought on Hatton's home soil.
Hi Noam,

I did wake up a couple of hours ago. The weather is very sunny in Roma, we all owe a thanks to Linde, the underrated guy (almost unknown) who invented air conditioning!!!!!!!

I didn't see any of those fights, unfortunately. I don't get a lot of the real important fights.

Just to complete the information I gave in my post, Stander was in the top 10 for both WBA and WBC until he lost by split decision to the journeyman Reco Brooks. After the Frazier fight, his career fell apart.

Kent: My bad. I thought the Shavers-Lyle fight was '74, not '75. The point remains---both of these guys showed tremendous punching power in various fights early in their careers and neither of them got a fight with Frazier. And before you tell us again that Stander beat Shavers and Quarry beat Shavers, you know what, Foreman beat Frazier. Norton beat Bobick (and he still got a fight with contender John Tate after the first round KO loss to Norton). Pros, especially back then, suffered early KOs but weren't "damaged goods" and they got right back in the saddle to fight important matches right away. Regardless of what Jerry said following the fight, Shavers hit him with some hard shots in that first round, before Jerry KOed him. I don't think Frazier's management wanted any part of that. In fact, they seemed to have a real comfort level taking on guys Frazier had already knocked out. One or two observations about Frazier---he took a couple rounds to get in the flow of a fight and he didn't do well backing up. Guys like Ali, Ellis and yes, even Jerry, hit him with a lot of punches, but weren't accomplished KO artists in the true sense of the word. Frazier could shake off the punishment and get in his rhythm and when he made it past the first few rounds, he would start to dominate the fight. This is what made him so good---finding that bobbing/up and down rhythm, throwing punches while moving, hooking wildly (at least it looked wild) but landing with accuracy. You take a bigger guy like Foreman or Lyle, or a powerhouse like Shavers, standing their ground and winging A-Bombs, and Frazier would be perplexed. I don't think he would win a slugfest with any of these guys. Against Shavers, he could probably survive long enough for Shavers to get fatigued, then take over the fight and put Shavers away...maybe. Lyle had a bit more stamina (and I'm not just basing this on his fight against Shavers). Lyle would not back down and would not tire as easily. That would be a war. Foreman would...Foreman would...probably drop Joe about six times in two rounds.

Noam, that Frazier always played it safe is nonsense. Fighting Ali three times, Foreman twice, Bonevena twice, and Quarry twice, was not playing it safe. Against Shavers, he could probably survive long enough for Shavers to get fatigued, then take over the fight and put Shavers away...maybe. Lyle had a bit more stamina (and I'm not just basing this on his fight against Shavers). Lyle would not back down and would not tire as easily. That would be a war. Foreman would...Foreman would...probably drop Joe about six times in two rounds. In hindsight, after a couple of difficult rounds, it was an easier fight for Frazier but no one knew this beforehand.

Again, fighting Bonevena a second time was also not taking it easy and not a guaranteed win for Frazier as the first fight was very difficult and fighting Bonevena was never easy for anyone.

You said we are not comparing Frazier to Foreman, that we are comparing Frazier to Ali. You can't compare anyone to Ali as Ali was the greatest and just because Frazier doesn't measure up to Ali means nothing.

One thing no one can say is I have said anything negative ever about Ali I have said he is the best all along. I also can't rate Frazier over Foreman in any all time rankings as George beat him twice. But I stick by my point that if you are critical of Frazier for not facing big hitters, than you have to say the same thing about Foremen also as there were a lot of them he didn't face either. Lyle and Frazier himself were the only big hitters George fought. Lyle gave Foreman hell before Foreman came back to pull out the win and Frazier never really tagged George with his best shots so we don't know how George would have handled them. I think Foreman's height advantage and his finishing ability would most of the time catch Frazier early before Frazier had warmed up. Lyle, on other hand although he also had a huge punch, sometimes let fighters get off of the hook, he wasn't the finisher Foreman was. Frazier would have been more likely to survive to get into his rhythm and I pick Frazier in this one. Shavers didn't have the height advantage over Frazier that Foreman did so Frazier would have been more likely to get inside to control the fight. Of course Shavers might land some bombs early but I can see Frazier avoiding them, even early in the fight, to dominate Shavers from the third round on. The thing is Noam and other Frazier critics, you seem to be looking at the situation from a current prospective in which fighters like Lyle and Shavers are better regarded then they were early in their careers because the accomplished more later, 1975 and after when Frazier had essentially gone from the scene. But circa 1974 and before, they would have been considered too inexperienced to be put in the ring with Frazier and their losses to Quarry in 1973 bore this out. It is quite possible that their management didn't want fights with Frazier as, why ruin a good prospect by putting him in over his head too soon? The logic could have been, if they can't get by Quarry, then they probably couldn't handle Frazier either and when they were experienced enough, in 1975 onward, Frazier was gone from the scene. The anti-Frazier crowd has solid points, and so does the pro-Frazier crowd. That is why this debate and this site is so interesting.

I actually liked both the Cards and the Red Sox, personally. I think we could see them both again, possibly... Ali, in my opinion, was very good for America, for a while. But he was a belching jackass by the time Frazier lopsidedly beat him. I don't think Joe was ever that popular, no, and there's no question which one meant more to boxing. But Ali was a tired act by that fight. I think Frazier gave boxing and America a much-needed break by showing his Greatness the canvas... I have read Joe's book, a very good read to me. He was very respectful of Jerry, which I liked a lot. Joe does have a lot of venom for Ali, which is a little ridiculous in some ways. But, personally, it is very understandable. Ali was way over the line by any definition of fight promotion. Ali, for all his greatness, revealed a real lack of class. I can't imagine anyone willing to go that low again to promote a fight.

P.S., as someone who still sings rock for fun and profit, my vocal picks are Robert Plant, Steve Perry, Ian Gillian, Freddie Mercury and Lou Gramm. And yes, I do sing all the above, among others. Thanks.

I had you pegged for a Burt Bacharach crooner! Actually, the Burt Bacharach/Elvis Costello collaboration (LP from a few years ago, "Painted by Memory" was quite good.) Fan, I found your predictions plausible. I disagree with a few. Where I disagree.
Frazier decisions Holmes, probably split decision.  Frazier Ko's Frazier 3 rounds  Frazier Ko's Patterson 3 rounds  Exira: Marciano Ko's Frazier 7 rounds or earlier. Frazier stops Tyson 12 round|

Hi Gerry
I read Frazier's book too, and apart from the venom he has towards Ali, he ridicules fighters like Buster Mathis and several others calling them 'human shock absorbers', 'tomato cans' and all that sort of stuff.  And, while maybe we can forgive him for having resentment towards Ali, it shouldn't stoop to making light and joking about Ali's medical condition. After all, Joe has a lot to be thankful to Ali for and his career was much better off because Ali was around. It's surprising that 30 years on Joe feels a need to go on with those insults. It wreaks of insecurity to me.

Kent - sure Joe had the three wars against Ali and those two short fights against Foreman, but the point you avoid is that he didn't go looking for any other guys who could give him a war. Put aside Ali and Foreman after 1971, and Frazier avoided new horizons and big punchers. I'll put it this way, Kent. I think Frazier had a tremendous career. The three fights against Ali were terrific and Joe is legendary because of them. However, his two fights against Foreman were humiliating. Given that performance against Foreman - the first really great puncher Joe faced - we can be confident that huge hitters such as Louis, Marciano, and Tyson would have beaten him convincingly as well. Joe was great against Ali because he hated him so much and he felt that he was fighting for his manhood (if you know what I mean). It also helped a lot that Ali wasn't a big puncher. But when he couldn't muster those same emotions against others, especially big punchers, he wasn't so great. Joe was very vulnerable. It wasn't his fault, but Joe wasn't great physically with his smallish size, limited strength, and constitutional problems such as high blood pressure and sight problems. In my opinion, he didn't have the stamina to do what Ali did in fighting next best after next best after next best. We saw that when it took Frazier so long to recover physically after his first fight with Ali. Speaking hypothetically, had Frazier gone into the ring with a big puncher next fight after Ali 1 then he gets knocked out, in my opinion. He was damaged goods. Foreman would have knocked him out even before the first Ali fight (especially given that Bonavena knocked Joe down easily early in his career). Just say that Frazier had an Ali type schedule, for instance fighting Ali then Foreman then Norton then Ali again then Lyle then Norton and then Shavers. I don't believe that Frazier - the one we saw after Ali 1 - would have had the stamina or physical ability to keep to that schedule. And, if he did, then he gets beaten in the majority of those fights. Look, Kent, even before Ali 1, Frazier's management were careful about who he fought and didn't fight. He refused to go into the elimination tournament for whatever reason. With all due respect to Joe, the fights with Ali flattered his career. Take those fights out and you have the humiliating losses against Foreman and very little else. That's no shame, though, because, hell, Foreman might even have knocked Massimo or Steve out.

For the life of me, some of you guys just don't get it. Ali is the way he is because it was Ali's brain cells and his managers greed when he fought all those tough fighters. Can anyone tell me from looking at Ali today and the way he has been for the past 25 years, that his managers did the right thing by putting him in with all those tough contenders. Frazier's handlers cared about him and made the matches that would get him the most money and the championship. Granted it appears in recent years Frazier is slipping. But I would attribute that more to the booze than the punches. Some of you people write about Ali and all the fighters he fought and pretend that the effect to his health are not related. He is the way he is because his handlers never met a dollar they didn't want. Really, for the life of me how can some of you people defend all the tough fights Ali had and ignore what happened to him as a result of those fights. It seems like you are blaming Frazier because he was not mismanaged like Ali was.

I can't recall anyone defending Ali's management and I agree with you on that aspect. I believe that Ali had damage even by the Foreman fight and his speech was slurred at ringside afterwards. It should have ended there.

I've long harbored the belief that Dundee, in particular, let him down for allowing it to go on as long as it did. I also believe that Ali's doctor should have stepped in much earlier than he did. Ferdie Pacheco hung in there past the point of no return with Ali's health.

To rank fighters from the same and different eras, we must compare the fighters they fought and didn't fight, the style of boxer they fought well against and the style they didn't, and whether they can take a hard punch and whether they can't. I believe that Ali had the best jaw ever and that was his great strength as a fighter (and his great weakness for his health). If Ali had Frazier's management, he'd probably be healthier today but his legend would not be so great.

However, if Frazier had Ali's management, what would have happened? His health would be worse off, for sure. But he would have had many more fights and many more losses. His legend would never have been as great as Ali's, no matter who managed him. He simply didn't have the tools physically to be as great as Ali.

In my opinion, Joe's biggest weakness was Ali's biggest strength - his jaw. Joe was vulnerable to hard punchers, as we saw early against Bonavena and then had it shown proof positive with his demolition against Foreman. Which brings me back to the recurring theme......Frazier avoided big punchers whenever he could. Forest says that this was smart management and, of course, he is right. But it also meant that he didn't fight all the viable contenders of his era and for that fight fans are entitled to detract points from his legend.

Ali's legend was built on all those incredible fights and they took an unfortunate toll on him, if this is what has caused the Parkinsons. Frazier is better off---but he cannot enjoy the accolades because he did not accomplish what Ali did. In a lot of ways, I think everything Ali did after Manilla was unnecessary---sure, beating Shavers was nice, winning the title a THIRD time was nice---but the loss to Spinks, controversial wins over Young and Norton and losses to Holmes and Berbick were not good for Ali or his reputation.

Had he quit after Zaire, he'd probably still be in the public eye today, at fight cards TALKING, not just an onlooker. Had he quit after Manilla, I don't know how his condition would be---except I think he'd be better off than he is now. But his career was simply amazing and that's why he gets all the praise from me, and I second guess Joe---he did NOT take on the caliber of opponents Ali did and sure, he was smoked twice by Foreman.
But Gerry do you do Gerry S, yourself? One thing I never do is imitate other singers. I actually wrote an Elvis Presley parody but if I ever do a demo of the song, I have to hire a guy who imitates Elvis to do the part. So my secret in a way is I can't do imitations. People get Kent Appel, whether they like it or not but I am also very proud I am unique that I am not just another copy cat. These days, in whatever styles of music there are, everyone sounds exactly the same. Pop singers all sound like imitations of soul singers like Stevie Wonder or Aretha Franklin, or whoever it is they all imitate. Country singers all sound like Clint Black or Sheenia Twain, or whoever it is they all imitate. Rock singers all sound like whatever artist they all imitate too.

These days, in whatever styles of music there are, everyone sounds exactly the same. Pop singers all sound like imitations of soul singers like Stevie Wonder or Aretha Franklin, or whoever it is they all imitate. Country singers all sound like Clint Black or Sheenia Twain, or whoever it is they all imitate. Rock singers all sound like whatever artist they all imitate too. It gets a little boring at times that not that many original people are around anymore. Funny, someone like Elvis or Frank Sinatra, if they came around today would not make it as when someone asked them, "what artist do you do?" They would say, they do themselves. Oh yeah, there are thousands of old style crooners who all sound like Sinatra and of course there are hundreds of millions Elvis wannabes out there also. I still say my version of "New York, New York" is better than any copy cat's version because I am not Frank and I don't try to be. I have been told by several drunks over the years that I do the song better than Sinatra himself. Now I don't claim that as Frank was the man but the drunks didn't know each other at all and they independently said it, no lie.

I think that Ali's most deleterious fight was the one against Earnie Shavers. He should never have fought him. He went 15 rounds with the hardest puncher ever and was hurt badly at least 6 times! That hardly helped his health. And this happened after the LIFE AND DEATH fight in Manilla and another war with Norton!!!! Although I think that Ali was probably the greatest, I don't give Ali' too much credit for beating Leon Spinks, as that one was a pretty boring fight and one of the worst (or worse) versions of Ali'. We saw only the shadow of Ali' in that fight! To say that Carl Von Linde was the smartest guy who ever lived is stretching it a little bit I think, but yet (or still) he was a great inventor and someone who deserves an immortal place in the History of Technology. He was a great guy! He gave mankind a HUGE present and, I'm sure, saved a lot of human lives all around the world. Think, for instance, of all the old and ill people who can enjoy air conditioning in hospitals! I'm not sure I understand what you meant with "heat wave" (is that Slang?), but if you were referring to the literary meaning of the expression "heat wave" yeah, it's true, it's hot like hell in Roma in these days!

I add on to my last post to Gerry: Freddie Mercury, Steve Perry, Robert Plant, etc, more examples from a past era when singers had their own individual styles. Gerry, you must have a high voice. I couldn't do songs by those artists unless I took the songs down to lower keys. I can hit the notes in the original keys but I don't have the gruffness that those songs need to be true to the style. Now I don't say there is anything wrong with doing the same style as other artists, it is just that I believe a singer should put his own label, make the song his own, when he or she covers material. Yes we are in a stale period right now where everything is copied from something else. Even the songs themselves in the past few years are just pale imitations of original works. There was actually a hit, and I don't know the artist or the name of the song, that had sampled all the way through, the intro to a Gladys Knight and the Pips 1970s hit. The Group Sugar-ray also ripped off part of their melody hook for their biggest hit from a song, also from the early 1970s, that was called Suavacito by a group called Malo.
of old songs. So even in itself, while there are examples of hip hop and rap music that show lyrical talent and are unique in their own way, there are a lot of examples of "the copy cat syndrome" even in that style. It is universal in today's music, rip off something else if you can. |

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/28/05 02:39:05 PM</th>
<th>Gerry</th>
<th>Cleveland</th>
<th>same yet again</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Kent, I do have my own voice, which I'm told is something between Steve Perry, or Steve Walsh of Kansas and Sammy Hagar. I'm currently writing and recording with a group here in Cleveland.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/28/05 04:25:32 PM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>Murrieta, Ca</th>
<th>Kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Gerry, you do have a good style then, you are in good company. You are more of a hard rock singer than I am but I can rock out to some up tempo oldies like Johnny B Goode, Great Balls of Fire, and stuff like the Beatles' I Saw Her Standing There, I also do a credible job on White Room by Cream. You are lucky as when I was younger, I wanted to be a heavy metal singer but I was cursed with a baritone voice (or blessed, depending on how you look at it). I do great ballads though and even at my 300 pounds, I can have almost any lady in the palm of my hands for three minutes if I sing to her some love song. The problem is when I walk off of the stage and then I am the 300 pound doofus again. Pity that when I was younger, thinner, and better looking, I didn't know it, I never capitalized on it too much with the ladies. Oh well, I guess deep down I have always been a nice guy. Too bad!!&lt;br&gt;I know we have discussed this before but to those that don't know, Jerry Quarry was one good singer. He was also a handsome guy with Charisma. I think it isn't far fetched that Jerry could have been a star singer. I remember once when Jerry was asked about Joe Frazier's singing, he said, &quot;Joe may have beaten me in the ring, but I am a better singer.&quot; No argument there as even Joe is (was) not a bad singer, he was not a good one either, kind of unique (which of course I like) but mediocre to be honest about it.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/28/05 05:58:43 PM</th>
<th>Noam</th>
<th>same</th>
<th>same</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Kent, I apologize for trying to get a handle on what you are actually saying about Frazier missing all those fights against viable contenders (who all just happened to be big punchers), but could you answer a few questions for me ?Firstly, I know that you don't accept the accusation that Frazier ducked these guys.But do you accept what Forest says ? Forest seems to be saying that Frazier's management deliberately ducked Joe fighting those guys and that it was a very smart decision on their part which has preserved Joe's health. Do you agree with Forest that smart management ducked those fights ?Oy are you still saying that it was a momentous once-in-a-lifetime coincidence, a monumental quirk of fate, that all the guys Frazier didn't fight just happened to be big punchers and that the guys that he instead fought just happened to be feathered fisters ?Also,Kent, can you tell me whether Ali, Foreman, Norton, Shavers and Lyle, fought Standers and Daniels ? If they didn't fight them, do you think they were ducking them because they were so dangerous ? Or was it that they didn't fight them because they were no good ?Also, did Ali, Foreman, Norton, Lyle or Shavers fight Ellis after he hadn't had a win for over four years ? Or was it just Frazier who fought him ? Do you think that Ali and the rest were ducking Ellis ? Or was it that they knew he was no longer a viable challenge ?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>6/29/05 12:27:16 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>Murrieta, Ca</th>
<th>Kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Noam, you sure do play with the facts. Ellis, did have wins in the four years before the second fight, alot of them! In the period from March 1971 to March 1975, when the second Frazier fight happened, Ellis was 11-5-1 with a win over George Chuvalo included. Yes Ellis was 1-3-1 going into the fight with losses to contenders Ron Lyle and Joe Bugner as well as a loss to prospect Boone Kirkman, with the draw coming against contender Larry Middleton and the win over Memphis Al Jones, but no wins in four years, in this case you don't know what you are talking about, look up his record!!In light of this evidence, Ellis was a viable opponent in the second Frazier fight, who had some recent tough losses and who fought very well, ahead on the scorecards after five rounds only to be stopped by Frazier in the ninth round. I do acknowledge Frazier, because of his style, only had so many fights in him but I stick by my position that it is entirely possible that the management of fighters like Shavers and Lyle before 1975 could have very possibly avoided signing to fight Frazier as they didn't want to put good prospects in over their heads and that when both lost to Quarry, their managers thought they were not ready for Frazier and when they were ready, Frazier was no longer around. Using expert testimony is an legitimate logical argument and again, long time referee and boxing official Lou Filippo said people avoided Frazier, not the other way around.

I do acknowledge Frazier, because of his style, only had so many fights in him but I stick by my position that it is entirely possible that the management of fighters like Shavers and Lyle before 1975 could have very possibly avoided signing to fight Frazier as they didn't want to put good prospects in over their heads and that when both lost to Quarry, their managers thought they were not ready for Frazier and when they were ready, Frazier was no longer around. Using expert testimony is an legitimate logical argument and again, long time referee and boxing official Lou Filippo said people avoided Frazier, not the other way around.

I made a mistake; I wasn't playing with the facts, as you said, imputing that I was somehow telling an untruth. The below was Ellis's record immediately before the second Frazier fight:

March 1, 1975 KO by 9 Frazier
Nov 12, 1974 L 10 Bugner
Jul 16, 1974 L 12 Lyle
Dec 12, 1973 L 10 Kirkman
Jun 18, 1973 KO by 1 Shavers

What I meant to say was that Ellis hadn't won his last 4 fights, not the last 4 years. An obvious mistake Kent, but you took some leap of logic happy to accuse me of "playing with facts". And if you think Ellis was a viable opponent based on the above facts, then give yourself an uppercut. You deserve one. Ellis's record as shown above in the period before the second Frazier fight stinks. He was beaten by Lyle, Bugner, Kirkman, and Shavers, yet Frazier doesn't fight them - he fights the loser. That says it all, doesn't it. You didn't answer my other questions about who fought Daniels and Standers. Lyle and Shavers didn't fight them. Foreman fought Daniels in an exhibition fight but he wasn't matched with Standers. Norton ko'd Standers in 5 in 1976 but he didn't fight Daniels. Quarry didn't fight Standers or Daniels. Ali fought Daniels in an exhibition in 1972 on the same day that he fought four other guys. He didn't fight Standers. So I'm trying to work out why Frazier fought Daniels in January 1972 and Standers in May 1972. Do you think the other guys were ducking Daniels and Standers or was Joe just taking the easy way out. What I said was that Ali was mismanaged. His managers had him taking fights he should have avoided. If I am to believe you, you apparently agree with me. You wrote to the effect that you noticed brain damage in Ali before the Foreman fight.

Noam you and Angelo among others keep using the word "ducked" when refering to Frazier and the list of his possible opponents. You and the others constantly ignore the rankings and the records of the opponents of that time period when you say Frazier "ducked" these opponents. Quite frankly, I find your prattle boring. The only reason I am responding now is because you are attaching my name to things I have not said. Finally, once again even you yourself claim that you notice brain damage in Ali in 1974 yet he continued fighting tough opponents for approximately 5 more years. It does not make sense if he is brain damage... damaged or becoming so. It was obviously wrong for him to have those fights. Those fights should not have happened.Noam, you just don't get it. It is not that Frazier avoided necessary fights. It is that Ali had to many unnecessary fights. Looking at the heavyweight contenders through 1964 and 1974. Who made out better than Joe Frazier other than George Foreman regarding retiring with money and relatively good health. FRAZIER FOUGHT THE NECESSARY FIGHTS, ALI FOUGHT UNNECESSARY FIGHTS. WHO MADE OUT BETTER. FAZIER HANDS DOWN.| 6/29/05 11:26:43 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Noam, I believe if we go through your posts we will find you have said on several occasions that Jimmy Ellis did not have a win in four years. How am I supposed to know you only meant four fights when you say four years each time?Ellis was headed towards the downside when he fought Frazier the second time but he had the distance with Bugner and Lyle and he gave a good account of himself.If he wasn't still a viable opponent even in the period right before Frazier 2, then why was it considered a good win for Lyle and before that Shavers too? Their wins over Ellis are when they started to make a name for themselves.Another reason Ellis was a viable and even tough opponent for Frazier the second time around is Ellis knew it was a big chance to get back into the picture. He was a former champion with a lot of experience who still might have been able to turn his career around with a win and he fought very well, again, he was winning after five rounds and he might have been ahead at the time of the stoppage or if behind, only by one point. I have to ask again, have you seen the fight? He was a very live underdog.Why couldn't it have been possible Ellis could have had a resurgence in his career? Frazier himself had lost two out of three fights, to Foreman and Ali, with the win over Bugner and he came back to beat Quarry to get another shot at Ali in Manila and he fought great, even if in a losing effort, to test Ali to the limit. One of the reasons the Frazier critics thought Ellis was completely shot by the point of Frazier/Ellis 2 is they believed you Noam continually saying Ellis had not won in four years, not four fights. But they were tough losses and he had a draw with Middleton too.| 6/29/05 03:52:32 PM|angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Kent/Forrest: I haven't gone through all of my old posts---I don't remember if I used the word "ducked" when referring to Frazier not meeting Lyle, Shavers, Norton, etc. I might have said it, but I think I said his management "avoided" them, which is a little less accusatory. I stand by that. I understand the point that Ali might have stayed around too long and took on fights he "didn't need to" but that's why he's a legend. I understand that Frazier took the very absolute bare minimum of fights against powerful punchers (probably with the exception of Foreman II, which he needed like a hole in the head). He "chose" not to enter the 60's tournament that all other contenders were in. He never fought the aforementioned power punchers and we've all heard the theories why (buddy-buddy with Kenny, Earnie lost to this guy and that guy, Lyle was too mean and a jailbird). He DID fight guys he had already knocked out, including the infamous "fun in the sun/Thunder down Under" against, and I'll say it again, a SHOT Jimmy Ellis. I don't care that he fought surprisingly well for five rounds---he was riding a ridiculous losing streak for a former world class fighter, he was not capable of delivering a knockout against Frazier and it was a matter of time before any reasonable Frazier punch would knock him from Melbourne to Toledo. Plain and simple, Ellis didn't belong in the ring with Frazier, or more to the point, Frazier was too good at that point (even with the losses to Ali and Foreman) to be taking this infamous "tune-up" with Ellis. Leave the tune-ups to an Exxon Station and fight Lyle please. And if Lyle is "unnecessary" than fine, but don't expect to be mentioned in the same library with Muhammad Ali, who lined them up and knocked them down. His poor health is the trade-off then, for being the greatest while Frazier was merely "a good fighter of his era." | 6/29/05 05:34:22 PM|Noam|same||same||10|Forest - my understanding was that you were implying by saying that Frazier had "smart management" that he avoided certain fighters thereby preserving his health. If you weren't saying that then fine. Now you're saying that it was just "smarter management" than Ali's. Whatever. I agree on both counts.Anyway, all of this is on the record. The facts can't be disputed. There's a common thread to the guys Frazier fought and didn't fight when he had a choice. He avoided/didn't fight/was kept away from/didn't face/etc guys who were big punchers, while happy to fight the feather fisted.This has become another Monty Python's impasse. We couldn't say previously that the parrot was dead. The parrot was just resting or holding his breath. Same with Ellis. He wasn't clapped out by 1975. He'd just been saving himself for Joe. But now we can't say that Joe "ducked" anyone. We gotta put it in politically correct terms to appease the Dead Parroters. We gotta say "Joe and Lyle were never in the same ring at the same time", or "Frazier didn't fight Shavers because they didn't sign contracts to do so", or "Frazier didn't touch gloves in ring central with Norton because Joe only fought guys outside his circle of family and friends", etc. Just don't say the 'D' word. It's unacceptable to Forest.)Anyway, Joe also wouldn't go in the elimination tournament in 1969 because he said that he could beat all the other guys and didn't need to prove it and it was an insult that the authorities wanted him to. (Hey, Kent, we could do away with title fights citing the "Frazier precedent". Rahman says he's better than Klitchko and could beat him easily. It'd be an insult to make him prove it, so let's just give Rahman the title. We could call it 'deeming'. Authorities have deemed the title to Rahman citing the Frazier precedent.)Joe even fought a clapped out Jimmy Ellis in Melbourne WHEN ELLIS HADN'T WON HIS PAST FOUR FIGHTS (read 4 fights, Kent, not 4 years).And Frazier's only title defenses were against Stander and Daniels. In boxing heavyweight history that would be the weakest defenses ever made.Forest - you went to many of the Frazier and Quarry fights of that era. Did you go to the Stander and Daniels blockbusters ? Did you bet on Joe in the second 'fight' against Ellis ? Massive odds, huh. Your house to a cigarette butt on a Joe victory. You must have been excited watching it.I went to "boxing records" and couldn't find an entry for Terry Daniels. I found Stander's record....37 wins and 21 losses. His record before fighting Joe was:May 1972 knocked out by FrazierMarch 1972 won pts 10 against BoswellFeb 1972 lost to BrooksWOW ! Anyone got it on tape.To clarify, going into the second fight with Frazier, Jimmy Ellis had only won once in his previous SIX fights. I believe his record was 1-4-1 heading to Melbourne. He did rebound after the loss to Frazier though, as he scored an impressive knockout over Carl Baker. Does anyone here know who Carl Baker is? I think my uncle had a plumber by that name. I wonder if it's the same guy?Ellis v Frazier (2) in Melbourne, Australia, was a blockbuster. To those who bought ringside tickets, however, it was known as "Suckers borne in Melbourne".Instead of that farce, Frazier should have fought Lyle. Here is Lyle's record in that period:March 1975 Frazier beats Ellis in MelbourneMarch 1974 Lyle beats BonavenaJuly 1974 Lyle beats EllisSept
1974  Lyle beats Kirkman
Feb 1975  Young beats Lyle
May 1975  Ali beats Lyle

Instead of Frazier fighting Ellis in February 1975, he should have instead fought Lyle. After all, Lyle had only months earlier been Ellis's conqueror. But, then again, Frazier's goal (Ali and Foreman aside) was to fight the easiest and not the most dangerous. Smart management. And Joe wasn't in the same ring at the same time as Jimmy Young, either (the guy who beat Lyle). But let's make Forest happy and call a Young v Frazier a "deeming fight". We'll deem Frazier the winner because Forest says that he would have won. (Problem is Forest probably would have called Foreman v Young a "deeming fight" also and we all know what happened there.) If the fight never happens, how can you ever be entirely sure of the result?

In Frazier's defense, he took a big risk when he fought Oscar Bonavena in his 11 professional fight. In his autobiography Joe said that he was really in "big damn trouble" after the first knockdown! He did get up and won and probably (but of course I can't be sure) he would have done the same against Lyle, Liston, Mac Foster and Shavers. I have just seen again the Ali'-Lyle fight, and I have to question Lyle's chin! Ali' could never beat Frazier up in that way, like he was his daddy (Slang)! Lyle would have never survived the eleventh round if the referee hadn't stop it! In Frazier's defense, he took a big risk when he fought Oscar Bonavena in his 11 professional fight. In his autobiography Joe said that he was really in "big damn trouble" after the first knockdown! He did get up and won and probably (but of course I can't be sure) he would have done the same against Lyle, Liston, Mac Foster and Shavers. I have just seen again the Ali'-Lyle fight, and I have to question Lyle's chin! Ali' could never beat Frazier up in that way, like he was his daddy (Slang)! Lyle would have never survived the eleventh round if the referee hadn't stop it!

Noam, you celebrate Ali's record. But, you basically ignore the fact that Ali has been punch drunk for 25 years. Although you claim you noticed that Ali was becoming punchy in 1974 before the Foreman fight. And yet you celebrate all the destructive fights Ali had. These fights caused Ali to become punchy. And yet you fault Frazier because he did not have unnecessary fights. A fight expert like you Noam can't celebrate Ali's for his great record and then ignore the fact that he punchy. Ali has a great fight record and you admire him for that. The fact that he is brain damage doesn't really concern you. I guess you wished it did not happen, but it is part of the game. With that attitude I can see why you dislike Frazier.

You jump to the assumption that Frazier did not have these unnecessary because his management was afraid Frazier would loose. Frazier's management was more concerned about making money, making Joe the champion, and preventing him from becoming punch drunk. You don't like that do you? Instead, you pretend Frazier ducked fighters. You can't accept the idea that is why Frazier retired relatively healthy and Ali retired with severe brain damage, that only gets worse with time.

Noam, let me ask you a question. If you had a magic wand and if you waved it, Ali would once again be healthy. Ali would be able to talk. He would be able to sing. He could shuffle a deck of cards. His hands would not shake. And he could walk unassisted without somebody by his arm. Noam, you get the picture, but before you wave the magic wand you have remove from Ali's fight history those unnecessary fights he had that damaged him. Such as Bonavena, Norton 1,2,3 Lyle, Shavers, Frazier #3, Holmes, Berbic. These fights were not necessary to prove Ali's greatness. But they certainly contributed to his brain damage. Would you wave that wand, and remove those fights from Ali's history, and make him healthy again?

Noam, the key point your are missing is in June 1974 Frazier beat Jerry Quarry, who in 1973 had defeated Lyle and for that matter Shavers too. So Joe took the winner to earn his title shot, not the loser. It would make more sense if you said Joe should have fought Young, who in Feb. 1975 beat Lyle but since the target for Frazier to fight again while waiting for his shot at Ali was March, it is doubtful that Young would have taken the fight with only one month to train and only one month after a tough fight with Lyle. Lyle got a title shot later in 1975 and his management knew that a possible loss to Frazier, after losing to Young too, would blow his chance at the title. So in March 1975 Lyle would not have taken a fight with Frazier as he would have been starting training for the title fight verses Ali and also because it was only one month after the Young fight, a tough fight. Lyle did climb back up the rankings ladder in 1974, after losing to Quarry but the fact is he had to climb back up the ladder. Ellis was the available fighter with the right style to prepare Frazier for Ali and Ellis knew it was likely his last chance at the big time and this is why Ellis was difficult at this point. NOAM HAVE YOU SEEN THE FIGHT? ELLIS FIGHTS WELL, HE GAVE FRAZIER TROUBLE. I am not sure of the officials scores but I gave Ellis all of the first five rounds. Joe didn't really start to find the range until the sixth round, late even for him and from that point on he took control leading to a ninth round TKO win for Joe. Forrest, I haven given several reasons why Lyle's management would not take a fight with Frazier, not the other way around but these reasons are ignored. That his inexperience before 1974, which was exposed by Quarry, was one reason and that in 1974 he was gaining experience with good wins over Ellis, Bonevena, and Kirkman, which he used in 1975 to fight Ali. In that year it makes complete sense for Lyle not to fight Frazier, especially after losing to Young, as if he lost to Frazier too, he would have likely lost his title shot and isn't a title shot what fighters work for? | 6/30/05 05:23:54 PM|Noam|same|same|10 |Hi Forest|We've learnt from practical experience that when you open your mouth, you're only doing it to change feet (or take another swig from the bottle). Firstly, I never said that damage to Ali was evident before the Foreman fight. I said I noticed him slurring his words immediately after the fight at ringside. It could have been fatigue but I thought I noticed a difference from how he usually spoke. It was a casual observation. In fact, if you go back through my posts, I've never tried to ignore Ali's damage or flaws from his management, etc. If you think that I have, then it's just your jaundiced mind kicking in (again). I don't fawn over Ali's career like you do over Frazier's. Put down the bottle and go back through the posts and read it with a sober mind. It does make a difference; perhaps you'll begin to perceive things accurately. All I've said is that Ali didn't duck anyone and that Frazier did. QUACK, QUACK, QUACK. WADDLE, WADDLE. Get over it. In regard to the "elimination tournament" you say didn't happen. I quote from page 55 of Frazier's book:"The WBA then came up with a plan for a heavyweight elimination tournament to find the successor to Clay as champion: Their top eight ranked boxers were chosen to fight it out. They were Floyd Patterson, Jimmy Ellis, Thad Spencer, Oscar Bonavena, Karl Mildenberger, Jerry Quarry and me, Joe Frazier. The only problem with the WBA's scheme was that Mr Yancey Durham wasn't buying it. "Screw their tournament," he said, " I don't need them. Let them fight it out and I'll fight the winner." Everyone else was prepared to participate in the tournament but not Frazier. Durham wanted to "deem" the title by giving it to Joe. As usual, they were looking for the easy way out. Same with the no fights against Norton, Lyle, Shavers, et al. Forest, you've become a Dead Parrot Society 'hall of famer'. Facts are washed away by wishful thinking and booze when the topic involves your hero Frazier. Other posters who don't entirely agree with your viewpoint become the enemy upon whom you heap emotive insults. When others have the hide to assess Joe's career unblinkinged, we must be politically correct to appease you. We can't say that Frazier ducked anyone; the 'D' word is unacceptable to Forest. Use the pc term that it was just "smart management". We aren't even allowed to laugh when you tell your jokes. For example, you said that Frazier never fought Norton because he liked him too much. For God's sake, Forest, these guys are boxers. Frazier wouldn't have been fighting his boyfriend. You make it sound like they'd need a prenuptial agreement to fight each other. Then we have tune ups and tune downs and that 'blunder downunder' with Ellis 2. And you deny it. Gimme a break.Your theory works both ways. You say that Frazier fought Quarry in June 1974 because Quarry had beaten Lyle the year before and that Frazier had to fight the winner. Well, Kent, in July 1974 Lyle beat Ellis. Yet in March 1975 Frazier fought the loser Ellis. Your theory doesn't cut it. |I probably understand his condition more than you. Only last week I viewed a recent interview conducted between Ali and Sir David Frost. I bought it so I could better understand Ali's deteriorating medical condition. Not true. Go through my posts and you'll see that I've repeatedly said that Ali is handling his condition with dignity and courage.I agree entirely with you. I suspect that Ali had a pre-disposition to Parkinson's and trauma to the head from boxing probably accelerated it. Perhaps he would have got it later in life even without boxing. In his interview with Sir David Frost, Ali denies that boxing has any link at all to his problem. I think that's probably stretching it. There has to be a linkage in my opinion.
Ali's medical plight). I said that Dundee and Dr Pacheco allowed Ali to fight for too long. I suggested that the Foreman fight should have been his last one.

By the way, Massimo, in his book Frazier says at page 55 that his management refused the offer to be a part of the elimination tournament. Instead of going in the tournament, Frazier decided to fight George Chuvalo. He called Chuvalo the "human shock absorber". I guess he was easier than the tournament. Just because Frazier didn't give his opponents much credit doesn't mean Chuvalo was not a good win for him. Chuvalo was dangerous to anyone who ever fought him. He was very durable and he had a good punch.

Joe stayed out of the WBA tournament because he was already the number one contender. His management felt he had already earned his title shot. The WBA dropped him from number one to number nine without him losing a fight because he didn't enter the tournament. I don't think someone should lose their ranking unless they lose in the ring.

Frazier then won the title sanctioned by the NYAC, along with five other states, Mexico, and parts of South America, a group that would later call itself the WBC, the rival to the WBA with his win over Buster Mathis.

Both titles, back at that time, were considered equal and Frazier unified the title with his win over Ellis in 1970. Ellis was not considered the universal champion at all during that period and he would have if he had beaten Frazier. Frazier ended up defending against Quarry and Bonevena and along with his win over Ellis and his win over Ali in 1971, he beat the best around at that time. The finalists in the WBA tournament had two fights with top contenders to gain the title shot within a year's time and Frazier defended against two fighters who were in the tournament plus Mathis in about a the same amount of time. He also fought Chuvalo not too long before this.

Frazier was not just sitting back doing nothing. He was fighting and he earned his title.
occasion you claimed to be a NY City police officer. I suppose neither is mutually exclusive, but who are you today? Now, to your question. If I had a magic wand would I wave it and repair Ali's health? Oddball inquiry, Forest, and where is this heading? Do you believe in magic? Are you really a witch today? What the heck. I'll answer your question, anyway. Yes, I'd wave the wand and cure Ali. I'd wave it for Joe, too. And Jerry Quarry and Joe Louis and everyone else who the sport harmed. Wouldn't you? Everyday you have been caught out in the past, Forest, you never apologize and admit error. You usually disappear for a month or so, hoping everyone forgets what a jerk you made of yourself. Probably off on some sort of binge.

Frazier's fight with Mathis in 1968 was for the vacant New York Heavyweight Title. I assume that they had to make it up because Frazier ducked the WBA elimination tournament. It was a face saving exercise. By the way, at page 69 of his book, Frazier says this about his 'fight' against Dave Zyglewicz:"The press made the fight out to be a farce and wondered out loud whether Smokin' Joe was ducking the serious contenders to fight dog meat." Well, 30 years on, Joe, many of us are still wondering out loud! Frazier even acknowledges at page 125 that the press were "skeptical" about his fight with Terry Daniels who weighed only 191 pounds. The press asked Joe, "Is Daniels better than your sparring partners?" Joe answered: "A little." After the fight Daniels complained that "they needed a math major for a referee, he had to count so much" (in reference to how many times he was knocked down). Ron Stander was Frazier's next opponent. At page 126 Frazier said of him, "Stander was known as a beer-guzzling, knockabout character - a kind of midwestern Tony Galento. He said things like, "How much beer do I drink? I lose count after a case". Or: "Have I ever been knocked down? Yeah. By the police with a nightstick." Stander's wife was reported as saying (at page 127 of Frazier's book): "Ron gets hurt every time he goes in the ring because he's never been in shape," she said. "How do I know Ron gets hurt? Because after a lot of fights he doesn't know what he is doing and doesn't remember what happened." That about says it all, doesn't it.

Frazier in the history of heavyweights? Also tell me about the different fights of Frazier you have seen and what you thought.

Remember this. Jimmy Ellis was a blown up middleweight. That ain't saying much for Jerry Quarry when Ellis beat him. Jerry blew the opportunity of his career in that fight.

The WBA tournament took place starting in about August of 1967 and it lasted into 1968. So no there was no elimination tournament in 1969. I am not sure why the NYSAC, the other states, and parts of what would later become the WBC decided on Mathis as one of the contestants for the title but I do know at the time Frazier's title was at least as well regarded as the WBA title and both disputed titles became undisputed when Frazier beat Ellis in 1970. Of course really lifted all doubts to his claim to heavyweight champion when he beat Ali in 1971. Angelo, a good analogy but boxing and basketball are different sports. Boxing tradition has shown that a number one ranking has been a way to get a title shot. It would be nice if an elimination tournament was held each year in each division but in reality, the WBA heavyweight tournament in 1967-68 was the exception, not the rule.

Giacomo Toney is another blown up middleweight, but this doesn't mean he ain't ("ain't" in this case means " is not", but is way cooler) good as a heavyweight! Ezzard Charles was another. Maybe the best thing to have a great career in the heavyweight division is starting from the flyweight division.Even if JQ DID beat almost all the best punchers of his generation (with the exception of Giorgio), I can't rate him higher than Joe Frazier in heavyweight history. Am I wrong? What do you Angelo and Noam think about it?\][7/2/05 04:51:02 AM|Noam|same||same||||10|Kent]Forest was either saying that there was no tournament or he was playing with semantics and saying that there was no tournament in 1969. But we all know the tournament that was talked about; semantics don't change the facts.[7/2/05 04:51:52 AM|Noam|same||same||||10|Kent]Of course, I know the first Ali and Frazier fight which Frazier won. Ali was out of the ring for three years and he was rusty and should have taken another fight before that one. But he lost nonetheless.[7/2/05 05:35:56 AM|Massimo |Roma||4||||10|Noam-]Fan, in history terms, I have Joe outside the top 10 heavyweights of all time. At the top is Louis or Ali and I change between the two. Sometimes I even think Marciano should be the greatest. I think that Louis and Marciano - with their special power - would have destroyed Joe in a couple of rounds. Holmes would have outboxed him. Joe's head movement was great and the side to side bobbing helped him disguise when he was going to jump up with that great left hook. He liked to work in close and used his head upwards against taller fighters. This was awkward for them. He couldn't do this to Foreman because he was too powerful and too tall.\][7/2/05 05:45:19 AM|Noam-]I think Ali'-Frazier 2 was probably a draw. Ali' won rounds 2, 6, 9, 11 while Frazier won 3, 7, 8, 10. Of course, it could go either way, but no way for more than 2 points. \][7/2/05 05:54:24 AM|Massimo |Roma|4|||10|Noam-] I have Ali' ahead by 1 point in Manilla after 14 rounds. He clearly won the last 3 rounds of the fight (especially 13 and 14). But I think Frazier deffenetely won the third round; it was a present by Ali as Cassio Marcello did let Joe punch him on the ropes with no reaction for about one minute. Ali sometimes liked clowing in the ring (he did so so much against Ron Lyle), I think just to show he was so much better than the other guy that he shouldn't bother about being serious.

Massimo: Frazier ranks higher than JQ all time. He beat JQ twice by TKO, was a Champion and had the legendary fights with Ali. Frazier falls short of Quarry in one regard: Quarry took on everyone, including Lyle, Norton and Shavers (winning two of these three fights rather impressively) while all three of these important heavyweights are missing from Frazier's schedule. This supports the theory that even in losing to Norton, at least Quarry had the guts to get in the ring. But based on Frazier winning head-to-head bouts against Jerry twice, and holding the title, and beating Ali (while JQ lost twice to Ali) you give the comfortable nod to Frazier. As mentioned though, the list of common opponents is shorter than it should be with the curious omissions of Lyle, Shavers and Norton ("conincidentally" three big punchers). Kent: I don't buy the explanation that just because NCAA basketball and boxing are two different sports, my analogy doesn't hold up. But okay, let me try this one: Olympic boxing: The, let's say, Canadien heavyweight gets to sit out the entire Olympics, while all other countries' representatives battle it out, fighting two or three times each. Then, on the last day, for the Gold Medal, suddenly the Canadien guy is "ready" and gets his chance against the Cuban who beat everyone else. It's not a fair way to determine the overall winner because any of those guys the Cuban beat might have beaten the Canadien at the time of the tournament. Guess what? In this context, the Canadien would be out of luck. But "Lucky Joe" got to let everyone else battle it out before taking on Ellis. You know what? Joe was better than Ellis, Joe beat Quarry, Joe might have beaten everyone in that tournament, Patterson included. But he didn't compete and that's the point. He didn't compete then, and he failed to satisfy the requirement of being a GREAT champion or a great contender even, and that's to take all comers, to avoid no one, to get in the ring and give your best against the top fighters of your era. Quarry did it, Ali did it, the other guys all fought against eachother. Kent, I know you've offered some compelling debate about timing and friendships and rankings and tune-ups, etc., but Shavers, Lyle and Norton were all worthy opponents from the early through mid 1970's when Frazier was active. They were top ten fighters at a time when he was fighting lesser opponents like (as Noam so eloquently phrased it) "clapped out" Jimmy Ellis (that term seems to describe a 1962 Rambler with a shot transmission---and hey, that's about right for a 1975 Ellis). Joe was "managed" carefully and we're thankful that he had a lot of good years in retirement and had the mental wherewithal to write books slamming his slower, weaker tomato can opponents. It's nice that his memory/recollection of crystal jaw Jimmy, slow Terry and drunk Ron was so strong 20 years later, he was able to give us those insights. But the book might have been different, or not written at all if he was in against Lyle, Shavers and Norton, with the possibility that those fights would have ended like his two disasters against Foreman. We're all happy for him that his "team" preserved him by keeping him out of the "pre-1969" tournament and out of the ring against brutal punchers of the '70's. That's all good.
been stopped when it should have, no one would have as strong an image of Joe being knocked down six times in less than two rounds. I will use as an example the Quarry/Shavers fight. If the referee had allowed Shavers to continue after being badly hurt by Quarry in the first round, as Shavers did beat the count after being knocked down, and Shavers had been knocked down over and over again, then in your reasoning, Shavers would have been humiliated. But this fight was properly stopped and everyone sees that Shavers was just caught and hurt early and knocked out, which is what happened. You also totally ignore the fact that before 1975 both Shavers and Lyle were not ready for Frazier as they were inexperienced which was shown by them losing to Quarry. They both gained the experience needed in from 1974 onward and that in Shavers' case he started to emerge in 1975 onward as 1974 was a bad year for him with starting in December 1973 with the loss to Quarry and throughout the next year with losses to Bob "The Immortal" Stallings and a draw with Jimmy Young.

Lyle was gaining the experience needed in the rest of 1973, after the loss to Quarry and 1974 but he used the experience to go after the title verses Ali instead of fighting Frazier, a wise move as the title is what fighters strive for. Since it is these two fighters who seem to be the main ones you think Frazier avoided. You ignore the fact that there was a very small time period when fights with Frazier would have taken place, 1975. Lyle might have very well not wanted a fight with Frazier as he had lost to Young and a possible second loss to Frazier would have made him lose his title shot. The fact that both Lyle and Shavers were good prospects and that their managers wanted to protect them by not putting them in over their heads too soon is another reason why fights with Frazier didn't happen.

Fights between Frazier and Daniels and Frazier and Stander did happen as even though Stander was the better of these two, their managers knew that one chance was all they would have as they were not that good as prospects, Daniels because he didn't have much talent, so he couldn't be ruined as a prospect and Stander because of his poor training habits. I also think the same argument regarding Quarry can be made about another big puncher Frazier supposedly avoided, Mac Foster, meaning, if you don't beat Quarry, then you are not ready or don't have the talent to beat Frazier. I think in the case of Foster that yes he would have a puncher's chance against anyone but even though he had that and he had a good long left jab, he had slow footwork and he didn't have a lot of hand speed. I don't think, unless he got lucky, he could have held Frazier off.

I think the logic doesn't work for either fighter. That there were other reasons why certain fights didn't happen. Such as Foreman was too good a prospect to put in with Liston when Foreman was coming up. He would have been in over his head. Just like Lyle and Shavers, before 1975 and in Shavers' case 1976, would have been in over their heads with Frazier. When they were ready, Lyle took the Ali fight instead and in Shavers case Frazier was gone from the scene.

I think the logic doesn't work for either fighter. That there were other reasons why certain fights didn't happen. Such as Foreman was too good a prospect to put in with Liston when Foreman was coming up. He would have been in over his head. Just like Lyle and Shavers, before 1975 and in Shavers' case 1976, would have been in over their heads with Frazier. When they were ready, Lyle took the Ali fight instead and in Shavers' case Frazier was gone from the scene.

I also think the same argument regarding Quarry can be made about another big puncher Frazier supposedly avoided, Mac Foster, meaning, if you don't beat Quarry, then you are not ready or don't have the talent to beat Frazier. I think in the case of Foster that yes he would have a puncher's chance against anyone but even though he had that and he had a good long left jab, he had slow footwork and he didn't have a lot of hand speed. I don't think, unless he got lucky, he could have held Frazier off.

I think the logic doesn't work for either fighter. That there were other reasons why certain fights didn't happen. Such as Foreman was too good a prospect to put in with Liston when Foreman was coming up. He would have been in over his head. Just like Lyle and Shavers, before 1975 and in Shavers' case 1976, would have been in over their heads with Frazier. When they were ready, Lyle took the Ali fight instead and in Shavers' case Frazier was gone from the scene.
having a tournament every year. Even if they were held every 30 years, the same argument holds up: He who stays out of the tournament shouldn't get the reward of just going after the winner after everyone else has fairly competed. If Frazier was the best, and he very well might have been, he belonged in the tourney to prove himself. He opted out. It was a familiar theme for Joe's team, the path of least resistance. And you know, you keep going back to Joe didn't have to face Mac Foster because Jerry beat him, Joe didn't have to fight Earnie Shavers because Jerry beat him, Joe didn't have to fight Ron Lyle because Jerry beat him—-for pity's sake, why did Joe have to wait for the guy he could beat to knock off the others? Sounds like a classic way to avoid trouble---hide your time and let dominoes knock down other dominoes—you only have to take one of them and by default, you've beaten them all! That might hold water with you, but it doesn't with me. We know that styles make fights and part of the fascination of boxing is when a guy like Ray Leonard gets a decision over Hagler (Forget that the decision was controversial---at best, the fight was a draw or even a very slight Hagler win, but the point is that people expected Hagler to KO Leonard early and because of styles, it didn't go that way.). Champions don't wait for others to do their work for them. Hey, Foreman crushed Norton and Ali KOed Foreman. So that should have taken Ali off the hook from having to give Norton another fight. Guess what? In Yankee Stadium, Ali put his title on the line against a younger, fresher, stronger Ken Norton. Ali beat Quarry twice and Quarry beat Lyle and Shavers. Okay, Ali doesn't have to face these guys. Except, he did, both of them. Was this a case of Ali's handlers being careless? I doubt it. It was a case of a Champion wanting to be a real Champion by taking on the top ten fighters regardless of how they performed against common opponents. Kent, I really doubt that Lyle or Shavers would have turned down a money fight against Joe Frazier, circa 1974. In 1975, Shavers was more worthy of a "shot" against contender Frazier than walking wounded Jimmy Ellis was. I don't think it was Shavers who was afraid of the outcome of a fight with Frazier. We could speculate all day on who avoided who—but when it's ONE MAN who failed to fight everyone else (even though "everyone else" was fighting each other) you walk away feeling that maybe that ONE MAN was the one who was, and I'll go ahead and use the term, DUCKING the competition...the knockout capable, live fighter competition. To form an opinion of who avoided who, I don't have to look further than the fights that Frazier DID take on (Bugner, who couldn't knock out a parakeet, Ellis, who was previously easily defeated by Frazier when he actually could fight and was done by '75, Daniels...you list the rest). Simply put, my opinion is that the only boxer we've been discussing who might have avoided Frazier and not the other way around is Ken Norton, who didn't fare well against strong KO guys himself.

Clarification: In my last post, what I meant to say was that from Hagler's viewpoint, at best the fight against Leonard was a draw or a slight win. I actually scored the fight in favor of Leonard by a point---even considering that Hagler was the Champion, I might have given the nod to Sugar Ray, by a thread.

And Kent, before you bring up that there was "no money" in Frazier-Lyle or Frazier-Shavers, keep in mind that there was LESS MONEY in Frazier-Daniels or Frazier-Ellis II. (held half way around the world it was such a stink bomb). This wasn't about money or about buddy-buddy can't fight that guy (Norton). It seems like a clear-cut strategy to keep Frazier from getting shelled again like he did against Foreman. And one more time, Frazier would have fought whoever they told him to, including King Kong or Godzilla. I don't think it was about Frazier's courage, but it WAS about a smart management team who didn't want to lose title fights against Ali (read,$$$) by walking into a landmine like Earnie Shavers or Ron Lyle. Smart? Yes, but it tarnished Frazier's place in boxing history. His "place" is that he fought Ali in two very exciting fights and one decent fight. His "place" has nothing to do with clobbering Jimmy Ellis or beating Joe Bugner. It's the notoriety of fighting well against the greatest, Ali, and the notorious "Down Goes Frazier" highlight film of being shellacked by Big George. | 7/2/05 05:22:49 PM|Massimo |Rom||4|||10|Kent:Foreman 1 fought 3 hard punchers: Lyle, Norton and Frazier! On the other hand Frazier ducked Lyle, Norton and Frazier? What's the excuse for Frazier not fighting Frazier? | 7/2/05 05:56:34 PM|Massimo |Rom||4|||10|Angelo:Bugner, who couldn't knockout a parakeet (I wonder what the hell a parakeet is) actually stunned Frazier in the tenth round of their legendary fight. Bugner got knocked out by Bud Spencer in many movies.| 7/2/05 07:29:09 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Okay, Kent, "humiliating" is not a politically correct word (just like the word "ducking" wasn't) so let's ignore that he got knocked down heaps of times. We'll politely say that Joe kept getting up, which, I agree, was brave and noteworthy. However, his destruction was complete and it left an indelible mark in the minds of people judging his place in boxing history.They weren't flash knockdowns. The knockdowns weren't flukes. They happened and they happened with disturbing regularity for someone claiming to be one of the greatest of all time.Massimo - I disagree with you about Ali 3. I thought his win was decisive. I defer to your opinion on the second fight as it's a long time since I've seen it.It's hard with Frazier to judge some things. Relatively few of his fights are on tape. With Ali we had blockbuster fights against Frazier, Liston, Norton, Foreman. But Frazier's only legendary fights were against Ali and Foreman (and he lost 4 from 5 of them).While you can see Ali's fights against London and all the other relative minnows of the era on tape, there's no interests in Joe's fights against anyone outside of Ali, Foreman and Quarry.It's like history has correctly judged Joe's fights against the many lesser lights he fought - guys like Stander and Daniels, et al - for what they really were......almost exhibition fights against opposition barely better than his sparring partners.We saw that from Joe's own words and it is a pity that he is viewed this way. If only he had taken on all the real contenders of his era than history would have viewed him more sympathetically. As it stands now all his fans can say is that he "woulda" and "shoulda" beat those guys but we'll never know.Those other fights he had were such nothings that it appears that no one bothered to archive tapes of them.Massimo: A parakeet is a very small ornamental bird people buy at pet shops and keep in their homes, in a very small cage! By flicking your finger, you can knock one out---but I'm not sure if Bugner could. And what you say, Bugner stunned Frazier? It's funny how many times people have referred to Frazier's fights and defended his opponent selection by saying how he was knocked down by this guy, stunned by that guy, another guy "won the first five rounds" (in Melbourne, Austrailia) even though his best years were far behind him and he was 1-4-1 heading into the blockbuster. Gee, maybe all this success against Frazier wasn't because these guys were so good. Hey, did he duck Wepner?| 7/3/05 12:14:26 AM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10|It's not true that Frazier's title bouts are not on film. I've seen most of them, with the exception of the Daniels fiasco, ESPNC has shown the Stander fight several times. Frazier vs Norton, Lyle and Shavers could not have happened before 1974 or 75. By that time Frazier's only target was Ali and nobody else. He didn't need the money or take the chance of a loss to Lyle or Shavers. I'm not saying Frazier could not have beaten those two, especially Shavers who may have hit hard but had, at the time at least, no jab, slow foot work, almost no defensive skills and his chin was suspect. Lyle on the other hand was the third or fourth ranked contender after Ali beat Foreman and in line for a certain title shot. Even if Lyle beat Frazier he would be putting a title shot at risk to do it. I am not saying Frazier's title reign looks good in retrospect. From 1970 to 73 he could have fought Leotis Martin, Henry Clark, Jurgen Blin, maybe Urtain? or Ernie Terrell, who he looked terrible against in a couple of exhibitions. Let's not forget that at the time '68 through '73 Frazier was being compared to Marciano, Louis and Dempsey by most boxing writers. Only a few, Cosell among them thought Foreman had a chance to beat him. Does that mean that Frazier is not a great fighter because he decided to fight a couple of relative nobodies, Daniels and Stander? Joe Louis fought three years worth of guy's like that. Does that mean the Louis was not a great fighter? I don't think so. At the time Frazier held the title everyone was sure he would have a long reign as champion, had that happened a couple of easy touches wouldn't look so bad. The bottom line is if you compaire all of the heavyweight champions in history they all pale in the shadow of Ali. He fought the best of the best. And beat them all.

| 7/3/05 12:43:45 AM | Noam | save || save ||| 10 | Thanks Bob for the correction. Do you know whether they are available for purchase if someone wanted to buy them. |
| 7/3/05 04:18:41 AM | Massimo | Roma | || parakeet.com |||| 10 | I think that the two Frazier-Bonavena fights were pretty legendary (and they are available on tape, I have seen the first many times and part of the second once). I think the way Frazier dominated Bonavena the second time was worth a clap! Bravo Joe, bravo !!!! But I agree that Joe should have fought at least one among the following names: Lyle, Shavers, Liston, Mac Foster. His place in history now would be a step higher.  Angelo  It's not a question of opinions, in the second half of the tenth round Bugner clearly stunned Frazier! But Frazier won the round as he had knocked Bugner down in the first round.  I think in judging Frazier we gotta consider that the truth is always (or at least often) in the middle! In the middle between what Kent thinks and what Noam and Angelo think. Cheers. |
| 7/3/05 11:17:30 AM | Angelo | dc | || funktron@yahoo.com |||| 10 | Massimo: Oh, I have no doubt it's fact, not opinion. I haven't seen this fight since the year it happened, so I can't comment on how badly Frazier was stunned by Bug's punch. My point was that I still consider Bugner to be a decent opponent, but not any type of knockout threat to most quality heavies. The fact that he "stunned" Frazier makes me wonder if it's that Bugner was that good, or Frazier not so good. Frazier seemed to get stunned or knocked down too often for a "great" fighter. And then there's the fact that as Kent saw Frazier-Ellis II (Rumble Down Under), Frazier gave up the first five rounds to a guy who was at one time, pretty good, but by '75, out of petrol. We've heard (heck, I've been as guilty or more guilty than others here) that Frazier was a "slow starter" so it's okay that he spotted five rounds to Ellis. Don't forget too, that if only Frazier-Foreman #1 had been stopped after, say, the fourth knockdown, it wouldn't have left this image in our minds that Frazier was knocked around the ring like a soccer ball. Kent says that if it had been stopped sooner, people wouldn't feel Frazier was trounced that badly. It's funny how when Bobick-Norton was stopped after just one knockdown, EVERYONE made Bobick the brunt of jokes---boxing fans, people who know nothing about boxing, late night television hosts, even game show hosts (stupid-ass Richard Dawson made some joke about it on Family Feud). So Bobick is caught flat-footed by Norton and the whole world makes him a laughing stock---but it's only because Frazier was allowed to be knocked down six times in 5 minutes by Foreman that we question his management's desire for him to take on big punchers. No, if they had stopped it earlier, I'd STILL argue that he was then intentionally kept away from other power punchers. I think that Ernie "Clay" Terrell would have given Frazier some problems by using his huge advantage in reach and witness. I have seen Terrell next to Frazier on tape just before the Frazier-Bonavena 1 fight started and Ernie made Joe look very andre'. But I think Joe would have beaten Ernie on points or by late round knockout. If Joe had asked Ernie "What's my name ?" I think Ernie would have given the right answer this time.

Massimo: Joe would have his way with guys like Bunny Johnson, Jody Ballard, Duane Bobick, Scott LeDoux, Leroy Caldwell--- he'd decision Tex Cobb, he'd KO Lorenzo Zanon like JQ did, he'd squeak out wins over guys like Renaldo Snipes, Leon Spinks, David Bay, maybe Greg Page---these were the category of fighters he loved to take on to showcase his talent. He'd probably beat Norton. I think he'd have a very hard time with Mike Weaver. He'd beat Michael Spinks, somehow. He'd lose to Leroy Jones by decision. Jimmy Young could win a tough decision but it would be close. Most of the time, Ali would beat him, Holmes would beat him. Foreman did beat him. All in all, that's about where he ranks: Below the upper crust by a comfortable margin, above the lower guys by a comfortable margin---above the middle layer, but not by a whole lot. I believe Ron Lyle would have knocked him senseless. I beleive Earnie Shavers MIGHT have knocked him out early---or Frazier would have KOed Shavers in the middle to late rounds. However, this is based on them fighting eachother around 1974. If you went prime vs. prime (Frazier, say, 1970 vs. Shavers, 1977) I think Shavers would win. Shavers matured as a fighter---became more disciplined, better trained, more patient---by the time he was fighting Ali and Holmes ('77, '78, '79) he was capable of conserving energy and pacing himself to go the distance. He still packed a powerful punch that could and did get Ali and Holmes in a heap of trouble. These guys could take a better punch than Frazier, especially Ali. Holmes was a more clever boxer than Frazier, and had a knack for surviving a round after someone dropped him, which apparently, wasn't easy for Frazier based on the disasters against Foreman. Make no mistake about it---Foreman was some finisher. But Jimmy Young showed how a slippery boxer could survive after being staggered by Foreman. Frazier couldn't get it done. He was a deserving Champion, not a fluke. But there are a lot of heavyweight champions and contenders would have their way with him. There were too many holes in his game. His handlers knew it and that's why we've been having this discussion about him for it seems like the better part of six months. The fights were never made because he was exposed as being vulnerable to a heavy puncher. I know that there's some esoteric argument about a possibility that they avoided him. I think that's too hard to swallow. They all fought eachother, so if one guy was out of the mix, I point to his team as being responsible for the game of "keep away." I think Noam said it: "If it waddles like a duck and quacks like a duck, it's a duck."

If I recall rightly, the first Frazier v Bonavena fight was a split decision. The result could have gone either way. Joe was lucky not to have been knocked out by Bonavena anyway. Joe was also nearly knocked out in the second fight with Ali, early on when the referee made the mistake. Ali was not that hard a puncher and Bonavena was not renowned as a huge hitter either. My point is, although we think that Frazier would have beaten Terrell and Foster and Norton and Shavers and Lyle, we'll never know because he didn't fight them. I'm confident that at least one or two of those guys would have beaten Joe, especially after the first Ali fight. I mean, if Bonavena can put Joe down twice (showing the first one wasn't a fluke), then TIMBERS when he is in against Shavers and Lyle. My view is that Joe was exposed for what he was when he fought Foreman. He was very vulnerable against big punchers. So, whenever possible, he avoided them. Smart management, sure, but it leaves a stain on his career.And given his vulnerability against big punchers, then forget him beating Louis or Marciano or Tyson. Therefore, in my view, he is not Top 10 material, even if you revere him as much as Kent and Forest do. |7/3/05 08:54:23 PM|Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|I go back and forth on how I feel about Frazier (Joe) vs. Tyson. Young Tyson was a tiger. If he flew out of the gate in round one head-hunting, and Joe didn't answer fast, I could see Tyson ending the fight very early. But Tyson did not enjoy the big height advantage on Frazier like Foreman did. If Joe could survive through a few rounds and start trading with Tyson, and get in a rhythm, Tyson might get discouraged—he showed he could wear down and Frazier had a way of making fighters wear down. But again, I think back to how Tyson demolished guys early in his career, and think back to how Frazier was demolished twice against Foreman. It's a tough call. It's interesting that Joe Frazier helped Marvis with a strategy against Tyson. I think their plan was to have Marvis give a lot of up and down head movement, but not fight going backwards. They were on to something—I think it was proved later that if you came forward against Tyson, you could throw him off his game. The problem is, he got to Marvis very early and panic set in. Before the fight, Joe said "We have something for him (Tyson)." After the fight, I think Marvis' feeling was that "I had something for him, but he didn't give me a chance to deliver it—I don't see how any of the current heavies have a chance against this guy—you can't keep him off of you and he's by far the hardest puncher I've ever seen." Well, what Buster Douglas did was unconventional—instead of doing what every single other fighter did, worry about DEFENSE against Tyson, Douglas was more concerned about how to hurt Tyson. Granted, he had an airtight defense for the first few rounds, but what he did was jab effectively and set up crosses. By the later rounds, he was focused on hurting Tyson as much as avoiding trouble. That became the blueprint for beating Tyson.

|7/4/05 01:48:21 AM|Noam|same||same|||10|Angelo — putting Marvin in there with Tyson might not have been smart management. And even if Tyson was around in Frazier's day, there's no guarantee that they would have fought.Massimo—I rewatched the third round of the Ali v Frazier third fight. My take on it was this: Ali hit Frazier with three meaningful lefts early in the round before settling on the ropes covering up. Frazier kept throwing punches but didn't really land any. They hit Ali's forearms and some below the belt on the hips. Ali's head lurched back a few times when Joe threw short upper cuts, but they were taken on the gloves and did no damage. Ali then put on a sustained flurry, fighting off the ropes, landing head punches, and then turning Frazier around so that he was on the ropes in the corner. I thought Ali clearly won the round. Of course, everything is subjective. Massimo, how is your work as a physicist? What are you working on now? I had Einstein's theory of relatively explained to me. If you have a pretty girl sitting on your lap for an hour it seems like a minute. However, if you are getting punched in the head by Marciano for a minute it seems like an hour. That is the 'theory', in layman's terms that dopes like me can understand. Massimo, one more thing. A hypothetical question. If Ali had Frazier's management what would have happened and when would he have retired? Likewise, if Frazier had Ali's management, what was his fate (or destiny; which is the right word?)?

Massimo, I am a long time amateur astronomer. I just picked up a vintage Celestron G8 orange tube Schmidt Cassagrain reflector from the late 1970s in almost new condition for 1000 dollars, a great buy as it is the grandfather of all the Celestrons, Meades, etc. I had just given away one of my other telescopes, an eight inch Orion dobsonian to my brother that is pretty beat up, the tube has a lot of marks on it but the optics are still in good working order. But it isn't worth much money. I needed to make room as I have too many scopes and now I have a new one. Oh well, I couldn't pass up a good deal.I figure that since you know physics, you likely know astronomy too. | |7/4/05 04:28:26 AM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|Noam-The Special Theory of Relativity is NOT as trivial as people usually thinks. It took a great genius to think about it! Lorentz (not an idiot himself, he won the Nobel Prize in 1902) wrote the right starting equations but couldn't understand their physical meaning. A huge revolution was needed to understand their meaning and that's what Albert did. I don't think that many persons in history could have thought of it. Maybe Newton, maybe Gauss, maybe only (or just) one: Einstein. The theory doesn't take lots of Maths and is based on an apparently simple but actually very deep (or profound) idea. The GENERAL theory of relativity is MUCH more hard to understand and takes MUCH more Maths. A great genius (such as the American Richard Philips Feynman) once said that he had no idea about how Einstein had thought of General Relativity. It was one of the greatest masterpieces in THOUGHT history. Albert was smart! Very smart indeed! I [it's very embarrassing talking (or speaking) about myself now] have recently taken a Master in Nuclear Physics and I am unemployed, looking for a job. I was thinking about bouncing. At 5'6" 130lbs I think it might work! I think Ron Lyle had holes in his game too. The way he lost to Gerry Cooney and Lynn "Joe Louis, who" Ball was pretty embarrassing. Ali' put "morally" him away with one punch, after all! I don't think he would have knocked Frazier senseless. Nobody couldn't. Frazier would have NEVER lost with his ass on the canvas. Maybe Lyle would have stopped him like Foreman did in Kingston, but never knocked him out. | |7/4/05 04:40:01 AM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|Kent-I'm sorry but I don't know that much about astronomy. I know the basics and I read a couple of divulgation books, that's all! Physics is a huge, morally endless Science and everyone usually is specialized in one or two fields. Actually every field is huge itself. | |7/4/05 06:15:59 AM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|Noam-If Frazier had Ali's management, he might have a few more losses in his record and a worse health today as well. Very honestly speaking, Frazier never proved he could take a really HARD punch (but not many fighters actually could). I think he had a top heavyweight chin, but not in the same league as people like Ali', Chuvalo, Quarry, Holmes and maybe even Peralta. Even Ron Stander stunned him. I think he would have beaten people like Terrell and Patterson and that his huge heart would have allowed him to beat the big punchers sometimes but not always. So, if he had fought (or fought) all the big punchers of his generation like Ali' did he probably would have a couple more losses in his record.If Ali' had Frazier's managent I don't think they would have allowed him to fight after Manilla. And they would have been right! | |7/4/05 08:40:48 AM|Angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Massimo: Younger Ron Lyle was able to take punches and knockdowns and fight back. Look at his fights with Foreman and Shavers. If he opened up on Frazier early in the fight, which I think he would have, we could have another Kingston fiasco. Speaking of which, I don't know if we've talked Cooney-Frazier, but that's another interesting matchup---Cooney was tall and threw punches with leverage and power. No, he wasn't Foreman, but he might not have to be to take out Frazier. | |7/4/05 02:05:17 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Massimo, I don't think the relativity is hard to understand, either general or special. Now to be able to prove that they work, that is hard with all of the math, in both cases, at least not for someone who doesn't have a lot of math background.The concepts themselves can be explained as long as I don't have to do the math, which I don't have to do as I am just an amateur astronomer who likely will not even have a degree in the field.I do understand the concepts of gravity can bend time, that is why the planet Mercury was not keeping to its postional schedule according to Newton's theory because it is so close to the sun, a strong gravity force, they actually thought there could be another planet closer to the sun than Mercury causing it. I also understand that when traveling at a high rate of speed, that time slows down. That if a spacecraft was going at the speed of light, then a lot more time would have gone by on Earth than on the spacecraft. I also understand the concept of $E=MC^2$, I don't know how to write it with the 2 at the top of the "C." That energy = mass times the constant times itself. But to prove it on paper by doing the math, no way. If memory serves me the constant is the speed of light. Now I can plug the numbers in and get the correct energy amount but prove why, again, no way.

\[7/4/05 03:48:50 PM\] Angelo\[dc]\[funktron@yahoo.com]\[10\] Kent: I enjoy reading about astronomy---don't currently own a telescope though. I've noticed that a lot of people who are into astronomy also enjoy shortwave radio (myself included). These days, I don't have as much time as I used to, but it's still fun to pull out the portable shortwave radio on a weekend night and see what I can tune in. A friend of mine told me you can access a lot of these distant channels on the internet (probably not the independent HAM operators though) but what fun is that? The real fun is turning the big rotary dial and wondering what you're picking up. It's easy and cheap to get an old shortwave radio on eBay (they start at about $15.00 plus shipping for a good old one) and range up into the hundreds for a very good name brand old model. It's a fun hobby.

\[7/4/05 04:23:43 PM\] Massimo\[Roma]\[4]\[10\] Kent-First of all, congratulations for your knowledge! There are many different levels of comprehension of a subject in Physics. Without using the maths you can get to the level of understanding that the theory is plausible and not completely dumb. This is a first very important step. But being able to perform some calculations make you understand much better how the theory works. Knowledge in Physics is an operative knowledge. You must be able to use what you learnt to solve problems. You can't be sure you have understood (or at least that you have understood at a satisfactory level until you can solve problems). You must be able to use what you have just learnt. Sometimes in college I was sure I had understood a subject until I eventually realized I wasn't able to get through (or of getting through) an exam because I wasn't able to solve (or of solving) the problem the professors wanted me to solve. It happened to me more than once (more, more...). Even Quantum Mechanics can be understood at a first (very low actually) level without using Maths, but using the Schrödinger equation and all the rest allows you to go way further. Another thing: a physical theory cannot be proved on paper. You need the experiment too. You have to perform an experiment, look at the results you get, make (or do) your calculations by using your theory's equations and control that the results are the same in both cases (experiment and calculations). If that's the case it means that your theory works and that you are a good theorical physicist. On the other hand, if that ain't the case it means that you are a bum. In pure Maths you can prove everything on paper and you don't need any experiment. For me it's pretty hard to talk of these things in English; I hope what I wrote is not a complete mess!

\[7/4/05 05:23:54 PM\] Kent\[Murrieta, Ca\] kentallent@aol.com\[10\] Massimo, yes more than a basic knowledge is needed to apply things like relativity. But sometimes when people get caught up in procedure such as math they lose sight of what they are doing it for. Any field, science included, has a certain language you must learn and if the average person knew the language, then the so called experts would be amazed that they really are not that much smarter than other people. It is just the experts know the language they are dealing with. Einstein was unique in that he could see, so to speak, "the forest from the trees," he had the ability to see the bigger picture and he didn't get caught up in the process. I believe that was his brilliance. Angelo, a lot of my astronomy friends are also into shortwave but I don't know much about it. I do get a kick out of hearing one of my friends talk to someone from far away. |

Noam.Agree.Frazier was good little heavyweight. The greatest little heavyweight of all time was Rocky, who would have treated Joe worse than anybody he fought, including Foreman. |

Firstly, Rocky was surrounded by mafioso types, yet he never threw a fight. His will to win was so great he wouldn't contemplate it. Secondly, he never succumbed to a bad night. He took no one lightly, always came to fight, and won every one of them. He was also never beaten to the final bell. There were many times - probably the most notable against Walcott when he won the title - when he needed a late knockout to win. He kept going until he got it. And never in the history of boxing did a champion mess the other guy up as much as Rocky did. No one was ever the same after they fought him the first time. They always got smashed in the rematch, as we saw with Ezzard Charles and Walcott.

Rocky had so much power, and such an enormous all-conquering will to win, that he is a chance against anyone in heavyweight history. Perhaps he was the only guy with enough power to put one on Ali's jaw that would actually knocked him out. I think Marciano would have cleaned Tyson up. Marciano was too strong mentally for Tyson and eventually Mike would have surrendered to him. A prime Louis v Marciano would have been very interesting. I'd probably favour Louis but with Marciano's power, how can you be sure? I don't think Marciano would have any trouble beating Frazier because Frazier was vulnerable to big punchers and Marciano was certainly that. Marciano against Foreman would be close. Foreman might have been just too big and too strong. Interesting one that would be.

One more thing; Marciano's elbows were the best in the business.

I used to think Marciano was the "Brigham Young National Champions of Boxing" (The year Brigham Young's football team won the National Championship, they were undefeated---and won the Holiday Bowl against Michigan, who had a record of 6-5-1. Other teams who played a stronger schedule were 9-2 or even 10-1, but Brigham Young was undefeated, so they won the title based on that---I'm not sure if it was both polls or just the AP Coaches poll. Anyway, I used to think that 49-0 is great, but Rocky's small, who did he fight, today's guys would beat him and a bunch of other nonsense. After taking the time to learn about him and watch highlight films of his fights, my opinion now is that very few heavyweights in history would have stood up to his relentless onslaught/constant pressure and hard punches. I could see Ali winning a very close decision. I could see Joe Louis in his prime getting a win. Maybe a couple other guys would give Rocky a tough fight---Larry Holmes comes to mind because he had a very strong left jab and could move---and could also go 15 strong rounds. Foreman and Tyson had the power to KO anyone if they landed. Liston, ditto. But we're talking about a handful of guys with a real chance at beating Marciano, and so many others who wouldn't have a prayer. The guy retired undefeated for a good reason---he was awful good. He combined the toughness and determination of Jerry Quarry, the pressure tactics of Frazier, good power in both hands and a will to win that might be unmatched. He's a top five all time heavy.

Marciano learned how to be a slick fighter. If you look at his films he doesn't get hit as often as people think. He was very good at rolling with punches and had a very good jab.
If a fighter attacked him he would stand his ground and deliver two or three hard body blows before moving out and re-loading. He was also very strong for his size...and unlike Frazier he could also fight moving backwards. No one could intimidate him. He would just give that all knowing smirk and proceed to kick your ass. Although he didn't have the body of a Max Bear or Ken Norton he was probably the best conditioned heavyweight ever. Against the the all time greats, he would more than likely be the underdog but I wouldn't put it past him to beat any heavyweight in history. He didn't have the size, he was smaller than most high schoolers today, but his conditioning and his will would carry him through the toughest opponent. Anyone who can move a 300 pound heavybag with 11 inch fists has to be given his due. That said, the greatest finisher of all time was Joe Louis. You NEVER wanted to fight him twice. Look at his record.

Marciano is a top five heavyweight of all time and even though he was small, he had the strength and punch of a much larger man and the will to win. There have been very few, if any who had more heart than Rocky.

Although he appeared awkward he was harder to hit than a lot of people realize. He would bend down low and he knew how to use his lack of height to his advantage.

I think he would lose to Ali and Louis, prime verses prime and maybe to Foreman and Holmes also but after that, I don't think there are any others who could take him, regardless of his small size.

Why are you so critical about the guys Frazier fought and not about the guys Marciano fought ? Were Marciano's avversari any better than Frazier's ? Gimme a break (sorry, I couldn't help myself...! I know he fought the best of his generation and didn't duck anyone, but were these guys that good ? How many Daniels did he fight ? Marciano was great but I'm not sure I can rate him at top 5. What would have happened if someone as big and powerful as, say, Frank Bruno had hit him with all the power right on the chin ? I'm not sure Rocky could take a punch so much better than Frazier! I think he was very similar to Frazier as a fighter, he had a similar aggressive style and the same heart, but with a difference: Marciano could hit harder than Joe, but Joe was a better defensive fighter (Marciano didn't have any bobbing and waving). Again, Rocky was great, but I would have wanted to see him against powerful guys like Foreman, Lewis, Lyle, 19/23 years old Tyson, Bruno, Boncrusher Smith, Tim Witherspoon, Tony Tucker, Nicolay Valuev, Wilt Chamberlain and many others.

He was knocked down by Walcott and Moore, after all!!

You answered your own question. I wasn't around back then, so it's hard for me to vouch for the caliber of Marciano's competition---but by looking at the rankings year after year when he was active, it appears he fought the guys he should have fought. Again, I'm not an expert, but I can't see anyone who belonged in the ring with him who was "avoided." As for the Rock vs. today's supersized heavies: He'd have a very difficult time with someone as large as Lennox Lewis. I honestly don't think Lewis would knock him out, but Lewis ridiculous height and reach advantage would make it very hard for Marciano to penetrate him. When Lewis had his "A" game, he was well conditioned, determined and able to adapt to his opponents style. Of course, you look at the tape of Willard/Dempsey and you can almost picture Marciano hitting Lewis in the mid section for about 8 rounds, then firing off head shots when Lewis guard came down. But I do get your point---Marciano would be even SMALLER now than he was back then (that theory of relativity again!).
better than Rahman and McCall and more likely to land those finishing head shots. Rahman and McCall could not pull off the feat a second time but they are not in Rocky's league.The key is could Rocky land them? I once did some articles for Eastside Boxing called Wladimir Klitschko verses the all time greats and one of my fantasy matches was verses Marciano. Realize it was before we knew Klitschko could not take a punch very well and I had Klitschko winning by a unanimous decision over Marciano. My reasoning was Rocky would not land many solid head shots due to Wladimir boxing from a distance, using his height advantage. Rocky would land a lot of body shots and Wladimir would know he was in a fight but Rocky would be outlanded as far as punch count goes and the clean head punches from him would be few.A Lewis win could follow the same path but Rocky always did find a way to win, an intangible we can't write off. I am going to do a follow up to those articles and revise them with for example, in my first article about Wladimir verses Rocky, there were a couple of occasions when Rocky did land hard head shots but in my new version, Rocky comes from behind in the eight round to win by knockout. | 7/5/05 10:34:16 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC|funktron@yahoo.com| |||10|Kent: It's a good idea to revise the fantasy matchups. It's funny because until someone's career is over, you don't really know everything about that fighter. Before the Buster Douglas fight, I think peoples' opinion of Tyson was that he was a dynamo who couldn't be beat at that age. After Douglas and Ruddock, there was some revisionist thinking about Tyson. When Frazier bested Ali in '71, there was some revisionist thinking about Ali being unbeatable. When Foreman lost to Ali, especially by KO, there was some revisionist thinking about him--compounded when Young beat him. And it's not just that undefeated guys lose and suddenly they're not so unbeatable anymore--it's how they lose, if they lose a second time (like Ali did to Norton) and how they perform in rematches. Great fighters get a pass if they're fighting past the age they should be in the ring (Louis taking on Marciano was a mistake, as was Ali taking on Holmes and Berbick). Marciano never lost, never. I still think there are ways to beat him, and young Ali might have had the style to do it--staying out of Marciano's punching range, tying him up, holding his head, watching those elbows, giving a lot of foot movement and trying to outpoint him off the jab. I don't care that Ali weighed 215-220---there's no way he'd want to slug it out with Marciano. Ditto with Lewis. Stay outside and make Marciano come in, and batter him with the jab when he tries to get inside. Lewis could keep his head high and away, like he did in Holyfield I. Foreman controlled Frazier much like Hearns did Cuevas---leverage on his punches and devastating power. If Foreman did this to Marciano, I feel Marciano would retaliate better than Frazier could, but it would literally be an uphill climb for Rocky since Foreman was so much bigger. Liston-Marciano, prime vs. prime would be a tough match to call. Same for Tyson-Marciano. I will say, I'm a huge believer in Larry Holmes, but I have to say, if Marciano was able to land on Holmes like Shavers and Snipes, I don't think Holmes would get off the hook. I think Marciano would be like a shark. Of course, I also don't think Marciano would get the flush punch in on Holmes to get him in trouble in the first place--but hell, Snipes did it. | 7/5/05 12:30:19 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca|kentallenent@aol.com| |||10|Angelo, the comparison between Foreman and Frazier and Hearns and Cuevas is a good one but although Frazier did hit very hard, Cuevas, for his weight class, was an even harder hitter than Frazier. The way to beat a big puncher is to not get hit with the big punch and Hearns and Foreman did it the best way, hit and hurt them before they can hit you and they used their height advantage to do it.I can see Foreman/Marciano going the same way as Foreman/Frazier and that is why I rate Foreman higher on the all time list. I think Foreman, at his best, could have likely beaten Marciano in the ring. I think Holmes too but for a different reason could come out on top verses Marciano. He, like Ali, had a tremendous jab and very quick combinations. He also had very good footwork and defense. I can see him outpointing Rocky but in a very tough fight. But as I said before on the subject of Ali against Rocky, it also depends on who is judging the fights and that they would likely go the distance. If the judges favored quantity of punches, then they would favor Ali or Holmes over Rocky but if they liked the fact that Rocky was always pressing the action and was landing a lot of body punches and enough head punches to be effective, then they could favor Rocky with the harder punches. Another factor is the referees. Rocky had a tendency to cut and Ali and Holmes may have been able to open up cuts on him from their long accurate, quick jabs. Later referees would be more likely to stop a fight sooner than oldtimers. If the fight were held today, there is no way Rocky beats Ezzard Charles in the fight when Rocky had his nose sliced in two. The referee would have stopped it before Rocky could make his comeback, which is what happened in real life. The referees back then let the fights go longer.

If the fight were held today, there is no way Rocky beats Ezzard Charles in the fight when Rocky had his nose sliced in two. The referee would have stopped it before Rocky could make his comeback, which is what happened in real life. The referees back then let the fights go longer.

7/5/05 04:24:07 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Kent: Make Joe Louis the referee and the fight would march on, no matter how badly someone was hurt. Yesterday, I pulled out the Quarry tapes and watched some of Frazier-Quarry II. When that horrendous cut opened, Frazier stood back and looked over at Joe Louis as if to say, "Jerry likes a fight as much as anyone I know, and he isn't gonna quit. For Christ sakes, stop the damn fight." and still, Louis let the two of them battle on. It was ridiculous.

7/5/05 04:26:52 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 | Max, Any recollections of the Tony Danza fight? Also was Sugar Ray Seales the best fighter you fought? I always thought he was very talented, although unlucky.

7/5/05 05:11:16 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Was Seales the '72 Olympic Middleweight? Very good indeed. I thought that on the '76 team, Howard Davis was the most talented, or maybe second to Ray Leonard. Well, Leonard, both Spinks, Leo...forgot his name---these guys all won world titles, but I don't think Howard Davis ever did, which is weird to me, since I thought he was the most polished boxer on the team. Also, there was a silver medalist (Mooney?) who was very good. I think our '76 team would perform very well against some of the Cuban's best teams. I also think Teo Stephenson was the most overrated Olympic boxer. Sure, he won three golds, but he essentially was a paid professional taking on kids. Put him in with a good pro heavy of any year that he won a gold and he would have been crushed. Put Mike Tyson in a three round fight, with headgear, against Teo, and Tyson would need about 25 seconds to make the headgear part of Teo's skull. I look at that slow, careful upright style, with the long reach that could keep guys like Tate and Bobick away, but someone like Foreman would chop him up. Pick any contender we've talked about---Shavers, Lyle, Young, Snipes, Ruddock, Cooney---these guys would walk over him. Take Bobick or Tate with a couple years of pro experience, and they would have their way with him. Berbick---somebody mentioned Frank Bruno---just start listing professional heavyweight contenders of the last 30 years and my belief is that most of them would take Teo without a lot of trouble. Hell, if Puerto Rico wanted a gold medal, they could have sent Ossie Ocasio as a pro!

7/5/05 05:37:53 PM | Forest Ward | NYC | NYC | 10 | Well, Noam, you finally answered my question. Normally, you are as bad with answering questions, as you are with fight data, such as records, dates, opponents, and your all time favorite distorting what people write. You old boy, claim what people write and what they are thinking are not one in the same. Interesting.

7/5/05 05:43:01 PM | Kent | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | I think few people would doubt the idea, that these fights contributed greatly to the brain damage he has today. You said you would wave the magic wand and remove these unnecessary fights from Ali's career. I asked you twice so there can be no mistake about the question. You admitted by waving the wand these fights were unnecessary, and contributed to Ali becoming punch drunk. Yet, you constantly criticize Frazier for not taking unnecessary fights. How is it Norm, Ali was wrong for taking these fights given his current condition ie. punch drunk? And Frazier is wrong for not taking them. Are they both wrong. Apparently that is how you see it. You would remove these fights from Ali's career as being unnecessary, but yet you say that were necessary for Frazier's career. No, Norm they were not necessary for either fighter. It is too bad you don't have the magic wand. Because as a result of poor management, Ali could sure use it. Frazier on the other hand does not need any help from you with a magic wand.

What about Teofilo Stevenson vs Joe Frazier around 1976 (when Joe was already over the hill)? The legendary and unforgettable Nino Valdes (or Valdez?) once said he thought he could whip Teofilo. "I'm a professional (he said with pride) he ain't, he is an amateur".

Massimo brought up the name of Nino Valdez. The 6'3" 210 pound Cuban was one fighter that Marciano was accused of avoiding during his reign as heavyweight champion.

Sorry, Forest, but I never got to the end of your last post. You have become so boring and repetitive. What is it with you? Out of therapy and off medication? Kicked out of the AA meeting? Oh well, I suppose that while you're typing posts, the glass is out your hand. In case you hadn't noticed, the rest of us have moved on from the last debate in which you again showed the miniscule knowledge you have of boxing. Sure, you attended a few fight nights with your drinking buddies back in the '60s and '70s, but details have long since drifted off in an alcoholic maze. In between last drinks and the slammer, you don't remember much, do you.

Let's get you back with the programme. The current topic is about Rocky Marciano. To refresh your memory, he was the only undefeated champion to ever retire. Why don't you give us your opinion of him and, if you can get by even one post without mentioning either your hero (Joe Frazier) or the arch fiend giving you nightmares ('The Greatest'), then I'll lighten up on you.

In the meantime, try smiling more. It's fun.

Dear me. I've been gone a few months and all hell has broken out. Soon as I read that Forrest had lost his cool, I automatically knew that someone must have said something about Frazier that his number 1 fan didn't like. Noam, you're better off ignoring Forrest. If you came here to debate boxing issues and maybe learn something then forget about Forrest as he isn't the guy. Forrest is expert on Ali's deteriorating medical problem and, judging from his last post, it makes him happy. If you want to learn about boxing then listen to Angelo, Massimo, Steve, Bob, Max, and even Kent (when he's not talking about Frazier). If you want to know about excuses, wouldas/shouldas/couldas, bile, malice and spite and all things not nice, then listen to Forrest. He's good at those things.

Take the tip Noam and pretend that Forrest is not there. By the way, Marciano was too small to worry Ali and Louis too much. I think Holmes would have beat him also. Foreman too.

Oh, Forrest, I nearly forget, you have to stop misquoting yourself and others. Your last post makes it look like Noam was agreeing that a magic wand should be waved and all what Forrest claims were "unnecessary" fights should be excised from Ali's record. But Noam wasn't agreeing to that. He was agreeing to the question Forrest asked on 7/1/05 at 11.55:40AM. Forrest wrote, "Noam you never answered the question I put to you in my last post. I will ask you again. Would you wave the magic wand and make Ali healthy again."
(like everyone else) agreed that he would like to make Ali healthy again, you then twisted your question and his response when you wrote on 7/5/05 at 5:33.53,"Now getting back to my question. I asked you if given the magic wand you could remove from Ali's career some of the unnecessary fights he had."Forrest, Noam agreed that he would make Ali's health better if he waved your magic wand. He didn't say he'd remove Ali's "unnecessary" fight.Begin telling the truth, Forrest. Quote others and yourself accurately. Thanks. |7/6/05 09:10:12 AM|Forest Ward|NYC||NYC||||10|Howard C, you are not being honest regarding my question to Norm. There were no misquotes on my part. Howie you only mentioned the 2nd time I asked the question. When I asked it the second time for the sake of brevity I shortened it. So Howie, if you want to be honest state the whole question as it was origianlly printed the 1st timeHowie, I think its very generous of you to interpret for the board members what Norm is trying to say. Apparently you feel Norm has difficulty expressing himself, and he needs an interpreter. Norms main problem is he is very loose with the facts. Wrong dates, wrong records... You are probably right he needs an interpreter. I just don't think you are up to itHowie, are you and Norm psychics? You always pretend to know what I am thinking? What am I thinking now?Norm baby, I have written many times in the past about my thoughts about Rocky Marciano. Also, I did not know that you are in charge of the protocol for this site. I can only write about what you deem necessary? Interesting.Finally, Fan, as I told you before I am honored when Norm states that he regards you and me as one in the same. Meaning of course that we are both the same person writing under assumed names. That is fine with me but I am afraid it may be insulting to you.|

Fan.I got shoved through the ropes and on to the judges table in the first seconds of the Danza fight. I got hit hard after that and subsequently was stopped in the first round. When I got back to my dressing room I couldn't take by boxing shoe off of my left foot because my ankle was swollen up that fast. Must have happened when I hit the table, I really don't know. As was my style I also ran into a straight left hand from Seales also in the first round. He still had pipoint accuracy despite the fact that he was nearly blind in one eye.|

Massimo: Frazier would take Teo in '76. Frazier was past his prime, but hadn't forgot how to box! I will say that his slow starting style wouldn't mix well with a three round fight, but I think he'd manage just fine. I think Joe would have more trouble with Antonio Inoki than Ali did!Kent: Here is a question about your other passion, Astronomy (sort of about Astronomy at least): Is there an end to the universe, or does it just keep going (Massimo, this is about physics/applied science as well, feel free to jump in). Does space go on forever, with no end, or does it eventually come back to where you started, or is it confined somehow, to a finite state of being. If it is confined by "walls" then what is on the other side of these walls? I don't think I have the answer! Kirk and Spock might have to go out there again to check it out. By the way, what the hell is Tommy Hearns doing? | quotes, and the dates you made them, are there for all to see. People can check for themselves and they will read that the two questions you asked are different. It's time you grew up. Cheap name calling like "Howie" and "Norm" is childish and you are making a fool of yourself. Granted, you are very good at doing that but it is silly for you to be continually embarrassing yourself like this. You are throwing insults at me and Noam and anyone else who disagrees with you. I've been reading back and you even told Angelo that one of his posts was the stupidist he'd written (or words to that effect). Let me give you a heads up, Forrest. What you are writing is not witty or intelligent. It's childish, stupid and silly. You play right into Noam's hands with that sort of nonsense. People realize that you are ignorant and bereft of humour. Freud wrote text books equating lack of humour with a lack of intelligence and it's relevant to you. So wise up, Forrest, and have a laugh occasionally, even at your own expense. You'll feel better for it and perhaps your posts will become cheerful and optimistic and thoughtful. Others might want to read them. Anyway, you are into questions, Forrest, so let me ask you one. Has anyone ever told you that you are an expert on boxing? I didn't think so.

Massimo | 7/6/05 05:58:07 PM | Italia (s'e' desta, s'e' desta) | 10 | Angelo
What a coincidence! I have seen again the Quarry-Shavers fight on my PC today. That one was the biggest win in Jerry's career in my book! Heck, Muhammad Ali struggled for 15 rounds with this guy! Jerry was even a little overweight for this fight, at 202 lbs, but still (or yet) he trashed Shavers like he was a bum! Earnie hit him about three times, but not with full power! Jerry didn't even blink though. It's one of my favourite fights!

I agree that Frazier would have had a bad time with Inoki, he was too wilt for him. Frazier would have performed much better against Andre', as "The Midget" was much shorter than Inoki and much shorter than Joe Frazier as well.

Regarding the question you asked in your previuos post, nobody knows for sure whether the Universe is endless or not! This is an "everything" question! Sometimes in Physics it's hard to respond (or to answer) to the "small" questions, let alone the "everything" questions...What is really amazing is that to be a good Astrophysician you have to be a master in General Relativity, Quantum Mechanics, Thermodynamics... In so many fields. You have to know ALL the Physics (I'm exaggerating a little bit, but not that much). So much Physics is involved in the Astrophysics field!

Massimo | 7/6/05 07:27:47 PM | same || 10 | Noam
I don't understand how the universe can be endless. If the universe is not there, what is? Even if there is nothing there, then nothing takes up space and nothing could be filled with something if something came along (if you get my drift). Forrest, I'll answer the two different questions you asked. Yes, if I had a magic wand, I'd wave it and cure Ali. And I'd also use it to cure all the other boxers damaged by the sport, including Frazier.

Have you heard Frazier speak lately. He is barely understandable. Commentators have to repeat what Joe says so he can be understood. It is sad and I wish it weren't so. But even with what you called "smart management" (the rest of us call it ducking) Joe ended up with a condition similar to Ali.

Now, regarding the second question you posed. I've written this before. I think Ali should have given it away after he beat Foreman. By then he was 32 years of age and his legend was secure. And, as I said before, when I see film of Ali speaking at ringside after that fight his speech is different to what it was years earlier. I thought I detected damage, but I might be wrong. In your post, Forrest, you mentioned the "unnecessary fights" as being Bonavena, Norton 1,2,3, Lyle, Shavers, Foreman, Holmes and Berbick. He was only 29 when he fought Bonavena. It was his second fight back from a three year lay off. He needed a tough fight to prepare for Frazier 1. It was a necessary fight. The first Norton fight was reasonable. Ali was preparing for another title shot. He needed a tough fight. However, when he lost Norton 1, Norton 2 had to happen. Norton 3 was the decider and justifiable with that in mind, but I think Ali should have retired 2 years earlier after he beat Foreman. He fought Lyle in 1975. It was a title defense. Perhaps it was mandatory, I don't know. It would have been better if he had been retired by then, but Ali liked challenges and new horizons. He beat Shavers in 1977, lost to Holmes in 1980 and Berbick in 1981. As these fights fell after Foreman, it would have been better if they never happened. HOWEVER (note the upper case, Forest) a distinction needs to be made here. Ali's legend must be judged on who he fought and beat. His medical condition is a different issue. Same with Frazier. You can try and excuse the fights he ducked by saying it was "smart management" or whatever, but the fact is he didn't fight those guys. Therefore, he doesn't get the benefit of the doubt. We can't 'deem' him the result. As I've said before, Frazier only fought 2 guys up there with the greats. Ali and Foreman. He lost 4 out of 5 of those fights. The list of guys he didn't fight is long - Patterson, Terrell, Foster, Norton, Lyle, Shavers, et al. And the low quality of guys he opted to fight instead is just as compelling. Zyglewicz, Daniels, Stander and a clapped out Ellis in their second fight. We then must look at Frazier refusing to fight in the WBA elimination tournament. Joe wanted to be "deemed" the title without earning it. Joe didn't have a lot of fights in his entire career. He was virtually shot as a fighter at age 27 after he beat Ali in 1971. He was fragile and his management were painstaking in avoiding hard punchers he didn't have to fight. He only fought Foreman because he thought he'd win easily. He says so in his book. Joe had just turned 29 when Foreman demolished him. Greats of other eras were in their prime at that age; Joe was washed up. Joe's management were not "smart" as Forest would have it. If they were smart they would have made Joe retire after Ali 1. He spent months in hospital because of that fight. Had eye and blood pressure problems. Was apparently a little blind in his left eye and had partial vision. Yet his "smart" management allowed him to keep fighting... Ali 2 and 3.....Foreman 1 and 2.....Quarry 2. That wasn't smart management. Forest, Joe says that he could barely see out of his left eye before the third Ali fight. He might be making this up to excuse the loss. But let's take him at his word ...... was his management "smart" to let him fight in that condition? Seems to me that they were taking bigger risks than Ali's management ever took! Joe's management were not "smart" as Forest would have it. If they were smart they would have made Joe retire after Ali 1. He spent months in hospital because of that fight. Had eye and blood pressure problems. Was apparently a little blind in his left eye and had partial vision. Every now and then I like to drop in and risk the wrath of a regular or two by talking boxing, often relating actual facts, and - sometimes - even mentioning Jerry Quarry. Re: Marciano and Louis, both among the cream of the crop... about 10 years ago I became acquainted with an old heavyweight whose career overlapped both. He showed me clippings from some of his fights, he fought a few guys whose names I recognized. His name was Ralph Schneider, and he said he had sparred with both Rocky and Joe. He was quite emphatic that Marciano hit harder - much harder. Of course, he had worked with an older Louis and a young Marciano. But this gent appeared to be in a better position to factor age and render judgment than most anyone, and he said it wasn't even close, Marciano impressed him much more. Re: poor Joe's unfortunate and infamous refereeing job in Frazier-Quarry II, there was a positive side to the story which is all but lost. Not only did Frazier show good sportsmanship by letting up on Jerry when it became clear he was in trouble (I recall him saying Jerry was a good guy and he didn't want to hurt anyone) yet Louis had no intention of intervening, but earlier in the fight, after hitting Joe low, Jerry ignored Gil Clancy who was screaming at him to take advantage of Frazier before he could recover from the foul. Jerry wouldn't do it. I don't think Mike Tyson would understand. I submit that the great Joe Louis' plight was not much different than any heavyweight who fought ring wars, including Ali, Frazier, Ellis, Patterson, or Jerry. I remember my father telling me how sad it was to see Hurricane Jackson stumbling around NYC shining shoes. Is there a heavyweight - at least one who fought lots of rounds - who hasn't shown some signs of dementia?

| 7/7/05 12:26:41 AM | Brandi Quarry | Linton Indiana | brandiquarry3@msn.com | 10 | REMEMBER HIM WITH SMILES AND LAUGHTER, FOR THIS IS HOW HE REMEMBERED YOU.  IF YOU CAN NOT REMEMBER HIM THIS WAY, THEN DON'T REMEMBER HIM AT ALL...
WE LOVE AND MISS YOU
JAMES QUARRY  7-07-2002 |

| 7/7/05 01:42:31 AM | Ed | Cicero N Y | Mooseygoop@aol.com | 10 | Fan .. theres one old fighter that took tons of punishment and I read hes as sharp as a tack...George Chuvalo. Noam...Good accurate post. One more thing that didn't help Ali in his later years was his training method of letting sparring partners knock him into a "twilight state" during training sessions. He did this so he would know how to fight when dazed and hurt. Kind of makes you shutter when you think of the brain damage that could do to a person.|
| 7/7/05 02:57:44 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Ed - yeah, I heard that about Ali. I heard that he stopped wearing head gear at training and that he encouraged others to hit him in the head when sparring. Ali said he wanted to experience the "land of the half dream" to stimulate being hurt during a fight so he knew how to react. For a guy who was one of the cleverest and smartest guys in the ring, he certainly did some dumb things too. Fan - I read a book on Marciano recently and he impressed me greatly. Maybe Rocky was the only guy with the punch to stop Ali. I think the three greatest were Louis, Ali, and Marciano, but I keep changing my mind as to the order.|

| 7/7/05 03:26:44 AM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | Kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | MR. JIMMY IS MISSED AND HE ALWAYS WILL BE.  I CAN'T BELIEVE IT HAS BEEN THREE YEARS SINCE HE PASSED AWAY.I KNOW I ONLY GOT TO KNOW HIM BECAUSE OF THIS WEBSITE AND BECAUSE HE WAS JERRY'S BROTHER, OTHERWISE WE LIKELY WOULD HAVE NEVER BEEN AQUAINTED AT ALL BUT HE WAS MY FRIEND AND I FONDLY REMEMBER OUR LONG CONVERSATIONS ON BOXING AND OTHER SUBJECTS..BRANDI IS RIGHT, I CAN STILL HEAR THE LAUGHTER IN HIS WARM GRUFF VOICE.RIP JAMES QUARRY 1944-2002. |

| 7/7/05 05:03:08 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Just a few observations on Rocky Marciano and I'll do it in point form to save space and time. Marciano had terrific stamina and he was primarily a head hunter. He rarely went to the body. An oddity among boxers, he was also a prolific reader of books and careful with his money. Rocky was also a dirty fighter and perhaps would have been disqualified by today's standards in some of his fights. For example, in round 13 when he stopped Walcott, he hit him with a right hand when Walcott was down on one knee. He also hit Cockell with a left hand when Cockell was down. He also hit Ezzard Charles on the back of the head in the second fight. Let's not forget his famous follow-through elbow with his rights. Rocky's cut nose against Charles might have resulted in a medical stoppage today. Rocky might also have been disadvantaged by today's 12 rounds instead of 15 (given his stamina and the fact that he was behind after the 12th round in some of his fights). Marciano was always very fit to fight and his weight never fluctuated out of the 184 to 188 pound range. He could be caught with punches and Walcott and Moore knocked him down. His manager Al Weil looked very similar to Cus D'Amato. Rocky only had one gear - forward.Perhaps the secret to Rocky's power was that he trained sometimes in swimming pools throwing punches in the water. Rocky said that the first Walcott fight was his hardest. He also said when he retired that he would never make a comeback because "if Louis couldn't make a successful comeback" then neither could he. In looking at his career I think that Roland LaStarza was underrated. Thanks. |

| 7/7/05 09:17:53 AM | Forest Ward | NYC | NYC | 10 | Noam, Rocky Marciano was not a body puncher? Silly me I thought he was. I guess those punches I thought he was throwing to body of his opponents to bring down his opponents arms were feigns, and not actual punches.

Among your problems regarding boxing is that you may read a book, (personally I think you skim the books, looking for "facts" to back you preconceived idea's). These books you read, what makes the author credible? Where is the author getting his facts from?. Because they are in book form and you agree to them that makes these "facts" legitimate? Rocky Marciano was not a body puncher? Give me a break.

Howie baby, for you to admonish me about my behavior is like Ben Ladin talking about the beauty of brotherhood. You and Norm are two of the most rudest and vicious writers on this board. When someone writes something you guys don't like you attack them personally.

I look at some of the garbage Norm writes about me, calling me among other things: an alcoholic, a homosexual, jailbird, and God knows what else. Actually I find those comments interesting. You know why Howie baby? It is because Norm is projecting his thoughts and actions of himself on me. It gives me an accurate insight to what Norm is all about.

When Norm and Howie baby find someone who disagrees with them they attack the person in a vicious manner. When I first came on this site back in 1998-1999, people actually used their real names and gave their real Email addresses. Sorry to say that is not done anymore except with limited exceptions.

Howie baby, I regard you and Norm as 2 cry babies. Who on occasion are capable of raising a legitimate point. But, all to often you guys are too thin skinned and narrow minded to substan a reasonable debate about an interesting topic.

All this being said, I enjoy reading Norms and Howie baby's posts, especially when they are about me. In my 51 some odd years on this earth, I never dealt with white trash until I encountered you 2 guys. I regard you 2 as lab rats in a controlled environment. And I am the student who is allowed to study your behavior patterns.

Ralph Schneider lost a 10 round decision to him in Miami the year before LaStarza's title shot against Rocky. I also remember he was a minor celebrity in the Bronx when I was a kid. Ralph was still big, about 6'3", and a strong guy when I knew him. He seemed a bit crazy, don't know if this was the reason he fought or the result. He was a real nice guy though, a lot of laughs, he must have been a giant back in his day.

This part, of which I am not positive, may ring a bell to someone: I think Ralph appeared as a fighter in an old Honeymooners episode.

Good point about Chuvalo. He was certainly in some wars (mostly one-sided) with Ali, Frazier, Foreman, and Jerry among others. I just watched his fight against Ali the other night. He was one tough customer.

P.S. Jerry did more damage to Chuvalo in his "loss" than Ali did in his 15 round victory. Hard Luck.

FAN: Agreed---Frazier showed respect for the sport and good sportsmanship by his "cease fire" when the terrible cut opened on Jerry. At that point, any referee should have taken the cue from THE GUY WHO WAS WINNING (Frazier), stopped the action, had a doctor examine the cut and help decide whether to allow the fight to continue. Instead, Louis waved them on and Frazier reluctantly continued.

Agreed---Frazier showed respect for the sport and good sportsmanship by his "cease fire" when the terrible cut opened on Jerry. At that point, any referee should have taken the cue from THE GUY WHO WAS WINNING (Frazier), stopped the action, had a doctor examine the cut and help decide whether to allow the fight to continue. Instead, Louis waved them on and Frazier reluctantly continued.

The only writings I "skim through" are your posts. They are not informative, interesting or intelligent. Most of what you write is puerile and childish.
the effect that you don't get information about boxers from books. To state the obvious, Forest, that's okay when you are able to observe your contemporaries, however for boxers who fought before you were born, books are the best source of information. There's nothing wrong with books. Reading is good. Regards Marciano. Tapes are a good source of information, too. May I suggest, Forest, that you view the LaStarza, Louis, Walcott, Charles, and Moore fights. They are among Rocky's most famous. He was a head puncher in those fights. Rarely did he go to the body in them. Forest you mentioned Bin Laden. That is silly and disrespectful. You can rant and rave and insult people here as much as you like, and personally it doesn't worry me because people are seeing you in your true light, but trivializing past atrocities by introducing Bin Laden's name is awful (especially after what's just happened in London). Try not to do it again. Anyway, I answered your questions, apparently in a manner to which you are unable to respond with reason or logic or at all. I demolished your contention that Frazier had "smart management". So you ignored my response and moved onto some other nonsense. For you to say that Frazier had "smart management", when they let him fight with diminished eye sight and cataracts, gives us all a sneak preview into how little you really know. And the more you post, the less you are able to preview your ignorance up. Answer a question. If you had a magic wand, Forest, would you wave it and take back all the silly, ignorant, and puerile comments you have posted here?

| 7/7/05 06:31:57 PM | Sabrina Quarry-Porter | Florida | || SabrinaLPorter@aol.com || 10 |
|-------------------|------------------------|---------|----------|-----------------------------|
| I WILL ALWAYS REMEMBER HIM WITH A SMILE.HE IS MY DAD AND I MISS HIM WITH ALL MY HEART.I LOVE YOU ALWAYS IN MY HEART DAD..FROM DADDY'S LITTLE GIRL |

| 7/7/05 08:09:34 PM | Angelo | DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 |
| Sabrina: We miss your Dad too. Somewhere, he's looking down and smiling. |

| 7/8/05 02:51:57 AM | Howard C. | Louisville | howards@louisville | 10 |
| Noam | I enjoyed reading your comments about Marciano. You've been fair with what you've written. Don't listen to the ratbag and keep up the good work. No one ever built a monument to a critic. |

| 7/8/05 06:21:16 AM | Angelo | DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 |
| It's true---if you watch old Marciano footage, he's a head hunter. I think the notion that he was some great body puncher started because he's a shorter heavyweight in the "white palooka" mold---come forward, lean in, bang to the body. But if you watch his great fights, he seems to look for a KO by going to the head. Granted, I haven't watched every round of every fight and maybe the highlights I've seen show the end of his fights, not the middle. On the Frazier camp vs. the Ali camp: The best things I can say about Frazier are that he beat Ali once and beat Quarry twice---two times when Quarry was at good points in his career. The best things I can say about Ali, in terms of winning the title three times and the competition he took on, so far exceeds Frazier's performances, it's not even interesting to go on and on about. Suffice to say, Ali's ring accomplishments dwarf Frazier's---it ain't close. I'd wave Forrest's "magic wand" over every boxer ever permanently injured, over Troy Aikman, Steve Young, Chris Chandler, Al Toon (former Jets receiver whose eyes are probably STILL sensitive to light due to concussions) and hell, if the wand works on knees, I'd wave it on Namath and Gale Sayers (and even Jim Otto, who played for the Raiders while I'm a Chiefs fan). Yes Forrest, we can all agree that restoring health and quality of life to our fallen boxing heroes is a nobel idea and I'd do it. The fact remains, smart management or not: Ali's career and ring victories give him more than an "edge" over Frazier---it's more like an avalanche. And in hindsight, it starts with the fact that Ali took on all those guys we've talked about that Frazier didn't fight---but curiously, it ends with the fact that as a shot fighter, Ali picked on Trevor Berbick---certainly, Berbick was no Joe Louis, but let's just say he brought more to the table than Jumbo Cummings. |
fights are available on tape? I saw his two Walcott fights and the haylights from the two Charles fights, the Moore fight, the Cockell fight, the second La Starza fight, the Layne fight and the Joe Louis fight. I wonder what kind of fighter would have been more likely to beat Marciano. Sluggers like Lyle and Foreman or slick boxers like Zora Folley and Jimmy Young? By looking at his record it seems that the more his opponents were big, the faster he knocked them out. Roland La Starza was a slick boxer with no Foreman like punch and gave him some trouble. But, on the other hand, Walcott and Moore were pretty good sluggers and gave him some trouble too. Thanks.

Rocky would have trouble with any of the top fighters no matter the style. I do however think you would have to get him to respect you or he would just come flying in. A crisp boxer puncher like Holmes or Ali would give Marciano the most trouble because they could get your attention and control the clinches with superior size. Frazier, Shavers, Lyle etc. wouldn't fair very well because you need to have a jab and lateral movement against Rock. Foreman would be the only guy in history I would give a 50-50 shot to as far as standing and trading. I actually think George would massacre Marciano because of his size and strength. Foreman killed smaller fighters, his punches were perfect for them.

Ken, Steve, Angelo, Fan et al. the charade is over. Noam and Howard C. are one in the same person. They are not 2 individuals who agree with each other, but once person pretending he is 2 different people. You only have read the posts of the last 3 days to realize they are both one and the same literally, and figuratively. Just look at the similaraties of their psycho-bable when they attack my "behavior". What really makes this fraud pathetic is that in "their" posts they will compliment each other on what "other" wrote. Finally, Noam or Norm as I call him (like in Norman Bates). Knows little about boxing. It does not take a genius to say Ali was the Greatest, even I agree with. Norm will read a book write down the page # and quote the sentence and believe that makes his point absolute. I mean really to say that Rocky Marciano "rarely went to the body". How ignorant can a so called expert be. The guy is a sham and a fraud.

Marciano was a very good body puncher. Archie Moore said so and since he fought him I take his word. Also many of Marciano's body shots were to the other guys bicep area which took away their power and slowed down their hand speed. |
|7/8/05 03:08:08 PM|Forest Ward|NYC||NYC|||10|John, mentioning Archie Moore. I remember seeing him on TV talking about his fight with Rocky. Archie talked about how Rocky hit him with a powerful blow to the stomach. Archie then says he raised his arms instinctively expecting the next punch to be to his head. Well, instead Rocky throws another body blow and drops Archie.| |
|7/8/05 03:13:06 PM|Steve|na||na|||10|Hey Noam and Forrest, you two guys have got to back off each other now!! Your both very astute fans of boxing history. You two guys both know your stuff! This site is for fun and learning about boxing history. This site is for honoring Jerry Quarry, he was the man!!! Both of you guys need to step back and relax. Hey Massimo and Kent, you two guys are going to intimidate me right off this site. Massimo, you and Kent are turning out to be ren'naissance men. Kent sings in front of an audience. I wouldn't have the balls to do that, even if I could sing like Freddie Mercury, and I'm an ex drill instructor. Kent says he has a handle on the {special} theory of relativity. That tells me I'm outclassed on this site. Do I understand correctly that
E=mc^2 means with increased velocity, mass must also increase? Meaning even more energy is required to move more mass? How could anything possibly approach the speed of light? Forrest, Jerry Quarry got a rotten deal in his second fight with Frazier. Joe Louis, god bless him, was totally befuddled, and should have stopped that fight just on the severity of that massive cut Quarry had. Even Jerry knew, at that point, that he was done. You cannot continue to fight with your eye lid slashed open like that.| |
|7/8/05 03:30:52 PM|Steve|NA||na|||10|Do I understand correctly that E=mc^2| |
|7/8/05 03:31:12 PM|Steve|na||na|||10|actually, just from memory, I'm not sure if it was his eye lid or eye brow that was busted wide open.|
|7/8/05 04:18:24 PM|Forest Ward|NYC||NYC|||10|Steve, I agree Joe Louis never should have been allowed to referee that fight. I don't think Joe ever refereed a pro fight in his life. The idea of allowing a 60 year old man in poor health to referee a fight of that importance with 2 dangerous punchers is beyond logic. As was already mentioned Joe Frazier showed a lot of class backing off from Quarry when he was so badly hurt. Frazier always spoke well about Jerry. Joe respected Jerry's courage.|
|7/8/05 05:12:53 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|With regard to Marciano, he was certainly more suited by the era he fought in than today. 12 rounds wouldn't have suited him. He was behind in many of his fights at round 12 and it took a late knockout to win. Marciano had some cuts that might have brought stoppages by today's standards. The example is the one against Charles. Even his corner was worried about it being stopped. In those days it took a partial decapitation to stop a fight, so that cut nose must have been really bad. One of his brothers said that you could peel the nose back and see the bone. Marciano's dirty tactics tried today might have seen some of his fights stopped or at least a deduction of points. He hit Walcott and Cockell when they were down. His follow through elbows were legendary. He hit guys on the back of the head, too. The one that comes to mind was against Charles. I agree with the comment that a young Foreman would have caused him problems. Foreman was so big and strong, and Rocky wasn't all that hard to hit. Even so, the proof is in the pudding. We can speculate all we want. He retired 49 nil and no one beat him. His stamina and power were unparalleled. He was always fit to fight with his weight not outside the 184 to 188 pound range. Rocky beat every viable contender of his era and ducked no one. He was in good health when he retired, wasn't bitter against any of his opponents (but was against his manager Al Weil), and there was no need for any wouldas, couldas, and shouldas with him. Rocky came, he fought, he conquered. His record leaves very little room for speculation (unlike some careers).

I still say that in his fights with Walcott, Charles, Cockell, Louis, and Moore that Marciano went to the head. That was his primary target in those fights.

Pstst......Forest. None of us hate you. We just think that you carry one like a sanctimonious arsehole, sometimes. Your recent posts are good examples why. Learn to take yourself less seriously. And laughing and smiling and humour is fun. Try them.

[7/8/05 05:33:00 PM] Forest Ward | NYC | NYC | 10 | Noam baby, you don't speak for the board. You only speak for Norm and Howard C. As I said earlier the charade is up you and Howard C are one in the same. Anyone who wants to waste their time can look at recent posts from Norm and Howard C. It all falls into place. I guess you will reinvent yourself with another name. You pathetic chump you invent another name to give credibility to your posts. What other names have you used in the past?

[7/8/05 05:40:42 PM] Massimo Giulio LEONARDO Cini | Roma, not too far from Vinci | movesil'amanteperlacosaamata,selacosaamata....com || || 10 | Steve-

The E=MC^2 equation is written in very particular unities and states that at a small mass corresponds a huge amount of energy. If you want, you can check it out yourselves by making some calculations. It also states that mass and energy are two aspects of the same thing. But what you said is true, with increased velocity, mass must also increase! Keep in mind that mass at rest and mass in movement are two different things and there is a very important equation relating these two things. Steve, don't let yourself be intimidated by me. I'm not that smart, I am just a guy who spent a bit of his life studying these things, that's all! But I am not completely dumb either. If you had dedicated the same amount of time I have dedicated to Physics, you probably would know this stuff better than I do.

[7/8/05 06:52:37 PM] Noam | same | same | same | 10 | Forest, we've all noticed that when you were exposed on the ignorant, stupid comment that Frazier had "smart management", you quickly moved onto something else and promptly got it wrong again. And then to take the heat out of the discovery that you and Fan are one of the same person, you had to go on and (wrongly) accuse me and Howard C. of the same thing. Your silliness is the closest your antics ever gets to humour and as Howard C. said, people relate a lack of humour with stupidity. You qualify on both counts.

You are the "expert" who gave us the bon mote that Joe had "smart management", even though he was allowed to fight with cataracts and vastly diminished eye sight. That's plain stupid, Forest. For a 51 years old guy, you haven't learnt much. Take heart; it's never too late to start. Marciano knocked Moore down in round 6 with an overhand right. The second knockdown in round 6 of Moore was also an overhand right. Moore went down again in the 8th, his right eye badly swollen, and a right hand was the destroyer once again. The fight was stopped in round 9. An exhausted Moore was bludgeoned to the canvass by a series of right and lefts to the head. Sure, Marciano went to the body and arms sometimes, but head punches were 85% of his attack. I'd say that qualifies him as being "primarily a head puncher" in that fight. All the knockdowns against Louis, Cockell, Walcott, and Charles were from head shots. That's why I said he was primarily a head puncher in those fights.

[7/8/05 07:46:35 PM] One thing more Forest. To support your ridiculous accusation that Howard C and I are the same poster, you wrote: "What really makes this fraud pathetic is that in their "posts" they will compliment each other on what "other" wrote." Actually, Forest, I went back through the posts and I only found one occasion where Howard C. complimented me. But let's apply YOUR own logic to YOUR own posts.

On 4/13/05 (pages 601–625) Forest wrote, "Fan, you made a lot of good points."
Forest wrote, "Fan, you are my man. I think you know that by now." On 3/22/05 (pages 801 - 825) Forest wrote, "Fan, I am your #1 fan. I always look forward to reading your posts. They are always sound and reasonable." Forest...stop shooting yourself in the foot, for chrissake. YOUR own logic just proved that you and Fan ARE one of the same poster!

Going back through the posts, I found one from Forest that probably best sums up his twisted, snarled, pathetic mentality. On 6/23/05 Forest was giving great praise to his hero Joe Frazier. Forest then wrote, "Frazier takes great pleasure in seeing Ali stagger around with his hands shaking and not being able to talk. Joe gladly takes the responsibility for a lot of Ali's bodily damage." Well, that comment just about says it all. Not only does it give us an insight to Frazier's twisted mentality, but what does it say about Forest? Forest wrote this comment thinking that he was praising Frazier. Talk about nasty and embittered...... |

7/8/05 10:37:56 PM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Noam I've gone back in the archives and you are right about Forrest alias Fan. In addition to the posts you found, here's some more of Forrest praising Forrest. "Fan you are one of the most knowledgeable and reasonable persons on this site." Forrest Ward 03/16/05 at page 910"Fan, regarding your picks of Frazier against past champs, I am in total agreement with you." Forrest Ward 03/07/05 at page 1001"Fan, that posting was great !!!!!!! You are not only a fan, YOU ARE A CERTIFIED BOXING HISTORIAN !!!!! Fan, don't expect the Ali worshippers to acknowledge your great post and research." Forrest Ward 03/04/05 at page 1016. Forrest, you are getting hammered and it's time to throw the towel in, old buddy. Why don't you fade off the scene for a while, taking your two aliases with you, and come back in a couple of months under a new name. If you don't go making any more stupid comments, we won't know it's you and everyone can get on well again. It's worth considering. |

7/8/05 10:56:12 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10|Weill carefully crafted Marciano's career. Nino Valdez was one fighter Weill avoided as well as Bob Baker and Cesar Brion. Brion was the weakest of them, and I am not saying Marciano could not have beaten all three. But they were all top contenders in the early to mid fifties and The Rock never fought them. Interestingly enough they were all 6'2" to 6'3" and weighed well over 200 pounds. So to say that Rocky fought all top contenders is not true. These men, and they were all excellent fighters, Weill steered the Rock away from. And while Rocky was headhunter he was also a devastating body puncher. His body punching set up his head shots. Yes he was probably the greatest elbow puncher of all time; Mike Tyson took some queues from his films. The photo of Marciano jamming his elbow into Joe Louis' eye socket is one of my all time fav's. The Rock hit Walcott with an almost casual left hook while Walcott was down and he landed a clubbing right hand to the back of Charles' neck as The Ezz was going down. Marciano is fifth on my all time list from 1950 on. Here is my top ten from 1950 to present. Ali, Holmes, Holyfield, Tyson, Marciano, Bowe, Charles, Foreman, Liston and Frazier. I am basing this list on their opposition as champion and the frequency of title defenses, not on who would beat who. As far as who would beat who? Ali, Tunney, Louis, Holmes, Johnson, Dempsey, Foreman, Jeffries, Marciano, Liston. Of course Ali comes out on top in every heavyweight maybe on the all time PFP list as well, he was simply The Greatest.

7/8/05 11:19:50 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||10|I am not Forest. I never have gotten involved in any name calling or insults, please leave me out of it, let's stick to boxing.|

7/8/05 11:20:51 PM|Bob Bumbera |NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10|Before anyone accuses me of being crazy, I'm not I'm just mildly intoxicated right now, the last three on the list from 1950 on should be Frazier, Foreman and Liston. Foreman fought Joe "King" Roman then Kenny Norton....and Liston fought Patterson and lost to Clay. Frazier's opposition was from 1968 on tougher, and at least more frequent than Foreman and Liston.

IF I WAS HOWARD C., NOAM, FORREST, AND KENT OR FOR THAT MATTER, THE KOO KOO KLOCK
AND I HAVE BEEN ARGUING WITH MYSELF THE WHOLE TIME?7/9/05 04:09:54 AM|Massimo (you can bet!)|Roma, (you can bet !)|||Shaq Fu.com (you can't bet)||||10|Kent -You told us you are from California and your name is Kent...Maybe that's just not true! Maybe you are actually from Napoli and your name is, who knows, Ciro, Gennaro or Pasquale! Maybe you never met Mel Counts, Giacomo Toney and Wilt Chamberlain! On the other hand maybe you met Maradona in Napoli back in the 80's...7/9/05 04:39:38 AM|Kent|Warsaw, Poland||whoknows.com||||10|But I am not the Muffinman, the Muffinman, the Muffinman!!

7/9/05 06:06:16 AM|Noam|same||same||||10|Kent - I think you are the Muffin Man but that's okay because I don't have anything against him, whoever he is.7/9/05 07:41:12 AM|Massimo|Roma||ShaqFu.com|||10|Archie Moore was still a competitive fighter in 1962, when Cassius Clay dominated him in Los Angeles. He certainly was clearly better in 1955 when he held his own with Ezzard Charles. Now, imagine how good he had to be around 1948 when he was fighting Ezzard Charles. I think for Ezzard Charles whipping Archie Moore 3 out of 3 times (and one of them by KO) was really a great accomplishment. I think Ezzard Charles was the best light-heavyweight of all times (even if he never got a shot at the title), the second was probably Archie Moore, the third Bob Foster and the fourth was probably Harold Johnson.
good movie. Does anyone know whether a movie was made about him? He was the real Rocky." NOAM, I saw a film on ROCKY just recently. I can't recall the title but if focused quite a bit on him being screwed by his management and his relationship with JOE LOUIS. How much was fact or fiction is anyone's guess. [7/9/05 01:23:40 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Noam, alas I am not the Muffinman but I like it when these fringe characters show up here and even I miss the Koo Koo Klock, even if he is a redneck. [7/9/05 02:32:45 PM|Fan|USA||n/a||10|Noam, alas I am not the Muffinman but I like it when these fringe characters show up here and even I miss the Koo Koo Klock, even if he is a redneck. A couple of points. There are two "Fans" quoted in the posts re: Forrest. One from Fandom and myself. I assure you I am not Forrest, if anyone really cares. [7/9/05 04:48:18 PM|Fan|USA||n/a||10|PS Tony Lobianco portrayed Marciano in a 1979 TV movie, which was pretty bad as I recall. [7/9/05 05:51:08 PM|Noam|same||same||10|Massimo, Moore showed incredible courage in his loss to Marciano. He really got a pounding, but he kept fighting and couldn't do any more than he did trying to win. Archie would be looking down shaking his head in disgust at Tyson quitting last month. [7/9/05 06:18:36 PM|Massimo |Roma||4||10|Noam--[7/9/05 08:47:33 PM|Fan|USA||n/a||10|Re: The Quarrys and The Mongoose: the article was in Boxing Illustrated, post-Ellis and pre-Frazier (so late 1968 - early 1969). Apparently, Archie had made several derogatory remarks about Jerry and the current heavies, including Ellis and Frazier. He had also opined that he could name five heavyweights who could take Jerry at the time. Jack was not happy. Years later, there was still bad blood. Moore was running Earnie Shavers' camp for rookie fight manager Don King, when Earnie was preparing for his fight with Jerry. Moore brought in Jeff Merritt to work with Shavers, and Merritt proceeded to break Earnie's jaw. The July, 1973 date had to be postponed (it ended up taking place in December). Jerry was now unhappy too, and he took Moore to task publicly, noting that, besides making the very foolish decision to use someone as dangerous as Merritt as a sparring partner, Moore had badmouthed Jerry unfairly in the past. He added that he only wished Archie was a few years younger so that he could take Shavers' place, and give Jerry the pleasure of knocking him out.

Wow, from what I've seen and read of Archie Moore, I didn't realize he was an idiot. Until now. What would possess him to pick on Jerry Quarry? When you consider JQ's accomplishments, throughout his career, and the way he handled himself in interviews (respectfully), I couldn't think of a reason why old man Archie Moore would go after him. I would have loved to seen the look on Moore's face when Jerry dispatched of Shavers in the first round. Priceless.

Archie Moore= Hell of a fighter, hell of a mouth.

When Joey Giardello fought Dick Tiger in one of their title fights, he was accused of elbowing, hitting low, and holding. His response was, (Hey, this was for the title, I'd have hit him over the head with the corner stool if I had to.) That pretty well sums it up. A title fight, at least it used to be, was a real war, if you got hit low, you'd retaliate in the next round. Many great fighters followed up on a solid punch with an elbow. Hey, this ain't tennis.

Fan, thanks for that info on Archie Moore vs the Quarry's. I don't know how I managed to miss that stuff, but I was in the military during those years. Still, in all the years I've been on this site, I never heard that story before. Archie Moore definitely loved the sound of his own voice, and a master of the malapropism.

It was a clear decision win for Ali, but not an easy one. At least twice and maybe three times, Shavers stunned Ali with full blown hammers. Ali's chin was the best, bar none. For once, Shavers actually paced himself and had plenty of firepower left, even late in the fight. But in that 15th round, Ali finished with a flurry---opening up on Shavers. If there was another half-minute, I believe Ali would have won by KO. Shavers was spent.

Massimo - I am going to have to do some research on Layne and Johnson. Will get back to you on it.

I haven't heard from you for a while and I was starting to get worried, what with your advanced age and all (you know that I'm joking).

I only beat up on Forest when he beats up on me and wrongly accuses me of being someone else. In fact, I usually enjoy reading Forest's posts, especially when he talks about how he met Jack Dempsey twice and stuff like that.

However, the problem is that whenever someone has a different opinion, Forest lectures and calls us idiots. And he gloats about Ali's poor health. That's bad. I'd rather not argue with him, but if I am to uphold myself as the baadesst man on the planet then I can't turn the other cheek, ever, unfortunately.

Now, regarding that list of boxers. I'd have Moore in that list. Also Jerry Quarry (never quit). I'd also think about Thomas Hearns (always gave his best), Sam Langford (5'7" and a heavyweight), Azumah Nelson and Evander Holyfield (ultimate warriors), Fighting Harada (Japan's best?), Dwight Quawi (made good after being in jail), Buster Douglas (his one and only good night slayed the unbeatable dragon), Khosai Galaxy (Thailand's best), Primo Carnero (for Massimo), Sir Henry Cooper (probably came the closest of anyone to knocking out Ali), Max Schmelling (for paying for Louis's funeral).
Steve, that is a great tune but I have never done it. Maybe I will learn it. Art Garfunkel did a pretty good remake of it, I think back in the 1970s or maybe it was on one of the Simon and Garfunkel albums, I don't remember which.I remember I lived at an apartment complex near the beach and there were some New Yorkers, straight off of the boat so to speak from Brooklyn, who always asked me, "how come you don't have blond heaaarr (hair) and how come you don't suuuuufff (surf)?" Other than I used the term "bitchen," which they thought was funny, I didn't fit their impression of what they thought California should be like.I thought it was funny they used to term "yoooooos guys" instead of saying "you guys." Sorry New Yorkers out there, but those guys were the loudest people I have ever met.Kent, just when poor old Forest thought the war was dead and over and lost, you go getting him all excited and hopeful again. Japanese soldier wandering around aimlessly the jungles of Borneo 60 years after WW11 ended. Sound familiar?You want me to answer a question regarding Shavers, Kent, when you didn't answer the questions regarding all the others. You seem to think that arranging a fight between Shavers and Frazier had to have a certain time frame, only slightly less restricted than the periods Haley's Comet visits our solar system (ie every 75 years). By returning to this subject all the time Kent (one loss after another), talking of tune ups and tune downs, who Joe liked and didn't like, who were cheese champions or bums, and who were dead or really alive and breathing, would give a pain killer tablet a headache. Kent, have you no charity in you? You've got me reaching for the reference books, Forest reaching for a bottle, and Steve reaching for bird seed. Get a soul, man, and leave history alone. Frazier didn't fight those guys and the reasons are obvious to logical persons of sound mind and fair heart. Make this site the 'no spin' zone. Admit the unpalatable truth. Frazier's management wasn't smart and Joe ducked fighting plenty of viable opponents.That said, I'll consider your question when I get time and I might even have one of my own coming back at you.....

Yamamoto Fusisaki: YOU MEAN TO SAY THE WAR IS OVER AND WE LOST?

Yamamoto-Yes, that's the truth! I was (-27) years old in 1945, really very young, but I am pretty sure that Japan, Germany and Italy lost the war. My legendary grandfather, Francesco Cini (Pisa 1909, Roma 1976) from Pisa fought in that war, even if he told me he never shot anybody. But he told my father he kept having nightmares for many many years after the war was over " THE GERMANS!!!, THE GERMANS". He was scared shitless of te Germans in the last years of the war (for obvious reasons). Benito Mussolini screamed on 10 June 1940: " VINCERE...E VINCEREMO !!!!!", but that didn't happen in reality. If that had happened I am almost sure that we would be all slaves of Germany in this very moment (Italians included). I think is not very important whether Frazier really ducked those guys or not! What really matters is that Frazier didn't fight these guys and so we'll never know how he would have performed against them. Joe Frazier one of the greatest heavyweights of the 70's in my book but... is missing from the equation. Where was George Foreman? Wouldn't it have made sense for Frazier and Foreman to have a rematch with the winner taking on Ali? Ali had beaten both of these guys in 1974. I think a natural eliminator would have been a Frazier-Foreman rematch, with the winner to face Ali. In fact, a good scenario would have been Ali defending against Quarry in the same time frame, and the winner of that fight would take on the winner of Foreman-Frazier. Another option would be the winner of Foreman-Frazier against Ali and the winner of that defending against Quarry. Gee, do you think Foreman ducked Joe like you think Shavers did?

| 7/10/05 08:57:45 PM | steve | na | na | 10 | Hey Kent, I remember talking to you on the telephone. You are a natural baritone, or the type of voice that comes right before it. Hence I don't think you could cover Jimmy Beaumont in his style. Perhaps in your own style. I remember you said you are not trying to sound like the guy whose song you are singing. You probably do a lot of Beach Boys and Jan and Dean material. I don't picture you as a Philly Do Wopper. Kent, on the East coast, you must speak as loud as you can, because there are 10 MILLION PEOPLE PER SQUARE METER OUT HERE! |

| 7/10/05 09:39:51 PM | steve | na | na | 10 | Noam, all I can base my opinion on is what I actually have seen take place. Jerry Quarry did knock out Shavers in one round. I wouldn't have bet that way, but it happened. Joe Frazier did beat Jerry pretty badly twice. I lost a lot of money on the second fight. Shavers did manage to hang in there with Ali, and give him a decent fight. Ali, however, was in control all the way. He was never in any real danger of losing that fight. You know, Shavers has this huge reputation. Who did he ever flatten in the top ten guys besides Norton. Holmes got up and whipped him. Based on all this, I think Frazier, had they met at their peaks, would have had a very good chance of getting to Shavers early. I don't think Shavers was anywhere near as complete a fighter as was George Foreman, who KO'D a much higher caliber of opponents over the length of his career. |

| 7/10/05 11:48:06 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Angelo, you miss the point that Shavers, starting in Dec. 1973 with the loss to Quarry had a bad year in 1974 and his marketability went down. I include the Quarry fight as it came at the end of the year. He lost to Bob Stallings and had a draw with Jimmy Young in a rematch and if I was Shavers management, I would have done exactly what they did. Use the first half of 1975 as a rebuilding time, the time you speak of. The losses to Quarry and Stallings and the draw with Young showed he was not ready for the big time and he needed to regroup, hence his management likely avoided Frazier at this time, not the other way around. He in fact beat three unknown fighters in 1975 before taking on a world class opponent, in this case Ron Lyle who knocked out Shavers in a slugfest in September. A Frazier/Shavers fight at this time was also highly unlikely as Frazier was preparing for his title shot, which happened in Oct of that year, only one month after Lyle/Shavers. Shavers would have been ready for Frazier after around the middle of 1976 when he had beaten quality opponents Henry Clark (twice), Howard Smith, and Roy "Tiger" Williams but Frazier was gone from the scene, except for his comeback verses Foreman and Cummings five years later, fights that should not have happened. Frazier would have fought Foreman if Foreman had beaten Ali in his title defense. If would have made sense for a Foreman/Frazier title elimination fight to have taken place sometime around early to mid 1975 but Foreman was not available and he took the whole year off in 1975 after his tough loss to Ali. Foreman didn't fight again until early 1976 verses Lyle (except for exhibitions such as his fight verses five opponents). Since Foreman was not available in 1975 Frazier got his title shot based on his win over Quarry in June 1974. Steve, I would do the tune you speak of in a key that is right for my voice. Not only do I don't do imitations, I can't as I am stuck with my own style, like it or not. Most singers do not mimic well and it takes away from their performance. A voice coach I once had said it is because every person's vocal chords are different and it hurts the voice to an extent to be too much of a copy cat. It is much easier to find your own range and I believe more creative as well ot make a song your own. That is why there are so many bad imitators out there. The real good ones are few and far between.

Steve, you gotta lighten up on the bird seed. I'm not making a big deal out of Shavers. He's just one of many (Lyle, Foster, Terrell, Patterson, Norton and......you get the drift) who Frazier never touched gloves in ring central with (can't say ducked, not allowed to, it offends sensitivities). Shavers' legend was with his punching power, not his win/loss record. He was a danger to someone with a vulnerable jaw (psst, here's a clue....think Frazier).

Now to Kent's question. Praise the Lord that he's moved away from Forest's magic wand obsession. Kent writes that "Shavers had his jaw broken in 1973 which meant he was out of commission for half the year after his win over Ellis in June. That shows there was even less time when a Shavers v Frazier fight could have happened." Answer: In March 1973 Ali also had his jaw broken (by Norton). Even so, before year's end, Ali had another two fights (against Norton and Lubbers). Broken jaws aren't the end. Doctors can fix 'em. Even in 1973. Ask Ali.

Frazier was a very inactive champion. On his tax form he listed Boxer as occupation but he had so few fights this is arguably incorrect. He fought so few times that if he had an employer he would have been sacked for not turning up. Consider this. Frazier had 37 fights all up. Ali had 56. Lyle 43. Ellis 40. Holmes 67. Norton 42. Quarry 53. Shavers 73. Foreman 76. Liston 50. Patterson 55. Bowe 40. Dempsey 64. Louis 69. Walcott 53. Marciano 49.

Yet Frazier, who fought less fights than just about all other champions, still opted to fight Ellis twice, while having a closed appointment book for even one fight against all the other viable guys out there (who all "just happened" to be heavier hitters than the by then hapless Ellis). In 1971 Frazier was 27 and he had just beaten Ali and was in his prime. He had 10 more fights, only winning 5 of them (the vanquished were Standers, Daniels, Bugner, Quarry, and a barely breathing Ellis). He lost 4 out of his last 10 fights, and was stopped 3 times. Joe had 9 fights in his last 6 years of fighting, averaging only 0.6 fights a year. Frazier had more fights out of the ring with his girlfriends.

Frazier is a very relevant boxer in history. His relevance comes because he beat Ali once. But there is a difference between being relevant and an all time great. He only fought two great fighters - Ali and Foreman - and lost 4 out of 5 against them. He was stopped 3 times against them. Against Foreman he set a world bouncing record.
liking the sport.And, Massimo, you still didn't answer my question about nothingness. If the universe ends, what is there on the other side? Nothing? And isn't nothing space that could be occupied by something? So nothing is something and the universe. It can't end. I mean, if a room ends there is something on the other side of the wall.

In 1973 Ali had his jaw broken in March verses Norton and the second Norton fight was in September, so Ali was out about half of the year for a broken jaw too. Shavers was out for half the year the same year with the broken jaw suffered in sparring as he fought Ellis in June and Quarry in December. So yes there was less time when a Shavers/Frazier fight could have happened.

In both cases a minimum of four months was needed to heal before training could begin, a time when each could have had one more fight. In Shavers' case he was a marketable fighter for another big name fight after his win over Ellis and his management chose Quarry, a big test, which he failed by being knocked out in one round. Again Noam, you ignore the fact that he followed this up with a loss to Stallings so he was hardly lighting the world on fire at that point.

Both fighters could have only taken one fight during the six month period as the Lubbers fight happened more than six months after the broken jaw of Ali. I am only using Shavers as an example as to why Frazier didn't avoid him and I can use similar logic for others that you named also. Also, you can't put people like Terrell in the same catagory as punchers like Lyle, Shavers and Mac Foster. Frazier faced harder punchers in Quarry, Bonevna, and Chuvalo than Terrell. Terrell was a boxer who boxed from a distance and he relied on a good left jab. Did Frazier avoid boxers who relied on a jab? I don't think so as he fought both Ali and Ellis. Yes Frazier had only so many fights in him because of his style but did he avoid certain fighters because of their style? No, there is no proof this is so just because of one fight, Foreman number one. If he did avoid punchers than he would have never fought Foreman a second time.

I didn't answer your question soon because it's a very profound and complicated question and would require a lot of time and space in this site and a better Physicist than I am! And a better English speaker, as well! You know, speaking in English of boxing (bum, ducked, chump, hell...) is one thing, speaking of Science is another! As far as I know, people who think the Universe is NOT ENDLESS (finite) mean that if you "traveled, traveled, traveled, and keep on travelling for a VERY long time, there would be a moment in which you 'd realize that you are back in the place where your trip started. These guys think the Universe is some kind of a sphere. Anyway, if you think about it, if the Universe really started from a single point 15-20 billions years ago and nothing can go faster than light, how can it be endless? Its diameter should be at most 15-20 billions light-years in length. Another profound unsolved question is: is the Universe gonna expand forever or is it going to collapse in a single point? It all depends on how much matter there is in the Universe. This is the DARK MATTER problem and I had a female Prof. in college who spent many years working on this subject (and at a very high level too).
selection" (Noam, instead of dwelling on the guys Frazier didn't "touch gloves with" and notice I didn't use the offensive term, "duck" instead, we need to stay positive and politically correct by looking at the glass half full---the guys Frazier DID take on, including battle scarred Ellis in '75). I will use the term "Smart Management Opponent Selection" as the positive term to describe Yank's "tuner" against Jimmy Ellis. Even the commentators talked about Ellis'
1-4-1 record coming in. The whole scene was surreal. It was broad daylight (probably so the fight would be prime time in North America???) it was held outside under a canopy, in a small venue. As such, you could see buildings in the background. There wasn't much of a crowd, and they were very close to the action, yet a lot of them were viewing the fight through binoculars, which I also found odd (given how close they were to the ring). Maybe binoculars were a hot item in '75. I used to bring them to baseball games all the time. One thing that I had all but forgotten is that Ellis was NOT knocked down in the fight. He finished on his feet, but was absorbing punches like a live punching bag. Dundee had seen enough and Ellis' corner stopped it. Kent---a final point on Shavers-Frazier. I stand by my assertion that if anyone avoided anyone here, it was Frazier's camp steering clear of Shavers. I go back to the most basic, most practical reasoning, which is that over a period of about 4-5 years, most of these guys we've been discussing fought against each other, like a round robin tourney. Missing was Frazier. It doesn't make sense to me that management would stick Shavers in with Quarry ('73) and Lyle ('75), but not with Frazier at any time between '72 and '76. Once again, over his career, Shavers took on Quarry, Lyle, Ali, Holmes, Norton, Young, Bernardo Mercado for crying out loud.
Some of these fights were before Frazier retired, others after he retired. If you run down a list of fights for these opponents (not including Mercado), you'll find that in many cases, at some point, they fought against each other, and against Foreman too. Frazier did fight Quarry and he was 1-2 against Ali.
Kent, say what you will about his "style" shortening his career. He had under 40 fights and "carefully selected" around the big hitters. He was "carefully maneuvered" to stay out of the heavyweight tournament and the gang that would become the WBC (gee, how much integrity did Jose Suliman have when he led the WBC) invented a title for him to win. Essentially, he avoided the hard knocks of three consecutive fights in that tournament and fought Ellis and Quarry on his terms. Hooray for "smart management." Lots of fighters in history have had straight ahead styles that result in being hit to come in and deliver and it's never been an excuse for ducking an opponent. When you're fighting once or twice a year, you ought not to be taking on Terry Daniels or a mummified Jimmy Ellis----at least not if you expect history to judge you as an all-time great.

| 7/11/05 08:52:42 AM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||10|Noam, Earnie Shavers retired for 5 months after losing to Jerry. From the period between 1974-1975
Earnie was a complete non-entity.|

| 7/11/05 09:25:04 AM|Forest Ward|NYC||NYC|||10|Norm aka Howard C. Quit the BS.
You and Howard C are one in the same. Any fool can see that. You know little about boxing. You interpret facts and records to suit your own purposes. You ignore questions that are put to you as a result of your unfounded remarks, and then you have Howard C agree with your ideas, and jump to your defense as a way to give your remarks credibilty, and answer the questions you refuse to answer.
You do this all the time to Kent.Norm baby, you are the one that brought these posts down into the gutter. Calling me an alcoholic, a homosexual, a jailbird. I think you also made remarks that I was a pedophile. So don't try and pretend you are some innocent victim above the fray. Personally, I believe you are projecting your own psychological problems on me. Norm baby, your bully tactics will never work with me Norm the so called boxing expert. Who remarks that Rocky Marciano "rarely" punched to the body. Who else agrees with that remark?Norm baby, I have been on this board for 5 years. A punk like you will never run me off.

Fan: No, Shavers did NOT retire after losing to Quarry. If he genuinely retired, we would have never seen him fight Ali for the title, never seen him fight Holmes twice, never see him flatten Norton in one, or battle Tex Cobb. He might have PLANNED to retire, but low and behold, a new challenge and more money got him out of "retirement" and he went on to fight for many, many years. You want to know when Ali retired? After he lost to Berbick. Ray Leonard retired after losing to Camacho. Point is, you can say you're retiring, but if you go back to work, you didn't retire, you just stopped working for a while. When you retire for good, you're done. Foreman did not retire after losing to Jimmy Young. He just stopped fighting for an eternity. The bigger point in your context is that Shavers was very available during this "retirement" and if the opportunity was in this time frame, he would have gladly "come out of retirement" to fly 13-16 hours to Australia for a $75,000 fight against Frazier (This is the amount Jimmy Ellis' ghost was paid.). In 1975, $75,000 was a big fortune to a guy like Earnie Shavers. He would have fought Foreman, Frazier, Ali, Norton, Quarry again---maybe even fought a shark in deep water for a $75,000 payday and the chance to move to an even bigger fight with a win. The phone didn't ring. Earnie's phone didn't ring. Jimmy's did.

Fan: Retirement—Withdrawal from one’s occupation, business, or office. That is actually what Shavers did. The fact that he came out of retirement does not mean he wasn't in it. That is why people say "He came out of retirement." It does not have to be a permanent place, it can be temporary.

Fan: Earnie Shavers retired for a period of five months.

Fan: I see your point, but I just don't know exactly how this thing works! You need to ask some good Physicist. But the experts don't consider obvious or trivial that the Universe is endless. I'm sure they have their good reasons! Sometimes the reality is more complex than we can think intuitively.

Of course I understand that people retire and unretire, but my point is that "unretire" is sort of an oxymoron/paradox. In boxing, and in many sports, it seems as though retirement is another word for taking a break, like when Micheal Jordon retired to play baseball. And I stand by my assertion that Shavers retirement would have been five hours, not five months, if he had a high profile money fight offered to him. I also stand by my assertion that anybody can use Kent's rationale to dismiss any boxer in history ducking any other boxer in history. You can always find the long way around to rationalize why a fight didn't take place. And to be sure, I totally believe the fact that Shavers-Frazier might not have ever been presented to either camp back in the early 70's. These two guys were at different points in their careers and Kent is correct that one was losing when the other was winning and vice versa. But Shavers is just one example of a Top Ten fighter who was active during 1970-1976 that Frazier as Champion, then challenger, then opponent never "touched gloves" with. There are a whole lot more. They all fought eachother, none fought Frazier. No, I don't think THEY were avoiding Joe...not after watching Foreman smack him around like a ping pong ball and Ali decision him in the following year. I don't think guys like Lyle, Shavers, Young, et all were terrified after watching Frazier handle Terry Daniels either. Kent, what string of wins did Frazier put together to get the shot at Ali in Manilla? Are you going to say that by beating Jerry Quarry, that alone was enough, and once again say that Jimmy Ellis (by 1975, relegated to hitting about as hard as a miniature poodle) was a tune up? In other words, it's okay in your world for Frazier, as Champion, to be abused by Foreman in losing the title, then lose to a former champion (Ali)---manage to win a rematch against a guy he knocked out already, Quarry (granted, he waited for that guy to knock off power punchers so he wouldn't have to face them), then take a tune-up against another guy he knocked out years earlier, who is now punchless and 1-4-1 in half a dozen fights---and in your world, that paves the way for a title shot? Lucky Joe.

| 7/11/05 12:42:55 PM | steve | na | na | 9 | Massimo, dark matter, if it' ever actually proven to exist, isn't doing a very good job so far in slowing expansion, or is it? I believe the universe is infinite. There is no "other side of the sphere"15 OR 20 billion years ?! As far as you and I are concerned, Massimo, that is infinity. God didn't design or equip us with an intellect that can comprehend these vast measurements in space and time. I'm giving this site a nine rating today because I'm just getting tired of this endless Frazier ducking everybody debate. Kent, Forrest, vs Noam and Angelo, it's gettin real old to me. |

| 7/11/05 01:07:44 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Steve: The Frazier "Quacks Like A Duck" debate has taken on a life of it's own. All of us are too stubborn to back down and having too much fun to let it go. If all of us (even Massimo from Italy) had put this much brain power and effort into solving some contemporary issues, the U.S. would have no deficit and terrorism would be dead. Instead, we've all decided to focus on a small moment in time about thirty years ago and with nothing more than instincts to go on, we've staked a firm position and won't budge. Did Frazier duck Shavers? Did Shavers duck Frazier? Was Jimmy Ellis alive or running on batteries and remote control? These are the important questions we refuse to leave alone. But I'd still rate the site a 10. |

| 7/11/05 01:28:56 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 | Frazier didn't duck Shavers. However he could have fought Lyle. Earnie Shavers is looked at a lot differently today than he was in 1974ish. In 1974 he was called a one-hit wonder. Lyle on the other hand was a viable contender for Joe to fight. |

| 7/11/05 02:28:00 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Fan: You're correct in that Shavers improved like fine wine. Though he lost the biggest fights of his career, he made very respectable showings against the Greatest, Ali (15 rounds), two good, long fights against Larry Holmes, the slugfest with Lyle too. Was he the only person to KO Jimmy Young? He put Norton out in one round too. Yes, in '74, he might have been viewed as a one hit wonder, and even going into the fight with Ali, he was hardly a household name. But that showing made him a very steady contender through the end of the 70's. But Fan, let's put it in perspective: If Frazier only wanted to take on legitimate, deserving, proven heavyweights, and that's why Shavers never managed a fight with him, how did Terry Daniels end up fighting for the title? Why was 1-4-1 Jimmy Ellis flown to Australia for "Melbourne's Kangaroo Kourt" in 1975 (after Earnie Shavers flattened him in one round? I have that fight on my Earnie Shavers VHS tape and it's something to see---Ellis (and Kent) thought
Shavers was ready to go and instead, he looked for an opening and delivered a short little uppercut that put Ellis down. Watching Ellis try to stand up but unable to because he was so dizzy---maybe this sent the message to Yank that Frazier should fight the loser instead of the winner. Seems to me Frazier was more than willing to take on some not so worthy opponents, except these opponents couldn't deliver the "ONE PUNCH WONDER" threat that "rough around the edges" Shavers could. And yes, if we rule out Shavers because he wasn't worthy (That's questionable because he was in the Top Ten), then you're right about Ron Lyle being more polished and ready. Kent has pointed out that Quarry beat Lyle and Shavers, and Joe beat Quarry, so that excused Frazier from having to meet these guys. By that logic, a whole bunch of historic fights would have never been made. If fighter A beats fighter B, and fighter C beats fighter A, then C and B never have to fight eachother. Forrest would call this the "Smart Management Clause" in handling a fighter. I call it quack-quack.

| 7/11/05 04:39:10 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | ||10 |

Lyle was always viewed as more legititome than Shavers. Shavers was a better puncher, but less skilled. Shavers could have knocked out anyone in history in one round. He also could have been knocked out by a ton of guys in one round. That is why he has aged well, his fights were incredible. How about Roy "Tiger" Williams? That 10th round makes Rocky look like a John Ruiz fight!! |

| 7/11/05 04:54:45 PM | Noam | same | same | ||10 |

Hi Forest - you are deluded again. Not only am I not Howard C. (like you and Fandom are one), but I never called you a pedophile. I can't recall calling you a homosexual, however if I did maybe I was just counter punching you calling me "a joke", "a blowhard", "a jerk" and "boring and rude". And that was just on 7 January 2005.Anyway, you are Fandom's "number 1 fan" (3/33/05) and on 4/12/05 you told Fandom that "Fan, you are my man, I think you know that by now." How sweet. In light of your unusual devotion to Fandom, I'm not prepared to rule anything out. Not that there's anything wrong with that, mind you.Kent - just because Shavers lost his last fight, doesn't mean that Frazier would have necessarily ruled him out. Remember Ellis 2 ? This is Ellis's record before Joe fought him a second time:loss to Bugnerlost to Lyledrew with Middletonlost to Kirkmanbeat Memphis Jonesknocked out by ShaversI'd say the fact that Shavers lost his last fight should have made it more likely that Frazier would fight him.Angelo - what is "vegamite" ? You speak of someone named "Dundee" in the Battle of the Undead (Frazier v Ellis) in Australia. Is that Crocodile Dundee ? You are right about Spok and Kirk.Back to Forest. I think you are a very nasty, spiteful, bitter person. Your hatred of Ali is obvious given you gloating about his injuries. I remind everyone what you wrote on 6/23/05:"God Bless Frazier's managers. Frazier takes great pleasure in seeing Ali stagger around with his hands shaking and not being able to talk. Joe gladly takes the responsibility for a lot of Ali's bodily damage."You proudly wrote that of Frazier like Ali's injuries were some grotesque symbol of triumph. You are a nasty man. Apart from the abuse and name calling you directed at me and Angelo because we disagree with you, you also called Patterson the "biggest cheese champion of all time" who "fought "bums and amateurs (6/24/05)". You also accused "Cooney of running a hustle (4/12/05)." Your posts reveal someone with little useful knowledge of boxing. Forest, if you think Frazier had smart management, then you are ducking truth and logic. You are just plain dumb. |

| 7/11/05 05:05:20 PM | Angelo | DC | funktron@yahoo.com | ||10 |

Tiger Williams vs. Shavers was simply ridiculous. How could those guys stand and deliver that type of punishment? Williams just collapsed from exhaustion at the end. The Shavers vs. Henry Clark fights were good as well. Didn't Jerry Q. do the commentary for the old CBS Sports Spectacular boxing and Shavers fights? |

| 7/11/05 05:06:34 PM | Noam | same | same | ||10 |

Angelo, you are right about the "Frazier quacks like a duck debate". It's fun looking at all the different

No one has addressed the possibility that it was Shavers management in the 1974-75 period who didn't want a fight with Frazier as they needed to rebuild him as a contender after two losses, to Quarry and Stallings or the fact that it was Ellis' last chance, Frazier two, while Shavers was still a good prospect for the future that didn't need to be put in over his head too soon. The loss to Quarry followed by the loss to journeyman Stallings clearly shows Shavers was not ready yet for Frazier and when Shavers was ready, in 1976, Frazier was essentially gone from the scene.

I personally believe that dark matter exists. If not, you couldn't understand how some clusters of stars stay together and other things. Many physicists say that not only dark matter exists, but it's more than 90% of the entire mass of the Universe! Probably neutrino (now people propend to thinking that neutrino has a mass) and WIMP (Weakly Interactive Massive Particles) are two good candides. As far as I knowAstrophysicists still change their minds very often on the issue whether the Universe will expand forever or not. I have been listening either (or both) versions since I got involved in Physics. I personally like better the small problems in Physics than the "everything-problems". With the small problems, you can create a mathematical theory, make a smart experiment and check if your theory fits the results of your experiment. If it is so, you can be sure that your theory works well and that you have really learnt something. On the other hand, even if I certainly admit that the everything questions are fascinating, there is always the risk of getting nowhere...

PS: ah, I almost forgot, I don't understand how an infinite Universe can be compatible with the Big Bang Theory.

Forest Ward was a good amateur in New York in the mid-late 60's. He was actually thought to be a big-time prospect. He didn't translate that well into the pro ranks. maybe he was still a little young. He lost by TKO to Chuck Wepner in his 7th fight. He did score a good knockout over prospect 17-0 Pedro Agosto. He ended up 9-2-2 7 KO's and retired at the age of 20. I don't know how good he was, but I am not him on this site or in reality. This will be my last denial of that fact, back to boxing please.

Jerry Quarry and Joe Frazier. Quarry was born in 1945 and Frazier in 1944. They both turned professional in 1965. Consider the guys Quarry fought that Frazier didn't: London (x 2), Patterson (x 2), Lyle, Shavers, Norton, and Mac Foster. In the meantime, Frazier found time to be fighting Standers and Daniels and Zyglewicz. Mac Foster fought from 1966 to 1976. Had 36 fights and won 30, all by ko. He was 6'3" tall, same height as Foreman. Mac Foster fought from 1966 to 1976. Had 36 fights and won 30, all by ko. He was 6'3" tall, same height as Foreman.
5'10" tall and wasn't a KO specialist.By the end of 1970 Foster had fought 26 times, for 25 KO wins and one loss (to Jerry Quarry). Frazier still didn't fight him. Rather than face a knockout specialist, he fought Bob Foster the light-heavy. Perhaps Joe got Mac and Bob mixed up.By the end of 1971 Foster had had 29 fights, for 28 wins (all by KO).By the end of 1972 Foster had had 30 fights, for 28 ko wins and 2 losses. Ali fought and beat him that year. Frazier instead fought Standers and Daniels.Mac Foster never got to fight 'Quacking' Joe Frazier. The reason? He punched too hard.By the end of 1971 Foster had had 29 fights, for 28 wins (all by KO).By the end of 1972 Foster had had 30 fights, for 28 ko wins and 2 losses. Ali fought and beat him that year. Frazier instead fought Standers and Daniels.Mac Foster never got to fight 'Quacking' Joe Frazier. The reason? He punched too hard.

| 7/11/05 07:11:34 PM| Howard C.| Louisville | howardc@louisville| ||10| Fandom says that Forrest Ward was a good amateur in the mid to late 1960s.By the end of 1971 Foster had had 29 fights, for 28 wins (all by KO).By the end of 1972 Foster had had 30 fights, for 28 ko wins and 2 losses. Ali fought and beat him that year. Frazier instead fought Standers and Daniels.Mac Foster never got to fight 'Quacking' Joe Frazier. The reason? He punched too hard. Yet Forrest told us the other day that he is 51 years old. That means he was born in 1954. In the mid 1960s he was 11. Yeah, sure......good amateur boxer.Now we can add budding champion boxer, jailbird, and policeman to Mrs Forrest Fandom-Ward's burgeoning resume. Wacko.

| 7/12/05 07:56:00 AM| Angelo| dc| funktron@yahoo.com| ||10| Howard C: Tyson was probably pretty good at age 11, so why not Forrest? Oh, and Vegamite is a sandwich spread popular in Australia at some point (maybe still!). Remember the Men At Work song, "Down Under" when they talked about a Vegamite sandwich? That was why Joe Frazier's huge triumph over Ellis has been coined as the "Vegamite Victory" for Joe.

| 7/12/05 08:55:00 AM| max hord| fernandina bch, fla| maxhord@adelphia.net| ||10| Back to my favorite of all time. I was watching Frazier/Ali three. If Marciano and Ali ever fought I just don't think Ali could take the shots to the arms that Frazier hit him with. Ali would probably wilt. He didn't do much to keep Frazier at bay. Rather just try and cover up and take the shots to the arms and body. Rocky would have ended that foolishness early.

| 7/12/05 10:44:41 AM| Kent| Murrieta, Ca| kentallenent@aol.com| ||10| Angelo, Mac Foster lost to Jerry Quarry in 1970 otherwise he likely would have gotten a title shot against Frazier.Of course Frazier could have chosen Foster instead of Foreman but he chose Foreman, the better known fighter because of his olympic gold medal who was undefeated. Foreman was a better pay day for Frazier, a bigger gate than M. Foster would have been. Who did Foster ever beat? Yes he had all of his wins by knockout and he did have a respectful showing verses Ali, which Ali won by a large margin, but Foster's biggest wins were over very faded Cleveland Williams and equally faded Zora Folley, as well as fellow Quarry victim Thad Spencer.It seems that Quarry was a measuring stick on who would climb up the ladder and most of the prospects put in front of Jerry failed the test. Also regarding Bob Foster, a lot of heavyweight champions have fought the light heavyweight champion. Dempsey had Charpentier, Louis had Conn, Marciano had Moore, and Holmes had Michael Spinks (but it that case it backfired for Holmes). It is kind of tradition to defend against the light heavy champ.
Champions often take a couple of easier title defenses in between tougher fights. Frazier had Ali 1 and then the easier fights and then he took on Foreman, a higher caliber opponent than Stander and Daniels. Joe Louis, one of the two best heavyweights of all time, Ali being the other one, had a lot of easier title defenses. Louis had many fighters of the caliber of Stander and Daniels in between the Schmeling, Conn, and Walcott fights. Of course Frazier took on Foreman thinking he could beat him. The heavyweight champion thinks he can beat anyone, that is why he is heavyweight champion. It seems the knock on Frazier is he didn't take on Foreman and M Foster after all, Ali did. But that is not a fair comparison as the reason why Ali is the greatest is he did things other fighters didn't do. I have never said anything other than Ali is the best, better than Frazier, who he beat two times out of three in the ring.

And Primo Carnera defended his title against the light-heavyweight champion Tommy Loughran back in 1934.

Wow Kent, now you've REALLY convinced me that Frazier made a career of beating Ali once and Jerry Quarry twice. By beating Ali, he upset the Greatest, when the Greatest was undefeated. By beating Quarry, at least in your world, he was "off the hook" to have to ever fight Shavers, Lyle and now Mac Foster. Hell, if only Jerry had beat Ali, Joe wouldn't have had to fight him either! This is a sensational concept. Next year, if my Kansas City Chiefs beat the Chargers and the Chargers beat the Broncos, I'm going to petition the NFL to declare that the Chiefs won't have to play the Broncos since they beat a team who beat the Broncos. This is tremendous. If only Penn State can beat Michigan, and Michigan can beat Ohio State, Penn State won't have to play Ohio State. Yank and Joe's "deferral" policy is really something else.

Kent: Who did Mac Foster ever beat? Well, for one, he never beat Frazier. A lot of guys never beat Frazier since the fights never happened. Quack Quack.

Norm baby, I see you posted under Howard C. again. And Howard C is answering the questions you ducked. You called me a alcoholic, homosexual and a jailbird. Then you denied calling me those names and so I printed the dates you made those posts. Norm you and Howard C are so similar it is not an accident. With your slash and burn style, your take one or 2 sentences someone wrote and quote them out of context to suit your needs. And them you attack them. Only Norm aka Howard C do this. You both quote book names and page numbers when you try to refute someone. Only Norm aka Howard C do this. When Norm is asked a question he does not like he will not answer it but instead Howard C will step up to the plate and answer it with a BS remark. You want some more similarites of Norm/Howard C? How about this one almost everyone who is a regular on this site has given some personal background about themselves. Norm aka Howard C have given none. We don't even know where Norm is from. Others on this site have given their military background, residing state or city, hobbies... Norm aka Howard nothing. They both like to call me a homosexual, an alcoholic, and a jailbird. Only Norm aka Howard C do this. Finally only Norm and Howard are the only 2 who use psycho-babble talk when attacking someone. Regarding the Name Forest Ward. Someone else asked me on this site a few years ago if I was Forest Ward the fighter. I told that person I was not. But as a kid I followed Forest in the amateurs. I saw him fight in the Polic Athletic League and the Golden Gloves in NYC. Incidentally, Forest Ward beat Kenny Norton for the Heavyweight National Golden Gloves title. Forest Ward was another of boxing's many tradgies. In honor of him I took his name on this site. Which as I said already was already known on this site some years ago.

And now, the latest episode of "Did You Know?" Did You Know, Terry Daniels: Did you know, Terry Daniels was not quite six feet tall, and weighed about 190 lbs. Did you know Frazier outweighed him considerably, by about 20 pounds? Did you know that after losing to Frazier, Daniels had four more fights in 1972 and lost all four? Did you know Terry Daniels career record was 33-25-1? I thought you'd like to know. Kent, the "tradition" of a couple easy defenses in between tough fights shouldn't wave in a stiff. Come on now, you know better than that. This is clearly ridiculous. A slow, 22 year old, unaccomplished, unknown fighter outweighed by 20 pounds? Frazier had him in every single category. What a crock. One "Did You Know" question that I do not have the answer for---apparently, Daniels "earned" this shot at Frazier by beating the #9 ranked heavyweight. Who the hell did he beat? Who could this have been?

"You don't take a Volkswagen into the Indianapolis 500 unless you know a shortcut." Did you know, the person credited with this quote is Mrs. Ron Stander. Did you know, Ron Stander was ranked # 30 in the world (no Kent, that's not # 3, please add a zero, it's # 30) when Frazier granted him the title shot? Did you know, Stander finished with a career record of 36-21-3? Now, another question I DON'T have the answer to: Is the combined won-loss record of Frazier's title defenses the worst ever? What about the career won-lost record of all of Frazier's opponents, title defenses or not? This guy fought some very questionable competition, that's for damn sure.

--Forest Fandom-Ward, I think your problem is that you read half the post and then make assumptions, which usually turn out to be wrong. I didn't call you a homosexual; I said that your abused and erratic behaviour was consistent with that of a repressed homosexual. Given your subsequent announcements of dedication and affection for Fandom, my comment was prophetic. Not that there's anything wrong with that, of course. Now regarding Quackin' Joe Frazier. I was going to say that Howard C. made some very insightful comments, but Mrs Fandom-Forest gets upset when I praise Howard. So I can't do that. Quarry and Frazier, same age, turned pro same year. Yet they took different paths. One explored new horizons and took risks; the other doubled up on fighters he'd already beaten. One fought often; the other didn't. One didn't duck hard punchers; the other.....oops, not allowed to use the 'd' word. It upsets the Dead Parroters. Mrs Fandom-Forest: do you deny that you once said that you'd been absent from this site for months as there was no web in jail? Do you also deny on another occasion that you said that you were a police officer who worked 9/11? And why have you assumed the identity of an actual person (Forest Ward) when you are not him? It's okay to have an alias like you've done with the Fandom tag, but taking a real person's name is sick. You've been doing it on this site for five years? Wow. I thought there are laws against doing this type of thing.

If he can be Forrest Ward, than I want to be...let's see...okay, I'm now Joe Namath. If Chamberlain could challenge Ali, then I should have challenged Frazier. Signed, Joe "Willie" Namath.

Yesterday ESPN Classic spoke (or, at 35% talked) about Jack Dempsey...I see many analogies between Dempsey's and Frazier's career. After winning the title against Willard, Jack didn't fight very often and didn't probably fight always the most dangerous opponents. He fought only twice in 1920 (against Miske and Brennan, two very good fighters), then in 1921 he fought twice (Gibbons, who was a light heavyweight and Firpo), then in 1921 he fought once against unknown journeyman Jimmy Darcy, then in 1924 he fought 0 times, in 1925 again 0 times and then he lost the title against Tunney in 1926. Apparently Dempsey was very mad to his manager (Jack Kearns) because he would have wanted to fight more often and against better opposition, but Kearns was too cautious and prevented him from doing so (or even didn't allow him to do so). Maybe the same thing happened to Joe "The big ducker :-) " Frazier. Maybe Frazier would have wanted to fight Lyle, Shavers, Norton, "wrong name" Terrell, Jimmy Young etc. but his managers weren't of the same idea. I think Frazier showed in the first Foreman fight that he was one of the bravest fighters ever. I don't think he was afraid of those guys!

Generally, if a boxer, especially a top ranking boxer won't get in the ring with someone who is a legitimate contender, when the other top guys in the division do, then the suspicion is valid that they are worried. Excuses don't cut it. Personally, I think Frazier's confidence was diminished by the first Ali fight. Yes, I know he won, but he was fighting someone who'd been out of the ring for three years. He hit Ali with his best and Ali got up. Frazier was very knocked around and took much longer than Ali to recover after the fight. To me, he was walking on egg shells and his management became extremely choosy. They were dumb in taking the Foreman fight. For some reason Joe didn't rate Foreman - huge mistake - and he thought himself a shoe in. The extent of the loss shocked Joe. It drained his confidence. He knew he was vulnerable. And so did his management. But his management thought they could squeeze some more money out of Joe by avoiding the dangerous fights and only taking the ones he really had to have. They could manage his constitutional health problems like high blood pressure and eye cataracts. Hey, they thought, these problems will affect Joe in the long term, not the short term. So lets make a quick buck off of the guy. There was no avoiding the Ali fights. Hatred lifted Joe for them. But the first Ali fight and the Foreman thrashing unnerved him so much that no way was he thinking of Norton, Shavers, Lyle, Foster or any of those scary guys. Why fight them when Standers, Daniels, and Ellis were available? Massimo says that Frazier was brave. Yes, he was. But he was more careful than brave, mainly because he was more vulnerable than bulletproof. He didn't have the luxury of Ali's fabulous jaw. Nor did he have the comfort of Foreman's power. And his health was no good. So he took fewer fights, fewer risk, fought the easy guys, and saved himself for times when his hatred of Ali would lift him or his fear of Foreman would motivate him. In the end, the cream rose to the top. Ali beat the field. So did Foreman. But we don't know who comes next, because Joe wouldn't fight those other guys. After the flogging he got from Foreman, I'm not deeming him the fights against those other hard punchers. As Bonavena proved, Joe was there for the taking, even in his prime, against someone who could
Another good fighter Joe Frazier didn't fight was Al "Blue" Lewis!

You're correct that the win over Ali came with a price attached---Frazier was hospitalized (and he was not comfortable talking about that, as if in some way, he thought it diminished his win) and the fight took some of the fight out of him. But don't forget, prior to beating Ali, there was some history of "being careful" by not accepting the challenge that was issued to enter the Championship Tournament. As for giving Foreman the title shot, I truly think Joe's camp convinced themselves that Foreman was rough around the edges, easy to hit, lacked stamina, and was given trouble by Piralta---so how could he earn a win over a world class fighter like Frazier? I think they felt that Frazier could pressure Foreman, get inside and use quickness to throw Foreman off his game, pummel Foreman and get a middle round knockout. By the time Foreman's punches lifted Frazier off the floor for one of the six knockdowns, I'm sure Yank and Futch were saying something to the effect of "Houston, we've got a problem." By the way, look up Ron Stander and Terry Daniels on search engines. One of the articles talks about how Frazier claimed to "have trouble with shorter guys" which is puzzling to me since after Foreman dispatched of him, all we've heard is that Frazier has "trouble with taller guys." Which is it then? Does he have trouble with shorter AND taller guys? Maybe today, Yank would use a computer to find guys who are exactly Joe's height, but 20 pounds lighter, a little slower, preferably white, and preferably with a record just over .500. Perfect.

Joe Frazier was a great fighter. He didn't fight everybody, but he fought a bunch of good fighters. He had four losses in his career. They came against Ali and Foreman only. He would have been a big favorite over Shavers, Lyle, Norton. He would have been a monumental favorite over Mac Foster. He never fought these guys though. It does damage his legacy slightly, but in reality the fans that have seen most of his fights and truly know the scene in the 70's put him in his rightful spot. Nearly on par with Holmes and Foreman. I would rate Joe slightly behind Foreman and Holmes, but above everyone else between 1965-1980.

Kent, why do you think the second Quarry fight was an easy fight that Frazier's management knew was a sure win? He was taking a big chance and Frazier was the underdog going in. Their first fight was a gruelling match, hardly easy, with Frazier winning by wearing Quarry down in a war of attrition and going into the second fight Joe had lost to Foreman and Ali along with a win over Bugner so he needed a win over a top rated contender to get back in the title picture. It wasn't guareenteed as Quarry had won six fights in a row including wins over Lyle and Shavers, Jerry was on a roll. We Quarry fans were confident of the fact that Jerry had a very good chance of avenging his earlier loss to Frazier. Nobody who was around when the second Frazier/Quarry fight happened knew it would turn out to be an easier fight for Frazier than the first one before it happened and we can't say Frazier wasn't taking a big chance going in by looking at how it actually turned out. One thing I agree with Noam and Angelo is that Frazier's camp thought he could beat Foreman going into the fight. So beforehand, how would they know Frazier might be vunerable to big punchers as he was beating everyone they put in front of him including hard punchers like Bonevena, Quarry, and Chuvalo. Yes Bonevena did put Frazier down but Frazier got up and pulled off the win. I don't think we can count Joe getting knocked down in about his third pro fight by an unknown as any fighter can get knocked down at any time. I doubt his management gave that much thought later on as Joe got up to
Is there any proof Frazier got hurt in sparring with someone who could hit hard so his management knew he should stay away from hard punchers?

As far as I know he sparrred many times with Ken Norton and Frazier got the better of him most of the time. Norton may not be in the catagory of Foreman and Shavers but he was a hard hitter in his own right.

I thought you guys' argument was Frazier avoided hard punchers so why is Ernie Terrell's name brought up? He was a good boxer but not a hard puncher. I am suprised you don't bring up Eddie Machen's name either. Oh that's right, Frazier did fight Machen.

Norm baby and Angelo, regarding Forest Ward somehow you missed the sentence where I said I took his name to honor him.

Regarding the jail remark that was made in jest to I believe Everen (who no longer posts on this site). And it was apparent to anyone who read the post that the remark was made in jest. But Norm with your slash and burn style of writing you take one sentence and use it out of context regarding the whole post. Your a funny guy Norm. Most of the time you ignore what I write and claim you know what I am thinking only you and Howard C do this. I asked you once before can you tell me what I am thinking now?

Norm aka Howard C you never answered the question I asked. Why is it on this site we know a little about each of the regular posters such as their nationalities, there favorite music, their age, their weight, their location, occupation, military history. But with Norm aka Howard C we know nothing.

And in a post you said to Steve I was not calling you (Steve) a homosexual I was calling Forest Ward a homosexual.

Forrest: I didn't miss that point about you honoring this guy by using his name. Joe Namath was my first football idol.

I never said Frazier's second fight with Quarry was easy, or that going in, they thought it would be easy. Quarry had just beaten Shavers and by my sense of reasoning, he was in a much better position than Frazier and in fact, Quarry should have been in the ring for a title bout with Foreman, not this "eliminator" against Frazier. It was Quarry who was taking an unnecessary chance if you ask me. We do know that Frazier had already beaten Quarry, by KO, so that probably gave Joe a comfort level. He seemed to thrive on rematches against opponents he had already knocked off. Of course, the one time he tried to avenge a loss, Foreman handled him easily again. I believe that Jerry Quarry should have gotten a title chance after his win over Shavers. I don't see why Joe Frazier, who lost to Foreman and Ali, was able to stake claim to being in the thick of the division---or why Quarry had to fight him. Jerry was too eager for a fight---should have sat back and let others battle it out for a change. For crying out loud, Frazier let others do his work throughout his career. Wait long enough, and someone you can lick will beat the guy you can't. If Jerry bided his time, and Frazier had to take a fight against Lyle, Shavers, a rematch with Foreman....he would have been blasted into orbit and Jerry would have had a clear path to another title chance. Also, in '75, he should have put a condition on accepting a fight against Norton---that condition being a couple months to get ready, not a couple weeks. Even in 1975, I believe a well conditioned and well trained Quarry with adequate time to prepare would have beaten Norton or at least given a much stronger effort. That "Paint Job" Norton supposedly did might have been some paint spilled on Norton, similar to the the paint Foreman, Shavers and Cooney were able to splash the cockey bastard with.
dishonor. You shouldn't be using a real person's name when you are not him. So, hence forth, I will call you Dead Parroter - Impersonator (DP-I for short), unless you come up with a new name, like Oscar or something.Regarding the jail bird comment. You initially denied any knowledge of this. Now you admit making a comment you were in jail, but say it was written in jest. Everytime you get caught out, you say you were only joking. Psst.....DP-I, I think YOU are a joke.Kent - given Frazier's vulnerability to big punchers, we can't 'deem' him any of those fights against guys he didn't fight. If history has taught us only one thing, it is that heavyweight fights are unpredictable.Clay was a huge underdog against Liston but he won. Norton was huge underdog against Ali...Norton one. Ali and Foreman. Who was the favourite and who won ? Ali and Spinks. Young and Foreman. Schmelling and Louis. Frazier and Norton. Frazier and Lyle. Frazier and Shavers. Frazier and Foster. Frazier and Lewis. (Okay, I'm getting ahead of myself here.)TYSON AND DOUGLAS.The point is, Frazier didn't take those fights. He made the decision to fights guys he'd already beaten, guys who couldn't punch, and a guy who'd won one of his last six fights. History can't 'deem' those fights to Frazier just because his fans want history to do that.Besides, I believe that Frazier probably would have been stopped or beaten in at least one or two of those fights. Joe was a slow starter. Just the appetizer for a big puncher highly motivated.You must realize, Kent, Frazier had THE reputation, like Ali did. When lesser lights fought them, the lesser light trained much harder and were much more motivated than they were against fellow 'nobodies'. And they've got nothing to gain. Like the title. They can make their fortune in one night, one fight. Set for life. Little wonder they try much harder.That's why you get upsets in title fights, especially against legendary fighters. Lyle might not have been motivated against fighters X, Y, and Z. But fighting title holder A he will be motivated and probably scared. A motivated, scared fighter with a huge punch is a HUGE danger. The type of danger Frazier avoided at all costs.How can you guys 'deem' Frazier fights against the guys he dodged, when history shows that upsets are a dime a dozen. Frazier wouldn't have beaten all those guys. History teaches us that. Learn the lesson or maintain your blind ignorance. | 7/13/05 05:14:13 PM| Angelo| DC| funktron@yahoo.com||| |10| I don't like deeming fights to anyone either. Larry Holmes is one of my alltime favorite fighters. He never fought John Tate---no one's fault, because the fight was inevitable if Tate had beaten Mike Weaver. But Weaver beat him and of course, Holmes beat Weaver. Still, I don't "deem" Larry Holmes the winner over a contemporary champion he never met, Tate. Instead, I'll say that I believe Holmes had plenty of weapons and experience to take Tate, but we don't know for sure. Tate was looking very strong and very good, beating some decent heavyweights, before Weaver upset him and took the (WBA) title away. But some of the posts here seem to dismiss Shavers, Lyle, Young, Foster as not being in Frazier's league. "The fights weren't made because these guys weren't ready for Frazier." Baloney. The fights weren't made because they were MORE than ready for Frazier, or at least they were legitimate threats to throw a wrench in the path to another big money Frazier-Ali fight. Guys like Ellis and Bugner were nice names, but they did not represent a viable challenge to Frazier. A 1975 Ellis would be an even match for a 2003 Christopher Reeve. Yes, I suppose this really was a tune-up for Frazier heading into the Ali fight. Kent, I respect your explanation that Ellis was a boxer type, similar to Ali and it was just some work for Frazier to get ready for Manilla. I wish Quarry had taken a tune-up instead of being forced into the '74 Frazier fight. I stand by my argument that Frazier shouldn't have been "deemed" worthy of this eliminator. It's funny how we've heard that after bad losses, other guys had to rebuild their careers and reputations. Let's not forget that after Foreman stomped on Frazier, Frazier lost to Ali too. Okay, without rebuilding his own career, suddenly he's thrust Strange.

[7/13/05 05:22:22 PM]Mark Eaton|not Calaniello||dunk.net||||10|Joe-That's exactly what Ali' told to "The Big Ducker" just before their first fight! He also said:"Tonight is the night of truth and I will show you tonight, I will show you tonight (he said that TWICE, ask him why) how good I am! I have a lot of speed, I have a lot of endorse (I don't know what endorse is) when...(I didn't understand)...he'll be one inche shorter (if I have understood well). I can't wait, I wanna fight now, this fight will be no contest! Joe Frazier is no champ, he whipped nobody... I know that Ali' said these things because they are on (or in) a DVD of mine. He also said: you are gonna see a good amateur verses a true professional! But a few hours later "the big ducker" beat him. 1971 was the year. |

[7/13/05 05:29:50 PM]Forest Ward|NYC||NYC|||||10|Norm aka Howard C. Lies, Lies, Lies. Don't you ever get tired of your slash and burn BS. I never tried to impersonate Forest Ward. As I explained in the recent post, I had previously in the past told the board about Forest Ward and my feelings about Forest Ward.
He was a great amateur boxer. Who became a typical boxing tragedy.You of course ignore this, and print lies accusing me of impersonating him. You who does not even know who Forest Ward was. Any front runner can rave about the winter of this world. But I will tell you, I would never depend on a front runner. Because like you they are weak. And when the going gets tough they break, or lie to save their ass, But they can't save their dignity. Because they don't have any.I never denied that post regarding jail, no surprise there you are lying again. Quote the post. Isn't that one of your favorite gimics. Going back to old posts and taking one sentence and using it out of context and attempting to change the whole meaning of the post so you can attack the personNorm aka Howard C you never answered the question put to you twice already. Why is that your whole background is mystery. Other regulars on this board have given glimpses into their background but not you.Finally Angelo, if you feel it is necessary to honor Joe Namath that's your business. I am sure he has been honored his whole life. I would guess that he has probably been honored over a 1,000 times in his life since he was a teenger. Forest Ward who achieved great heights as a teenager probably has not been honored since he won his last fight which was back in 1969. Maybe you and Norm aka Howard C only honor winners. Well, each to his own |

[7/13/05 08:30:49 PM]angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com|||||10|Forrest:  If I honor Wepner and Bobick, will you leave me alone?  Also, Mr. Mark Eaton, I'm not questioning that "Quack Quack" beat Ali in 1971. Beat him fair and square. Shut Ali up for a while. He had a style (so did Norton) that gave Ali fits. What's your point? My point is that Lucky Joe's style wasn't nearly so effective against big power hitters. Foreman spanked him like Daddy spansks a bad little girl. After he was knocked around for five minutes like a rag doll, dropped to the canvas like a bad habit, he, his handlers--Futch and Yancee---as well as the world at large---put two and two together and figured that if Foreman could do it, so could any big guy with a hard punch. So he took on a littler guy with NO punch left in Ellis, and a littler guy he had already knocked out, our own
Jerry---and skimmed over big, bad power hitters. Get over it. Quack Quack. |

[7/14/05 12:26:41 AM]Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||||10|Dead
Parrot - Impersonator (great name, Noam, by the way). Whatever you are on, DP-
I, get off it. Trust me on something else. You are dishonoring the read Forrest Ward with your rants and abuse here. No one wants their name associated with the crap you write.Noam, something else about your comments. Guys like Lyle and Shavers can bring themselves up to fight champions like Ali and Frazier. But once they have that big one night, they tend to go back down a level again.
However, the deposed champion, after losing his title, gets serious in training and goes all out for the rematch. The result? Ali beats Norton and Ali beats Spinks in the rematches.DP-I. The reason people don't like to give too much background information is because of whackos like you. You get on here impersonating someone who is actually alive. If that's not bad enough, you then start talking about pushing Jane Fonda under a train and hoping that she dies a slow and painful death. In the same breath you say you've just got out of jail and then you were a police officer working 9/11.And, to take the whole cake, you gloated about Ali's tortured medical condition and how your hero Frazier is happy that he contributed to it. Like anyone sane with a wife and family are going to give you clues as to their lives. I'd rather give Charles Manson a homecoming than have you visit. Get over it.Fan: Please rate the heavyweights in history better than Joe Frazier. Thank You.Angelo: This is a very interesting question. There are more heavyweights in history who could have beaten Joe Frazier, than there are who are BETTER than Joe Frazier. The distinction is that Joe Frazier held the title for a number of years, accomplished a lot by beating an undefeated Ali, and did manage two very impressive wins over Jerry Quarry, at high points in Quarry's career. Also, Frazier beat Jimmy Ellis when Ellis was good—we won't talk about the rematch, which was ridiculous. I will tell you, in my opinion, somebody like Riddick Bowe would have a chance to beat Frazier badly, but I would not say he was better than Frazier. Okay, off the top of my head, here are the guys I consider "better:" Ali, Joe Louis, George Foreman, Larry Holmes, Sonny Liston, Rocky Marciano, Jack Johnson, Jack Dempsey, Mike Tyson, Lennox Lewis, Evander Holyfield (wasn't afraid of anyone), Scott LeDoux...okay, just joking there! I will tell you that Leroy Jones (undefeated until he lost to Larry Holmes, then, reportedly due to the "Holmes thumb" didn't continue his career) was a better fighter than Frazier, but didn't accomplish as much so he doesn't rate as high. I'm sure Noam and Howard C. will think of people I missed. Guys who did not make my list, but who at their peak would beat Joe Frazier are too numerous to mention, but here are a few: Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers, Jimmy Young, Riddick Bowe, Primo Carrera, Gerry Cooney, possibly Michael Weaver, possibly Mike Tyson, Lennox Lewis, Evander Holyfield.
and was deceptively quick. Jones managed to double and even triple up on jabs when he won over Mike Weaver and when he lost to Holmes. He was undefeated (with a draw) when he met Holmes. He held his own for a few rounds, but the second best fighter of our time, Larry Holmes, figured him out and took him apart just past the halfway point as I recall. I don't know if it's true that Jones retired because of an eye injury suffered in the Holmes loss—-but I can tell you that if Holmes wasn't on the scene, there's no telling how high Leroy Jones would have risen. Quite frankly, I feel he would handle Frazier and earn a decision. Frazier would be like a buzzsaw coming in on him, but Jones would close Frazier's eyes with his jabs and use his height and weight (taller and heavier than Foreman) to wear Frazier down. This guy was much better than he'll ever be given credit for. Hell, the "NABF" title he held was as legitimate as the funky New York State nonsense that Frazier was "deemed." Ask Noam.

Can I get anyone to agree with me that Ali was a draft dodger and not such a great person only a great boxer.

I have seen Jones-Holmes and Jones-Weaver. I have also seen Lovell in a different fight who he drew with. Jones was a worse version of Mathis in my opinion. He was light on his feet, but had very little power and would have had NOTHING to keep Joe off him. I would put Jones on par with fighters like Boone Kirkman, Larry Middleton, Henry Clark etc. All good fighters, but limited. Joe Frazier would have demolished Leroy Jones, I bet even Leroy would say so. Just my opinion however. If you brought that idea to BOXREC or other boxing sites you would have to duck for cover though :).

Hey!!!;....Don't be scared of me just because i'm from New Jersey. ali was not the great person everyone thinks he was.

In his younger days, Clay (and then Ali) wasn't the same person he is today. The modern Ali bravely and with dignity battles his disease, is a voice for moderation in the Islamic world, and does not have a bad word to say about anyone. If everyone in the world was like the modern day Ali, then we wouldn't need armies or police forces. As a youngster, he was an unsophisticated person quickly thrust into a sophisticated world. He wasn't surrounded by good people in the Black Muslims and wasn't getting good guidance (even though he his longevity has since proved that his dedication to his religion was sincere and not feigned to avoid drafting). Funny thing though, people look past Ali the boxer - the guy who almost singlehandly resurrected the sport and raised profits for fighters enormously - to Ali the person and his private life. I suppose that's fair enough because Ali publicized his views in politics and religion and unwisely allowed himself to be used by some zealots. But people don't seem to examine the private life of other boxing identities, boxers such as Frazier, with the same zest they apply to Ali. Anyway, Les, Clay/Ali the person wasn't so great at times. More recently, he is, in my opinion anyway. Fan - I am just leaving home to keep an appointment and I will have to get back to you with a list of better boxers than Frazier. Also, I agree with the calls to stop the name calling, etc. I'm puffed out.

I am surprised and glad to hear Angelo thinks that Primo Carnera would have beaten Joe Frazier!! BRAVISSIMO!!!!!!!!!!

I am surprised and glad to hear Angelo thinks that Primo Carnera would have beaten Joe Frazier!! BRAVISSIMO!!!!!!!!!!

Hey Les from New Jersey, I've got to agree with you that Ali probably wasn't a great guy.

Noam; How you doin?. Ali was, in my humble opinion, (VERY AFRAID) to enter the U.S. Military and i don't (buy into) that he did not want to serve because of his religion, he was just (faking it) if you ask me. I just don't understand how so many people can have such high regard for Ali when all he ever did besides boxing was cause problems everywhere that he went. Yes, Ali bravely fights his illness just as Lance Armstrong has bravely fought his cancer. Lance Armstrong is a person that everyone should say is, "THE GREATEST". Remember, stay out of trouble, also, when you hear all those jokes and other things that people say about New Jersey just remember, it's okay, because there all true as hell. see ya!!!!! | 7/14/05 08:24:02 PM|Les.|[N.J.][N/A]|10|So, How's everybody doing?? I just thought that I would leave all of you with this little tid-bit. How bout the "Bayonne Bleeder" hey!, another Jersey guy, who would you like to have covering your back in an all-out (Dark Alley) fight, Wapner or CANDY ASS Ali????????......Later!! | 7/14/05 08:39:17 PM|angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Les: Ali made some mistakes when he was younger. Most of us have. I will tell you though, that he was assured that he would NOT see anything resembling front line duty in Vietnam. It would have been a piece of cake assignment for him. A tour of duty, a couple years away, and if he even went to Vietnam, which isn't a given by any means, he would have been kept out of harm's way, boxing exhibitions and generally being used as a tool to boost morale. Had I been Muhammad Ali, I would have honored my duty to my country, and I would have gone into the military. Alas, he isn't me. He had strong convictions against the war, based on social beliefs and religious beliefs. He opted out, was banned from fighting for three years (his best three years as an athlete by the way). He returned to lose to Frazier and then Norton, but we all know that he came back after that, held the title a few years and certainly did more for his sport than anyone else I can think of.On Leroy Jones, no way he was a bad version of Mathis. The record simply doesn't reflect it. That's nonsense. He was well above guys like Clarke, Kirkman, etc. This guy earned a title shot, was undefeated, and beat a future Champion in Mike Weaver. He suffered the loss to Holmes and packed it in. He's underrated---still had a lot to prove. But to think Frazier would walk through him, I think, is a bad miscalculation. It's true that he didn't have a big punch, and that's why I think the fight would be very tough for Jones, as Frazier tended to get stronger and braver as the fight wore on. But make no mistake---Jones stiff, quick jab, huge size advantage and air tight defensive skills would give Frazier fits. Keep in mind, Larry Holmes penetrated Jones with a boxing arsenal that Frazier simply didn't have. Holmes used his own piston left jab and quickness to undo Jones---Frazier was more of a worker bee who would have to take a lot of punishment to land on Jones. He was much wilder than Holmes---as Kent has said, his style shortened his career. Jones could stick and move like Ali did. Close, but I think he'd have a chance to win. | 7/14/05 08:43:12 PM|angelo|dc||funktron@yahoo.com||10|Les: I'd have Wepner cover my back anytime! That guy is as tough as they come. Did you see his loss to Liston? He didn't back down! By the way, my brother met Wepner way back in the 70s or early 80's, in a bar, I think in Atlantic City. Wepner was apparently a really great guy to the fans---very patient, talked boxing, gave everyone his time and attention. He's a regular Jersey guy! | 7/14/05 09:06:34 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|The comparison between Buster Mathis and Leroy Jones is a good one. Both were not great fighters but they were good fighters. Both were big heavyset guys who were surprisingly fast of hand and foot and both were not exceptional punchers. Jones lost to a great fighter in Holmes and he had to retire early because of eye problems while Mathis had a good win over George Chuvalo and he only lost four fights in his career, to Ali, Frazier, Quarry, and Lyle. No shame in this as all four were from very good to great fighters. Comparing Jones' NABF title to Frazier's first title recognized by NYSAC, five other states, Mexico, and parts of South America is nonsense. Anybody who was following boxing at the time or who has done an extensive study of boxing history knows this as Frazier's title at least rivaled Ellis' WBA title and this dispute was cleared up by Frazier's 1970 defeat of Ellis.

In fact if you have read the magazines from that time, Frazier was the considered the consensus, the stronger champion of the two, which he proved in the ring. There seems to be a lot of hatred and bias against Frazier by some who visit this site. Believe me, you are alone in your opinions as most people out there elsewhere have a higher regard for Frazier. Jones over Frazier, no way! I see the fight has being difficult for Frazier, especially in the early rounds, but with Frazier prevailing very much like he did over Mathis, by mid to late round knockout.

| 7/14/05 09:25:24 PM | Angelo | dc | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Kent: Frazier was indeed better than Ellis and proved it twice (and the first time, Ellis was actually breathing). My point was that "deeming" Frazier the new WBC title with one win was a cheap way to crown a Champion. The tournament was more equitable. I was being facetious (spelling) by saying Jones' NABF title was as important. But I still think Leroy Jones had better skills than Mathis and would have given Frazier a battle with a chance to get a win by decision. |
| 7/14/05 09:51:08 PM | Angelo | dc | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Kent: Also, regarding the posters here who are "alone in our opinions" about Frazier, I might point out that at one time, the consensus was that the world was flat and that the Earth was the center of the solar system or universe. I don't hate Frazier, I just join Noam and Howard C. in pointing out that his reputation as a "great" fighter is a lot of hype and malarkey largely based on a single victory over Muhammad Ali—-a decision win and one that landed Joe's ass in the hospital for a while. Yes, he was a good, strong fighter. Yes, he had other nice wins in his career. But to put him anywhere close to Ali, Louis, Marciano, et al, I take exception with. It's not hatred, it's an opinion. If the rest of the world wants to believe that Frazier is an upper, upper crust all-time heavyweight, that's their business and maybe they've been suckered into believing a myth. I'm from the Round Earth Society. We believe this planet is round, not flat and we believe Lucky Joe's "Careful, Smart Management" can be translated this way: "Quack, quack." We also believe JQ did Joe a few favors, namely, beating Lyle, beating Shavers and beating Foster. Frazier should have split his earnings from Manilla with Jerry! |
| 7/14/05 10:01:42 PM | Steve | na | na | 10 | Angelo, regarding your post on 7/11/05. Maybe you're right. Maybe I should just lighten up. You guys seem to be having a great time debating Fraziers' worth as a fighter. So who am I to complain about it. All right, Angelo, lets you and me talk boxing and music. First, who do you like, Marciano vs Frazier, Marciano vs Ali, Dempsey vs Ali? Do you remember the Flamingos, The Skyliners, Dion and the Bellmonts? Freddy Mercury had the best voice, in terms of range and power, and just a unique, one of a kind sound, of any pop singer from 1970 to 1991. Did someone refer to me as a homosexual? I must have missed that post. |
| 7/14/05 10:09:40 PM | Steve | na | na | 10 | Angelo, last I heard, Chuck Weper was a successful whiskey and beer distributor in north Jersey. |
| 7/14/05 10:25:29 PM | Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com | 10 | Hey Les, it's nice to have another Jersey guy on this site... keep 'em coming. Did Ali duck Shavers from '72 thru '75? The reason Frazier was able to get a title shot in '75? Frazier vs. Ali = BIG MONEY. Frazier could have had the same record as Jimmy Ellis going into Manilla and and still made millions for Don King. It's also NOT true that Frazier's backers thought he could beat Foreman. Frazier had to fight with them tooth and nail to get that fight. They thought he would lose to Foreman... they were right. The other thing about the Frazier debate over the last month or so, is that very few people here are placing the events of Fraziers career in historical perspective. It is easy to look back and say he didn't fight this guy or that guy. Why didn't Joe Louis or Jack Dempsey fight top Black fighters of the day. Did they duck them because they were afraid of loosing the title? And Les, the only thing Ali would have gained from going into | the military was a few extra pounds hanging out with Bob Hope, Anne Margret and Raquel Welch on the USO tours. He would have never seen a Viet Cong soldier or the front lines, he had nothing to fear. He said it best when he said "No Viet Cong ever called me Nigger" He was making a political and socical statement, again it's easy to call him a draft dodger in hindsight. Now Jack Dempsey, maybe a different story.....

| 7/14/05 10:33:55 PM | Steve | nj | na | ||| || 10 |
|---------------------|-------|----|----|------|------|------|------|
| Noam, I don't know why you continue to make fun of my status as a member of the "Dead Parrots" society? Remember, you put me there! I feel you owe the Monty Python legend an apology. |

| 7/14/05 11:05:18 PM | Fan | USA | n/a | ||| || 10 |
|---------------------|-----|----|-----|------|------|------|------|
| I only wish Ali had been faking. I agree that he made mistakes when he was young, although I would suggest that becoming the poster boy for a violent racist cult is a rather substantial mistake. And one he has never recanted, as did Malcolm X. However, if he's not a hate monger himself, perhaps the lesson of Malcolm's demise is precisely why Ali never spoke up, as a moral person would. I agree that Ali would not have been exposed to any combat in Vietnam. But he may well have been the next target of the Black Muslims (not to be confused with Islam) had he renounced their myths. That would have taken real guts. You can devise any snappy epithet you like for those who are in denial; we hear plenty of them on this site. The fact is, any minimal research effort into Ali's "religion" will readily expose it for what it is. But that would require a bit of objective thought, and a lot less hero worship. He may have been a great boxer, but he is far from a great man. |

| 7/14/05 11:05:24 PM | Fan | USA | n/a | ||| || 10 |
|---------------------|-----|----|-----|------|------|------|------|
| I only wish Ali had been faking. I agree that he made mistakes when he was young, although I would suggest that becoming the poster boy for a violent racist cult is a rather substantial mistake. And one he has never recanted, as did Malcolm X. However, if he's not a hate monger himself, perhaps the lesson of Malcolm's demise is precisely why Ali never spoke up, as a moral person would. I agree that Ali would not have been exposed to any combat in Vietnam. But he may well have been the next target of the Black Muslims (not to be confused with Islam) had he renounced their myths. That would have taken real guts. You can devise any snappy epithet you like for those who are in denial; we hear plenty of them on this site. The fact is, any minimal research effort into Ali's "religion" will readily expose it for what it is. But that would require a bit of objective thought, and a lot less hero worship. He may have been a great boxer, but he is far from a great man. |

| 7/15/05 12:23:17 AM | steve | nj | na | ||| || 10 |
|---------------------|-------|----|----|------|------|------|------|
| Hey Forrest. I didn't even know there was a fighter in the sixties named Forest Ward. I just got back from an eight hour car trip with my wife to Garret, PA., to pick up a red Siberian husky puppy. He is nothing but attitude!!! My wife and five dum Irish sons and my daughter have raised Siberian Huskys for years. I just thought I'd drop you this post to help you lighten up and know that all this posting is just a bunch of bullshit. You and Noam are both entitled to your opinions, and I respect them both. Even though Noam constantly makes snide remarks about my foundness for birdseed, which is a very nutritious snack. |

| 7/15/05 09:21:44 AM | LES. | N.J. | n/a | ||| || 10 |
|---------------------|------|------|-----|------|------|------|------|
| Good mornin and how yous doin on this fine day?? (Fan), i pretty much think you hit the nail on the head with your post about Ali, wish i was deep like you, thanks. (Bob Bumbera), Yo!, whatsuppeeeeee?? Nice post to what i had to say  bout Ali, he gone to Nam he would have never seen any combat duty of any kind well, maybe a few American sniper rounds in his direction. (Angelo), nice story bout your brother meeting Wapner and i agree with your post, thanks. (Noam), is it true what (Steve) says bout you messin with the great (MONTY PYTHON)?, wow!!, you should be ashamed and make an immediate apology OR!! get into (WITNESS PROTECTION) system, let me know, me and the (BOYS) got some conections. If America was like the modern day Ali, i'd kill myself!!, hey, Steve, another left wing tree hugger!!, Noam, you
I need to listen to my man (RUSH) i can't spell his last name but you know who i mean. (Steve), you eatin bird seed again??Whats this shit bout Fred Mercury?? I'm sure you ment to say you drive a Mercury right?? Get real and leave the (SISSYS) out of this, got that?? Now, you also mentioned some great Doo-Wop groups in your post, the Skyliners, wow!!, the best. Hey Steve??, name the (3) three lead singers of (Billy Ward and the Dominos) also, i'm a member of (UGHA)and (PGHA)so becareful, you got a firm hand shake???.. Later!!.

Steve: Queen was fine, but 'Radio Ga Ga' sucked. I liked 'Under Pressure' with David Bowie. If the fights you ask about were officiated under 1970's rules, with 1970's referees, Ali would beat Dempsey like he beat Frazier in Manilla (or he'd win by disqualification!!) and he would likely get a decision over Marciano---I actually think he'd have an easier time with Dempsey. Put Ali in Dempsey's era and it would be a much different story. I will say this though, if Ali "came close to quitting in the 10th round" in Manilla, I have a feeling Marciano might have pushed him over the edge. Really, this is a toss-up for me because I don't think Clay or Ali had enough power to take out Marciano, but Ali's chin was strong enough to withstand Marciano---it would come down to conditioning for rounds 12-15. Yes, this was often referred to as "Ali's Alley" but then again, sometimes, he came into fights over his ideal weight, or taking his competition lightly. Marciano was the picture of consistency, always very well conditioned. In fact, for that computer fight he had with Ali, Ali said that Marciano seemed to be very close to real fighting condition, which totally surprised Ali since between fights, he let himself relax. Here, Marciano was long retired and Ali thought he had a lot of wind and was solid.

Welcome Les, I have one question. What does having a firm handshake have to do with manhood?

I think this is only important to some "average Joes" who somehow think it is important. I have met many professional boxers and the majority of them do not have firm handshakes. Jerry Quarry did not have a firm handshake and neither does James Toney. The reason, their hands are the tools of their trade and they don't want to damage them by foolishly squeezing hard on someone's hand. I hardly think Jerry's Quarry's masculinity was ever in question.

On a lighter note (I hope), I am pretty sure that Forrest Ward, the fighter, appeared on one of Jerry's undercards at MSG. I've got to believe that Forrest the poster knows whether this is so.

Forrest, you've got me curious, what is the story of Forrest Ward? It's not one I am familiar with. I just remember him as a young heavyweight in the late 60's or early 70's.

Ali's politics/religion are completely separate issues to his boxing. I don't like his religion and I didn't agree with his politics in the late 1960s and early 1970s (as I read about it
However, how many guys were there that ducked drafting using other excuses like shonky medical conditions or whatever? They weren't all brave like our very own Steve (and I DO mean that sincerely) who went and fought. Frazier didn't go to the Vietnam War either. Yes, I know he was married, but he still could have gone if he wanted to. By the way, how many kids did Frazier have to how many different women? There were more than a few. If we want to examine Ali's personal issues, perhaps we should go there as well. I never heard of Ali bashing his girlfriend either, not like some. Now, to Fan's question about Frazier standing in heavyweight history. Let me firstly say that the Vietnam War was the luckiest thing that ever happened to Frazier's boxing career. Why? Because it took Ali off the scene for three long years. It made him rusty and beatable. Without the Vietnam War, Frazier would have fought Ali in 1968 or 1969 (if he didn't have fights arranged against Daniels or Stander or John Lennon). In 1968 or 1969 Ali wasn't ring rusty. He beats Frazier convincingly. Frazier becomes another Mathis or Ellis or speed bump in heavyweight history. He would have been some boxing trivia question. Only hard core boxing fans would have remembered him. Of course, after Ali's three year lay off, Frazier beats him. His legend is set. On one fight. Angelo did better than I can in listing the heavies who would have beaten Frazier, if not every time, but most times. There are even a few that would have beaten him every few times, if not most times. I'll add another one. Jersey Joe Walcott. He was beating Marciano after 13 rounds. Marciano had to knock him out to win. Frazier not even on his best night would have pushed Marciano that far. Walcott was a very good heavyweight. In my opinion, he beats Frazier convincingly, most times. I think Jack Johnson would beat Frazier also. Frazier had trouble fighting 15 rounds (and even 5 rounds against big punchers). Johnson (when he wasn't throwing fights) just kept on fighting. 15 rounds and more and then some more. He was good enough to see Frazier off somewhere along the way. You'd have needed a calculator to count the bumps on Joe's head and he might have run out of skin, too. And remember this when you are scoffing at my prediction. Johnson was much more dominant in his day than Frazier ever was in his brief period in the sun. Translate Johnson's dominance to Frazier's time, and it's good night Joe, in my opinion. We have to stop people having selective memories about Frazier. Look at his first fight with Bonavena. Oscar knocked him down twice in the second round. With a minute to go he only had to knock Joe down a third time for the fight to be stopped (3 knock down rule). Over that last minute Joe held on like hell. Much worse than Ali ever did. Without the holding down, Joe gets stopped. As it was, Frazier got a (disputed) split points decision. Oscar proved Frazier's vulnerability. Frazier earned his place in history on one close win against a ring rusty fighter. Put that fight aside, and what was his next best win? Against Jimmy Ellis, that's who. Disagree with me? Okay, let's say Buster Mathis. Wow. Fan, and everyone else, please answer me a question. Was the quality of opposition Ali fought better in his 'first' or 'second' career? ('first' being pre-draft and 'second' post-draft). Thanks.

While there is no doubt the Nation of Islam was a "White" hate group and Ali became it's poster boy being sucked in by the racial divide in this country at the time, Ali has long ago renounced the "White Man as Devil" theory of the Nation. Also, I am not under the delusion that Ali is worthy of "Hero Worship" either. He was a man full of contradictions. A member of the Nation of Islam he kept a white trainer and personal doctor through out his career, much to the dismay of Elijah Muhammad and his gold digging son Herbert. Ali was a flawed individual, as most of us are, and although many of his choices in life may be viewed as suspect, there is no doubt he was one of the most compelling figures of the Twentieth Century. Ali was a flawed individual, as most of us are, and although many of his choices in life may be viewed as suspect, there is no doubt he was one of the most compelling figures of the Twentieth Century. Nobody has answered the question I posed about Ali ducking Erine Shavers from '72 thru '75, the same time frame many of you say Frazier ducked him. Ali fought everyone, Jurgin Blin, Al Lewis, Buster Mathis, Bob Foster, Mac Foster. He was fond of shoving that in the face of Frazier. And still no Erine Shavers. An Ali fight with either Dempsey or Marciano would be totally different than a the Frazier affairs, neither one had the same style as Frazier. I think Ali would have a tough time vs. both Dempsey and Marciano at the peak of their careers. I believe Marciano to be the easier touch. |
| 7/15/05 08:40:15 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com|||10|Noam, I agree completely with what you say about Frazier vs. Ali in 1968, if there was no Viet Nam. Ali would have destroyed Frazier within 10 rounds in 1968. No doubt in my mind.|
| 7/15/05 08:58:27 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||10|There is no doubt that Ali fought better fighters in his second career. He fought Frazier three times, Foreman, Norton three times, Quarry twice, Lyle, Shavers, Bonavena as some notables. In his first career his best opponents were Liston twice, Patterson, Cooper twice, Terrell. Really there is no comparison.If Ali fought Frazier in 1968 he would have won. It either would have been a late knockout or 10-5, 11-4 type decision. Ali in 1968 would have been at his physical and mental prime. Frazier would never have been champ until Norton beat Ali (which would have still happened in the seventies) and Frazier knocked out Norton unless Foreman got to him first. If Foreman got to him first Frazier would have never been champ. If Frazier got to him first in about 1974 Ali would have won a decision against Frazier and there would have been no Manila. Another possibility is Norton giving Ali another shot right away. Ali probably wins then Foreman and Frazier are both never champs.|
| 7/15/05 10:41:54 PM|steve |nj|na|||10|Noam,you know,I didn't like Ali's politics or ,religious believe,based on hatred.I didn't even like Ali as a man.However,I think he was just like me in 1966,67,and 68,young,dumb,and full of come.I'm sure he was manipulated by the Black Muslims,and all the white promoters and handlers who knew a gold mine when they saw it.So he stayed out of Nam.He paid dearly for his decision.However,I think he might have been right.Nothing good ever came out of that bad place.Just 58,000 broken hearted families,and about 200.000 crazy fuckers like me.Pardon my French.|
| 7/16/05 12:47:10 AM|Kent|Murrrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Les, by saying fighters don't have firm handshakes is not implying they have limp wristed ones either.But I have met George Foreman, Jerry, Mike, and Bob Quarry, James Toney, Vassiliy Jirov, Chris Byrd, Kirk Johnson, Sean O'Grady, Terry Norris, Cornelius Boza Edwards, Gabriel Ruelas, Alex Ramos, Carlos Palimino, Danny "Little Red" Lopez, Bobby Chacon, and many others and all of them put very little pressure in their handshakes. It is only "average Joes" who don't use their hands as weapons that think firm handshakes are important.I am around boxers a lot as I attend at least 25 fight cards a year.|
| 7/16/05 02:22:36 AM|Noam|same|same|||10|KentOne of the reasons is that boxers have damaged hands and they don't like to have their hands squeezed hard in a shake so they don't squeeze hard themselves.The hand has hundreds of little bones that boxers break at some stage in their careers. Ali had brittle hands and was getting needles in them before fights. The problem is endemic in lower weights.Fan - I agree. There is absolutely no doubt that Ali fought better fighters in his 'second' career. That's what makes it so impressive. He fought them all.Bob - while Ali fought regularly in the period you mentioned, Frazier didn't. Ali's time was at a premium; Joe's wasn't.
Ali would have fought Shavers in that period if he had the time. Also, Ali was better physically in the period you mention so, if he was ducking him, why did he fight him later.Where's Massimo ?|
Ali fought Shavers in 1977 when he (Ali) was slower, much more worn out after battles with Frazier and Norton—and Earnie Shavers was a MUCH BETTER fighter than he had been in '72-'75—still plenty of dynamite in his fists but was a much smarter and durable boxer. Ali ended up fighting Shavers when he (Ali) was slipping and Shavers was improving. When did Frazier fight Shavers? Oh, that's right---quack quack.

Fan: First off, I support the police and think they typically get a raw deal from the media and also from brain-dead idiots who would be crying for their Mommy if they had a 15 minute taste of the life of a big city cop. With that said, do you have any idea how many cops and other people of the "establishment" were responsible for the persecution and murder of hundreds of innocent blacks in the 50's and 60's? Do you have any concept of the civil rights struggle? Do you understand the backdrop for the rise of Malcolm X and his followers? Millions of people got caught up in the chaos that was the 60's in America. Hindsight is 20/20 vision, and you're doing a great job of playing Monday morning quarterback, but what Ali did at the time was applauded by millions—and some people still admire him for it. Me? Like I said in a previous post, I might not have been in favor of Vietnam, or maybe would have been (I was too young at the time to get drafted.). But I believe stepping forward when your name was called was the right thing to do. Lots of people disagreed with that and Ali was one of them. He wasn't alone.

I think the police of today are 100 percent better than they were in the past and while there are still some bad ones around, most of the time they do the right thing.I just get sick of certain groups saying that every time a minority person gets shot by the police it is racism. I think that most of the time when police shoot someone it is because the police are defending themselves or they are defending innocent people of all races from criminals.Are there still times when the police perform unlawful shootings? Yes I am sure there are times when this occurs but they are much less prevalent than they were even thirty or forty years ago.

Ali recanted his 'white men are devils' statement as recently as in an interview with Sir David Frost earlier this year. I saw it about two weeks ago. Ali said that devils "can be white, black, and yellow" or words to that effect. Ali acknowledged that it was silly that he'd made that comment all those years ago.Now I must ask you, Fan, to comment on Frazier gloating about Ali's injuries. Forest quoted him on it and I repeated Forest's quote recently. Frazier said that he was happy to take the credit for Ali's condition. What say you, Fan? Frazier has never recanted that comment. Don't you think that Frazier is a callous, cruel, sadist? Do you agree with Forest that what Frazier said was cool? To me, Ali was wrong with the devil comment and was then right to recant it. But Frazier was wrong to gloat about Ali's injuries and is doubly wrong for not admitting that error.

I will accept that Ali made the comment attributed to him, although I did not personally hear it. However, saying devils come in all colors is hardly a repudiation of Farakhan and the rest of the Nation of Islam and their ideology of race hate. I often wonder whether Ali's fans would be as open minded of a Caucasian celebrity who publicly endorsed say, the Aryan Nation.Yes, I am well aware of the context in which the NOI was formed. If you would like to be similarly informed, I suggest you start with The Black Muslims in America, the seminal treatise on the subject by noted (African-American) sociologist C. Eric Lincoln. You probably know that their mother load for new recruits is the prison system. That's where Mike Tyson got "religion". The anger of disaffected young black men is deftly exploited the way pimps prey on runaway teenage girls. And the Man - the Devil - is offered as the convenient blame for all evils, real and perceived. I have never quite understood how it was that Ali was so full of venom as to buy into the NOI myths, as he reportedly grew up in a middle class part of Louisville. Perhaps Howard C. can provide some insight in this regard.I repeat my view that Ali would not have seen combat had he chosen to serve. I also think that people of good conscience still legitimately disagree on what was right concerning the War in Vietnam. (I happen to believe the War in Iraq is similarly ripe for vigorous - but respectful - debate.)But in my own opinion, the Vietnam question is a red herring re: Ali. The burning issue, in my view, is his signing on with the NOI. They are hardly pacifists, and I don't accept for a minute that Ali's refusal to be inducted was a consequence of such a philosophy. I submit that were Ali to clearly and unequivocally repudiate them in his lifetime, it would add immeasurably to his stature. He was certainly an entertaining fighter of enormous skill, and, as someone said, a compelling figure. I just can't ignore his association with Elijah and his protege, Minister Farakhan. Facts are stubborn things. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges.

Fact is stubborn things. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges.

Fact is stubborn things. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges.

Fact is stubborn things. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges. Re: Frazier: I know someone who knows him. He is indeed very, very bitter toward Ali, and I think we all understand his reasoning. Obviously, the things he said are not very charitable. But I am much more concerned with hate mongers who attempt to divide our country than individuals with personal grudges.
Frazier won the heavyweight championship in pieces beating Buster Mathis and Jimmy Ellis (both of whom also lost to Muhammad). After he beat Ali (which was when Joe truly became champion), his only successful title defences were against Terry Daniels and Ron Stander. Then he knocked out by George Foreman, who knocked him out a second time three years later. Take away the three Ali-Frazier fights, two of which were won by Ali, and what have you got."

We should contrast Frazier's jealousy against Foreman's magnanity. This is what George said about Ali, "After Ali beat me I was bitter for a while. But then I realised I'd lost to a great champion; probably the greatest of all time. Now I'm proud just to be part of the Ali legend. If people mention my name with his from time to time, that's enough for me."

Frazier and his loving fans should take a leaf out of George Foreman's book! George and Muhammad rid themselves of hatred and petty jealousies decades ago, but Frazier still carries the hatred and resentment to this very minute. Fan, it's not Ali doing the hating; it's Frazier.

I do agree Ali was no saint. But then again how many of these guy's are? Marciano had ties with the Mob along with Jake LaMotta and Frank Sinatra. Sonny Liston was a strong arm guy for mobsters and may have been killed by them. Evander Holyfield has had at least 7 children by five different women. Riddick Bowe beat his wife, Joe Frazier at the '96 Olympics, said if he were up there with Ali when he was lighting the flame he would push Ali into the fire. In the forties, fifties and sixties, many Black folks in this country did view Whites as devils. In many parts of this country Blacks couldn't vote, even after 1965. The resentment towards and many cases hatred of the White race, put into context, are understandable. The things Ali said as a spokesman of the NOI, the position of the NOI and Black Panther Movement, were needed then for change to take place in this country. Sit-ins and marches through Selma can not change everything. A few Whites may have died at the hands of these radical groups, and while I do not endorse their actions, just as I deplore the actions and attitudes of White hate groups. Which by the way completely baffle me, many more Blacks have died at the hands of White people with the blessings of the local and state authorities. As I said earlier, it is understandable why these groups rose in numbers during the sixties. Shamefully, under a thin surface, these issues are still with us today. I was in Batesville Mississippi not to long ago and I saw a bumper sticker with a confederate flag on it that said; "I have a dream too". Very scary.

Angelo, even 1981 Frazier would knock out Jones in round two. Jones barely survived the sixth and final round versus a journeyman cruiserweight named Yaqui Manneses and although the judges gave the verdict to Jones, Manneses clearly scored the most damage. Too Tall Jones couldn't fight even if he won all six of his fights. Ali "clearly" repudiated 21 years ago the beliefs which offend you, so I hope that he has "gone up immeasurably" in your opinion as mentioned in your recent post. Let me know, please, if Noam has reassured you.

I support Ali 'the boxer', not the young Clay and Ali the 'person'. There was nothing in Clay's middle class upbringing that should have pushed him to those absurd beliefs. I guess he was just a young guy overwhelmed by the situation and the more wordly adults around him. But that doesn't excuse it. However, Ali has moved on to be a wonderful human being, in my opinion. He has done far more positive things for the world than negative acts. He has more than made up for the stupid beliefs and statements he made four decades ago. I lived through the Vietnam era and I never agreed with Ali's stance. Perhaps I'm wrong, but I still think the Vietnam War had to be fought. If it hadn't of been fought, Thailand and even Malaysia probably would have fallen to the communists. Was it worth 58,000 lives? Nothing is worth that awful cost, ever, but at least something was salvaged from it.

Wasn't that Jones' first fight (Yaqui Meneses)?  I think Jones probably peaked around his fourth fight!  No wonder he went back to football. I guess Frazier would have still had an easy time with him, even when Frazier was done!!!

Howard: I am gratified that you would deign to quote me, thank you.  And thank you for your explanation.

I was thinking perhaps the guy with the bumper sticker whom Bob saw was just a young man overwhelmed by his own situation.  Maybe, although he's a member of a group like the KKK, he doesn't actually blow up little girls at church himself.  He's just a bit confused right now.  I suppose that would not preclude him from being considered, in the future, a great American by some.  After all, everyone makes mistakes.  I think the modern cliche for such thinking is moral relativism.

I have tried to be honest.  Now I ask you to be.  Did you know in 1984 that Ali had clearly repudiated the NOI (if he did)?  I was a pretty avid student of boxing back then, yet I somehow missed it.  If it happened, it was a well kept secret.  The effect was kind of like the noise a tree makes falling in the forest if no one is there to hear, no?

But maybe I just missed it.

Fan, if the tree falls and no one is there to hear it, maybe it doesn't make any sound but who cares?  There's still no doubt that if fell.  If the guy with the bumper sticker changes his views in a few years, tells his friends and family that he was wrong "back then" and throws the bumper sticker away, that's all we can ask for.  He doesn't have to go on Maury Povich to tell the world.  Remember George Wallace?  He changed his views and didn't have to broadcast it.  When he died, some people were very puzzled when high profile black Americans (I still prefer this term over "African American" since not all black Americans are from Africa) showed up at his funeral.  Anyway, they said that he had changed his views, had moderated, had become a plus to the black community.  People change.  If their heart changes they don't need to tell the world.

Fan: a lot of people don't hear or see the tree fall because they deliberately close their eyes and ears.  They need a reason to dislike someone and they don't want to discover that the reason is false.

Initially, Fan, you asked for someone, anyone, to provide you with credible evidence that Ali had renounced the views and teachings of Louis Farrakhan.  You asked for evidence that Ali had renounced these views then he would go "up immeasurably" in your estimation.  However, the proof HAS been provided by Noam on BOTH counts, yet you are still arguing against Ali.  You went back on your word.  Which brings me back to the start.  Some people don't hear or see the tree fall because their eyes are closed and their ears shut..... been a "complete" turnabout. Like anyone else, his positions have changed and evolved, so have mine. True, he's a public figure, but that shouldn't hold him to an impossible standard. Also, he had cameras and reporters following him everywhere in the 60's and 70's, when he was on top. Now, he's only out in public once in a great while. He doesn't rate routine "coverage" like someone such as Tiger Woods does. What's Ali supposed to do, call a press conference to announce that he's changed his mind about something? That would smack of narcissism if you ask me. Back then he was relevant and now he isn't. And regarding role models, Charles Barkley was right on target when he said, "They pay me to dunk a basketball, not raise your kids." Parents are role models. You know what, it doesn't "take a village" to raise a child, it takes (preferably two) involved, caring parents, or guardians. In the absence of two parents, one parent households have been known to raise some great adults too, without help from athletes and celebrities. A strong homefront keeps outside influence to a minimum. If adults bought into the fact that Ali joined a radical group as a reason that they should too, I don't have a lot of respect for them.

| 7/18/05 05:34:25 PM | Steve | NJ | na | ||| 10 | Noam, Fan, and Angelo, I'm a Frazier fan. I don't like Ali's so called politics. I never thought he was as good a man as Frazier. In terms of just being a man. You know what, everyone from that time period got drafted, or when your neighbor friends started getting sent home in aluminum boxes marked [contents not viewable], enlist. If you were lucky enough to have had a wife and kids, or where in college, you didn't have to go. Conscience objectors are not acceptable! You three guys are misinformed about Ali and Frazier never having buried the hatchet. Frazier actually did say, on a TV interview, that he was sorry for all the hurtful things he said about Ali.

Les, from New Jersey, I wish I was as good with my mouth, and typing, and spelling and grammar, as I am, or used to be with my fists, or a blunt object. No one who is in tune with real life should be knocking the police. I agree with Kent, the police are 100 percent better trained, and more professional, than they were in 1966.

| 7/18/05 05:44:46 PM | Steve | NJ | na | ||| 10 | Noam, you made a good point about the fragility of the hand bones, especially on a smaller than true heavyweight fighter. I've broken the small bones behind the pinkie and ring finger twice on both hands. Doctors do call them "boxers' fractures".

| 7/18/05 06:25:29 PM | Noam | Same | Same | ||| 10 | Steve Re police. People talk about the 'rotten apple' theory on corruption to say that most police are honest. I believe that to be true. In my opinion there would be a far higher percentage of honest people in the police than any other profession. What are you gonna do if you are getting mugged? Call a lawyer? When you need urgent help and the police turn up that's the nicest sight in the world. If you can't trust the cops then you can't trust anyone. The other thing is that the cops try far harder than other professions to find the bad ones. Lawyers and politicians ALWAYS cover up and look after each other. I think it was Julius Caesar who once said that he was going to clean Rome up and he was going to begin "by killing all the lawyers". Caesar for President! |

| 7/18/05 06:41:43 PM | Les. | NJ | ya right! | ||| 10 | Steve; (AKA-Oil Can Harry) speaking of grammar, if you actually speak the way that you use your grammar on this site then we are all in trouble, check your commas. Kent, okay i'm sorry, you are just the type of guy to educate me about Jerry Quarry and the rest of the Quarry's if you would?. Hey Oil Can Harry, ya, you Steve, did someone mention in a posting that you are a Nam Vet??, if you are, welcome home brother. |

| 7/18/05 06:48:12 PM | Les. | NJ | NO! | ||| 10 | Noam; Thanks for the good words about Police Officers, it needs to be said more, just a "Thank You" to most Police Officers goes a long way, i know because i usta was one........!! |
Acknowledging that devils come in many colors is not a complete turnabout at all, does not approach the clear and unequivocal renunciation that would elevate Ali, in my humble opinion. So I haven't broken my word, Noam. (Did I actually make some pledge to you, I don't remember that). And such a complete renunciation would certainly have been big news in 1984. Still would be today. I am not the one being result oriented here, or ignoring the facts. You can't have it both ways. Either he did renounce the NOI or he (allegedly) made a rather innocuous and obviously true statement to the effect that not all devils are white. If the former were true, which I wish were the case, that would have been newsworthy 20 years ago, and he should have taken ownership, not whispered it in the dark. If the latter is true, he really didn't say anything, did he?

Re: Frazier, just like anyone, he may have made some statement or another for public consumption, for whatever reason. I only related to you what someone with personal knowledge has told me about his attitude toward Ali. And I am sorry to say it ain't pretty. I hope what I have heard is wrong, and that he has put the past aside, if just for his own sake.

PS Howard - if you believe "a quote from a published book" (as opposed, presumably, to an unpublished one?) really proves anything...there's not much else to say to you. I guess I just don't have a problem being "judgmental", whether it's about Black Muslims or the KKK, as some others. I think it's high time people take stands, as long as they can be intelligently and honestly articulated. I think I attributed Howard's reference to "my word" (was I under oath at the time as well?) to Noam, I am getting you guys mixed up. Assuming I've got it straight now, my apologies to Noam. Les, you sound just crazy enough to have been on the job. I have a feeling that perhaps you understand my sentiments about the NOI.

I can only tell you what has been published in a book by a credible author. He says that Ali renounced all those things in 1984. I also saw Ali interviewed by Sir David Frost. This occurred earlier this year. Once again, Ali renounced those beliefs. He admitted he was wrong. I suppose it's convenient for you to dispute these facts and let's not forget that it took some people a long time to believe that the world isn't flat. But the fact is that Ali doesn't hold those beliefs and he renounced them. That doesn't get away from it being wrong that he said those things in the first place. Perhaps he over-reacted to racist insults and pressures he was getting from elsewhere. I've read that the 1960s was a hotbed of racial and political discontent and that people took sides with each side hating the other. The good part is that what Ali did wrong was only words. He never acted on those words. And he's since retracted them. 40 years on and people still can't forgive. They only remember the bad parts even though the good parts far outweigh them.

|7/18/05 10:56:39 PM|Steve|nj||na||||10|Fan, your eloquence is impressive. So is Howard C's. This new tough guy, Les, an ex cop and apparently an ex vet, has got me nervous about my way of expressing myself. I'll eventually get to him and find out who the real "oil can harry" is. Your points are well taken. I have to agree with you in my humble, inarticulate way. Ali was way to late in his heartfelt apologies about the fact that devils come in all colors. I know he must have suffered horribly during those three years he was forced to live on his meager ring earnings to date. Thank God us mixed race devils, white, black, hispanic, native american, who did the for real fighting, in, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70. didn't have to suffer like Angelo and Howard C's courageously politically incorrect hero Ali did. He should have apologized a long time before 984. So what if Frazier does dislike and desrespect the man? So what if he only apologized for public consumption? They tried to kill each other for 41 rounds! Ali used every racial and personal slur he could think of. His childlike, crowd pleasing antics didn't fool or lesson the insults Joe Frazier's camp had to endure. |

|7/18/05 11:28:46 PM|Bob Bumbera|NC ||renfber@aol.com||||10|Another point. Fan Does not give an e-mail address. n/a is no excuse. My e-mail address has been posted for five years on this site and I have received mail from Mr. Jimmy, Sonja, and the ever entertaining Jimmy Dorsey. And I will continue to do so as long as I post here. Anyone here can contact me if they so desire. I am not a fly by night poster. |

|7/18/05 11:29:54 PM|Steve|NJ||na||||10|Hey Les, the ex cop, and Vietnam vet, don't wellcome me back, brother. I'm not back yet! I can tell from your tone, your not either! |

|7/19/05 12:10:24 AM|Fan|USA||n/a||||10|Bob, I have my reasons for not sharing my address. That should have no bearing on your evaluation of my posts. BTW, I too have posted here, on and off, for years. I hesitate to get involved in a competition with you, but I met James and Jerry several times over the years and I contacted James when I read that Jerry's condition was so poor. I sent James a modest donation for the JQF and a personal gift for Jerry, of little monetary value but one which James later told me meant quite a bit to him. That still means a lot to me. If I were nasty or vulgar I could understand your criticizing my desire for privacy, but I am not. I find it curious that you do not level the same charge against some of the low blow artists around here. Is it only those who dare cast a critical eye upon the great Ali who are required to identify themselves, or does disagreeing with you on any topic make full disclosure mandatory? |

|7/19/05 12:11:26 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|It is good Ali renounced his beliefs on NOI but it was easier to do so in recent times than it was in the 60s. Malcolm X did so and look what it got him? It got him dead! Malcolm found out we can't judge a person by the color of his skin and his own people killed him for stating the truth. Same with Ghandi. One of his own people, a hindu, killed him because Ghandi was trying to unite hindus and muslims. I get a kick out of some bigoted white person saying us white boys got to stick together as if he saw some of my siblings, he would know that I have un pure blood in me (according to him, not me). Two of my grandparents were non white, while the other two were mixed european (German, English, and French). What other race am I? Hint to those newcomers who have not read some of earlier posts on the subject, part of my family are not foreigners. |

|7/19/05 03:28:19 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Here is my list of all time nuts who have posted here. 5. The Muffinman 4. Brother DKS 3. Looney Toons 1. Foolface 1. Koo Koo Klock
A tie for first place!! I keep hoping the Koo Koo Klock and/or Foolface show up here though.

HEY BOB B AND FAN, MR. JIMMY LIKED ME BEST!! NANA NA NA NA NA!! JUST KIDDING, EVEN WITH OUR SOMETIMES BICKERING WE ARE ALL FRIENDS HERE.

Steve: Ali didn't "dodge" the draft. He didn't go to Canada or Mexico. The Authorities knew right where to find him. Refusing induction and staying here to fight it is not the same as hightailing it out of the country. I've already stated that I don't agree with his decision not to step forward when his name was called. I've also stated several times that the vast majority of law enforcement are very good, hardworking people, doing a job that most of us wouldn't have the guts or patience to perform. The 60's were a turbulent era, when the Beatles alienated millions by practicing eastern religion and saying they were "more popular than Jesus..." when millions rioted, millions bought, sold and used illegal drugs, millions joined counter-culture and radical movements. Ali was part of the era--a huge part of the era. Like many others, he's moderated. It seems as though the people who can't dispute his greatness in the ring end up reaching for ways to assassinate his character. By any expert's reasonable measure, he's a top three all time heavyweight. Socially, he was a product of his times. Again, I've read his account of being in a dressing room before a fight and having a man brought in to meet him. The man, a black man, had been targeted by several whites who identified themselves as police (They were lying.). He was picked up, beaten, burned and castrated by them. I won't go into more detail than that, though Ali's book certainly did. This was the backdrop for the period---this is what affirmed Ali's beliefs. I know that these guys who assaulted the man did not represent most white Americans. But had I been an influential black man, I could see reacting to society the way Clay/Ali did. Millions around the world love this man, still. Steve, he must have done something right other than winning fights. Lots of guys have been champions and have had great fight records. It's funny that this one, Ali, became the most recognizable living face on the planet, loved in so many places.

Steve: I never said i was a tough guy, you did. I am not an ex-cop i am a retired Police Officer also, i'm a Vietnam veteran who served in Vietnam all of (1967) and i have been awarded the (Combat Infantry Badge) and the (Purple Heart) yes, there is not a day that goes by that i do not think of Nam in some way. Anyway, the welcome home still stands......

Ed "Too Tall" Jones... TSK!TSK! He was listed at 6'9" which means he was probably about 5'9"...I read he was eye to eye with "The Midget" at Wrestlingmania 1 (or maybe 2 or whatever) and this confirms my guess: about 5'9". Joe Frazier himself was probably wilter than him. If you guys wanna really see a tall guy, that's for you!

Bill looks to be about the same wiltness as Kareem, not as my mother, but as Kareem!!

Fan, I left myself wide open for that; that's why I prefaced my comments with admitted hesitation. However, I think it was an invited response as I felt my "credentials" as a JQ fan were being challenged. I am confident James liked you better.

Fan, I don't know who James liked better, I just couldn't resist saying something.How do you like my all time list of nuts? I can't remember some of the other fringe characters but it would be funny to have a top ten list.Hey fan, are you, "you ain't nothin but a hound dog?" If you are who I think you might be, you would know what I am talking about. If not, then never mind. If you are who I am talking about, then I won't reveal who you are as that is your choice.

How do you like my all time list of nuts? I can't remember some of the other fringe characters but it would be funny to have a top ten list. Give Spinks a few months to train and get in good shape. Now that he probably wouldn't have the fear of God in him that Tyson could kill him---since club fighters seem to be having their way with Tyson lately, I wonder if Spinks could take him?

The worst anyone's got on Ali is a few unwise words some 40 years ago. He called people a few names and upset the apple cart. So what? It used to be sticks and stones will break my bones but names will never hurt me. I wonder how many of you guys slagging him can see things through his eyes. Are any of you guys black? Was he subjected to any racism? If so, was he entitled to react to it. I don't like what he was saying, but it doesn't hurt me that he expressed an opinion differently to mine. He never raped anyone, either. It's not like he was out there bashing old ladies, burning babies, and robbing people. He was just out there expressing a different political and religious opinion than the mainstream white guy. And he was a loudmouth, and what's worse than that is that he was a black loudmouth. Les and Steve - you two guys were in Vietnam. Did you go to a horse race track there called Phu Toey (or something like that). It is in Saigon and they race ponies there and of course they bet on them. Apparently a big battle in the Tet offensive happened there as well. Massimo, welcome back. I was about to send out a search party. Kent, what do I have to do to make your list?

Why Jumpity Bruce is not in your list? This site would be nothing without Jumpity Bruce!
Jump, jump, jump, jump! I think "The Italian Stallion" is a funny and good character and will bring something to the table (it's Nevada Slang) for the future. As far as I am concerned, I have nothing against people from New Jersey! I have nothing against people from Arkansas too! But, sincerely, I don't know about people from Oregon...I have a lot of friends from Oregon, almost one half of my friends are from Oregon! Hi! I don't agree with Muhammad Ali' not going in Vietnam, I think he should have gone first because the war was a war against comunism and second because it was his duty and he wasn't any better than all the Joe(s) who went there! But, on the other hand, I think he had some scusanti...You call me nigger, you don't allow me to use busses, you don't serve me in restaurants, you treat me like a beast and then...Abruptly...When you need me, you want me to fight for you? I know what it means to feel you don't belong...Being white in Italia in 2005...All jokes apart, the sensation you don't belong and you are a second class citizen has to be awful (even if I have never lived it personally) and, even if, as I said, I think he should have gone, I also understand that black people in the 60s were very angry and insoddisfatti.

Well said Masimmo, Ali should have gone to the war. Perhaps he had problems because he was black but this country also gave him lots of privileges and protections as well.
When it came time for Ali to repay, he wouldn't go. He didn't pay his dues. Ali said "no Vietcong ever called me nigger". True, but Vietcong were killing his countrymen and that should have been enough to make him want to fight, because
This was worse than just calling him names. He never abused the Vietcong for killing his brothers that I remember. There were more than enough black guys fighting in Vietnam, yet Ali placed himself about them by not going. People around him were filling his head with crap. He was so naive he sucked it all in. It wasn't until he got away from those lolly brains that he realized what nonsense he'd been spuikring and then he apologized - too late as someone said. My views on all this have changed recently, when I really stopped to think about it. There were white guys in Vietnam fighting for Ali's way of life against communism. He shouldn't have called them devils. They didn't deserve it, no way did they. That's all a long, long time ago. I'd much rather dwell on the good things he did in the ring and more recently out of it. Guys from that era who still follow boxing probably do so because of him. He made a lot of boxers very wealthy just by the standards he set. I still think he's done more good things than bad. But Vietnam and the events surrounding were a stain on his character, no doubt about it. People who fought in Vietnam when he didn't and who listened to some of the crap that was spuikring have a right to be angry at him if they need to be. I probably would be if it was me.

Noam, you have to be a nut to be on my list so I guess you don't qualify. OK Massimo, Jumpity Bruce jumps all the way to number six on my list.

Howard C, it's never too late to seek treatment from qualified professionals. It usually helps. Think about it. Ali wasn't letting anyone down by not going to Vietnam. His religion compelled him to refuse the draft and that was that. He didn't go and his sincerity can't be questioned given that he is still a Muslim 40 years on. He was wrong with the statements he made, but he admitted that error. What more can he do? We're all being more than a little precious blaming him for words that he spoke in his youth. Let he who has not sinned throw the first stone.

Ali wasn't letting anyone down by not going to Vietnam. His religion compelled him to refuse the draft and that was that. He didn't go and his sincerity can't be questioned given that he is still a Muslim 40 years on. He was wrong with the statements he made, but he admitted that error. What more can he do? We're all being more than a little precious blaming him for words that he spoke in his youth. Let he who has not sinned throw the first stone.

Noam, either do a little research re: the Nation of Islam or just admit that you do not want to know what they are about. The group is a bit more complex than sporting bow ties and saying things to "upset the apple cart"; their philosophy has never been about pacifism (quite the contrary); and an informed person wouldn't use the word "religion" in the same sentence. You've taken great pains to make a case that your hero renounced them, yet, paradoxically, you imply that they were harmless. Why, then, did the Great One bother, when there was really nothing to renounce at all? As I've said before, you can't have it both ways, facts are stubborn things.

Everybody has the right to their own religion. I have the right to think that religion is a pile of crap. Somebody brings that crap onto S. Broad Street they end up with an American Salute up their ass. You want to honor somebody that won't fight for your country that's fine. That's your right to, and I have the right to think it's a pile of crap. Aint America Great!

Senator Byrd from West Virginia---a former Klansman?---have you heard him denounce his ties to the Klan? I haven't. This is a politician, representing a state, and he has a pretty big voice in the Senate too (long standing member). Ali is a former boxer for crying out loud. Ali was and is a private citizen. He doesn't owe you or anyone else an explanation or an apology for what he did in the 60's. I think Ali still believes in some of the mission he was involved with in the 60's but has serious issues with certain aspects of the means to the end. It was 40 years ago, not two months ago. His statements have served to renounce the aspects of their activities and beliefs that he now feels to have been wrong. The spirit of rising up against a repressive system, he probably still believed was the right thing to do. Honestly, I have some problems with what he said and did in the 60's, but I have no issue with how he's expressed his changed views. Clearly, the guy is sincere about his religion. He's turned down some Parkinson's treatments that somehow violate his beliefs. I don't understand it, and you might not, just like he wouldn't understand some of my religious practices. The more I think about it, the more you win Fan. That's because you've managed to put Ali's fans on the defensive, talking about his religion, draft evasion, etc. You can't possibly win any debate over how great he was as a boxer (certainly no prayer of Frazier rating a favorable comparison to "The Greatest") , so this red herring has served you well.

Okay, back to real boxing: Prime vs. Prime, Dynamite Dokes vs. Chris Bird---who would win and how?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/20/05 04:09:53 PM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/20/05 04:42:29 PM</th>
<th>Fan</th>
<th>Fandom</th>
<th>fan@Fandom.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Byrd dances circles around Dokes. Dokes was always a bit overrated in my book. Good to be back to boxing!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/20/05 04:54:39 PM</th>
<th>Noam</th>
<th>same</th>
<th>same</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

On 7/16/05 at 8:58pm Fan wrote:"Talk is cheap. I would appreciate a reference supporting the assertion that Ali "renounced" the NOI mythology, aptly summarized as The White Man Is The Devil. Please direct me to a quote, a taped interview etc, which will demonstrate that this is more than wishful thinking on the part of an Ali worshipper."Of course, everyone would immediately notice that Fan uses exactly the same insults practised by Forest, who has mysteriously disappeared. We all know that Fan has replaced Forest (who made a fool out of himself with all that "Frazier had smart management" junk). Fan and Forest are one.Anyway, I then directed Fan's attention to quotes in which Ali renounced the offending comments. The quote was contained in the book Brutal Artistry, showing that Ali retracted the statement in 1984 (21 years ago). And then I directed Fan's (read Forest's)attention to the Ali interview earlier this year with Sir David Frost.Of course, Fan/Forest ignored this proof. He wouldn't come good with his promise that if someone could show that Ali renounced these comments, he would go up "immeasurably" in Fan's/Forest's esteem.Fan/Forest, I am not an Ali "worshipper". He is not my "hero". I just happen to think that, however flawed personally, he just happened to be the greatest boxer of all time. You might like to recall that this is a boxing site, not some religious depository to discuss 1960s politics and religious beliefs.Fan/Forest, I think you are probably a racist, who despised Ali back in the 1960s. Your hatred of him today is deepened by the fact that much of the world holds him in such high regard, whilst your hero, Quackin' Joe Frazier', haunts bars and police station charge rooms. You asked for quotes, Fan/Forest, and I gave them to you. I compellingly showed that Ali renounced those views. As everyone can see, my talk wasn't cheap. But your honor and your word is.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/20/05 05:18:51 PM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

I'll add that to my knowledge, Ali has never been accused of "whupping" one of his broads. The same can't be said for another early 70's champion who he lost to once and beat a couple times.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>7/20/05 05:33:06 PM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

I have seen Michele Dokes only once, when he lost to Ruddock by knockout in 1990. It was one of the most brutal and impressive knockouts I have ever seen! Ruddock could punch like hell! But one fight is not enough, I don't know who would have won a Bird-Dokes fight. You gave a very good definition of religion. Religion is exactly what you have just said. If this religion was written in every dictionary probably the word would go better! Immagine there's no Heaven, PAN PAN PARAPARAPAN, nothing to killor die for, PAN PAN PARAPARAPAN, and no religion too, PAN PAN PARAPARAPAN, immagine all the people, living for today, IUUUUU-UUUU, you may say I'm a dreamer, but I'm not the only one, I hope someday you'll join us and the world will be as one...Yeah!!

| 7/20/05 05:33:40 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 | Noam, there are two different Fans. Now you think Forest is both Fans? Maybe Forest is everyone on the site except for you. |

| 7/20/05 07:56:54 PM | Fan | USA | n/a | 10 | Noam, Noam, Noam...am I the only one who feels this is getting tedious? You quoted me accurately - I asked for a reference re: whether Ali had in fact "renounced the mythology of the NOI". But you haven't delivered. Instead, you proffer one author who claims Ali "retracted" - your words - one facially absurd statement (the one about the white devils). "Retracting" a sentence is hardly "renouncing" a belief system, which is what I requested proof of. The NOI mythology (of which you seem blissfully unaware) is a bit more expansive than the "white devil" synopsis. The volume which you have cited is merely some evidence that Ali retracted one statement, (that's all one as informed and committed as yourself could unearth?) which Angelo astutely observed did not approach a turnaround in his beliefs. Noam, I am not Forest, I am not Fandom, I am not a racist, and I have to wonder what Steve and Les have done to "earn" the freedom of speech I thought we Americans all enjoyed, but you have denied me. Please reconsider your decision! What are you, the Minister of Free Think in your little world? I note that after berating Forest (whom you apparently see lurking behind every post) for name calling, you have stooped to just such conduct yourself. A poor debater and a hypocrite to boot - and now a budding psychiatrist referring other posters for professional care! I for one think we've about covered this now. Just remember Noam, if Forest is really out to get you, you're not paranoid. |

| 7/20/05 08:52:21 PM | Angelo | DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Tony Tucker vs. Chris Bird? |

| 7/20/05 09:02:25 PM | Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville | 10 | Forest (oh, I mean Fan) you really are a goose. Noam provided you with what you wanted and like the idiot you are you went back on your word. You must really hate Ali to be filled with such jealousy and resentment. You can't get it through that thick head of yours that people here who praise Ali for his boxing and are critical of some of his personal statements are not hero worshippers like you say. That is Forest shining out of you when you said that. Funny thing, Forest, you can't forgive Ali for some of the things he said and then retracted in 1984, then you never mention Frazier bashing women. I guess that's okay with fools like you. I really have to laugh. You always get it wrong. The funniest example of your dumbness on boxing was when you said that Joe didn't fight big punchers because of smart management. As if fighting with cataracts and partial sight was somehow "smart". What baloney. Every time you get pulled back into line you move onto some other subject to make a fool of yourself again and again and again. Thomas Huaser wrote a book called Brutal Art on boxing. He quoted Ali retracting the statements that so offend you. Huaser is a very respected journalist. YOU YOURSELF FOREST HAVE QUOTED HUASER IN YOUR PREVIOUS POSTS HERE. YOU QUOTED HIM BECAUSE HE WAS CREDIBLE. But now, because it doesn't suit your purposes, you don't accept him as credible. Forest, keep posting please. The comic relief you provide is invaluable. I would miss it if you stopped posting. |

| 7/20/05 09:41:42 PM | Bob Bumbera | NC | renfbera@aol.com | 10 | I agree with you Fan, this is tedious. Byrd kicks Tuckers ass. Calvin Brock would too. |

| 7/20/05 09:50:55 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 | Tony Tucker vs Byrd would be interesting. Tucker however never really proved to me that he could win coming forward with mean intentions. I think Byrd would probe him enough to get a 7-5 type decision. Tucker was a good fighter although Byrd is very good in my book. |
Okay, gotta work late, setting these Dead Parroters straight. Again. Oops, gotta stop mumbling to myself out loud.)PSST.....LISTEN UP DEAD PARROTERS. Thomas Hauser wrote a book titled Brutal Artistry, published in 2002 by Robson Books. Inside the front cover it reads: "Over the years, Thomas Hauser has earned recognition as America's finest boxing writer. Now the best of his articles on the sweet science have been gathered together in one book." Get the drift, Parroters....the book contains articles Hauser wrote that were published over the years in newspapers. The book was praised by publications, including: Ring Magazine - "No one has done it better"; Los Angeles Times - "Fascinating, very good writing"; Washington Post - "Brilliantly crafted"; Newsweek - "Thought-provoking and engaging." And this is what Hauser wrote about Ali renouncing previously held views: "Ali's views on religion have changed considerably since he was young. IN 1984, HE PUBLICLY REPUDIATED THE SEPARATIST DOCTRINE OF NATION OF ISLAM SPOKESMAN LOUIS FARRAKHAN, DECLARING, "WHAT HE TEACHES IS NOT AT ALL WHAT WE BELIEVE IN. HE REPRESENTS THE TIME OF OUR STRUGGLE IN THE DARK AND A TIME OF CONFUSION IN US, AND WE DON'T WANT TO BE ASSOCIATED WITH THAT AT ALL." Later, Ali acknowledged, "WHEN I WAS YOUNG, I FOLLOWED A TEACHING THAT DISRESPECTED OTHER PEOPLE AND SAID THAT WHITE PEOPLE WERE 'DEVILS'. I WAS WRONG. COLOUR DOESN'T MAKE A MAN A DEVIL. IT'S THE HEART AND SOUL AND MIND THAT COUNT.' Dead Parroters: it couldn't be clearer. If you don't understand that, then words have lost all meaning. Angelo - if you go to a site called The Smokin' Gun, you can see a mug shot of Quackin' Joe Frazier when he was arrested by police earlier this year for bashing his girlfriend. The site has photos of Tyson, too. I couldn't find one of Ali there. Noam, it is good Ali said those positive things in 1984 as if he had said them in 1964, he may have wound up dead at the hands of NOI assasins just like his buddy Malcolm X. Those extremists didn't like desertion in their ranks. Kent, I agree. But it wasn't a Black Muslim who shot JFK. Same with Bobbie Kennedy. And Lincoln. Everyone has its ratbags, for whatever dumb reasons. Are you going to tell me that a young Cassius Clay wasn't exposed to racism? Hey, what he said wasn't right, but none of us lived in his shoes. The important thing is what Ali's like morally today. What's Quackin' Joe Frazier like now? He didn't look too good in that mug shot I saw taken earlier this year. Hey Joe, LEAVE THE GIRL ALONE! If "The Big Ducker" did beat his girlfriend it means she wasn't a big puncher! Otherwise he would have ducked her...Just joking! :-) I meant "only joking". Or not maybe "just joking", I'm not sure, sometimes I get "just" and "only" mixed up! Parrots, Quackers, racists, multiple Forests - even Joe Frazier (whom this NOI discussion was never about) I am glad you are here to protect us from them Noam. They're probably all White Devils anyway! Even Joe. But you haven't answered, among others, my question re: selective free speech, Noam. Do you feel a sense of accomplishment in that you apparently chased a regular poster away from the site? Why not try making points without resorting to epithets, but rather by relying on facts and logical inferences drawn from them? As Fandom (you know, AKA Fan, AKA Forest, AKA The Eggman, AKA The Walrus) has agreed (with himself!), let's move on and stop the the name calling if we happen to disagree with someone. Kent, I am not the guy you were thinking of. I think. But check with Noam just in case. You never know.
like Bird by a close, maybe split decision.Massimo: If Joe's "significant other" was Norton, both of them might have ended up with bruises. Norton was a good puncher, but not on the level with Shavers, Cooney and Foreman! Of course, if they were a couple, there might not have been a fight in the first place. Good buddies, you know. | 7/21/05 02:23:02 PM|Italian Stallion|Philly||Unknown|||10|Bernard going to take take that hick to school next time. Bernard made his bones when that kid was in daipers. That kid is going to get knocked out and never fight again, watch| 7/21/05 04:55:31 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Fan, there's a difference between free speech and assuming someone's identity and then posting nasty and malicious celebrations of Ali's deteriorating medical condition and, at the same time, gloating that Frazier feels good about it. Same with wishing Jane Fonda a slow and agonizing death and wanting to push her under a train. This was the nonsense someone assuming the name Forest Ward was spruiking and it's not free speech - it's dangerous speech. It's stuff written by a jealous, hateful whacko, a chronic Ali hater, not under his own name, but under the name of a real person named Forest Ward who actually does exist. The real Forest Ward might not share those nasty almost insane views, so why should the imposter be free to suggest otherwise.I didn't chase the person who falesly called himself Forest Ward away. When I called him to account for his stupid, hateful comments, he went away.....and then came back under a different name.Anyway, Fan, I see you are still avoiding the Thomas Hauser book and Ali's retraction. Are you saying that Hauser is not credible ? Did Hauser lie in his book about Ali changing his views and retracting his statement ? Have The Ring Magazine and all those other publications been duped ?Something else. Frazier and his Dead Parrot worshippers think that Joe could walk on water. But his record shows he rarely ventured out of the boat. The times he did - against Ali and Foreman - he lost 4 out of 5 times (and was stopped three times). Hardly something worth worshipping.Hey Noam - unless you're really Minister Farakhan, who has mysteriously not been around lately - how 'bout them Yanks! Another way of saying I choose not to give you further excuses to name call. (I think everyone will thank me for this.) My point, that Ali is no hero, has been made. Have a good one.(No offense to JQ, the ref finally deducted a point for Noam's repeated low blows.) | 7/22/05 06:24:39 AM|mark|sargeant||mark_sargeant2003@yahoo.co.uk|||10|When is Byrd fighting next? Isn't he supposed to be fighting this month against a guy called Sergei something who beat Dominic Quinn on points in December?| 7/22/05 10:05:03 AM|Italian Stallion|Philly||Unknown|||10|One time I seen this 280 pound dude walk up on Bernard. Dude took a swing at Bernard and Bernard threw a compact left hook. The dude crumbled like an accordin. That's street cred.| 7/22/05 10:05:22 AM|Massimo |Roma||fica@fregna.com|||10|I have just seen the Carlo Monzon–Emilio Griffith legendary fight fought on 2 June 1973. I think Emilio won quite clearly that fight! It was really a great performance for (or by) the 35 years old Emilio. He beat no bum, he beat Carlo Monzon, one of the greatest middleweights ever! But the judges scored the fight in favor of Carlo. It was a very good fight. Carlo disappointed me a little bit in this fight because he didn't show a good use of the jab and he wasn't able to take advantage of his superior wiltness.

7/22/05 11:08:53 AM|Charles Anderson|Arkansas||ctjjandfam@aol.com||10|Stallion, Hopkins don't want no more from Jermain! 4 rounds don't win a fight. If it did they would have had a 4 round championship fight. Get real!!

7/22/05 01:25:55 PM|Kent|Murrieta, CA||Kentallenent@aol.com||10|Charles, last I heard the book on Jerry was put on hold as the author (authors) ran into some possible legal difficulties.

7/22/05 05:20:33 PM|Italian Stallion|Philly||Unknown||10|Bernard is going to end the guy's career. For real you gotta know Bernard is going to knock him out and the guy will never be the same. Think Chavez–What's his name last round. Dude was NEVER The same.

7/22/05 08:08:25 PM|Charles Anderson|Arkansas||ctjjandfam@aol.com||10|Stallion, I like your style, but sounds like you caught one too many from Apollo.

7/22/05 08:20:36 PM|Steve|N.J.||NA||10|Hey Italian Stallion, the fighter your referring to was Meldrick Taylor.

7/22/05 08:50:22 PM|Les.|N.J.||GRUNT9@yahoo.com||10|Boy, it has been and it is, HOT!!! here in the great state of New Jersey. Noam, the race track in Vietnam that you mentioned in one of your post is one of the places that I never saw while I served in the Nam, I spent all of my time in the (Delta) area. I see Steve is back for a visit, hey Oil Can Harry is it hot in your little part of New Jersey!!!. As I stated in one of my last postings, I have very little knowledge about boxing so, as soon as I can come up with a good question I'll ask it. Oil Can Harry, can you teach me anything about boxing?.............

7/22/05 08:56:54 PM|Les.|N.J.||GRUNT9@yahoo.com||10|Hey Oil Can Harry where are you??, not in bed already are you sweetie?? (XOXOXO).............

7/22/05 09:59:20 PM|Steve|NJ||NA||10|Angelo, Ali should have stepped up and gone into the Army. He never would have gone to that bad place. His life would have been much easier. However, had I known what those years would be like, I'd have probably punked out myself. I guess he was just much smarter than I ever was.

7/22/05 10:21:52 PM|Steve|NJ||NA||10|Hey Les, you've got three things going for you. I know you've got a Purple Heart! (Although how you got one in the Delta is a mystery to me.) I know you have the wisdom that our age can provide. And third, I know you were really there in the shit.

7/22/05 10:45:53 PM|Steve|NJ||NA||10|Hey Les, do you remember the old James Cagney movie? The girl says, 'I wish you were more affectionate.' Cagney says 'I wish you where a wishing well so I could stuff you in a bucket and drowned you!'

7/23/05 01:12:02 AM|Oil Can|Cosmos||NA||10|Always jab....Jab....jab

7/23/05 02:41:33 AM|Hulk Hogan|Los Angeles and stick here||Hulkster@Hulkmania.com||10|...I gotta be the best, I am a real American, I have all the rights of every man, I am a real American, I have the rights, I have the rights!!!! Greetings to all you brothers, Hulkmania will live forever, God bless America!

7/23/05 04:09:09 AM|Noam|Same||Same||10|Les, I heard that there was a major battle at that race track called Phu Toey offensive. They still race ponies there and bet on results. I might go there. Is the Vietnamese beer any good? I'd ask Steve but he only drinks whiskey and lots of it.

7/23/05 04:27:05 AM|Jumpity Bruce|Jumpville||Jumpity.com||10|EEK eek eek a eek eek, eek eek a eek eek. Jump Jump jump jump jump jump jump jump jump jump
Hey Jumpity, you're the n.1 in my book! Kent needs a bit more time to understand how great you are.

An in prime Holmes vs Foreman (1974), who would have won?

I have just seen on ESPN Classic Holmes vs Frank and the fight was interesting. Larry dominated Scott for almost the entire fight even if, at the end of round 2 Scott DID hurt Holmes with two consecutive hard right hands (Larry admitted he was hurt). Holmes was a great fighter, he had all the tools, he was a true master, but Scott Frank was not that bad too. Scott was a good fighter with a good punch.

Hey guys, I have just found something interesting in the Larry Holmes's site. A guy asked Larry Holmes the following question: LARRY, I READ ONCE THAT YOU SPENT SOME TIME SPARRING WITH JOE FRAZIER. HOW HARD DID HE HIT IN COMPARISON TO OTHERS LIKE COONEY AND NORTON? And Larry Holmes answered (or responded):

Joe Frazier hit harder than Cooney and Norton. In fact Joe broke my ribs while sparring and wouldn't let me take any time off. if I took time he was going to fire me. Joe was tuff, he would come at you to knock you out. I always had to be prepared to spar with Joe, you couldn't relax in the ring with Joe.

But still the hardest puncher was Shavers. When Earnie missed, the wind of his punch could knock you out. Cooney had a hard left hook that was devastating at times and Norton tried to knock you out from the first bell.

Maybe Joe Frazier was a ducker, but he certainly wasn't too bad as a fighter!

Hey Stallion, I pity the fool who messes with Clubber Lang!

Hey! I pity the fool who messes with Clubber Lang!

Massimo, I've been visiting Holmes's website without posting for a long while and it is very interesting over there. Larry answers questions personally and he doesn't like George Foreman.

Holmes v Foreman would have been very interesting. At first glance I would have said that Larry would have outboxed Foreman and have been able to stay away from him using his jab. George would have tired mid-fight and Larry cruises home to win on point. But the other side of the coin is that even with all his tremendous boxing skills, what would have happened in the likely event that Larry got hit in the early rounds. Larry's jaw wasn't as reliable as Ali's and that would make him more vulnerable to George's power.

Add other factors (ie, not fighting in Zaire in the suffocating heat) and you can expect that George would be stronger and be able to fight longer than he did against Ali.

So, the result? Either Larry outlasts George and wins on points, or George pounds Larry early and stops him cold before his jab takes charge.

I think if this fight happened AFTER Foreman got beat by Ali, then Foreman would have been sufficiently wised-up to avoid all the pitfalls and he beats Holmes.

However, if the fight happened BEFORE Ali beat Foreman, then George wouldn't have known his weaknesses and Larry would have been smart enough to fully manipulate those defects to win on points.

I can't tell you about the beer that we had in Nam because, Nam is where I learned to drink whiskey at the age of (18&19), up until about (5) yrs. ago it was always, "Makers Mark" or "old Grandad". Yo!!, Stevey boy, now you know that the Delta was, (No Picnic), just as i'm sure were you served was the same. I'm sure that both of us did our fair share of the fighting. Oil Can, have i ever arrested you?? I sure do miss Frank Rizzo, now there was a cops cop!!, i'd put Rizzo in the ring with anyone when he was in his prime, even you Oil Can......... | 7/24/05 05:41:30 AM|Noam|same|same|same|||10|Les - the whiskey in Vietnam, I think, is called Mekong Whiskey and it is made from rice and, obviously, named after the great river. I'm told it knocks your socks off and I'm looking forward to drinking it if I ever go over there.General Westmoreland died a day or two ago, aged 91. What is your take on him, having served under him in Vietnam ? | 7/24/05 07:28:09 AM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|I don't know much about what happened in Vietnam, I was only (-4) years old in 1968. But I know that that was a particularly rough and tough war. Nobody enjoyed himself there. Steve, did you enjoy yourself there in Vietnam ? Are you still missing Vietnam ? I am not trying to be unrespectful, I am just kidding (even if probably I shouldn't on such a subject). I have seen the Rambo movies, but actually they don't seem very realistic to me. Sincerely I don't think a man alone (even if pretty good with weapons) can beat an entire army. Maybe only Hulk Hogan could.| 7/24/05 01:44:06 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA|RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Just re-saw the Bonavena-ALI match, as usual clutchess Clay held Bonavena like a long lost ant, And not so much as a warning, Kind of frustrating to watch, he'd been great at the WWF! Bonavena did a great job and like Frazier never complained. Quarry-Bonavena old topic? I read John Gerards version, And I agree totally, Gil Clancy trained both, Clancy and Quarry where going after the title in 73'(champion-GEORGE FOREMAN) and they would not have took a match with Oscar, if they were not very confident of a QUARRY VICTORY.JERRY HAD A BETTER "COMMON OPPONENT RECORD" And beat more world-rankers 8 to 4 for Bonavena. But its hard to say, Bonavena reminded me of a Giant Art Hafey, as they loaded up every punch. Little Canadian Art would try to Ko you with a jab. Read an old Los Angeles times article ON QUARRY'S BROTHER IN LAW middleweight Mike Nixon, the times said Nixon had everything including a chin MADE IN A CHINA SHOP. I wouldn't tell Mike that!ha. APRIL 22 1977 WAS JERRY'S CELEBRITY TENNIS TOURNAMENT FOR CYSTIC FIBROSIS, Jerry looked like a million bucks. It was in Anaheim Hills I believe. They sure had a lot of big names, I think Jerry liked the common folk better. I know he could'nt believe the egos! When he competed in the "SUPERSTARS"! 7/24/05 03:31:18 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Jimmy D, you haven't been around for a while.  What do you think of my revised list of all time nuts that have posted here?  A TIE FOR FIRST PLACE!1. Koo Koo Klock1. Foolface3. Looney Tunes4. The Muffinman5. Jumpity Bruce6. Brother DKSMore to follow when I remember more of the kooks.| 7/24/05 05:03:26 PM|Massimo|La citta' dei Cesari|||10|The fight against Ali' was Bonavena's greatest fight! He gave Ali' hell for 14 rounds and a half. At the end of the fight he was so tired that my mother could have whipped his ass. But Bonavena was just too tall ("tall" means "wilt") for the WWF. In the WWF they don't want people over 5'9", they love (the) midgets! Let alone Ali'! I would bet on Jerry against Bonavena, if Jerry don't get stopped on cuts, he beats Oscar. Close to call tough(spelling).| 7/24/05 05:05:25 PM|Massimo |La citta' dei Cesari|||10|I meant Ali' was so tired that...| 7/24/05 05:14:13 PM|Noam|same|same|||10|Hi, Jimmy, interesting comments on Ali hanging on like a big ant to Bonavena. But I have to say that Frazier out did Ali for hanging on. Frazier fought Bonavena in December 1968. In the second round Oscar knocked Frazier down twice. Frazier wrote of the first knockdown, "I was aware of my surroundings, and conscious of being in big damn trouble, as I got to my feet...." Frazier then wrote at page 50 of his book, "The challenge became to survive the round. But when Bonavena knocked me down a second time, pushing me more than punching me this time, it added to the pressure I was under. I was this close, now, to being beaten....." The three knockdown rule applied and Frazier had been knocked down twice already. So what did he do? I'll let Joe tell the story, "With more than a minute left in the round, I did what I had to. I grabbed Bonavena and drew him into a clinch. He couldn't push me away quickly enough, desperate-crazy as he was to land that punch that would put me on the canvas a third and final time. But I had enough survivor's instincts to stall him...." And later, "But I stayed close to him, trying to smother his punching room. And when I could, I grabbed his arms and held him until the referee broke the clinch." Frazier held on and won a controversial split decision! He looked like a Preying Mantis he held on so much. I have to make the point that Ali held on to Bonavena because he was tired in his second fight back from a three year layoff. He then stopped Bonavena. On the other hand, Frazier held on for desperate survival. He had nothing left except the "instinct" to hold on. While Frazier has always whinged about Ali holding on, truth is holding on saved Frazier from being stopped against Bonavena in 1968. Holding on saved Joe's career and the fact that it was Bonavena - who was not a big puncher - who did the damage, put Joe on alert that he was vulnerable. That's why the very next fight after Bonavena he fought Dave Zyglwicz. Who ?, I hear you saying. I'll let Joe tell you himself. "But Ziggy, as they called him, wasn't getting up on this night, not with what I'd laid on him. It was the second-fastest knockout in heavyweight-title history - thirty-six seconds of the first round. A forty-thousand dollar quickie payday for me." The press made the fight out to be a farce and wondered out loud whether Smokin' Joe was ducking the serious contenders to fight dogmeat...." Frazier actually gave 'Dogmeat' a shot at the heavyweight title. Imagine that. He chose 'Dogmeat' the very next fight after Bonavena knocked him down twice giving him the fright of his boxing life. Do you guys think that Joe chose 'Dogmeat' because he was a light puncher who posed no risk ? I do. Thanks. | 7/24/05 06:11:41 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Once again Noam is playing with the facts. Noam you don’t know what you are talking about half of the time. You may not be in the top of the nuts who have visited here but you sure are near the top of the posters who play with the facts to back up their illogic. Frazier fought Bonevena for the first time (they fought twice) in September 1966, the fight in which Bonevena knocked down Joe twice in the second round. Yes Joe held on to Bonevena to survive the round but he got up and did enough to pull out the win for the rest of the fight. Following Frazier/Bonevena 1, Frazier took on Eddie Machen in November 1966 and Doug Jones in Februbary 1967, two world class fighters, not push overs. Frazier fought Bonevena a second time in December of 1968 in a title defense, taking a big chance after their tough first fight, and Joe won a fifteen round decision to retain his title. Yes Frazier did take on easy touch Zgilewicz in his next fight in April 1969 but after this one, he fought Jerry Quarry in June 1969, a top rated contender, hardly a push over. Noam, next time recheck your facts before you post misinformation. | 7/24/05 07:37:07 PM|Noam|same||same||10|Kent - there's a difference between "playing with the facts" or making a genuine error. One's a lie, the other's not. You should know as you're experienced at both. Yes, the first Bonevena fight with the two knockdowns was in 1966. That was an error. I wouldn't deliberately deceive you on that as I'd surely know that the error would be picked up, as has now been the case. But the fact survives that Frazier knew early in his career - in 1966 as Kent correctly points out and not two years later as I stated in error - that he had a suspect jaw. He was knocked down twice by Bonavena and only survived a stoppage by holding on. That was the central point and the purpose of my post. Jimmy indicated that Ali held on to Bonavena. I commented that Frazier did the same. The point was correct even if the year was wrong. To suggest otherwise, Kent, like you have done, is the dishonesty, not citing a wrong year in error. I would have expected better from a serial name-dropper constantly big noting himself as a journalist and philanthropist. (Draw up a list of 'big noters' and put yourself at the top Kent; you win by knockout.) By the way, the point about Zyglwicz is also correct. Frazier fought him in 1969. It was a title fight. Journalists alleged he was fighting 'dogmeat'. The fight was a farce. There was no playing with facts there either, Kent. Argue facts, not cheap shots about a minor honest error that doesn't change the issue involved. Kent, if you want to correct me on dates or whatever then please do it politely. Don't falsely accuse someone of deceit when it was obviously just a mistake. It does your own credibility harm. Thanks.

Kent - one more thing. It's B O N A V E N A, not "Bonevena" as you incorrectly posted. Spelling is important to budding journalists. Take the time to get it right and you'll do better.

Joe Louis made a career out of it. How come you aren't putting him down too?

Tell me who was available who Louis didn't fight. I've already told you who Joe didn't fight. Let's examine your claim that Frazier didn't take the easy way out after the scare and two knockdowns against Bonavena in 1966. His first fight after that near loss against Bonavena was against Machen. By then Machen was 33 and near the end of his career. He'd won his last three fights, including a split decision, against Johnson, Quarry, and Orbillo. But before then he hadn't had a win in his last five fights. When he fought Joe he hadn't knocked anyone out for 30 months. Hardly frightening opposition. Frazier then fought Doug Jones, who was 30 years old and near the end of his career, too. The fight before Jones had lost to Thad Spencer. The fight before that he'd lost to Ernie Terrell. Once again, not frightening opposition. Not someone likely to test his jaw that was exposed by Bonavena. (Spencer and Terrell were available, by the way, but Joe didn't want them.) Next fight was Jeff Davis. He'd lost 6 of his last 12 fights. Not a danger. I'd have a chance against him. George Johnson was next. Before fighting Frazier this guy had 24 fights. He'd won only eight of them. Johnson wouldn't have scared a old woman off a toilet seat. Then Joe fought Chuvalo, who had lost to Bonavena only the year before. By then Joe had already beaten Bonavena so he wasn't stepping up a peg by taking Chuvalo on. Before Frazier, Chuvalo had knocked out the below household names Ray, Besmanoff, Wipperman, Brown, McCormick, Russell, Avery, and Turnbow. I guess you would have had to have been alive then to have heard of these guys. Either that or been married to them. Next guy was Tony Doyle. He'd had 23 fights before Frazier for 18 wins (only 9 ko's). His two fights before Frazier he'd beat Dave Centi and Clifford Gray (yes, I agree, who ?). Less than a year before fighting Frazier, Doyle had lost to someone named Jimmy James Rossette. Doyle wasn't King Kong. Joe's next fight was against Marian Connors (or Connors). No one seems certain of the correct spelling of his last name. I can't find his fight record anyway, probably because he is so insignificant. Yet Joe fought him.

Frazier fought all these above guys in 1967. And it was also in 1967 when Frazier refused to fight in the WBA elimination tournament. He'd been fighting losers like Jeff Davis, George Johnson, Tony Doyle, and someone named Marion Connors (not even James Rockford could find him), yet Frazier maintains that he was too good to fight in the elimination tournament.

As I said, Kent, the near knockout loss to Bonavena in 1966 frightened the pants off Joe. We can tell that by the standard of opposition he fought in 1967. Toy ducks are more frightening.

| 7/25/05 04:54:14 AM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 | Good post Noam, however I still think Joe was top notch. I will admit that you did a nice job with the record. You can get records for anyone at boxrec.com. |
| 7/25/05 11:10:31 AM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | Kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Noam, in 1966 Frazier was climbing the ladder so taking Machen and Jones, veterans he could learn from but still tough enough that victory had a chance of not happening, after all Machen had recently handed Jerry Quarry his first loss, is a common way to build a fighter. One of your main points was how Frazier had taken it easy by fighting Dave Ziggy after nearly losing to Bonavena but when the truth is he fought Quarry after Ziggy, soon after Bonavena 2 not Bonevena 1. There is a big difference between Ziggy and (Jones and Machen). You have used incomplete or inaccurate information more than once than you get offended when it is pointed out to you. Remember when you posted several times that Jimmy Ellis had not won in four years prior to fighting Frazier for the second time? When the truth is he won eleven fights in that time period. Then you said you meant he had only won one fight in his last four fights to fight Frazier for the second time? |
had to. Consider this. Bonavena knocked him down twice in September 1966. Joe's next fight was against Doug Jones, who had LOST HIS LAST TWO FIGHTS. Next patsy, Jeff Davis. HE HAD LOST THREE OF HIS LAST FOUR FIGHTS. Next patsy, George Johnson. HE'D WON ONLY 3 OF HIS LAST 10 FIGHTS. Johnson had a career record of 8 wins from 24 fights. Johnson had lost to Machen, and Machen had already been beaten by Frazier. Joe was going down in quality, not up. He was fighting guys who'd already lost to guys Joe had already beaten. Frazier then fought Chuvalo in July 1967. In August 1966 Chuvalo lost to Bonavena. And in September 1966 Frazier had beaten Bonavena. Once again, Joe was going down in quality, not up. He never wanted to take the prettiest girl to the dance. Joe only wanted the scrubbers. Next patsy was Tony Doyle. He was an absolute nobody. He'd beaten Centi, Gray, Rossette, Leslie, who probably had day jobs as hairdressers and kindergarten teachers. Joe next fought Marion Connors. There's no proof that Conners actually existed. No one has his fight record. No one saw the fight. There is no film of it. No one knows the correct spelling of his last name. (This might be one for the full mooners.) The point being, Kent, after his near death experience against Bonavena, Joe went into hiding. They wrapped him in cotton wool. His opposition standard went down in quality, not up. It was tune down after tune down after tune down. And then Frazier refused to enter the WBA elimination tournament. He said that he was too good to fight the other seven contenders and that the title should be 'deemed' to him because he'd already proved he was the best. AGAINST WHO - DAVIS, JOHNSON, DOYLE, AND CONNERS? QUACK, QUACK, QUACK.

Kent, you gotta get YOUR facts right. When Frazier fought Ellis in Melbourne, this was Ellis's record in preceding fights:

- Loss to Joe Bugner
- Loss to Ron Lyle
- Draw with Larry Middleton
- Loss to Boone Kirkman
- Win over Memphis Jones
- Knocked out first round by Earnie Shavers
- When he fought Frazier the second time, Ellis hadn't won in his last FOUR FIGHTS, and he'd only won ONE of his last 6 FIGHTS.

And you say that Frazier never took the easy route. | 7/25/05 06:41:54 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Noam -Very honestly, I think there is some exaggeration in what you just said. I have the tape of the Frazier-Bonavena first fight and Joe didn't hold that much, not even in the second round, when Bonavena knocked him down one and a half times (the second time it was more a push than a hard punch). Actually Frazier was always the aggressor in this fight. I think at the end of the 10 rounds he deserved at least a draw (and very likely was ahead by 1 point, maybe even 2). Besides that Joe did beat Oscar again two years later and in a pretty impressive way. I agree with you that Frazier didn't fight many hard punchers and this tarnishes his reputation a little bit, but he was a great fighter in my book (and my book is interesting). |

Not a very good fighter right? Only if you never were in the ring with him!! Ol Scrap-Iron fought hard 100 percent of the time and if Mike Tyson had his heart, Tyson would have been unbeatable. Anybody who ever fought Johnson during his career that lasted from 1958 to 1975 knew they were in a real fight.
5'9" tall but strong at about 210 pounds. He was just a step below the world class main event level and he lost to George Foreman, Sonny Liston, Joe Frazier, Ron Lyle, Jerry Quarry, (three times), Bugner, Eddie Machen, Henry Clark, Thad Spencer, Boone Kirkman, and Duane Bobick. At his own level, as a club fighter, he was 19-9-5, not a great record but respectable. Noam, Frazier fought Bonavena, Machen, and Doug Jones in his 12th, 13th, and 14th career fights, pretty tough competition early in someone's career. It is you who view Frazier through emotion, extreme dislike for the man and the fighter.

Hi Massimo - I quoted on the Bonavena fight from Frazier's book. I used his words. At page 49 this is what Frazier says of the first knockdown: "Bonavena hurt me with that right hand, hurt me like I hadn't been hurt since Georgey Boy had sledgehammered me that first day in the PAL gym....and when I hit the canass it was as though I'd been awakened abruptly from a deep sleep." And after the second knockdown, when there was a minute left to drop Joe a third and final time (3 knockdown rule), Frazier wrote, "With more than a minute left in the round, I did what I had to do. I grabbed Bonavena and drew him into a clinch....I stayed close to him, trying to smother his punching room. And when I could, I grabbed his arms and held him until the referee broke the clinch." Hey Massimo, blame Frazier for exaggeration, not me.

Kent - get your head out of silly, petty, trivial stuff and argue the issues. Look at the facts. Frazier was fighting down in opposition, not fighting up. He was fighting guys who'd already been beaten by guys he'd already beaten. For the entire 1967. No new horizons there. You said that others were ducking Frazier. Yet of the 8 fighters chosen to enter the elimination tournament, only one refused.....JOE FRAZIER ! The others were all prepared to fight Joe but Joe wouldn't enter the tournament to fight them. Joe said he was too good. Have a look at the quality of opposition on which that boast was based. It was BS, big time, but you idolise Frazier that much you can't admit it. Dead Parrot hall-of-famer.

Hey, this is George Johnson's fight record below BEFORE he fought Frazier in 1967: beat Brown, loss to Machen, beat Umek, loss to Quarry, drew with Leslie, drew with Ramos, beat Harryman, loss to Rush, loss to Clark, loss to Lincoln, beat Rogers, loss to Rogers, loss to Spencer, loss to Moore, loss to Kendall, beat Moore, drew with Davey, beat Crear, beat Bennett, drew with Turman, lost to Cab, loss to Fleeman, beat Bowser, loss to Carroll. I got this from Box Rec. Before Frazier, Johnson had had 24 fights for 12 losses, 4 draws, and 8 wins. His record is awful, yet Frazier fought him. You can't avoid that awful truth by averting attention with petty, trivial, meaningless interjections. Next thing you'll have us arguing about what colour shorts they were wearing. Get real for once. By the way, I should say thanks. When the new guy Les came along, I said to my girlfriend, "Watch for Kent jumping in as quick as he can to impress Les by big noting." We had a small wager and you didn't let me down. Ta.

Oh, my apologies Noam, you were talking about Johnson's record going into the Frazier fight not his entire record. But he was still a very tough fighter. Who gave a lot, even in losing efforts. A fighter learns his trade fighting guys like him and any prospect that loses to him is written off. An important test anyway and a way for someone like Frazier to stay active. By the way, the record of Johnson I spoke of was BEFORE he fought Frazier. It was an appalling 24 fights for 12 losses, 4 draws and only 8 wins. His OVERALL record was 47 fights, for 23 losses, 5 draws, and 19 wins. By my calculation Johnson won only 40 % of his fights, yet you describe him as "one of the toughest fighters of ALL TIME."You are easily pleased. No wonder you adore Frazier. Compared to Johnson, Frazier WAS God. :)

| 7/25/05 08:34:51 PM | Angelo | dc | funktron@yahoo.com | |||10|Kent: I generally respect your opinion, but rather than accuse Noam and other Frazier skeptics of exag errating facts, you should consider the fact that in effect, you are rationalizing Frazier's lack of top opponents in the 70's. You have an explanation for every important contender he "missed" and it sounds an awful lot like rationalizing. Tune-ups, slow-downs, too old, too young, not ready, too good to fight, bad timing, etc. Everyone else managed to fight each other but Frazier slid past the pack. It's old already to talk about how the others weren't ready for him until he was too old. That's utter nonsense. Ron Lyle would have fought him at any point after Frazier lost the title and if you think about it, you know it's true. Shavers took on Quarry---for $75,000 (what they paid Stiff Jimmy in '75) Shavers would have fought Frazier and Ali on the same night. It's really bogus to imply that other guys' management were protecting them from Frazier, especially after Foreman bounced him around the ring like a soccer ball. The mystique was over after the third knockdown and it got downright silly after the fifth one. After the sixth knockdown (in what, five minutes?) Frazier's cover was blown wide open. It took "careful management" to protect him from Shavers and Lyle, not the other way around. Also, one last point, a true great, Ali, came back at an old age to fight a real contender, Trevor Berbick. Frazier came back to fight Floyd Cummings. I rest my case. |

| 7/25/05 09:55:18 PM | Steve | nj | na | |||10|Massimo, yes, you are being disrespectful. I don't miss NAM! Why would you ask me such a question? Have I ever given you the impression that I am a man who would miss or enjoy such an experience? I did not bring this obscene subject up again. Mister tough guy, Les, is just like me. He will keep bringing it up, because he can't let go. |

| 7/25/05 09:58:06 PM | Mike Stevens | Ohio | brownssbright.net | |||10|Angelo, did you ever consider the tax implications of fighting for five or six figure purses twice in one year? Maybe there just weren't enough purses for everybody to fight everybody in the seventies. |

| 7/25/05 10:15:13 PM | Steve | nj | na | |||10|Joe Frazier would not have any reason to duck anyone....he was a great fighter and great champion....you can argue his weaknesses but not his heart or determination. Why duck Lyle or Shavers? Who did THEY ever beat? Neither was in the same class as Frazier. |

| 7/25/05 10:21:41 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | |||10|Noam, have you ever seen a live fight? Even the winners get hit and hit hard. Scrap-Iron Johnson was a step below world class fighters and if you had seen him fight, you would know how tough he really was and he did hang in tough and hit the better known fighters hard. If Jerry Quarry was around today, he would set you straight about Ol Scrap Iron. Was he great? No way! He wasn't even considered good to a lot of people. But was tough as nails with the heart of a lion who would fight anybody any time, often with no notice. He was afraid of no one. I also feel honored that I have met him and no I don't really know him but he seems like a fine man as well. Noam, to you Scrap Iron Johnson is just a name on a list, a record. But he was a real fighter, a warrior in his own right. |

| 7/25/05 10:30:30 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | |||10|Noam, as Les will tell you, he's tried to arrest me on numerous occasions, but couldn't pull it off, because I hadn't drank enough whisky. So, instead, he'd call for back up, then beat me into what he thought was submission, and leave me laying in the street. You never hurt me, Les!

Kent, Jimmy D., Max, Bob, Angelo, Les, where all either fighter's or were ringside for some great, bloody fights!! So, All I'm asking is don't be so quick to judge if you've never got punched in the face so hard, that your hands and feet go numb and refuse to obey your normal brain commands.

Kent, instead of being insulting asking whether I've ever seen a fight live, and also accusing me of hating Frazier (which is untrue), stop and reflect for a second or two. Any time I have mentioned Frazier's deteriorating speech, I have always qualified the observation by saying that it is "sad". Yet when the person wrongly calling himself Forest Ward celebrated Ali's seriously deteriorating medical condition, you said nothing. You didn't protest. That suggests hatred, because you have the habit of picking everyone else up on miniscule errors.

Dead Parroters then attacked Ali personally. He wasn't sincere about his religion, he was bad for not going to war, blah, blah, blah. I merely replied that Frazier was no role model either. An alcoholic. Father of many children to many different wives. Recently charged by police with bashing one of his girlfriends.

A Dead Parroter challenged someone to bring to notice a credible quote showing that Ali had renounced controversial views spoken in the 1960s, including the 'white men are devils' comment. I did that quoting from a published book (Brutal Artistry), written by a very credible and widely acclaimed author (Thomas Hauser). Once again, you said nothing. You knew that Thomas Hauser is highly respected but you were happy to let an inaccuracy ride, because that inaccuracy discredited Ali, the man you obviously hate.

Next Jimmy says that Ali clinched a lot against Bonavena. You being the self-proclaimed encyclopaedia of boxing, I thought you might come in and balance the issue. Not you. You hate Ali too much to do that.

So I then accurately quoted from Frazier's own book proving that Frazier clinched much more against Bonavena than Ali did. Frazier clinched to stop himself being knocked out. It save his career. He admitted it in his book.

You see, when facts are used against Kent, he doesn't argue them back like a balanced and fair budding journalist would. Instead Kent becomes a nitpicking proofreader. I wrote 1968 and it should have been 1966. I wrote years instead of fights. I left out the word before. Kent went hysterical accusing me of playing with the truth, not researching, blah, blah, blah. Any typographical error Kent could highlight to deflect focus from compelling facts he couldn't answer any other way.

Along the way Kent fascinated us with ridiculous arguments of tune ups, tune downs, couldn't fight him because he liked him too much, Ellis Mach 2 was the meanest guy available, everyone was ducking Frazier and not the other way around, and on it went on its very silly way almost hilarious. Hence the tag Dead Parroter came into vogue. It fits them.

Now Kent, you've outdone yourself. George Johnson - Kent has proclaimed - was "one of the toughest fighters of all time". Really? Johnson only won 19 of his 47 career fights. Alongside Johnson, Ellis Mach 2 even looks like King Kong.

Yes, Kent, I've been to fights. Yes, Kent, I've met fighters, managers, and credible boxing journalists. And yes, Kent, I've even been in fights personally. The difference between you and me, however, is that you big note about your involvement and I don't.

I again say after Bonavena knocked Joe down twice, Frazier went into a shell, wrapped himself in cotton wool, and fought patsies. He fought guys who had already been beaten by guys he'd already beaten. The quality of opposition went down, not up. He ducked the elimination tournament when the other seven guys were all prepared to fight him. QUACK. QUACK. QUACK.
criticize (Massimo and Angelo, too). I was just wise cracking. Teasing you. I've broken bones in my hands also. The middle knuckle on my right hand the worst and at a young age I already have arthritis in it. I've probably had six concussions from contact sports, broken my wrists four times, fractured my skull, various knee injuries, and damaged a disc in my lower spine. I had one leg injury where I was on crutches for a year. I have some allergies and I had a discharge once that.....oops. |
| 7/26/05 12:18:37 AM|steve |nj|na|||10|Kent and Noam ,Scrape Iron Johnson,a bad ass top twenty fighter during the late sixties and early seventies.Would you put your coming up fighter in with him?|
| 7/26/05 01:11:57 AM|steve |nj|na|||10|Kent,check out Les Woephle's record,if you can.He was a fair to middling heavyweight in the P.A.L. PROGRAM, in the early sixties.Not a nice man.Then he went to Vietnam.He's a friend of mine.I think.|
| 7/26/05 01:23:54 AM|steve |nj|na|||10|Noam,you sound like a pretty tough troop.Have you been in the Military?If so,give me your unit.I know you didn't get that many broken bones in civilian life!|
| 7/26/05 01:42:11 AM|steve |NJ|NA|||10|Kent,man,are you right!Just because you win a fight ,doesn't mean you didn't get hit hard,and hurt!you will be so sore you don't want to get out of bed.When you do get up ,your usually pissing blood.|
| 7/26/05 04:18:17 AM|Noam|same|same|||10|Steve - the most painful injury I got was one I forgot to mention - a dislocated right shoulder. When it happened the whole arm went numb from the neck down and I honestly thought that my arm had somehow been pulled off and was no longer there. I opened my eyes, saw it was still there, but I couldn't move my fingers or bend the elbow. And when I realized the arm WAS there, that's when it HURT. I shoulda kept my damn eyes shut. I've never felt pain like it. Give me a broken wrist any time. The loss of control of the arm really shocked me, too, and was a terrible sensation and traumatic by itself. I wouldn't let them put it back in without a needle.Concussions from knocks to the head are different almost every time. Some times you're conscious but you are dizzy and have a headache and later become very nauseous and vomit. Bright lights make it worse. Other times you are fully awake and look okay to those around you but you don't recall a thing about the incident. You remember nothing at all and there is no pain. It's just like a period of time in your life never happened.The worst thing about getting a hiding in a fight is usually not the pain of a black eye or bleeding nose or whatever. It's the physical exhaustion and the pain in your lungs. If you keep fighting when someone is beating you, you spend every last bit of energy and air in your lungs and having nothing left and being virtually defenseless is the most awful feeling. It hurts to breath and even blink.Ever been punched on the ear ? That is painful too. You can't bear to touch it. You can't sleep with that side of the head on the pillow. I'd rather have tooth ache.Water on the knee is also painful. I began getting that playing golf. A bug was annoying me while I was trying to play a shot. So I hit the bug with my nine iron. Problem was the bug was on my right knee. It blew up all swollen and the doctor had to drain it with a needle. That hurt. It also felt like there were small crystals in the knee and when you moved it there was excruciating pain. I'll put up with the bug next time.The four broken wrists I got, one was at home when I was about five years old. My sister promised to catch me if I jumped from a balcony. She lied. The other three breaks were from sports. My memory is that apart from the first one, the other three breaks didn't hurt much. The broken right knuckle was from punching the wrong part of someone's head. I got his forehead and not his nose and it drove my big knuckle back into my hand. If you do it enough, the knuckle becomes very hardened, much harder than before, and swells right up. The nerves around it seem to die over time and that big knuckle makes a punch much more effective. It's different if you break the little bones behind the knuckles. They never grow back over stronger and hence cause you more problems. | 7/26/05 08:22:24 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Noam, when you keep posting inaccurate information and then writing it off as being unimportant as if we think you should be right just because it isn't a big deal that the statistics or quotes you use are not completely right.But how can anyone prove a point if he often misquotes stats or misquotes someone?Once again, I posted George "Scrap Iron" Johnson was one of the toughest fighters from his time, not all time as all time is too long of a period to claim and you misquoted me a second time.Does it change your arguments? No, in this case not much but it makes me wonder what else you are getting wrong.The reason I wondered if you have seen live boxing is because you would see journeymen fighters like Scrap Iron battling it out and losing rounds, even most of the rounds in the fight, to headlining fighters but often not by much, maybe a few telling punches, but the blood, sweat, and guts are very real, much more than on television and the loser of a round in most cases does land hard shots himself.I figured a veteran fan such as yourself would have more respect for the journeyman than you seem to have.Steve, lets not give Ol Scarp Iron too much credit as he was never anything close to a top twenty fighter but he was one tough cookie and no one can take that from him.Once again I am not a journalist here, just relaxing. I do think in the near future I will submit an article to Eastside Boxing about Frazier's place in history and it would be interesting to see what the fans think about Frazier, they can write in and instantly make comments on the subject the articles are about.I think both Noam's and Angelo's comments will be very short (or brief, I mean "breve", "succinto", "lapidario"):...OOOOOOOHMMMMMM....OOOOOOHHHH....OOOOOOOHMMMM....SUSPENSE......IT'S ALMOST TIME...NOW IT'S TIME:QUACK,QUACK!!!!This place has gotten a little weird lately. However I do have some tape of old Scrap and I will say this for him, he was game. He was tough, took on all comers and his record reads like a who's who of heavyweight boxing. Was he a good fighter? No, however if he was managed differently he could have had a good record. When you fight the guys he fights consistently you lose fights.In fairness, you should mention in your article that there are people who question Frazier's place in history—and refute our arguments. It could be a sort of point/counterpoint. All joking aside, it really is fascinating stuff. I think a lot of us here are knowledgable fight fans and it is very interesting how polarizing this argument is. It really goes to show that reasonable people can have opposite points of view (and I think) do a good job of arguing their positions. For me, it isn't all personal issues with Frazier---it's that I think it always comes back to his "shutting Ali up" claim. It bugs me that one win, one fifteen round decision against a guy who had been away too long, waives Frazier into the all time greats category. Aside from that win, he lost the rest of his fights to the two best guys he was matched against, Ali and Foreman. His best wins were over Quarry twice and the first Ellis win. He looked bad winning some other fights and looked good against stiffs and washed up fighters. By my own acknowledgement, Frazier's close to the Top Ten of all-time heavyweights, at or about #10, which is pretty good. I've never questioned his courage or heart, and I've always said that his management is more responsible for the contenders missed on his record—that Frazier would have fought ANYBODY, but that his management steered him away from dangerous punchers after Foreman beat him.Angelo, I think Frazier's second win
Bonavena was a good fighter, but let's not put him on too high a pedestal. He was a tough guy who came to fight—-I don't view him as ever having been a title threat or a premier heavyweight. Jerry Quarry was a title threat who fell just short, fighting in a very competitive era. Bonavena was a great opponent in a very competitive era, but not a title threat. Earning a title shot means that he had a chance---but it would be a big upset, at least in my mind, to see him get the belt. Richard Dunn, Jean-Pierre Coopman, Randy Cobb, Renaldo Snipes, Alfredo Evangelista---go ahead and add some more names---they all got title shots, but it would have been a big upset if any of them won. Ditto for Bonavena. Frazier getting a good win against him was nice, but expected---not any type of monumental accomplishment.

At least Joe Frazier proved he had the guts ("guts" means "coglioni" "palle") to fight (or of fighting) him again after what Oscar did to him in their first fight!

I agree. Frazier also took on Foreman a second time after the fiasco that was the first fight. It's hard to question Frazier's courage, but not hard to question the omission of some of the era's heavy knockout punchers from his record. It was that "smart management" that kept him away from the Ron Lyle's of the world. I picture a Frazier-Lyle fight unfolding. If they both just moved forward and started winging punches from the first round, I don't see Frazier winning. Frazier had a weight advantage over Quarry that wore JQ down after his blazing start in the first fight. I think Lyle was heavier and bigger—-he'd stand and trade with Frazier until Joe was looking up. Same might hold true for Shavers. I look at the Shavers punch that took Ellis out and I'm sure that if he connected like that on Frazier, we'd have the start of a similar situation that occurred in Frazier-Foreman. | champion), his only successful title defences were against Terry Daniels and Ron Stander. Then he got knocked out by George Foreman, who knocked him out a second time three years later. Take away the three Ali-Frazier fights, two of which were won by Ali, and what have you got?"Kent, I don't expect you'll quote Hauser or even Joe himself in the fawning testimonial you intend to write on your all-time boyhood hero. I'm sure you won't remind anyone that Joe was fighting guys who had already been beaten by guys he'd already beaten at the very moment he was telling everyone he was too good to fight in the elimination tournament. "You won't talk about Standers or Daniels or even about Ellis Mach 2 and the farce that involved. You won't even mention the world bouncing record Joe set against Foreman. Let's face it Kent: you don't know how to be balanced when you're talking about Frazier. |
wilter than Angelo and John Gerald, 5 inches wilter than me and over 7 inches wilter than Roadscholarette. They shouldn't write that b.s. on box.record!!!!!!|
|7/27/05 09:04:21 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Angelo-Aug>br>This Young was a bad ass, he gave Ali' and Lyle good fights too. I knew that he had beaten Foreman, but I didn't know he gave him such a boxing lesson! This guy fought all the best... But Ducking Joe! |
|7/27/05 10:47:31 AM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com||||10|I am 6'1 which makes me a good height for point guard. Sadly old men don't play point guard. Back when we played basketball they would put half the team on one side of the court and half on the other :)|
|7/27/05 11:04:47 AM|Massimo |Roma||4||||10|Fan (the one from Fandom)Wow, at 6'1" you should become a wrestler. WWF has NEVER had a guy that tall!!!!! They would say you are 7'9"...| |
|7/27/05 11:23:22 AM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com||||10|I think my wrestling nickname would be old man. I could have a long grey beard and bring my walking stick then hit people with it. It would show those young punks a thing or two! |
|7/27/05 01:27:59 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Fan (the one from Fandom)-Fan, you might be the wiltest guy on this site...How is the weather up there ? What are you being eating in your youth ?| |
|7/27/05 03:41:32 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Hey, I am proud I haven't been in many fights in my life. It is better to walk away from trouble than to get in trouble. Four in my entire life, three of which I won.Who says I can't fight at all? I studied traditional Japanese karate for four years, Shotokan Karate of America (SKA) under students of Tsutomu Oshima, one of the most gruelling training regimes in the martial arts.Chuck Norris comments in his book, "Mr. Oshima pushed me to my limits and then he encouraged me to train even harder." Norris, who trained under most of the masters of the arts in his time was right about that. One day I will return to this difficult training.I also spent time cross training with boxers, at times sparring with them in the gym. I will admit that I had some trouble with amateurs with some experience and that I had no official bouts as a boxer but I do know what it is to hit and get hit.That I can carry as much as 250 pounds and not be too out of shape means I can take care of myself if I have to.| |
|7/27/05 04:04:24 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com||||10|Noam, you probably don't know this but Thomas Hauser is Muhammad Ali's personal biographer. That means he is not the person you want to ask about Joe Frazier. Please use somebody credible to back up your statements not a known Ali shill.| |
|7/27/05 04:08:52 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com||||10|Hauser has written 11 boxing books. Six of them are about Muhammad Ali. Maybe Thomas is a partial observer (yeah right). |
|7/27/05 04:41:57 PM|Les.|N.J.||riotinroom3c@yahoo.com||||10|5:44PM (EST)....YO!!, Beast From Yucca Flats, were are you sweetie?? (XOXOXO). | |
|7/27/05 04:52:31 PM|BOB ROBERTS|N.Y. ||PAPERTRAP@ADELPHIA.NET||||10|HELLO TO ALL THE QUARRY/S AND THERE FANS. LOOKS LIKE FRAZER IS GETTING A WORST BEATING ON THIS WEB SITE THAN IN THE RING( LESS FOREMAN) BUT I LIKE MANY WOULD LIKE TO HAVE SEEN HOW FRAZER WOULD HAVE MATCH UP WITH---MAC FOSTER---RON LYLE---SHAVERS AND NORTON?????/ THATS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN GOOD AND GREAT ( FRAZER--ALI) AND AS WE ALL KNOW OUR OWN JERRY QUARRY FOUGHT ALL COMERS. IN MY MINE THE FIRST --- FRAZER--QUARRY FIGHT WAS BETWEEN THE TWO BEST HVY. AT THAT TIME,(AS ALI WAS OUT OF IT)---THANKS FOR LETTING ME THROW MY 1-2 BEST REGARDS TO ALL---BOB| |
|7/27/05 04:55:30 PM|Noam|same||same||||10|Just because Thomas Hauser has a different view to you, Fan, doesn't diminish his view. Hauser has written 26
books, been nominated for awards, and his work has been acclaimed by the Ring Magazine, among many others. None of them criticized him for being biased. Unfortunately, while Hauser has written six books on Ali, and other writers hundreds of other books on Ali as well, there isn't a market for books on Joe. He wrote one about himself but that's about all. To put it mildly, Joe hasn't ignited public excitement. Try as I have, Fan, I haven't been able to find any books you've published. Correct me if I'm wrong, though. You might just be hiding your genius from us. By the way, Fan, what Hauser wrote in his book was something journalists complained about when Joe was fighting. Joe even acknowledged himself that journalists were accusing him of fighting "dogmeat" and having "farces" for fights. It's not just Hauser and me that has that view. I accept what you say, Howard, but there is a different side to the story. Many of the guys here claim to be better positioned to comment on Frazier's career because they lived through it. They regale us with insights of their memories. Strange, though, that none have bad memories of Frazier and the low quality of some of his opposition. None of them have made even one criticism. And none can recall what Joe even recalled in his book: that journalists were saying that his fights were "farces" and he was fighting "dogmeat." Sometimes, Howard, people have selective memories. Especially when they are biased and they are dealing with their boyhood hero. They only remember the good things, while hiding memories of the bad, discrediting stuff, hoping that the other guys who weren't there don't find out about it. That's what Kent did. He claims to have lived through it but he didn't give a balanced view. He committed the worst thing that a journalist can do: he suppressed information that didn't suit his agenda and view. In this case, he must have known that there was widespread criticism among boxing journalists about the "dogmeat" that Joe was fighting. But Kent didn't tell us that. He hoped that people had forgotten, so he wasn't going to mention it. Therefore, Howard, sometimes you have to get personal, just to get their attention and get them thinking about the issue from a wider perspective, not only from the boyhood hero view. The real story is now here. Kent's version of Frazier will revolve around his first fight with Ali. Kent won't mention the Daniels and Stander or the clapped-out Ellis in fight 2. Kent won't mention that Frazier was the only one of eight guys who wouldn't enter the elimination tournament. Kent won't mention the patsies that Frazier fought that same year, some who'd lost more than they'd won. Kent won't mention Frazier's controversial split decision over Bonavena when he had to hold on to survive after two knockdowns. Kent won't mention that journalists accused Joe of fighting "farces" and "dogmeat." Kent will give us a sanitized version, like he's done so far here. Apparently, that's good, accurate journalism, suppressing the real facts. I'll say it again Kent: the gangster's mole has seen lots of fights, too, but that doesn't mean that she knows anything. | 7/27/05 07:10:12 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||10|Noam, you can post whatever you want, but the fact is that Hauser is a close personal friend and personal biographer of Ali. If you think there isn't animosity on both sides still in that rivalry your wrong. Hauser has always been a mouthpiece for Ali. If Hauser was complimentary of Frazier well then that would be a story. Eddie Futch said alot of things about Ali and his holding and gift decisions. Futch is one of the best trainers ever. That is also biased because of his affiliation to Joe. Same thing and both should be given little credence. | 7/27/05 08:42:02 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Noam, you can take all the sarcastic cheap shots at me that you want. I could care less. Of course I would mention Frazier holding on to survive the round verses Bonavena. A smart fighter does what he has to do to make it through to clear his senses if he can. It is what happened in the following rounds. He was able to tear into Bonavena and pound out a decision victory. That he almost lost means Frazier took a big chance by fighting Bonavena a second time. If Frazier really avoided fighters who could hurt him, then why did he fight Bonavena the second time as Bonavena clearly hurt him the first time out? Or for that matter why did he fight Foreman twice? Frazier is not my favorite fighter of all time. Jerry Quarry is my favorite but Frazier was the better fighter of the two, he beat Jerry twice in the ring.

If Noam mentioned Thomas Hauser, you didn't even know who he was and obviously you hadn't even read his books. Yet, sight unseen, you dismiss his works as worthless and biased. How so? Unless you have some magical extra-sensory ability to know what's in books you haven't read, then it is silly and unfair and dishonest to dismiss them as biased. Much better to rely on people who've actually read those books and have acclaimed them and nominated them for awards. People working for the Ring Magazine and national newspapers. People with more credibility than you. People who actually read the damn things.

But let's forget about personalities and your silly accusation of bias. Let's focus on assessing Hauser's basic premise that you judge fighters by the hard fights they have won, not the easy fights they have won. What's wrong with that logic? It's sane, sound, safe, and sensible. Now let's apply the sensible logic. The five hardest fights Frazier had were against Ali (x 3) and Foreman (x 2). Hauser was right again, wasn't he? Frazier lost four of those five hard fights. He won one by decision, lost one by decision, and was stopped in the other three. Stop me if I'm making any mistakes.

Hauser says that Frazier defended his title against Stander and Daniels. That's correct isn't it? People are starting to shake their heads now thinking about the stupidity of what you said about Hauser, especially when you haven't actually read what he was saying.

Tell me something else. What do God, Santa Claus, the Easter Bunny, Dead Parroters who perceive Frazier as being the greatest, and magical Fan with extra sensory abilities to know what's in a book he hasn't read, have in common? They are all figments of the imagination.

Kent: if you were going to mention about Frazier hanging on against Bonavena, why didn't you do so at the very opportune time when Jimmy was talking about Ali holding on against Oscar? That was the moment, Kent. Not promising you were going to do it in the future.

I'll support you when Noam gets personal in his criticisms, even when you've been a bit personal to him. But you haven't been balanced. You've never pulled anyone up in some of the spiteful comments they've made about Ali. You haven't been balanced at all. As such, the bias that Fan nonsensically levels at an author for books Fan has never read, should more fairly be tossed at you.

Time for some of you guys to grow up!
Bravo Ed, good post! I think as always the williams is somewhere in the middle. To say Duckin' Joe fought all comers would be wrong, but to say he never took a risk would be wrong too. Oscar Bonavena was an easy touch for everyone. He gave Ali' one of the hardest fights of his career, knocked Joe down twice, knocked Carlo Mildenberger down several times and gave Lyle a good fight in 1974...I agree that Lyle and Shavers would have been more dangerous for Frazier than Oscar, but Oscar represented a danger for everyone. Giorgio was obviously dangerous and Duckin' Joe fought him not once, but TWICE. And the second time around he at least proved to Foreman he was a legitimate professional heavyweight.

I think Lennox Lewis would have given Ali' a hell of a fight, anytime in Ali's career. By using his great boxing skills, his superior size and power, his great jab and his bigger shoe size (15 1/2 against, I believe 13) he would have represented a big risk for Ali'. I rate Ali' above Lewis but since styles make fights, I think Lewis would have had a very good chance at beating Ali'.

Fan: just when I got to my feet after the shocking revelation that you've got extra sensory powers and can review a book without actually reading it, you knock my over again. You said that Hauser's word wasn't credible because he wrote a book on Ali. And then you go quoting Eddie Futch - Frazier's trainer - as holy writ. Like he isn't biased. Good to see you being consistent.

By the way, Hauser's book on Ali, had you bothered to read it, tells the story mainly through the eys of others. Rather than use his own words, Hauser instead lets people who were actually there tell the story in their own way. So much for bias!
from Fandom, 2002 was a good period for posters here. Guess what? Mr. Jimmy agreed with me that it was more likely people avoided Joe Frazier than the other way around. Even though Joe beat Jimmy's brother twice. Jimmy knew what he was talking about and he is a key missing piece around here.

You say you've read his books. Which ones. What was so bad about them that he qualified for your condemning him as biased. But let's forget personalities. Argue the ball, not the man. Hauser's logic is that fighters are judged by the hard fights they've won, not the easy fights they've won. Hauser then asked, take away Ali (and Foreman) from Frasier's career, and what have you got?

I gave you the chance to answer this before. You didn't. Neither did Kent, the budding journalist who wants to write about Frasier. So, come on guys, leaving Ali and Foreman out, tell me from 1 to 10 Frasier's greatest fights.

It should be easy. Like me, you guys come from that era. But just remember, you can't use the Thrilla In Manila. Let's see if Weekend at Bernie's (Frasier v Ellis 2) makes your list.

Hey Kent, you shouldn't verbal dead man. It's so childish, trying to win an argument by verbally dead man and it's loser stuff that let's everyone know you're beaten in your own mind. Besides, Joe Louis told me that Frasier is a ducker. Mathis and did too. And when I spoke to Mr Jimmy he told me that Frasier WAS a ducker. The biggest one he'd ever seen. So there.

Anyway Kent. Tell me Frasier's 10 greatest fights, leaving Ali and Foreman out. Thanks.

Mass,Thanks for the kind words. Yes i agree with you, Lennox Lewis is a very underrated fighter. He only lost 2 times in about 14 years! Plus Tyson in his good years wanted nothing to do with him and neither did Riddick Bowe...and that says a lot.

Which do youse guys think are Ali's 5 greatest fights? Thanks.

Howard - what Hauser actually said was that Ali apart, what were the best and hardest wins of Frazier's career. Massimo, what say you on that? I think this way: Ellis 1 (Jimmy was competent and clever, but it was a toy title without the real glamour, seeing that it had been stripped from Ali). Mathis (Frazier says that Buster couldn't fight and that he was a soft guy, but in terms of importance it probably has to be here). Quarry 1 (a genuine tough guy). Bonavena 2 (Joe managed to get through it without the two knockdowns scare of the first fight). Stander (don't blame me, Joe chose Stander for a title defense). Daniels (ditto). Zyglewyz ('dogmeat' sure, but this was Joe's choice once he was on top of the heavyweight world. Joe wouldn't have picked him if he wasn't tough, right?). Quarry 2 Chuvalo (better than Doyle, Jones, Davis, and Johnson, and at least he actually existed, unlike the Invisible Man, Marion Conners). Ellis 2 (Weekend at Bernie's). Come on, Kent and Fan, argue the merits. What say you guys were Frazier's best and hardest wins, leaving Ali out.

(PS. Kent - frankly, I'm very disappointed in you and Fan. I quoted a well respected writer of 26 books, widely acclaimed by newspapers and the Ring Magazine, and nominated for prestigious awards. And in response you quote a dead guy. You guys aren't debating facts. Kent, your only argument has been that you go to lots of fights and that you are a boxing journalist (but you don't say that you are a non-paid contributor to an internet website where they run volunteer stories. Ask a PROFESSIONAL journalist: quoting dead guys makes you look unprofessional, shonky, and probably dishonest.)

And Fan. You keep saying that you can't tell us who you really are, and that there are very good reasons why you can't tell us who you are but
"trust me" they are very good reasons even though I can't tell you what they are, that you are an important guy who the Quarrys trust, and that you know heaps of important guys, and that you know more than everyone else just because you do and that's that. Come again ?Why didn't you tell everyone weeks ago when it was relevant that you have three books written by Hauser ? What are the titles ? What are they about ? And as Howard asked, quote verbatim the comments from where Hauser proves that he is biased. I'm setting some tough assignments here, guys.Fan, I had to explain to you weeks ago exactly who Hauser was because you didn't seem to know. Now you say that you really did and that you've read him. Well, give us a review on books you actually have read, rather than the review on the one you haven't.|7/29/05 04:57:45 AM|Massimo |Roma||www.frazier'sbestfights.com|||10|1)Ellis 1 (Frazier was very close to his prime in this fight, Ellis was confident and came to fight)2)Bonavena 2 (Frazier did beat with ease a top 10 contender)3)Quarry 2 (Jerry was in great shape and very confident)4)Mathis (Mathis was a great dancer and a big fella. He even beat Joe twice as an amateur. He looked twice bigger than Duckin' Joe).5)Quarry 1 (Just watch this fight, yeah!)6)Bonavena 1 (It was only Joe's eleventh fight. Joe deserved at least a draw against a top tenner. It's the only fight in which Joe actually proved he could recover from one and a half knockdowns to win a fight).7)Chuvalo (Ask Ali' whether Chuvalo was a dogmeat or not.)8)Doug Jones (He was small but very good. He gave Clay a very tough fight and knocked top contender Zora Folley out. He was only 30 when he fought Duckin' Joe, 26 when he fought Cassio Marcello).9) Eddie Machen (He was a little washed up, but still a very good test, especially for a young fighter).|7/29/05 07:21:16 AM|Massimo |Roma|||4|||10|I forgot about the Joe Bugner fight, another good win soon after his first fight with Giorgio.|

I disagree that the site was better in 2002. The only tangible decline of the site was the passing of James Quarry---it was always great when he checked in to give his opinions, or his insights of actually witnessing Jerry's/Mike's career achievements from such a close place. But as far as boxing knowledge, I think the posters here are as strong as ever. Debate is what gives so much passion and life to any sports discussion, boxing included. Comparing guys from different eras, arguing about the merits of Frazier's career, voicing that Jerry would have beaten Ellis if not for an injured back, etc., all are fun to read and think about. I don't think personal attacks against people with different opinions is healthy---but likewise, I don't think criticizing the site because we aren't all generic clones is fair either. We think differently---a little sarcasm is good fun---debate is healthy---from what I can tell, most of the regulars know boxing as well as most sportswriters. It's all good. It's a lot better than a "tribute board" which is what you find on some other sites dedicated to a specific boxer. Here, most of us found the site because we're Quarry fans, but we keep coming back for other reasons. By the way Noam, the same Hollywood insider who told you "Weekend at Bernies" was based on Frazier-Ellis II., told me that "Brian's Song" wasn't based on Gayle Sayers/Brian Piccolo, but actually rooted in the friendship of Joe and Kenny. So close, they couldn't fight. |

I must say that Noam and Howard C and the rest are good posters, however I do miss James alot. He offered a really good perspective. I also miss Evren and Br DKS. DKS would be on the Ali side of this argument, but he was entertaining as hell. |

I make little money doing boxing journalism. I do have some free lance work for some local newspapers that pick some of my articles.
their archives. However, they are not the only place that posts my articles. I have been on dozens of web sites all over the world in the last five years and sometimes magazines will pick up some of my stuff, mainly travel publications that you find at hotels and on airlines.

Eastside boxing has its own message boards as well and not everybody can get on the main page as the site owners are discreet in not letting just anybody on it. That is what the message boards are for. I am also doing work for The Retired Boxers Foundation and for a spanish cable network called Hombre T.V. If you want to know about me, ask my friend Alex Ramos, he is a good reference for me. I also get all of the press releases from Don King Enterprises and other boxing sources as well as press credential applications from most of the promoters in the U.S., which means I can get into a lot of major events without paying and I sit at or close to ringside and I have more access to boxers than most fans would have.

I also have the opportunity to interview major players in the boxing world, mainly teleconferences where I am one of about 20 reporters who get about two questions a piece. But I also can get one on one interviews too. I do boxing writing part time but because I like to do it. I guess that Noam questions my credentials because he is interviewing me for a job. I don't know why he would care about me so much otherwise. I guess he might think I am some rich man's son who never has had to lift a finger in my life but although I have done well in the last few years as I am part owner of a company that does very well which lets me do my writing part time and other things, there was a time when this wasn't the case. I didn't even have a car for five years and I rode a bicycle, walked, or took a bus to a job I hated and sometimes I had to walk long distances home late at night. I dreamed about getting out of that dead end job and for the last seven years I have been able to do so. Someone mentioned that information comes up on me if you do a google search on my real name, Kent Appel. At least I am a real person who someone can find out something about my activities. Just as Jimmy D and Steve from New Jersey, among others, are real people too.

SO NOAM, DO I GET THE JOB? You couldn't possibly care that much about little ol me unless you are trying to put me down. You wouldn't do that, would you?
credentials of others, they tend to question yours too. Besides, I gave you an opportunity to bignote again and you took it. Italian Stallion - that's the problem with Frazier's career. It's all about wouldas, shouldas, and couldas. If he fought all those guys, we'd know the result. Fact is he didn't and it's therefore open to speculation especially given the knockdown by Bruce, the twin knockdowns by Bonavena, and the....the....the....how many was it?
......knockdowns against Foreman. Joe's chin was vulnerable and he was never a given against heavy punchers. Besides, we don't 'deem' fights here. Angelo - I take your point. That song fits. The fight I left out for Frazier was Bugner. That should have made his top time. Kent - leaving Ali out, what were Frazier's best wins? It's a chance for you to argue merits, not identitites or perceived standing among the boxing community. Thanks for doing that Massimo. The 'dogmeat' comment about Mathis is not my comment. I'm just repeating what is in Frazier's book. Fan - I'm looking forward to your review on the three Hauser books you have. I'd like to know what exactly was biased about them. Thanks.

I just watched Ali vs Frazier 3 again. You know, every time I watch a fight I haven't seen in a while, I pick up or see something new. Don't get me wrong, I greatly admire Joe. I wish I was half the man he was. However, I think I saw Ali outsmart Joe in tactics...he fought just enough to keep Joe off him for the first eight rounds. Then, he went flatfooted, and did out punch Joe pretty badly...then he really cranked it up in the last two rounds. Ali definitely had ring savvy. He thought while he fought.

Hey Pete from Cleveland, welcome to this crazy site. Your probably not as old as Kent, Fan, or myself. It's hard to remember everything about every fight from the seventies, but Kent and Fan are usually pretty accurate. They both know thier stuff.

I admit that Frazier's resume will always be opened to the question: could he take a really big punch? I'm sure he could take tons of very good punches but actually Giorgio Eduardo knocked him down 8 times in less than 7 rounds. To me this is a little painful to say as (even "since" would probably work) I am a bit of a Frazier fan, but it's just what I think. But, on the other hand, not many fighters in boxing history could take Foreman's, Lyle's, Shavers's and Marciano's bombs and come back to win or at least survive. I can only think of Holmes, Chuvalo (he lost big time against Giorgio, but never went down) and Quarry. I don't put Marciano in this elite as he was knocked down by the first serious punch Walcott landed and by the light-heavyweight Archie Moore. Regarding Ali', I think he developed an undestructable (spelling) chin later in his career, but when he was very young he was actually vulnerable. Cooper and Banks knocked him down (not two all time greats) and little Doug Jones almost knocked him down in that first round as well. |

Massimo, some very good observations regarding Ali. His jaw seemed a little vulnerable early on, probably right up to the first Cooper fight. After then his jaw did seem almost indestructible and perhaps it resulted from his training. We’ve commented before here that Ali allowed himself to be hit hard in training so that he could experience the feeling of being nearly knocked out and would therefore know how to react. Whatever it was, however, he could certainly take the punches. And Massimo, regarding Frazier. Given his reaction to the very hard punching Foreman, no one could ever be certain how Joe would have reacted to other very hard punchers who he never fought. We can't 'deem' Joe fights he never had. When people say Frazier would have beaten Lyle, Shavers, Mac Foster, or whoever, they should think about a few upset fights, namely, among others, Tyson and Douglas, Louis and Schmelling, Ali and Norton, Ali and Spinks, and Frazier and Foreman (# 1). Nothing can be taken for granted, especially a fight involving a vulnerable jaw and a big hitter. Hey Fan, where are you? I wonder whether you are buying time and down at the library trying to find them. |

I own the following Hauser books. Muhammad Ali in Perspective, Muhammad Ali His Life and Times and The Lost Legacy of Muhammad Ali. Lost Legacy is basically a Thomas Hauser love fest to Muhammad Ali. Noam please read this book and reply. His Life and Times is a good read. Perspective asserts that Ali might be the most loved man in the world. It's safe to say hauser and Ali were fast friends as they spent thousands of hours together and Hauser remarks about his respects and admiration for Ali. It's safe to say he wouldn't be Frazier's biggest fan. |

Never read no Ali books. Where we are from we burned books to keep warm in the winter. One time there was a huge snowdrift outside the Spectrum. I hear a dude yelling and me and my buddies went over there. The dude is sitting in the snow covered in blood. I says What the * happened to you. He said he yelled at Bernard and Bernard beat his ass. That's street cred. When you watch Bernard your watching a real warrior who earned his stripes in the streets. The man owns Philly and no one punks him. |

Don't listen to Stallion, I was national hero til he came along. He get lucky once twenty years ago, lucky punches after I picked him up like rag doll and beat em to bloody pulp whole fight. Then everyone, my people, chant his name. HE THINK PHILLY IS TOUGH. HE AND BERNARD NO LAST ONE HOUR IN MOSCOW STREETS! |

Thanks, Fan, but instead of just making the accusation, please provide some accompanying quotes and facts as to why Mr Hauser is biased. At the moment you make the stark accusation but furnish no proof. I must also indicate to you that your prior accusation of bias against Hauser makes no sense as it is flawed in logic. Hauser said that Ali renounced the 'white men are devil' statement in 1984. You tried to discredit what Hauser said by saying that Hauser is biased. Well, Fan, bias has no place in this issue. Either Ali renounced in 1984 or Hauser lied by stating that he did. It's about honesty, not bias. So, if you chose not to believe Hauser on that issue, you have to accuse him of lying. Not bias. Not loving Ali. But brazenly publishing a lie to the boxing world ! The other thing I can't understand is that although you obviously don't like Hauser and consider him biased and a liar and unreliable, you would have us believe that you've kept buying his books. Not once. Not twice. but THREE times. If I don't like an author after the first book, I don't bother buying his books again. I'd venture that everyone bar you Fan are the same. What was it that Lincoln said? You can fool some of the people some of the time, some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time. Fan's trying to prove Abe wrong. | 7/31/05 12:20:33 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y|mooseygoop@aol.com|10|Mass'You mention Sonny Banks knocking down Ali. Did you know the poor fellow died after a bout with Leotis Martin? I think Banks was 24 or so. Leotis was the fighter that lost to Jimmy Ellis in the elimination tourney in late 1960's. Martin also knocked out Sonny Liston for several minutes in a live TV bout back then too. I think Martin had to retire because of detached retina shortly later.P S the knocked downs of Ali by Banks and Cooper weren't the same...The Banks knock down was a flash knock down, the Knock down by Cooper was a real damaging shot and Ali didn't know where he was even when he was sitting on his stool for awhile.| 7/31/05 03:21:43 AM|Massimo|Roma|4|10|Ed--I knew Sonny Banks died in the ring at 24 after a war with Leotis Martin; one of the many tragedies in the ring. Rino Tommasi, the Italian Howard Crossell thinks that "it's true that many people dies for boxing, but boxing saves even a bigger number of persons from the streets". I don't know if this is true, it's a difficult issue, but maybe it's worth a riflessione.| 7/31/05 03:28:17 AM|Ciro Bonocore|Napoli, viva Ammadona, eh!|www.SanGennaro.com|10|Don't listen to the Stallion and to Ivano Drago, they both wouldn't last 10 minutes in Napoli's street. A Napoli te scippano un core, aggi capito guaglio' ! (Napolitan Slang). | 7/31/05 04:45:44 AM|Howard C.|Louisville|howardc@louisville|10|Steve: as I get older I'm getting crankier, and as my hiatus hernia plays up more, I get crankier still more, and one of the symptoms of the medication I take when my hiatus hernia plays up makes me even MORE crankier. You would be safe in assuming that my hiatus hernia was playing up immediately before the post that seems to have attracted your attention.Massimo: all of Ali's knockdowns were flash knockdowns. He got up quickly and recovered quickly (with the exception of the Cooper one). And think about this....I think I'm right in saying that Ali never got knocked down again after the one against Frasier in fight one 1971. That's right, he fought Frasier twice more, Foreman, Norton x 3, Shavers, Lyle, Holmes, Berbick and many more, and none of them ever knocked him down. Some of you guys mightn't like him, but guess what. His jaw was the best of all time. He had one helluva jaw.| 7/31/05 06:56:19 AM|Massimo|Roma|4|10|Howard--No one of us ever realized that so far, but maybe Enrico Cooper is the hardest puncher in heavyweight history! But in reality I think that Clay's jaw was for some reason not as good as Ali's joe.| 7/31/05 12:48:31 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA|RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|10|HELLO KENT, I HAVEN'T BEEN AROUND A COMPUTER SINCE MY LAST POST, YOUR WINGNUT LIST WAS UP TO 6 I BELIEVE, WE WERE ON THE SUBJECT OF BONAVENTA, ANOTHER FIGHTER WHOM WOULD HAVE HAD A TITLE IN ANOTHER ERA, BUT LIKE QUARRY, CHUVALO, RON LYLE, ERNIE SHAVERS, ZORA FOLLEY, EDDIE MACHEN, AND CLEVELAND WILLIAMS AMONG OTHERS THAT JUST FELL SHORT, I COULD SEE WHY OSCAR WAR RATED SO HIGHLY| 7/31/05 05:10:13 PM|Noam|same|10|Howard and Massimo - I have just been rereading Thomas Hauser's book (Muhamad Ali - his Life and Times). In it Ali says that the young Muhammad who beat Folley and Williams would have beaten the older Ali who came back after being stripped of the title.Angelo Dundee agreed with Ali and even went further and said that Ali was never allowed to peak in his ability. Dundee believes that Ali was robbed of that chance because he was stopped from boxing for those three years. Interesting view.

Fan - on rereading the above book I am even more confused than ever at your accusation that Hauser is so biased that his work can't be accepted (or something to that effect). Take the chapter on the Thrilla in Manilla, for example. For that chapter Hauser interviewed Dundee and Eddie Futch (opposing trainers). He included their comments verbatim and in the first person. There was no leeway in doing that to misquote anyone or take them out of context as your accusation of bias suggests. The words spoke for themselves without influencing commentary from the author. Hauser also included verbatim interviews with Ali and Frazier. Everything they said was included first person with no commentary from the author. What could be fairer and more accurate than that?

One other thing, Fan. You haven't included Brutal Artistry in the list of Hauser books you say you have. I'm therefore at a loss as to how you can write it off, sight unseen, as biased.

I'm only asking these questions as I'm trying to understand your mindset in resenting and disliking Ali for brash things he said some 40 years ago as an immature young man in controversial and confronting times when passions on all sides got out of hand.

Given that Ali has done so many good things for so many people regardless of religion or colour, I can't understand the enduring and abiding resentment of him for something said nearly half a century ago.

[7/31/05 07:21:56 PM] Howard C. (Louisville) | howardc@louisville.com | 10 MASIMMO: how many times was Ali knocked down and by whom. I know he went down against Banks. Ali said it was a slip but it's in the books as a knockdown. The next time he went down was against Cooper and the last time was against Frazier. By my count Ali went down three times in his career. Am I missing any?

[8/1/05 01:01:33 AM] Ed (Cicero N Y) | mooeygoop@aol.com | 10 I think Chuck Wepner scored a knock down over Ali. May have stepped on Ali's foot and hit him but it counted as a knockdown.

Mass, Didnt Wepner fight Andre the Giant? It would have been a $1000 for on pay per view!

Noam, One of the things I loved about Ali was his willingness to exercise his free speech rights. He use to get the best of the "educated" media types that tried to put him down (what did Ali have a 8th grade education?) . He also was denied his constititional rights for not being allowed to ply his trade for 3 years. He was never given due process of law.

[8/1/05 02:56:33 AM] Massimo (Roma) | 4 | 10 Noam- Muhammad Ali' looked superhuman good between 1964 and 1967 (and probably was at his best and the greatest of all time) but I think he was never fully tested. Let's take a look at his title defenses: Carlo Liston was not a real fight (I don't think Carlo took a dive, I think that as soon as he realized he was going to be humiliated he quit), Floyd Patterson injured his back in the first round, Enrico Cooper got cut as always, Brian London was already beaten before the fight started, Cleveland Williams had several bullets in his body etc. What a shame that Ali' in his prime was never tested by devils like Foreman, Frazier, Shavers, Lyle or Norton! It would have been great watching Ali' at his very best against those dudes! I think Ali' in his prime would have performed better than he actually did against all of these guys with the possible exception of Giorgio. Could Ali' have beaten Giorgio Eduardo in, say, Roma, without the rope a dope just by floating like a butterfly and stinging like a bee? It would have been a complete different fight that the one we saw in Kinshasa. I agree that Ali' would have peaked in 1968 or 1969. Ali' went down in the Wepner fight (in the ninth round) but he was not hurt at all. All Wepner achieved was pissing Ali' off (it's Slang for "getting Ali' angry"). Yes, Wepner fought "The Midget" in 1976. Tragically, I have never seen that fight, the biggest event in the history of sport. The comparison between Wepner's and Andre's heights would have been interesting. But who knows what kind of lifts was "The Midget" wearing in his boots? How wilt would have been "The Midget" barefooted? Andre's height listings are all over the place, I have heard anything from 6'5" to 7'7". I have started thinking his true height was around 5'9". But this is like the secret of COKE, WE'LL NEVER KNOW, that's the legend of Andre'!!

Wepner got back to his corner, he triumphantly boasted to his trainer that he'd knocked Ali down. The trainer answered, "yeah, but I think he's pissed." Okay, so Wepner knocked him down in the 9th. Frazier knocked Ali down. Cooper knocked him down. I can't remember any others. Oh, Banks knocked him down. So that's four. Are there any others? By my count, Frazier was knocked down 11 times - once against Bruce, twice against Bonavena, six times against Foreman in the first fight, and twice against Foreman in the second one.

By my count, Frazier was knocked down 11 times - once against Bruce, twice against Bonavena, six times against Foreman in the first fight, and twice against Foreman in the second one.

Howard C. - you missed the Wepner one.

Yes Ali officially hit the deck 4 times Wepner's should not have counted, for he stepped on his foot and then shoved him down, Jerry Quarry hit the deck 7 times, which is just about how many for Oscar Bonavena, Quarry was knocked down by Roy Crear in San Antonio, Al "Memphis" Jones (TWICE IN SAN FRANCISCO) In the Draw with Floyd Patterson (MORE LIKE A SLIP) George Chuvalo, Joe Alexander, and Joe Frazier (2nd bout) of course Jerry'd knocked his opponents down to more than a 10-1 ratio, which is one of the best.

George Chuvalo, Joe Alexander, and Joe Frazier (2nd bout) of course Jerry'd knocked his opponents down to more than a 10-1 ratio, which is one of the best.

Hey Jimmy D., getting knocked down in your career doesn't mean a thing if you get up and win. Any fighter can get knocked down.

Hey Jimmy D., getting knocked down in your career doesn't mean a thing if you get up and win. Any fighter can get knocked down.

Before anyone starts screaming draft dodger, know that President Ford did away with mandatory registration for males when they turn eighteen and this was in effect for about three years when it was reinstated by President Jimmy Carter in response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan and the hostage crisis in Iran.
The law says any male born after 1/1/60 has to register for a possible draft. I was born before this date and I turned eighteen when Ford's restriction was on after the Vietnam war. Believe me, I checked and I made sure I didn't have to register because if I had too, I would have done so. It was perfectly legal for me not to.

What do you think are the criterion for the toughest fighter of the 1965 to 1975 era? Not the best fighter, just the toughest? I'll wait for an answer. Without answering my own question, I'd list Jerry Quarry, Eddie Machen, Frazier, Ali, Chuvallo.

The toughest fighter between 1965-1975 was George Chuvalo.

It was perfectly legal for me not to.

Big Steve; Well, it's a small world, so, we do know each other. I would like everyone who knows Steve by way of posting on this site that Steve is really a (STAND-UP GUY) and that all the negative things that I said in my posts are not true at all. From talking with Steve at our weekly Veterans group meetings I know this, Steve served his tour of duty in Nam with the (FIRST CAV.) as a (L.R.R.P.) aka (LURP'S) aka (Ranger's), Steve is the real-deal a real, (Shooter and Looter) and i would trust him with my life.  Steve, see you at tomorrows meeting...........,

| 8/1/05 04:34:08 PM | Steve | nj | na | 10 |

Kent, I hope you didn't misinterpret my post as saying you where a draft dodger or a pompious sports writer. Vietnam was a fight you had nothing to do with. I was referring to Howard Cosell as a loud mouth, arrogant guy who ran his mouth alot about things he had little knowledge of, like boxing and football. I expect you to disagree with me. You usually do. This does not diminish my respect for you, or your knowledge of boxing. MAYBE Pro football, after all, your from the west coast, and clearly are biased against the Eagles, whom everyone in the country seems to hate! Am I coming off as paranoid?

| 8/1/05 04:39:40 PM | Noam | same | same | 10 |

Gee Fan, you're a hard guy to get some sense from. It's pretty easy to make the allegation against Hauser and his books, but it's much harder to prove it. When put to the test, you've got nothing to say. No proof at all. Oh well. I have some interesting statistics (and hopefully my maths is good). In his career Joe Frazier fought 37 fights, 214 rounds (or 10.7 hours). Ali fought 61 fights, 546 rounds (or 27.3 hours). Frazier was knocked down 11 times, which equates to a knockdown every 19.45 rounds or every 3.3 fight. Ali was knocked down 4 times, which equates to a knockdown every 136.5 rounds or every 15.25 fights. None of the 11 knockdowns Frazier suffered were contested. Two of the 4 knockdowns Ali had were contested (the 'slip' against Banks and the one against Wepner). Ali's statistics are truly remarkable. He sustained a broken jaw early against Norton and never went down. He fought monster punchers like Foreman, Shavers, Lyle, and also Mac Foster, and wasn't knocked down. If you say that the Wepner knockdown doesn't count, then realize that in his 'second' career, Ali recorded only one knockdown (against Frazier fight 1). He therefore had one knockdown in 32 fights. In the last 29 fights he fought there were no knockdowns (if discounting the Wepner one). He fought 352 rounds leading to retirement without being knocked off his feet. Just to repeat: Frazier was knocked down every 19.45 rounds on average; Ali every 136.5 rounds. Now, if we're going to say that Frazier was great, and wow he had courage, then what does that make Muhammad, given he fought ALL the monsters of his era. If you say that the Wepner knockdown doesn't count, then realize that in his 'second' career, Ali recorded only one knockdown (against Frazier fight 1). He therefore had one knockdown in 32 fights. In the last 29 fights he fought there were no knockdowns (if discounting the Wepner one). He fought 352 rounds leading to retirement without being knocked off his feet. Just to repeat: Frazier was knocked down every 19.45 rounds on average; Ali every 136.5 rounds. Now, if we're going to say that Frazier was great, and wow he had courage, then what does that make Muhammad, given he fought ALL the monsters of his era. If you say that the Wepner knockdown doesn't count, then realize that in his 'second' career, Ali recorded only one knockdown (against Frazier fight 1). He therefore had one knockdown in 32 fights. In the last 29 fights he fought there were no knockdowns (if discounting the Wepner one). He fought 352 rounds leading to retirement without being knocked off his feet. Just to repeat: Frazier was knocked down every 19.45 rounds on average; Ali every 136.5 rounds. Now, if we're going to say that Frazier was great, and wow he had courage, then what does that make Muhammad, given he fought ALL the monsters of his era. If you say that the Wepner knockdown doesn't count, then realize that in his 'second' career, Ali recorded only one knockdown (against Frazier fight 1). He therefore had one knockdown in 32 fights. In the last 29 fights he fought there were no knockdowns (if discounting the Wepner one). He fought 352 rounds leading to retirement without being knocked off his feet. Just to repeat: Frazier was knocked down every 19.45 rounds on average; Ali every 136.5 rounds. Now, if we're going to say that Frazier was great, and wow he had courage, then what does that make Muhammad, given he fought ALL the monsters of his era. If you say that the Wepner knockdown doesn't count, then realize that in his 'second' career, Ali recorded only one knockdown (against Frazier fight 1). He therefore had one knockdown in 32 fights. In the last 29 fights he fought there were no knockdowns (if discounting the Wepner one). He fought 352 rounds leading to retirement without being knocked off his feet.

| 8/1/05 05:16:41 PM | Pete | Cleveland | N/A | 10 |

Noam, don't you get bored answering Fan and Kent. Let them have there fantasies, They are old timers. They feed of each other. Lets move on. Noam, how do you rate Sonny Liston?

| 8/1/05 06:24:10 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 |

The book should be on regular shelves in the next two weeks.

| 8/1/05 06:32:33 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 |

The book should be on regular shelves in the next two weeks.

| 8/1/05 06:49:11 PM | steve | NJ | NA | 10 |

Noam, what the heck are you, some kind of college statistician who can do math and even spell and do correct grammar and stuff? Liston, dude, are you trying to intimidate me? Well, you have!!! Now, give me the courtesy of listening to this post. I asked for a criterion on what makes the toughest fighter. Please get off your running gun fight about Frazier ducking opponents. If I decide I want to spend time reading Houser, I most probably will. Can't you let go of that subject long enough to actually contribute to this site by answering a legitimate boxing history question?

| 8/1/05 07:06:26 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 |

Steve, don't let Noam
bother you. He might be a lawyer with arguing tactics, however I don't think he means any harm. |

Steve, NJ, NJ, NA, 10 |

Fan, Noam doesn't bother me at all. I'm just trying to steer this conversation in a more interesting direction. I'd rather hear more about how the Quarry family is doing and handling all their recent family losses. |

Steve, NJ, NJ, NA, 10 |

Fan, Noam, I think even Kent is getting numb and shell shocked over this one subject, you know, about Frazier ducking opponents. I'm at the point where I'd rather post about commodities. Corn and wheat futures. |

Fan, you are being more than a little dishonest about Hauser. You challenged someone to show where Ali revoked his 'all white men are devils' comment nearly half a century ago. I provided a credible quote in a published book (Brutal Artistry) acclaimed by newspapers and boxing journals, but you went back on your word. I invited you to discredit Hauser's basic premise that you judge fighters by the hard fights they've won, not the easy fights they've won. You couldn't answer that challenge. You hid and said nothing.
failed dismally.Steve - actually, if you read and digest the statistics I posted, you will find them insightful and extremely relevant. It demonstrates the greatest jaw that ever boxed and how that boast is proved as empirical facts. If you want to learn nothing, then Fan’s your man. He has the words but no substance and no answers. If you want to discuss boxing looking at different angles, and supported by facts, then read me and some of the others here.By the way, the statistics I posted were about stamina, longevity, and durability. I didn't mention the 'd' word, but if you drew from those statistics that Ali fought monsters who Frazier didn't, you can't blame me.Someone hit me in the head with an axe. The Dead Parroters stopped us using the 'd' word. They took it out of boxing's dictionary. Now they want to ban statistics out as well !!!!!  :) |

8/1/05 09:48:15 PM|steve |nj||na|||10|Hey Angelo, Ali once said, and I quote,"It's hell being black in America".you know what?It was hell being a second generation Irishman, or Italian, who got drafted, or enlisted, against their immigrant parents wishes, and went to Vietnam.

8/1/05 10:14:37 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Sorry Steve, for some reason I thought Jimmy D brought up the toughness question. I still don't know who is toughest for that period although Machen would be more likely to listed in the 1955 to 65 list. Anybody who can hang tough like he did verses Liston has to have been plenty tough.Funny, the editor from Eastside asked for a new article this week as it has been a slow week for boxing and I was going to do one on the Frazier subject, like I said. But I am sick of the subject at the moment.What do you want to bet that Noam won’t let go of it even for a moment?

8/1/05 10:24:08 PM|Steve|NJ||NA|||10|KENT, just write the damn article! It's what you do best! I’d like to read it! Stop being so lazy and worried about other peoples opinions. Your pieces on that site have been professional and well balanced.

8/1/05 10:32:53 PM|Steve|nj||na|||10|Kent, one of my sons is in college, with a journalism major. He keeps writing pieces, then he reads them the next day, and tears them up! I keep telling him to send them out. YOU CAN'T GET ANYWHERE IF YOU DON'T TRY.

8/1/05 11:12:08 PM|steve |NJ||NA|||10|Noam, your a very interesting poster. I apologize for my horrible spelling and grammar. I'm obviously not as well educated as you, and ah, duh, I can barely type. Please don't start with the statistics. Post about Quarry. I get the feeling your not as old as me. So have you ever seen any of his fights on film? Now that's exciting! Give me your opinion on Quarry vs Thad Spencer.

8/1/05 11:21:09 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Okay, I get the message. You guys don't like Ali because, brashly, nearly half a century ago, he uttered the words, "All whitemen are devils". Let's look at your resentment by applying the most used and accurate trueism of all time: ACTIONS SPEAK LOUDER THAN WORDS.So let's look at Ali's ACTIONS. Has anyone EVER accused Ali of refusing to sign an autograph for a white person? No, never. In 1974 Ali was named 'Fighter of the Year' by the Ring magazine, and 'Sportsman of the Year' by Sports Illustrated. These awards aren't given to racists.Ali travelled to Beirut in 1985 and negotiated the freedom of four American hostages. White guys among them.In November 1990 Ali travelled to Iraq and negotiated the release of 15 American hostages, mostly whites. He was there the same month his father died. Ali outstayed the medication he had for his Parkinson's sickness and placed his own health at risk by not taking it when he stayed overseas negotiating the releases.Ali helps blacks, too. When Frazier's close friend Ken Norton...
woke from a coma in a Californian hospital, the first face he saw was Ali, who was sitting silently beside the bed after flying in to visit. Frazier was still at home on the east coast. When Michael Watson suffered brain damage in a fight against Chris Eubank, Ali flew over to Britain to visit Watson and comfort his family. Of course, the RECENT good acts of Ali to whites and blacks far outweigh the ANCIENT bad words uttered nearly half a century ago. And sensible, right thinking people have long forgiven him. Ali was chosen to light the flame at the Atlanta Olympics as a sign of appreciation for all the good things he's done. In 1988 the world praised Ali when he received a lifetime achievement award from the United Nations. In 1999 Sports Illustrated named Ali as the 'Sportsman of the Century'. The sporting and political worlds got together to celebrate Ali's life of achievement.

All those awards for a racist who hates whites? Gimme a break. I was told many years ago that some rednecks hate Ali because he didn't conform to the expected standards of a 1960s black athlete: submissively respectful, apologetically subservient, and (most importantly) quiet and humble. Which brings me to the real reason. Ali haters don't want to admit that it's because he didn't act and speak like they wanted, so they try to take the high moral ground by pretending that it's because he made the 'whites are devils' comment. Well, haters, that was said nearly a half a century ago. Since then, RECENT ACTIONS HAVE SPOKEN LOUDER THAN ANCIENT WORDS.

And as Ali himself said to acclaimed writer Thomas Hauser (Brutal Artistry), "When I was young I followed a teaching that disrespected other people and said that white people were 'devils'. I was wrong. Colour doesn't make a man a devil. It's the heart and soul and mind that count."

Kent, when you write your long awaited article on Frazier, you have my permission to use the statistics I compiled comparing him to Ali.

| 8/1/05 11:29:57 PM | Steve | nj | | | | | 10 | Hey guys, don't listen to what Les say's about me. He is a for real P.A.L., EX heavyweight fighter. He just won't stop bringing that big ass knife to our group meetings. He's become my best friend in the VA groups, but he even scares me, for a ground pounder. I think I could have managed him into a decent pro fighter. |
| 8/2/05 12:26:04 AM | Steve | nj | na | 10 | Noam, your missing my point. The good deeds he supposedly did after the insanity of the sixties does not erase or negate his acts or very public words against us. I place him close to Jane Fonda (may she rot in hell)! Vietnam was mishandled by the powers that existed at the time. My men, black and white, were scrambling for our asses to stay alive. We heard about Bobby Kennedy, and Malcom X getting killed back here in the world. We knew we were on our own. We fought for each other, just to survive. We didn't need to hear about Ali's big mouth deriding us. When I was flying home, our flight was diverted from Oakland to Fort Lewis, Wash., because of anti war riots. Ali should have kept his big mouth shut about things he lacked the intellectual capacity to fully comprehend. We sure could have used a little of the support you patriots are heaping on the troops in Iraq. |
| 8/2/05 12:31:51 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Hi Steve, I'll get back to you about Spencer v Quarry. You're younger than you and haven't seen that fight. Do me a favour. Tell me what you thought about the following fights: Frazier v Spencer; Frazier v Patterson; Frazier v Mac Foster; Frazier v Liston; Frazier v Mildenburger; Frazier v Cooper; Frazier v Shavers; Frazier v Lyle; Frazier v Norton. Perhaps Hans Christian Appel can write some imaginary endings for those fights. |
| 8/2/05 12:41:11 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Hey Steve, yes I can understand that you feel strongly and have a right to. However, what he said were words uttered half a century ago and in 1984 he retracted them and admitted he was wrong. He's certainly done more good than harm since then. You want to give him the death sentence for what, words? You don't want to accept his admission he was wrong. You don't want to acknowledge that he has tried to do the right thing in actions since then. I respect as much as anyone what... you went through, but you shouldn't hate forever someone who has tried so hard to redeem himself. There's far worse people out there for you to waste your time hating. Anyway, I believe that you are genuine in stating your opinion. I don't accept that of Fan, who is a fake, and Hans Christian Appel, who is a wannabe. In your heart of hearts I'm sure you realize that, too.

8/2/05 02:10:22 AM|Steve|nj||na||10|Noam,your absolutely correct about hatred. It will destroy anyone who can't let it go. I didn't mean to imply that I still hate Ali. Make no mistake, I do believe he was the greatest prize fighter of all time! He never did me any real harm. I sometimes get carried away with my anger. I guess I just need to blame somebody. On the last day of my life, I'll be thinking about that bad place. I'll have a lot of explaining to do when I meet my maker. Ali probably will too.

8/2/05 02:29:53 AM|Noam|same||same||10|Steve, I'm not blaming you for anything. There weren't a lot of rational things happening in the era when you fought in Vietnam. I can't criticize you for anything; all I can do is try and balance your view with facts. That's what I've tried to do.

Frazier has played the race card, too, and he did it recently. With his daughter as his lawyer, Frazier sued some 450 home owners from a mostly white neighbourhood of Hundred Acre Woods for fraud.

8/2/05 03:41:35 AM|Steve|nj||na||10|Noam, I'm ashamed to say I'd forgotten about that land deal. It was in all the Philly newspapers. I admit Joe's not the same guy he used to be. He's apparently a very sick man now with diabetes, high blood pressure, and delusions of grandeur. He's also pretty damn punch drunk. Those three fights with Ali didn't do either one of them any good. Again I say, getting punched in the face is not a good way to make a living. If you really want to fight that bad, join the Army, become a Ranger. Of course, you could get shot. However, I think I'd prefer that to the kind of slow death Ali and Frazier are suffering. At least I'm still in command of my mental faculties, well, sort of.

8/2/05 04:17:11 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|It might shock and amaze ya, but Muhammad Ali', the guy who fought everyone with the exceptions of Andre' "The Midget" Rousimoff and Wilton Norman Chamberlain (a basketball player back in the 60's) said that Duckin' Joe Frazier was his toughest opponent. Like ( "as" would also work well) I said, I admit I'm a bit of a Frazier fan. I like his fights, his power and his relentless style. His resume his far behind Ali's, but when I watch his best fights I can't help rating him as "A GREAT FIGHTER". I think if Joe Frazier had never become a boxer boxing fans would have lost ALOT !!!!!!!!

8/2/05 04:19:52 AM|Noam|same||same||10|Actually, Steve, if you want to be punched in the face, and shot at and abused, spat at, and maybe even stabbed... with a blood filled syringe, join the police department. The way things are, you don't have to go to Iraq or back in time to Vietnam, to be targeted. It's happening here. At least with Ali and Frazier, apart from punching each other, their only insult to society was words. That's my point. They're only words. Actions mean more. Would you trust Ali or Frazier to mind your children? Of course you would. So what's the big deal about what Ali said nearly half a century ago. Ali was young and brash when he said it. Frazier was sick and perhaps impoverished when he played the race card. Same thing, different reasons and times. In the end, it doesn't matter. They are basically good people, who are flawed. Just like us. But when it REALLY counts, we'd all be on the same side....you, me, Frazier, Ali, Fan, and even Kent. At least I hope so.

8/2/05 04:52:40 AM|Steve|nj||na||||10|Noam, listen up, young Hero, I agree with you. The Police, and Fire fighters, are the real civilian hero's, as they have always been in my book. As far as the military, I was also an Army drill instructor, and I can tell you, the Rangers are the best conventional forces we have.

8/2/05 05:03:12 AM|steve |nj||na||||10|Noam, yeah, all the people on this site are basically good, decent people. That's why the civilized disagreements are so much fun.

8/2/05 05:13:00 AM|Massimo |Roma||4||||10|I have seen the highlights of the Quarry-Spencer fight and it was one of Jerry's best fights. He knocked Spencer down twice, the first time with one of the best left hooks I have ever seen!

8/2/05 09:46:02 AM|Fan|USA||n/a|||10|I will attempt to explain why "mere words", spoken long ago, continue to offend some of us so deeply. Jane Fonda never killed any Americans. However, she emboldened those who did, and was properly villified for it. (Incidentally, she has apologized, repeatedly and quite publicly, for her misdeeds. We are free to accept or reject her new position. I choose to reject it as much too little much too late.)

Ali never conspired against any police officers. However, either foolishly or maliciously, he emboldened those which did. If you lived through those times or are a student of unrevised history, you would understand how offensive Ali's actions were. Particularly to members of law enforcement. Judging from the number of posters on this site of boxing fans who witnessed it, his repudiation of those people, if it happened, was hardly public. He therefore still owes a profound and public apology to (among others) every police officer, black and white, in America, particularly those who served at the time Ali's "mere words" endangered them, to any degree.

It is obvious that the "mere words" of public figures can be quite powerful. Anyone who professes to support and respect our police would, it seems to me, expect that Ali would have performed a public service by shouting such a profound change of heart from the rooftops, and encourage all people to back the Thin Blue Line. He didn't.

Perhaps this gives some insight into the perspective of some of us "old" guys.

8/2/05 01:52:58 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca|||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|I knew Noam couldn't stop talking about and finding negative things to say about Frazier.

"Find the Dirt on Frazier," is a one topic warrior. I just saw Joe Louis verses Buddy Baer, all 6'6" 250 pounds of him, both fights on ESPN Classic. Baer didn't have great boxing skills but he was very strong and he drewed the 200 pound Louis. Louis dominated Baer except for a moment in the first round when Baer caught Louis with a tremendous right hand and left hook combination that drove Louis down and through the ropes. Louis ended up knocking Baer down 3 times in the seventh round but he didn't win this first fight by knockout because Baer's corner ran into the ring to rescue their fighter and the fight ended up a disqualification.

Louis destroyed Baer in one round in the rematch and although Buddy Baer didn't have the skills of say the Klitschko brothers, Louis' fights with Baer shows that Joe was strong enough to hurt someone much bigger than himself and he could hurt the Klitschko brothers, especially Wladimir.

I also think Louis had the skills to actually beat both Klitschko brothers.

I had another on going argument on a another site where my opponents said someone like Louis was not strong enough to hurt the big heavyweights of today, that he was just too small. Well the fact that Joe dominated and hurt B. Baer, as well as Abe Simon, about the same size as Buddy Baer, and Joe also dominated Primo Carnera, the same height as the other two but heavier, shows that Joe could hurt today's fighters.

Of course Noam will start arguing that Joe couldn't hurt today's bigger fighters because he will see the first name Joe and think I am talking about Frazier, not Louis as Frazier is all Noam can talk about.

I have the first Louis-Baer fight and I think Buddy did a nice job in this fight. Joe Louis dominated most of the fight but Buddy managed to hurt him badly in the first round and even threw a bunch of good punches a few rounds later. I have no doubt Joe Louis would have beaten Wladimir Klitschko 9 out of 10 times, but I am not sure about Vitali. Vitali is still unbeaten in my book (he actually lost a couple of fights, but not in my book) so we still don't know exactly how good he is.

I think that Joe Louis would cream EVERY single heavyweight fighting right now. Joe Louis had balance and technique that these big guys just don't have. Joe Louis was a superior athlete who could do it all in the ring. Klitschko wouldn't have a prayer against Joe Louis.

I glad to see that we are moving on. Personally speaking I was getting tired of this high tech lynching of Ali and Noam by Kent and Fan.

Fan - you haven't debated anything. In fact, all you do is make some stark accusation and then run. When called to provide proof, you hide. And when pressed again to produce substantiation, you say that you're done "debating" that subject (and Hans Christian Kent gives you a pat on the head).

There's a big difference between Fonda and Ali. Fonda became Hanoi Jane because she went over to Vietnam to support the enemy. Ali didn't. And since then Ali has spent his life helping people and getting (mostly white) hostages released - 19 in total. Fan's abiding hatred runs too deep to take that into account. Forest Ward would be proud if he and Fan weren't one of the same.

Poor old Fan is caught in a 1960s mindset. Ali didn't conform to white man Fan's standards for a black athlete and Fan will never forgive him for that. To hide his racism, he wraps his hatred in the high moral ground seeking excuse that Ali said (half a century ago) that "white men are devils". It doesn't matter to Fan that Ali retracted that statement in 1984 and many times since. Recent good actions count less with Fan than anciently spoken bad words. Credible published retractions by an acclaimed author doesn't hold water for Fan because he needs a reason to justify his hate. But Fan treats Frazier differently, given that old Joe played the race card as recently as 18 months ago.

This was the editorial in the Bucks County Courier Times on 3 October 2003: "RACISM CHARGE DOESN'T HOLD WATER. We don't know what Smokin' Joe's been smokin'. But the former heavyweight champ and his supporters are mired in some really foggy thinking. We refer to charges of racism growing out of the ex-champ's legal efforts to recover money he says he lost to swindlers...."

This is not finding dirt, Kent, this is balancing the issue by demonstrating that Frazier played the race card (last year), against Ali doing it nearly half a century ago. Pretend journalist Kent holds Ali to account for something he said nearly 50 years ago, but calls it muck racking if something is mentioned that Joe did 18 months ago. Balance and fairness? Not with Kent.

The only arguments that Fan and Kent can muster are these: Fan
"I lived through that period and I can't tell you who I am but I can assure you that the Quarrys know me and I'm an expert", and Kent "How many fights have you been to?" (to which the gangster's mole replied: "More than you, upstart").Well, I've done debating that subject because I've proved my point. Kent - I noticed you haven't picked holes in the very telling statistics I provided on Ali and Frazier. Did you detect any errors? I would appreciate knowing if you did as I want to make sure the list is accurate, especially if you are going to quote them in the testimonial you are writing on Frazier. |8/2/05 05:14:05 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|10|I'm sure the Frazier debate will recycle, especially if Kent publishes that article on East Side Boxing. For me, the only debate was about whether Frazier "should have" fought some of the big hitters. Yes, he "should have" if a historic legacy of greatness was to be untouchable. No, he "shouldn't have" if the guy using Forrest Ward's name is to be believed, because it would have been too risky to Frazier's record and his health. Both the point and counterpoint are legitimate. Now, for those of us who have tried to make the debate Frazier vs. Ali, there simply isn't a debate to be had. Ali beat him two of three times, including the only KO in the trilogy, and Ali's career is just so far and above Frazier's, there's nothing to argue. As for Joe Louis, he beats all of today's Top Five fighters in a one year period, basically beating one every other month. Guys like Holmes, Ali, Louis---they would laugh at today's silly notion of having to wait a year and a half between fights. |8/2/05 06:09:34 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same||9|I agree with Angelo's general assessment on Frazier. Sure, it's easy to argue that Frazier should have boxed some guys he didn't fight. But, again, it just doesn't detract from his ability overall.I will debate that Ali did legitimately beat Joe twice, theirs was a tremendous matchup that gave Ali alot more than he wanted.But Ali clearly had the better career, the much better list of opponents.If you are going to razz today's fighters for Joe Louis, I'd like you to include Lennox Lewis and Vitali Klitschko in the Brown Bomber's 'Bum of the Month' tour thru today's heavies...Noam, you remain priceless. Jane Fonda went to Hanoi because she midguidedly believed he celebrity could aid the cause of peace. She didn't hate her country or want to aid America's enemies, no matter what your Archie Bunker handbook says. She was a famous dopey kid with too much money. Now she's much older and has apologized profusely for it, which is all a wiser person can do.At least give her the credit for seeing Vietnam for the bullshit it was, just as this war is in Iraq.If it would end all the crap there, I'd send her over to Baghdad for photos today.|8/2/05 06:40:36 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|I agree that most of the top contenders today ain't good but what makes you guys think (or what does make you guys think, or gets you guys thinking etc.) that Vitali Klitschko is a bum? I realize that he has a clumsy style but he has been beating guys like Corrie Sanders, Danny Williams (not a monster, but a good fighter) and many others. He is strong! His style is clumsy but very effective!! I know that Joe Louis was an all time great and probably would have beaten Vitali most of the times (or time), but Vitali Klitschko is a damn good heavyweight. He got size, power and heart (he proved it in the Lewis fight). I'm so damn tired and I gotta go to my 6'2" 1/2 long bed. Ciao.|8/2/05 06:50:30 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Hello Pete, high tech lynching of Ali? I have never said anything about Ali other than he is the greatest heavyweight of all time.I have stayed out of others' assessments of his character and behavior during the 60s and today.Don't think that just because I have defended Frazier's abilities as a fighter that I have been negative towards Ali. It is just not true.|8/2/05 06:54:13 PM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville||9|Slow down Gerry. Where were you when the person calling himself Forrest Ward wanted to push Fonda under a train, wishing her a painful and slow death. I guess it's easier to put the boot in to a 'soft' target like Noam rather than Forrest who Kent looks after. Personally, Gerry. I think Fonda is the lowest form of life in the universe. Did you know that she's about to embark on a magical bus trip to protest the Iraq War? It's a bit late to protest, isn't it? The wars over. Its an insurgency now. The reason she didn't protest earlier when the war was on was because Jane was launching her book. Gotta put commercial needs in front of saving Iraq, I suppose. Prioritize, I say. What's Jane protesting against about Iraq? The fact that its citizens can vote? That women are no longer second class citizens? Bad America, removing a murderous tyrant and installing democracy and rights for women. Gerrys throwing his handbag around in protest.

Noam: I enjoyed your stats. They do tell a story. I did a rough calculation of career rounds fought by a few boxers - Holmes 575 rounds, Ali 546, Louis 429, Patterson 420, Quarry 415, Bonavena 409, Terrell 375, Shavers 364, Ellis 342, Norton 314, Liston 271, Foreman 255, Marciano 241, Lewis 225, Douglas 224, Frasier 214, Bowe 175, Lyle 169. These might not be precise because I did it in a hurry and used Noam's stats for Ali and Frasier. Still, its interesting. Lyle only fought 169 rounds. I guess because most finished early with his big punch. Holmes fought more rounds than Ali. Jerry is right up there in history.

Whilst the other guys were busy, Joe Frasier didn't fight a lot. Boxing was more than just money and celebrity for guys like Holmes and Ali. They loved the sport and couldnt get enough of it. Hey Pete, Kents being sneaky here. He never says bad things about Ali because he lets others do it for him. When the person calling himself Forrest rejoiced in Muhammad's poor health and the fact that Frasier was boasting and taking credit for it, Kent didn't say anything. Yet if anyone says anything about Frasier, Kent jumps on top of them. Its open slather with Kent on Ali, but its mud racking if you post something on Frasier. Kent is sneaky and smooth.

I too have questions when our leaders commit troops in some foreign war thousands of miles away but it still doesn't take the harm, no matter how naively she did it, that Fonda did. She needed to direct her protests at the leaders of our country not the troops. The troops don't set policy, the leaders do. I will say it again here, a lot of the war protesters of the 1960s owe a collective apology to our troops. It is one of the most shameful periods in our history the way the returning troops were treated and Fonda's actions in North Vietnam were along the same lines, shameful.

Fonda opposed the war and actually supported the Vietcong when she went to Hanoi. Clay opposed the war and did not support the NVA. Thats the difference. Is Gerry saying troops should pull out of Iraq. We have tossed its government out and replaced it with a new one, and ruined its infrastructure. We have a duty to stay until we restore order and fix it. Pulling out as Gerry wants would be cowardly.
I totally understand why Ali or a lot of black people did not want to serve in the military in the 1960s as "no Viet Cong ever called them niggers" and they were denied even basic freedoms in many parts of their own country.  I don't have ill will towards anyone and I don't waste time with such nonsense so no one does dirty work for me as I don't do dirty work.  I can't resist a dig at Noam every now and then as he does it to me.  But I don't have any ill feelings towards him or anyone else here.  Howard, since I have never said Ali is anything other than the best heavyweight of all time, then there is no evidence to show that I believe otherwise.  You will just have to believe me when I say I have no bad feelings in my heart for the man.

Gerry from Clevland, I don't give a rat's ass about how young and rich Jane Fonda was! She was savy enough to use her money and Stardom to be a political activist. (I'm using that phrase kindly) She fully understood what she was doing when she posed on that 37MM WEAPON. Maybe you should go over to Iraq, and pose where Saddam's statue used to be? You know, just to make a political statement against all war. Or maybe at the site of the twin trade towers. It would really help out the troops, moral wise. Jane Fonda has in fact gotten older, to bad the guys in my platoon didn't. That woman's apology means nothing to me, or the 58,000 guys who never got to grow up and have families. So every parent who just wanted their 19 year old son to come home, is a reader of the Archie Bunker handbook. Next time you post, baby girl, make sure you know what your talking about!

Howard, you have no idea what is in my heart. Who are you to judge me? Even most of my posts about Frazier have been about his boxing ability. As I remember it, I said Noam likes to dig up dirt about Frazier, otherwise I have not commented on Joe other than boxing. If you notice a while back people were commenting that Joe beat up his girlfriend and I didn't defend or condemn Joe. I just said I don't know if it happened or not as he wasn't convicted of a crime. The same with Ali, I haven't commented on him other than boxing except to say I understand why he didn't want to fight in the military. I would count that as defending Ali's position. It is not my place to make a judgement on him as that was a different time. Jane Fonda is different. She gave aid and comfort to an enemy in war time.

Howard, I just went through all of my posts for the past few months and by far my posts concerning Ali and Frazier have been about boxing only. I have stayed out of any character assesments about either man. I only mentioned Noam's inability to let go of the Frazier subject in saying he digs up dirt on the man and the Ali comment about me understanding his not going into the military is not a dig at Ali but a positive comment. Otherwise others have debated the character of the two men, not me.

Kent, stop carrying on like a dickhead. You allowed comment about Ali's personal life and cruel barbs about his poor health to pass without comment. But when Noam balanced the issue mentioning recent stuff involving Joe, you accused him of mud racking. If you can't be balanced, then shut up. Simple. You kept having your little digs at people in your little asides with Fan. As I remember it, too, you were asked questions by Noam about Frazier but never responded. Stop carrying on like Shirley Temple and get back to talking about boxing. You and Fan are two of a kind.
career 575 rounds and Ali 546. It says a lot about Holmes's defense that he appears undamaged by his long career. Holmes had 73 fights involving bangers like Shavers, Norton, and Cooney. I'd say that all the sparring he did with Ali helped him immensely and it's no coincidence he and Ali have the best jabs ever. I like Holmes a lot and always have. I honestly think he's probably #4 of all time heavyweights.

I think that Sonny Liston had a better jab than Ali', it was much more powerful. Joe Louis's jab was better than Ali's and maybe even Lennox Lewis's. These are my top 6 best jabbers ever. Larry Holmes 3) Joe Louis 4) Lennox Lewis-Ali' 6) George Foreman

On the war/military topic, I've stated before, several times, and I will again now---the men and women (including one of the young Quarry boys who has posted here) who represent our nation in the military are the bravest and best young people we have. They don't make the political decisions---they just put their lives on the line, for too little pay, to protect the U.S. and our interests. I never joined the military---never had to---because a lot of very capable and very courageous men and women have formed a great volunteer army while I and countless others have had the luxury of pursuing other interests. These people deserve to be thanked, not spit on, when they come back from combat. When I see these people arriving back from Iraq at the Airport (I do some work there), I thank them. They're out fighting to protect me and my family, our nation and our friends around the world. They generally go about their work quietly and competently. In a lot of ways, they remind me of our best police and firefighters---two more groups who lay it all on the line everyday and basically aren't respected the way they should be.The amount of rounds Larry Holmes fought, as a younger man in with tigers like Norton and Shavers----and as an older man, taking on Mercer, Holyfield, etc. is amazing. He bridged two generations and even stepped in with young, strong, ambitious Mike Tyson.
though. But we should not have helped him solidify his power by giving him aid to begin with, which the U.S. did. But once someone like him is entrenched, how can you reverse that? Not very easily. But if we didn't give him aid, than he would have gotten more from the Soviets (he got aid from them too, he knew how to work both sides). Ironic in that especially during the Cold War we were willing to back terrible leaders around the world just to keep them from going to the Soviets for support. For those who equate my being critical of the initial military action in Iraq as putting the fine troops down, nothing could be further from the truth. God bless the fine service men and women of the United States military! I am critical of the Bush administration for not being strong enough on protecting veterans after they have served. But the democrats also who are to blame on this. Visit any veterans hospital and ask the staff and the patients if they have everything they need and sadly, the answer is no! W. Bush has done nothing to improve this situation, Clinton did nothing, H.W. Bush did nothing, Reagan did nothing, Carter did nothing, etc.

Is your problem with Noam that he has called attention to Frazier allegedly slapping women around? Why is it okay for people to launch personal attacks against Ali, but the alleged smokin' chick beater gets a free ride from you? I know you're a Philly guy, so keep it real. If one of your own has some baggage, just admit it and move on. I know it was hard for Fraier fans to see him TKOed in Manilla---and it added salt to the wound when his only action after that was getting rocked by Foreman again and the ill-fated comeback against Floyd Cummings---while Ali had another whole career after Manilla---but let's be honest with ourselves here: "Heavyweights of the 70's" starred Ali, while Frazier was an extra or at the most, minor co-star.

You can't be against the war but for removing Saddam from power. The two can't be separated. People who are against the war are admitting that they would like to see Saddam still ruling Iraq. You can't have one without the other. Over, and over and over again, for about a decade, Saddam violated the 1991 agreement to allow weapons inspectors 100% access to his storage facilities or potential storage facilities. He also rewarded the families of terrorist suicide bombers paying bounties. He also gassed thousands of his own citizens, including children. He rattled the sabre and wouldn't allow the weapons inspections he agreed to. In the aftermath of 9-11, Bush would be very irresponsible to ignore this. The U.N. was punchless and also they were not showing regard for U.S. security. As well, U.N. officials were cashing in on weapons for food allotments---an arrangement with the Tehran government (Saddam). If Bush did nothing and Saddam backed terrorists hit us on our soil, or hit our citizens around the globe, Bush would have been guilty of neglecting his first duty---protecting America and Americans. If you are a pacifist who is opposed to war and killing for any reason, I can accept that. But if you say "We don't belong in Iraq, but good thing we removed Saddam from power" it's a ridiculous paradox/oxymoron that the Democratic party was/is guilty of. It cost them the election.

Kent, no I am not a pacifist. I don't support the use of military force unless we are attacked and Iraq did not attack us and there was no indication that they were going to attack us. However, it is a good thing Saddam is gone from power and as I said I don't know how we could have gotten rid of him without force unless we hadn't helped him in the first place but only a complete moron or an evil person would say they would rather have Saddam still in power. Other countries support terrorism such as against Israel and we don't attack them and the so called weapons of mass destruction, a major reason for attacking Iraq, were not found. Don't you think Iraq would have used them against our troops if they still had them? There is no direct connection between Iraq and Al Qaida, the people who attacked us unlike the terrorist training camps in Afghanistan that were directly responsible for 911. However the mission in Iraq must be completed as it has been started and to leave now would cause great harm. I am a democrat but I didn't vote for my party's nominee for president as Kerry and his VP candidate Edwards both voted to give Bush the authority for war but they then voted against certain key supplies the troops needed in the field. That was irresponsible. If I had been a senator, in absence of more information than I have, I would have voted against the initial military option but I would have voted in favor of the troops getting the supplies they need in the field once the decision had been made. It is the job of congress to scrutinize military action as it is their authority because "congress shall declare war." They don't just rubber stamp what the president wants to do. But once the decision is made and it is for war, congress needs to not be critical of the president's policies as it undermines the mission.

Samuel Peter has just signed to fight Wlad Klitschko on Sept 24th. This fight will be for IBF #1 and will be very interesting. Peter has a huge punch, but his chin has never been tested. Wladimir has proven that his chin is weak but he has tons of offensive firepower. I think Peter will land a punch and it will be over in the first 4 rounds. He is one of the best pure punchers in the last 20 years of the heavyweight division. I'm merrily on to other subjects, let's see who has the knowledge to join me.

One more time, either going to Iraq was the right thing to do, or it wasn't. If removing Saddam was the right thing to do, then we were right for going to war. If NOT removing him from power and letting him continue his regime was the best path, then we made a mistake by invading. Once again, we cannot be wrong for going to war but right for removing Saddam from power. You can't have it both ways. John Kerry, who was for, then against, then for, then against (depending on what audience he was speaking to and the mood he was in) tried to tell us it was the wrong war, in the wrong place at the right time, but it's a good thing Saddam is out of power. Joe and Agnes Average America, smarter than most give them credit for, smelled a rat and they didn't vote FOR Bush, they voted AGAINST Kerry. Kent, I'm registered Republican and usually lean that way, though I've voted for Democrats and Independents. Lately though, the Democratic leadership is so out of step with what I know to be common sense, I don't see myself voting for them in a National election anytime soon, unless major changes take place. Solid centerist Dems like Sam Nunn, Morris Udall, etc., seem to have been overrun by looney tunes.

Italian Stallion = Fan = Forest Ward. You won't answer reasonable questions asked of you, but please, if you want to slag me, deliver it personally. It's more than mere coincidence that as soon as you had the need to slag someone, this Italian Stallion guy was created. One of the most intelligent and knowledgable posters on this site is the complete gentleman Massimo. He never blows his own trumpet, and unlike Kent, he isn't a know-it-all. On the one hand, Massimo's knowledge is thorough and, guess what, he's probably never been to a fight in person other than in Rome. (Using Kent's yardstick that means he knows nothing.) On the other, reading Kent is like being hit with a wet, warm lettuce wielded by someone desperate to project his own perceived self-importance. I've learnt things on this site reading Massimo, Angelo, Steve, and a few others like Howard. Being honest, I've never learnt anything from Kent. Nothing. Some of Kent's comments are so silly they defy logic, especially regarding the fights Frazier ducked. I've learnt from Fan that ignorance is more widespread than I had feared. I've also learnt from Fan some people make accusations they can't prove and that they refuse to answer questions they can't answer. Notice how if Kent picks someone out on a mistake, he takes great pleasure in mocking them as if they know nothing. But Massimo politely advises that the mistake was made and he corrects you. (Same with Steve.) Massimo has a reason to be so confident that he doesn't need to belittle others to make himself feel more knowledgable and important. Kent doesn't. Simple, really.

Anyway, Massimo said that Liston probably has the best jab and that is a very smart comment. I remember reading Foreman's book and in it he said that he used to spar with Liston. He said Liston's jab was the hardest he ever faced. Given that he fought Ali, that is huge praise. Liston's career comprised 271 rounds with each fight lasting an average of 5 rounds. Ali's average rounds per fight were 8.9, Marciano 4.9, Quarry 6.2, Patterson 6.5, Norton 6.28, Lyle 3.3, Louis 5.9, Lewis 5.1, Holmes 7.8, Foreman 3.1, and Frazier 5.7. Frazier's is relatively low, but the two early stoppages against Foreman are reflected here, not only the early knockouts he got himself. Foreman's fights lasted 3.1 rounds on average and Lyle's 3.3 on average. This shows that the statistics are accurate. The two renowned hard hitters are lowest.

Massimo - how many times were Louis, Foreman, Marciano, and Holmes knocked down in their careers. I'm going to begin some research.

In every sport there is a plethora of statistics. Boxings different. I wonder why.

8/3/05 05:37:33 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Can I say something on Iraq, seeing others have. Before Iraq, Saddam used WMDs in his 10 years war with Iran killing a million people. He gassed the Kurds, ruined the environment by draining the marshes, slaughtered the Swamp Arabs, and then invaded Kuwait, took American diplomats hostage, held hostage our pilots, and lobbed scuds on Israel while also setting fire to oil wells to further vandalize the environment.

Saddam then withdrew from Kuwait under treaty when he lost the war. He then promptly went back on the conditions of the treaty, one by one, paid $25,000 cash to the families of suicide bombers blowing up school buses in Israel, tried to kill former President George Bush, boasted that he had WMDs, and then refused unfettered searches by weapons inspectors which was a condition of the Kuwait treaty. Saddam's government was overthrown. The war is now over and a new democratic government installed. Arguments about the war ended two years ago. It is now an argument whether we stay and finish the job or cut and run. It is no longer a war argument. It is now about a struggle with insurgents. Infrastructure is being rebuilt. There is a moral and legal responsibility to stay and fix the problem.

When we cut and ran in Vietnam because of silly, stupid Jane Fonda types, more than half a million south Vietnamese people (our allies) were interned or murdered. The Killing Fields then happened under Pol Pot's Khmer Rouge in Cambodia where millions of innocents were killed. Cut and run from Iraq and watch the slaughter. Watch militant Islam spread across that area. And you'll eventually you'll get to personally watch them use WMDs.

If we listened to the peace niks, Saddam would still be in power, Syria would still be in charge of Lebanon, Gaddafi would still be making WMDs in Libya, and the dark ages Taliban would still be running Kabul plotting Sept 11 attacks with its Al Qaeda buddies.

Thanks.
Thanks for the very nice words! No, I have never been to a fight for 2 reasons: I would feel somehow guilty if I did even if probably there is no reason. There have never been real important fights here in Roma probably since Nino Benvenuti, especially in the heavyweight division, my favourite division. I see all the fights at home. I'm a big boxing fan because boxing gives me emotions and adrenalina as NO other sport. As far as I know, Marciano has been knocked down twice (Walcott and Moore), Foreman 3 or 4 times (Ali', Lyle 2 and there is people including Wepner). Most of the boxing fans states there was NO knockdown in the Wepner-Foreman but I just don't know (I haven't seen this fight). I don't know about Joe Louis. Let's see, Buddy Baer knocked him down and out of the ring, Marciano knocked him down twice, Walcott knocked him down... I think 3 times in 2 fights... PS: let's try to be all friends regardless of our incompatibilites! Nobody is a bad ass in this site!

Massimo - the praise was sincere. When I ask a question, trying to learn something I don't know, you venture an answer straight away, same as Angelo, and even admit if you don't know the answer. I asked about the hardest fights Frazier won (apart from the Ali win) and you gave your opinion straight away. I really appreciate that. Thanks for the comments on those knockdowns. It's funny how the record books merely tell us when a fight ended, but they usually have nothing about the important content of the fight - like knockdowns. Perhaps if someone compiled all that data in the one book there would be a dollar or a lira (is that the Italian version) in it .......

Previously, I couldn't split Louis and Ali for the greatest ever tag, with Marciano up there, too (although I know you have reservations on Rocky). But when I assessed the stats on how few times Ali went down - four times in his long career against monster punchers - it puts him on top, in my opinion. You could even argue he was really knocked down genuinely only twice - Frazier and Cooper. The Banks and Wepner ones may not have been knockdowns and Ali wasn't hurt, anyway. I don't think we've lost anything not personally attending fights. Watching tapes of them are usually better in fact. The atmosphere doesn't affect you, you haven't imbibed (alcohol) with your mates, you are less distracted, and you can watch frame-by-frame replays. If being there was what counts, then no one is alive credentialed to pass judgment on Louis, et al. And notice how no one ever praises Jack Johnson? Can't work that one out. Pete - to be honest, I've never seen Griffiths fight, but apart from silly rumours about his personal life that dont matter, I've only ever heard good things about his ability. Of course, there was the tragic fight against Benny Paret. He had three great fights against Benvenuti, according to a book in front of me. Regarding Kent, I think he's a good guy, heart in the right place, etc, but with Frazier he can't be fair. He's dug in on his point of view and can't admit he got it wrong, despite the long list of facts listed on this site.

The Banks knockdown was legit. I have the fight. I actually own every fight that was ever on film from Ali's career. His toughest fights as far as struggling are in this order in my opinion. I am not counting any fight after Earnie Shavers because he should have never fought after that and he was a shell of himself. 1. Frazier 2. Norton 3. Norton III 4. Frazier III 5. Norton II 6. Cooper 7. Lyle 8. Jones 9. Shavers 10. Bonavena

Good post, Fan, and you are right about the Banks' knockdown of Ali. On page 45 of Thomas Hauser's book on Ali (His Life & Times), Gil Glancy stated: "Banks was a puncher. That's all; he didn't have much else, but he could punch. Halfway through the first round, he nailed Cassius on the chin with a left hook, and Cassius went down like a sack of wheat. Angelo Dundee turned pale..." Dundee told Hauser on page “Banks hit Muhammad right on the jaw, and on his way down, his eyes were closed. But when he hit the canvass, he woke up. That's when I saw his recuperative powers. . . .”

Banks nailed Ali with a left hook, so did Cooper, and so did Frazier, for a legit knockdown each. The punch from Wepner to Ali's chest immediately before Ali fell to the canvass was a right. I think it is generally believed that Ali overbalanced even though it was called a knockdown by the referee. But the three legit knockdowns were left hooks. I wonder whether Cooney could have landed his.

Fact: in the late 1960's and early 1970's, NYPD officers were marked for assassination by radical groups such as the Black Muslims, the Black Liberation Army, and the Panthers. Black/White partners were specifically targeted and killed.

Fact: In April, 1972, NYPD officers were lured into a Black Muslim mosque at 102 West 116 Street in Harlem via a false 10-13 (officer needs assistance) call to 911. They were ambushed, overwhelmed by 20 men and Officer Phillip Cardillo was murdered.

Query: Was Ali a member of the Black Muslims in 1972?

For those who are not at all bothered by the answer, save the hollow praise and crocodile tears you express for the police. With friends like you, cops don't need enemies.
notebook in. How long were you in the police, Steve?

8/4/05 12:36:32 AM|steve|nj|na|||||10|Noam, I don't know what I posted to make you believe I was ever a cop? Just ask Les. I was definitely not a candidate for the police force.

8/4/05 02:09:26 AM|Steve|nj|na|||||10|Noam, maybe your just being facetious with the cop remark. I thought you wanted to talk about boxing history. I was just trying to offer you some old stuff I know about. With my history, I'm probably as far on the other end of the spectrum as a man can get. Call it irony, but my best friend, and I don't make friends easily, is a big, bad ex-cop. I anticipate with glee his response to your post.

8/4/05 03:03:46 AM|Noam|same||same|||||10|Steve - sorry, but when I read the word 'instructor' you used in your post, I related it to a police academy and thought you must have been a cop. I like cops. Always have, even if you weren't one. I like vets, too.When I first read the accusation about Ali, the Black Muslims, and the death of police officer Phillip Cardillo, I got quite angry. But having settled down I think the guy who posted it is sincere, which makes it understandable.His problem is he's talking from his heart and not his head. If you really think about it, the post reads that if you like Ali, then you are incapable of being sincere in expressing gratitude, admiration or sympathy for police. That's not right. Plenty of Ali admirers would be police. Perhaps I am, or was, or wasn't. You can be sincere in your admiration for police AND Ali at the same time. I know I am.If it was Forest who posted, I'd ask him to think with his head. How many Black Muslims killed the officer? Do we blame them all for the actions of a few? If we do that, then we blame all cops, for the corruptness of one or two bad apples. We'll blame all Catholics for the actions of a few in Belfast. We'd blame all whites for the KKK. And did Ali condone what happened to officer Cardillo? I've never heard anyone accuse him of that.Anyway, if it was Forest who posted that stuff about Ali, then I suppose it makes lots of other stuff he has written understandable. Makes me feel guilty that I put the boot into him, figuratively speaking, of course.

8/4/05 03:34:11 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||||10|Fan-Which Ali's professional fights are not available on tape? Thanks.There's no doubt in hell that Emilio Griffith was a great champion. He fought 339 rounds in world title fights (this is an all time record). He won 16 out of 24 of these fights. He fought as a welter, a superwelter and a middleweight. I think he was at his best as a welter. He was great even in defeat. I have seen recently his second fight with Carlos Monzon which Emilio fought at the age of 35 and I think he won that fight quite clearly. I have also seen his first fight with Paret and the highlights from the 3 Benvenuti fights. Emile Griffith was 5 times world champion in 3 different weight divisions!

8/4/05 06:04:11 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||||10|I think the 3 Frazier fights are among Ali's best fights, especially the third one.How is Griffith? He is listed at 5'7" 1/2.

8/4/05 12:45:59 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||||10|Kent: Were you against the '91 gulf war too? We weren't attacked, you know?

8/4/05 01:02:54 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||||10|Ali wasn't taped against Herb Siler, Tony Esperti, Jim Robinson, Alejandro Lavorante, Duke Sabedong.

8/4/05 02:02:50 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||||10|And Donnie Fleeman

8/4/05 02:03:26 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||||10|Steve, I appreciate your empathetic thoughts. I don't let such things cloud my life. I just have a strong preference for a truthful rendition of history.
in the movie). Sadly, it is anything but fiction.I take exception to the sanitized, romanticized, idealized incarnation of Ali because is not truthful. I have said all along that, in my opinion, his draft evasion was the product of neither cowardice nor pacifism. Ali was no pacifist, and I doubt he was a coward. He just hated America. You can argue until the cows come home about why he did, or whether his views were justified, but lets start with the truth. That's why, as I recall, he boasted about having thrown his Olympic gold medal in the Ohio river. In a later effort to reinvent himself, he recanted the story. So he either did it, or lied about it.I can't help but wonder to what extent Ali's example bolstered the ranks of the Black Muslims. Is it unrealistic to consider the possibility that others joined because of him? Perhaps one of the killers of Officer Cardillo, or of some other cop? If he has truly repudiated the Black Muslims, wouldn't it be great to see Ali use his influence and step up and condemn today's scourge, radical Islamic fundamentalism? Perhaps this time he could use his influence for some major good. Part of the tragedy of the Cardillo murder was the politics involved. The NYC pols, afraid to offend anyone, has regulations in place in 1972 prohibiting officers from entering a mosque. Sound familiar?This topic is certainly not a pleasant one, and has nothing to do with Jerry Quarry. I have tried to proffer the unpleasant facts without resort to personal attack and sarcasm. My intent is not to offend. But for the sake of all the Phillip Cardillos (and he wasn't the only one by any means) the truth will be told. | endgame have to be angry that we shouldn't have been there in the first place, and those feelings will not go away. I have friends in Iraq, guys I served with. There question is: what the hell is the program here? Their words, not mine. I just agree with them. I also enjoyed the stats. Sorry I have to spend so much time defending myself instead of on boxing. Freedom of speech is still legal, at least until the Patriot Act says otherwise. Incidentally, I voted McCain and Kerry. There's no question we'd be better off with either. And, I'd take a dopey hippie like Fonda over those scumbags torturing prisoners in Guantanamo. At least Democrats are anti-torture. Insult me if you must. The majority of Americans are clearly against this president and this war. Sorry to say I told you so, but I did.

---

Gerry: First, thank you for your service to our country. Second, I'm amazed by how ignorant you are of American foreign policy, American security, middle-east regional strategy, use of military intervention, etc. It sounds as though you are a conspiracy nut of some type. Do you really believe George Bush is sending our men and women into combat for some esoteric, inexplicable reason that has nothing to do with safeguarding the interests of our country? This is stuff that high school juniors and some college kids looking for a cause are supposed to believe. It's bizarre. You sound crazy. Bush is responsible for killing thousands of Iraqi families? Excuse me, but his policy is responsible for ridding Iraq of the tyrant who actually committed those crimes, Saddam. Get a clue.
in that war. Pretty dumb.

And when we were on better terms with Bin Laden, what was he doing? Fighting the Russians in Afghanistan. Remember the USSR, Gerry? You should because they had in excess of 10,000 nuclear missiles aimed at us. (Here's a hint, Gerry: the guys trying to kill you are generally your enemies, and that's not the republicans and the Bushes.) Sometimes, Gerry, you have to sort out who your biggest threat is before prioritizing the order of your enemies. In the above cases, Iran and the USSR were the biggest threats and, therefore, the greatest enemies. So we supported THEIR greatest enemies. That's the way it has worked, ever since Nero wore mini skirts. Bin Laden became a growing problem on Clinton's watch. Oh, you forgot that too. Democrat Bill's attention was elsewhere (Monica, impeachment, seminal stains, take your pick) and the monster Bin Laden was running around blowing Americans up. It took a republican to confront him instead of just deferring the problem by firing cruise missiles into sand dunes as Clinton did. Same with Saddam. It was a republican president who threw him out of Kuwait. And it was then a democrat president - once again Clinton - who let the Saddam problem grow and grow and grow until, once again, a republican president opted to confront it rather than leave it to future generations. And Gerry, who got us into Vietnam? Kennedy (democrat). Gerry spits out words like republican and Bush with such venom. He hates them more than Saddam and Bin Laden. Just like Jane Fonda does.

8/4/05 07:01:37 PM|Fan|USA||n/a|10|Noam, please stop distorting what myself and others have said. I didn't accuse Ali of being a cop murderer, or say he was "involved" in the Cardillo murder. I explained quite clearly why I think he was very wrong to join the Muslims, and how I believe his celebrity contributed to their cause. Are you aware that, ironically, there are those on the left who despise Ali for his attempt at reinventing himself? They give him more "credit" than he probably deserves for tearing the country apart in the 60's. The point is, some of his own friends, or former friends, paint an even worse (from my perspective) picture of the Ali of the past than do I. As you have been told umpteen times, I am not Fandon, he is not me; I am not poor Forest, who you apparently finally harangued away; not the Italian Stallion, etc. Not Kent, whom you have mercilessly ridiculed, despite his best efforts to avoid being "judgmental". I must add that I am disappointed that the new, kinder gentler Noam is no more. He was much more palatable, for a couple of weeks, than the original. I thought maybe you finally caught on that insulting virtually everyone on the site was winning no allies. Is there a single poster on this site who has not either been a victim of your attacks or taken you to task for attacking others? Noam, you have criticized others for not revealing themselves. I respect the privacy of everyone, and maintain my own, so if you don't want to answer, I'll understand. But, if you're so inclined, do tell us a bit about yourself. You seem to have suffered more injuries than Evil Knievel. What is it you do for a living (when you're not posting here?) You have "wise guy" associates; you seem to have an interest in things military; and you use that precocious British spelling. You call people who are my age, or what you have surmised is my age, old. And of course, you idolize Ali, and to a lesser extent, the objective Mr. Hauser (thank you for recently declining to use the word "acclaimed" when referring to he or his work. We get it.) An intriguing mix, to be sure. A few day ago we were all free to express ourselves and disagree, knowing we'd all stick together in a pinch. The tenor of your posts suggested that the personal attacks were over (with the possible exception of Kent). What happened? | 8/4/05 08:35:20 PM|Noam|same||same|10|Knock yourself out Forest saying whatever makes you feel better. It doesn't offend or upset. I'd simply remind that you are no longer posting under the imposter name Forest Ward because you made a fool out of yourself and became isolated from the bunch with your nonsensical arguments. Have fun anyways, whatever you want to call yourself. Thanks, big ears (warm chortles). Boxing trivia: who was the tallest opponent Joe Louis ever faced ?

| 8/4/05 10:56:35 PM | Steve[nj]| na| |10| Massimo, I was just bragging about meeting Emile Griffith. I used to always try to get tickets for the eighth row. It put you enough above ringside, but still close enough to get a perfect view. [If you could see through the cigarette smoke.], He came down the walkway, which was slanted downwards. I was sitting in the end seat. I just stood up and offered him my hand and burbled some fan talk. He actually stopped for a second and shook my hand. I couldn't judge his height. He did have on a perfectly tailored suit. He looked as broad as a barn door. I asked if his suit was tailored in Italy. He then punched me in the face, and screamed, [Italian tailors are worthless!]|

| 8/4/05 11:49:33 PM | steve | nj| |na| |10| Massimo, what dialect do you speak. Your not from Naples, not a flourintine, do you speak the old Roman ? |

| 8/5/05 12:00:40 AM | Howard C. | Louisville | | howardc@louisville|||10| Having gone back through the posts, Fan and Fandom are separate guys, as someone, I think Angelo, said. Fandom tries to be fair. I agree with Noam that this other Fan guy is the one who used to call himself Forrest. Fan only posts occasionally and they are all bitter against Ali. Looking at it from Fan's (Forrest's) point of view, I suppose he's just letting off steam. It is certain that he hates Ali. No doubt about that if you go back and read the posts and the hatred that steams through. I agree with Fan that Ali did wrong, but that was 40 years ago. Most everyone else has moved on. Fan hasn't. That tells me something about him. The other telling thing is he only gives Ali brickbats, never praise. All those awards and getting the hostages out overseas doesn't mitigate anything, is how Fan would have it. Hating like Fan does isn't constructive and clearly isn't doing him any good. Fan, can we break the hatred down a bit ? Whose your 10 greatest heavies of all time, please ?

| 8/5/05 03:18:46 AM | Massimo | Roma, aho! | |4| |10| Noam- I think the wildest guy Joe Louis ever fought was Buddy Baer. Buddy was at least 6'6", maybe 6'6" 1/2. Primo Carnera was at least 6'5", but probably 6'5" 3/4. Many people in Italy still think Primo was over 2.00 but this is what the fascist government in the 30's used to say... I think it's b.s. Normally I speak Standard Italian with no dialectal inflection. People usually can't understand what part of Italy I come from. But when I get angry sometimes I use the Roman dialect, aho! Anyway, the Roman dialect is very close to Standard Italian, less beautiful than Standard Italian but funnier. Usually I understand better the dialects in South Italy than those in North Italy. Lombardo, Veneto, Friulano are hard. Fortunately they all can speak Standard Italian, but when they speak in Lombardo or whatever it's quite a mess! |

| 8/5/05 04:30:29 AM | Noam | same | | same| |10| Massimo - yep, you're right. Buddy Baer, younger brother of Max, was 6', 6.5" tall. Now tell me, Massimo, when 10 Ton Galento fought Louis, what did he say that upset Joe so much ? And what false allegation did promoter Jacobs make to promote the fight and sell more tickets ?

| 8/5/05 03:18:46 AM | Massimo | Roma, aho! | |4| |10| Noam- I think the wildest guy Joe Louis ever fought was Buddy Baer. Buddy was at least 6'6", maybe 6'6" 1/2. Primo Carnera was at least 6'5", but probably 6'5" 3/4. Many people in Italy still think Primo was over 2.00 but this is what the fascist government in the 30's used to say... I think it's b.s. Normally I speak Standard Italian with no dialectal inflection. People usually can't understand what part of Italy I come from. But when I get angry sometimes I use the Roman dialect, aho! Anyway, the Roman dialect is very close to Standard Italian, less beautiful than Standard Italian but funnier. Usually I understand better the dialects in South Italy than those in North Italy. Lombardo, Veneto, Friulano are hard. Fortunately they all can speak Standard Italian, but when they speak in Lombardo or whatever it's quite a mess! |
Please explain because, if it's not any of the above, then I don't know why you'd mention it. One bad apple doesn't make an entire police force bad so why condemn Ali because he was a member of a group where a minority did bad. You also said that there were some on this sight who had "crocodile tears" about police. If I misinterpreted that, please explain again. My regard for police is not feigned, same as it is for vets, if that's what you were questioning. As far as Hauser is concerned, he is an ACCLAIMED writer by the Ring magazine and he has been nominated for awards. That's a fact and it's not just me saying that.

Regrets you're other questions - no, I've never been in the military; yes, I did sustain the injuries described in ways you'd probably relate to; and no, I am not friendly with any 'wise guys' (I was being facetious on that). You can keep guessing on the rest of your questions. If you want to call a truce, Forest, then fine by me. I only ask because it's annoying the others. If not, then you can say what you want and I'll do my best to ignore you.

If you go back to the archives you will see a gruesome twosome Foolface and the Koo Koo Klock were relentless in their putting me down at every opportunity and I don't think the Muffinman is a big fan of mine either, whoever he is.

I knew the answers but I don't remember them anymore.

I am relieved that you were kidding about the wiseguys, I think you were getting some of us a little nervous.
regarding the first Persian Gulf war, I reluctantly did support this action. We can't just let some country invade one of its neighbors but even this exception to my rule of never using military force unless we are attacked is a bitter pill for me to swallow. The reason is instability in the region can be directly attributed to mendling and imperialism of the western powers, in this case our good friend Britain. In the early 20th century, Britain redrew the maps of the region to create Iraq in the first place. Historically there is no such country as Iraq, there were Kurds, Sunnis and Shites who lived in what is now that country. Britain all of sudden put these different groups together as part of an effort to control the region and the valuable oil supply. That these groups could not get together easily except under the rule of one dictator of another is easy to see and something we will always have a problem with as far as having a government. A democracy involving these groups is a good idea but will it work? Who knows? Did Iraq actually have a valid claim that Kuwait was supposed to be part of their country in the first place? Who knows also, but it is better to have some somewhat benevolent capitalistic dictators in Kuwait to having a maniac like Hussein in charge. But where do we draw the line on using force when we are not attacked? Why are we always doing most of the work as the world's policemen by attacking this or that tyrant? We go into the former Yugoslavia and intervene because of the Serbs abuse there, by the way Yugoslavia was another thrown together country by outside powers that was bound to fail as the separate groups, the Croatians, Serbs, Bosnians, etc, could not easily be one country except under some hard line dictators rule, in this case Soviet backed communists before the war in the 1990s, and without that hard line rule all hell was bound to break loose. But we don't go into some African countries when atrocities just as bad as what happened in Kosovo and Iraq happen because this area is not as important as having a stable Europe and a stable Persian Gulf area, which in the second case is mostly because of the oil supply.

Angelo, should we be a military equivalent of Amnesty International and attack every two bit thug dictator who abuses innocent civilian populations?
everything and anything associated with Bush or the Republicans. And deny reality.Gerry, I suppose a hero of yours is Senator Byrd. Byrd is called by democrats "the conscience of the senate." He is not only a former member of the Klu Kluck Klan, he was a "Kleagle." Kleagles are in charge of recruiting new members. Senator Byrd filibustered for 14 hours in the senate attempting to prevent the passing of the 1965 Civil Rights Bill. Not surprising only democrats call him "the conscience of the senate." I wonder why?What President was an ally with Stalinn. Yes, the same Stalin who killed 20 million people during his reign of terror. I will give you a hint he was a democrat also. President Roosevelt.And finally, what President signed an agreement with North Korea's dictator Kim JongIl. The basis for the agreement was this, if North Korea promise not to build nuclear weapons the US would give Korea tons of food and billions of dollars. for doing so. Democratic President Clinton signed this agreement. And guess what? Korea kept the money and continued to build nuclear weapons. And now we have to deal with him, and the treat posed by the nuclear weapons.Gerry why don't you stick to boxing, and quit trying to lay your cancer on this board. The election is over, your side lost.| 8/5/05 02:30:41 PM| Angelo| Washington, DC| funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Battle of the Sexes, 2005: Forget tennis. Forget Billie Jean King vs. Bobby Riggs. I've got something better: Joe Frazier vs. Leila Ali! If we gave Frazier 3 months to train and put him in against Leila Ali, who would win? Who would win a three round fight, who would win a six rounder and who would win a ten rounder? I'm not sure of Frazier's physical condition. Leila is in great shape, but if Frazier delivered the type of hook that dropped her dad, could she get up? If Frazier trained for three months and actually took it seriously, could he do damage? | 8/5/05 03:34:43 PM| Kent| Murrieta, Ca| kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Pete, that while you were correct that President Roosevelt and the United States were allies with Stalin, you are leaving out an important fact, that the reason was we were allies is because it was during world war 2 against Hitler and Nazi Germany and it was an extraordinary circumstance. Any president of either party would have done the same during those trying times. Also I doubt anyone knew the extent of what was going on internally in Russia as we had other things to focus on, namely survival. I believe the west didn't really know what Stalin had done until later. | 8/5/05 03:46:10 PM| Angelo| Washington, DC| funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Kent: And that supports the arguments that others here have made, that sometimes things change. We've had our reasons for being aligned with some pretty bad people, including Saddam. Hindsight is 20/20. Live and learn, grow and change. By the way, some people "accuse" Bush of "going to war over oil." You know what, I don't know if I believe that, but if it's true, I agree with the decision. Uninterrupted flow of crude from the middle east is vital to our economy and national welfare, even world economic stability. Wars have been fought over far less important things. I wouldn't even disguise why we're there if that's the reason. Also, being an armchair warrior is easy after the conflict is in progress. John Kerry had the worst case of "Monday Morning Quarterback" I've ever seen in a politician. He had a better way to do everything---except he told us the better way AFTER THE FACT, not before or during. Again, Joe and Agnes America figured him out as a big phoney and voted against his ass. Leila Ali vs. Joe Frazier, December 2005: Who wins? | 8/5/05 04:29:18 PM| Massimo | Roma| 4.com | 10 | AngeloI'm not an expert of American foreign policy, but I can't believe he is doing the war in Iraq for the oil. Would he sacrifice billions of dollars and thousands of American young lives for two drops of oil? He ain't stupid! Duckin' Joe would NEVER fight Laila Ali!! Laila is a way harder puncher than his father was... | 8/5/05 04:42:26 PM| Angelo| Washington, DC| funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Massimo: I think we could talk Frazier into it. It would be like Bobby Riggs vs. Billie Jean King all over again, updated because women have come a long way since 1973! Laila would have more speed and possibly more endurance than Frazier. But Joe might still pack a powerful hook which could ice her if he lands. Plus, she's an Ali, so he'd be motivated. Leila might get a decision win.

Two Ton Tony Galento's manager was a guy called Joe Jacobs and he accused Joe Louis have having held a metal bar in his right glove the night he knocked out Max Schmeling. Louis made Jacobs retract the allegation under threat of legal action.

Galento was a brave/crazy guy. He went out of his way to tease Louis before they fought and he actually made comments similar to what Duran made about Leonard's wife before their first fight. When they were being given instructions from the referee, Galento said to Louis, "I am going to .... your wife." Louis went out and let himself get caught up in a good old fashioned brawl.

Roosevelt knew what was going on in Russia, but at the time he was knee deep battling the great depression.

Regarding any President would have done what Roosevelt did. Do you think President Reagan would have given eastern Europe to Russia? Do you think President Bush would have given eastern Europe to the Russians? Do you think President Nixon would give eastern Europe to Russia? Roosevelt and Truman would. President Carter would. And I have no doubt Clinton would.

Supporting both Frazier and Ali are not contradictory.
move on from it. But you weren't even handed and that was my point.Can anyone tell me whether this is true? I am told that Max Baer was in a hotel room when he suffered a heart attack. He phoned the receptionist for help. She replied: "Do you need the house doctor?" "No," Baer replied, "a PEOPLE doctor." He then died. Is any of this true?Pete - I'm with you on everything you are saying. Absolutely. Some liberals have very short memories. They hate President Bush more than the lunatics trying to kill them. It's all political with them; it's got nothing to do with morality or honesty or human rights or real dangers to our way of life. And if you read the tone of Gerry's post you can see that. Gerry was telling us "I told you so" and that's why he wrote it. His problem is that he wasn't correct in the first place. If the planting of democracy eventually takes root in Iraq, then it might spread and bring peace to the rest of that place, which has had turmoil and war for thousands of years. That's the big picture about what's happening over there. The narrow minded political hippies like Gerry only look at what's happening today and tomorrow, not next week, next year, and next decade. \[8/5/05 09:19:47 PM\Kent\Murrieta, Ca\kentallenent@aol.com\]\[10\Noam, the only time I ever said anything about Frazier other than boxing was recently when I pointed out that you can't let go of the Frazier subject, that you can't stop talking about him even if only to dish out dirt on Frazier and one other time months ago when I said I don't know if Frazier beat his girlfriend or not as I wasn't there and he wasn't convicted of a crime.The only time I have said anything about Ali other than boxing was to say I understand why he wouldn't want to fight for a government that at the time couldn't even guarantee his basic rights.So I have made a total of three posts, about either man, other than boxing, one for Ali, one neutral, as saying I don't know if someone committed a crime or not is neither supportive nor against him and in the other one, I didn't say whether I was for or against Frazier.Noam, you really are a judgemental person. As I told Howard and I am sure he can see it now, you have no idea knowing what is in my heart.It is not up to me to control what others say about Ali and I am not defending Frazier's shortcomings as a person. In fact I didn't even comment if I agreed or not on your recent comments on Frazier's behavior. I just said you can't resist bringing bad things up about him.Clearly the facts show that I have, by and large, only talked about boxing about Frazier or Ali but you won't be able to see it as your mind is already made up about what you think I believe.Oh I forgot, I did say something about Ali, that it was a good thing he denounced his former beliefs about all white people being evil. I did say if he had said those things in the 1960s, he might have wined up dead like Malcolm X did. That is totally understandable why he would not be too public if he had those correct beliefs earlier. I would count this as a positive statement about Ali.Go ahead and get the last word in as I am not talking about this subject anymore.\[8/6/05 02:50:48 AM\\Noam\same\same\10\Kent - even when I apologized you had to come back with all the infuriating crap. Now you do it again, lecturing people. As I said, you criticize people for criticizing Frazier but you say nothing when Fan/Forest or whoever criticizes Ali. Fact. Please stop talking about it because I am certain that I am not the only person here you're annoying. By the way, I only apologized so that you'd stop it, but you haven't. And if you really want to check, it wasn't me who brought up the Frazier subject again, it was one of the people you don't criticize. In fact, on numerous occasions you've done it yourself. I've done the right thing, so you do the same. I know you hate Ali, even if you haven't the guts to admit it. \[8/6/05 03:47:03 AM\\Massimo |Roma\4\10\Noam-\br\I'm sure Tony got Joe Louis pissed off by saying he wanted to .... his wife!\] \[8/6/05 04:21:19 AM\\Howard C.\Louisville\howardc@louisville\10\Noam and Massimo: interesting story about Galento. I haven't heard the yarn about Baer.}
Noam - you apologized to Kent and so did I. Obviously he wants to just keep it going on. I don't know why. I'm going to ignore him and I suggest you do the same. |

| 8/6/05 04:24:59 AM | Massimo | Roma | cini_massimo@libero.it | 10 |
| Noam - | I know for sure that Massimo Baer died of heart failure but I don't know any (or the) details (where he was, what he was doing etc.). |

| 8/6/05 02:03:30 PM | Italian Stallion | Philly | Unknown | 10 |
| I used to know a guy named Don Warner that talked about fighting in the past. Now I see the dude fought Muhammad Ali?? Maybe I should have listened to him!! |

| 8/6/05 05:48:35 PM | Noam | same | same | 10 |
| Massimo - thanks. I am trying to find out whether the story is true about Baer, or whether it's just an urban myth. I've seen it printed in newspapers a couple of times. |

| 8/6/05 06:11:15 PM | Pete | Cleveland | N/A | 10 |
| Kent I have to correct you. You chastised Gerry the vet for applauding Jane Fonda. But you chastised me for leaving historical information out of my post. And you were wrong anyway in your historical assessment (read my post again if you want, I am not going to reprint it) Kent, you don't believe in war unless we are attacked. How did you feel about Germany in World War II? Germany did not attack us. Was democratic President Roosevelt being a policeman for the world? Kent, this is the reason you have people on the board getting upset, you write posts that are lacking objectivity, and your posts are flawed because of that. Evertime Noam and Howard C reach out to you you bite their hand Kent you are becoming another Forrest, and you know what happened to him. |

| 8/6/05 06:15:53 PM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 |
| Noam - | I haven't seen much of Larry Holmes in his prime, only the Frazier fight (Marvis not Duckin' Joe) and the Scott Frank fight so I'm not a big expert on this subject. But, anyway, the impression I got is that he was one of the greatest, obviously in the top 10, maybe in the top 5. But to be sure I should see some of his greatest fights against Shavers, Weaver, Spinks, Norton etc. He was one of the best technician ever, with a marvellous jab. He had huge heart and huge recovering ability also. I have seen him against Tyson, Mercer and Holyfield (a synthesis) when he already was his own uncle. |

| 8/6/05 06:30:54 PM | Fan | USA | n/a | 10 |
| So much for the "truce". For my part I'll keep on trying. Howard, as you can see, I took the time to respond to you. Was your invite less than sincere? Pete, please share. What did happen to Forest? |

| 8/6/05 08:55:11 PM | Angelo | dc | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 |
| Massimo: Holmes takes Frazier in your dream matchup. Holmes by unanimous decision or late round KO. Now, in my 2005 dream matchup, I'm taking Leila Ali by decision over Smokin' Joe. |

| 8/7/05 12:24:31 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 |
| Holmes with his tremendous jab |
probably outpoints Frazier, but an early stoppage isn’t out of the equation. Holmes won 64% of his fights by kayo. Of his 43 kayo wins, 17 of those were knockouts usually in round 4. Joe was a slow starter, so Holmes would have pressed for a stoppage early (especially if this fight happened after Foreman stopped Frazier when it was thereafter obvious that Joe’s chin was vulnerable). Holmes certainly wouldn’t have been intimidated having fought big punchers like Shavers (twice) and Norton. Big names didn’t worry him either. He fought Ali, and he wasn’t too frightened to face Tyson at age 38. He also showed that he could beat fighters with big left hooks when he stopped Cooney, so Frazier’s left shouldn’t have proved a problem. Holmes could take a punch, too. And let’s not forget he won 20 successive title defenses. In my opinion, Holmes was in the top 5 heavies of all time. I haven’t been able to find yet a heavyweight champion who fought more career rounds than Holmes. Larry fought 575 rounds (average per fight of 7.8 rounds). Ali fought 553 rounds and Frazier 214. Holmes is right up there with the elite. Just think in his career he was in the ring fighting the best for 28.75 hours and he never made a fool out of himself. It took an in prime monster like Tyson to stop him when Larry was 38.

Pete, some of us have said some things we shouldn't have and we apologized but Noam really didn't apologize, he continued to take a shot at me by keeping with the Dead Parrots society title, I take it as he is being smug and acting superior and saying I am stupid. This was something he kept saying before you were here. It is insulting and something he thinks is funny at my expense and it is mean spirited. Noam kept the feud going by saying this. I wouldn’t be surprised if he calls me a crybaby or some other disrespectful comment for saying he really didn't apologize and that I don't like the Dead Parrots comment.

Ironic, I am sorry for some of the things I said to him and I don't call him a crybaby for taking offense. Pete, if you have the time to go through the archives you will see that others have been harder on me than I was ever on them. But I am not innocent either but none of us are who have been involved in our little feud. Funny, I agree with Noam about Frazier and his land deal if he played the race on this. That if Joe played the race card because he made a bad deal, then that is wrong. But I thought we were beyond the Frazier topic when he said this. Until this time I have not commented on Ali or Frazier's character or behavior. in the vast majority of my posts I have talked about boxing regarding them, except Ali’s stance on not going into the military, which I agree with Ali on this and him taking back negative things he said earlier in his life about white people, which I also agree was the right thing for him to do. I did say he could have winded up dead if he had said so in the 1960s but I don't blame him for that. After all, his friend Malcolm X ended up dead for speaking the truth during that time period. Ask Steve, Angelo, and Jimmy D, long time posters, and they will tell you I have never put Ali down as a person. People just assume it because I seem pro Frazier, more so than Ali. I also have never put down Ali as a boxer. I have always said he is the greatest heavyweight of all time, better than Frazier. You may be right about Roosevelt knowing that terrible abuse was going on in the Soviet Union but I would have to do some more research to verify to myself you are correct. But I think it is entirely possible that he didn't know the extent of what was happening as we didn't have the instant or as good of intelligence as we have today but either way, as during world war 2, during the depression we were in survival mode, hard to push for changes beyond our borders at that time. We were also, republicans and democrats alike, in the isolationist mode. A lot of Americans just wanted to ignore, rightly or wrongly, what was happening over there during the period leading to World War 2. Nazi Germany declared war on us right after Japan attacked us at Pearl Harbor. So yes I would have to support military action versus them as declaring war is paramount to attacking us.I pointed out that you left out the fact that we were allies with the Soviets during World War 2 as believe it or not, some people might not know that was when we were allies and it is an important fact that was left out.We really don't know how other presidents would have handled the post WW2 situation as Truman was president, not them. We can speculate they would have handled things differently but we don't know for sure.Pete, I am a life time democrat who hasn't voted for my party's nominee for president since 1992. Surprised?| 8/7/05 04:47:17 AM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Pete: I wouldn't bother responding to Kent. He's a good guy gone silly. Wait until he comes out of whatever mood he's in this time.Noam: good post. Holmes had one of the best educations in boxing. When he was 21 or 22 he trained with Frasier and this was in the lead-up to the first fight with Ali. Frasier used to beat-up on his young training partners and Holmes got a busted rib and left.Holmes ended up being a longterm training partner of Ali and this is when the polish was applied. Holmes actually travelled to Zaire to spar with Ali for the Foreman fight but got home sick and left. He continued as a training partner for a while longer but, worried that he would be stereotyped, and convinced he couldn't learn any more from 'The Greatest', Holmes left to go it alone. And what a stupendous career he carved ! 48 successive wins. 20 successful title defenses.  Holmes had the jab, stamina, mental toughness, and a wonderful robust jaw, to beat Frasier. Quite easily. No doubt in my mind about that and your statistics Noam bear that out. Holmes was probably the second most intelligent in boxing history. Behind Muhammad only.Nice thing about Holmes. He admitted he loved Ali and was sorry he had to beat him. Shavers loved Ali. So did Norton and Foreman and all the others. The only one who hates Ali is Frasier. That tells me something. And notice how none of them ever speak of having the same affection for Frasier ? I've noticed.Also, notice how Holmes and Shavers and Norton fought Ali even though they had great affection for him. Business is business. To some. To say otherwise is clutching at straws, looking for excuses. Like Joe has. For Shavers, Lyle, Norton and the others.The Ali v Shavers fight confirmed Ali's jaw as the greatest ever. Early on Shavers hit Ali with the best right hand you'll ever see. It shook me out of my seat. Ali withstood it. Fooled Shavers that he wasn't really hurt. Had that punch hit Frasier, goodnight, lights out, see you tomorrow scamboogah.A friend of mine who's been going to fights for over 60 years is critical of Joe. He says while Joe was over cautious about who HE fought, he threw caution to the wind when tossing poor young Marvis in there against Tyson. What was good for Frasier senior didn't apply to Frasier junior when matchmaking. Hindsight gives us all 20/20 vision, I suppose. | 8/7/05 04:49:16 AM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Pete: I wouldn't bother responding to Kent. He's a good guy gone silly. Wait until he comes out of whatever mood he's in this time.Noam: good post. Holmes had one of the best educations in boxing. When he was 21 or 22 he trained with Frasier and this was in the lead-up to the first fight with Ali. Frasier used to beat-up on his young training partners and Holmes got a busted rib and left.Holmes ended up being a longterm training partner of Ali and this is when the polish was applied. Holmes actually travelled to Zaire to spar with Ali for the Foreman fight but got home sick and left. He continued as a training partner for a while longer but, worried that he would be stereotyped, and convinced he couldn't learn any more from 'The Greatest', Holmes left to go it alone. And what a stupendous career he carved ! 48 successive wins. 20 successful title defenses.  Holmes had the jab, stamina, mental toughness, and a wonderful robust jaw, to beat Frasier. Quite easily. No doubt in my mind about that and your statistics Noam bear that out. Holmes was probably the second most intelligent in boxing history. Behind Muhammad only.Nice thing about Holmes. He admitted he loved Ali and was sorry he had to beat him. Shavers loved Ali. So did Norton and Foreman and all the others. The only one who hates Ali is Frasier. That tells me something. And notice how none of them ever speak of having the same affection for Frasier? I've noticed.Also, notice how Holmes and Shavers and Norton fought Ali even though they had great affection for him. Business is business. To some. To say otherwise is clutching at straws, looking for excuses. Like Joe has. For Shavers, Lyle, Norton and the others.The Ali v Shavers fight confirmed Ali's jaw as the greatest ever. Early on Shavers hit Ali with the best right hand you'll ever see. It shook me out of my seat. Ali withstood it. Fooled Shavers that he wasn't really hurt. Had that punch hit Frasier, goodnight, lights out, see you tomorrow scamboogah.A friend of mine who's been going to fights for over 60 years is critical of Joe. He says while Joe was over cautious about who HE fought, he threw caution to the wind when tossing poor young Marvis in there against Tyson. What was good for Frasier senior didn't apply to Frasier junior when matchmaking. Hindsight gives us all 20/20 vision, I suppose.

A friend of mine who's been going to fights for over 60 years is critical of Joe. He says while Joe was over cautious about who HE fought, he threw caution to the wind when tossing poor young Marvis in there against Tyson. What was good for Frasier senior didn't apply to Frasier junior when matchmaking. Hindsight gives us all 20/20 vision, I suppose.

Concerning your past question regarding the CAT scan exam, here is an attempt to explain it. That medical technique consists of taking a black and white xray/picture of an object. In applying this definition to the examination of a person's brain, the photographer/technician "photographs" primarily that part of the brain which looks similar to a butterfly, and which surrounds its central cortex. When the examining neurologist evaluates that picture, that person tries to determine if there is a considerable amount of black coloration in and around the "butterfly" configuration. A large amount indicates the deterioration/shrinkage of the brain and thus the presence of some degree of dementia. In 2002, the late U.S. Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan introduced a bill in Congress mandating CAT scans for all active fighters as part of the re-licensing process in all political jurisdictions. And the AAIB and TJQF both supported the passage of this legislation. Unfortunately, U.S. Congress did not pass it. However, the New York State Athletic Commission does require it of all fighters who apply to compete in that state. Finally, thanks for the kind words regarding my writing.

| 8/7/05 09:49:10 AM | KENT | MURRIETA, CA | KENT_ALLENENT@AOL.COM | || 10 | HOWARD, AS IF I AM ALL TO BLAME AND NOAM CAN BE DOWNRIGHT MEAN AT TIMES. HIM CONTINUING WITH THE DEAD PARROTERS COMMENT WAS A SMUG SLAP IN THE FACE, NOT AN APOLOGY. I SAID I WAS SORRY FOR COMMENTS I MADE, WHAT MORE CAN I DO? NOT TO WORRY, I AM TAKING A BREAK FROM THIS PLACE FOR A COUPLE OF WEEKS. IT HAS NOT BEEN MUCH FUN LATELY. BUT NO ONE IS RUNNING ME OUT OF HERE LIKE FOREST. SAD, FOREST HAS BEEN A GOOD FIGHTER FOR OVER FIVE YEARS AND I DO KNOW WHAT HIS NAME IS, OTHER THAN FOREST. BUT HE LIKELY WASN'T ENJOYING COMING HERE ANYMORE. WAS FOREST INNOCENT OF SAYING THINGS HE SHOULDN'T, NO BUT NEITHER IS NOAM. BUT YOU HOWARD ARE ALWAYS DEFENDING HIM LIKE HE DOES NO WRONG. |
| 8/7/05 10:27:18 AM | FAN | FANDOM | FAN@FANDOM.COM | || 10 | Kent, relax buddy. The reason this silliness keeps up is because you actually let it affect you. I have known you as a poster for 4 years and you are a fine poster and boxing scholar. Relax. |
| 8/7/05 10:33:53 AM | FAN | USA | n/a | || 10 | Pete, don't get too worked up about Sen. Byrd and the Klan. He bears no responsibility for his past, or the acts of an organization of which he was a member. You can't hold all Klansmen accountable for the acts of a few, you know. It's actually kind of hateful for you to even bring all that up (even if it's true). An electronic lynching of sorts. I am sure you understand that. By the way, I'm still wondering, Pete, what exactly did happen to Forest (you evidently know). I hope the wiseguys weren't dispatched to silence him. Howard, as I suspected, you were just hoping I'd say something you could jump on. Sorry to disappoint. Kent has the right idea. |
| 8/7/05 11:12:35 AM | Massimo | Roma | || 10 | Regarding(or on, or about) the Laila-Joe fight: If Laila survives the first 4 rounds she retires Joe Fregia !!!!! |
| 8/7/05 05:11:03 PM | Noam | same | same | || 10 | Howard - I'd heard the same comment about Frazier letting Marvin fight Tyson. It was too rushed. Kent - you shouldn't take it to heart. The Dead Parrot Society stuff was something brought up by Howard, I think, from an old Monty Python skit. Apparently there was a dead parrot hanging upside down with its feet nailed to its stand and the pet shop owner was trying to sell it as being alive and healthy. The parody was that Frazier admirers were doing the same with many of Frazier's opponents, particularly Zglwicz, Daniels, Stander, and Ellis when he fought Frazier in Melbourne (you know, the 'Weekend at Bernie's' fight). Given that even Frazier acknowledges in his book that journalists were accusing him of fighting 'dogmeat' and 'tomato cans', our comments weren't far from reality. You guys just didn't want to admit it. Anyway, The Dead Parrot Society stuff was an attempt at humour. No insult was intended and it is a pity you took it that way. If I remember rightly, Steve even asked to become a member. He joined in the jocular sense of fun the Society topic injected into the debate. Sometimes, Kent, you can have humour mixed with facts in discussions. It is good simple fun, except when people assume the identity of someone else, like Forest Ward did, posting offensive rubbish such as "pushing people under trains", hoping they "die slow and painful deaths", and then writing stuff joyful of Ali's deteriorating health. That's not free speech, as Fan stupidly argued, as it actually comes at the cost to the reputation of the REAL Forest Ward who wouldn't enjoy those whacko beliefs being attributed to him. (Imagine if someone was posting using YOUR name Kent without your permission.) This aspect was explained to Fan by Howard and Fan's failure to respond tacitly indicates his acceptance of that obvious notion. The callous and spiteful stuff from Forest is what is offensive and wrong, Kent, not attempts at humour like The Dead Parrot Society. If during your vacation you come across the person using the name Forest Ward - you say you know him, you might explain that aspect to him. I remind you, Kent, this is what the imposter calling himself Forest Ward wrote on 06/23/05 in praising Joe Frazier: "Frazier takes great pleasure in seeing Ali stagger around with his hands shaking and not being able to talk. Joe gladly takes the responsibility for a lot of Ali's bodily damage." Of course, you said nothing to him Kent about this disgraceful post, and that is why others fire up when you have the gall to criticize them for comments far less offensive. What is more offensive: The Dead Parrot Society stuff or taking "great pleasure in seeing Ali staggering around with his hands shaking and not being able to talk." Far from being the victim, Kent, your silence tacitly endorsed the cruel spiteful callous jibe from Forest at Parkinson's Disease victims like Ali. By comparison the comments that followed about Frazier were tame.

---

\[8/7/05 05:20:28 PM\] Noam\|same\|same\|10\|Massimo - I know I'll be accused of being biased here, but I think that Laila Ali is way better looking than Joe.Kent - despite my comments about you, I do sincerely hope that you return here with a clear head ready for some enjoyable and insightful debate.

\[8/7/05 06:34:48 PM\] Howard C. |Louisville|howardc@louisville||10|Kent: I've said it before but I know you are a decent, upright individual, who brings knowledge and experience to this site and that's why it genuinely bothers me that you are upset. However, there is a perception of double standards and that's what Noam took a long time to say. Fan: If you can give me a reliable quote from a published book or acclaimed writer (vis a vis 'Brutal Artistry' and Thomas Hauser) that Senator Robert E. Byrd has completely renounced his KKK membership, beliefs, and sympathies, then I will change my opinion of him.

\[8/7/05 10:29:25 PM\] Howard - let's look for a Hauser analog (i.e. a Byrd "flack", as someone else described the Acclaimed One). Wait - who better than Byrd himself? We're in luck, his memoirs were just published, in June! But you knew that. Unlike you-know-who, Byrd has been apologizing, ad nauseum, for decades. He must have figured his constituents would be a bit more discerning than the Champ's. Is he acclaimed enough to change your opinion of him? Not mine. Noam, your concern for the reputation of the real Forest Ward (it must be hard to keep track, there are so many - including me) is touching. Here I thought you rode "Forest" like Zorro only because he was a Frazier fan. But all along it was the identity fraud that set you off. My apologies. By the way, I think the real Forest fought on one of Jerry's undercards. Jerry Quarry. Remember?
Was that the source of all those concussions? That was a joke. Just trying to show Steve that I have a sense of humor. Oh, sorry Noam. Humour.

Some interesting trivia on heavyweight world champions:

- Heaviest: Carnera 260
- Lightest: Fitzsimmons 167
- Tallest: Willard 6-6 1/4
- Shortest: Burns 5'7"
- Longest reach: Carnera 85.5
- Shortest: Patterson, Tyson, Seldon 71
- Biggest chest normal: Carnera, Foreman, Bruno
- Smallest chest normal: Johnson 37.5
- Biggest waist: Foreman 39.5 (38 Tubbs, Carnera, Appel, Smith)
- Smallest waist: 32 Holyfield, M. Spinks, Fitzsimmons, Marciano
- Biggest bicep: 20 Foreman, Carnera 18.5, Smith and Douglas
- Smallest bicep: 12 Fitzsimmons, 13 Braddock
- Neck biggest: 20 Moorer and Foreman, 19.75 Seldon and Tyson, 19.5 Holyfield
- Smallest neck: 15 Fitzsimmons
- Biggest wrist: 12 Patterson, Johnson 10.5, McCall
- Smallest wrist: 10 Miller
- Biggest ankle: 13 Frazier, Charles, Holyfield
- Smallest ankle: 8.25 Fitzsimmons and Burns
- Biggest thigh: Carnera 30, Smith 29, Foreman 28, Willard 26
- Smallest thigh: Charles, Walcott, Corbett, Fitzsimmons, Baer
- Biggest fist: 15 Liston
- Smallest fist: 11.25 Tunney and Dempsey
- Biggest forearm: 16 Carnera, Sharkey
- Smallest forearm: 11.5 Corbett
- Biggest intellect: Ali, Corbett
- Smallest intellect: Tyson

Thought you guys might find this stuff interesting.

You forgot about shoe sizes:

- Carnera: 17
- Lewis: 15.5
- Bruno: wears 14 and Ali' 12 or 13.

Some people think Willard was more like 6'5"+. I think Vitali KLitschko is the wiltest heavyweight champion (I think he is about the same height as Warren Coolidge). If I remember correctly Ernie "Clay" Terrell owned a belt (I think the WBA) and he was, at about 6'6", way wilter than Ali' but way andreer than Wilt Chamberlain. I'm surprised that Moorer and Foreman have bigger necks than Mike Tyson!

I have just discovered that legendary Vince Miller (Wilt Chamberlain's best friend for over 50 years) revealed that Wilt Chamberlain wore a shoe size 15.
is, I observed long ago that the remarks about Ali's health were certainly less than charitable, and I've never said anything of the sort. I see you've picked up on Noah's in depth analysis of free speech. The one in which he so eloquently characterized my view, that Forest is free to comment as he likes on this site, as...... "stupid". Flash: in this country, citizens are free to say things you and I may disagree with. Controversial things, unpleasant things, offensive things. Even Forest and Noah enjoy this privileged. You and I, in turn, are free to disagree. Isn't that great?

Your freedom of speech only becomes limited, as someone once summarized, where your fist ends and my nose begins. You know, yelling "fire" in a crowded theater (theatre for Noah), that sort of thing. Last time I checked, the Supreme Court had not yet ruled that insulting Ali, or Noah, or me, is prohibited by the Constitution.

I don't remember what you asked me about Hauser, the (acclaimed) professional Ali biographer. I do remember you unjustly taking Fandom to task for lack of objectivity immediately after he explicitly acknowledged that both Hauser and Futch should be presumed biased. Your question was so completely off base that he then asked if you even bothered to read his post. I wonder the same thing. Not very fair, Howard.

You recently asked me about the all time greats, in an attempt to change the direction of the dialogue (or so I thought) and, silly me, I candidly responded. You ignored my response, going back on the attack instead. I inferred that you really just wanted to argue. Then Kent was again savaged. And I am the pain in the ass?

Do you really wonder why many people prefer to post anonymously? | 8/8/05 08:43:04 AM|Fan|USA||n/a|||10|Hey Noah, I see I am now ranked among the World Heavyweight Champions, albeit, the one with the "smallest intellect".

Please remember, you accused me of being Forest The Imposter. (Of course, I'm not). But even the real Forest Ward was never Champ, was he?

That joke was a bit of a stretch. Still, it was really witty. Ouch.

When Fan/Forrest wrote something about pushing someone in front of a train, and dying a slow death, he was referring to Jane Fonda. What's the big deal no one else complained?

Bernard was over the other side of the tracks and yelled over at us. I said what's up before I could see who it was. Then I saw it was Bernard. I said Bernard what you doing out here. he says he is out running for next time. It was 2:15 am. Someone is gonna get hurt.

I got to ask you what you are talking about?

Just for the record, I never applauded Jane Fonda, not that matters I guess. I just tried to relate to some of the small minds here what her motivation was, which was peace, however clearly misguided her approach to it.

It was a very, very offensive thing to do, and always will be.

Robert Byrd has been around quite a while. I wouldn't call myself a fan, though.

Pete, maybe you can explain to me how we can give something to the Russians that they already had?

Weren't the Russians already knee-deep in Eastern-Europe when the Americans hit Berlin?

But don't let facts like that fool you.

Actually, I doubt even the Republicans of the day would have been as stupid as you, attacking an entrenched ally after the greatest exhausting war in the history of the world.

This is why you are on a boxing site and not at the UN. Thanks.

Some pretty good inductees at the Hall of Fame this weekend, QBS Steve Young. While the game isn't much, it's a fun weekend in Canton every year.

Tough news about Ruben Contraras. More proof the sports NEEDS head protection.

Tommy Hearns fought again. He's 46 years young, right? What is the latest on Rahman-Barrett and Klitschko-Brock? These are both going to happen?

Is Klitschko still the best out there after all his injuries?
||8/8/05 02:59:59 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same||||10|Sorry, forgot to add Dan Marino's name to that last post. Great passer, one of my favorites.

|8/8/05 04:07:49 PM|Pete|Cleveland|N/A|||10|Gerry the vet, you are ratbag. Fortunately, cancer is not contagious. When you wake up tomorrow. Both house of congress are still going to be Republican, And George W will still be a Republican. Get over it jerk. You know nothing about current events and less about boxing. Stalin is responsible for the death of 20 million.

|8/8/05 04:42:03 PM|Italian Stallion|Philly||Unknown|||10|Gerry and Pete meet each other on Market Street or something. Fan, Bernard is the man.

|8/8/05 04:52:54 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Massimo - I don't have feet measurements for the heavyweight champions. I also must confess that I don't have the stats for Vitali Kilitschko, so he might be in some of the categories I mentioned.I have two sets of data on George Foreman, relating to his two stints as champion. It wasn't only his weight that changed. In his first stint George was listed as 6'3" tall. Second stint 6'4". He stretched. His reach shrunk, however, from 82 to 79. How does that happen? His chest, biceps, thighs, etc, got much bigger. His ankles (a part of the body I didn't think carried fat) grew from 9.5 to 13". I wonder how he was affected in other places, if you know what I mean.The intellect part I ad libed. I accept your word, Massimo, that Tunney was the smartest, by far. Ali was smart in the ring, but not so smart out of it. A lot of what he said was rehearsed lines that we all heard repeatedly.Fan - I was trying to inject some humour with the miniscule intellect comment. Since then you've gone about proving me right.

|8/8/05 04:55:38 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Italian Stallion - didn't we see you in Deliverance?

|8/8/05 05:27:24 PM|Italian Stallion|Philly||Unknown|||10|Noam I don't know what the hell your talkin about. Maybe you should explain what you meant. Bernard once had someone talk out of the side of their mouth at him. He took the guy over a car and nearly broke his back.If you look at the video, when Ali' and Foreman are staring at each other at the center of the ring in Kinshasa, Foreman looks taller than Ali'. My best guess is Ali' 6'2" 1/2 and Foreman 6'4", but who knows. Ali' has been listed anywhere from 6'2" to 6'3" 1/2, Foreman anywhere from 6'3" to 6'4", Andre' anywhere from 6'5" to 7'7". I like this new caracter "Italian Stallion"! He is bringing alot(or a lot) to our table.

|8/8/05 05:33:44 PM|Massimo |Roma||4|||10|Noam -Massimo - I like Italian Stallion, too, and his cryptic posts. They've got me thinking. Regarding Ali. I have him listed at 6'3" tall and weighing 210.5". Weights might fluctuate, height shouldn't, unless someone has a really big afro that gets cut.Italian Stallion - I'm not sure what I meant. All I can say is that when I've been reading your posts, I get these really weird flashback thoughts, one of which involved the movie Deliverance. I don't know why. I'm searching for the answer. I'm trying to understand. I really am.

|8/9/05 12:42:46 AM|Tony Rodgers|Riverside, CA||to many stray dogs@gmail.com|||9|I lived across the street from Jerry back in the early 70's. On Ronald Circle in
I was only about 6 or 7 at the time but I remember what a great guy Jerry was. Always helpful when the family needed something. Here are a few of the other things I remember: Wife at the time (forget her name) had a cauliflower ear. Little Jerry was around. Mike was jumping of the second story of Jerry's roof into the pool. My dad was quite good around the yard, had a great lawn. Jerry asked him for advice. My dad explained fertilizer, manure, etc. Jerry ended up putting a ton of manure on his lawn and burned it to a crisp. My dad was building a patio once. Need a huge beam lifted into place. Jerry lifted it like it was nothing. I saw Jerry doing a commercial for mobile homes on the mid 80's. I think it was in Stanton. I went for a visit one day, he still remembered me and my family. Sorry to hear about his passing, he was a good guy.

Tony: It seems as though most people who knew Jerry and know the Quarrys on a personal level have only good things to say about them. I liked reading your recollection of growing up in Jerry's neighborhood. It doesn't surprise me that Jerry was strong enough to lift the building materials—did you see him compete on ABC's "The Superstars?" Good athlete.

Noam, the way you snuck that barb in, I thought you were testing my small intellect for reading comprehension. I almost missed it. But you know I hang on your every word. The joke was bad, but better than your civics lesson re: the meaning of free speech. I guess I have to cut you some slack, considering all the head trauma you suffered in whatever sport it was that you obviously excelled in. (Humor)

Stallion might be borderline genius. There are subliminal messages in his posts. If you go back and read, and re-read, you'll start to get the vibe. He's painting quite a picture. I can say with 100% certainty that if I came face to face with Bernard in a dark alley, I would step to the side and let Bernard pass without incident. Bernard rules his environment. Treat Bernard with respect, and you'll survive, even thrive. Give Bernard a hard time, and you'll pay with your dignity. Bernard rules.

I do think the Italian Stallion should write a book: "Philly streets". Hey Stallion, what do you think of Mitchell "The Blood" Green ? He against Bernard who is gonna win ?

Terry Daniels: After the loss to Frazier, Terry Daniels fought 24 more times, and compiled a record of 4 wins and 20 losses. This might be a record in futility for anybody who has ever fought for a World Title. It's almost unbelievable.
Either Frazier really ruined a good fighter with his dominating performance over Daniels, or maybe, just maybe, Joe lacked a "quality opponent" here. Dogmeat? I'll let Joe be the judge of that. Of course, one of those last 20 losses was against Ron Stander, who also fought for the title against Frazier. | 8/9/05 03:59:14 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same|||9|Stalin was a brutal dictator, but an ally in WW2.Mao was worse. Nixon shook hands with him. Bush loved China. Repubs still don't care what goes on there. Sorry, Pete, you can't have it both ways.It may sound like I'm here to stir up trouble, but I'm just answering my hate mail, and it's obvious I know alot more than some of you.Ball's back in your court, or we can get back to sports. I did. | 8/9/05 04:06:36 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same|||10|Incidentally, it's not a competing website. I'm not sure I'd call it a website at all. It's a small thing in Yahoo for the Quarrys, which I'd think Quarry fans might appreciate...From what I've read, Marciano was the shortest reach at 68". He took a lot of punches on the way in against most of the guys he fought. None could match his stamina. I love to rewatch his fights with Walcott and Moore. | 8/9/05 04:14:19 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||10|This is all quite interesting, but this place is really losing control lately. One guy posts in riddles, another wants to talk about homosexual impulses. There has even been a Deliverance reference. I know this a boxing site, at least I thought it was? Let's get back to boxing before this place shuts down for good!! | 8/9/05 05:36:27 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|John - you are right, Marciano's reach at 68" was shorter than Tyson's at 71". Please, if you detect any other errors, tell me as I'd like to have an accurate list for my 'stats' file. Thanks.Angelo - you know I agree with you on the Frazier subject.Pete - no, I wasn't accusing Stallion of repressed homosexuality. With Forest it was obviously that something was bugging him, given his a brooding hatred of Ali and intolerance of other posters, and I was guessing what was bothering him (after, I think, he gave a character assessment of me).Putting my profiler's hat on regards Stallion, it is something different. He's someone we already know on this site, upset at the way an older guy here got treated by a younger guy. Stallion is of an earlier generation when settling disputes was nobler and fairer and less violent than it is today.The 'street cred' of which Stallion speaks is, sadly, outdated. If an older boy knocked on the window of a younger boy today, with 'attitude', he'd better take a knife and a gun, even if he is Bernard. Otherwise, it'd be HIM getting slapped around. I like Stallion's world better, even though I'd guess his message is aimed at me. | 8/9/05 06:16:37 PM|Massimo |Roma||ApolloCred.com|||10|What does it mean cred, Roadschoolarette ? I couldn't find that word, not even in the best dictionaries!!!!!! I guess it's slang.| 8/9/05 10:07:30 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Massimo - 'cred' means something like 'law of the street'. Rather than laws that are actually legislated and policed, 'cred' is the rule that applies among the polulace, usually petty street criminals, not 'cosa nostra'.Italian Stallion is a guy in his 50s. He drew the name from The Rocky era (if he was younger he'd probably call himself 'Doggy Dog Do' or similar). He comes from a trained and disciplined background - military but more likely law enforcement - because he can suppress anger even in the face of insults and he doesn't use foul language. He had an old style education where you spelt correctly without needing a computer spell check and you take pride in the presentation. Notice how he uses good grammer; not the deliberately bad stuff of today's youth vandalizing our language. His use of the term 'street cred' points to a law enforcement background because he has knowledge of such things as a street cop would. He believes in good guys and bad guys (just like cops do; military guys are good versus evil guys). Being middle aged, he believes in old style discipline where the father makes the son face up to his mistakes. Justice is meted out by the older youth to the younger one using fists (not knives and guns like today). His sense of fair play is what makes cops feel good about themselves. Stallion is trying to make himself spookier and more intimidating through the subliminal and seemingly erratic way he writes, but he deliberately leaves his message obvious (so that we can see the forest for the trees). This is typical criminal and whacko m.o. (as cops know). He is not a new poster (he has knowledge of past events here), and is on the side of the older guy (Forest) against the younger one (me). Obviously, he is unhappy the way Forest Ward was treated. Because Forest (or friend) thinks he has lost face and can't come back here in person, he returns in the form of the spooky Stallion to strike fear into the soul of the perp. The matter is not closed, he threatens (as would be the case with Forest gone, never to return). You haven't won, is the spin side of his message (just in case we were thinking in terms of win/lose).

Considering the black tone used by the Stallion, he is unhappy in middle-age, probably retired as a cop, bit of a loner after being divorced, perhaps drinks too much. Takes things to heart very easily. Stews and broods and boils. Small problems become big ones. Minor slights grow into huge insults. More of a danger to himself, than anyone else, I would think, even with the great Bernard by his side.

Hey Stallion, am I getting close? | 8/9/05 11:36:30 PM|Steve|na|10|Toney Rodgers, if your memories listed in this post are accurate, then I thank you. I love to hear any true stories about Jerry's life. Anything else you remember, please post it. I know that Jerry could militarily press his own bodyweight. This is quite a feat for a 200lb man. For a non weightlifter, this takes a very naturally strong man. I remember him in the "Superstars" competition. He was a natural home run hitter, and did very well in the obstacle course. He could have been an Army Ranger. | 8/9/05 11:56:39 PM|steve|N.J.|10|Fan, I'm starting to think your the last remaining above average intellect left on this site who doesn't have some argumentative agenda. YOUR POST OF 8/9/05 cut right to the heart of the matter. If we get any more posters who think their Edgar Allen Poe, or experts on the sexual proclivities of the people who inhabit the more sparsely populated areas of our south eastern states, then we probably will lose Kent, and other posters who are interested in rational debate about the Quarry's place in boxing history. I trained in North and South Carolina, and Lousiana. Their just people, like us. |

| 8/10/05 12:14:12 AM|steve|nj|10|Noam, the Italian stallion is just talking his stuff. I don't have your skills as an FBI profiler, but he sure sounds angry. I can only surmise he's talking about Bernard Hopkins. I grew up in Camden, N.J., just across the Ben Franklin Bridge from Philly. Yes, those streets where mean. However, I grew up with guys who couldn't fight a lick. They still grew up to be good men. I'm not sure who Bernard is supposed to be, but if you strut your stuff in Philly or Camden long enough, you'll meet a bad end. |

| 8/10/05 01:29:14 AM|Noam|same|10|Hi Steve - I like Stallion and I'm just trying to interpret what he is saying. He's playing a game and I'm just trying to be a part of it. Bernard might be Forest, or Hopkins, or ...... that is the exciting part. I hope Stallion continues to post. His style is interesting and different. | 8/10/05 03:26:07 AM|steve|nj|10|Hi, Noam, My absolutely favorite heavyweight tough guy was Stanley Ketchell. I like tough guys. Stanley was too tough for any middleweight of his era. So, he fought Jack Johnson for the heavyweight title. He gave away about 50lbs. He knocked Johnson down in one of the early rounds. Johnson got up, and ko'd Ketchell. Knocking out several of Ketchell's teeth. One tooth remained imbedded in Johnson's glove. I think Ketchell would have beaten Roy Jones Jr.!
| 8/10/05 03:41:23 AM | steve | nj || na ||| 10 | Noam, as an afterthought about tough guys. Stanley Ketchell was shot dead in a dinner by a jealous husband for flirting with a woman. I think he was 23 yrs old.
| 8/10/05 07:03:00 AM | John Gerard | NYC || rock289z@yahoo.com ||| 10 | NOAM: I don't know what height you have for Tyson, but he is about 5'9 maybe 5/9 1/2. I stood right next to him and I am only 6' and he was up to my chin. Even my wife was surprised at his height. By the way, when I met him in the streets of NYC he was really, really nice to my wife and I. Very patient.
| 8/10/05 07:40:02 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC || funktron@yahoo.com ||| 10 | Noam: With Stallion, it appears that you can see the "forest" through the trees. Has it occurred to you that this "retirement" from police work might have been forced?
| 8/10/05 08:49:48 AM | Fan | USA || n/a ||| 10 | Today was the first time I actually laughed out loud while on this site. It was when I got to the part where our boy divined that Stallion, the old, divorced, retired cop, drinks too much.
The only information Noam lacks re: Stallion seems to be his all-important shoe size. The truly bizarre thing is not that Noam has now revealed the uncanny power to predict employment status, sexual preference, etc. from these short, anonymous blurbs. (They could use you at Quantico, Noam, it is your patriotic duty to volunteer.) It is that he enjoys a small but loyal cadre of acolytes who buy into this insanity. Priceless! I suppose now the Conspiracy Theorists are implying that Stallion is Forest is Fandom is Fan is......
{I am surprised that John Gerard is among them. He used to offer some very insightful thoughts here. I seem to recall he and Forest exchanging solid info and opinions about boxing. It sounded like they both knew boxing. But he apparently isn't bothered by the Web Master of Free Speech harassing the poor guy away, along with Kent.}
| 8/10/05 11:30:34 AM | Italian Stallion | Philly || Unknown ||| 10 | Last time they laughed and said he was done, too old to be any good anyway. Don't mistake activity for progress, words for thoughts. Bernard will be quick to remind us all that the end will come quick next time. There is no other way now for it to end.
| 8/10/05 12:01:09 PM | John Gerard | NYC || rock289z@yahoo.com ||| 10 | FAN: Please understand, I still to only one topic on this site: boxing. I do have opinions regarding politics, religion, and other important issues, but quite frankly, I don't think anyone gives a darn about them. Really why should they? I know no more than anyone else, perhaps less on those matters. But I do know boxing a little and I just stick to it. Read any of my posts over the past few years and you will see they are limited to just that. Be well and enjoy the board.
| 8/10/05 05:09:55 PM | Noam | same || same ||| 10 | John Gerard - I downloaded the statistics on Tyson's and other champions' dimensions from a site called Boxing Insider (http://www.boxinginsider.com) I suspect that some of the information - like you said about Tyson - might be inaccurate. As I said to Massimo before, they have two sets of stats for Foreman (for the two times he was champion) and he grew from one to the other in height, but shrunk in reach. Boxing Insider has Tyson 5'11.5" and I accept what you say about him being smaller. About him being a nice guy, I don't know. Perhaps he has huge mood swings from being nice to road rages, etc. I hope there is some good in him and that he gets his act together. A Angelo - that's why I said "forest for the trees" and I was being oblique, like Stallion. Fan - I'm thankful that I got a laugh from you. It made it all worth it. I know you see yourself as being the wise moderator on this site, but where were you when the guy calling himself Forest was going off on his anti-Ali and everyone else rants. Perhaps that was the time things needed moderating. Could it be that Forest calling you his "no.1 man" had its desired effect, or, heaven condemn me for raising the possibility, was it just you talking to you. All your posts seem to revolve around Forest Ward and people are asking why. Going back through the posts, Fan, you don't talk about boxing. I'd like to think I've contributed on boxing subjects with statistics (that took time to research) and sometimes with thoughtful comments. I accept that at times I've deviated when I shouldn't have, and I have twice apologized for comments I made. But I'm struggling to find your contribution. And from Forest, the poster you are going out of your way to avenge and defend, I can only find insults with no apologies. You keep talking about "free speech". Please answer whether you consider it acceptable for someone to fraudulently assume the name of another person, then post on a site using that assumed name making hateful, offensive comments that have not been endorsed by the person genuinely holding that name?

Would the real Forest Ward like his name being used to laugh at Ali because he can't walk and talk at times and has awful shakes? I doubt it. Would the real Forest Ward like his name associated with statements that he hopes someone is pushed under a train and dies a slow and painful death? No. 'Forest' wasn't a victim hounded away from the site. He was an imposter making hateful comments. It might not have happened if you had intervened and pulled him into line. It's not a difficult concept to understand, Fan, even if you have been trying your hardest to ignore it whenever it's mentioned to you. Fan, you not only tell people what they should and shouldn't write, you are now chiding writers as to who they should and shouldn't converse with. You remind me of a schoolmarm.

Steve - I got a book on Jack Johnson and it mentions Stanley Ketchel. He was the middleweight champion, only 5'9" tall, weighing 160 pounds. A reporter who knew him said, "Ketchel was an exception to the human race. He was a savage. He would pound and rip his opponent's eyes, nose and mouth in a clinch. He couldn't get enough blood. His nickname, 'the Assassin', fit him like a glove." He fought Johnson in October 1909 and movie cameras filmed the fight. They say that Johnson and Ketchel both agreed that they would not knock the other out in the early rounds so that there was more film to watch. In the 12th round Ketchel hit Johnson with a roundhouse right and knocked him down. (Johnson later claimed he faked the knockdown for the movie but nobody believed him). Anyway, furious at being double-crossed Johnson then broke several of Stanley's teeth and knocked him out cold for several minutes. That night Ketchel and Johnson had a "rollicking good time" together gambling, and Ketchel took Johnson for $700 shooting craps. That was Ketchel's last fight. He was 24 years old when shot in the back by the husband of a woman cooking Ketchel breakfast.

You're right, Steve, Ketchel was a tough guy middleweight fighting a heavyweight champion. Sort of like a Roy Jones Jr of those times.

Another unbelievable guy was Sam Langford. He was only 5'7" 160 lbs and fought and gave hell to all the best heavyweights (Joe Jannette, George Godfrey, Jack Johnson, Sam Mc Vey etc.) of his time. George Godfrey was included by Ring Magazine among the 100 hardest punchers of all times and divisions. At 6'3" 6'4" and with a weight varying from 220 to 260 he was a powerhouse. Well, Sam fought him 3 times: a draw, a KO win in the first round and a KO win in the 2...Just unbelievable! Can you imagine Sam Langford vs Vitali Klitschko?
said that it was the "only real beating" he ever got to that time. Johnson then ducked Langford for the rest of his career and this caused friction between them and they hated each other. Johnson once tried to run over Langford in his car, he hated him so much. Later on, Langford was still fighting, almost blind, and guys still wouldn't fight him.}

[8/10/05 09:42:21 PM]Noam|same|same|10

Massimo - I remembered that you previously mentioned The Ring Magazine Rankings for the late 1960s and early 1970s. I found them and I think Angelo would probably find some of the details informative:1969: Mac Foster was 5, Liston 6, Cooper 91970: Mac Foster 5, Cooper 6, Liston 81971: Mac Foster 5, Ellis 6, Patterson 71972: Ron Lyle 4, Patterson 5, Terrell 6, Bugner 8, Norton 9

Norton 2, Quarry 4, Lyle 5, Shavers 6, Bugner 8, Ellis was 9 (the final time Ellis appeared in the rankings)1974: Lyle 3, Norton 6, Quarry 71975: Norton 1, Young 2, Lyle 5, Shavers 6, Bugner 81976: Norton 2, Young 3, Lyle 5, Holmes 6, Bugner 10Stander, Daniels, Zyglewicz and Cummings NEVER appeared in the Ring Rankings. Interesting.

[8/11/05 12:19:36 AM]Steve|nj|na|10

Fan, I sometimes think Jerry Quarry had a dark cloud hanging over his head. His father had "hard luck" tattooed on his knuckles. His father and Johnny Flores didn't seem to agree on anything pertaining to Jerry's career. I've heard that Jerry was hard to shake out of the rack in the mornings for roadwork, and whoever was responsible for getting him up, often slept in himself. I just think it's too bad Jerry didn't have Gil Clancy at the beginning of his career.

[8/11/05 01:31:25 AM]Steve |NJ|NA|10

Fan, the site. I'd be surprised if Forrest and Kent were chased off this site by Noam, Rhoads Scholerate, Angelo, or C. Whoever they where probably bored off this site. I'm starting to lose interest myself, and hell, I'm not even all that intelligent.

Noam, I don't know if Sam Langford was the best fighter never to win a title, but his record is impressive: W 181 (130 ko's) (+ 16 news) &124 L 34 (+ 12 news) &124 D 34 (+ 10 news) &124 Total 314 Heck, he fought more often than Joe Frazier!!

[8/11/05 02:43:22 AM]Brandi Quarry|James Quarry Family|

I've been sitting here reading all the letters posted for the last couple of weeks. I'm really shocked, that you have nothing better to do on a site that has been kept out of love for my late husband, James (Mr. Jimmy) and his great brother, Jerry, to fuss and fight over nothing, except to get attention, and or, to cause others to want to leave this site that they have enjoyed for years. I pay for this site-not you, and if all this doesn't stop, I'll pull the plug on it. I don't care who's who, or who they like, or don't like, this site is for everyone, not just a few. Then some of you, that think you run it, are wrong. This is a boxing site, not a chat room, for fighting. People enjoy the stories and the commits about all boxers. you know who you are, and if you don't stop, I'll close it down. Or I'll block you, so you can't come on the site. Now lets stick with boxing/sports. Thank you. Brandi Quarry

[8/11/05 10:50:17 AM]Pete |Cleveland|N/A|10

For days now I have been reading old posts and it is very interesting and confusing. I have to make notes on the side to remind me of who is who. As a result let give some of my observations.Noam did not run Forrest/Fan off the board. Forrest left on his own account read his last post.Noam did not run Kent off the board. Kent is taking a rest. Kent says he will be back.In the interest of fairness I have to correct Noam. Forrest/Fan never pretended to be the fighter, when asked by someone if he was the fighter he said no. Most of the people on this site never heard of the fighter named Forrest Ward. My reading on the situation is that Forrest/Fan was not an imposter but an oldtimer living off memories. At least that is my take.
Noam, who are your top 10 lightheavyweights of all time.

Right before he died, Jack Dempsey said that Sam Langford was the best fighter he ever saw. He added that he is not sure he could have beaten him even at his best.

We have to respect the host/hostess of the site and that means, let's talk boxing!  Brandi did what James would have done---got on here and straightened us out.  Noam:  I did find those year-by-year rankings interesting for obvious reasons.  Contrary to what others have said, these guys we've talked about (Foster, Shavers, Lyle, etc.) were ranked in the top ten from the late 60's through the mid-70's and they were ducked.  It's interesting that the contender Jerry Quarry found time to fight each and every one of them, as did Champion Muhammad Ali.  But Champion/then Challenger Smokin' Joe is missing them from his resume.  A matter of timing?  Maybe, but that's hard to swallow.  I watched the JQ tape again a couple weeks ago.  It's amazing that he got in with these hitters and tamed them.  Jerry's wins against Foster and Lyle were masterpiece.  His first round KO of Shavers was astonishing---it would have been a very interesting fight if he didn't get out of the gate so fast.  If Shavers actually fought into the second or third round and settled down, Jerry would have had his work cut out for him.

To the extent that my posts have caused you any grief, I sincerely apologize.  My intentions have been honorable, and I've tried to remain respectful to others in expressing my opinions.  However, in deference to you and the memory of James and Jerry, I will comport myself accordingly.  Offending you is the last thing I would want to do on this site.

Brandi, to the extent that my posts have caused you any grief, I sincerely apologize.  My intentions have been honorable, and I've tried to remain respectful to others in expressing my opinions.  However, in deference to you and the memory of James and Jerry, I will comport myself accordingly.  Offending you is the last thing I would want to do on this site.

You have made it clear that it is still unwise to mess with the Quarrys!!

Thanks Brandi.  Here is a list of Jerry's top 10 performances.1. Ron Lyle-- A complete performance that showed are great Jerry truly was. 2. Earnie Shavers- Bombing out the bomber in a spectacular way.3. Mac Foster- Mac would have beaten almost any heavyweight in the world that night, not Jerry though.4. Floyd Patterson II- Beating Floyd after Floyd was all ready for him really put Jerry on the map.5. Thad Spencer- Destruction of number two ranked contender.6. Buster Mathis- From all accounts a whitewashing of the formidable Mathis.7. Joe Frazier I- Showed the heart of a lion despite loss.8. Floyd Patterson I- Jerry bursts on the scene while drawing with Floyd.9. Jack Bodell- Destroyed the ranked Bodell in 1 round!10. Larry Middleton- Beat tough Middleton when Middleton was a coming contender.

Noam - I agree entirely.  Excuses can be made for just about anything but, in the end, facts are facts, he didn't fight those guys and the common thread was that those guys were heavy punchers.  If you want the full list do a google search on The Ring Magazine Rankings 1960 - 1980.  The other thing is notice Mac Foster's rankings, and his ko %.  He was there to be fought if someone wanted to.Pete - lightheavyweights ? I'll have to do some research on that.  By the way, admitting that he wasn't the real Forest Ward came later.  For people casually visiting this site, they wouldn't know he wasn't the real Forest Ward unless they saw that one entry.  A bit like looking for a needle in a haystack.  We've moved on but his comments laughing at Ali's condition, especially on this site, was appalling.  I'm confident people won't let that be repeated.

I appreciate your list.  Jerry and Frazier were the same age and comparing the two just lets us know that Jerry took everyone one.  Shavers, Lyle, Mac Foster, et al....Jerry just went down the list of who was available and got in the ring and fought them.  Seeing the names on your list makes us all realize that.
A wise and instructive post followed by some insightful and informative ones. I've always considered that the fight that confirmed Jerry Quarry's standing as boxing's 'braveheart' was his win over Mac Foster in 1970. Consider this. Before that fight Foster had won all of his fights by knockout - 24 in a row. In the year before he faced Jerry he had six fights and none of his opponents lasted more than five rounds. In that period he had knocked out Cleveland Williams twice and Thad Spencer in the first round. This guy was a looming monster that few wanted any part of. Jerry beat him in six rounds. Foster didn't lose again for two years and that was a points loss to Ali. In his career Foster had 30 wins, all by kayo. The ONLY kayo loss that Mac Foster ever suffered was against Quarry.

There's no doubt in my mind that JQ in his best nights was formidable! If he had fought against Ellis the way he fought against Mac Foster he would have been heavyweight champion. It literally hurts me that I never saw the Quarry-Lyle fight, one of Jerry's best fights. Fan (the one from Fandom) -- How good was the Quarry-Lyle fight? Decent, good, very good, a classic? What's your opinion? Thanks.

Jerry is the night, what a night it was.

Massimo: I wouldn't call Quarry-Lyle a classic, but instead, a great performance by Jerry Quarry. Lyle was competitive, but Quarry outboxed him, outthustled him and had an energy burst at the end of the fight, still moving very well and still throwing combinations. His experience overcame Lyle's size and power advantage. Lyle gave Quarry a lot of respect at the end of the fight. He knew he was beaten fairly—and he learned a lot that night.

Massimo: Thanks. Jerry did beat someone who was bigger and stronger than him (or himself). So, as far as skills go, he proved he was the better fighter.

Massimo: I see that your buddy Oliver McCall is fighting on Saturday night! Also on the card is Hasim "The Rock" Rahman against Two Gun Barrett.

Bernard got sent to prison. He took dance and singing lessons. Some guy asked him why the hell he was learning sissy stuff. Bernard said that he wanted to know how to walk the walk and talk the talk. The guy then knocked the singing and dancing sissy out. That's prison cred.

Talked to my mom, she remembers it. Was a big beam, couple hundred pounds, needed lifting up to the ceiling in the living room, not patio as I said before. My dad and uncle could not do it. My mom said 'Go get Jerry'. He came over, picked it up by himself, went up the ladder with it.
and said "where do you want it?". Mom said he had the biggest neck she had ever seen in her life. Also remembers when he came back from the Ali / Vegas fight with stitches. Wife was Kathy (fist wife), already had little Jerry and Carrie. Thats all for now. | 8/13/05 03:45:50 PM | JIMMY DORSEY | VENTURA CALIFORNIA | RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM | | 10 | HEY FOLKS: there is some great pictures of Jerry on ebay -Negatives of a pre-bout party of Jerry's signing for Jimmy Ellis, I think the pictures have Chargins wife whom was a one of the promotor's with Don (an attractive blonde) and the others besides the celebs I believe to be Jerry's sister, Brenda maybe Sonya? anyway that was 1968 and the photo's were great! No wonder Jerry received some acting parts. take care. | 8/14/05 10:39:24 AM | Massimo | Roma | oliver mc call.com | | | 10 | Oliver "The Atomic Bull" Mc Call did beat (impossible name) Saleta by KOT 4 !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!What have I been saying (for) all this time ? Oliver Mc Call is the greatest. His chin is as good as Alli's but he hits harder. | 8/14/05 01:22:56 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | | | 10 | Rahman-Barrett was a snooze. Pity that I paid actual money to watch that nonsense. Two 220+ guys that would rather hug than anything else. At least the crowd boomed the whole fight, it made me feel like I wasn't alone in thinking how bad this all was.| 8/15/05 02:04:27 AM | steve | nj | na | | | 10 | Thanks Brandi. It's about time somebody took control. You pay for this site. If you get a nutbag, then by all means, BLOCK HIM OR HER OFF!!! Now you sound like a real Quarry. Mr.Jimmy wouldn't have stood for half the crazy, bullshit, pretender conversations that have started taking place here lately. Where sarcasm and insults seem to mean more than meaningful content. | 8/15/05 02:28:53 AM | Steve | nj | na | | | 10 | Massimo, maybe a real tough little guy, like you or Stanley Ketchell, with about a size ten shoe, could get underneath the Klitchko brothers long jabs and right hands. Afterall, I've never seen either one of them bend at the waist during a fight. Perhaps a little guy could run into one of them, and trip him up. This could cause him to fall down, and injure one of those big, fragile muscles. I think George Foreman would have KO'D either of them early. | 8/15/05 03:30:11 AM | Massimo | Roma | 4 | | | 10 | Like the legendary Rino Tommasi uses to say, we can't know one fighter's limits (I could have used "flaws") until his first loss. In my mind Vitali is still undefeated, as his first loss was due to an injury and against Lennox Lewis. He was winning on all the scorecards and I think the fight has been stopped too soon. Anyway, by watching Vitali in the ring, he looks far from being unbeatable. He doesn't seem so scarier and impressive like Sonny Liston and George Foreman did seem (even if for a very short time). But I think in this moment he is the best in the business. I doubt that Giacomo Toney can beat him, maybe yes, but I would bet on Vitali. I have never seen this famous new fighter Samuele Pietro, though. Regarding Stanley Ketchel, I just don't know. I have seen him fight for about 4 minutes against Jack Johnson... Too little to judge him. By the way, I have never wore a size 10 and I never will. I wear a size 40-41 in Italy (it depends on the kind of shoe) which corrisponds I think to about 7 1/2-8 in Wyoming. A size 10 in Wyoming corrisponds to about 44 in Italy, I think. | 8/15/05 01:58:33 PM | steve | nj | na | | | 10 | Fan, it's too bad you wasted your money watching those two dancing bears. However, I've wasted alot of money myself on lousy fight cards. I knew they would be lousy, but I just had to see them. If you ever see Samuel Peters on a fight card, pay to see it. You will get your moneys'worth. | 8/15/05 02:13:35 PM | Steve | nj | na | | | 10 | Peters reminds me of a Joe Frazier on sterosids. He can be hit, but has a knack for rolling with and deflecting punches. He hits harder and throws a greater volume of punches than anyone I've seen out there lately. He does however, make that power puncher's mistake of trying to load up on every punch. So far though, he seems to have the conditioning and stamina to get away with it.

Steve, Peter is going to Wladimir Klitschko in Sept on HBO. That should promise some serious fireworks.

Massimo - I hear that Mike Tyson is holidaying in Italy and he has been misbehaving. Shock, horror!!

I read that too. He is misbehaving!! Unbelievable!! I'm so upset!! His behaviour has always been so sweet throughout all his life! A true example, in and out of the ring (or inside and outside of the ring)! If he is smart, he'll stay away from me. If Kenny Mc Bride could beat him, I could spank him all the way from Italia back to his native New York. What's my name, Mike? I have also read that Shaquille O'Neal has been in Italia as well. Seriously speaking, this is really a good guy. He helps children all the time, he is a kind hearted big fella with a shoe size 22 (59 in Italia).

Massimo - I solved the Max Baer issue! The World Encyclopedia of Boxing, under the heading Max Baer, states....."Baer died in a Hollywood hotel room on November 21, 1959: his last words, to the hotel operator who asked if he wanted the house doctor, were "No - I need a people doctor.""I remember someone saying that Baer's son played Jeffro in the Beverley Hillbillies. Is this correct? Was he known as Max Baer junior?

I have a couple of trivia questions. A) Who was the first southpaw heavyweight champion? B) Who was the first Italian world champion? C) What was the smallest attendance ever at a heavyweight title fight and who were the boxers involved?

Correction-
Carnera vs Loughran was fought in 38 B.M. (1934 A.C.).

A) Michael Moorer was the first heavyweight champion southpaw. B) Frankie Conley was the first Italian world champion in 1910. C) The heaviest combined total fight was in Rome on October 22, 1933 when Carnera (259.5 pounds) outpointed Paulino Uzcudun (229.25 pounds) for a total weight of 488.75 pounds. Too much spaghetti! Try these ones:

A) Who was the first American world champion?
B) Who was the oldest light-heavyweight champion of all time?

(Again) What was the smallest attendance at a heavyweight title fight?
Clay-Liston II Lewiston Maine

Very good try, though. Answers:1) The first American champion was Paddy Duffy in 1888.2) Bob Fitzsimons was the oldest light-heavyweight of all time at 40 years, 5 months, and 30 days.3) The smallest attendance at a heavyweight title fight was in 1965 between Ali and Liston (2) at Maine - only 2,434 were there.More trivia ? Okay.A) What do Henry Armstrong, Bernard Hopkins, Benny Leonard, 'Bonecrusher' Smith, and Mike Weaver all have in common ?B) Who holds the longest title reign in the lightweight division ?C) Who was the first black referee in a world title bout ?

Hi Noam, who was the inept referee who couldn't pull Emile Griffith off Benie Paret, while Griffith beat him to death in a corner? Who was the inept ref. who didn't stop the second Quarry vs Frazier fight until Jerry was bleeding to death from cuts?

Steve, I don't know the name of the ref that did the fatal Griffith/Paret fight but one thing I recently learned is that Parets fatal injuries were most likely inflicted in his previous fight with Gene Fulmer. People that seen it said he got the worst beating in a fight they ever seen. Paret was rushed into a fight with Griffith just for the money.Trivia question....who was the only fighter to cut Ali in a fight?????

Bob Foster was the only fighter to cut Ali in a fight.Are you sure about Fitzsimmons ? Archie Moore was 91 when he defeated Yvone Durelle for the second time in 1959 for the light-heavyweight title.Steve - I'll try and find the name of the ref. But I can give you some trivia from the Benny Paret v Griffith fight in 1962. After the fight they increased the number of ropes from 3 to 4 because Paret got caught in the 3 ropes. I would have thought 4 ropes would be more easily to tangle, but there you go.

Archie Moore was 47 when defended the title against Guilio Rinaldi. In common- Lost their debut First Black- Jack Johnson

You've got another one right. I think you and Massimo are the best students - the Gene Tunney - of boxing on this site. The answers:1) All those guys have one thing in common - they all lost their first professional fights.2) Roberto Duran (who I'd have in the Top 10 pound-for-pound of all time) held the lightweight title for 6 years and 7 months - the longest reign.3) Zack Clayton was the first black referee in the Jersey Joe Walcott v Ezzard Charles fight on June 5, 1952.I have over trivia questions, but I won't post them if I'm annoying anyone doing it.

Did Ali bleed from the mouth in the Holmes fight? Would this count as a cut the same way a facial cut would? I see that NY suspended Holyfield's license to fight and now they're trying to line something up in Europe for Holyfield. Massimo, please stop them! This is getting ridiculous. I remember when Holyfield beat Tyson---he was really credible and a legitimate Champion. He was fairly well spoken, well liked and a good guy. His earnings were spectacular. EVERYONE said that he would know the right time to quit---and he'd stay around boxing as a commentator, trainer, etc. Well, instead, he's 42 years old, I believe has won twice in his last nine fights, and continues to get in the ring. This one is hard to figure out. He could have walked away with loads of money, body intact, respected and full of other potential. Instead, he's starting to look silly.|
|8/17/05 03:33:21 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||10|Ali didn't bleed noticeably against Holmes. He was cut against Bob Foster pretty badly. | |8/17/05 04:03:54 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Let's see if anyone has the answers to these:1) What was the first million dollar gate fight ?2) Who was the first fighter to win three world titles in different divisions ?3) What fight had the first woman judge officiating ? You guys might answer one of the above, but not two or three.| |8/17/05 04:15:02 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same|||10|It seems the reason Barrett-Rahman was such a dud is that the two are such close friends neither wanted to hurt the other, according to what I've read. Seems a little bizarre that they got matched at all...The idea of Tyson on a jetski is pretty funny to me, almost like a cartoon or a Chris Farley movie. Just another classic moment for the guy, I guess ...Klitschko - Peter sounds like it has the makings of a decent fight. I guess it's just as plausible that both Klitschhos could lose as it is that they might both win. It at least puts a little interest back in the division ...Ali should never have seen Spinks, let alone Holmes. After Foreman, and the third Frazier fight, he had nothing left to prove, and nothing in the tank. Again, a mandatory retirement age would have helped him here, perhaps...Holyfield is now banned in New York State. Boxing bodies may finally be paying attention. | |8/17/05 04:51:38 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|After his humiliating loss to McBride, Tyson said he wanted to become a missionary. Imagine being some poor hungry guiy in Zambia needing help and there's Mike standing there smiling at you. Even if Mike had ten roast turkeys with him, you'd still run for your life. Tribes getting around with half chewed ears if we send Mike over there. Mike the Missionary !Perhaps Mike could go into movies, like doing something with Steve Martin and those vacation flicks. Travelling around with Mike and the kids. Here's Mike beating up on the motorist who cut him off. There's Mike biting that guy on the leg for not putting enough fries on his plate. People would pay to watch it, too. | |8/17/05 04:58:28 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Gerry: Ali should have quit after Manilla. If not then, maybe after his last KO win, over Richard Dunn. After he lost to Spinks, he HAD to come back to beat Spinks. After that, there was no reason I could think of, other than another pay day, why he would take the fight against Larry Holmes, himself a great Champion, in his prime. Then, Trevor Berbick was just another really bad decision. But the age restriction/mandatory retirement is a slippery slope. Some guys are 33 and they shouldn't be fighting. Others, like Foreman, competed safely and very effectively into their 40's. Ask Michael Moorer if Foreman could still fight. For that matter, ask Evander Holyfield if Larry Holmes and George Foreman could still fight in their 40's. It's a case-by-case call in my opinion. Bernard Hopkins is okay to fight and he's aging. | |8/17/05 05:37:11 PM|Massimo |Roma|||10|I have recently read on Internet and on newspapers that Tyson wanna play in movies as a porno-star(erotik movies). Being a porno-star is slightly different than being a missionary...I don't think that anyone has ever considered Mother Theresa (as) a porno star... | |8/17/05 06:15:59 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Massimo - very good point but it remains to be seen how much Mike would bring to the table ! Iron Mike Does Dallas doesn't really appeal, though. | |8/18/05 12:05:10 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|Good one Mass (Foster cuttin Ali)! Is there anything you don't know???????Noam, Dempsey/Carpentier first million dollar gate..I knew it but had to look up spelling... and Henry Armstrong first to win 3 titles?? | |8/18/05 12:26:42 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|Noam, I beleive it was after the Ramos/Moore featherweight title fight that a fourth rope was used. |
Moore died from hitting the bottom rope. I think they also started padding the ropes too.

Ed - yes, the first million dollar gate was Dempsey v Georges Carpentier in Jersey City on July 2, 1921. 80,183 fans paid $1,789.28. The first guy to win three world titles was Bob Fitzsimmons - middleweight 1891, heavyweight 1897, and lightweight 1903.

Ed, my information is that the four ropes came into being as a direct result of the Paret v Griffith fight. The book I got it from might be wrong, I suppose. It reads:

"Paret had been unable to extricate himself from the ropes, a tragedy which led to the introduction of the four-roped ring. Just under a year later, featherweight champion Davey Moore lost his life against Sugar Ramos in Los Angeles...."

More trivia:

1) What was the first movie of a fight?
2) Who had the longest heavyweight reign?
3) Who were the first brothers to retain world titles on the same show?

Joe Louis had the longest heavyweight reign since 1937 to 1948.

Massimo - Joe Louis is right! 11 years, eight months, 18 days, to be exact. Who had the longest title reign in the light-middleweight division? (If you get this wrong you should be ashamed.)

By the way, what do you call a green vegetable that falls off your dinner plate? An escapea. :)

First brothers to retain world titles on the same card were Rafael and Gabriel Ruelas, Las Vegas, in 1995.

The first movie of a fight was Bob Fitzsimmons v James J. Corbett, Carson City, March 17, 1897.

First brothers to retain world titles on the same card were Rafael and Gabriel Ruelas, Las Vegas, in 1995. Ed - Roberto Duran is the top lightweight of all time. Who do you consider to be the top 10 lightweights of all time?

Willie the worm Monroe?

First brothers to retain world titles on the same card were Rafael and Gabriel Ruelas, Las Vegas, in 1995. The first movie of a fight was Bob Fitzsimmons v James J. Corbett, Carson City, March 17, 1897. Julio Cesar Chavez, although holding the longest light-welterweight reign of 4 years and 8 months, also fought as a lightweight in 1987 and 1988 and held the title, before relinquishing it, so he has to be in the top 10. Others, in no particular order, are Pernell Whittaker, Shane Mosley, Oscar De La Hoya, Alex Arguello, Ike Williams, Henry Armstrong, Barney Ross, Benny Leonard. I'd have Duran on top with Armstrong second. Armstrong was the first and only man to hold three titles simultaneously - featherweight 1937, welterweight 1938, and lightweight 1938. How great was he? I'm sure I've left someone deserving out of the list. Set me straight, Ed.
the Betterment of Boxing. This eleven-page writing outlines much of what Mr. Steve Acunto presented in On Banning Boxing, and then some. The first section outlines the history of the AAIB in terms of its efforts to alter the sport for the better. The Manifesto then lists and discusses twelve important concepts concerning the sport, many of which have never been appeared anywhere else. The first one includes expanding the legislative content of the Professional Boxing Act of 1996 and the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act of 2000 to encompass the many laws adopted by the New York State Athletic Commission in October of 2000, and the recommendations put forth by the National Association of Attorney Generals in their Boxing Task Force Report as published in May, 2000. Such a response would ensure safety and equitable commercial practices in the sport. A second concept states that since boxing is experiencing significant growth internationally, it must be promoted and regulated as such. A third concept suggests that boxing's litigious nature demands that fighters have access to inexpensive and helpful legal expertise to defend their financial interests more adequately against unscrupulous promoters, managers, and advisors. A fourth principle is that the findings and conclusions from the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) Act, as written on 1 June 1998, should be made available to every trainer, handler, and any physician who works in boxing. The next principle states that universities, colleges, and other medical facilities should be encouraged to research the various health issues, both underlying and predisposing, concerning fighters. These should focus on the causes and results of boxing injuries, the development of protective equipment, and any other concerns addressed in the NIOSH study mentioned above. Sixth, boxing should continue to be regulated as locally as possible, i.e. by the states. Also all commission workers should be appropriately trained to carry out their duties. The next letter will list and discuss the remaining principles, raising specific standards and establishing uniform rules. The final part will cover stopping bouts and participants. Since the AAIB has published and distributed this document, it also has served as the source of many ideas and concepts to reform the great sport of boxing. Finally, The Jerry Quarry Foundation has repeatedly supported the passage and implementation of all of these suggestions when presented as legislative items. If you want to provide feedback or ask questions concerning this letter or any other related subjects, I can be reached at ehnpbsa@aol.com, 330.743.2898, or 142 Upland Ave., Youngstown, Ohio 44505. Furthermore Mr. Stephen Acunto, Sr., Co-Founder of the AAIB, and other individuals connected with that formidable organization, also stand ready, willing, and able to help with these legislative matters concerning this great sport. I am Sincerely yours, GEORGE L. OTTO, BCD, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LICDC, LISW, MSUS, SAP Chief Counsel/Legislative Consultant Cc. Other members of Congress | 8/19/05 01:46:48 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||mooseygoop@aol.com||||10|Noam, Can't argue with your lightweight champ picks, one I might add is current (jr welter?) champ Floyd Mayweather. I think he was super lightweight champ at one point and looks like an all time great to me. I'd also say we got more talent in lighter weights, from welter on down, then any time ever. Mass, How much is gasoline in Italy? Its getting near $3 a gallon here. You drive an economy car with small shoe size??? Your into physics so why don't you invent something to replace gasoline?? You'd end up richer then all your sports heros put together!!!!!! | 8/19/05 02:53:58 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Ed-I don't remember the exact price, but it's surely higher than 3$ a gallon. Unfortunately, Italia is getting every day more expensive. I don't travel much so I can't compare Italia with other countries, but I can compare Italia of 2005, with Italia of 2000, 1995, 1990 etc. and all the prices are getting much much higher. There are lots of thieves in Italia. Getting richer than Shaq ? That's a good idea, why didn't I think of that myself first ? Money can be useful in life!!}
Ed - Mayweather is 28, won all of his 35 fights (24 ko's). I'd probably consider him more of a super featherweight, given that he won the world title in that division in 1998 and had something like eight defenses of it. He won the lightweight title in 2002 and defended it three times. Now he's moved up to light welterweight and stopped Gatti to win the title recently. Mayweather wants to move up again and fight De La Hoya. He certainly has courage and confidence. The Ring Magazine ranked Mayweather second pound-for-pound to Hopkins last year and wrote: "Relinquished the lightweight championship after a third and final defense and performed well in his first outing at 140 pounds. Fought in a more aggressive and entertaining manner in those two bouts than in some previous fights, and barely lost a round. Has the speed, boxing skills, and confidence to beat anyone his size, but might be pushing the limits of his slender body too far if he persists in gunning for Oscar De Lay Hoya, who is now fighting at middleweight."So, Ed, firstly, I'm wondering whether Mayweather has done enough in the lightweight division to be considered in the top 10 all time, given that he only had three defenses of that title. Probably, if we want to rank him as an all time great, we'd have to fit him in the super featherweight division, in my opinion.

Yes I agree not enough fights as lightweight to be considered with the greats that made that division there home. Also considering how Shane Mosely and Roy Jones have fallen apart (esp. Roy) its premature to speculate like that I guess. I mean Roy Jones went from being the greatest fighter of all time, in some peoples books, to who knows what now. One negative about Mayweather is his hands. I understand they are very brittle and that's why his ko ratio has fallen off...that plus hes fighting bigger guys.

1) Whos the first fighter to stop George Chuvalo?
2) Whos the only fighter to win a world championship as a substitute for a substitute? In other words the first guy had to cancel then the second guy canceled and this guy filled in and WONT... man in history to hold three world titles simultaneously, but he almost won a fourth when held to a draw by the then current middleweight champion. Armstrong won the featherweight, welterweight, and lightweight titles in a period of only ten months. If Armstrong was fighting today, he'd be heads and shoulders above everyone else, an absolute superstar, and a freak to boot! With Roy Jones jnr, it makes you wonder whether going up in weights and then back down again effected him. Now I'm not saying that he used steroids to put on muscle, but athletes who have allegedly used them and then come off them (ironically someone else named Jones, first name Marian) never came back the same. Who knows with Roy, although he certainly dropped ability suddenly. Gerry - we'd need confirmation from Massimo, but it seems that Italy lets anyone in. Tyson's a convicted rapist so what's he doing over there. Many countries wouldn't allow him in. Perhaps we should call him Mike 'The Pontiff' Tyson, given his aim to be a missionary (or a porno star). I agree with what you say Gerry about Tyson's standing in boxing history, despite his sad and humiliating exit from the sport. I can't help but like Tyson. Whatever we think of the guy, he is completely natural, warts and all. He says exactly what he's thinking, doesn't try the spin or hackneyed boring cliches like so many other stars. I saw an article recently where Tyson stated that he considered himself an abject failure, a rotten person, etc. I feel sorry for Tyson. With his great ability the story should have been so much better. Where careers of guys like Armstrong and Louis provide the inspiration, Tyson's career sadly only provides a warning to novices of what can happen if you go off the rails. You win a spaghetti dinner at Mass's house, but you got to bring your own cheese! Joe Frasier was first to stop Chuvalo. He broke Georges cheekbone and George said it felt like his eye exploded. Willie Pastrano beat Harold Johnson as a sub for a sub... Ali credits Willie for a lot of his boxing techniques, he says Willie taught him a lot. They had the same trainer, Angelo Dundee. Noam, Thats an excellent point about Jones possibly being a victim of steroids. I thought about his moving up to heavys might have been too much for him but didn't consider the steroid angle. Also from what i've read about exercise conditioning .... exercise is a double edge sword, over exercising (and being in top shape all the time) can cause an athlete to age rapidly. and we all know Roy is always in top shape. So "body wise" he might be older then his actual 36 years.

Si, unfortunately Italia lets everyone or almost everyone in. We are too generous, actually. Regarding Tyson, I think he got confused. He doesn't want to be a missionary. He wants to be a porno star in the Third World! Pete very good! You win a spaghetti dinner at Mass's house, but you got to bring your own cheese!

Joe Frasier was first to stop Chuvalo. He broke Georges cheekbone and George said it felt like his eye exploded. Willie Pastrano beat Harold Johnson as a sub for a sub... Ali credits Willie for a lot of his boxing techniques, he says Willie taught him a lot. They had the same trainer, Angelo Dundee. Noam, Thats an excellent point about Jones possibly being a victim of steroids. I thought about his moving up to heavys might have been too much for him but didn't consider the steroid angle. Also from what i've read about exercise conditioning .... exercise is a double edge sword, over exercising (and being in top shape all the time) can cause an athlete to age rapidly. and we all know Roy is always in top shape. So "body wise" he might be older then his actual 36 years.

Gerry - we'd need confirmation from Massimo, but it seems that Italy lets anyone in. Tyson's a convicted rapist so what's he doing over there. Many countries wouldn't allow him in. Perhaps we should call him Mike 'The Pontiff' Tyson, given his aim to be a missionary (or a porno star). I agree with what you say Gerry about Tyson's standing in boxing history, despite his sad and humiliating exit from the sport. I can't help but like Tyson. Whatever we think of the guy, he is completely natural, warts and all. He says exactly what he's thinking, doesn't try the spin or hackneyed boring cliches like so many other stars. I saw an article recently where Tyson stated that he considered himself an abject failure, a rotten person, etc. I feel sorry for Tyson. With his great ability the story should have been so much better. Where careers of guys like Armstrong and Louis provide the inspiration, Tyson's career sadly only provides a warning to novices of what can happen if you go off the rails. You win a spaghetti dinner at Mass's house, but you got to bring your own cheese!

Joe Frasier was first to stop Chuvalo. He broke Georges cheekbone and George said it felt like his eye exploded. Willie Pastrano beat Harold Johnson as a sub for a sub... Ali credits Willie for a lot of his boxing techniques, he says Willie taught him a lot. They had the same trainer, Angelo Dundee. Noam, Thats an excellent point about Jones possibly being a victim of steroids. I thought about his moving up to heavys might have been too much for him but didn't consider the steroid angle. Also from what i've read about exercise conditioning .... exercise is a double edge sword, over exercising (and being in top shape all the time) can cause an athlete to age rapidly. and we all know Roy is always in top shape. So "body wise" he might be older then his actual 36 years.
robustness of a boxer's chin. If the rest of his body is not handling the stress as well, as might happen if the boxer stopped taking steroids, then psychologically it defeats him as well.

If steroids, or the lack of them, was Jones's problem, then I suppose this might explain it. | 8/21/05 05:29:42 PM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|I have just discovered that when Frazier fought Foreman in 1973, George was the n.1 contender. Joe deserves credit for that! He didn't take the easy way that time (he did it when he fought Terry Daniels and Ron Stander). I wonder what did Foreman do to be the n.1 contender. The only big names in his record were George Chuvalo and Gregorio Peralta.| 8/21/05 06:08:24 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Massimo - Frazier thought the first fight with Foreman was going to be a walk in the park! George wasn't given a snowflakes chance in hell in that fight and Joe was the heavy favourite. Just goes to show that you can never guess outcomes, especially when big punchers like Foreman, and even Lyle and Shavers are involved.And Massimo, what's Tyson up to over there. Any more reports about him? Things seemed to have gone quiet around him.| 8/21/05 06:59:27 PM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|I don't know much about Tyson's holyday in Italia. I read a very small article in a newspaper 2 or 3 days ago in which there was reported that Tyson is now in Sardegna (I have never been there) and that is behaviour was not good. In particular he was frightening people (around) by driving a motor cycle into the sea too close to the beach (where the water's level is not high enough). Of course, this is not a small (or little) fault, this behaviour can be very dangerous.| 8/21/05 08:22:42 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Massimo - it's time you went down there and straightened Mike out! By the way, when you look at the cold hard facts of Jerry's career, it is nearly mind blowing the calibre of guys he fought......Ali x 2, Frazier x 2, Norton, Shavers, Lyle, Mac Foster, Chuvalo, Mathis, Ellis, Patterson x 2.Jerry posted wins over Patterson, Mathis, Mac Foster (Quarry was the only guy to stop him), Lyle, and Shavers. He certainly didn't retire wondering what might have been.| 8/22/05 11:42:04 AM|Pete|Cleveland||N/A|||10|I have been on and off this site for a number of years. I always found it interesting. But now it is like a desert. It's so dry and vapid. What happened? Did all the oldtimers die off?| 8/22/05 02:58:44 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||10|Many regular posters have left recently including Kent and Forest Ward.| 8/22/05 03:04:01 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Noam: It's like my old analogy about college football. If you play an easy schedule and finish 11-0, the whole world will bicker about the fact that had you played in the Big 10, Pac 10, etc., you'd have had 3 or 4 losses. Ditto for a boxer who plays it close to the belt. "What might have been" is viewed as a negative by people like you and I, and written off by others. Sorry, I can't write it off. To me, if the big hitters are left off your schedule, I deduct a point. If you're an olympic skater and you skate a relatively easy program and don't make any mistakes, that doesn't cut it. I'd give more credit to the skater who tries the impossible jumps, makes most of them---even if they miss one. It's called accepting the challenge. The greats accept challenges.| 8/22/05 04:18:19 PM|Italian Stallion|Philly||Unknown|||10|Rest in peace Ella. You will not be forgotten here.| 8/22/05 05:08:48 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|I agree Angelo. That's why I mentioned Quarry's career and the fact that he fought nearly all the big names of his era and even doubled up on some. The only big names he missed fighting were Liston and Foreman. Given that he fought everyone else, he couldn't fit these guys in and there was certainly no pattern there as there was with others.The other thing with Quarry is that as a challenger he really wasn't in a position to pick and chose. He had less influence. He fought matches when they were available, usually picked by others. Whereas, a champion CAN pick that's what makes Ali's career so great. There was no one from that era of any credibility who he didn't fight. He took them on one after the other. It would appear now that he was prepared to risk his health to bolster his reputation. Others didn't want to take that risk yet they didn't want their reputation to suffer either. They can't have it both ways. You can apply any test to the careers of Ali and Quarry and one thing really stands out: they fought the best, one after the other. Some people don't like to hear that because they believe it detracts from the exploits of their guy, who didn't do the same. But the yardstick of that era was Ali and you have to compare contemporaries to him when discussing their respective places in history. There's no other fair way of doing it. And Quarry compares favourably. When he hit the big time in 1967 he fought Jones, London, Patterson x 2 in that year. The second Patterson fight was the WBA elimination tournament. Jerry didn't hesitate in entering it. In 1968 he fought Spencer and Ellis. In 1969 Mathis, Frazier, London, Patterson x 2 in that year. No rests or tune ups or downs for him. In 1970 he fought Mac Foster and Ali. He fought Ali again later. He then fought Lyle AND Shavers in the SAME year. No problem scheduling them in. Frazier and Norton followed. See Jerry's pattern.....fight the best, whoever they were, one after the other. Quarry (same age as Frazier) had 53 fights and only 9 losses. If you apply the test of judging him by his hardest win (not his easiest ones) we come up with names like Shavers, Lyle, Mac Foster, Mathis, Spencer, Patterson. Jerry's one guy who comes up looking good if he judge him by his losses, too. Ali, Frazier, Norton. No shame there. His win/loss list is so powerful that it has to qualify him as perhaps the best heavyweight not to win a world title.
been Jerry's finest hour, even if he didn't get the win. In my mind, yes, he should have beaten Ellis and he didn't get it done against Frazier---but to me, the Foreman fight would have been one of those cases where no one would think Jerry had a chance. He seemed to thrive in these fights. Barring early cuts around his eyes, this would have been a flat out war. Quarry would have done a little boxing and a lot of punching. We learned later that Foreman's stamina was suspect---who knows how this would have played out if it went to the later rounds?

It seems our numbers are thinning. | If the numbers are thinning because people are upset over the name calling, that's a bad thing---no one likes to be disrespected. But if the numbers are thinning because people are bored or disagree with others' opinions, who cares? I do hope Kent comes back soon.

Ironically, the numbers have thinned since the name calling stopped. Steve seems upset because there have been posts praising Jerry, other posts talking about lightweight champions like Armstrong, and also a couple of posts laughing about Tyson. That's what the recent posts have been about by me. Nothing else. I can't understand why that would upset Steve or how Fan from Fandom can blame those posts for turning people away from here.

When Brandi told us a few home truths a week back, I know I heeded what she said and changed my ways. I've conversed civilly with everyone, but it seems that others are just intent on sniping. If my presence is unwanted here, as it seems, then I'll happily go away and leave Kent and Steve and whoever to go back to referring to each other by affectionate 'three stooges' names and talking about everything else but boxing and Jerry.

Anyway, Angelo, my point with Jerry was that comparing him to other greats of that era - particularly Ali and Frazier - we see that he fought every credible opponent. Fight fans agree that Ali fought the best out there, but so did Jerry. It is also instructive that Jerry was the only guy to stop Mac Foster. If he survived the early rounds against Foreman, then Jerry becomes a chance after perhaps round 7 or 8. Surviving to that point would be the problem though.

Hey, what the heck is going on? This is an exodus (esodo)! Is anybody going to stay? This is an exodus (esodo)! Is anybody going to stay? I have just seen again the Primo Carnera vs George Godfrey 1930 fight. That fight is what the legend is all about. Anyone who never saw that fight knows nothing about boxing.

Massimo - there are a number of books out there on Primo Carnera and I might buy one soon and read all about him. I've just ordered the Larry Holmes book and the Ken Norton one. I don't know why I didn't get them earlier. There's a new book out on Ernie Shavers and another one called Night Train - The Sonny Liston Story. I don't believe it, but James 'Quick' Tillis has also written a book about himself.

Steve - I apologize if I've upset you in some way. I don't understand how though. I've never criticized you; actually I've only praised you if you go through the posts. As a Vietnam vet, I've only got respect for you. So if you tell me I'm the problem, then I'll go and you stay.

Noam: Don't go away altogether---you could always adopt the name of a boxer from days past like "Forrest" did. If I see any posts from "Jumbo C" I'll know it's you.
heavyweights. I struck by how articulate he is in the interviews and what a bulldog he is in the fights. He always did a good job of adjusting for his competition save for Frazier. He might have been well served to counterpunch Frazier more and not spend himself on the attack.

| 8/23/05 05:50:50 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 10 | Noam, there is no reason for you to leave. |

8/23/05 06:06:07 PM | Gerry | Cleveland | same | 10 | JQ, as I've said before, was very, very close to being a World Heavyweight champion. Yes, Ali and Frazier had too much for him, but it still almost happened. I think he had way too much soon. He had 14 fights in 1965, but didn't start the year until mid-May! I think he was rushed into Boyle, Alongi, and Machen, all of whom he would have beaten under more relaxed conditions, I think. Instead, he got three draws and a loss. He got back on the horse and proved his talent after that. But I will never quite get what happened with Ellis and Chuvalo. Those two fights really skewed his career. I agree, he never dodged anyone, and had the talent to beat anyone. It takes a lot of confidence to challenge Ken Norton on two weeks notice. But Quarry fans have to wonder what could have been. Jerry and Mike were terrific to watch, they both should have had belts, in my opinion. |

8/23/05 06:22:43 PM | Noam | same | same | 10 | I don't want to think my staying here has anything to do with Steve, and Kent, not being here, because they are both integral parts of the site. I apologized to Kent for things I shouldn't have said and there's been no nastiness since Brandi's warning. I can't apologize for Forest, though, as I truly think he did the wrong thing, especially with the comments about Ali's health. But if my being here means that Kent and Steve won't return, then I'll happily go because they are guys who should be here. |

8/24/05 02:00:23 AM | Ed | Cicero n y | mooseygoop@aol.com | 10 | Noam, Hope u decide to stay here. You ever check into ebay for old fight magazines? They aren't expensive and give a different view from books because they're from the actual time of the fighter, before they became legendary. http://search.ebay.com/boxing-magazines |

8/24/05 05:01:38 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Ed - the sorriest thing I've done was allow hundreds of The Ring magazines and other journals I had to be thrown out. They were stacked high on the floor of a cupboard. At a time when boxing wasn't high on my agenda, I let them go. I'd give anything to have them back now. The only one I kept was the 20th anniversary edition of the Ali v Frazier first fight. How stupid was I not to safeguard the rest of them. The best boxing book I've read was on Rocky Marciano. It not only had boxing facts but also stories about his family and friends. The book really flowed and put a face to the legend that raw statistics can't do. I tried to read one on Jack Dempsey and some day I'll finish it. But the way it is written is difficult to get in to. Same with one I have about Jack Johnson. I have plenty about Ali, however sometimes they are not really objective. I'm not saying this to agitate with Fan who doesn't respect Thomas Hauser, but the best Ali book was 'Muhammad Ali - His Life & Times' by Hauser. Each episode in Ali's life is told in first person by those a part of it. For example, the Ali v Frazier fights were discussed not only by Ali and his entourage, but also by Frazier in the first person. Same with the Ali fights against Quarry. There was no room for bias generally because each person who was a part of the story, told their own story as they perceived it. The result was that it didn't sanitize Ali's life, as has become more the practice than the exception. It had the good with the bad, Faruqhan, Black Muslims, etc. |

8/24/05 07:33:11 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 | Noam: I have some Ali books too. One that I really like, though it surely casts him in the best light (biased), is a mid-70's paperback, "The Greatest, My Own Story." I'll have to re-read it. There are some really interesting chapters and you get some insight into Ali the man, not just Ali the boxer. You see how some of his beliefs were shaped, for better or worse. There are some very emotional parts of that book that don't have a lot to do with boxing. It's easy to digest—probably written for highschool aged readers but still a good read for a more sophisticated audience too. To piggyback on Gerry's comments, Jerry Quarry won some fights in surprising fashion, that maybe he "shouldn't have" like his shutout over Lyle and walk over tough Earnie Shavers. He lost some that he should have won—those early fights, including Machen. He performed admirably against two great fighters in Ali and Frazier—didn't have enough to win but didn't back down either. And yes, Chuvalo was puzzling and Ellis was just frustrating to watch—still is. Jerry wouldn't have held the title long had he beat Ellis, because Frazier was in line for the fight after opting out of the tournament (where he might have drawn Thad Spencer, who could have been trouble at that point). But still, Quarry had everything he needed to beat Ellis and let is slip away. It's still a fight that could have been judged in Jerry's favor. | 8/24/05 12:41:26 PM|Pete|Clleveland||N/A||||10|Noam, I don't think you are the sole reason for people leaving the site. But from reading past posts over the weeks I did see a pattern emerge. It seems that you, Angelo, and Howard C are going a bit overboard about Ali on this site. You guys keep writing the same things over and over again and again. It is like you guys can't write about anything else. It does get quite boring. Ali is the most written about boxer in the world. You guys are not telling the people on this site anything they don't already know. As far as personal attacks go, to be fair about it, you are alone in that category. I mean you labelled Forrest am alcoholic and a homosexual. That is pretty heavy stuff. By doing so you insulted all the homosexuals and alcoholics who read this site. But, I think the main thing is people are getting bored with all this Ali stuff. Kent: Noam can post here if he wants to. He is welcome here as much as anyone else. I said I was taking a break from posting here for two weeks and my two weeks were up on Sunday. I didn't say I was leaving. I hope Steve stays as well. I am out of the loop so I don't know why Steve would be leaving or anything that has transpired since I took my break. I haven't been hanging around on the Internet as much in the last two weeks and I have actually got off of my "fat can" and I have been exercising and eating better and I have lost five pounds, only 100 more to go!| 8/24/05 01:33:26 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Noam can post here if he wants to. He is welcome here as much as anyone else. I said I was taking a break from posting here for two weeks and my two weeks were up on Sunday. I didn't say I was leaving. I hope Steve stays as well. I am out of the loop so I don't know why Steve would be leaving or anything that has transpired since I took my break. I haven't been hanging around on the Internet as much in the last two weeks and I have actually got off of my "fat can" and I have been exercising and eating better and I have lost five pounds, only 100 more to go!| 8/24/05 02:28:05 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Pete: It's true that this is a Jerry Quarry site first and a boxing site next. I talk about Ali a lot as he is my all-time favorite boxer. Often, I've written posts about Ali as a reaction to other people attacking him—or I've written about him to debate others who assert that he wasn't that great, he isn't a good person, etc. He's an important figure of the 20th century that frankly, transcends boxing and sports—an interesting cultural icon who was divisive and controversial, yet loved by millions around the world. In contrast, Jerry Quarry had a much smaller but fiercely loyal following of hardcore fight fans. I think of Jerry and Mike Quarry and I think of solid, lunchpale carrying, blue collar fighters of the highest order. Jerry didn't get distracted by the parade of politics and controversy that Ali was drawn to—Jerry just worked on his craft. Just like people say "John Wayne, America.", I say "Jerry Quarry, Fighter." One word descriptions that characterize these guys like volumes of adjectives can never do. I think it's a tribute to Mike and Jerry that we regulars carry on about the best fighters of their era, including Ali. It's putting the Quarry brothers in boxing's most elite company. | 8/24/05 04:44:45 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same||||10|The Ali/Frazier thing here is a little intense. But if people have left here, that's not the reason why. It's all the unregulated namecalling. Simple as that. I never came here to duke politics with anyone.I came here as a Quarry fan, boxing fan and sports fan, and it's been good to chat with like-minded people.I don't begrudge anyone's politics. Most people believe something, and there are two major political parties in America to choose from, right or wrong.It's not that you disagree with someone on this very personal item, it's how you do it. That's where guys have flunked here ....Massimo, still carrying the torch for Primo!How would Carnera have fared against Gerry Cooney, I wonder. Both 6'6, both can box and move a little. Hmm ...Kent, be glad you can exercise. I'm pretty active, but have been sidelined by a bad Achilles tendon the last six weeks. Man, I get restless.Thanks. | 8/24/05 04:53:35 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Pete - I thought we'd put all this behind us, but you say I was the only name caller. I've been called plenty of names by Forest. For example, on 07/01/05, in just one post, he called me "a joke", "a blowhard", "a jerk", and "boring and rude." He accused Angelo and me of being "very loose with details" and Angelo of making "ridiculous posts". The name calling was NOT one way. We were also numerous times told, quite insultingly, that we didn't know anything about boxing (as if he was the font of all boxing knowledge and wisdom).His name calling went further. Forest called Patterson "without doubt the biggest cheese champion of all time", a fighter who "fought bums and amateurs" and who "avoided every legitimate contender." He said that Cooney is "running a hustle" with his charities (even though Larry Holmes is involved) and, of course, the comments about Ali's health. That was the stuff that upset me. I responded in kind, wrongly, at times, I confess.Regards Ali, a lot of the stuff written defending him was in response to stuff written attacking him. It's also hard not mentioning Ali when he was the most dominant fighter of the era of Jerry Quarry, the hero of this site.A Angelo - I have the Ali book you speak of. But you really have to get Hauser's book on Ali. It is the best.Anyway, Pete, as far as I'm concerned the name calling is passe, but, given you said that I was the only name caller, I had to respond. Thanks. | 8/24/05 04:58:36 PM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Yeah, better to put the insults aside. Some of them were funny and I got called a pathetic chump, sham and a fraud, a kool aid drinker. Some wisecracks were misguided and silly like the repressed homosexual and alcoholic insults should never have been said. Gerry even questioned whether Steve was really a Vietnam vet. I thought Steve would explode when that was said and he didn't to his credit. Some of you guys were talking trivia. Heres one. When was the first time that Ali fought a guy younger than himself? | 8/24/05 05:05:58 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Howard C not counting Ali's younger brother. The answer would be Jerry Quarry! | 8/24/05 07:03:24 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Thanks, Pete. I shouldn't have said some of the things I said, particularly to Kent, but that's in the past, and I'm glad he's back. Hopefully, Steve won't be far behind him. You beat me to the punch with the Jerry Quarry answer to the trivia question. | 8/24/05 08:15:31 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|As far as Gerry Cooney doing something unethical regarding his charity, I don't believe it is the case. There are some in the helping end of things in the boxing community that don't like it that he takes a fairly high salary for himself but I can't really say he is doing anything wrong. A lot of people in the charity business make a living helping others so why not Cooney? To the best of my knowledge Cooney has done nothing illegal and if he had done so, I am sure his organization would have been shut down and he would have been in trouble with the law.

There are other people who help fighters who are down on their luck or who are in need of assistance in landing on their feet after their careers are over who do it for the pleasure of helping others. There is room for these people but their is also room for Gerry Cooney as well.

Hi Kent - keep that exercise going. I did some new exercises recently and am as sore as hell. If you haven't used certain muscles for some time, and then you overdo it, like I did, look out.

By the way, Larry Holmes said on his site that he and Gerry Cooney are, to quote him, very close friends. Holmes says that he helps Cooney with the charity. Holmes said that he sees Joe Frazier about once a month and that Earnie Shavers is now living in England. Larry said that he gets on well now with Ken Norton, and that he saw Ali a few months back. The only guys that Larry bad mouths is George Foreman and Scott LeDoux. There is genuine animosity between Holmes and those two. Holmes also said that things have smoothed out between Ali and Frazier as they've grown older.

I wonder why Holmes doesn't like Foreman. George seems like a nice guy but of course I only met him briefly and you can't know someone by just their public image, as that is really all of the information I have about him.

I have never met Ledoux and I don't know much about him from public knowledge as well other than I remember him as a boxer.

I exercise five days a week: I walk 45 minutes Monday through Friday and I add 15 minutes of swimming and 15 minutes of karate punches and kicks on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday.

This will increase as the weeks pass and I will be working out at the karate dojo three times a week, hour classes, starting in September.

I don't exercise on the weekend at all as I am sore as well, mainly my ankles hurt from walking, and I need a couple of days to rest up.

My diet is much less carbs than I used to eat. Breakfast cereal, no sugar of course and low fat milk. I also drink a glass of cranberry juice and a glass of tomato juice in between meals. I have a piece of fruit with breakfast and lunch and some fresh spinach plus half a tomato to go with my dinner.

For protein I eat two pieces of broiled chicken for lunch and dinner. I do substitute a couple of hamburger patties for a one or two dinners during the week but no buns or breads to go with them.

In addition to the above, I don't eat after 6 PM. No late night snacks is a key to the routine. I sure do miss them though!

I have used this diet to success, one time I lost 60 pounds doing it. It works for me if I stick to it.

Once I am in to the routine for about six weeks, I can go off the program for a day or two on the weekends and have a couple of beers or snacks but until then, I have to be somewhat bored. Too bad but I need to do this.

I wonder what my buddy James Toney will say if he sees the new leaner me (actually the old me, the way I used to be) in about six to eight months?

IF ANYBODY FROM THE QUARRY FAMILY CAN E MAIL ME ABOUT HOW TO CONTACT MY FRIEND BOB QUARRY IT WOULD BE APPRECIATED. I LOST CONTACT WITH BOB ABOUT LATE LAST YEAR AS THE NUMBER I HAD FOR HIM DIDN'T WORK ANYMORE.

I ALSO HAVE MOVED SO HE WOULDN'T HAVE MY NUMBER ANYMORE EITHER.

It's correct when you say that Shavers lives in England, Liverpool to be precise. He met his current wife (his 5th!) whilst doing some promotional work here and this is how he earns his money now. But an interesting point is that when he moved over here, earnie actually worked as a doorman at a Liverpool nightclub! Just imagine seeing him deal with with someone-that's one confrontation you don't want to be anywhere near! This story was part of an article on him in the English Daily Telegraph so the authenticity is pretty reliable."
[8/25/05 09:36:56 AM] Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | Kent-

If you want to lose weight, you have to hit the heavybag! Hit it, hit it again and keep on hitting it until there is (or there will be) a hole in the heavybag, a big hole of the size of a melon! When that sucker Giacomo Toney will see you in top shape he will be scared s$$tless of you and will treat you with great respect! As (or like) the Italian Stallion would say...That's street cred ("cred" is Slang for "rules of the street" or "street's rules")!
[8/25/05 09:46:18 AM] Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | I was thinking that Earnie Shavers, since now he is not a youngster anymore, I guess he has lost some of his power...Probably now he can't hit that hard anymore... Now, I imagine, his punches are just (or only) the same power as Mike Tyson's at 20, when Tyson beat Berbick!

If you want to lose weight, you have to hit the heavybag! Hit it, hit it again and keep on hitting it until there is (or there will be) a hole in the heavybag, a big hole of the size of a melon! When that sucker Giacomo Toney will see you in top shape he will be scared s$$tless of you and will treat you with great respect! As (or like) the Italian Stallion would say...That's street cred ("cred" is Slang for "rules of the street" or "street's rules")!
[8/25/05 09:46:18 AM] Massimo | Roma | 4 | 10 | I was thinking that Earnie Shavers, since now he is not a youngster anymore, I guess he has lost some of his power... Probably now he can't hit that hard anymore... Now, I imagine, his punches are just (or only) the same power as Mike Tyson's at 20, when Tyson beat Berbick!

I didn't know you met another legend over there, in California, Foreman! Now the question is obvious: how wilt is he ?!
[8/25/05 02:57:55 PM] Gerry | Cleveland | same | 9 | Sorry, Noam. Most of what I said, nearly all of it really, was in response to others, and very often you. Don't lay your stuff off on others.As for me questioning anyone's Vet status or whatever, Howard or whoever, that's a lie.I'm a vet myself, why would I do that?See, this is exactly the nonsense that is the trouble here. Get over yourselves and move on.

I met Foreman during the 1980s when he was in retirement from boxing and preaching in churches. It was at a small church service so I got to speak one on one to him, didn't speak to him about anything significant though. I would say he is tall, about 6'4", but what I remember most about standing next to him is how big he was, his shoulders and arms were huge. I thought, this is a very big man.Unlike my experience in seeing our Jerry Quarry, who had big arms and who looked very strong, Jerry seemed the same size as me (back in the 1980s), but it was obvious Jerry was stronger than me even if I hadn't known he was a professional boxer.

Some of my favorite memories on George Foreman:
I did see his cameo on "Sanford and Son" again recently. Not the actor Jerry was. But still, it was interesting.Stalking Frazier in their second fight. He looked like a boxer AND a puncher that night, never better, in my opinion.Hitting the heavy bag in "When We Were Kings".I still don't know how Ali stayed up in front of that kind of power. Drugs?Finally, waving that little flag in the Olympics in 1968. That action had a very positive impact.It impresses me alot that he became such a good guy later in life after his career was over.Almost like two different guys, really. Thanks.

Almost like two different guys, really. Thanks.

Some of my favorite memories on George Foreman:
I did see his cameo on "Sanford and Son" again recently. Not the actor Jerry was. But still, it was interesting.Stalking Frazier in their second fight. He looked like a boxer AND a puncher that night, never better, in my opinion.Hitting the heavy bag in "When We Were Kings".I still don't know how Ali stayed up in front of that kind of power. Drugs?Finally, waving that little flag in the Olympics in 1968. That action had a very positive impact.It impresses me alot that he became such a good guy later in life after his career was over.Almost like two different guys, really. Thanks.

Almost like two different guys, really. Thanks.

Almost like two different guys, really. Thanks.

Almost like two different guys, really. Thanks.

Almost like two different guys, really. Thanks.

Almost like two different guys, really. Thanks.

Almost like two different guys, really. Thanks.

Almost like two different guys, really. Thanks.

Almost like two different guys, really. Thanks.

Almost like two different guys, really. Thanks.
start more problems. Noam has been adding a lot lately and is a valuable member of the site. I know you are a rational poster and can see the point I am making.

8/26/05 02:33:50 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|Kent-Thanks! So George is not a joke, he is andre' and wilt, that's good for us boxing fans.BOXING TRIVIA-Which was Ali's most lucrative fight?| 8/26/05 07:46:31 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Massimo: Ali's most lucrative? Could it have been the Holmes fight???fan: Let's get one thing straight: The people who like Ali on this site are not the ones who are obsessed with him. It's the people who dislike or hate Ali who are obsessed and keep bringing him up in a negative light, and I respond in kind. Example: Gerry just implied in his last post that Ali was able to absorb punishment from Foreman because he was on drugs. He stopped short of accusation, but wrote, "DRUGS?" Gerry, maybe, just maybe, Ali could take a harder punch than Frazier and remain upright because he was a better, superior fighter. THAT'S the explanation, not drugs. Other than the fact that he performed so brilliantly in so many fights, what evidence do you have that Ali used drugs to enhance his ability? Like I thought, none. You know, Leon Spinks seemed to have super-human energy in his 15 round win over Ali and took a lot of hard punches. Also, his trainer (Sam Solomon) was feeding Spinks from a black bottle with an unknown substance in it. Why aren't you doubting Spinks win over Ali--that seems to be more damning than anything you have on Ali. Fan, once again, it's the Ali haters who are obsessed with bringing him down due to petty jealousy and envy over his success.

8/26/05 10:27:14 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Angelo is right regarding Ali being able to naturally take a great punch. Did George Chuvalo take drugs to be able to take a great punch. No way, he didn't even get knocked down in his entire career. Some fighters just can take a punch better than others.I am not trying to start the feud again but one thing that really pissed me off is some of the guys assuming that because I am pro Frazier that I have to be anti Ali.Yes I am a bigger fan of Frazier than I am of Ali but Angelo you know I have never said anything bad about Ali in all of the time I have been posting here. You and I have debated, peacefully I might add, about certain topics but I was never one of the ones who bad mouthed Ali.

8/26/05 12:00:05 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same||9|Guys, I was kidding about Ali and drugs. Watching him absorb George's best body punches was really an amazing thing, I think. The guy unquestionably took a tremendous punch. He had to, he took on almost everybody.I'm not an Ali fan, but I sure do appreciate the guys's talent and social impact.Sorry, just a weak attempt at humor ...

8/26/05 01:01:42 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||10|I am a huge fan of both Ali and Frazier. I don't like some of Ali's fights because they are very boring, but that is just because he could dominate so easily. My favorite fighter of the 70's is George Foreman. I really liked his all out aggressive style. Ken Norton is another fighter I always liked watching. He had entertaining fights throughout his career. A lot of the fights nobody sees are the fights that are fun to watch. Norton-Jose Luis Garcia II, Shavers-Roy Williams, Ali-Blue Lewis, Frazier-Mathis are all great fights.

8/26/05 01:17:10 PM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|Kenny Norton once said that hitting Ali' to the stomach was like hitting marm. Ali's abdominals were better than mine. Two days ago I bought a DVD which contains the first Ali'-Liston fight and the Ali'-Foreman fight. I had already seen those fights but this is a very cool DVD. I can even listen to Joe Frazier's commentary (in English!) of the Ali'-Foreman fight. By the way, I noticed that Joe Frazier speaks very good English, he even taught me a new verb "GOING BY", very useful, I had never heard that verb so far! Ali' was fantastic in both of these fights, two of his best performances in my book. I'll give very soon the answer of my TRIVIA QUESTION. I want to let a little more suspense, maybe someone else is willing of trying to respond (or to answer) the question. I'm a fan of both Ali' and Frazier, I have Ali' above Frazier in my ratings, but my opinion of Frazier as a fighter is very high.PS: I'm sad to see(or of seeing) that Steve is not come back. Come on, Steve, let's talk about something!

A few posters recently had mentioned Earnie Shavers. This is a guy who, like JQ, never got his due. Not winning a belt is probably part of that. But, like Quarry, he was better than a lot of guys who did.Only a year or so younger than Quarry, he was active well into the early 1980's.He had two wins over Jimmy Young, and also beatJimmy Ellis, Ken Norton and Joe Bugner among others.Both he and Jerry beat Dick Gosha.Shavers did have some funny losses, like most I guess.
His losses to Ron Stander and Quarry stick out hard against a rack of KO wins early in his career. He also lost to Tex Cobb and James Tillis.He fought two title fights back-to-back, Ali and Holmes.His first match with Holmes is a great one to see. I remember Holmes hitting with everything he could, he even tried a two-hand baseball punch, but no luck. Then Shavers dropped him like a sack of spuds with one punch for a knockdown.Shavers, like Quarry, was very, very close to being champ. His last fight, just ten years ago, was set in Wisconsin. It's amazing, if he had finished off Holmes, this is a former world champion with everything that comes with it.But since he wasn't, many casual sports fans don't even know his name. A real shame.The guy was a huge puncher. Thanks.

Gerry: I think Shavers second fight against Young was a draw, wasn't it???
Shavers got better with age as he learned the craft. He still had plenty of power but also improved stamina and patience. He fought very well against Ali and Holmes, two of the best ever. He crushed Norton, a very good fighter. His loss to Lyle is nothing to be ashamed of---and it was before he was at his best.

Page 226 - 250, Gerry, 08/04/05 at 3:24.39
"Hmm....where to start...."Steve, I'm a vet. Are you ?
I've served my country, where you just talk tough and use playground insults...."Gerry, this is what you wrote. Howard isn't a vet and you DID question whether Steve was a vet.

I have to set something else straight having seen that Gerry posted that Howard is a liar for saying that Gerry had questioned whether Steve is a Vietnam vet. This didn't ring true so I checked the archives.Page 226 - 250, Gerry, 08/04/05 at 3:24.39
"Hmm....where to start...."Steve, I'm a vet. Are you ?
I've served my country, where you just talk tough and use playground insults...."Gerry, this is what you wrote. Howard isn't a liar and you DID question whether Steve was a vet.

Gerry, get a life.

Angelo, I stand corrected, the second Shavers-Young fight was a draw, I had it as a decision for Shavers, thanks.Young was quite a 70's fighter also, his fight with Ali was just great, I never saw Ali more frustrated.But again, with Shavers, more proof of that guy's talent in that great era. Thanks.

When Noam was having his battles with Forrest and it got nasty no one told Noam he was out of line. Why all of a sudden in recent weeks has he become the bad guy? And in perfect fairness to Noam if he feels he is being insulted then is going to respond in kind. As he should, unlike Ali during the Viet Nam war, Noam never pretended to be a pacifist.

Pete, none of us are in charge of this site but the stooges will always be special here as Mr. Jimmy himself was one of us, an original stooge. A lot of us, in the heat of a few moments, posted things we regret and should not have posted. Let's leave it at that.

Guys, Earnie Shavers was amazing as we were never sure how his fights were going to turn out. He could be almost out on his feet, about to go down to defeat and out of nowhere he could win with just one or two punches he hit so hard. His fight with Lyle was one of the best I have ever seen. I don't know how this thing lasted into the six round as both fighters were throwing bombs the entire time.

Ray Mercer tried fighting kickboxers awhile back.. he tells how brutal it was...

Ali's most lucrative fight was... DRUMROLL... The Thrilla in Manilla. He earned 6 millions dollars for that fight! I have learnt that in a book on Ali' I found in a bancarella in the street in Roma. I also learned that Ali' earned about 30 million dollars in his overall career.

It is hard for some boxers to adapt to different rules and it isn't surprising that Mercer could be caught by a kick to the head, Mercer in the article admits to not even knowing how to block a kick or how to kick himself. He wore boxing shoes, which made it illegal for him to kick in kick boxing while his opponents fought bare footed.

There have been boxers who have had at least limited success in other fighting sports. Tex Cobb had a winning record in kick boxing, he fought for the United States heavyweight title but lost, while former cruiserweight champion Al Cole has won some matches in "no holds barred" fighting.

Cole finished second in at least one of the Ultimate fighting tournaments he entered. He defeated all of his opponents to reach the finals but lost his last match from a submission hold.

You forgot the greatest of them all: PRIMO CARNEKA. He became wrestling heavyweight champion of the whole wide word1 in 1957. Primo made way more money with wrestling than with boxing! On the other hand, Chuck Wepner lost to "the Midget" in 1976. Please get some honor and principles. You called me a liar and you were proved wrong. Apologize please. Noam identified the time and date you made the statement about Steve. Apologize to him also, please. Come to think of it, you owe Steve an apology also.

Just watched Ali/Quarry 1 on ESPN Classic. Ali won all three rounds but Jerry was hanging tough and it is a shame he got busted up. I think Jerry would have likely gone the distance if not for the cut and it would have been interesting to see how much Ali had left going the distance after the long layoff. Jerry seemed to be finding the range just a little bit more each round and it would have been more competitive as the fight went on but Ali likely would have won by decision.

It is pretty impressive that Ali would take on Jerry in his first fight back after a long layoff as most fighters would have taken an easier opponent. That he took on Bonevena not long after this is also impressive but I don't think this was the wisest move to take on tough competition so soon as maybe two lower ranked opponents would have been better followed by Quarry and Bonevena before going after the title.

But I have heard that not many people were willing to fight Ali at the time because of the politics involved. So Ali had to take fights he could get. | 8/28/05 05:44:10 PM|Massimo|Roma|4||10|What a coincidence, I have seen Ali' Quarry 1 on ESPN 2 days ago. I think JQ had a good second round (I scored it even), but Ali' won the first and the third. The turning point was a jab by Ali' in the third round that opened the cut on JQ's sopracciglio. I think Ali' would have won even without the cut, but yes, the fight was getting interesting. PS: as the time goes by Steve is missed on this site! Where are you Steve ? In New Jersey ? In New York ?| 8/28/05 09:30:53 PM|Fan|Fandom|Fan@Fandom.com|10|Over the weekend they showed a bunch of Tyson fights. He was so quick and powerful that all of his early opponents had no chance. As he started fighting better fighters like Ferguson and Tillis they actually hit him, but were both floored although Tillis made it the full 10. The was to beat that early ferocious Tyson was to tie him up on the inside. Even at his best he allowed himself to be tied up too easily. Also you had to get his respect early and not just run. Tillis did a great job doing both of those things and lost a real close decision. Mike's favorite move was to duck under the jab, throw a hard left to the ribs then a right uppercut. He sure was an offensive juggernaut at his peak.| 8/28/05 11:01:10 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca|kentallenent@aol.com|10|Recently Kevin Rooney, Tyson's former trainer, was on a show with another guest, I don't remember who the other guy was, but the host asked who would win between Tyson and some of the greats such as Ali, Marciano, and Dempsey. Rooney picked Tyson to beat all of them while the other guest picked the others to beat Tyson, prime verses prime. Rooney's argument was Tyson at his best was so fast, strong, and such a hard hitter that he would be hard to beat but the other guest pointed out how Tyson never really overcame adversity in the ring in his career, an important intangible. Could Tyson at his best have come back to win when things weren't going his way? Except for at least some difficulty with fighters like Frank Bruno, Pinklon Thomas, and Tony Tucker, Tyson, even at his best, never answered that question.| 8/29/05 04:30:02 AM|Noam|same|same||10|Pete - I'm at least four or five down the pecking order here and that's the way I'd prefer it. I'm no leader (I get myself in enough trouble without guiding others into it) and there are better minds about boxing than me here. I have views, but I'm also here to learn. The guys I bad mouthed (from memory) were Kent, Gerry, Forest, and his man Fan. I regretted what I said to Kent (still do), what I said was wrong, and I apologized accordingly. I never said a bad word about Steve. The archives here will show that I only ever praised Steve and showed him respect. If my disappearance would make Steve return, then I'll disappear, pronto. Until then, I have some Tyson trivia. After Tyson was released from jail in 1998 for kicking a motorist in the groin, his first port of call was the slave section of Baltimore's Mount Auburn Cemetery. He visited the grave of Joey Gans, lightweight champion of 1906 who fought 42 rounds against Battling Nelson in a magnificent fight. Tyson (perhaps revealing he respects some others more than himself) cleaned the grave up and made it look respectable. Tyson next visited Joe Louis's grave in Arlington Cemetery to pay his respects there. Tyson is as mixed up about himself as we are confused about him. Consider his public utterances. After he lost to McBride he said at a news conference, "You can't take away what's happened to me. I've been abused in any way anyone can be abused. I'm not used to sensitivity any more. Don't cry. I don't know how to handle people crying anymore. I've lost my sensitivity." A couple of days later, he said, "No one's ever had the life I've had. Regardless of what you might think, that it's been grim and gloomy, I've had a tremendous life." I suspect that the former is the truth, that his life has been more abusive than tremendous. Childhood abuse of whatever type may explain a few things about him.
Howard, the archive quote proves nothing. Why?Because I didn't know he was a vet. So how can I question something I didn't know?I did hold him accountable for his remarks and do not apologize for doing so, they were ridiculous.If he is a vet, he should act like one.Speaking of which, where does Noam get the license to judge anyone on this site?That's like putting Terrell Owens in charge of NFL Player Behavior.I have nothing to lie about here and never will.I've asked you to move on, guys, and Brandi Quarry has also. Get a clue.

I remember the first Ali-Quarry fight too. It did seem like a natural because Quarry was highly ranked and a top draw, while Ali was just returning.I agree, minus the cut Jerry probably does go the distance, but Ali gets the clear decision.It's too bad Quarry couldn't get Ali coming to him after connecting early. Then the fight would have gotten very interesting with Quarry's counterpunching, which Ali was very mindful of.

Noam, I am not talking about boxing expertise. Outside of Ali, you comments are limited. I am talking about being the Captain of the ship. You keep the rest of the crew in line. If not you make them abandon ship. Some of these guys are far out, and need to be kept in line.

Amy, I sure did! Jerry got knocked out Norton. Man did those two hit each other HARD!!!

Anybody notice how many times Quarry had Norton hurt in their fight? If Jerry just would have been a little better defensively that night he may have stopped Norton. Man did those two hit each other HARD!!!

I have never seen so many highs and lows in a fighter than I have in Jerry Quarry. My biggest disappointment being the Ellis fight. He had won he would have had a right nice reign as the champion of the world. I loved his fights with Patterson and the thumping of Spencer!

That third round of Norton/Quarry is one of the best I have ever seen. Jerry got cut early in the round and he tried to knock out Norton. The two traded bombs for almost the entire round! Jerry could have gotten just a few more punches in to Norton when he had Norton hurt against the ropes, he would have knocked him out. Jerry, in better shape in his prime could have very well landed those shots and he would have been more likely to avoid more of the shots Norton hit him with. I have always said Quarry verses Norton, prime verses prime, is a pick em fight. I lean towards Jerry but Norton had a good shot with his accurate jabs and right hands, he might have opened up cuts on Jerry like he did in their actual fight.

The V.Klitschko vs Sam Peters fight is coming up in Sept on HBO. I looked at a couple of Peters fights and hes tough as long as his opponent stands in front of him. Klitschko has his faults and might self destruct but if he can keep himself together I dont think Peter can win. IMO, unless Peter has been holding something back, he lacks the mobility to beat the top guys. Let's hope both fighters stay healthy and fight comes off...its been ages since i've seen a good heavyweight fight.  Lets hope both fighters stay healthy and fight comes off...its been ages since i've seen a good heavyweight fight.  Kent...hows the working out/dieting going? |8/30/05 03:34:02 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|EdAre you sure about the Vitali-Samuele Pietro fight ? I think that Vitali is gonna fight Hasim Rahman on 12/11/2005 for the WBC title. |8/30/05 09:01:12 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|It is Wladimir Klitschko who is fighting Samuel Peter, not Vitali. Interesting fight.
Is Peter ready for the big time and can Wladimir's fragile chin stand up to Peter's power if he gets hit hard?>Ed, I lost three more pounds last week and last night I put in 10 laps of swimming, one = up and back, right after taking a 40 minute walk. I did this without stopping in a pool about 2/3 the size of a regulation pool.There was a young man in the pool at the same time, someone who looks in better shape than me about fifteen years younger than me, who tried to keep up with me and he couldn't do it. In fact he told me he got light headed trying to keep up and he had to stop, big victory for me, not over him as he could do what I do once he gets used to it. But the win for me was a step for getting my health back to what it should be. |
Maybe even leaning toward Quarry a bit. Thanks.

8/30/05 06:27:36 PM | Noam | same | same | 10

Gerry - that's the great thing about swimming for exercise. There's no concussion effects on joints. Someone once told me that you burn more calories swimming than you do walking. I forget the reasoning, though. Swimming can be good exercise for your eyesight, too, depending on who is swimming in the surrounding lanes.

Kent - leave Toney alone. He's got enough problems without you on his case.

8/30/05 08:08:24 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10

Noam, I doubt James Toney gives me much thought. It would be cool to show up at a fight card he was at and show him a slimmer me.

I am sure he would remember our conversation regarding weight and I would tell him he was a positive influence on getting me back into shape.

For those who don't know, even though I haven't been active lately, I write about boxing part time, mostly for internet sites, and I interviewed Toney and I mentioned that I thought his weight was too heavy for a fight he had recently fought. He didn't like what I said (see "My answers to James Toney's challenging Comments," October 2004, I believe, on Eastside boxing.com).

I believe me, I have never been a match for Toney, a real professional. These guys are so far ahead of people like me it is not even funny.

8/31/05 01:56:29 AM | Massimo | Roma | 10

Kent -

To beat Toney you must dance, dance and jab. Float like a butterfly and sting like a bee! I know that Toney hits harder than you, but he can't hit what he can't see. I'll be in your corner yelling "you're looking good champ!". I wanna be your manager and your corner man. You need a manager, Kent.

8/31/05 01:37:21 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10

JQ had some opportunities in the mid-70's to fight for the title, and the chances slipped away. I don't think he should have signed for Frazier II.----based on his dramatic win over Shavers, he could have bided his time and looked for a title opportunity. He shouldn't have taken the Norton fight on short notice either. If Norton was serious about wanting to fight Jerry Quarry, he could have waited a few months for an in-shape and mentally prepared Jerry and we'd have had a real fight. Was Jerry a last minute replacement for someone else? Who was supposed to fight Norton? I believe that Quarry might have been a lot more competitive had he trained appropriately for the Norton match, and if could have pulled out a win, he'd be in line for a title shot.

8/31/05 05:17:42 PM | Noam | same | same | 10

Roy Jones jnr is refusing a WBC demand for him to undergo a neurological examination before his approaching fight with Tarver. They want him checked out after his two knockout losses but he is refusing. Stupid. The guy's got money and if his health is no good he can retire wealthy.

8/31/05 08:18:56 PM | Charles | ark. | ctjjandfam@aol.com | 10

Did Jerry take the Norton fight on short notice? like maybe three weeks? I hope a book on the Quarry family would come out. More important thanks to you all for the prayers for my son while he was in Iraq. He made it home safely and now has been deployed to New Orleans to help out there after this dreadful storm. Pray mightily for our soldiers and our great nation.

8/31/05 08:43:27 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10

Charles, God bless your son in his current assignment. It sure is a mess down there.

I hope everyone here can send what they can to the Red Cross or similar relief agency. Help sure is needed there.

8/31/05 09:15:33 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y|mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|Kent., Mass, Thanks for correcting me on Klitschko fight. There's a big difference between the two.

9/1/05 09:45:19 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC|funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Charles: Your son is a hero. Regardless of where anyone stands on Operation Iraqi Freedom, we all must stand in awe of these young people who answer the call of duty and represent our great nation. Now, this soldier, with hardly a break, is going into a disaster area to continue to serve right here at home. I've said it before and will say it again---the men and women of our military are the best we have.

9/1/05 10:17:00 AM|Charles Anderson|Ark.|ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|Thanks angelo and kent. they are all very special people. thanks again.

9/1/05 01:23:19 PM|Peter|Cleveland|N/A|||10|I was never too impressed with Nortons victory over Quarry. Quarry took that fight on 2 weeks notice, and was fat and out of shape. What did Quarry weigh for that fight 206? That weight was ridiculous, it showed he did not train at all. Joe Frazier, took all of the fight out of Quarry in their prior fight. Jerry was just picking up a payday by fighting Norton.What I find amazing is how relatively easy Frazier handled Jerry Quarry when Quarry was in shape and in his prime. Frazier pounded Quarry in both fights. Frazier had Quarry's number.

9/1/05 03:23:27 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC|funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Peter: Quarry started well against Frazier in their first fight, but quickly tired of Frazier's relentless pressure and weight advantage. Frazier was a very good fighter, one of the best of his era, so it's not surprising that Jerry fell short of beating him. I'm not sure why Jerry took the second fight.

9/1/05 04:44:08 PM|Noam|same|same|||10|I wonder who promoted the Quarry/Norton fight. Larry Holmes says that one of Don King's tactics, to protect one of his own fighters, was to approach an opponent on short notice and get them to accept the fight. The result was usually an easy win for King's fighter who was fit and ready, while the opponent was less fit on a short preparation. As an example, Larry says that this happened to him against Tyson.

9/1/05 10:59:38 PM|EX PUG|The Blue Horizon|RingMyBell@braindamage.com|||10|Ok just in case any of you think us ex-pugs can't think straight i jotted down some thoughts.....1. If you are choking on an ice cube, don't panic. Simply pour a cup of boiling water down your throat and presto. The blockage will be almost instantly removed.2. Clumsy? Avoid cutting yourself while slicing vegetables by getting someone else to hold the while you chop away.3. Avoid arguments with the little woman about lifting the toilet seat by simply using the sink.4. For high blood pressure sufferers: simply cut yourself and bleed for a few minutes, thus reducing the pressure in your veins. Remember to use a timer.5. A mouse trap, placed on top of your alarm clock, will prevent you from rolling over and going back to sleep after you hit the snooze button.6. If you have a bad cough, take a large dose of laxatives, then you will be afraid to cough.7. Have a bad toothache? Smash your thumb with a hammer and you will forget about the toothache.Sometimes, we just need to remember what the rules of life really are: You only need two tools: WD-40 and Duct Tape. If it doesn't move and should, use the WD-40. If it shouldn't move and does, use the duct tape. Remember: Everyone seems normal until you get to know them. Never pass up an opportunity to go to the bathroom. If you woke up breathing, congratulations! You get another chance. And finally, be really nice to your family and friends; you never know when you might need them to empty your bedpan. Ding there's the bell got to go punch somebody.

9/2/05 01:46:50 AM|Kent|Murrieta, CA|KentAllement@aol.com|||10|Wow, there sure are some sick people in the world! Ex Pub, whoever you are, you are not half the man Jerry Quarry was and Mike Quarry is! To make fun of Dementia
Pugilistica on the Quarry's own website is beyond poor taste. WHOEVER YOU ARE, YOU ARE NOT THE LEAST BIT FUNNY. WHAT AN IDIOT!  Of course I meant to type Ex Pug, not Ex Pub. Add on to my last post: Whoever wrote such trash in an attempt to be funny, I hope you are good to your family and friends, if you have any friends, as you never know if someday you may need someone to dump your bed pans. Such hatred, disguised as humor, can have a way of coming back on you. What goes around, comes around. Add on to my last post: Whoever wrote such trash in an attempt to be funny, I hope you are good to your family and friends, if you have any friends, as you never know if someday you may need someone to dump your bed pans. Such hatred, disguised as humor, can have a way of coming back on you. What goes around, comes around.

Kent: At first, I was ready to take you to task for overreacting to this. Then, I went back and read it again---saw that line "Ding Dong, got to go punch somebody." Whoever posted this is a complete idiot. It's so disrespectful and crude on so many levels. What a moron. I guess anyone who practices a risky occupation, be it boxing, football, coal mining, construction---all must be stupid in this guy's eyes. What a jerk.

Ex-Pug thinks he's funny, what he is is sick. News is full of events regarding the massive crisis in 'Norlins ', which is beyond imagination. Basic necessities there have led to looting, with martial law likely to be imposed, stay tuned. New Orleans has a tremendous boxing history, perhaps as gambling there predates much of America, some great early fights there. Cleveland apparently has a rising heavy, Ray Austin, a big kid with some natural ability. He's to be on a bill here with cruiser Wayne Braithwaite on the undercard. Speaking of the cruisers, an interesting division with a lot of world faces, including France's Jean-Marc Mormeck, who just beat Braithwaite in a title match, O'Neil Bell, Alex Gurov and others. I think some thought this might be a more competitive division than it is. Can you imagine the sensation JQ would be as cruiserweight champ today? Thanks.

Kent, what is sick about the idiot's comments is consider that Mr. Jimmy, Brandi, Brenda, and other family members took care of Jerry when he couldn't care for himself so the comment about being nice to family members and friends because they might have to empty your bed pans is the meanest thing that has ever been posted here. Ironic that if the idiot was in trouble somewhere like in the disaster area in the hurricane area, Louisiana, etc, I would probably try to help him as he is a human being still, even if he is worthless. This is one thing all of us can agree on, Ex Pug is a moron.

Did Don King promote any of Jerry's fights? I don't think he did, given that one career was ending when the other was beginning. As far as Ex-Pug goes, I found it so hard digesting every point he was making that I never got to the end part. Perhaps the guy thought he was being funny and didn't realize he was actually being offensive. But I absolutely agree that jokes should not be made about medical conditions, ever. There's never anything funny in that.

I also thought Kent was over reacting till I read last part about bed pans and stuff...having have to take care of someone now, let me tell you its no joke...lets just hope it was some kid using dads computer and didn't realize what he was doing. Also i saw a skit on Saturday Night Live a few years ago that was much worse then this persons idiocy. They were making fun of Ali's condition. Also i remember another comedy show ( I not 100% sure so i wont say name)that made fun of brain damaged fighters. If you want to be funny EX-PUG theres sites for that..this was a very inappropriate place for it. Noam, Not sure if King promoted Jerry's fights. I think he broke into the big time with the Ali/Foreman fight. Don't think that Don King ever promoted Jerry Quarry's fights. I know for sure that he was involved in the Quarry-Shavers fight (I think as Shavers' manager) and that Jerry's sensational win was very painful for him back in 1973. What's amazing about Don King is that if you see pictures of him in 2005 and pictures of him in 1974, he is not changed much. | 9/3/05 05:58:09 AM|Noam|same||same|||10|Thanks Massimo and Ed. Massimo - you recommended Larry Holmes's website some time ago and it is very good there. While it seems that he doesn't actually like Don King, Holmes believes that King is good for boxing and has made lots of boxers wealthy. Again, in regard to Ex-Pug, I don't think he realized he was being offensive as it turned out. It's a pity it ended up the way it did. | 9/3/05 10:46:49 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||Kentallenent@aol.com|||10|EX PUG, IF YOU EVER DO POST HERE AGAIN, REALIZE THAT JERRY QUARRY DIED OF CONDITIONS SIMILAR TO ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE IN 1999 AND FAMILY MEMBERS TOOK CARE OF HIM WHEN HE WAS UNABLE TO CARE FOR HIMSELF. IT IS POSSIBLE YOU DIDN'T KNOW THIS.  IF YOU DID KNOW THIS AND YOU POSTED YOUR DRIBBLE ANYWAY, THEN YOU REALLY ARE THE PIECE OF CRAP I TOOK YOU FOR. IF ANYONE THINKS I OVER REACTED TO EX PUG'S POST, UNDERSTAND THAT THE QUARRY FAMILY ARE GOOD PEOPLE WHO HAVE SUFFERED A LOT OF TRAGEDY THEY DON'T DESERVE AND I TAKE OFFENSE WHEN I SEE ANYONE ATTACKING JERRY AND THEM. | 9/3/05 11:29:36 AM|Paul|Maduros||pama42@yahoo.com|||10|I have not visited this site in a long time, the reason there to many nuts. I felt that i had to respond to this fool. Listen fool you are not the first that has tried to diminish belittle Jerry Quarry. That last statement shows you are a coward, like many that hit and run on here. THE NAME OF JERRY QUARRY STANDS ON IT'S OWN, A TRUE HERO TO ALL OF US THAT UNDERSTAND WHAT HE STOOD FOR , COURAGE BEYOND BELIEF ! GOD BLESS YOU JERRY ! | 9/3/05 05:46:49 PM|SABRINA QUARRY-PORTER|FLORIDA||SABRINALPORTER@AOL.COM|||10|WELL SAID PAUL...I SECOND THAT, ESPECIALLY BECAUSE THAT IS MY FAMILY HE IS TALKING ABOUT...GO AWAY YOU JERK!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! | 9/3/05 05:58:29 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Kent - mocking the disabled or the ill is never acceptable and that's why some of us took exception when Forest did just that with Ali. Can someone be of so perverse a nature that they get pleasure out of the suffering of others ? It would seem they do. When Forest wrote that Frazier gets pleasure out of Ali's inability to walk and talk properly, mocking Ali's shaking hands, that made me want to puke. Same thing with the cruel comments by this ex-Pug guy. Jerry Quarry and Ali have more courage in their little fingers than guys like ex-Pug and Forest have in their entire bodies. That they have to pick on something that others can't change or control, like an illness, is cowardly. And that applies equally whether we're talking about Jerry Quarry or Muhammad Ali or just some plain ordinary guy. | 9/3/05 08:16:20 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@AOL.COM|||10|ok, i re-read ex-pugs dum ass thing and i really dont think he intended it as a slur to Mr Quarry..The reason i think this is even though the last thing mentioned a bed pan, it fit in with the rest of the dumb stuff he mentioned which was pretty harmless...I think if he meant to be malicious there would have been more pointed things in rest of his list. I'LL give him the benefit of the doubt. Maybe if he'll want to post and clear himself??The overall tone of it though was a mockery of boxing, so this being a boxing site, was out of place. | 9/4/05 12:59:36 PM|George Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com|||10|AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF BOXING, INCORPORATED, 86 FLETCHER AVENUE, MOUNT VERNON, NEW YORK 10552, 914.664.4571, www.aaib.org | 9/3/05 08:16:20 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@AOL.COM|||10|THE JERRY QUARRY FOUNDATION FOR PUGILISTICA DEMENTIA, INCORPORATED 389 10TH STREET, NORTHEAST, LINTON, IN 47441, 812.847.4810, www.jerryquarry.com | 9/3/05 08:16:20 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@AOL.COM|||10|3 September 2005 | 9/3/05 08:16:20 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@AOL.COM|||10|The Honorable Bill Frist | 9/3/05 08:16:20 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@AOL.COM|||10|Majority Leader | 9/3/05 08:16:20 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@AOL.COM|||10|United States Senate | 9/3/05 08:16:20 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@AOL.COM|||10|Washington, DC 20210 | 9/3/05 08:16:20 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@AOL.COM|||10|Dear Senator Frist: Below is the fourth in a series of letters concerning the past accomplishments and current positions of the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) and The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia (TJQF). The purposes of these letters are to inform you of these items. This letter initially covers the final six principles of Manifesto 2001, Toward the Betterment of Boxing. In its seventh principle, the AAIB supports all current efforts to establish and maintain pension plans and charitable trusts for retired boxers, to include the support for and creation of international trust funds and a charitable trust for the financial support of boxers from other countries. Next, the AAIB supports the other not-for-profit organizations that have for their purpose the goal of assisting active and retired fighters. Thus, the Association believes that such organizations as The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia, FIST, the Retired Boxers’ Foundation, the AAPRP, the proposed union for boxers, and the Ring Association Chapters together with the AAIB must help in addressing the solutions mentioned in this Manifesto. Ninth, all fighters should be encouraged to pay their taxes and create a profitable investment plan. Individuals managing fighters who do not attempt to help their boxers carry out this responsibility should be punished for their negligence and malfeasance. Tenth, all fighters, active and retired, should have access to ongoing medical insurance covering physical, mental health, and substance abuse problems which may befall them during their careers. The eleventh principle states that all efforts should be made by the advisors or agents or managers of the fighters to ensure that the fighters attend school or complete on-the-job training classes to concurrently secure a second career while boxing. The AAIB believes that such an approach can help fighters more adequately prepare for their future while helping them avoid future financial/emotional/mental problems. And finally, the AAIB favors the establishment and implementation of governmental or private contractual mandates to ensure that each fighter has a specific plan created to ensure that he or she has a successful life after boxing. To implement this principle, each plan should guarantee that a retired fighter be made aware of all educational/social services programs that can help him/her adjust to life after his/her retirement from the sport. The second major section of the Manifesto200, Toward the Betterment of Boxing, covers the raising of specific standards through the efforts of that Association of Boxing Commissioners. These include uniform contest/safety/contractual/promotional rules covering the following topics: weight classes, title fights, knockdowns, fouls, scoring, medical standards, following knockouts, gear, gloves, head gears, women boxers, rings/ringside, tough man contests, financial statements, suspensions/revocations/permanent revocations, contracts, promoters, advise regarding dangers, information, management choices, medical “triggers” regarding retirement, professional boxing gyms, science, governance, image, curfew, national anthem, standards of taste, tournament format, the abolition of unjustifiable title bouts, and the establishment of a national federal boxing commission if these rules do not improve boxing. Finally, this document includes the issues of Stopping Bouts and Participants. The AAIB, in conjunction with its Advisory Medical Board, views the matter of stopping bouts and disqualifying participants on two levels: one, the acute in-fight decisions about whether a boxer should be allowed to continue, and second, the between-bout decisions about whether a boxer should be permitted to return to the ring. Since the AAIB has published and distributed this document, it also has served as the source of many ideas and concepts to reform the great sport of boxing. Copies of this critical document can be found on the 2 web sites listed above. Finally, The Jerry Quarry Foundation has repeatedly supported the passage and implementation of all of these suggestions when presented as part of legislative items. If you want to provide feedback or ask questions concerning this letter or any other related subjects, I can be reached at ehnpbsa@aol.com, 330.743.2898, or 142 Upland Ave., Youngstown, Ohio 44505. I am Sincerely yours, GEORGE L. OTTO, BCD, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LICDC, LISW, MSUS, SAP Chief Counsel/Legislative Consultant Cc.
Other members of Congress:

I agree with Ed and tend to believe that Ex-Pug didn't mean to convey an insult, but it would be helpful for Ex-Pug to clarify the situation. It might be an attempt at humour gone awry.

There are double standards involved, though. Without trying to open old wounds, was there the outrage when the guy calling himself Forrest Ward stated the following on 06/23/05:

"Frazier takes great pleasure in seeing Ali stagger around with his hands shaking and not being able to talk. Joe gladly takes responsibility for a lot of Ali's bodily damage."

This rant was far worse than anything Ex-Pug wrote. What Forrest said was disgraceful and intentionally cruel. Yet, even though Forrest's insults are incapable of misinterpretation like Ex-Pug's comments, there was none of the contrived outrage that we've seen now.

Paul - where were you when Forrest demeaned the impaired and the ill with his comments about Ali? Remember: sometimes the 'nutters' sit back and say nothing. Anyway, it would be better if we all put these double standards behind us, ditch the contrived outrage, and start being fair to all boxers. At least Ex-Pug's post might achieve that. Thanks.

It was wrong for anyone to make fun of Ali's condition but was Forrest just repeating something Frazier had said, bitter feelings for his old rival, or was he making fun of Ali also? Both Ali and Frazier over the years said some hurtful things about each other but it seems they have softened the bad feelings in recent years. I hope this is the case.

The reason I was especially offended by Ex-Pug's comments is because they were here on the Jerry Quarry Foundation's website and because Jerry died of the condition Pug was making fun of. What could be worse than dying of something?

I did acknowledge that Pug might have not known Jerry had died of the affliction. I doubt whoever this person is will post here again.

The founders of these organizations created them to improve boxing for the fighters, the fans, the promoters, the managers, the physicians, the cut persons, and all other concerned individuals. As I may have indicated in an earlier letter to you, the AAIB came into existence more than 39 years ago; the Quarry brothers, James and Jerry, established TJQF in 1995.

Working in tandem, the AAIB and TJQF have frequently contributed to the betterment of boxing from a preventive standpoint. These not for profit, state and federally tax exempt organizations have contributed much over the years. For example, in the past decade they have provided written and oral comments and suggestions concerning the following proposed and/or approved pieces of federal legislation: the Professional Boxing Safety Act of 1996, the State Safety Reciprocity Act of 1997, the Traumatic Brain Injury Amendments of 1999, the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act of 2000, the National Boxing Commission Act of 2001, the Professional Boxing Amendments Act of 2002, and the Professional Boxing Safety Act of 2003.
In addition to the above, these organizations provided a considerable amount of support in the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services’ efforts to produce the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) Report to Congress on Health, Safety, and Equipment Standards for Boxing, a study that met the reporting requirements of the Professional Boxing Safety Act of 1996. This report constitutes the most extensive and exhaustive effort in professional boxing history in documenting the research, studies, and expert opinions concerning safety issues. Furthermore, the AAIB and TJQF contributed much regarding the National Association of Attorney General’s hearings held in January of 1999. More specifically, representatives from these two organizations made suggestions regarding topics to be covered and speakers to be invited. Furthermore, they also testified themselves both individually and as members of at least three panels at this event. The results of these efforts included the passage of the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act of 2000, more sustained efforts regarding the pension and safety issues in professional boxing, and the establishment of a boxer’s bill of rights. During the past decade these organizations have done more together than any other group or groups to consistently support the betterment of boxing by supporting measures that would prevent challenges and difficulties from occurring. Thus, in regard to all of the above-mentioned federal legislation, only the AAIB and TJQF have supported the passage of all of those bills, though not always in their entirety. Furthermore, all of this has been done with no regard for organizational or individual gain. No person working on behalf of the AAIB and TJQF groups have drawn a salary or any perks or any other kind of present or future remuneration from any person or organization in exchange for his/her efforts. In other words, we have done of all of this simply to improve the sport itself. If you want to provide feedback or ask questions concerning this letter or any other related subjects, I can be reached at ehnpbsa@aol.com, 330.743.2898, or 142 Upland Ave., Youngstown, Ohio 44505. I am Sincerely yours,

GEORGE L. OTTO, BCD, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LICDC, LISW, MSUS, SAP
Chief Counsel/Legislative Consultant

Cc. Other members of Congress

5 September 2005

The Honorable Tom DeLay
Majority Leader
United States House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20215

Dear Representative DeLay:

In following up on my 2003-2005 letters to you, I am again writing on behalf of the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, Inc., the Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia, Incorporated, and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, Inc., to urge your support for two pending pieces of federal legislation.

The first is the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act of 2000, which was introduced into Congress in 2000 by Representative Steve Israel (D-NY) and Representative Tom DeLay (R-TX). This bill would establish a new federal standards-setting body to provide safety standards for professional boxing and would mandate that all professional boxers be required to undergo a mandatory two-month minimum rehabilitation period if they suffer a severe head injury or a knockout. It would also mandate that all professional boxing matches be held in front of an audience that is not allowed to consume alcohol.

The second is the Boxer's Bill of Rights Act of 2005, which was introduced into Congress in 2005 by Representative Steve Israel (D-NY) and Representative Tom DeLay (R-TX). This bill would establish a new federal standards-setting body to provide safety standards for professional boxing and would mandate that all professional boxers be required to undergo a mandatory two-month minimum rehabilitation period if they suffer a severe head injury or a knockout. It would also mandate that all professional boxing matches be held in front of an audience that is not allowed to consume alcohol.

Both of these bills are critical to the future of professional boxing. The current system of safety standards is inadequate, and the lack of regulatory oversight has resulted in a number of serious injuries and fatalities among professional boxers. The passage of these bills would help to ensure that professional boxing is a safer sport for all of its participants.

I hope that you will support these important pieces of legislation and work to ensure their passage into law.

Sincerely yours,

GEORGE L. OTTO, BCD, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LICDC, LISW, MSUS, SAP
Chief Counsel/Legislative Consultant

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF BOXING, INC.
86 Fletcher Avenue, Mount Vernon, New York 10552

THE JERRY QUARRY FOUNDATION FOR PUGILISTICA DEMENTIA, INCORPORATED
389 10th Street, Northeast, Linton, Indiana 47441

5 September 2005

The Honorable Tom DeLay
Majority Leader
United States House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20215

In following up on my 2003-2005 letters to you, I am again writing on behalf of the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, Inc., the Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia, Incorporated, and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, Inc., to urge your support for two pending pieces of federal legislation.

The first is the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act of 2000, which was introduced into Congress in 2000 by Representative Steve Israel (D-NY) and Representative Tom DeLay (R-TX). This bill would establish a new federal standards-setting body to provide safety standards for professional boxing and would mandate that all professional boxers be required to undergo a mandatory two-month minimum rehabilitation period if they suffer a severe head injury or a knockout. It would also mandate that all professional boxing matches be held in front of an audience that is not allowed to consume alcohol.

The second is the Boxer's Bill of Rights Act of 2005, which was introduced into Congress in 2005 by Representative Steve Israel (D-NY) and Representative Tom DeLay (R-TX). This bill would establish a new federal standards-setting body to provide safety standards for professional boxing and would mandate that all professional boxers be required to undergo a mandatory two-month minimum rehabilitation period if they suffer a severe head injury or a knockout. It would also mandate that all professional boxing matches be held in front of an audience that is not allowed to consume alcohol.

Both of these bills are critical to the future of professional boxing. The current system of safety standards is inadequate, and the lack of regulatory oversight has resulted in a number of serious injuries and fatalities among professional boxers. The passage of these bills would help to ensure that professional boxing is a safer sport for all of its participants.

I hope that you will support these important pieces of legislation and work to ensure their passage into law.

Sincerely yours,

GEORGE L. OTTO, BCD, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LICDC, LISW, MSUS, SAP
Chief Counsel/Legislative Consultant

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF BOXING, INC.
389 10th Street, Northeast, Linton, Indiana 47441

5 September 2005

The Honorable Tom DeLay
Majority Leader
United States House of Representatives
Washington, DC 20215

In following up on my 2003-2005 letters to you, I am again writing on behalf of the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, Inc., the Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia, Incorporated, and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing, Inc., to urge your support for two pending pieces of federal legislation.

The first is the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act of 2000, which was introduced into Congress in 2000 by Representative Steve Israel (D-NY) and Representative Tom DeLay (R-TX). This bill would establish a new federal standards-setting body to provide safety standards for professional boxing and would mandate that all professional boxers be required to undergo a mandatory two-month minimum rehabilitation period if they suffer a severe head injury or a knockout. It would also mandate that all professional boxing matches be held in front of an audience that is not allowed to consume alcohol.

The second is the Boxer's Bill of Rights Act of 2005, which was introduced into Congress in 2005 by Representative Steve Israel (D-NY) and Representative Tom DeLay (R-TX). This bill would establish a new federal standards-setting body to provide safety standards for professional boxing and would mandate that all professional boxers be required to undergo a mandatory two-month minimum rehabilitation period if they suffer a severe head injury or a knockout. It would also mandate that all professional boxing matches be held in front of an audience that is not allowed to consume alcohol.

Both of these bills are critical to the future of professional boxing. The current system of safety standards is inadequate, and the lack of regulatory oversight has resulted in a number of serious injuries and fatalities among professional boxers. The passage of these bills would help to ensure that professional boxing is a safer sport for all of its participants.

I hope that you will support these important pieces of legislation and work to ensure their passage into law.

Sincerely yours,

GEORGE L. OTTO, BCD, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LICDC, LISW, MSUS, SAP
Chief Counsel/Legislative Consultant

THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF BOXING, INC.
86 Fletcher Avenue, Mount Vernon, New York 10552

THE JERRY QUARRY FOUNDATION FOR PUGILISTICA DEMENTIA, INCORPORATED
389 10th Street, Northeast, Linton, Indiana 47441
Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) and The Jerry Quarry Foundation for Pugilistica Dementia (TJQF). In the text below, I have below provided further comments on behalf of both organizations regarding S.148, The Professional Boxing Amendments Act of 2005. Having re-examined the above-mentioned bill in light of other proposed changes that have been recently made concerning it, we support this legislation. However, we believe that Congress should amend this proposed bill in the following three areas prior to its passage. First of all, this bill should define term “Promoter” as follows. It should mean the person(s) and/or legal entity(ies) responsible for organizing, promoting, and producing a professional boxing match, to include a television network, premium, or other cable or satellite program service, hotel, casino, resort, or other commercial establishment hosting or sponsoring a professional boxing match, regardless of whether it or they has (or have) a promotional agreement with a boxer in that match or engages in promotional activities through an affiliate. As indicated above, the adoption of these changes would result in the television media, hotel, casino, resort, and all other types of commercial organizations to include sponsors being considered as “promoters.” Thus these entities would assume more involvement in terms of monitoring the quality of the matches, the safety of the fighters, the conduct of the fights, and the money earned by the boxers. Currently, in the major fights, a barrier or firewall exists between the fighters and the media outlets, casinos, hotels, resorts, and other commercial establishments that largely fund these pugilistic events of a short-term nature. This arrangement permits the latter organizations from soiling or sullying their hands with many of the nasty aspects of professional boxing. First and foremost are the many unconscionable/one-sided aspects of the contracts that frequently occur just before the matches begin. These include: bait and switch; now you see it, now you don’t; we’ll take care of that for you later; I am your promoter, and my daughter is now your manager; there are many versions of that agreement; you owe me interest on the last advance that I gave you; there is no such thing as a written agreement; you are not allowed to have your lawyer look at this agreement before you sign it; if you don’t agree to this change, you won’t fight for another year; you can win the next one; you didn’t do enough to promote the is fight; yes, oral changes can be made right now; I know you can’t sign this new contract right now because your hands are taped, but you can do it after the fight; and the many other such ways of minimizing any semblance of fairness and propriety. Other deplorable aspects of the sweet science that have historically been avoided by a premium or other cable or satellite program service, hotel, casino, resort, or other commercial establishment hosting or sponsoring a professional boxing match have been the deaths and injuries suffered by the boxers in the ring, the seemingly endless problems that the fighters have faced outside of the ring (legal, mental health, emotional, physical, substance abuse, financial, relational, and medical difficulties), as well as the frequently occurring infractions involving the physical examinations, the weigh ins, the allowable conduct of the boxers in the matches, the work of the seconds in the corners, the quality of refereeing, and the scoring of the matches. Ensuring the increased involvement of entities and individuals who currently operate under some sort of scrutiny or on some sort of radar screen of oversight (eg. HBO and Showtime by the Federal Communications Commission) while acting in many ways like promoters can only help move boxing to a higher level of accountability to the paying fans and the fighters themselves. Also, these changes would add an element of fairness to this proposed bill that presently does not exist because it currently excludes the very entities that fund the majority of the big fights and earn the largest profits in doing so. The adoption of this proposed amendment (which is somewhat favored by you, Senator Reid) would provide a sense of equality and similar treatment for all entities acting as promoters in that it would include within the jurisdiction of the United States Boxing Administration everyone involved in the promotional aspects of professional fights. Thus the bill would be treat all the same, and the greatest beneficiaries of the current business practices would not be exempt from regulation. While many of the entities presently excluded from this bill (eg. the cable networks) have not engaged in the bulk of the wrongful acts negatively impacting the fighters and the fans, it is important to note that the implementation of this bill as currently proposed will not significantly alter the landscape of boxing unless it brings together all the important parties to this billion dollar enterprise under the single rubric of federal regulation. Then again, another important consideration is whether the major players, HBO and Showtime, would simply move their operations to overseas sites to avoid any federal oversight. However, major drawbacks in adopting that strategy would not only be a lessening of interest in paying for and in watching the fights overseas, but also the presence of fewer wealthy people playing the casino tables and attending the fights themselves. And thus the important site fees might provide less revenue—a significant incentive to continue to stage the fights in the United States.

Secondly, Congress should amend this proposed bill to include a provision that forces the United States Boxing Commission (USBC) to describe all of the financial, safety, administrative, and promotional terms of each contract governing all such aspects of each match that it regulates both in writing and in English. However, if one or both the fighters involved does not write and speak that form of communication, the USBC should then use another language or languages understandable by both fighters regarding all of the above-mentioned provisions of the contest. The main reason for the proposed changes as described above is to help resolve one of the major issues in professional boxing, namely the unfair bargaining position of the fighter in terms of negotiating for his/her best interest. If a fighter receives copies of the information above in writing and in a language that he/she reads, then the boxer can better fend for his/her rights. By including these provisions in S.148, and by passing the balance of this bill as it is presently written, the other Congressional members and yourselves can greatly assist the fighters in better managing their financial interests and moving towards more effectively setting up a union, eliminating from their ranks boxers who do not have the pugilistic skills to begin or continue boxing, getting pensions, and qualifying for both unemployment and workmen’s compensation benefits when such circumstances arise. Furthermore, it is significant to note that the other major sports never began to care about their athletes until the athletes themselves organized on behalf of their own best interests and thus overthrew the chains of exploitation that bound them.

Thirdly, the bill should contain a provision directing the issuance of permanent administrative retirements by the USBC to fighters who are unable to defend themselves in the ring any longer. This section would apply to fighters who are physically and mentally healthy, but whose skill level is too deficient and inadequate for them to successfully compete in a professional boxing match. One recent example of this having occurred has been the administrative suspension of former Heavyweight Champion Evander Holyfield by the New York State Athletic Commission because of the deterioration of his boxing skills, and his resulting poor performances in recent matches.

If you want to provide feedback or ask questions concerning this letter or any other related subjects, I can be reached at ehnpbs@aol.com, 330.743.2898, or 142 Upland Ave., Youngstown, Ohio 44505. Finally, Mr. Stephen Acunto, Sr., Co-Founder of the AAIB, and other individuals connected with that formidable organization, also stand ready, willing, and able to help with these legislative matters concerning this great sport. I am sincerely yours,

GEORGE L. OTTO, BCD, ESQUIRE, ICADC, LICDC, LISW, MSUS, SAP
Chief Counsel/Legislative Consultant

Cc. Other members of Congress

| 9/5/05 02:27:34 AM | Ex Pug | The Blue |
Hello Friends!

I would have wrote sooner but i've been sniffing glue like 24/7 and well have u ever tried to type after that? Its seems ive made a new friend by the name of Kent. Hi Kent, Sorry you're so uptight about things but I got a suggestion...how about u and me sniffing a tube of airplane glue together? I know you're trying to lose weight and its a great way to do that. But hey if you want to sniff paint thats kewl too or even gasoline ($3.00 a gallon gasoline...count me in!!), its your call.

the Quarry family came on the site and asked for all the pettiness and bitterness to stop. Noam, Kent and some other of the veterans of this site also called for an end to the hostilites. And here you are bringing Forrest up again. It makes no sense. What are you trying to accomplish?

Returning to boxing who are your top 10 lightheavyweight champions of all time?

Peter, I dont have a list for top ten mainly because I dont follow that division as closely as the heavys...But my top 2 picks would be Bob Foster then Archie Moore. Foster could whiplash a punch out like no fighter I ever seen.

Hey Ex Pug, why don't you just go away. It's like this you have no idea what Uncle Jerry's life was like, he was well liked by all, loved by all, and admired by all. In all honesty he was a blast to be around, funny, oh so strong, my kids loved the way they could punch him in the stomach (he used to have them do that) and him say I Still Got It. Anyways you should just go, cause if you don't then we'll all just ignore you like we have a couple times in the past. Dad, Uncle Jerry, Aunt Brenda, and Mom, you are missed every day, and always will be loved. Keep coming back all! Don't sweat the small stuff.

Peter, I think you're getting mixed up. I also called for the fighting to stop, if you'd like to look back. However, I am entitled to draw parallels between the behaviour of Ex-Pug and Forrest and, thankfully, I don't need your permission. It would kind of be fun if you did discuss boxing yourself, without trying to pull everyone else up on what they say and what you want them to say and what you don't like them saying. Thanks.

I just got a copy of Adam 12 TV show, the First Season from 1968-69. Guess who's the guest star in one of the episodes - you guessed it, Jerry. He's the tough guy in the crowd at a college where students are having a protest. Pete & Jim have to arrest him.... Good show. I wished Jerry had moved on from Boxing around 1974 and done more TV work - he had great charisma on the screen.

One of my favourite light-heavyweights of all time is Harold Johnson; he fought all the best and beat most of them and he had some legendary battles with Archie Moore. Probably if he was around today he would whip most of the heavyweights of today. SHANNON BRIGGS b RAY MERCER by KO 7. Why don't Mercer quit is career? He was born in 1961 for God's sake, it's time to quit!

Regarding light heavies -- I would call it too close to call between Roy Jones and Archie Moore. Bob Foster a close number 3.

I think Archie Moore was a better overall fighter than Bob Foster because he beat several very good heavyweights, while Bob Foster always lost against heavyweights (Diego Jones, Zora Folley, Ernie "Wrong name" Terrell, Ali' and Duckin' Joe). This is the biggest difference between these two guys in my book (I have a beautiful book!). But stylistically Bob was probably better than Archie.

It was hard to leave Roy Jones Junior off of my light heavyweight list but I did because although he had great skills, I believe he is well past his prime even if he does fight again, he fought in an era with not much competition and his chin wasn't really tested until he lost some of his skills of avoiding punches but when it was tested, we found he can't take a punch well. In a stronger era he would have been hit more and he would have had some more losses. The 70s and 80s were great periods of light heavys with champions such as B. Foster, Galindez, Saad Muhammad, Mustafa Muhammad, M. Spinks, Qawi, Marvin Johnson, Mike Rossman, John Conteh all holding titles at one time or another plus talented contenders like Jerry Martin, Yaqui Lopez, and our own Mike Quarry there as well. Jones would have been tested more than he has been in the 90s and 2000s. We will never know if he could take a punch in his prime, because he never did. But from what I saw, quite frankly, I would have bet on him against a lot of heavyweights of the past. In all honesty I don't know who I would pick in fight between him and JQ. It would be a matter of what would give out first -- his jaw or Jerry's skin around the eyes. | 9/6/05 12:43:43 PM|Professor |Iceland||soontobe@ic.edu||||10|Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil. Iceland is cold.| 9/6/05 12:44:00 PM|Professor |Iceland||soontobe@ic.edu||||10|Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil. Iceland is cold.| 9/6/05 12:44:10 PM|Professor |Iceland||soontobe@ic.edu||||10|Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil. Iceland is cold.| are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:18 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:19 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:19 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:19 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:20 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:20 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:20 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:20 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:21 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:21 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:22 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:22 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:22 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:22 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:44:30 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Howard, are you from Louisville originally and have you ever spent time in the UK? Kent, you are a good man, you put up with all kinds of stupid stuff yet stay civil.
Iceland is cold.
| 9/6/05 12:50:58 PM | Professor | Iceland | soontobe@ic.edu | | 10 | Oh my goodness, I'm sorry about the repetitive postings. My computer bugged out or something. I will leave now.
My top ten light-heavyweight Champions

1. Archie Moore
2. Billy Conn
3. Michael Spinks
4. Bob Foster
5. Tommy Loughran
6. Harold Johnson
7. Maxie Rosenbloom
8. Eddie Gregory
9. Saad Muhmmad
10. Kent, because it is a poll about the top Light-heavyweight champions, there is no allowance for Ezzard Charles or Floyd Patterson. Although I think either of those 2 could beat any Light-heavyweight on my top 10 list. One more problem with including current champions of today. The fights only go 12 rounds, and they are weighed in the day before the fight. That is a pretty big advantage compared to the old standards.

Kent, because it is a poll about the top Light-heavyweight champions, there is no allowance for Ezzard Charles or Floyd Patterson. Although I think either of those 2 could beat any Light-heavyweight on my top 10 list. One more problem with including current champions of today. The fights only go 12 rounds, and they are weighed in the day before the fight. That is a pretty big advantage compared to the old standards.

Oh, I didn't notice that we were talking about light heavyweight champions not just light heavyweights, which Charles was in part of his career. I will have to re do my list. Jones might very well be on it. Have to think about it.

If we are talking about light-heavyweights and not light-heavyweight champions, there's no doubt in my mind that Ezzard Charles was the greatest. He beat a "young" Archie Moore 3 out of 3 times and one of them was by KO. He was clearly better than an in prime Archie Moore as a light-heavyweight!

Kent Mass everyone, Do any of you ever have thoughts like maybe the old timers could never compete with a modern fighter? By modern I mean Ali's era and up. I know the old timers were great and all but somehow i got this little thing that tells me maybe fighters today are faster and better trained. I know when Wacott refereed the Liston/Ali second fight he said there was no way old guys in our prime could have stayed with him, of course that was Ali he was talking about. Don't get me wrong i am not putting down the old timers but i just wonder if gaps in time have changed everything and made fighters from different era's non-competitive with each other.

Ed, I think for example what might have happened say if Joe Louis had fought Muhammad Ali can be seen in Ali's fight with Zora Folley. Folley was about the same size as Louis and he had a similar style, a standard stand up boxer, except Folley didn't hit as hard as Louis. Still, even though Folley was a little past his prime, he hit an in prime Ali with a lot of good shots, he was competitive but he ended up losing to Ali by a seventh round knockout. Ali didn't move as much verses Folley as he did against other fighters during his prime but maybe he felt he didn't have to. But I hardly think he meant to get hit with good right hands especially on purpose and Folley did tag Ali and not just a couple of times. An in prime Louis with a similar style to Folley's would tag Ali but with harder punches and test Ali to the limits, there would be a lot of doubt as to who the winner would be. Regarding heavyweights especially, some people claim Louis would be too small to compete with the huge heavyweights of today but as I have pointed out before, Louis defeated three fighters who were at least 6'5" and 240 and above, Abe Simon, Buddy Baer, and Primo Carnera. Louis also defeated Tony Galento, who at 5'9" fought weighed in the 230 pound range compared to Louis' 200 pounds. So it is clear Louis' skill could overcome a size disadvantage. In most cases the greats could compete in any era.

Joe Louis rolls any heavyweight today. Sonny Liston and George Foreman dismantle any heavyweight today. These guys don't have skills anymore. Back then the best athletes became boxers, now they are football players or basketball players first. Could you imagine a young George Foreman coming up against these heavyweights? I mean seriously he would kill all of them save maybe Byrd. Could you imagine John Ruiz against prime George Foreman. I mean it would be disgustiing. You gotta talk about the past when the present smells like ****.]
[9/7/05 11:55:33 AM|John Gerard|NYC||rock2892@yahoo.com|||10|Size means nothing when there is no skill. Archie Moore easily handled Nino Valdez who was about 6'5" and 245 pounds of solid muscle. Louis destroyed Abe Simon and Buddy Baer. Even though today's heavies are bigger than Foreman in his prime, not one can come close to his hitting power as seen in the Frazier or Norton fights.
[9/7/05 12:46:03 PM|John Gerard|NYC||rock2892@yahoo.com|||10|KENT: Regarding comparing Louis to Foley. We should note that not only was Louis a much harder hitter, he also had much faster hands and the ability to finish off an opponent that Foley lacked. Louis was funny in he fact that he had somewhat slow feet but very fast hands. |
[9/7/05 01:40:51 PM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|I have some doubts on (or about) Joe Louis, yes, he was a great champion but he was far from being unbeatable. Billy Conn and little known Tommy Farr gave him very tough fights. Jersey Joe Walcott clearly had his numbers and knocked him down 3 times in 2 fights. Max Schmeling beat him fair and square the first time. Yeah, he was the perfect fighting machine, he was powerful and had huge skills, but he could be put in big trouble and his chin wasn't chuvalian. I think he was vulnerable to big punchers. Anyway, he was a great champion.|
[9/7/05 04:38:32 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Pete Some other lightheavy champs worthy of contemplation: Thomas Hearns - 2 times champion who beat Andries for WBC title in 1987 and also beat Virgil Hill in 1991 for WBA title.Virgil Hill - had 17 successful title defenses and unified the WBA and IBF titles in 1996.Michael Moorer - won WBO title and had 9 winning defenses before relinquishing it to fight as a heavyweight.Apart from Hearns, there were other lower weight guys who briefly but successfully visited the division....Sugar Ray Leonard to win WBC title from Lalonde in 1988, and Roy Jones junior, of course.My best is Archie Moore. Trivia: who was the first lightheavyweight champion to take the jump and actually win a world heavyweight title ?|
[9/7/05 04:53:26 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Ed Instead of taking fighters of past eras and injecting them into the present and wondering how they would go, perhaps it's more insightful to take current day fighters and injecting them into the past. Past fighters fought often and usually with little notice and short preparations. Fights were less likely to be stopped on cuts. There were more fixes, too. The fights were longer, often much longer. Could Lewis go 25 rounds against James J. Jeffries or Jack Johnson ? Could he perform all 15 rounds against Ali, Frazier and Foreman ? Those three extra (championship) rounds - 9 minutes - is a long, long time with Foreman and Frazier are throwing bombs. It gives the mentally timid an extra excuse to quit.Alternatively, let's take Johnson and Jeffries and tell them to pack the 25 plus rounds endurance into 12 rounds. They'd fight much harder. Have more energy. Same with Ali and Frazier over 12 rounds, instead of 15 rounds.Today's fighter are trained for 12 rounds and less, not 15 to 25 rounds. Old time fighters tended to be tougher mentally than today's, too.|
[9/7/05 06:22:18 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||Kentallent@aol.com|||10|Noam, Michael Spinks was the first light heavyweight champion to jump up to the heavyweight division and win the title.Way back at the turn of the 20th century, Bob Fitzsimmons dropped down to the light heavyweight division and won that title but he had held the heavyweight title first.Technically Fitz was a light heavyweight when he won the heavyweight title as he weighed less than the light heavyweight limit when he defeated James J. Corbett, 195 pounds, for the title but he hadn't at that point won the light heavyweight title yet.|
[9/7/05 06:40:56 PM|Pete|Cleveland||N/A|||10|Noam, you made some good points. The old vs. the new so to speak regarding the length of fights.|
of Fame in 1991. And he related how someone asked him if he (Foster) was sad because Hill broke his record for title defenses. Foster shook his head and said Tommy Hearns beat Virgil Hill. Does anyone think Tommy Hearns would stand a snowballs chance in hell against Bob Foster. The champions from the older days had much stiffer competition than modern champions have. Hence, that is why so many of these guys are undefeated and reign so long.

9/7/05 11:55:18 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y|Mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|Kent,Yes, Ali did get tagged a few times by Foley but he was never hurt. Foley was a very good boxer and was probably more determined then Ali had planned for but he was disposed of very easily with Ali hardly breaking a sweat. Ali also wanted to put on a show because it was his last fight before being barred from fighting because of draft issues. The fight was also on live tv.When you consider how much trouble good movers like Conn gave Louis I am not sure how Louis would have done with an iron chinned and much harder punching Ali. Louis is one of my favorite fighters to watch but his field of fighters for the 12 years he was champ were very poor. To Louis's credit though he did just what a champ should do no matter what level the competiton, demolished them (or almost all of them). Do you think Louis could have beaten Foreman, Ali, Lewis or Frasier? I am not so sure a top trained current champion could possibly be in better shape then they are. I understand your point that a fighter with 25 or more rounds in front of him will fight at a more sluggish pace thus making them look unimpressive compared to a fighter going 12 rounds. The fighters in the old days were tough no doubt about that. My thinking though is that theres subtle differences between the fighters now and then and that the TOP current fighter in most divisions would be too much for the old timers. Nobody can know for sure though so its just for fun to try to figure it out.....I'll ask you to stick you neck out on the upcoming W.Klitschko/Peter fight. No waffleing please (if this happens or that happens so and so will win) just who is going to win. Mass,Your right on your appraisal of Louis. Joe was getting old though when he had disappointing fights with Walcott. Like several other people on here you know your boxing, Mass!|

9/8/05 01:56:03 AM|Noam|same||same||10|I'm just on here to say that I miss my good friend James Quarry. I somehow bumped into him on a website that I posted something about Jerry on. That was in 1998, we became friends quickly once he realized how strongly I felt about his brother. As of late I have read that Brenda and Jerry's mother have passed. Unbelieveable what the Quarry's have had to endure. Last I heard Mike was not doing well. i f any of the Quarry family could update me, please contact me anytime or post on here. This site is such a great thing and fitting tribute to Jerry, HE WILL NEVER BE FORGOTTEN !!! WE LOVE YOU JERRY|

9/8/05 01:56:03 AM|Noam|same||same||10|Ed - I'll go for Klitschko. Regards the other, I think greats from any era would have success in any other era. Greats from the past - guys like Henry Armstrong, Ali, Carlos Monzon, Sugar Ray Robinson - would fight today and still be great.Kent - you are correct with your answer. Fitzsimmons was an interesting character. He was the first guy to win three world titles - middleweight 1891, heavyweight 1897, and light-heavyweight 1903.He was also the oldest man to ever win the light-heavyweight title - 40 years, 5 months and 30 days. And he and James J. Corbett in 1897 were the first to have a movie made of the fight. Pete - that list of the best light-heavyweights, did any of us put Fitzsimmons in there ? |
because a style that is perfect against fighter A may be a disaster against fighter B who has a different skills and weaknesses set.|

| 9/8/05 03:54:10 PM | Noam | same || same || | Arche Moore once said that if Louis and Ali fought five times, Ali would win four of them. Moore was well placed to offer that opinion. Interestingly, Moore then went on to pick Jack Johnson to beat Ali. I don't think that would be the case, but I'd certainly have Johnson up there with the very best, just behind Ali, Marciano, Louis, Holmes, and Foreman. | 10 |

| 9/8/05 05:58:13 PM | Gerry | Cleveland || jerjets11@yahoo.com || | I have a lot of respect for Joe Louis, who may be the greatest champion ever. Certainly in his time, his combination of speed, skill and power had no real peer. Ali pointed out his lack of movement as a fighter, which goes back to the general timeline of the sport. Louis did not fight moving back on his toes like Ali or some since have been able to do. | 10 |

| 9/8/05 08:03:58 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com || | Mike Quarry, I think, did not have Rossman's popularity to get the belt that seemed to be within his reach. I think he paid a little for all of Jerry's ink, which is a shame. More than a few people thought he beat Pierre Fourie, Kevin Finnigan and Yaqui Lopez. | 10 |

| 9/9/05 03:39:59 AM | Ed | Cicero N Y || Mooseygoop@aol.com || | Actually I thought Mike Quarry was doing very well against Bob Foster until he got caught. It was a scary sight with him unconscious for quite awhile, even Foster bent over to check on him. | 10 | just read the first fight ever broadcast was the second Joe Louis vs Billy Conn heavyweight title fight. It said 140,000 people seen it mostly in bars. The following year the Louis vs Walcott fight was broadcast and about 1 million people seen it.

Pertaining to Jerry's Mother dying, No she did not die, she is alive and doing well.

Some, uh, title bouts coming as well as Peter- Klitschko. Chris Byrd, the top-rated heavy at boxrec.com, gets LaDarryl Williamson, who has been stretched out several times in recent years. When Joe Mesi KO'd him, he looked trashed. James ' Roids Out' Toney is up against a pretty decent young boxer, Dominick Guinn, that could be a very interesting bout.

Then it's Rahman against the tougher Klitschko, which could generate a lot of interest.

Yes, Foreman/Ruiz would be sick, maybe even now.

I wonder if 'champ Ruiz' will be bold enough to really unretire.

I'm sorry if I neglected to mention any other current heavyweight champions. There are so many, they need a zip code.

Hello, i know i haven't really been on this page much in the past. to be honest with you all it has really been a hard year for me. most of you know i am brenda quarry's daughter. and most of you know she died 11 months ago. my mom wrote on this page often. she loved this page and what it stood for. i was a very young child when my uncles live in the sports world so i don't remember much. i did go to a few fights but could not tell you much about them but just running around the areas with my cusins' getting the perks of being jerry quarry's neice. but hell i sure did not know what that meant back then....LOL. well i just wanted to let those of you who may or may not want to know that the past year has been hard for me but i am doing well. you may or may not know i have two small children ages 4 and 3. my son, peyton, was very close to my mom. he was having a very hard time with the death of my mom but we have been working though it nicely. so i just wanted to thank you all for your prayers, love and continued support to this site and what it means. i know it meant the world to my uncle jim, and my mom. GOD bless you all.

Sheri, peyton and hailey.

Sheri - anyone from stock as good as yours has no need to explain herself to anyone, particularly us. Thanks to your family we are all having fun here. You have our gratitide, not the other way around.

Gerry - was Bob Fitzsimmons a Brit, a Kiwi, an Aussie, or an American? A book I have reads:

"He was born in Cornwall, England, raised in New Zealand, spent the first seven years of his career in Australia, and won two of his three world titles as an American citizen. His career started when, as an apprentice blacksmith, he won a competition organized by the old bare-knuckle champion Jem Mace."

Regardless, Fitzsimmons was one of the most interesting boxers of all time. The guy switched between countries, weight divisions, and championships and, generally, came out on top.

He died aged 54 in 1917, only two years after retiring at age 52. Fitz was world middleweight champion 1891 – 94, heavyweight champion 1897 – 1899, and light-heavyweight champion 1903 – 1905.

If he was fighting today, he'd be a star.

Massimo - where are you? You'd better have a note!

Two of my friends told me that Mike Quarry was given "a gift" against Jimmy DuPree. I never saw the fight. Can anyone explain exactly what they mean? I remember DuPree was a very good lightheavy.

Hi Noam! I have not being posting in the past few days because I had nothing to say! What can I say now? A couple of things! I can greet friendly all (of) the posters and I can say that we haven't got many tools to judge (or for judging) people like Fitzimmons as there are not many tapes of him available. All everyone can do is reading(or to read) books about him and reading(or to read) his boxing record. But most of his opponents are totally unknown, at least to me. I know he was famous for his punching power and, if my memory serves me well, he fought many people in one night once, and beat them all. He certainly was an interesting subject.

As far as Mike getting gift wins, I find that hard to believe, personally. But wins in boxing can be very subjective. If a close fight goes to a decision, there's always the chance someone will get jobbed. Invariably, someone always feels they were, and for all kinds of reasons. For instance, Ken Norton could never win a decision against Muhammed Ali without breaking Ali's jaw, or so he felt, because of Ali's popularity. Floyd Patterson and Jerry Quarry disputed a great deal in their fights.

I don't know much about Jimmy DuPree, but I imagine his complaint regarding 'gifts' is not original. As for Fitz, the British Commonwealth guy, stories about the early days can be pretty entertaining stuff. Like stories of the Old West where gunfighters were built into legends, stories about guys like Fitz have few boundaries to imagination.

Hi Massimo – sometimes when someone hasn't posted for a while the reason can be something other than they have nothing to say. Thankfully, in your case, your absence was only that you had nothing to say, if you get my drift.

Massimo: Don King did promote One of Jerry's bouts 11/5/77 vs one of your countrymen Lorenzo Zanon who was once ranked as high as #6 by RING MAGAZINE. And did not look to awful bad vs Ken Norton and his title tiff with Larry Holmes, a very agile and quick boxer who owned Alfredo Evangelista. course he had the China Chin. That Jerry was able to findly find in their bout. he was ranked in the top 20 when Quarry ko'd him. I talked to MR.KING a few times in Las Vegas.

Hey Jimmy, you met Don King? That must have been something. Not one of the former Clevelanders people here celebrate, for obvious reasons.

I remember Quarry-Zanon, I was excited for JQ's comeback, then saw how little he had in the tank. Zanon won nearly every round, as I recall, JQ chasing much of the time. Then Quarry finally caught him and it ended quickly from there.

I remember the fight guys asking Frank Sinatra about the fight, he was in attendance.

He spoke very respectfully of Jerry, then said he hoped Quarry would soon retire. Tough fight to watch, actually. Thanks.

Interesting stuff regarding past and present day champs. I don’t think the disparity in size would be as much a factor as, someone else mentioned, the mental toughness of past greats. Style would, as it usually does play a role as well. Ali vs. Louis, even if they were the same size, would favor Ali. Foreman was the same size as Ali and was certainly stronger and hit harder as well. We all know how tough Ali was; he could take a tremendous punch. Although Louis would be in the fight for the full 15 rounds, as he was not prone to exhaustion after five or six rounds like Foreman; I could see an Ali KO over Louis. Fighters such as Jeffries, Johnson, and Corbett did train for 25, 30 or even 45 round fights but fought at a much slower pace than the modern era fighters. Could they make up for the difference in speed? One fight I have always been intrigued with would be Ali vs. Dempsey. Dempsey was a tremendous puncher, with quick hands and feet. He had a style that gave Ali fits, much like Frazier or Norton. Also lets not forget, with few exceptions, that the old time heavyweights were, as they are today, much bigger than the average sized man. So if you took a Dempsey or Louis tossed them into today’s mix they would not be any smaller than a good sized heavy of the current era. Jack Johnson at 6’0” 195 was considered to be a big man by the standards of the day and if you look at photos of him in a crowd he was indeed much bigger than most. Another great Light heavyweight was the much Noam, one more thing... who were the fighters involved in the last scheduled 20 round heavyweight championship bout?

Bob - I'm guessing on your question. I know that Willard beat Jack Johnson over 26 rounds. Just before then Johnson won on points over 20 rounds against Frank Moran. So I'll go with Johnson and Moran.

We compare Ali with lots of old fighters. I think Holmes is ignored too much. Perhaps he wasn't popular with some as a person, and he had a mundane personality, but he was a great fighter. He'd hold his own against any great of any era. Maybe Holmes is the fighter who had the style to beat Ali prime v prime (although I doubt it).

Gerry - about Fitzsimmons. He worked as a blacksmith in New Zealand and that's where he developed the big shoulders and strong wiry arms. His legs were very skinny and so was his torso.

He then moved to Australia but I can't find any reference to him boxing a kangaroo. In his fight with Gentleman Jim Corbett he concentrated on hitting him to the head until the 14th. By then Corbett was holding his hands too high and he was stopped with a right under the heart and a left to the solar plexus.

When he fought Jeffries, Jeffries visited Fitz in his dressing room before the fight for the reading of the rules. Jeffries picked him up in a big bear hug and it's legend that he squeezed all the strength out of him. Jeffries battered him over 11 rounds. He had his last two fights aged 51 and died two years later from pneumonia in Chicago. His build was similar to Tommy Hearns. Bob Fitzsimmons was a true warrior.

Thanks for the interesting information! I have never seen this Lorenzo Zanon fight. It's too bad, but nobody remembers of this notable heavyweight in Italia. This is odd even considering (or taking into consideration, or taking into account) that Italia haven't had in history many notable heavyweights. I can remember a few names: Primo Carnera, Lorenzo Zanon, Franco Cavicchi, Francesco Damiani and the gold winner in the heavyweight division in Roma 1960 Franco De Piccoli (a big puncher with a weak chin). In Italia, everyone remembers Primo Carnera, many remember Francesco Damiani, very very few remember Franco De Piccoli and no more than 4 or 5 people remember Zanon or Cavicchi. Fame is a strange thing! Of course Primo Carnera was the only one of them to win the undisputed heavyweight crown. But probably he wasn't better than most of the other Italian heavyweights I just talked about.

Bob, the last scheduled 20 round heavyweight boxing championship match? I will take a guess. Joe Louis vs Bob Pastor in Detroit.

Massimo: Zanon was a clever boxer of the "stick and move" variety---sort of a Jimmy Young but without the defense and chin that Young had. Zanon gave Norton a few problematic rounds before Norton landed hard on him and crumbled him. With Jerry Quarry, Zanon fought brilliantly, until he finally got caught toward the end of the fight. Of course, Jerry was years removed from being his best.

Kent - how is the exercise progressing? How many laps of the pool did you do last week? Are you in sight of your best fighting weight? When are you going to make James Toney eat his words? The world waits..... know if you're interested in a ranking, just kidding. Here's a thought .... maybe we can have all the current heavyweight world champions seeded into a tournament? Donald Trump could do it, I know he could. Thanks.

9/13/05 07:56:01 PM|bob bumbera|nc||renfbera@aol.com|||10|Yep Pete, Louis-Pastor. Noam, your right about Holmes being ignored by some. I believe he would give Ali a lot of trouble. A prime Holmes was the same size as Ali, could go a full 15 rounds and still have full power and movement ... and he could also shake off a KO blow, Ali would never have him in trouble. He was one tough man. I also think Holmes would kick George Foreman's ass had they ever fought each other. Larry is third on my all time heavy list. Yeah, Kent how is your weight loss program going? I weigh about 255 right now and saw myself in my wife's full length mirror on Saturday and said "Holy Shit"! She said I ought to come up here and look more often. Maybe your progress will inspire me to get off my butt!

9/13/05 08:37:26 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|I lost three more pounds last week but over did it on eating over the weekend so this Friday will show me if I can get away with it as Fridays are weigh in days. I give myself a day or two on the weekends when I don't exercise or diet. I am doing fifteen laps, up and back is one lap, without stopping right after a one hour walk. I worked the heavy bag hard the other day. I was really pounding it hard. J.T. is in trouble?

9/14/05 03:59:14 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|Nobody ever could hit the heavy bag like you do, not even Sonny Liston and George Foreman. I bet you need a new heavy bag every day. If Giacomo Toney saw you hitting the heavy bag, he would be scared s==less and wouldn't want any part of you. Dick Sadler would be impressed too!

9/14/05 04:19:51 AM|Noam|same||same|||10|Kent - keep it going. You've inspired me and I'm swimming laps every day now, trying to trim up from 235 pounds. I haven't decided on who my comeback fight will be against yet. JT is out of my league.

9/14/05 04:19:51 AM|Noam|same||same|||10|Bernard went and helped in New Orleans. He saw his people crying and cried with them. There are few men brave enough to take action, many brave enough to tell others to take action. As you were.

9/14/05 02:00:48 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|More praise for Holmes---I think he's top three all time as well. He had one of the best jabs ever, good foot movement, a legitimate if not overwhelming knockout punch--but most importantly, the heart of a champion. He could get up after being knocked down and come back to win. He did it more than once.

9/14/05 05:10 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Some more interesting trivia on Bob Fitzsimmons. This one is VERY interesting. When Fitz lost on a foul to Sharkey in San Francisco, he stopped his protestations abruptly after the referee pulled a gun on him. Who was the referee?
trivia of when the last scheduled 20 round heavyweight title fight took place. But I've got another one. When was the last world title bout (of any weight) to go more than 15 rounds?

Re Holmes. I'd also pick Holmes to beat Foreman. Holmes showed he could handle big punchers by stopping Shavers in 11 rounds and his boxing skills were certainly superior to Foreman's. Holmes was also a smart fighter like Ali and could adapt to anything Foreman put on. Don't forget that Holmes had something like 20 successful defenses of his title, while Foreman had just three. I think Holmes would withstand Foreman's full-on attack over the first six rounds before taking charge. George would fall over from exhaustion about round 9, in my opinion.

There's a lot you can say about Larry Holmes. Fought in four decades, master boxer, very good guy, good champion. He's not top three in my book. I'd put him on par with Frazier, just inside the top ten or just outside. Don King cleaned out the division for him by ruining the careers of Witherspoon, Page, Tucker et al. Foreman, who would have knocked him out, was also gone. Holmes did not turn pro until age 24, but did beat some decent second-tier heavies on the way to Shavers. His performance against Shavers in their first fight was hardly dominating, but on the basis of this win alone, he was matched with Norton, a champ no one wanted, for the title in his very next fight. I scored that fight for Norton, but it was a popularity test with King in charge. I will say this, he did beat guys I'd heard of during his reign. But to say that they were top-tier opponents or that his wins were dominating is a good stretch, in my book. Shavers and Witherspoon were decent wins. Cooney boxed very well with him for most of their fight. He was plain knocked out by Snipes, was dominated by Williams. Sorry guys, not Top Three stuff. Spinks was very good when they met, and he did beat Mercer, so he clearly was way above most. But given the reigns of Tunney, Marciano, Liston, Tyson before jail, Lewis, Jack Johnson, and Jeffries, I can't call him that high no matter how easy to like he is. Trained in Cleveland by Richie Giachetti and occasionally seen about town. I would have liked to have seen him arrive about 5-6 years earlier. Then we'd see how good he was. Thanks.

Wasn't Jess Willard vs. Jack Johnson the last title fight of ridiculous length? That's my guess to the question. Thanks.

Sorry, not to be posting to much here... Thanks Massimo for the heads-up on Brewster's title opponent. He sounds like he'll be around for a while. Brewster, though, has improved, based on his last fight. Sounds like a pretty good match, at least as they go these days. Thanks again.

Noam, That trivia question about the last 20 round heavyweight fight wasn't mine, sorry. I do remember where Max Baer was scheduled to fight 20 rounds (before he was champ) in the early 1930's. But that's not much to go on. Its hard to find anything bad to say about Larry Holmes. He never cut, never was intimidated, recovered very quickly when hurt and best of all had a telephone pole jab. He also beat an in prime Ray Mercer when Larry was in his 40's. Plus as a 50 something beat Butterbean in 10 rounds.

Sorry Ed, I knew it was either you or Pete and I picked the wrong guy. Did you know who the referee was in the Fitzsimmons v Sharkey fight? It was Wyatt Earp. He pulled a gun on Fitz to put an end to the protests. I find it hard to say a bad word about Holmes. He did it all. It's difficult to compare him with Frazier as Gerry has done. Larry successfully defended his title some 20 times. Frazier only four times. Larry had longevity in spades; Joe didn't. Larry faced and beat ever contender of his era; Joe didn't. Larry didn't shy from big punchers (Shavers) and guys with a great left hook like Joe had didn't worry him too much (Cooney). Larry didn't get knocked out until middle aged; Joe got knocked out in his prime. One had a great jaw, the other's was very vulnerable.

As I said, it's difficult to compare fighters from different eras, but in this case I'm supremely confident about Larry's chances.

Yes, Max Baer lost on points in 20 rounds against Paulino Uzcudun in a fight described as one of the best of the 30's in the heavyweight division. Primo Carnera beat Paulino Uzcudun twice: once in Barcellona in 1930 before a huge crowd (the fight drew $110000) and the second time in 1933 in Roma for the title. If my memory serves me well (or right) Pete already revealed the answer to that trivia question: Louis-Pastor was the last heavyweight title fight scheduled for 20 rounds.

I haven't seen Larry Holmes much when he was in his prime, but take in account that George was a much better overall fighter than Earnie Shavers. So a Holmes-Foreman fight prime vs prime would be very interesting and hard for both fighters, but I'd bet on Foreman. Holmes's jaw and abdominals were good, but not as good as Ali' and this fight wouldn't probably organized in Africa with thousands of people yelling: "Holmes booma ye".

PS: "booma ye" means "kill him".

Yes, Max Baer lost on points in 20 rounds against Paulino Uzcudun in a fight described as one of the best of the 30's in the heavyweight division. Primo Carnera beat Paulino Uzcudun twice: once in Barcellona in 1930 before a huge crowd (the fight drew $110000) and the second time in 1933 in Roma for the title. If my memory serves me well (or right) Pete already revealed the answer to that trivia question: Louis-Pastor was the last heavyweight title fight scheduled for 20 rounds.

I may be wrong but I thought Holmes beat Shavers pretty convincingly in their 1st fight. I pretty much agree with your ranking of Holmes among past champions.

I am not trying to put the knock on Holmes, but as a champion he was very clever in picking his opponents for title defenses. Holmes would try and fight young contenders on the way up before they reached their full potential. Witness Whitterspoon, and Carl Williams. Holmes knew if he waited a year these guys would be too dangerous. The reverse was through with Dokes and Page. Holmes avoided them and let them self destruct as a result of their own bad habits. I may be wrong but I thought Holmes beat Shavers pretty convincingly in their 1st fight. I pretty much agree with your ranking of Holmes among past champions.

I am not trying to put the knock on Holmes, but as a champion he was very clever in picking his opponents for title defenses. Holmes would try and fight young contenders on the way up before they reached their full potential. Witness Whitterspoon, and Carl Williams. Holmes knew if he waited a year these guys would be too dangerous. The reverse was through with Dokes and Page. Holmes avoided them and let them self destruct as a result of their own bad habits. I may be wrong but I thought Holmes beat Shavers pretty convincingly in their 1st fight. I pretty much agree with your ranking of Holmes among past champions.

I am not trying to put the knock on Holmes, but as a champion he was very clever in picking his opponents for title defenses. Holmes would try and fight young contenders on the way up before they reached their full potential. Witness Whitterspoon, and Carl Williams. Holmes knew if he waited a year these guys would be too dangerous. The reverse was through with Dokes and Page. Holmes avoided them and let them self destruct as a result of their own bad habits. I may be wrong but I thought Holmes beat Shavers pretty convincingly in their 1st fight. I pretty much agree with your ranking of Holmes among past champions.

I am not trying to put the knock on Holmes, but as a champion he was very clever in picking his opponents for title defenses. Holmes would try and fight young contenders on the way up before they reached their full potential. Witness Whitterspoon, and Carl Williams. Holmes knew if he waited a year these guys would be too dangerous. The reverse was through with Dokes and Page. Holmes avoided them and let them self destruct as a result of their own bad habits. I may be wrong but I thought Holmes beat Shavers pretty convincingly in their 1st fight. I pretty much agree with your ranking of Holmes among past champions.
The reverse was through with Dokes and Page. Holmes avoided them and let them self destruct as a result of their own bad habits. I may be wrong but I thought Holmes beat Shavers pretty convincingly in their 1st fight. I pretty much agree with your ranking of Holmes among past champions.

Larry Holmes didn't fight every contender of his era. He didn't fight Michael Dokes, Greg Page, Gerrie Coetzee, and Pinklon Thomas. I seem to remember he signed to fight Coetzee but there was an injury to one of the fighters during training so the fight didn't happen. Still between 1978 and 1983, Holmes was great and he dominated most of his fights. It wasn't until about 1984 that Holmes started to have more difficulty in his title defenses although the Witherspoon fight did happen during his prime and it was a difficult fight for Holmes. Holmes verses Frazier would likely be similar to Ali verses Frazier because of styles. I would pick Holmes by a narrow decision in this one but Joe would give Larry hell on the way. I rate Holmes over Frazier all time because Holmes would likely win this one, even if only by a slight margin. I rate Holmes top five of all time because at his best he had the skills to beat almost every fighter of any era. He was really something special to watch. I would even pick Holmes over Foreman, prime verses prime as Holmes' very hard jab would land often and disrupt Foreman's timing. Holmes would also land enough hard right hands to keep Foreman honest. Defense and movement would also be a key as Holmes was one of the best defensive heavyweights of all time. Only Ali, Jimmy Young, and maybe Chris Byrd might be better. Good defense would give Foreman trouble as shown by Ali's and Young's wins over Foreman. Another key to beating Foreman at his best was to hit him hard to show him he was in a real fight and not just a walk over, something Frazier and Norton didn't do, neither landed their best punches before they were badly hurt and knocked out. On the other hand, Lyle and Ali did hit him hard, with their best punches and Ali beat Foreman and Lyle came very close to winning. By the way, Frazier had nine title defenses as the NYSAC world heavyweight title was considered equal to the WBA title, which Frazier got when he unified the title with his win in 1970 over Jimmy Ellis. So Frazier had four title defenses of the undisputed title. Frazier's NYSAC title was also recognized by five other states in the U.S. as well as Mexico and parts of South America, part of the group that would later become the WBC.

Mike Tyson rates Jack Johnson (as) the best defensive fighter ever. Mike once said "he was a genius in defense". I haven't seen enough of Jack Johnson in the ring to judge whether this is true or not.
face puncher who ate or dodged three to give you one. Holmes was a moving boxer with a tremendous jab, like Ali, his model. Then there's the quality of opponents. Frazier - wins over Bonavena, Machen, Chuvalo, an undefeated Mathis, Quarry, Ellis, Poster, Ali and Bugner. Not a bad list for 32 wins. Holmes - two very good ones vs. Shavers, Berbick, a split win over Witherspoon, Mercer, Ribalta. His reign impresses with length, but not as much with quality of opponents. Sorry, but wins over Evangelista, Zanon, LeDoux, a fat Ali, Cobb and Frank, among others just do not impress. A number of champs would have defeated that roster of opponents. I do not give him Norton, and Spinks, at best, was a toss up. Does that make Michael Spinks Top Five also? No, not in my book. Consider this as well. Frazier had a small number of fights which were very competitive, Bonavena, Quarry, Ali among them. He gave rematches against each. Holmes had very sketchy performances versus, Cooney, Snipes, Witherspoon and Williams. How many combined rematches did Holmes offer to this group? Zero. Does this suggest something? I think it does. Consider that Frazier also just plain fought in a better era overall. All of this then puts them much closer together. I'd pick both Frazier and Foreman to beat Holmes. Frazier was KO'd earlier, yes, by Foreman. George got a lot of guys, didn't he? Holmes was gone against Snipes. None of this is a bag on Holmes at all. He was an outstanding fighter, a solid champ, a real credit to the sport. But I think all of this should be considered before ranking him Top Ten or better all-time. Thanks.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/15/05 05:00:41 PM</th>
<th>Noam</th>
<th>same</th>
<th>same</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Kent - the New York title wasn't a world title. Frazier got this 'title' when he refused to go in the World Boxing Association tournament. Holmes was a very robust fighter with plenty of stamina and enthusiasm. He loved to fight. From 1978 to 1985, while champion, he had 20 fights. Every one of these fights was a title defense. He fought more fights and rounds than Ali. Does anyone recall how many times Holmes was knocked down?</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9/15/05 05:11:23 PM</td>
<td>Angelo</td>
<td>Washington, DC</td>
<td>funktron@yahoo.com</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Holmes takes Frazier by a late round TKO or relatively easy decision. Sorry Kent, Frazier wouldn't give him the brutal fight you envision. Larry Holmes fought everyone he should have with the possible exception of John Tate. That fight would have happened if Tate didn't get iced by Mike Weaver, who Holmes then beat. That's ridiculous, saying that Frazier's level of competition or his title defenses were better quality than Holmes. Don't forget Ellis II., Stander and Daniels for crying out loud. His highest level of competition (Ali and Foreman) had a record of 4 wins and 1 loss against Frazier. Holmes fought and defeated Norton as well as Shavers twice, Leroy Jones, the aforementioned Weaver, a very dangerous and undefeated Cooney (Make no mistake, Holmes was never in trouble in this fight, won most of the rounds and won by KO---let's not rewrite history guys.). Holmes came out of retirement to beat highly ranked Mercer and gave in-prime Holyfield all he wanted. No, Larry Holmes does not belong on the &quot;second tier&quot; with Smokin' Joe. That's crazy. Holmes held the title about seven years and fought every relevant heavyweight in a position to fight for the title. He also stayed busy against guys like Ocasio, Cobb, Evangelista, Marvis Frazier----for my money, these and many others Holmes took on had better careers and records than Ron Stander and Terry Daniels and weren't riding losing streaks in against Holmes either. Ocasio beat Jimmy Young twice in row and Young was at or near the top of his game at the time, having beaten Lyle and Foreman and for my money, Norton too. Don't forget how well prepared and efficient Larry Holmes was, especially between '78 and '83. Holmes ducked no one.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9/15/05 05:41:54 PM</td>
<td>Ty</td>
<td>Deep South</td>
<td>Ty11161@hotmail.com</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| Hello Folks; I was curious about Jerry's involvement with the military - ever close to being drafted? Anyone know what his thoughts were in "general" about serving? Several good fighters came out of the services during the 1960's (Ken Norton, Mac Foster, etc). It would be interesting to hear about any info someone might have. Thanks.

Hello Folks;

Just a quick additional note. I read some of the messages below, and I thought I'd just pass on a thought. Mathematics and Boxing DO NOT mix well. Boxing simply does not follow the laws of arithmetic - and mistakes are made when it is attempted. Example: Fighter A Beats Fighter B. Fighter B beats Fighter C. Clearly then, it's often "assumed", Fighter A will beat Fighter C (eventhough the fight was never made). This is quite different than simply rooting for a fighter to win, some folks take this logic and apply it as fact. You see this when someone says something like:....Nick would have beaten Dave EASILY, because Dave was KO'd by James and Nick delivered a devastating KO to James. The problem is, anything can happen and often does, in heavyweight fights. Fighting styles play a big role in defusing mathematical myths in Boxing. Fraizer Beats Ali in 1971. Foreman destroys Frazier in 2 rounds in 1973. So, clearly, Foreman beat Ali handily in 1974 (correct?). I could have easily used a similar scenario with Ali-Norton-Foreman. I'm sure you can think of other examples of this anomaly. Good day, Ty Sorry Pete, the last 20 round heavyweight championship bout was Louis-Simon in 1941. I think the last scheduled 20 rounder was a lt heavy bout, Alonzo Harris vs Brian Kelly.

Noam, you can say all you want about Frazier avoiding people but you cannot rewrite history. The NYSAC title was recognized as a world title. If it wasn't, Ellis' WBA title would have been an undisputed title. Frazier did subsequently defeat the winner of the WBA tournament, Ellis, the runner up, Quarry, and a semi finalist, Bonevena. In looking back, Frazier was considered the stronger of the two champions back at the time the title was in dispute by most of the fans and the press. People respected Ellis as a good fighter but they didn't think he could beat Frazier and he did end of losing to Frazier.

Noam - best not to open old wounds, but it was called the New York Title, not the world title. It came into being because Joe wouldn't enter the WBA tournament. An unfortunate but true. Luckily, San Francisco, LA, and other cities didn't decide to start their own version of titles, too, because that would have made it a real mess.

Holmes-Frazier is damn difficult to predict. Both should be in the top 10 of all time and I think Holmes sneaks into the top 5. With both fighters being so good I think any prediction would be subjective. Frazier at his best was so good though. If he fought Holmes in the manner that he fought Quarry, Ellis I and Ali, particularly with the ferocity that he did in New York and Manila, then I don't see how Holmes could automatically be declared the winner. Saying that, seeing the way he recovered from Shavers' torpedo in the 7th round of that 2nd fight, I think Holmes would be ok to win a very tight decision. I think his chin and ribs would just about survive the assault, but his inability to punch like Foreman, and Joe's toughness would ensure no KO win. I saw Foreman's dismantling of Frazier not so long ago. Frazier showed a couple of things here. His inability to deal with a explosive starter and in particular a weakness for well placed uppercuts. But having got up 6 times he showed what a hell of a man he was. Along with in New York and Manila Frazier's heart was enormus. I take Holmes to win, but only just...if he makes frazier mad like Ali did then he's in trouble.

The New York State Athletic Commision back in the 1960s and before was a very powerful body who's champions were recognized far beyond its borders. That five other states, Mexico and much of South America and other foreign countries, again part of the group that formed the WBC, recognized this title shows this. Boxing historians also recognize this title as a world title and Frazier was not the first fighter to have this title so it wasn't created for him. In fact the NYSAC stripped Muhammad Ali of their title just as the WBA had. Again, you can say Frazier couldn't take a good punch, etc, but the fact remains his title was a world title just as much as Ellis' was, which Frazier unified by beating Ellis in 1970, and he didn't lose this title until he was beaten by Foreman in 1973.

Larry Holmes deserves to be in the top ten heavyweights of all time. I don't know if he could match up with Ali, who I thought was faster and had a better chin.

Some real good exchanges here on Frazier-Holmes. Angelo, do you recall Stander's KO of Shavers? This is important here because Shavers was the best guy Holmes ever defended his belt against. Yes, you can say Joe was not taking on tough competition as champ, and you'd arguably be correct. But there's no question who fought better guys overall, who was tougher, and who wasn't afraid of rematches. Holmes matches with Norton and Witherspoon were virtual draws. They demanded rematches. Cooney won several middle rounds vs. Holmes. If you don't believe me, watch the fight and check the scorecards yourself. He deserved a rematch. Snipes had Holmes totally KO'd. Their fight went to the 11th. Again, no rematch. Williams flat out owned Holmes. The scorecards showed a blowout. No rematch again. That's five guys. That, and the caliber of opponents overall as champ, suggest alot to me. Kent listed guys Holmes could have defended with as well. Sorry, I have Ali tougher than Holmes. Frazier took Ali to the edge of death. Frazier wins versus Holmes, who could show up fat on occasion. Frazier did not dodge the WBA tournament. He was actually the first fighter named, according to the NY Times. He simply took a belt that was offered, and as Kent has said, it was recognized in areas inside and outside the United States. More importantly, Joe was better than anyone in the tournament and that was proved with wins over Bonavena, Quarry and Ellis --- the class of that tournament. To remove further doubt, he then thumped Ali. Joe dodged no one. Thanks.

I just can't say how Holmes would handle the Frazier of 8 March 1971 easily. Hey guys, that Frazier was a "beast"! Ali fought that night one of the best fights of his career but just couldn't make (or do) it! An in prime Holmes MIGHT have beaten that Frazier but with lots lots lots of sweat! Again, I haven't seen Homes enough in his prime to have a precise idea, but I have seen Frazier in his prime and if you hadn't Foreman's punch you were in big trouble against him. I see Holmes-Frazier very close.

Correction - I meant "I just can't see how", and not "I just can't say".

When the uneducated are given too much information they mistake it for being an expert. Then begins the helicopter effect. They hover over you spouting off comments based on nothing and mistake it for wisdom. Bernard knows that these people make the world foolish.
Gerry, but as I pointed out to Noam, Frazier's NYSAC title was considered a legitimate world heavyweight title but it like Ellis' WBA title was disputed. Frazier cleared up the dispute with his win over Ellis in 1970. It has nothing to do with the old Frazier debate about whether he could take a punch, etc, it is just an historical fact that he held and defended a world title nine times with four of those defenses being of the undisputed title. By the way, Jerry Quarry fought for a world heavyweight title twice in his career, once verses Ellis for the WBA title and once verses Frazier for the NYSAC title. Every biography of Jerry's career states this and if Frazier's first title wasn't a world title defense against Jerry, then Jerry would have fought for the title only once.

Hi Kent

I understand all that, however when Joe refused to enter the WBA tournament (the only guy who refused by the way), the New York Commission wouldn't accept that winner and named it's own version vacant. That's how Frazier v Mathis came about. It was the world title you have when you don't really have a world title. The WBA didn't even rank Mathis as being in its top 8 to be in the elimination tournament. In fact, the Ring Magazine didn't have Mathis rated in its Top 10 for the years surrounding 1968 when Joe fought him for the vacant title. With due respect to all concerned, the New York title at that point was a makeshift reaction to the more credible 8 man WBA elimination tournament that Joe refused to enter. All 8 guys in the WBA tournament were ranked higher than Mathis. Kent, I know this isn't about Joe, and I am not criticizing him for it. That was the politics of that time. However, the New York title meant nothing and wasn't accepted by all of the boxing world.

Hi Gerry - in his book Joe acknowledges that he refused to enter the WBA elimination tournament. At that point he hadn't been offered the other fight. I don't doubt that Joe was better than the other guys in the tournament. He eventually proved it by beating Ellis. However, I do say that Joe lacked some stamina and didn't want consecutive hard fights. He wanted things on his terms. The other fact is that Joe got the easier fight by only taking Mathis on. He only had to take one fight not several. And Mathis was wasn't ranked in the Top 10 by Ring Magazine or the Top 8 by the WBA. Joe was taking the easier course and I suppose one point of view would be that this was the smart way to go. But it was still the easier way. Good luck to him.

As far as the NYSAC, that it was a nothing title is proven untrue, any title is only as good as the guy who holds it. Mathis was undefeated, was certainly on par with much of the WBA field, and was one of the top guys left not claimed by that field. If Joe was not in the tourney, I don't know what he was expected to match with if not the guys not in the tourney. Joe lacks stamina? I'll let you reel that one back in. I know Ali would disagree there with you. Again, Joe had beaten Bonavena, Machen and Chuvalo prior to Mathis. Who did Holmes beat for his titleshot? Just one guy - Shavers. Not much of a comparison. You might also want to compare opponents winning percentages. If you do, you'll find Frazier in front there as well. The NY State title was very disputed, but so was Holmes' IBF belt. The title has not been unified more than a few times since 1967 and still is not today. So it's always disputed. Consensus, though showed both Frazier and Holmes as the top dogs of their days. In fact, that is why Frazier was offered a belt in the first place... As for the uneducated, I can only guess I.S. is speaking from personal experience. Information is never an expert. But a person with information can be. Expertise does not equal wisdom, either. Sadly, there is little wisdom in boxing. Those helicopters you hear may be flashbacks of Apollo Creed pounding your face in, or , it may be a reason to see a pharmacist. Either way, I can only hope Bernard is not your dog. Because then you'd have real issues. Thanks again.
Hi Gerry - Joe lacked stamina in so far as putting together back-to-back TOUGH fights. Regards Mathis. At the time of the WBA tournament Mathis wasn't ranked by the WBA in the Top 10. He wasn't ranked in the Ring Magazine Top 10. No one ranked him. The other guys in the WBA tournament Joe wouldn't enter were ranked thus by the Ring: Joe (1), Spencer (2), Ellis (3), Bonavena (6), Terrell (10), Mildenburger (9), Quarry (5). As I said Mathis was unranked. And he didn't deserve a title shot. In his book Joe said that Mathis "fought guys that get carried into the ring on crutches." Mathis had never fought a boxer current in the rankings. Ever. Joe wrote, "His opponents included Tom Swift, Everett Copeland, Charlie Chase, and a Waban Thomas, names that did not exactly ring bells in the boxing hall of fame." Joe's words, not mine. Then Joe wrote of Mathis at page 57: "In actual fact one opponent of Mathis did fall down in anticipation of punches, then asked Buster for his autograph after the bout. Mathis' defense of his reputation was to point to a knockout he scored over a Gerrie De Bruyn, who had battled ninth-ranked Eduardo Corletti to a split-decision loss. Talk of a roundabout ways of establishing your credentials. Mathis' people had struggled to get their man taken seriously. There were still questions about whether Buster could really fight." As can be seen, no one - not even Joe - ranked Buster. Therefore, he had no place fighting for a 'title' and that's why the WBA didn't pick him for the tournament, and that's why the Ring magazine didn't rank him. Now, in regard to the New York State Athletic Commission (note the word W O R L D is not in the name). The Commission's chairman, Edwin B. Dooley declared Joe the Commission's top-ranking heavyweight contender after Joe refused to fight in the WBA tournament. Joe instead opted to fight the unranked Mathis. Dooley (somehow) agreed to sanction the fight as a title bout, the winner to be recognized IN NEW YORK as a heavyweight champion of the world. At that time ONLY New York recognized that title. In the months that followed, ONLY five other states decided to recognize the title - Pennsylvania, Texas, Illinois, Maine and Massachusetts. The rest of America and the rest of the boxing world DIDN'T recognize the title. So come on guys, it was a nothing title. Only 6 places in the world recognized it. And Joe only had to beat an unranked fighter to win it. Noam, you're right that the NY tourney was far below the one set up by ABC Sports. The Frazier/Mathis fight was interesting though because of Mathis's victories over Joe in the Olympic fight offs. Joe ended up getting a gold medal because Buster dislocated his thumb I think. A lot of the sports papers I looked back on thought Buster would "smother" Joe with his style, just as he did when they were amateurs. Frazier's people tried to get fight with Earnie Terrel too but Big Earnie turned it down. And Terrel was the favorite to win the 8 man tournament but Thad Spencer knocked him off in the first bout. But all in all I don't think anyone cared that there were 2 tournaments, it just gave the promoters another title fight to promote after all the dust settled. This has spawned a trivia question, who was in the previous fight off for a heavyweight title? (previous to the Ali elimination tourneys)
the NYSAC named Frazier and Buster Mathis to fight for their title.

One thing, I have always wondered how could the WBA all of a sudden drop Frazier from their number one contender to number nine without him losing in the ring?I know how Ali got stripped his title without losing in the ring, Ali couldn't get a license to fight in the United States and the government wouldn't let him get a visa to leave the country to fight somewhere else, so with Ali unable to fight anywhere it was because of the politics of the time even if it wasn't fair.But Frazier dropping all of the way to number nine when he could get a license to fight anywhere? Just sour grapes that his management felt he should get the first shot at the title as he was already the number one contender.People can argue Frazier avoided this or that guy or that he couldn't take a good punch, but the fact remains the number one contender usually gets a mandatory title shot.

9/17/05 05:50:29 PM Noam same same 10 Hi Kent - the WBA dropped Frazier because he wouldn't enter the elimination tournament to decide Ali's successor. They really had no choice, given that all the other top contenders were prepared to be in it. Joe wanted to keep his cake and eat it too. Joe’s case was that he should be given the title. The WBA didn’t agree. And I think that based on the opponents Joe had fought in the prior 12 months the WBA was correct. Joe had fought Jones, Davis, Johnson, Chuvalo, Doyle, and Conners. In 1967 none of these guys were rated in the top 10 by the WBA or the Ring magazine. They were tough, sure, but they were not Top 10 contenders.Joe should have entered the tournament to fight whoever he had to fight, and win the title if he was good enough. Certainly he was the best fighter in it. But I think his problem was that he didn't want consecutive hard fights. To win the WBA tournament, he would have had to win three consecutive fights against three Top 10 contenders (when he hadn't fought even one ranked contender in the prior 12 months). In quick succession Joe might be called on to fight, say, Bonaventura (who'd knocked him down twice in their first fight), then Quarry, and then Ellis in the decider.He was to be paid $175,000.00 (a lot of money then) if he won the tournament, but he knocked it back. At that point Joe would not have been certain he would win. Far easier and less risky to fight the unrated Mathis for a title only recognized by six states. While I agree WITH HINDSIGHT that Joe was better than the WBA tournament guys, I don't know that his body would have stood up to three consecutive hard fights with his health problems (high blood pressure, etc).Ed - the Frazier v Mathis fight did have the gimmick that Mathis had beaten Frazier twice in the amateurs. However, Joe's description of Buster's professional career was accurate. Buster was not rated in the top 10 by either the WBA or the Ring. He shouldn't have been given the shot at a title. Fighting Mathis was the path of least resistance and, from Joe's point of view, it was the smart way to go.

9/17/05 06:57:28 PM Pete Cleveland N/A 10 Noam you are the 1st person who ever wrote that Frazier lacked stamina for consecutive hard fights. It is my belief that Frazier was heralded for his stamina.With the exception of Bonevasta who else in that tournament was capable of giving Frazier a hard fight? Frazier walked through Quarry and Ellis. Terrell, Spencer, Mildenberger? Patterson was offered countless fights with Frazier (and Foreman), and he always turned them down.Why was Frazier obligated to fight in that tournament? This is not amateur boxing it is professional boxing. You fight for money not for medals.

9/17/05 07:24:31 PM Pete Cleveland N/A 10 Ed, I almost missed your question. The answer is Floyd Patterson.Strangely enough, Archie Moore who Patterson fought for the vacant title did not have to take part in the elimination tournament, because he was considered the #1 challenger. What do you think about that Noam? lol.

9/17/05 08:46:32 PM Kent Murrieta, CA kentallenent@aol.com 10 Pete, Frazier did not walk through Jerry Quarry in their first fight, he wore him down over seven gruelling rounds, a war of attrition on the way to a TKO win for Frazier. In fact, the first round was listed as one of the twelve top rounds in boxing history by Ring Magazine.

In their second fight, Jerry gave Joe two tough rounds but from the third round on until the fifth, in which Joe was awarded another TKO win over Jerry, Joe was in control. Joe's control in their first fight was not so clear cut. He gained momentum over Jerry as the fight went on but it was more gradual than in their second fight.

You're right again Pete. Of course when a fighter retires with championship he sets the necessity of a tournament. Patterson/Moore was for Marcianos retirement. Before that I believe it was Schmeling/Sharkey for Tunneys retirement. Before that Marvin Hart/Tommy Burns for Jefferies withdrawal. Correct me if I am wrong this off top of my head. Oh yea, don't ask me who took over from Lennex Lewis. I can't keep track of the modern day champions.

Pete - had Frazier entered the WBA tournament as all the others did, he would have had consecutive hard fights...something like Bonavena, Quarry and then Ellis. Not Doyle, Conners, and Mathis (the path of least resistance). As I said, prior to fighting Mathis, he hadn't fought a ranked fighter in his prior seven fights. None of them were Top 10 guys. Of the 7 other guys selected to fight in the WBA tournament, Joe had only beaten Bonavena (in a split decision). As it turned out he was better than those other guys but at that point in his career he hadn't proved it. The proof is in the pudding when you assess the rankings. Facts not opinion. Thanks.

By the way Pete, the winner of the WBA tournament got $175,000.00, a fortune at that time. He got considerably less to fight Mathis. Regards stamina, Joe only fought 214 rounds in his career against Holmes 575, Ali 546, Louis 429, Patterson 420, Quarry 415, Bonavena 409, Terrell 375, Shavers 364, Ellis 342, Horton 314, Liston 271, Foreman 255, Marciano 241, Lewis 225, and Douglas 224. Joe only fought 37 times. Holmes fought 73 times. I'm struggling to find the stamina bit. Thanks.

Noam, Frazier had stamina as that is how he was able to fight so hard verses Ali, Quarry, Mathis, etc. He was hard to beat when he was at his best as he would be fighting just as hard in the later rounds as in the earlier rounds. Of course he did wear out late in the third Ali fight but that had a lot to do with the punishment Ali was giving him and Frazier was past his peak at that time. Someone could say, "well Ali outlasted him and he was past his peak too." but that just shows how great Ali was, what sets him apart from other fighters. Both of them showed great stamina in the "The Thrilla in Manila." What Frazier lacked was longevity. His management likely knew this and that is why he didn't have as many fights as other fighters. They knew his all out style meant he would probably burn out quickly relatively speaking over the long run. But to say Joe lacked stamina is inaccurate as stamina and longevity are not the same thing.

On that we must disagree. Fighters lack longevity when they don't have stamina. Some fighters use up all their reserves of stamina on a couple of hard fights and have none left, while others are bubbling over with it. Fighters like Holmes and Quarry. Sorry to repeat myself, but Joe didn't want to enter the WBA tournament because winning it would have involved three hard fights against three ranked contenders. He hadn't fought even one ranked guy in the previous year, so he instead opted for the unranked Mathis.

There's no argument from me that Joe fought his hardest whilerever he was standing in the ring. He had courage in spades, but not stamina, and you are confusing the two. One hard fight generally led either to a long period of inactivity or to tune downs against relative nobodies. When thoroughbred race horses do that it's an acknowledgment that they lack stamina. The trainer micro-manages the horse, careful what races they accept. Same with boxers, in my opinion. Longevity and stamina go hand in hand, as guys like Ray Robinson, Henry Armstrong, Bob Fitzsimmons, and Jake La Motta proved. Thanks.

| 9/19/05 02:17:01 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|Noam, I agree with Kent about longevity and stamina. A fighter can take long breaks between fights for any number of reasons (taxes, time for body to heal, just plain doesn't want to fight for awhile, etc.). But stamina is a trait the same as speed or power...if Ali didn't fight often would he lose his "speed rating"? Of course not. Frasier had stamina in spades and how often he fought is immaterial to that. |

| 9/19/05 04:28:56 AM|Noam|same||same|||9|Thanks for the comments Ed, but I still disagree, I'm having trouble identifying an all time of any division who can be separated between longevity and stamina......Ali, Louis, Marciano, Holmes, Johnson, Foster, Carlos Monzon, Ray Robinson, Henry Armstrong, Bob Fitzsimmons, et al. They ALL fought many more fights than Joe, they ALL fight consecutive tough fights, and they ALL had longevity AND stamina. These guys didn't need to space fights, pick and chose, micro-manage, refuse elimination tournaments, etc.I still say longevity and stamina go hand in hand. There's never been an all time great that has one without the other. In my opinion, anyway. Thanks.|

| 9/19/05 08:06:47 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Gerry: I know that Stander took out Shavers and that Shavers was one of the best fighters that Holmes defended against---but Shavers was a different fighter when he took Ali to 15 rounds and fought Holmes twice. Also, based on your logic, since Shavers KOed Ken Norton in one easy round, does that mean having a win against Norton is meaningless for Ali, Foreman, etc? My real point was that as Champion, Larry Holmes took on everyone, highly ranked, not highly ranked, home and away, black and white, power punchers and boxers---if there was a fight to be made and money to be paid, Holmes was there, in shape, no excuses, ready to rumble. The same can't be said of Joe Frazier. Frazier had some great wins, including the historic dismantling of my guy, Ali, but by and large, Frazier's climb to the top and stay at the top lacked the highest quality opponents and sheer number of fights. Noam, I don't say this often, but one of your recent posts missed a big point as well----staying out of that tournament wasn't only about not wanting to take on three fights in a relatively short period of time. Really, I think the biggest issue was the uncertainty of who he would be matched against. If nothing else, Frazier's management wanted total control over the type of fighters they'd allow Joe in against. In an elimination or even a round-robin tournament, there's a great unknown of who you fight next. Upsets happen and you never know who will advance, or how.The random nature of the tournament is what kept Frazier out of it. Sure, he was better than the other fighters, but again, his management wanted to dictate when he would fight, and whom, and did not want to leave it to chance. |

| 9/19/05 08:41:51 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Angelo, Holmes did not take on everyone highly ranked. As I pointed out before, Holmes, for whatever reason, missed Gerrie Coetzee, Michael Dokes, Greg Page, Pinklon Thomas, and someone I forgot about, John Tate.A lot of it had to do with who these guys were promoted by, some of them were Don King fighters who held the rival WBA title at the same time Holmes held the WBC or the IBF title, so the BS politics of the time likely kept some of these fights from happening. But to say Holmes fought every highly ranked fighter is just not true.Still I rate Holmes very high on the all time list for the same reason I rate Frazier high on the list. Both fighters would have been very hard to beat by the vast majority of fighters from any era. Holmes and Frazier, at their best, were something special to see.I know the longevity issue makes people rank Frazier lower than I would rank him but I go more by how good a fighter would be at his very peak and not how long that peak lasted.An exception to this rule would be James "Buster" Douglas as his peak was just one fight, his win over Tyson. One fight is just not enough to establish greatness."

Kent: I'd have to look back at old rankings to see if there's an explanation as to why Holmes missed these fights. Weren't some of these guys most potent at the tail end of Holmes' career? Tate wasn't, but I thought Greg Page came later. Coetzee was beaten by Tate, wasn't he? Then Weaver beat Tate. It seems like the guys you mentioned had losses on their records that were bad timing---keeping them out of a match against Holmes. I'm foggy on this and don't feel like checking, but did Holmes fight Witherspoon? Witherspoon came late in Holmes' career as well. Don King prevented Witherspoon from being a great fighter/great Champion.

Something Noam said made me think (or got me thinking). He is right when he says that Buster Mathis was not ranked in top 10 by Ring Magazine at the time of his fight with Frazier. He actually was NEVER ranked in the top 10 by RM, anytime in his career. Buster Mathis proved to be a very good fighter in 4 fights: Wipperman, Lincoln, Chuvalo and Frazier. But my point is that he had never proved it before the Frazier fight. What had Buster ever done to deserve a fight for the NYSAC title against Joe Frazier in 1968? I know he did beat Joe twice in the amateurs but this is not enough to deserve a title fight. Al Blue Lewis was rated in the top 10 by Ring Magazine in 1968. He would have deserved a shot at Frazier for the title more than Buster Mathis. Sonny Liston was rated in the top 10 by Ring Magazine in 1968 but I think he had been banned from fighting in the USA at the time. Again, why did they think to the unranked Buster Mathis as a challenger to Joe Frazier for the NYSAC title?

Anyway, I remain of the idea that Joe Frazier at his very best (first Ali' fight and first Ellis fight) was a real bulldozer, very hard to beat for any fighter (mostly if this fighter wasn't a devastating puncher).

Mac Foster vs. Frazier, 1969----outcome????

Kent: Ido know Coetzee lost his belt to Page but I forget who the others beat for their titles. It does get confusing after a while as these guys didn't hold their titles for long.Witherspoon fought Holmes for the WBC title in 1983 and came very close to winning when Holmes was still near his peak. Of course Spoon later joined the "alphabet soup" title game.

Some excellent stuff on Frazier and the tourney in 1967. Noam makes some very good points. Joe did take, we might say, a smart road which allowed him to fight at the top of the sport without having the attrition of rounds that most other top heavies had. I still argue that because of the way he fought, Joe still got away with very little. He had to chase, with short reach, and take punches on the way in, and he clearly did fight at least most of the top guys of his day. I guess if it can be argued that Holmes missed opponents, so did Joe. I do not dismiss the NYSAC title because of the guy who held it, we'll just have to disagree there.

Holmes did fight Witherspoon, the first judge gave to Holmes 116-114, the second was for Witherspoon by the same score, the third judge was apparently for more whiskey sours, perhaps writing Holmes name on the score card every round because it was easier to spell. Hey, this is part of boxing. Still, while it be argued that both men missed opponents, Frazier did post consistently better performances against the top guys he did fight.

Good points have been made about Holmes, unquestionably a top guy, but matches with Norton, Witherspoon, Snipes, Williams, and arguably Cooney, were close enough to demand rematches. Show me a Frazier fight that fits that description that did receive a rematch. While both guys arguably did miss opponents, Holmes clearly had very questionable performances against the guys he did face.

I don't hear this being addressed. Noam has some very good points on Mathis, who was probably top fifteen, but not top ten. He did beat Wepner and edge Lincoln. Believe it or not, Mathis dominated Chvulo before being trashed, in succession by Frazier, Quarry, Ali and Lyle. He was, apparently, a good second-tier guy. It's a wonder Holmes never faced him, given all the second tier guys he did face on the way to Shavers and Norton.

All the dialogue here only further proves to me that these are two very top notch former champions with similar standing all-time. Angelo, you are right, Stander caught Shavers in a shocking upset. Still doesn't explain all the sketchy performances without rematches. Thanks.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/19/05 01:02:23 PM</th>
<th>Gerry</th>
<th>Cleveland</th>
<th>same</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Frazier-Foster, good bout. The rule with Frazier was get him early or learn to live with the suffering. Foster could KO Joe early. From Round Three on, I'd take Frazier to pound away at the large target until he fell or quit. Frazier only lost to the very best. Thanks.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/19/05 02:42:55 PM</th>
<th>Pete</th>
<th>Cleveland</th>
<th>N/A</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Kent, I like Quarry. But the fact remains Frazier walked through him in both fights. Frazier came out of both fights unmarked and unscathed. Granted Quarry was tougher than Ellis. But Jerry was not a difficult fighter for Frazier. Noam, I know how much Frazier got for the Mathis fight. But, I am going to have some fun. Since you are an authority (you say that Frazier got considerably less than $175,00). Noam, tell the board what Frazier got paid for the Mathis fight. Noam, you mentioned that prior to the Mathis fight Frazier had not fought a ranked fighter in his last 7 fights. That is interesting as far as it goes. Can you tell the board the opponents the entrants in the WBA Tournament fought in their last 7 fights prior to the tournament?</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/19/05 03:32:52 PM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Pete: True, styles make fights and Jerry had a style that was perfect for Frazier to exploit. Jerry wasn't a classic power-puncher and wasn't &quot;stick and move&quot; like Ali either. In a lot of ways, he was a guy who mixed it up, like Frazier, except Frazier had a weight advantage and Frazier also had superhuman endurance----if you couldn't knock Frazier out, he just got stronger as the fight wore on. As Cosell said, many people believed a good counter-puncher could give Frazier trouble, and in the first round of their first fight, that seemed to be the case as Quarry beat Frazier to the punch and was clearly fighting better. Then Frazier started to smoke. But what's your point in questioning Noam about the participants in the tournament? The real issue at hand is that Joe stayed out of the tournament, giving him a free pass. While these top contenders were cancelling each other out, he was under the radar, waiting for the opportunity to beat just one of them. The fact that he methodically took on participants on his own time, his schedule doesn't diminish the fact that he skipped the tough part----fighting three times in a row against ranked fighters with the pressure of an elimination. Good management I guess.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>9/19/05 04:04:52 PM</th>
<th>Pete</th>
<th>Cleveland</th>
<th>N/A</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Angelo, regarding the 1st point Frazier-Quarry. I don't understand what your point was or what you are writing about. My thoughts were that Frazier walked right through Quarry and Ellis. both were finalists in the WBA Tournament. Once in the ring with Frazier neither were a threat to Frazier. Regarding my questioning of Noam, I think Noam can speak for himself (although his opinion of Frazier's stamina is different from yours).

Regarding Frazier entering the WBA Tournament, I have read many of the past posts on this subject. They are quite lengthy and at this moment in time quite boring. You have your opinion and others have their's. But unless some of the regulars on this board change their opinions on this topic or bring up new information, I think it is a waste of time to discuss.

9/19/05 04:57:00 PM|Noam|same|same||10|Pete - I understand that Frazier got $150,000.00 for the Mathis fight, but I could be wrong (as Kent can vouch). I know it was less than the $175,000.00 he had won the WBA tournament. Rich pickings either way.

9/19/05 05:20:12 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same||10|Pete, on Frazier-Quarry I have to disagree. Quarry was clearly the better boxer and was faster than Frazier. Quarry was an expert counterpuncher, guys, he had showed that against Patterson, Spencer, Foster, Shavers and Lyle, among others. You didn't charge Quarry because he made you pay coming to him.

9/19/05 05:34:10 PM|Pete|Cleveland||N/A||10|Noam, I find you to be one of the most forthright guys on this board. And I have defended you on more than 1 occasion. Don't embarrass me now. Being that you raised the point on more than one occasion about the inferior opponents Frazier's faced leading up to the Mathis fight. I think it is only right you name the opponents that the entrants into the WBA Tournament fought in their 7 fight prior to the Tournament. Besides I don't want to be accused of putting words in your mouth, or misquoting you.Come on Norm name the 7 opponents that qualified: Patterson, Martin, Terrell, Spencer, Bonevana, Quarry, Ellis, Mildenberger before they entered the Tournament. I will make it easier for you. Just name their opponents leading up to 1 year before the Tournament began. Really, this one of the main stays of your argument. Let's see if it holds up? I don't think it will. But, maybe I am wrong.Regarding the opponents you mentioned capable of giving Frazier a tough time in the Tournament: Bonevana, Quarry, Ellis. The record shows only Bonevena gave Frazier any difficulty. Just because Quarry won the 1st round in the Frazier fight, I don't think on that basis one can say that Quarry gave Frazier a tough time.Gerry, what I said regarding Quarry is being misconstrued. I never doubted Quarry's talent or gameness. All I am saying about Quarry is that Frazier walked right through Jerry, and it was not one of Frazier's toughest fights as far as punishment or damage that was layed on Frazier.Gerry, it was a great fight the (the 1st one anyway.) But Frazier was not staggered, cut up, or tired. I mean compared to the Ali, Bonevena, Foreman fights it does not rank as hard. Forgive me for saying this, but Manuel Ramos, Ron Stander, Joe Bugner, Eddie Machen all staggered Joe. And while I don't consider these tough fights for Frazier, Quarry could not do that. On paper Quarry was a great opponent, but in the ring Joe had Jerry's number, bigtime.The point I am trying to make someone suggested that maybe Joe did not go into the Tournament because he was trying to avoid 3 tough fights, Bonevena, Quarry, Ellis. Frazier beat Quarry and Ellis easily. And besides if he was trying to avoid Bonavena why did he give Oscar a rematch?Okay Pete. I'll have a look at your question and provide an answer.But remember something. It was Frazier who claimed to be the best heavyweight in the world. That was the reason he used when refusing to enter the WBA tournament. The guys who entered it weren't making that claim. Thanks.There will be many interesting answers now that I'm researching recent claims.Pete - During the year before Frazier fought Mathis, Joe had six fights ...... Jones, Davis, Johnson, Chuvalo, Doyle, Connors. None of these guys were rated in the Top 10 by the Ring Magazine. It was on these fights that Frazier based his claim that he was the best heavyweight in the world, too good to have to be in the elimination tournament. So now for the others. Patterson - his last six fights ....Ali (for heavyweight title), Cooper, Willie Johnson, Bill McMurray, and Jerry Quarry. (Better quality than Joe's by far.)Jimmy Ellis ...... Hilton, Waqua, Daniels, Embry, Sims, Persol (not much quality there).Thad Spencer ...... Bodell, London, McMurray, Jones, Lincoln, Terrell. (Better quality than Joe's.)Oscar Bonavena ...... Amos Johnson, Benassi, Veliz, Hilton, Sagrispanti, Pires (looks like Oscar had a rest after knocking Frazier down twice in the first round of their fight). Ernie Terrell......Machen, Chuvalo, Jones, Ali, Spencer, Ramos. (Better quality than Joe's.)Karl Mildenberger......Machen, Prebeg, Ali, Tomasoni, Walker, Lincoln. (Better than Joe's.)Jerry Quarry......Orbillo, Al Jones, London, Miteff, Patterson, Daniels. (Better than Joe's.)Pete - I still say that there was nothing in Joe's resume prior to the WBA tournament entitling him to the claim that he was the best heavyweight in the world, too good to enter the WBA tournament. Most of the other guys had fought better opposition and they deserved a shot at the title. All these guys were rated Top 10 by the Ring Magazine.
Joe fought Mathis, who wasn't. Joe was smart getting a 'partial title' recognized only by six states by beating an unranked guy, rather than take three hard fights to win a more respected version of the title. Still, he eventually got there and won the lot. Thanks.

| 9/20/05 01:04:02 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 |
| Hi Fan, welcome back. The spectre of your research and pending answers hang like the Sword of Damocles over my head, ready to lop it off should wanton error be exposed. Hurry up! This sort of thing can keep me awake at night. |

9/20/05 02:16:56 PM | Gerry | Cleveland | same | 10 |
| Noam, I'm not seeing your point in this. Frazier fought Jones, Doyle, Chuvalo and others, and you're saying there's no quality there. The first two are respected second-tier heavies. Chuvalo is a former top-five contender. How you can dismiss him, I have no idea. If Mathis was so bad, why did Frazier, Quarry, Ali and Lyle all match with him? On the WBA list, you have two guys, Patterson and Mildenberger, whose lists are much the same as Frazier's, except they fought Ali. There were some who suggested Ali was dodging Frazier in 1967. Frazier was ranked higher than either of these two also. I'll give you Terrell without question. Spencer's list is greatly helped by the fact he fought Terrell, otherwise, it is very similar. Quarry, God bless him, was barely ranked high enough for this field. He fought more good guys than Joe, but better is not really shown here. Leotis Martin is not shown. I believe he had beaten Sonny Liston to gain entry to the field. All of this to prove what? That Joe loafed? Joe fought some pretty good guys from what I see. I'm not getting the wide disparity you talk of, sorry. And, as you say, it washes out in hindsight. He beat Bonavena, Ellis, Quarry and Ali. Let's give Joe a break on this. |

9/20/05 02:23:14 PM | Gerry | Cleveland | same | 10 |
| Sorry, my mistake ... Martin had beaten Daniel and Johnson in his last six, a less than stellar group overall. He would later beat Mildenberger and Spencer before beating Liston in his last bout in 1969. He took such a beating himself winning that fight that he had to retire himself. |

9/20/05 04:39:32 PM | Noam | same | same | 10 |
| Gerry - thanks for your comments. My point is that none of those guys were currently rated, either by the WBA in the Top 10 or by the Ring Magazine in its Top 10. As I wrote, I know that these guys were tough, and as you say experienced, but they weren't contenders at that point in time. None of them were selected to enter the WBA tournament. My point is that for Joe to be correct in boasting that he was the best heavyweight in the world, and therefore should virtually be given the title and not have to go through the elimination, he needed more runs on the board. He needed to have beaten Top 10 guys over the prior year. And he hadn't. Same with Buster Mathis. He wasn't Top 10. He'd never ever been in the Top 10 of the Ring Magazine. Yet he was being given a shot at the New York version of the title. This was virtually handing the thing to Joe. Mathis didn't deserve a shot. Joe even implies that in his book. But guys like Quarry DID DESERVE A SHOT and that was what the WBA were doing - giving ALL the worthy contenders a chance. That was fair, wasn't it? The only guy who wouldn't play ball and participate was Joe. If he was the best as he was boasting, what the heck. Just go in the tournament and whup asses! Tough fight after tough fight. Easily done. I must add that by that stage the only guy in the tournament Joe had fought was Bonavena. Oscar knocked Joe down twice in the first round. Joe had to hold on to beat the three knockdown rule. He barely survived to win a disputed decision. Hardly overwhelming authority to boost his claim of being the undeniable best. I'd better say it again, too. I'm not doubting that Joe was the best heavyweight out there with Ali out; he ended up proving that. However, that's with the BENEFIT OF HINDSIGHT. At the time of the WBA tournament nobody knew that for sure. It was only a boast not at that point in time supported by deeds. In my opinion, anyway. Thanks.

It is true in both directions: Joe fought some good guys, and clearly some second-tier guys, just like all the fighters compared in the WBA field.

But, as stated before, Joe had a hard time getting fights. He was not a charismatic draw, he was very tough to defeat. Heck, he barely had management, interest in him was so low.

This has to be considered with him. Even Ali had trouble, until he became the Louisville Lip, in getting interest in him, as did Norton, who was much like Frazier on the way up --- a very tough fighter who does not draw crowds.

Rank is not black and white. After the first half dozen, it can be very subjective. Quarry, for instance, got the better of it, then the worse of it as his career progressed. It can come down to a matter of saleability for a fighter or whether a big wig has paid for it.

Either way, I don't dismiss guys like Chuvalo or Mathis, who proved their ability at least early in their careers, for meeting contenders like Frazier, Quarry, Ali and others.

Also, the WBA tourney, while very key to the careers of Ellis and Quarry, was not a perfect thing. The fighters got their ranking AFTER they were entered in the field by the WBA.

Could a few other guys have been chosen for that field than the eight that were? You bet.

It was not that cut-and-dry that these eight were WAY better than everyone else.

And that is my point.

Having had every Ring Magazine from 1965 to 1975, yes Buster Mathis was ranked No.6 World Heavyweight Contender by both the World Boxing Association and Ring Magazine.

The same night he fought Jerry Quarry, Jerry was ranked No. 4 by the Ring, and No.2 ahead of both Liston and Bonavena by the World Boxing Association, you guys do have a very valid point for I do not think he was in the Top Ten for either one, when he took Frazier on in 1968, take care!

Hi Jimmy - thanks for the comments. I got the information that Mathis wasn't ranked in the Ring Magazine's Top 10 directly from the below site:

http://www.boxrec.com/media/index.php/The_Ring_Magazine's_Annual_Ratings_Heavy...

It shows that each year from 1960 to 1969 The Ring published its annual rankings. Mathis was never in them. He may have appeared fleetingly in a monthly rating, but he was never included annually, for any year, according to that site anyway.

Gerry - I guess we're not going to convince each other. I can only say that Joe opted to fight the unranked Mathis for a title only recognized by six states, rather than fighting seven ranked guys for a version of the more widely acclaimed WBA title. For fighting Mathis he got $150,000.00 when he would have got $175,000.00 for the WBA one. If Joe was really confident he was the best in the world at that point, I know what path he would have taken. Thanks.

One other thing Jimmy. As Mathis wasn't selected to fight in the 8 man tournament, it seems he wasn't ranked in the top 8 at that point by the WBA. When Frazier withdrew, another boxer entered and it wasn't Mathis. So I take it that he wasn't in the top 9 at that point, also. Thanks.

For me, it's not really doubting that Frazier was better than the guys in the tournament---but sensing a certain arrogance his team showed to stay out of it. One thing absolutely can't be disputed: It was easier to wait for the dust to settle and fight just once against the winner, Ellis, than to start from scratch and go through three ranked contenders, not knowing who you would draw as the tournament wore on. No argument there---he took the path of least resistance. He was the best active heavyweight---but could have been upset by someone in the tournament. I've given the analogy before: If you're the top ranked college basketball team at the end of the regular season, you have to start from the beginning and play through the tournament to prove it. You can't wait for all the other teams to knock each other off and only play once to earn a title. But that's exactly what Joe was able to do in the world of boxing. I will say on his behalf, he did take on some of the talented guys who fought in the tournament as time wore on, and he beat them. |
| 9/21/05 03:44:38 PM| Pete| Cleveland|| N/A || || || 10 | Angelo, you got it all wrong. It was not arrogance on Frazier's part. It was good business sense. This is not college basketball, or amateur boxing. This is professional boxing Frazier was not fighting for medals he was fighting for money. "SHOW ME THE MONEY." |
| 9/21/05 04:03:33 PM| Angelo| Washington, DC|| funktron@yahoo.com || || || 10 | Pete: That's actually a very good point about Frazier wiping out his future paydays all for the tournament. I hadn't thought of that. He was able to win the title and still have some of these guys to defend against. Still, I think his participation in the tournament would have been better for boxing and also better for his legacy. But you are correct, it was good business sense----I can't blame him for looking out for his financial future and taking care of his family by having title defenses later on against guys he would have probably whipped in the tournament. |
| 9/21/05 04:43:51 PM| Noam| same| same| same| same| same| 10 | Pete - the only reason we're still on the subject is that you demanded that I answer your question about it. When I didn't, you again told me to answer the question. So I did. Now you're demanding that we get off the subject because it's boring you. Heaven forbid! I'm scratching my head. If you've got no more questions Pete, let's move on. |
| 9/21/05 04:46:06 PM| Gerry| Cleveland|| same| same| same| same| 10 | It can be construed as arrogance on Frazier's part, sure. The guy sure proved his point in any case.
Given that he also soundly beat Ali, Joe proved his worthiness as a champion during this period with any question...|
| 9/21/05 10:34:08 PM| Kent| Murrieta, CA|| kentallenent@aol.com | || || 10 | Pete hit the nail on the head regarding Frazier and the WBA tourny guys. After all, as Pete says, this is professional boxing. The fighters are in it to make money and Frazier's management gave Joe the chance for bigger paydays by not entering the elimination tournament. Rahman is an enigma, one time he can look good and next time he "stinks up the joint." Rahman versus Barrett really stunk and the reason Rahman gets to fight Vitali is because he stunk less than Barrett. Today I had my half hour private karate lesson followed by a one hour walk and some swimming laps. I have lost about 3 inches on my waste but today I got weak (after my workouts) and I had a very big hot dog with cheese, french fries, and a regular coke. My weigh in day is Friday so I hope I didn't wipe out my progress for the week in one swoop.
To the really great champions, the ones who love the sport and take the risks, boxing means more than just money. It was about PROVING themselves the best by beating the best, not making excuses, overcoming obstacles, accepting all challenge, testing limits, and exploring new horizons. That's why guys like Duran and Monzon and Ali are held in such high esteem. They had the Who Dares Wins mentality. That's their legacy and the reason they are remembered and revered. Study the careers of the truly greats and one thing stands out - there's no need to make excuses for them. And they don't need to make excuses for themselves, either. Great stuff!

You're right, my boxing knowledge has some big and wide holes! I know very well the history of the heavyweight division (even the details) and I hold my own with the middleweight division, but I basically don't care about any other weight division. I think that Bud Spencer (Carlo Pedersoli) movies are way more funny than Gianfranco Rosi's fights.

I don't think the only reason a champion fights is the money. Champions often have a huge self pride and fight to prove they are better than their opponent. I think that Ali would have probably accepted to fight the second fight with Joe Frazier for free, just to prove that Joe was not better than him and that what happened on 8 March 1971 was due to Ali's long layoff.

I forgot to say that another division I care about is the light-heavyweight division: Bob Foster, Michael Spinks, Archie Moore, Harold Johnson etc. That's another cool weight division!

Duran's legacy as an all time great is tarnished by the fact that he quit in the ring verses Ray Leonard in their second fight. Up until that time I had thought he was the example of a warrior but the image of him waving Leonard and the referee off and saying "No Mas" and of him walking away from the fight is one that just won't go away. Say what you will about Joe Frazier being carefully managed, but inside the ring Joe never quit. He would have gotten up a thousand times after being knocked down before he would have admitted defeat.

I have heard people say Joe quit in the third Ali fight but that was his corner's decision and the right one too. Joe would have fought on if Futch hadn't stopped it.

What you say is true. I maintain that it's perfectly fine that Frazier stayed out of the tournament, possibly avoided Lyle, Shavers and other power punchers in the early 70's. If his mission was to prolong his viability as a Champion and contender and maximize his earnings to take care of himself and his family, I can't fault him. That's business. But the trade-off, as I have always maintained, is that guys like me get to second guess him - we get to say Shavers would have bombed him out or Lyle would have gutted him. Would have, could have, should have - as they say, "If ifs and buts were candy and nuts oh what a party we'd have." There are a lot of ifs, should haves and could haves surrounding Frazier, that detract from his overall place in boxing history. A strong champion? Definitely. Involved in a few great fights? Certainly. On a level with the "no excuses" group? No, not by a long shot.

Hello Noam, those annual ring ratings are a little bit tarnished for they only show the December top ten of that time which come out in February of the next years issue, case in point Jerry was RANKED NO.2 IN AUGUST OF 1972 RING MAGAZINE, YET WAS NOT EVEN IN THEIR TOP TEN IN THE ANNUAL RANKINGS, WHY? BECAUSE AFTER HIS SECOND LOSS TO ALI HE RETIRED, I HAVE AN RING MAGAZINE ISSUE IN MY CLOSET DATED MAY OF 1969, THE MONTH ENDING (FEBRUARY 15 IN THE TOP TEN RANKINGS) BUSTER IS RANKED 6TH JQ 4TH, AND THEIR BOUT WAS COVERED THE NEXT MONTH IN THE JUNE 1969 ISSUE, JERRY QUARRY WAS IN THE RING MAGAZINE TOP 1 TO NO. 8 A GRAND TOTAL OF 87 MONTHS, AND WOULD HAVE BEEN 93 HAD HE NOT TOOK 6 MONTHS OFF IN RETIREMENT 1972, BEFORE HE BEAT LYLE, TAKE CARE!

9/23/05 12:48:03 AM|Noam|same|same|||10|Massimo - I was only joking. You have a great knowledge of boxing, although I was surprised that you didn't know much about Rossi.

Jimmy - my understanding was that the annual rankings by The Ring were a compilation of the entire year. But if you say that this is not so, then I accept your word.

Kent - I wouldn't dispose of Duran on just one fight. The rest of what he did was great. He just kept moving up the weights taking fights, looking for new challenges, constantly raising the bar for himself, stroking his ego... and not worrying too much about money. I'd rather appreciate his whole career on the fights that he took, rather than the one fight he walked away from. Think of it this way - whenever anyone challenged Duran, he took the fight. No excuses. No easy paths. He didn't refuse fights on the basis of money. There's plenty of fighters we can't say that about. Duran isn't one of them.

9/23/05 10:40:55 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Noam, Sonny Liston also quit during the first Ali fight, just one fight in a career and it does tarnish his standing as great but it was less clear cut than Duran walking away in the middle of the round because it was claimed Liston injured his shoulder. Yet people still have doubts about Sonny's heart. But at least Sonny didn't walk away in the middle of a round.

Duran claimed to have stomach cramps but the look on his face when he quit was one of frustration, not pain, at being unable to hit Leonard.

I am assuming Ali's knockout of Liston was legitimate and if so, then Liston only quit once, like Duran.

Duran had an amazing career and he should be ranked high in several divisions but not as high as he would be if he hadn't quit in the ring.

If Duran had won the distance and had he lost every round verses Leonard in their second fight or even if he had been knocked out, a clear cut loss in either case, it wouldn't effect his status as a great if he hadn't quit.

Example, Duran suffered a devastating second round knockout loss to Tommy Hearns. Hearns literally demolished him but it doesn't take away from Duran's other accomplishments. Quiting in the ring in the heat of battle does take away from his accomplishments.

9/23/05 03:04:55 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|HELLO, KENT (AKA CURLY) AND NOAM, HERE IS THE TOP TEN FIGHTER'S JERRY BEAT THAT WERE RANKED AT THE TIME BY RING MAGAZINE. FIRST THE DRAW WITH PATTERSON WHO WAS #3 PATTERSON AGAIN #5 SPENCER #2 AND #1 W.B.A. MATHIS #6 FOSTER #1 BODELL #8 MIDDLETON #7 LYLE #3 AND SHAVERS #6, THE W.B.A. ALSO HAD ALL THESE FIGHTER'S IN THEIR TOP TEN WHEN JERRY DEFEATED THEM, ACTUALLY RANKED A FEW EVEN BETTER (SPENCER FOR EXAMPLE #1).

9/23/05 05:12:03 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Jimmy: Jerry was a stopper, no doubt about it. This list is really impressive. To me, his masterpiece was the win over Lyle. At the end, Lyle just look confused and tired. To his credit, Lyle really gave Quarry credit for the win and seemed to get better with the experience he gained in that one fight.

9/23/05 06:14:33 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|thanku Angelo, Jerry himself was ranked no. 1 contender by ring magazine a total of 4 months in 1970 (before his first bout with ALI). AND THE W.B.A. had him NO.2 Bonavena no.1 And I thought that was rather odd considering Bonavena had just got himself DQUED against Miguel Paez. and Jerry had just beat 24-0 Mac Arthur Foster. The W.B.A. did have Jerry NO.1
after he beat Spencer in 1968. Where as ring magazine had JQ NO.2 citing Ali as the undetroned Champ and Joe Frazier the no.1 contender, Kent( Curly Q. Link THEY GLUE of the original defunct fearless leaders club). I agree with Noam and Duran was an alltime warrior. I can forget New Orleans, When past his prime he takes the most feared pound for pound fighter of the time Marvin Hagler, and loses by 1 point, and I believe a draw on 1 card, Duran was an alltime great, I very much felt for the fans in New Orleans on that one, But I also have to believe there was a lot more to that situation then Duran taking a walk (DON KING MAYBE???)

9/23/05 06:49:28 PM|Noam|same||same||||10|Hi Kent - with Duran, just remember that he was fighting out of his natural weight division against Leonard when that happened. Duran claims that Leonard was fighting like a sissy (or similar) and he'd just had enough and waved him away with 'No mas.' Doesn't excuse it, sure, but it adds context, especially seeing that Duran wasn't physically injured. He claims he was merely exasperated at Leonard's style in that fight. It was more a protest about Leonard, rather than quitting because he was beat. Duran was one of the greatest warriors of all time, any division, no doubt. Using your Duran rule, Kent, we must also rule Tyson out for quitting. How many times did he quit ? The last guy he quit against, McBride, wouldn't have held a candle to Leonard, despite the weight difference. But I don't think you're writing Duran off entirely, Kent.Jimmy: re the Ring magazine, they do call it the annual rankings, and they make a point of doing that. I still suspect that the annual rankings are a compilation of all that year's rankings. What do you think, Massimo, since you put me on to that site ? Are they annual rankings or just the rankings for December ?Trivia, this time on anatomy. Which part of the human body is capable of predicting the future ? I don't think any of you guys will get this one. None of you guys are doctors.

9/23/05 06:58:44 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM||||10|I very much understand yur thinking Noam, but it is kinda funny how the December current rankings of the magazines, are they exact same as the years annual rankings I can send you the lists for i have done a ton of research on the rankings for ring magazine, for overall they were the best, One underrated (and very good) were they old top 15 for world boxing and international boxing of the 60's and 70's which were actually the same thing|

9/23/05 10:44:51 PM|Noam|same||same||||10|Jimmy - I take your word for it, of course. It looks like The Ring has placed its final rankings of the year - the December ones - as its annual ranking. While it seems a bit strange, December is the finish line for each particular year.So therefore my past posts have stated on good authority that Buster Mathis was NEVER in The Ring rankings for the month of December, EVER. Seems like Buster closed down the year early approaching December. Perhaps he snacked up on turkeys way before Xmas. Probably explains his weight problem.Thanks for the info Jimmy.

9/23/05 10:47:31 PM|Noam|same||same||||10|I'll end the suspense on the trivia, which you were all falling over yourselves to answer. Probably the nostrildamus ! Sorry.............!

9/24/05 05:01:38 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|I didn't even know that the "nostrildamus" is a part of the human body. Anyway, I have some serious doubts that Nostradamus could actually predict the future. Regarding the Ring Magazine subject, listen to what Jimmy Dorsey has to say, he knows his stuff.

9/24/05 10:18:24 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Noam, I don't agree with Duran's assessment that Leonard was fighting like a sissy as Leonard was hitting him with good shots even if he was moving a lot. There is nothing wrong with him fighting his fight and hitting and not getting hit.In their first fight Leonard stood in and fought toe to toe with Duran and he lost a close decision. Which is the better plan? Fight the other guy's fight and lose, even if it was a close fight or fight in your style and win easily? No contest, the second plan is the better one.I don't agree Duran was fighting out of his weight class as even though his best years were at lightweight, he had outgrown the division. Also, not only did he win a decision over Leonard in their first fight, Duran had beaten a very good former welterweight champion in Carlos Palimino to get a shot at Leonard's title.In addition to his success at welterweight, Duran did come close to beating a great middleweight champion in Marvin Hagler and he also would go on to win titles in the junior middleweight and middleweight divisions.Still, quitting in the ring tarnishes his status as an all time great somewhat. A warrior doesn't quit.
Were the 3 knockdowns all in the same round or were distributed in different rounds? It's quite uncommon in boxing being knocked down three times but still winning a fight! It reminds me (of) Moore-Durelle and Mesi—a guy whose name I can't remember in this moment. Thanks.

I wasn't overly impressed with either fighter. Klitschko was his typical self, lacking balance, lacking confidence getting knocked down a lot. Peter, well I feel that he is somewhat over-rated this early in the game. If Klitschko was able to tie him up and keep him in the centre of the ring for the entire fight, not to mention survive a number of his powerhouse knockdowns... well give me Lamon Brewster. He's got it over both of these fighters. What is the next big heavy contest for us to look forward to?

The decision was fair as Peter just didn't throw enough punches in the other rounds and Klitschko scored more points. All three judges scored it 114 to 111. Joey, you are right, it showed the flaws of both fighters, but I do believe Klitschko gained confidence by surviving the knockdowns and fighting back. It was an important fight for Klitschko though as he was able to overcome a lot of adversity and he came out on top. A lot of people didn't think he could do it. Peter is very strong and he hits very hard. He does need to work on setting up his punches better and he needs to throw more of them but like I said, at twenty five years old there is time for him to improve these skills. Peter himself takes a hell of a punch as even though he was wobbled in the last round he took some hard punches from Klitschko and he was still standing, impressive.

Very interesting heavyweight fight Sat night. I thought Peter fought pretty well considering his lack of experience with top fighters. Going 12 rounds should help season him and he certainly wasn't disgraced. You've also got to give credit to Klitschko for taking on such a tough fighter as Peter. Seeing Peter stalk Klitschko around the ring, well it gave me the feeling one mistake by Klitschko and its over for him. I thought the knockdowns by Peter were kind of cheap though...back of head punches and some were punch push type. There were times where Klitschko was in big trouble though. And Klitschko does have a big lapse during fights where he is vulnerable...if he fights though it he seems to get a second wind which is exactly what happened during fight. ON the plus side for Peter he has an iron jaw. He also is resistant to cuts and eye swelling...very tough guy. He took everything Klitschko could throw and laughed at it, except for sneaky left hook in last round that staggered him. The fight kind of reminded me of Tua/Ibeabuchi slug fest of a few years ago. Ibeabuchi won on close decision. If Ibeabuchi had he stayed clean he probably would have wiped all these current heavys out. This post below seems to indicate that Tua fight damaged Ibeabuchi and caused him to act bizarre.

One day probably this Samuele Pietro is gonna fight Vitali and it will be interesting. Vitali can take a punch much better than his brother, but probably is not as powerful. It's probably a better matchup than Vitali-Rahman (TSK,TSK). Rahman would have a much better chance against Wladimir. Yesterday I have seen (or saw) for the first time the legendary Ali'-Folley fight. I was impressed by how good Folley performed. He hit Ali' to the head many times, not many fighters ever could hit Ali' to the head so often (not even George Foreman). And that was Ali' at his very best while Zora was a little over the hill. Zora Folley had good power in his punches, he was really good. Ali's win was very clear, but not an easy one. Angelo Dundee said "the greatest fight he ever looked was against Folley". Well,
I don't agree with him, Ali' looked pretty good, but was not dominating in that fight. I think his most impressive fight remains the Cleveland Williams fight, regardless of Cleveland's conditions.Interesting that just before the Zora Folley fight, Ali' said in an interview: "I'll retire tonight and I'll never come back". Is this true? Noam, claims the Foreman quit against Ali? I thought Foreman got counted out. Did I miss something over the years. Is this a common belief that Foreman quit against Ali?

Pete: "Quit" could mean a lot of different things. If you ask me, Michael Spinks "quit" against Mike Tyson in the first minute. Duran literally quit against Leonard, by withdrawing from the fight and deciding not to continue. Did Tyson "quit" against Holyfield by biting his ears and forcing a disqualification? Maybe. Did Frazier "quit" against Foreman? No way. I'm one of the guys who has taken Frazier to task for not fighting certain opponents, but I'll never say that Frazier quit against anybody. Quit was not in Frazier's vocabulary. He would have come out for the 15th round in Manilla, unable to see Ali. He would have fought blind in that round if his trainers let him. Against Foreman, he would have continued to get up after each knockdown until he simply couldn't. Did Shavers quit against Quarry? No, even though Norton accused Shavers of quitting against Jerry, in my opinion, he was simply unable to continue. Conversely, Norton quit against Shavers in my opinion. He started getting hit in the opening moments of the first round and decided to pack it in rather than go through an evening gut check. Norton showed a lot of heart against Ali and Holmes, both tacticians who weren't known for a big punch, but Norton showed very little heart against guys like Foreman, Shavers and Cooney, who could land hard and often. As for Foreman vs. Ali, I don't think Foreman quit---and I don't think he was squarely knocked out. I think he was exhausted. My impression is that Foreman was counted out too quickly(or too fast) in Kinshasa. Very honestly, I don't think the count lasted 10 seconds...It was kind of 1,2,3,10. Anyway, George was already a beaten man. That one was Ali's greatest performance. Angelo, and Massimo that was my impression also, Foreman was counted out. When Noam said that Foreman quit against Ali I thought I missed something. I cannot imagine comparing Duran and Tyson's defeats to Foreman's loss. Foreman did not quit or get disqualified. Foreman was counted out.

Pete - what I wrote was that in my opinion (I can give my opinion, can't I ?) Foreman was dispirited and fatigued. I believe that he could have beaten the count, had he wanted to. Foreman himself says that he could have beaten the count but had wrongly interpreted what the count was and in error rose late.

Fan, how are you going with your expose ? I can't wait ! Anyway, Pete, who are your favourite lightweights ?

Angelo - you described the situation aptly and fairly, especially regarding Foreman. He was exhausted rather than hurt. The punches Ali hit him with wouldn't have knocked him down earlier in that fight. Regards Duran, there were certainly more highlights than that one low point. Duran won four world titles, with each title taken from an outstanding champion. He won the lightweight title at age 21 from Ken Buchanan. Roberto defended it 13 times against the very best. The number of title defenses equaled the record for that division. Duran moved up TWO divisions to beat Ray Leonard for the welterweight title. He then moved up to lightmiddleweight and won the title from another outstanding champion Davey Moore.Pundits consider Duran arguably the greatest lightweight of all time. He was the ultimate warrior who loved the thrill of battle. If you wanted someone beside you in a war then the legendary Duran fits that bill despite that single moment of madness against Leonard in the 'No mas' fight. Fight fans of all divisions, rather than just the heavyweights, have Roberto right up there with the pound-for-pound legends. You've only got to examine his record to understand why. It's a great pity that it has that one stain. There is no way Earnie Shavers quit against Jerry Quarry. He beat the count when he got knocked down but he rose on very unsteady legs and the referee made the correct decision by stopping the fight as Shavers didn't know where he was. Shavers could have been seriously hurt if he had been allowed to continue.I also don't believe Norton quit when he got knocked out by Shavers. Sometimes a fighter just gets caught early. I am not sure why Norton said Shavers quit when Jerry knocked him out. Sour grapes for people pointing out Norton got knocked out early a few times himself?The next Ali'-Frazier fight in the heavyweight division is Lamon Brewster vs Luan Krasniqui! People is already talking in the streets about this fight..."Brewster is gonna win!", "Krasniqui is gonna win!". People just can't wait!!

Kent: It was the prefight nonsense before Shavers-Norton when those comments took place. Shavers said that he would KO Norton because he questioned Norton's heart, pointing out that Norton "quit" against Foreman, rather than mix it up. Norton countered that "Shavers quit against Lyle and he quit against Quarry." Shavers had the last laugh as the fight didn't make it out of the first round. He was gracious to Norton in victory though. Noam: I agree with you that Foreman probably could have beaten the count and continued against Ali, but he was spent. Ali would have gotten to him and put him away within seconds. | Pete: Actually, I don't think Duran quit on his stool---he quit during the round by waving Leonard away and turning his back to Leonard. It was a bad night for Duran but doesn't take away from his many great wins, titles and overall accomplishments. "Hands of Stone" is still a legend. As for Leonard, he had already proven himself to the world by the time he met Hearns---but I was stubborn enough to claim that Leonard was just an Olympic/ABC TV darling and that Hearns would expose him and batter him. Well, Leonard was simply amazing against Hearns—the fact that he turned slugger to KO Hearns blew my mind. I never doubted Leonard again. I actually picked Leonard to beat Hagler and he proved me right. | 9/27/05 02:36:49 PM| Pete| Cleveland|| N/A ||| 10 | Angelo, sorry about that mistake regarding Duran. Regarding Leonard I was never a big fan of his. But as far as being a fighter he is among the best. Leonard was a true warrior he let it all hang out. In this sense he was like Ray Robinson he was the ultimate warrior. He was willing to make any sacrifice when it came to winning a fight.   Strangely what people sometimes forget about Leonard is that yes he lost the 1st fight with Duran. But even though Duran won a unanimous decision it was a close fight. If I was in a war, I would want to be in a foxhole with Leonard because I know he would fight until death. |

9/27/05 03:57:46 PM| Noam| same ||| same ||| 10 | Gerry - Leonard and Duran were both great. I agree that Leonard was outclassing Duran the second fight, but don't forget that Duran was a originally a lightweight who'd risen two weight divisions.   Also, remember that Duran won that first fight against Leonard. Even so, I'm more of a fan of Leonard than I am of Duran.   Pete, who are your top 10 lightweights? |

9/28/05 08:44:41 AM| Pete| Cleveland|| N/A ||| 10 | Noam, regarding my top 10 lightweight. I base my selection on fighters who fights I have seen. Meaning someone such as Benny Leonard I cannot rate because what films I saw of him were of poor quality or of short duration, the same can be said about Ross, Canzoneri, McFarlin... So of the ones I have seen on tape here goes: 1 Ray Robinson 2 Carlos Ortiz 3 Pernell Whitaker 4 Roberto Duran 5 Ike Williams 6 Hank Armstrong 7 Joe Brown 8 Jimmy Carter 9 Julio Cesar Chavez 10 Ismael Laguna  I include Ray Robinson as a lightweight because when he turned pro he fought as a lightweight. And in less than 1 year as a pro he beat the lightweight champion Sammy Angott in a 10 round decision. Robinson was denied a shot at the lightweight championship because he was too good, if given a shot he certainly would have won that title too. |

9/28/05 01:53:48 PM| Angelo| Washington, DC|| funktron@yahoo.com ||| 10 | This is some list. I might flip-flop Sweet Pea Whittaker and Duran---maybe---but from the fighters I'm familiar with on your list, it's pretty damn accurate. I must say, Duran vs. Robinson would have been something to see. |

9/28/05 02:45:21 PM| Pete| Cleveland|| N/A ||| 10 | Angelo, if we removed Robinson from my list and just included from Ortiz to Armstrong there is little to choose from regarding each fighter's greatness. If they all fought each other 7 times the end results would probably be something like a 4-3 win loss record they are all so equally great. |

9/28/05 03:36:59 PM| Noam| same ||| same ||| 10 | A good list from Pete. Another excellent lightweight, although I've never seen film of him (probably because he fought in 1902) was Joe Gans. He held the lightweight title from 1902 to 1908 when he was beaten by Battling Nelson. Gans was black and because he so thoroughly dominated the division, whites set up their own version of the title (a white lightweight championship) because they couldn't beat Joe to get the real one. |

9/28/05 11:41:33 PM| Kent| Murrieta, Ca|| kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 | A recurring theme on this site is us Quarry fans complaining about programs like ESPN Classic just showing Jerry's losing fights. They never show Jerry's biggest wins such as over Patterson, Lyle, and Shavers. They just showed for the 100th time Jerry's loss to Ken Norton. But rather than rahash that Jerry could have beaten Norton or he would have had a much better chance prime versus prime, I would like to address the fact that the Norton fight lasted way too long because after fighting effectively and competitively for three rounds, Jerry took a terrible beating in the fourth and fifth rounds, leading up to a late fifth round TKO loss to Norton. So from early in the fourth round to the ending Jerry had very little chance of winning and the fight should have been stopped much sooner than it was stopped.Jerry took an unneeded beating for almost two whole rounds, he was bleeding badly and getting pounded from post to post. Just because he was throwing punches back doesn't mean the doctor, the referee, and Gil Clancy should have let him continue.Jerry wouldn't have been happy if the fight was stopped sooner but as it was he protested the stoppage near the end of the fifth round anyway. He can be seen pushing the referee away when it was stopped.Sometimes fighters need to be protected from themselves whether they like it or not and the Norton/Quarry fight is an example of this.| 9/29/05 08:24:33 AM| Angelo| Washington, DC || funktron@yahoo.com ||| 10 | Kent: I think we can agree that both the Frazier II and Norton fights should have been called earlier. Both were a little ridiculous, for different reasons. But it is legitimate for Quarry fans to complain about ESPN bias—not showing any of Jerry's great wins and perpetuating the myth that he was some sort of punching bag. Even some astute younger boxing fans have no idea about his big wins—only the damn losses that keep being shown over and over. It is frustrating. Also, I'll add that yes, the fight against Norton would have been different prime vs. prime but most like, JQ would have lost to Frazier nine out of ten times. |

9/29/05 09:37:00 AM| Kent| Murrieta, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 | Angelo, but I hear so often what a great trainer Gil Clancy is but I don't see it as in both Frazier two and the Norton fight he didn't protect his fighter.Never mind that Joe Louis in the Frazier 2 fight was a lousy referee who let the fight go on too long and the same can be said about the referee in the Norton fight. That although this is true, Clancy could have insisted the fights be stopped sooner. A good corner man does this, he protects his fighter no matter what.I remember years ago when this or that football player was thinking about boxing and fighting Muhammad Ali that I would tell my friends, avid football fans, that these players, no matter how strong, wouldn't last two rounds with Jerry Quarry let alone Ali and my friends would laugh at me and say, " Quarry, he is terrible, all he ever does is lose." They really believed that some "Joe Footballer" with no boxing experience would destroy Jerry.I would then ask my friends, "have you heard of Floyd Patterson, Ron Lyle, and Earnie Shavers?" Most of them would say yes and I when I told them Jerry fought all three of them they would assume Jerry got beat up badly by all of them. They would be surprised when I said that Jerry beat these fighters, two of them quite convincingly.I also believe that Jerry would have knocked out Wilt Chamberlain. Chamberlain would have never taken a fight with Jerry if he was trying to get one fight with Ali as Jerry would have been too dangerous for him for less money.9/29/05 01:21:23 PM| Ben Swaab| Seattle || ben.swaab@nordstrom.com ||| 10 | Kent, Do you remember how Eddie Machen and Zorra Folley died. Also I emailed ESPN Classic on showing more of Jerry Quarry's wins instead of the losses. Would love to see Jerry's fights against Mac Foster, Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers on ESPN Classic.

9/29/05 04:12:29 PM| Fan| Fandom || Fan@Fandom.com ||| 10 | Folley hit his head on a swimming pool at the age of 40 in 1972. Machen "fell" out of a window at the age of 40 in 1972 as well. Eddie had problems in his life and sadly never conquered all his demons. God bless both of them, they were great fighters that should have gotten a shot in the late 50's. I will never forgive Cus D'Amato for turning the title into a joke for 3 years. |

9/29/05 09:11:17 PM| Kent| Murrieta, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 | Fan from Fandom, thanks for handling that one. It is sad how Folley and Machen died so early in life.Both were excellent heavyweights who did deserve a shot at the title| 9/30/05 01:28:19 AM| Massimo| Roma || 4 ||| 10 | I read a couple of days ago that Zora Folley was a very nice person. When he died in the swimming pool he was playing with a friend ("who throws who in the swimming pool"). What a tragedy. As a fighter he was so good he gave Oscar Bonavena a boxing lesson and gave an in prime Ali' a fight.

I agree with Kent that Jerry Quarry would have knocked out Wilt Chamberlain. Since styles make fights, I think that Jerry would have had an easier time against "The Stilt" than Ali'. I think probably Jerry punched harder than Ali'. Wilt Chamberlain vs Shaquille O'Neal in a boxing fight? But don't forget that Calvin Lane is the man: 7'5" 1/2, over 400 lbs. Nobody in this world can whip Calvin Lane.

I think Ali actually had a higher knockout percentage than Jerry but that doesn't tell the whole story as Ali would punched in large numbers and no individual punch was as hard as a Quarry left hook or Jerry's hard right hand.

By way of example, I note that an inordinate amount of time was recently devoted to denigrating Buster Mathis, in an apparent effort to diminish Joe Frazier and the "NY" version of the title (actually several states). The fact is, most fans in 67-68 knew Frazier was the best around, and that he would destroy Ellis, when they met, which he did. Even after Ellis beat Jerry for the WBA title, many still considered Jerry the top threat to Frazier. Although Jimmy was the WBA Champ and a very skilled fighter, he was generally dismissed as merely an Ali sparring partner whom Quarry should have beaten. Which is why those who considered the deposed Ali the best found little in Frazier's demolition of Jimmy to suggest that he could take Ali.

I might also add that, at the time, the Quarry-Mathis fight was huge. It was so big that it co-headlined the very first card at the "new" MSG. Irrespective of the (often bogus) rankings by the various organizations, Mathis was a top heavy in the public's eye, or the fight would not have been picked for the MSG debut, and it would have received little attention. This was not the case. I still have many pre-fight clippings from the NY papers. Denigrating Mathis does an injustice to Jerry (a la ESPN), and one of his biggest victories, certainly the one that made him a life long fan favorite in NY. This was a critically important factor in Jerry's career. The California kid was often referred to as the "house heavyweight" at MSG, something Jerry truly appreciated after the shoddy treatment he got in his home state.

Re: Fights that should have been stopped early: In Frazier-Quarry II, as I've observed before, the only guy who tried to save Jerry from injury in that fight was, ironically, Frazier himself. And not in an offensive display of mean spirited, self aggrandizing showmanship either, he wanted Joe Louis to step in and stop it. When asked about it afterward he was quoted saying "Jerry's a good guy. I don't want to kill no one." Conversely, I don't think Norton could have cared less had he killed the grossly undersized, shot, and unprepared version of Quarry he was lucky enough to draw.

Getting back to Frazier-Quarry II, perhaps Joe was just returning the favor from earlier in the fight when Jerry would not take advantage of a low blow he inflicted accidentally, despite Clancy exhorting him to follow up against the stricken Frazier. You can see this on the video, it does not speak well of Clancy, but speaks volumes about Jerry's sense of fair play.

(How many heavyweights did Clancy bounce to and from anyway? He was certainly no Angelo Dundee or Yancey Durham.)

I see one poster mentioned an upcoming "Beyond the Glory" segment about Frazier, then no one commented on it. Didn't anyone tune in?

The Frazier-Ali I stuff was pretty good, after that they kind of sped through the rest of his life. Good interviews with his son Marvis too. They were certainly kinder to Joe than ESPN has been to Jerry, whose career has been literally distorted by the network. The Stuart Scott segment on Jerry's passing, which is included on the JQF video, is journalistically irresponsible and borderline slanderous. You know what they say about the winners writing history.Regards to all.|9/30/05 11:16:30 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Hello USA Fan, I had forgotten about Clancy telling Jerry to go after Frazier when Jerry hurt Frazier with a low blow, that by the way referee Louis didn't notice. It was an obvious foul by Jerry but accidental and Jerry, the true sportsman he was, backed off.That low blow by Jerry in Frazier/Quarry 2 and Clancy telling Jerry to follow up on it is another example on Clancy's character not being very good.|9/30/05 12:34:08 PM|Ben Swaab|Seattle||ben.swaab@nordstrom.com|||10|ESPN forgets how popular Jerry Quarry was. Between 1968 and 1974 he was all over T.V. Remember their was no cable no ESPN.The first time I saw Jerry Quarry was on I Dream of Jeannie the second time was on Batman after that I was hooked on Boxing. I remember when he went into the first Frazier fight wearing a baby blue golf hat I ran out and bought myself one. I was so bummed when he lost, I was so sure he was going to win.I met Jerry in Seattle in June of 1970 right after his knockout of Mac Foster. He was such a class act I was 12 years old and he knew I was a big fan he took his time with me and answered all my questions. I remember telling him he should always wear white trunks it seems to bring you luck.... he said he would think about that. I just wish Jerry had better mangement in 72,73,74 they should of waited for Foreman I don't understand why he had to go into the second Frazier fight. I believe he would have taken Foreman! Jerry would have used the same game plan like in the Lyle fight, in the later rounds you would see Quarry take Foerman out. Frazier and Norton had sharper faster punching power which gave Jerry problems. Foreman had heavy slow punches you could not take Jerry out with those type of punches. To me Jerry Quarry will alway be a Champion!! |9/30/05 02:21:49 PM|Nickory|U.S.A||Nickory@hotmail.com|||8|The death of Leavander Johnson should change the way we look at boxing.There have been many recent, tragic deaths in the ring.  Levaender Johnson's is just the most recent and high profile.  Ref's are not stopping fights when they should. Guys are being let up at the 8 or 9 without anything solid underneath them just to get KO'd severly by their opponents. If you suggest that there is no room for improving the safety of the fighters, then you are in fact saying that their lives are less important than the perpetuation of the sport. You may not think that is what you are saying, but it is the simple logical conculslion of that line of argument.I'm not saying stop the fights based on the volume of punches. I'm just saying that fighters are clearly being allowed to get up and keep fighting long after they could even hope to mount a reasonable offense, defense, or even offer a cry of "No More." Not all fighters know the risk or proffesional fighting. If Holyfield knew the risk he would not be trying to fight still. He's so damn stupid now that he doesn't realize that he is killing himself. Promoters force fighters to go in against better fighters and get knocked out. They push them to fight too long, too often. Managers abuse fighters' dreams of winning championships and getting set for life. Fighters often don't know the risk or are not given the option to protect themselves.And let's say that someone dies even after more stringent rules are put in place. Would that not indicate that there is something fundamentally wrong with how the sport is played? Are we no better than the Romans that expected their fighters to die for their entertainment? This is a sport! Sports do not matter in any way that should affect people! If they do, too much value has been placed on these sports. It is a game, no more important to life than checkers. One man dying in the ring is one man too many for something that really doesn't matter.I say if men keep dying in the ring, go ahead and beef up the gloves, make head gear, whatever it takes to stop desperate young men from dying for our amusement. Nick|9/30/05 04:24:18 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Nick:  We need to keep working to make boxing safer and to eliminate or at least greatly reduce the number of severe brain injuries and deaths. This does NOT mean the sport should be abolished. No need to throw out the baby with the bathwater. But we do need to take practical steps to implement reforms that will prevent these tragic ring deaths/injuries to the best of our ability. Yes, it's one of the only sports where the intent is to harm the other person, but last I heard, it is not the sport where the most serious injuries and deaths actually occur. Every year, high school, college and even some pro football players die during training camp or practice. Mountain climbing----people die. Hang gliding---people die. Diving----people are paralyzed. Auto racing----deaths are routine. You feel terrible everytime you read about these things. I was shaken after reading about Greg Page's injuries and now Leavander Johnson's death. It really is a brutal sport that needs to be regulated carefully to give the participants their best chance of competing hard without dying or suffering brain damage. I would not want my son to take up boxing, yet I watch other peoples' children fight and sometimes seriously hurt themselves. I have mixed emotions---some guilt probably. I do love the sport, especially my memories of the great fights past.

| 9/30/05 09:47:42 PM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | | 10 | Nickory, the problem with banning boxing is boxing would not go away, it would become an underground sport with no regulations, much more dangerous to the contestants. Improvements can be made by following existing regulations to the letter of the law and by passing additional safety regulations. James Quarry, brother of Jerry and CO founder of this site, pushed for a number of improvements in safety such as a stricter mandatory three knockdown rule in which a fighter is declared knocked out if he is knocked down three times in a fight, not just in one round. He also was for fighters taking routine MRI brain scans and if any brain damage is present, then that fighter would not be licensed to fight anywhere regardless if any outward symptoms are present. Another reform he supported is perspective fighters taking a blood test to see if they have a gene that predisposes them to conditions such as Alzheimer's disease as the so called Punch Drunk Syndrome can have symptoms like those in Alzheimer's or in some cases, Parkinson's disease. If this test was readily available, potential boxers could make a more informed choice about competing or not. The Jerry Quarry Foundation has helped pass some legislation towards improving boxing safety but more work needs to be done. I understand all of the regulations in the world cannot stop a tragedy like what happened to Lavander Johnson from happening but at least others who might otherwise be damage can avoid or at least lesson potential damage. |

| 9/30/05 11:57:38 PM | Noam | same | same | | 10 | Fan - the point you are missing is that the New York title was ONLY recognized by five states other than New York. That's a fact. Out of the whole world only six states of the USA recognized the title. Don't shoot the messenger, please, for relaying facts, which, by themselves discredit that partial version of the title. Thanks. |

| 10/1/05 08:32:21 AM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | | 10 | Noam, you continue to miss the point that the NYASC title was recognized outside the U.S. by other nations that were part of the group that formed the WBC, the rival organization to the WBA. In fact the fight for unification of the heavyweight title between Frazier and Ellis was for the WBA and WBC titles. Since Ellis was never recognized by the WBC as heavyweight champion, only by the WBA, shows Frazier was recognized outside the U.S. The point is, both Frazier and Ellis' titles were disputed titles that is why they fought to clear up the dispute. I just saw highlights of Frazier verses Mathis and Mathis fought very well. He was acutally even on the scorecard of one of the judge's and one point behind on one of the other judge's card's at the time he was knocked out by one tremendous left hook in round eleven. That effort and | his winning effort over George Chuvalo in a very hard fought contest shows the man could fight. Mathis was 30-4 in his career and his four losses were to Frazier, Muhammad Ali, our own Jerry Quarry, and Ron Lyle, no shame in losing to those guys. You can question Mathis' ranking as far as deserving a title shot but the fact is he got the title shot and he came close to winning it. You also can't judge his ability by Frazier downplaying it as Joe rarely gave other fighters any credit. In fact Frazier also said the Ellis fights were easy but the tapes show differently, that he had to come from behind in both those fights to win, as they do in the Mathis fight, a brutal hard fought contest. |

First off - civility is the new watchword, and that is a good thing. For all of the younger fans, the MSG connection was truly a lynchpin in Jerry's career. The role of MSG (Harry Markson and Teddy Brenner) in Jerry's sustained public prominence cannot be underestimated. His biggest wins, Mathis, Foster, Lyle, Shavers, were there in NYC. Without the support of the New York fans, I respectfully submit, Jerry would not have gone as far as he did. He always seemed to get another shot. And as often he made good on it. It is an odd circumstance that the West Coast fans did not appreciate Jerry Quarry the way the East Coast did. For a time he was damn close to being a "Superstar"......whatever that is. |

Yes Kent, he had the fans out West, as you said it was the press who hounded him unfairly, and still do over at ESPN.
But NY loved him. even in his Garden losses - Frazier I and II, Chuvalo, Norton.
The only fighter who got louder ovations at MSG was Floyd Patterson, I guess because he was actually from NYC. At his height, Jerry even made many television appearances incuding roles in "I Dream of Jeanne", "Adam 12" and "Land of the Giants", and, as I recall, he sang on the Hollywood Palace variety show (I think the song was Glen Campbell's "By The Time I get To Phoenix"). Not to mention the "Superstars" and some announcing. He was very good at just about anything he tried. Jerry would have been one popular champ. It just wasn't meant to be. I get a little sad whenever I see Randy Nuemann (another MSG Quarry victory) refereeing, thinking it could have been Jerry. |

I used to think Jerry would lose hands down to Mike Tyson, prime verses prime but although I think Tyson's accurate power punching could also bust up Jerry's tender skin, the intangibles such as heart would be in Jerry's favor. Consider that James "Quick" Tillis at about 207 gave a near title winning Tyson all he could handle and Jerry wasn't that much smaller than Tillis and Jerry was stronger and he hit harder than Tillis. If he didn't get cut and if he lasted out of the early rounds, which is a good bet as Jerry could take a great punch, Jerry had something that Tillis had which could give Jerry a win over Tyson and almost gave a win to Tills, and that is Jerry, like Tillis, would not be afraid of Tyson. Jerry did take some bombs from some big hitters like Shavers, Mac Foster, Lyle, Frazier, and Norton without, except for a knockdown in the second Frazier fight from a body punch, going down. I think Jerry would have his hands full with Tysons quickness, even if he could absorb Tyson's power. An in-prime Tyson was an attack pit bull, hard to fend off. I agree with you though, that if Quarry avoided cuts, he'd have a chance.
Jerry was better than most of the guys Tyson ever fought. Quarry would stay upright, no doubt about it. Quarry would make it into the middle and later rounds if he didn't cut, and that would present problems for Tyson.

The Klitschko Brothers, especially Vitali, would give Jerry huge, no pun intended, problems. Because although they appear to be lumbering, clumsy fighters, they have accurate fast combinations with both hands and they both work well off of the jab. Wladimir K seems to get knocked down or out by anyone with some power. He was down recently verses Sam Peter and in his previous bout against Davaryl Williamson and of course his knockout losses to Sanders and Brewster.
Jerry would have the power to hurt Wladimir. Chris Byrd might land enough punches to steal a decision away from Jerry and James Toney has very good overall boxing skills to give Jerry a lot of trouble. I know a lot of people are put off by Toney's bragging but the man knows his boxing, he really is a smart fighter who knows all of the tricks of the trade. The other contenders: I would give the edge to Jerry due to his speed and accurate punches, including Hasim Rahman. Jerry could take his power and outbox him, like he did verses Lyle. Regarding Sam Peter, the same scenario for a fight with Rahman with Jerry outboxing him. Of course Peter is still young and he has time to improve his skills. I also think Jerry could out box Lamon Brewster, another similar fighter to Rahman and Peter. John Ruiz would be a win for Jerry also as even though Ruiz would try and get rough with Jerry, it wouldn't work as Jerry could get rough with the best of them. I think Jerry Quarry would be a good bet to win at least one of the titles out there today and maybe even more than one title.

I don't think that JERRY, God bless him, would have survived TYSON '88-'90. TYSON was just to fast and powerful.
There is the argument "WHO DID HE FIGHT?" Well that's a legitimate question but really who did any of the great modern heavies fight? MARCIANO fought a washed up JOE LOUIS, LISTON fought ALI twice and lost both times, ALI fought LISTON, FRAZIER and FOREMAN(losing 1 of 3 to FRAZIER, winning all others), FRAZIER fought ALI(winning 1 of 3)and FOREMAN(losing twice), FOREMAN fought FRAZIER twice, ALI once(lost the title), HOLMES fought a washed up ALI and lost to TYSON, TYSON fought a washed up HOLMES and lost to LEWIS, LEWIS fought a washed up TYSON. There were a lot of good fighters throughout this era(MACHEN, PATTERSON, CHARLES, CHUVALO, QUARRY, LYLE, NORTON, SHAVERS just to mention a few) but none of them were fighting at quite the level of the previously mentioned. Typically there is 1 dominant heavyweight, who defeats most of the contenders, during his brief reign as champion.
That's why a guy like Quarry, in my opinion, would have his way with the heavyweight division, 2005. | 10/4/05 06:21:26 PM| Joey|T.O.||a|||10|"The Klitschko Brothers, especially Vitali, would give Jerry huge, no pun intended, problems. Because although they appear to be lumbering, clumsy fighters, they have accurate fast combinations with both hands and they both work well off of the jab."

KENT, I don't think that the KLITSCHKOS measure up to LENNOX LEWIS, as far as big heavies are concerned. Granted VITALI gave LENNOX a run for his money, but LENNOX was pretty much done by that point in time and LEWIS did bust him up pretty good. Don't misunderstand me I'm not a LEWIS fan and really had a personal distaste for him as a fighter but I do feel that the KLITSCHKOS are vastly over rated simply because as ANGELO suggested, there isn't much out there currently.

Joey, you are right, the K brothers are not as good as Lewis was but at least Vitali, is the best we have right now and it would be a difficult task for Jerry to beat him.

Vladimir K. has excellent boxing skills and it is possible he could bust up Jerry's tender skin but he usually starts to go down hill by round number five and I don't think Jerry would let him off of the hook like Sam Peter did. Sam had Wlad ready to go in round five of their fight but when he came out for round six, he didn't do anything of note and Wlad was able to recover. Jerry would have jumped on him and finished him if he didn't get him the previous round.| 10/4/05 08:04:48 PM| Noam|same||same|||10|Kent - the New York version was only recognized by six states in the US of A. That's a fact. Even Frazier acknowledges that in his book. Joe didn't want to fight the other guys picked for the WBA tournament and that was his business, even though it tarnishes him. However the title meant nothing until he beat Ellis. Before then he didn't want the hard lead-up fights the WBA tournament would have given him. All the other ranked guys were ready to fight him. Fan - I appreciate your civility, too, and that's what Brenda was asking for. It's good to see it's picked up. Thanks.| 10/5/05 10:52:29 AM| mark sargeant| uk||mark_sargeant2003@yahoo.co.uk|||10|Concerning the Klitschko's, I think that the younger and more criticised Wladimir has the better record by far. He has beaten Byrd which by today's standards was a top win, Botha, Mercer, McClane, Barrett, Williamson and now the big current danger in Samuel Peter which was a very big points win. Vitali, on the other hand, put in an impressive but ultimately losing battle against an underprepared Lewis a good win win against Sanders (as did Rahman) an Kirk Johnson of note. At the moment the likes of Tua and Rahman have better names on their list. The two of them are probably the two best fighters of that era.| 10/5/05 11:51:06 AM| Gerry|Cleveland||same|||10|Noam is still going on about Frazier? How many converts does he have now? Let's just agree to disagree on that tired subject...I'll take Vitali out of the two brothers, even though Wlad does have more talent. Vitali is a proven commodity. In fact, Vitali could very easily be undefeated.His loss to Byrd, due to injury, happened when he was seven pints ahead on all three cards. Byrd can't fight that guy. The other was to Lewis, where, again, he was ahead.I agree Lewis was done at that point and better overall, but he would have had a very hard time with Vitali at any point.It may be time to consider Vitali Klitschko, the dominant heavy of this decade, as a top 20 all-timer ...More Super Fights lately, Brewster overcame his low blows and was trailing Krasniqui when he finally won his title match.I would love to see Jerry and Brewster, who should just hand his belt to one of the four or so guys above him.Toney dismissed Guinn as a future contender with his lopsided win.Byrd walked thru his title bout and became the latest to defeat Williamson.Tarver also beat Jones, possibly spelling the end for Jones there.OK, at least a couple of these were very dull matches. For Byrd, it was his first fight in a year.This is why guys here still talk about the good ol' days. Thanks.Vitali, Top 20 all time? Hardly. I don't see it. I'm not saying he won't end up there, but at this point, no way. Until proven otherwise, I'll hold to the opinion that Vitali would be dismantled by many, many golden era (70's) contenders, much less Champions.If Vitali can beat most of the notable heavyweights out there in his era, than we can talk top 20 all time but he still has a ways to go before he can be considered.Yes Wladimir has talent but his main flaw, his chin, makes him suspect every time he faces a puncher. His win over Sam Peter was a huge win but I feel Sam would have won if he just let his hands go more.Sam reminds me of Tua, big power but relies too much on one punch. Tua when he fought Lewis just followed Lennox around and he took a "shellacking" Great word, right Massimo?I remember Tua had a hair doo that made him look a lot like a pineapple. I remember yelling at the television at Tua, "come on pineapple head, throw some punches!"

I ran across this article and it puts a very realistic view on martial arts and street fighting. I know its not a boxing topic but I found it very interesting. Check it out.I have never heard the word "shellaking" here in Roma, but I guess it means something very close to "whupping". "Whupping", another great word.I think Vitali still has a chance to be remembered as a top 20 all time. If he makes 5-6 other (or more) title defenses and then retires, how to deny him a top 20 rating ?I have some martial arts training and I have fought in light contact points tournaments. I never won a lot those matches but it wasn't important to me as points are counted according to what judges think would be effective if they were used in full force.I considered those tournaments to be just another training exercise, useful if you just use it in the proper context of throwing kicks and punches and blocking those in return.I never thought those tournaments were a measurement of true fighting ability.I also did some sparring with boxers in the gym, a useful cross training tool to enhance my training.What is good about that article is it points out that if someone gets in fights, he is, at some point, going to get hurt.The problem with a lot of martial artists who don't participate in full contact fighting is they learn to dish out punishment but they don't learn how to take punishment.It is good for safety in training but it can limit how effective a defense can be.
actually READ the posts. I was RESPONDING to what Kent and Fan said a few days earlier. I'm allowed to do that, aren't I? I hadn't read their posts earlier than that because I was tied up with a death in the family. And what I said was that the New York title was only recognized by six states. It might not fit agendas and blinkered views of the past, but that is a verifiable fact. Sorry for speaking the truth. |

|10/9/05 04:40:43 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Joey I take on board your comments but I am at a disadvantage because Gerry doesn't want me talking about it. I'll be brief, though. I don't doubt that Frazier was better in one-off fights than the other guys in the WBA tournament. But I think he was worried about putting in back-to-back hard fights against genuine tough guys. He didn't want Bonavena then Quarry then Ellis to win that tournament. Much easier to win a version recognized by just six states by fighting the unranked Mathis. Even Frazier acknowledges in his book that Mathis was easy. Think of this, too. If Frazier had entered the WBA tournament like all the other ranked guys did, then there would have been no disputed title. It would have been an undisputed title. Frazier was the only guy who wouldn't enter it. Regards Norton. Frazier says in his book that he didn't fight Norton because there was no money in it. Others say it was because they were buddies. Lots of disseminating there. I don't know which explanation to believe.|

|10/9/05 11:22:22 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y||mooseygoop|||10|Kent,Yes, that article pointed out what we all know but don’t consider when dealing with a stranger...That they might do something that we’d never consider doing to a person such as shooting them or sticking a broken bottle in an eye or any number of brutal things. Thats why his advice (and hes suppose to be street smart) is to deflect any attack and get away. It might be a hard thing to do if actually confronted but I agree with him that its the smartest.|

|10/10/05 04:47:59 AM|Massimo|Roma ||4|||10|Sincere condolences Noam.|

|10/10/05 10:21:52 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Ed, yes the best defense when confronted with a street fight is to get away. There are too many crazies out there.I also let everyone know that I am trying to walk away and not fight. This has two benefits, one, if I do walk away and avoid the conflict, always the best choice, and two, if I have to attack this person, it is clear to the witnesses that I was acting in self defense. The law doesn't always see who the true aggressor is.But the article is also right about getting hit and hurt. Years ago I was acutely attacked without warning and "sucker punched" by some crazed guy.It was something the karate dojo didn't prepare me for, taking a punch, and even the limited sparring I had done with boxers, didn't help as much as one would think as this guy really hit me hard and I didn't see it coming. They always say the one you don't see coming knocks you out.Well he didn't knock me out but he dazed me but for some reason he didn't follow up on the punch and I was able to recover and take him down.I was lucky he hesitated after he hit me because if he had been able to follow up on it, I would have been knocked out or worse. It was the hardest I have ever been hit and hurt in my life.|

|10/10/05 10:34:16 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Kent: Of course, if the attack occurs in your home (i.e. intruder), basically, you should not only knock the person out, but follow with blows to the head with an iron skillet, until the person isn't breathing. If you have a gun, you shoot to kill. Basically, as you said, the law is a little peculiar in terms of what is self defense---so you only want one story coming out of the house, and that's your story. And besides, anyone who would break into my house is a threat to my family---I wouldn't have a lot of guilt ending it for that person. |

|10/10/05 11:35:38 AM|Joey|T.O.||a|||10|I think Vitali still has a chance to be remembered as a top 20 all time. If he makes 5-6 other (or more) title defenses and then retires, how to deny him a top 20 rating? "

MASSIMO, it would depend on who those 5-6 title defenses consisted of. VITALI didn't dethrone LEWIS. If he had, he would probably be viewed differently by many fight fans. VITALI will have to reach into his hat and pull out some big time talent to compete against within the next few years, which judging by what is out there currently, may be a difficult task.

I can't believe people are still droning on about Frazier "ducking" the WBA Tournament. Over the weekend I watched Terrell-Spencer, and Quarry Spencer. Frazier would have destroyed Terrel or Spencer at that time if they fought. It would not have been a hard fight for Frazier. Patterson, Mildenberger would not have been a hard fight. I doubt if Martin would have been. Regarding Quarry and Ellis being hard fights for Frazier, give me a break. Frazier beat them both handily and came out without a mark on his face. Bonevena, would have been a hard fight. But Joe fought him a year later and won an unanimous decision. Who did Ellis fight after the Quarry? Floyd Patterson and Ellis was lucky to win that fight. Patterson by the way was offered fights with Frazier more than once and he turned them down. One can look at a fighter's record and try and decide why one fighter did not fight another at a given time. But the record books do not tell you why. If you want to gage the skills of a fighter at a particular period in his career who at the films of the fight. This Frazier crap and the WBA tournament is boring. And as someone else said on the site, "I am entitled to my opinion."

Pete: "Would have been, would not have been, if..." All the would haves, could haves, should haves and ifs are only out there because Frazier wasn't in the tournament and didn't fight the 70's contenders that have been mentioned a couple hundred times during this debate. What do we have on his contemporaries? Okay, Ali ducked Terry Daniels and Holmes ducked Jumbo Cummings. The point is, this debate, which is boring you so much (but which you have continued in your last post) is possible because Joe stayed out of the tournament when every single other contender was in it, and Joe "overlooked" some big bangers and clever boxers of the early-mid 70's when they all fought eachother and every other Champion (ummm, Ali?) defended against them. I'll admit that Frazier was one of the best of his era, and was unquestionably the best while Ali was retired, and did beat Ali---but there's no question that he took an easier path than he might have taken to win the six state title and unify it by beating Ellis---and he "missed" a number of savage power punchers that might have put him down on his seat like Foreman did nine times. I say "might have" because again, the fights never happened. He ended his career with fewer fights and fewer defenses than the all-time greats and for this reason, I think he lands in the second group (albeit high in the second group) when a discussion of the best ever is had. Against Lennox Lewis the fight was stopped too soon, Vitali would have probably won it. He is beating all the guys they are putting in front of him. What else can he do? It's not his fault if there aren't big talents (or there are no big talents) outta there. At the end of his career we'll have to use our immagination to know how he would have done against people like Frazier, Ali', Bonavena. It will be a matter of opinions.

Howard C.: Everytime I read someone saying "they're still going on about the WBA tournament and Frazier" I know that that guy is about to go on about the WBA tournament and Frazier. Thanks for proving my theory, Pete and Gerry. Some of you guys are facts sensitive. Someone posts a fact and you respond with your hearts and prejudices rather than your brains and logic. Noam posted the fact that Frazier refused to enter the WBA tournament, even though the other seven ranked boxers did enter. He posted the fact that Frazier instead opted to fight the unranked and underperforming Buster Mathis rather than face tough ranked fighters. He posted that the New York title was acknowledged only by six states and no where else in the world. Sad, yes, but nonetheless a fact. (I'd add that the New York Commission is a bunch of cronies and show ponies. How many of you guys like me who've been around would trust those turkeys?) Noam also posted that Frazier avoided having consecutive tough fights. Look at his record. Look what he did after Bonavena knocked him down twice. Look at Daniels and Stander and all the other patsies. So, again, fact.

Noam also posted that Frazier avoided having consecutive tough fights. Look at his record. Look what he did after Bonavena knocked him down twice. Look at Daniels and Stander and all the other patsies. So, again, fact.

No one is arguing that Frazier wasn't better than the other guys in the tournament. We just say that he hadn't proved it by then. It was a woulda, coulda, shoulda situation once again featuring Joe where he wanted to be deemed the title instead of earning it. He wanted it the EASY way. There's inferences to be drawn from the facts. Use your brains and logic to assess them. Not your hearts and prejudices. Some of you guys even tried to justify Frazier's second fight against Ellis - the infamous 'Weekend at Bernie's' showdown - as something to cherish. Some noses are growing longer out there.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>10/10/05 05:19:35 PM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Howard: How dare you disparage the &quot;Rumble Down Under.&quot; It was a Super Fight, pitting two former world champs scratching and clawing to get back to the title. One man, Smokin' Joe, the victor in their first match, the man who cold-cocked Jimmy with a single punch, trying to earn another chance at glory. Jimmy, trying to shrug off a horrific slump of losses and trying to prove he was still among the living, much less still a contender. One for the ages.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>10/10/05 09:41:10 AM</th>
<th>Joey</th>
<th>Canada</th>
<th>eh</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>he is beating all the guys they are putting in front of him. What else can he do? It's not his fault if there aren't big talents (or there are no big talents) outta there. At the end of his career we'll have to use our imaginaation to know how he would have done against people like Frazier, Ali', Bonavena. It will be a matter of opinions.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

| 10/10/05 05:19:35 PM | Howard and Angelo you guys still don't get it. Frazier stayed out of that WBA Tournament because he could make more money by staying out of it. Those other fighter's who fought in it did it because that was the only way the could make a decent purse. Is that Frazier's fault? With Ali out of the picture Joe Frazier was the biggest draw in boxing. Why should Frazier fight for the same purse amount as Karl Mildenberger, Jimmy Ellis, Thad Spencer, Leotis Martin, Ernie Terrell... These guys could not draw | Pete | Cleveland | N/A |

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>10/10/05 05:19:35 PM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron@yahoo.com</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Howard: How dare you disparage the &quot;Rumble Down Under.&quot; It was a Super Fight, pitting two former world champs scratching and clawing to get back to the title. One man, Smokin' Joe, the victor in their first match, the man who cold-cocked Jimmy with a single punch, trying to earn another chance at glory. Jimmy, trying to shrug off a horrific slump of losses and trying to prove he was still among the living, much less still a contender. One for the ages.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>10/10/05 09:41:10 AM</th>
<th>Joey</th>
<th>Canada</th>
<th>eh</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>he is beating all the guys they are putting in front of him. What else can he do? It's not his fault if there aren't big talents (or there are no big talents) outta there. At the end of his career we'll have to use our imaginaation to know how he would have done against people like Frazier, Ali', Bonavena. It will be a matter of opinions.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

| 10/10/05 05:19:35 PM | Howard and Angelo you guys still don't get it. Frazier stayed out of that WBA Tournament because he could make more money by staying out of it. Those other fighter's who fought in it did it because that was the only way the could make a decent purse. Is that Frazier's fault? With Ali out of the picture Joe Frazier was the biggest draw in boxing. Why should Frazier fight for the same purse amount as Karl Mildenberger, Jimmy Ellis, Thad Spencer, Leotis Martin, Ernie Terrell... These guys could not draw | Pete | Cleveland | N/A | flies with a jar of honey. The name of the game is PROFESSIONAL BOXING. They were not amateurs fighting for medals they were pros fighting for money. It is not that hard to understand.

One more thing a while back after much prodding Noam published the records of those fighters in the WBA Tournament prior to the Tournament. Most of them fought beat stiffs leading up to the Tournament or were soundly beaten Ali. Come on guys loosen up and get real. Frazier beat Ellis, Quarry, Bonevena after the WBA Tournament and made a hell of a lot more money than if he fought them in the Tournament, and so did they.

I guess eventually we would run out of topics. Maybe we are there now. Kent, thanks for your sentiments. I only mentioned the deaths when I first did to explain why I was delayed in responding to other posts. As you say, memories live on. The distressing time would be when you have more memories living on than living relatives. If we are lucky enough to live long enough, we’d also be unlucky enough to experience that change in balance. Every silver lining has a cloud, I suppose.

Fan. What do you want to talk about? Have you run out of ideas?

Since i have not spoken on this site for a while i kind of feel left out of the loop and am not real sure where to start on this topic, anyway in the past tarver jones fight, jones was very tentative and afraid to throw punches mainly due to the fear of getting hit with that left hand again, but when he did open up in the 4th and 5th rounds he was scoring and hitting tarver well, my question is do you believe it is possible for jones to still be a serious threat if he can just get over the fear of a knockout, he still has the hand speed and he still has the power, he is just afraid of that big punch... id appreciate some input on this subject if anybody would be willing to share their opinion, other than that i appreciate everyone who keeps coming to this site and sharing their opinion, i have not been able to get on to much because i am constantly training to go overseas again, but just letting everyone know that this site helps pass the time while i am gone, again thanks for supporting my father everyone and i hope to get more involved in these discussions later on.

Welcome back Johnathan and thanks again for your service to our country. I don't believe Jones is afraid of getting hit, it is just his style and he doesn't match up well with Tarver, who he did beat once by a close decision before he was knocked out and before losing their third fight recently by decision. Tarver, due to his left handed stance and also because he too is very fast, along with him being a tall fighter would be a hard fight any time they fought. I thought the fight was closer than the announcers were saying it was and even closer than the judges scored it as Jones was counter punching well in a lot of rounds but Tarver had the edge so the decision was fair. Tarver did enough to win by about two points. I don't know how it was scored without looking it up but I felt a lot of the rounds were close.

I really think that if Jones was afraid of getting hit, he wouldn't have fought Tarver again after getting knocked out. Remember too Jones was also knocked out by Glen Johnson before his second loss to Tarver. He showed a lot of heart by taking on a dangerous fighter like Tarver again.

Jones still has a lot of skills left but I think he should retire as he has accomplished a lot in his career so why risk getting hurt by continuing to fight? He has nothing left to prove.

Pete hit the nail on the head with his (latest) Smokin Joe Frazier post. Frazier had the smartest pound-for-pound money man in boxing history. Getting Joe only $20,000.00 less for fighting the easy Mathis than the $170,000.00 for fighting the WBA's Quarry, Ellis, and Bonavena, was pure financial wizardry.
was the same guy who made Joe lots of dosh out of the 'Weekend at Bernie's' fight against Ellis in Australia. Not even Don King could have sold that lemon. Joe's money guy is so good he could sell Gerry the Iraq War and Republicans.However, even Wall Street putting Joe's face on its version of Mt Rushmore together with the accompanying motto 'Easy Is Good & Profitable', doesn't get him a birth in my Top 10 heavies. Financial smarts doesn't matter for my list; the quality of opposition the fighter faced and didn't face does. The way Pete tells it Smokin Joe was competing against Bill Gates and Wall Street's Gordon Gekko instead of trying to be an all time great fighter.Howard C, what's wrong with you guy? Your post's drip of anger and sarcasm when someone writes post's you don't agree with. Loose up fella. Throughout life you are going to meet a lot of people who may disagree with you about something. When you react with sarcasm and anger it reflects poorly on you. There is nothing wrong with disagreeing with someone, but Howard C when someone disagrees with you take it personally. This board is not life and death, it is supposed to be interesting and entertaining. Ease up guy.I think a lot of the reason Frazier took certain fights and not others is because of his management structure. Realize that while his manager of record was Yank Durham and then later Eddie Futch, financially his career was run by a company called Cloverly. His career was financed by a group of investors, this company, and they had a lot to say about who Joe fought as they were in it to make a profit for their investment in Joe's career. Sorry Noam, but you sometimes use selective information to make some of your points. You did a list of the fighters Frazier fought before his fight with Mathis but a more accurate list would be to list who Joe fought for the year before the WBA tournament, which started in August of 1967, which earned Joe his number one ranking, which he lost in the WBA rankings for not entering the tournament. The fighters he fought for the prior year before the WBA tournament were as follows: Oscar Bonevena, Eddie Machen, Doug Jones, Jefferson Davis, George Johnson, and George Chuvalo. A more impressive list than the one Noam used for prior to the Mathis fight and I have a feeling a stronger group of opponents, except for Davis and Johnson, then a lot of the WBA tournament guys. I will have to take the time to do the list of the other fighters to see if this is true or not though. Also, if you consider that Frazier in the period after the WBA tournament took on Mathis, a strong opponent no matter what Joe says about him as Joe often would never give his opponents any credit, Bonevena (again), Jerry Quarry, Bob Foster, Jimmy Ellis, and the great Muhammad Ali. Again, as Pete pointed out, Joe beat three of the WBA guys for more money for him and his investors. Pete, Pete, Pete. I was replying to your post with humour. There was no anger in my post. I was focusing on you talking about Frazier being a smart money man when the debate was about his worth as a fighter. Some of you guys really do need to get some humour in your lives. Smile occasionally. Laugh. Have fun, Pete. Try not to take everything the wrong way. I was agreeing with you. Frazier was a wonderful money manager. He employed a wonderful money guy. I think Frazier was a wonderful fighter overflowing with courage. I hope he has a wonderful life and that the rumours about his health are wrong. But I believe he had flaws - particularly about who he fought and didn't fight - that places him below my top echelon. I can tell you this, too, Pete. There is much more anger towards Ali on this site than Frazier. The personal attacks on Ali were disgraceful. They went unprotested. One guy even laughed at Ali's medical condition and celebrated his shaking hands and slurred speech by congratulating Frazier on causing it. Want to talk about anger ? Well, nothing surpasses that for vitriol and hate. Now, can we get back to normal programing, Pete, by turning away from Frazier before we all cry with boredom. If it was me, Pete would come out in his monodrome tone, "Why are you talking about Frazier again" and then Pete would talk about Frazier (again and again and again). By the way, Kent, I can't accept your reasoning. Tune ups. Tune downs. Smart management. Cluey money guys. Couldn't fit the fight in. Ellis was in his prime down under. Marion Conners was a naturally born killer. Joe and Ken were best buddies. There was more money fighting Stander....... I've heard ALL the excuses for Joe not fighting certain guys. It doesn't cut it with me. It cuts it with others. My view is no more superior than yours. But repeating excuses time and time again won't change my view. And I've given up changing your view. I'm going to play one of my Carpenters records. Karen Carpenter is the only thing I like to hear over and over again.

I agree with every one of your arguments, Kent. I was misleading by saying that Joe didn't enter the WBA tournament and didn't fight Shavers, Norton, Lyle, et al. I was changing facts saying he fought Stander, Donald Duck, and Conners. Haven't you and Pete humiliated me enough with your steel trap minds and bulletproof logic ? Can we now move onto something else ? Please ?

As Jimmy Dorsey pointed out, Mathis was ranked by Ring Magazine when he fought for the title but some of the people here have said he wasn't ranked by the WBA or Ring Magazine in the top ten all. Lost, and rounded out the end of his Ring Magazine top ten tenure 7/69 #7 8/69 #7 9/69 #7 and 10/69 #9. he then dropped out of the ratings and stayed that way for the rest of his career. so he was in the Ring's World top ten a grand total of 11 months. take care!
Even Frazier ridicules the credentials of Mathis and Stander and Daniels and the others. So what does Kent do? He says that it doesn't matter because Frazier ridicules everyone. Frazier, like the Ring Magazine, like me, like Howard C, like Angelo, are all misleading (according to Kent). Kent doesn't believe any of us. I guess Kent doesn't want the truth. Kent thinks that Mathis and Connors and Stander and Daniels and all those others were killers. Whatever. Kent will believe what Kent wants to believe. Forget the Ring Magazine and Frazier's own recollections. Doesn't matter. Listen to Kent instead of them.

Mathis wasn't in the WBA tournament because he didn't deserve to be and wasn't ranked highly enough. Frazier chose to fight him, not the highly ranked guys. Perhaps it was smart money wise, but that doesn't detract from the FACT that he declined to enter the tournament to have three TOUGH elimination fights in a row against guys like Bonavena (who knocked Joe down twice and was unlucky to lose a disputed decision - hear that Pete?) and Quarry and Ellis. I don't doubt that he was better than them in one-off bouts, but I do doubt how he would have stood up fighting them in quick succession.

Kent plays woulda, coulda, and shouldas. He demands that we 'deem' unfought fights to Joe. If you listen to Kent, monumental upsets like Tyson and Douglas, Schmeling and Louis, Ali and Liston, Ali and Foreman, never, ever happen. So let's 'deem' Joe all of the many tough fights he never took and say that monumental upsets NEVER happen and Joe WOULDA beaten everyone without raising a sweat. Joe even handpicked his opponent for the New York State Title (the one recognized by only six states of America out of the entire world). He chose Mathis because, as Joe admits, Mathis was easy. Little wonder the New York Commission is in so much corruption trouble today that no one respects it. Letting contenders choose their own opponents. I'm surprised Bob Hope didn't get a shot.

When you get away from the Frazier topic you write with clarity and insight. I enjoyed reading your stories. So let's get away from the Frazier thing before it all boils over again.

In fact, I have to make sure my media application is sent by Friday for a card featuring former welterweight champion Vernon Forrest, so you kind of reminded me to take care of this or I wouldn't be able to attend.

What is strange is when someone at a fight card will look at my name tag and say, "oh, I have heard of you, I have read your stuff." It doesn't happen very often, but every once in a while. I still am suprised when it happens.

I've read some of your stuff too, Kent, and it's good reading. I can see you're a fan. It must be cool to be acknowledged in that sense, at least occasionally...

Mr. Noam, guy, you've made your argument regarding Frazier and the NYSAC in stone. What else can there be to say? I understand your point, I just don't agree with it. Is that allowable? Why rant, what purpose does it serve? ...

Some interesting stuff about Don King this past week. First, Rahman has declared bankruptcy coming into his fight with Klitschko. King wants half of his purse and is suing Rahman.

Second, Chris Byrd complained that King is preventing him from fights. Byrd and Toney are tentatively set for late January, I guess. Isn't it something that this guy King, who began sharking fighters in the early 70s, is still shaping careers, usually in a negative sense, more than 30 years later? ...

Jimmy D, the Quarryologist. Always good to see your posts. I think Ring Magazine owes you a research grant ...

Lastly, I thought it was very cool for Jonathan Quarry to put up a post. I remain a very big fan of the family, and one of the best things here by far is that they occasionally post. Good luck to you, Again, anyone interested in contributing photos or whatever, the Yahoo Group is Irish Jerry Quarry. Thanks.

Jon.

Gerry, boy what a piece of you know what Don King is, a real vulture. King owes fighters more than he could ever give back so to sue Rahman for part of his earnings is downright wrong, but what else is new? I have seen King at fight cards but I have never met him. I was sitting next to a local reporter here in California and he was talking to Carl King, Don's son, he asked Carl how much his fighter was getting for the fight and Carl said, "none of your damn business!" Carl then walked away from the reporter.

He could have told the reporter no without being rude, such as saying the information is confidential, but I guess being a jerk runs in the King family.

King reportedly destroyed Tim Witherspoon's career by, in a sense, blackballing him. King has lots of power in the sport, much like agents do in pro team sports. I think Don King is possibly the greatest promoter ever---and I don't just mean boxing---give King anything to promote, and he'll get it done---concerts, sports, etc. I'll be the first to admit that he might not be a "good guy" as he's been imprisoned for manslaughter, brought up on charges for illicit financial/tax transactions, and alleged to treat fighters unfairly. Others have said he is the biggest leech ever. Even if all of this is true, and some of it isn't even disputed by King himself---it doesn't detract from his accomplishments and ability to sell a fight. Yes Kent, King owes more to boxers than they owe to him, by a wide margin. But King was a big part of bringing pro boxing into the mainstream in the 70's---and making fights into "events" like Zaire and Manilla. Without King's wild imagination, I have a feeling things would have stayed more contained and these world wide title "events" would have been in Vegas or New York---not on other continents. I'm not by any means defending King as a person---I don't know the man----but he could sell an event like no one else. When King is dead and gone, I have serious doubt that Carl King will just simply take over. I think it will be a new era in boxing probably.

It's difficult to avoid the conclusion that all of boxing is corrupt in some way. All these titles seem only designed to get their alphabet masters sanctioning fees and five star travel and accommodation. It stinks.

Imagine if there was only one title in each division. There'd be fewer sightseeing tours for administrators, referees, judges, and officials (and boxing writers, too). That's why there's so many titles. Don King and his ilk probably have their fingers in all of their pockets.

Larry Holmes doesn't like Don King. No one seems to. But Holmes also says that King has made many boxers lots of money that they otherwise would not have got. He seemed to be saying that King has helped more than he has hurt. I'm not so sure.

Guys, yes I am sure there has been run off that has benefitted boxers from what King has promoted but the man still has no integrity. He would walk over his own mother to make money. He is not one of my favorite people in boxing, to say the least.

Guys, yes I am sure there has been run off that has benefitted boxers from what King has promoted but the man still has no integrity. He would walk over his own mother to make money. He is not one of my favorite people in boxing, to say the least.

Noam: I have a feeling people in the boxing circle either love or hate King without much middle ground. As fans, we can take a middle ground because we're detached from it all. But if you're a fighter, manager, trainer, arena owner, politician who is trying to get a fight in your town---the list goes on---either King has made you very happy or very angry. He has generated millions and millions of dollars, much for himself but a bundle for a bunch of other parties too. Meanwhile, I get the feeling if you're on his "wrong" or "bad" side, he'll screw you like there's no tomorrow. I don't think he's a saint that treats everyone kindly. I think he'll shower you with goodwill if he likes you and make things miserable if he doesn't. If I were involved in boxing as more than a fan, I suppose I'd try to be King's best friend.

Going over the rankings, of my mags 1965-75. One particular bout really bothered me, The Billy Daniels 1975 heavyweight bout, that was staged with Spider Rico (Pedro Lovell). The damn California Commission fined poor Billy $400, for not putting up much of a match (Which was probably twice $ Billy was getting for the farce!!!) I would have to say the California Commission should have fined themselves three times that much for letting such a match occur in the first place, Daniels was ko'd in One, And luckily he was not killed or permanently injured.

Without having any evidence other than guessing, I'd speculate that boxing is probably the most corrupt sport of all. Of all sports, boxing has the most risks, the most drama, the X factor, and it all ends up to offering the participants the most money. Enter Don King types. I know that he's not the type of guy who you would entrust the life of your most cherished person or the security of your most valuable possession. However, I would speculate that he's made more boxers rich than poor. That is what Larry Holmes says, even though he doesn't like the guy. Larry says that Holmes has done more good for boxers than bad. And he should know. Ali is often merited with having transformed boxing to the money sport it is. But King was there too. Whatever we think of him, he IS a great promoter. I don't think he's ripped me or you off. The boxers he (allegedly) ripped off got rich anyway. Are any of the other promoters more honest? Probably not. Fan of Fandom and the other Fan should be best positioned to offer an opinion. I'd like to know what Massimo believes, too. Where is he?

My last post should read that "Larry says that King" and not "Larry says that Holmes." Kent, how much more weight have you lost? Are you still swimming? Today I swam 20 x 50 freestyle, 16 x 50 breaststroke, and then 4 x 50 freestyle to finish. I've had googgle eyes all day. I'm doing this at least three times a week, usually five times, to lose weight and have been doing it for two months. I've firmed up, but haven't lost weight. I haven't gained any weight either. The reason? I'm eating too much and drinking too much beer. Unfortunately, sadly, regrettably, I'm not going to lose weight by only exercising. I must diet too. That is the hard part for me. I'm a natural born glutton. If I didn't exercise I'd be bigger than Butterbean. And if I didn't eat so much, I'd give Mark Spitz a run for his money. (In my dreams.)

Noam, it is hard to ignore that King's greed has had some positive side effects on boxing but a man is only as good as his name and his word and since King's name and word are "MUD," he can't be a very good man. Noam, I have gained five pounds in the last two weeks as I have not been swimming as they don't heat the pool where I live so I am going to have to find a health club with a heated pool. I have kept up my hour walk, five days a week and my karate lessons twice a week but like you, I recently fell into a trap of not eating right again. Which means I can keep exercising and still not lose weight. Too bad! I wish heavy smokers should have to put up with the attitude people have towards people who need to lose weight. Most automatically assume, if they don't know someone smokes, that thinner people are in better shape than heavier people, if they look like they are even if they are smoking like a smokestack.Luckily, I have never smoked in my life and Noam my guess is you don't smoke either or you smoke very little. I would be surprised that you could swim as much as you if were a smoker.Hey Jimmy D, thanks for showing me the picture of Bobby Quarry on E bay.Hey Bob Q, where are you? I don't have your number anymore and I have moved.Funny, I once asked Bob Quarry what kind of diet did he have when he was fighting and he told me, "I never worried about having to lose weight as I was a heavyweight and I didn't have to make a weight limit."Bob is lucky though that even into his forties, he doesn't have to diet and he still doesn't weigh more than 220 pounds at about 6'1", at least the last time I saw him, about ten months ago.I'm quite sure that soccer is corrupt, at least in Italia, certain teams (especially Juventus) are always treated much better by referees than other teams. There is huge money involved. Regarding boxing I'm optimistic about the honesty of the fighters. Maybe I'm ingenious, but I don't think there are fighters payed to lose (or fighters get payed to lose). Sometimes I see farces (Tyson-Etienne, Tyson-Savarese), but I don't think this has to do with the regularity of the fights, but with the heart of some fighters. On the other hand, I have often doubts about the honesty of some judges. For instance, whoever saw the Ali'-Bonavena fight knows that it was close. Well, two judges had Ali' ahead 12-2 and 10-3-1 at the time of the stoppage !!!!!!! How is that possible? The other judge had it 8-5-1 for Ali' and this is still hardly acceptable in my book, but at least I can give this judge the benefit of the doubt! | that replaces eating, or maybe the cigarettes kill their taste buds and they don't enjoy food—but anyway, women smokers I've talked to told me they gain weight when they quit. My wife (who is thin) is not a smoker, thankfully.
Neither am I. We hope to grow old together. Of course, everyone goes somehow, so maybe I'll get hit by a bus or maybe James "Quick" Tillis will KO me in a bar—but I figure stay away from smoking and at least I reduce my lung cancer chances!

Kent and Noam stick to the exercise program, and try watching you diet it is very difficult to lose weight if you just do the one and not the other.Noam, regarding your drinking to much beer. You will never become healthy if you drink too much beer. I saw a program about Alcoholics Anonymous on TV recently. They have great success with people who drink too much. You might want to check it out. You have nothing to lose except pounds. Good luck.

Noam, regarding your drinking to much beer. You will never become healthy if you drink too much beer. I saw a program about Alcoholics Anonymous on TV recently. They have great success with people who drink too much. You might want to check it out. You have nothing to lose except pounds. Good luck.

Kent, a lot of diseases and health problems are in the genes. Eye afflictions like macular degeneration are passed from generation to generation.
Same with heart problems, etc. You can pre-empt things with an unhealthy lifestyle, or delay the onset with a healthy lifestyle. However, morgues are filled with skinny dead guys who ran marathons every day and didn't drink, smoke, or take drugs. "There lies the healthiest, fittest man in Orange County, is something morgue assistants would often say. Pete - my problem is I like food too much. I don't drink enough beer to be an alcoholic. But the problem with beer is that people usually have unhealthy food when drinking. I like healthy food, but too much of it. Exercising make me hungry, too, as does looking at food on television, or watching someone else eating, or going shopping, or ..... you've got the idea.

I read through much of that whole Joe Frazier ducking debate, and I think you guys need to get off of Ali's nuts when talking about the Fight Of The Century. Ali was as prepared for that fight as he could ever have been. His hand speed was excellent, and he gained a lot of power while exiled. He had only lost a little bit of speed, but in my opinion, gained more than he lost. The problem wasn't that he was "rusty", the problem was that he had a prime Joe Frazier in front of him. And the fight wasn't even that close. Ali lands punches, but misses quite a bit, while Frazier lands hard shots on a regular basis. It didn't ever look like Ali ever hurt Frazier once, while Frazier battered Ali all over the ring on two occasions.I rank Ali as number one all time, but you guys really need to stop being nuthuggers.

Hey, how about some of you other guys commenting on Roy Jones Junior verses Antonio Tarver.
IS COOL JERRY QUARRY'S SON, JONATHAN, JOINS US ON THIS BOARD AND HE WANTED TO KNOW WHAT WE THOUGHT ABOUT THAT RECENT FIGHT. I KNOW YOU GUYS ARE AVID BOXING FANS SO AT LEAST SOME OF YOU MUST HAVE SEEN THAT FIGHT. HOW ABOUT RESPONDING TO JONATHAN'S COMMENTS. SO FAR I AM THE ONLY ONE WHO HAS.

I didn't see the Jones v Tarver fight, but rematches rarely overturn the first fight result. Usually the loser of the first fight is a bigger loser in the rematch (especially with guys like Marciano). I wonder whether Jones paid the price for playing games with his metabolism - moving up and down in weights - perhaps aided by medicinal substances, that did his body no good.

Willard - I don't know of anyone on this site who doesn't acknowledge that Frazier's win over Ali was his crowning achievement and well deserved. Joe was great in that fight. However, it is appropriate to consider the effects that the three years plus out of the ring had on Ali. Perhaps he should have had another fight under his belt to remove the ring rust before fighting Joe. My guess is that he probably would have lost anyway.

Let's consider the reverse. Frazier is out of the ring for 3.5 years and Ali wasn't. They fight. Who would win? Ali would, in my opinion.

And if Ali was never stripped of his title, I don't think Joe would ever have been the champion. In that event Joe's best wins would have been over Quarry or Ellis. The Vietnam War, some of us believe, had its effects in many ways.

Something else to consider, too, Williard. That fight against Ali was not for Joe. He spent time in hospital and had 11 months off before fighting Daniels and Stander - two unranked guys. After a year off Joe needed two VERY easy tune ups. How would he have coped with over THREE years off!

Well, Ali had 3.5 years off. His tune ups? October 1970 he fought the 4th ranked Quarry. Six weeks later he fought the 3rd ranked Bonavena (I'm using the Ring's annual rankings). Three months later he fights Frazier, the champion.

So, after 3.5 years off, Ali fought the champion and the 3rd and 4th ranked guys in the space of only 19 weeks (133 days). Every six weeks he fought the toughest in the world. He confidently backed his ability and there were no easy Stander or Daniels type tune ups for him, even after 3.5 years off.

With Ali's career, unlike careers of others, there are only two 'woulda, coulda, shoulda' type questions. What 'woulda' happened if Ali was never stripped of his title? And what 'woulda' happened in a rematch with Foreman?

Frazier didn't duck anyone. He fought Quarry over Lyle because Quarry beat Lyle. I don't see the point of him fighting Norton, because Frazier repeatedly KO'd Norton in sparring. The fight wouldn't be that good. And finally, if Frazier ducks fighters, why would he go and get whooped by Foreman AGAIN?

That's a debate that's been had time and again, Willard, and neither side shifts ground. If we haven't been able to alter opinions with all the hot air of the debate thus far, it's a waste of breath trying again. Where some see smoke, others see ducks behind the smokescreen.

Welcome Willard. We've become a tolerant society here with a diversity of views where we all respect each other. There were rough patches in the past, with all of us contributing to that situation, but happily we are trying harder to get on. I'm enjoying it more.

You say that Joe had to fight Quarry instead of Lyle because Jerry beat Lyle. That rule is too simplistic. Lyle and Shavers beat Ellis, yet Joe fought Ellis a second time. Sam Wyatt beat Zyglicwicz. Joe faced Zyglicwicz, not Wyatt. Jimmy James Rossette beat Doyle. Joe fought Doyle instead. Zora Folley twice beat Davis. Henry Cooper beat Davis. Joe fought Davis instead of Cooper and Polley. The list grows and suddenly, before our eyes, the rule becomes the exception.

You also say that Frazier cleaned Norton up sparring and that's why they didn't fight. Joe doesn't use that as an explanation in his book. He says that there was no money in fighting Norton.
Uhmmm. Was there more money for Joe to fight Ellis the second time? Stander and Daniels, too? But let's use your explanation, Wilard, and not Joe's. Wouldn't Joe have cleaned up Stander and Daniels sparring? Yet he fought them and not Norton. Don't forget that Ali used to clean Ellis's clock sparring. Yet Ali fought Ellis. Come to think of it, Ali used to clean a guy called Larry Holmes up when they sparred. Yet Larry beat Ali. If someone really wants to fight the best, they find a way of doing it. Likewise, if they don't want to fight the best, they'll always try to find a plausible explanation to excuse it. Problem is, those explanations don't always hold water. In fact, Joe's explanations are leaking so much water, ducks could procreate in it.

Someone mentioned that a referee or boxing historian or someone kept saying that fighters were ducking Frazier. What's Frazier gonna do? Drag them into the ring and fight? If they won't fight, there is nothing he can do about it.Well, Cosell, let's hear what you have to say about Shavers and Lyle. How would they match up against Frazier?

Howard, it was pretty clear that Ali was more than finished when he fought Larry. Had Ali & Holmes met when both fighters were at the top of their game, I think it would have been a great contest, a classic! As for Frazier's opponents (Doyle, Zglewicz) he fought these guys on the way up. They were mid-card players but all fighters, if they are managed properly are brought along strategically. The fact remains that Frazier fought the two best fighters of that era...Ali & Foreman and managed to beat one of them, so...

I'm an Ali fan, but I'm the first to say "no excuses" for his loss to Frazier.
Ali had the long layoff, yet he beat a couple very good fighters leading up to the match against Frazier. My opinion is that Ali underestimated Frazier's ability. Ali was undefeated—and had a knack for calling the round that fights would end. He beat the legendary Liston early in his career and beat highly ranked Jerry Quarry after being out of the ring for over three years. I think he figured Frazier would give him some resistance, but he would overcome it to win a very easy decision, or win by TKO. Instead, he found out that Frazier fought like he was possessed—was harder to hit than the films made it look—had no quit in him—and was truly world class. Ali had counted on speed in the mid-60's and now that speed was diminished. Suddenly, he was human and Frazier was having his way. The cherry on the sundae was that knockdown. Frazier got it done, no excuses. Now, I do take exception to you saying that Ali didn't hurt Frazier in their fights. Manilla? Willard, Frazier's head and face were a different shape at the end of that fight than at the beginning. And watch the second fight again. Ali might not have "hurt" Frazier, but he clearly outpointed him.

Howard C, name your top 10 welterweight champions of all times.
on the confidence he had in his legendary ability than anything. Ali underestimated Joe, and also Norton and Spinks and others as well. I don't think he expected Jerry to lift him five feet off the canvas in their second fight when he was trash-talking him either. He had to respect Jerry's ability against the ropes and therefore could never finish him.I would add that Joe had a REAL urge to pound Ali's bones in their fights. But more than that, Joe was truly a big-time talent. When they both nearly died in their third fight, I'm sure Ali was convinced of that... Kent, I responded to Jonathan also.Ali of this talk of exercise has me jonesing to resume myself. I'm a pretty trim 185, but my foot and ankle have been healing slowly now for about six weeks. I'm not a very good couch potato ...I did not see Tarver-Jones, but sure heard Tarver talk about it. There's no question he had the more confidence of the two. Jones looks out of gas mentally and should quit.Considering he's one of the very best in recent memory, I was surprised how quickly he dropped from the high status he had. Tarver, however has proven his talent also, clearly. Thanks.|10/17/05 09:50:04 AM|Willard|There||a@a.com|||10|Angelo, I was referring to the first Ali/Frazier fight. In that fight, it didn't look like Ali hurt Frazier once. |10/17/05 09:54:32 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|I don't agree with Angelo about (or regarding) the second Ali'-Frazier fight. I think Ali' did hurt Frazier in the second round (but Joe was not defenseless) but that after 12 round the fight was very close. Opinions.|10/17/05 09:58:15 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|In Frazier-Ali' 1 I think Ali' did hurt Frazier a little in the ninth round. At the beginning of the tenth round it seemed like Ali' was going to win, but at that point Frazier's heart changed the cards on the table. |10/17/05 11:39:05 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Willard: Agreed, in the first fight, though Frazier absorbed punishment that later kept him in the hospital, he wasn't ever in serious trouble or "hurt" in the sense of being hit by individual hard punches. The cumulative affect was tough on Frazier later, but he shook off the punches the night of the fight. Massimo: The second Ali-Frazier fight was close, but in my opinion, objectively, Ali won it on points. I think it was close enough to be competitive, but not close enough to argue that Frazier won. Ditto for Ali-Norton II. I don't get when people say "Norton won all three fights." Norton won the first one, and you could make an intelligent appeal that he won the third, or that it should have been a draw---but I think Ali did enough to win the second one. Close? Yes, but if you asked judges who have never seen these fighters, and have no bias, who won, my guess is that most would say Ali outclassed Norton and based on ring generalship if nothing else, won the fight. One issue I had with Norton in the trilogy, including in Yankee Stadium (III.), is that he sometimes swung wildly, like an amateur. When I score a fight, this matters to me. Ali always looked very controlled, patient and deliberate. As well, Ali seemed purposeful against Norton---yes, fighting defensively more than I'd like to see, but let's face it--when someone is wild, you tend to have a defensive posture. Ali fought well by covering and backing up, finding Norton with jabs and avoiding Norton's biggest punches. Ali did not ever go down, and I don't believe he suffered any cuts either. He had the broken jaw in their first fight and basically absorbed a lot of body punches in the third fight, and shook them off. I belive he fought about 11 rounds in the first fight with a broken jaw, and Norton couldn't take him out. And no, I don't belive Norton's assertion that the jaw was broken in the 12th round. In any case, Norton did not win three fights against Ali. The record shows that he was 1-2. And Ali haters could make a nice case for "should have been" 2-1, but it's a joke to say Ali never beat the guy. | far as Norton goes, I think they should have ended 1-1-1 against each other.

10/17/05 04:55:08 PM| charles anderson | ark. | ctjjandfam@aol.com | 10 | great to see jonathan's post. i wrote him a personal note, since my son is in the military, i am so proud of him and GOD is watching over him. roy looked like to me he was to worried about getting hit instead of hitting tarver. both are great champions, i hope roy will retire. now what do you guys think about my fellow arky. jermaine talor's rematch with hopkins. i think it will be a barn burner with taylor by k.o. (what did you think i would say)

10/17/05 05:02:47 PM| noam | same | same | 10 | Joe's doctor might have something to say about whether Frazier was hurt against Ali in that first fight. Frazier spent several months in hospital recovering and he was unable to fight a viable opponent for almost two years. No doubt that Joe won that fight, but he wasn't unscathed.

Frazier v Ali fight 2. Ali hurt Frazier in round 2 and Joe acknowledges in his book (page 146) that "as I struggled to get myself together I caught a break. Perez (referee) thought he heard the bell ending the round, and stepped between Clay and me. Then the timekeeper got Perez's attention and shouted up to him that the bell had not sounded. By the time the round resumed, I had recovered." Anyone who thinks that Frazier wasn't hurt in Ali 3 needs a seeing eye dog. He put in an extraordinarily brave performance but he was badly hurt. Joe admits that himself in his book.

Willard asks about Frazier against Lyle and Shavers. The outcome depends on the circumstances of the fight. If Joe was coming in off patsies like Conners or Zygulwicz or Daniels or Stander or Ellis (the one that was wheeled into Australia) then I'd expect him to win. However, if Bonavena could knock Joe down twice in his prime and nearly stop him, and if Ali was capable of almost stopping him (round 2, fight 2), and if some guy called Bruce could knock him down, then there are no 'givens' with Lyle or Shavers. Both could knock Joe dead - even in his prime.

Upsets happen regularly in boxing and the slow starting Joe was always vulnerable to an early stoppage. If Joe had hard lead up fights before Shavers or Lyle, then I'd expect one of these guys to cause an upset. Joe took a long time to recover from tough fights and he'd come in weakened. As I said, if Oscar caught Joe twice, Lyle or Shavers only have to catch him once and the smoke would be extinguished.

Joe got knocked down 11 times in his relatively short career. once every 19.45 rounds, once every 3.3 fights. Lyle and Shavers were just the guys to test his vulnerability. And anyone who declares categorically that Lyle and Shavers had no chance against Frazier have forgotten the lessons of history, especially the first Foreman/Frazier fight.

Upsets happen, usually when very big punchers are fighting guys vulnerable to knocked-downs.

Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville | 10 | Noam, Joe was hospitalized after Ali 1 because of high blood pressure. He stayed there until the problem stablized. So it was more a constitutional problem (brought on by the Ali fight) than an injury caused by the fight itself. Sorry to be pedantic about it.

Oh, and whilst Joe was hurt against Ali in fight 2, the second round, he wasn't going to be stopped. If Ali couldn't stop Frazier until the 14th in fight 3, there was no stoppage coming in the second fight.

Pete, wants my top welterweights.

1. Sugar Ray Robinson
2. Henry Armstrong.

The rest? I'm not sure about the order but the contenders are Ray Leonard, Griffith, Napoles, Cuevas, Trinidad, Hearns (began as a welter), Basilio, Jimmy McLarnin, Mickey Walker, Kid Gavilan, Vernon Forest.

I consider Barney Ross more a lightweight guy, Whittaker lightweight as well, De Lay Hoya began as a super featherweight, and Duran (while he had highs and lows as a welterweight - both against Leonard), his place in history is more as a lightweight. Thanks.

With the Taylor v Hopkins rematch coming up i was hoping to hear some opinions on how the fight will end up, i am curious as to see if Hopkins will try to start fast this time, or even go for a knockout as to not leave the fight in the judges hands, or is hopkins at the point where it just isn't there anymore, is this going to be the same situation as jones v tarver where hopkins will come back for the fight and lose convincingly, i am just hoping to hear some opinions on this fight, other then that everyone take care and for everybody that responded to my last post thank you very much, also mr anderson thank you for the e-mail and sorry to drag this on but i still have to say and my dad would probably kill me if he ever had known this, but my favorite baseball team the whitesox are in the world series.... sorry pops i know you are a dodger fan. Take care everyone and god bless.

Jonathan and Charles, I am picking Taylor by decision over Hopkins. Taylor has youth on his side and it is time for a changing of the guard.Hopkins has had a great career and he is one of the best the middleweights have ever had but his time, I believe, is past.Jonathan, I am a Angels and Dodgers fan but the White Sox are the best team the American League has to offer and quite likely better than any team in the National League as well.Just like your dad Jerry would let you know it that you like the White Sox better than our Dodgers. I, a life time Angels fan thought that one play, when the umpire ruled the catcher dropped the ball on a third strike and the batter made it on base and he was able to score, that the catcher really didn't catch it and my fellow Angels fans would not be happy with me saying it but I believe the call was fair and the better team won the right to go to the world series.I think it has been over forty years since the White Sox have been in a world series so this is a special event and I will be rooting for them to win.The Angels had a good season and it is always worth it if they find a way to be better than the Yankees.

Jonathan, you are quite the sports fan, i like that. kent, you are a great guy.you always project a positive image, for this site and i consider you a friend.

Jonathan, you are quite the sports fan, i like that. kent, you are a great guy.you always project a positive image, for this site and i consider you a friend.

Noam, first off, he was in the hospital because of his high blood pressure, like that other poster said. And it wasn't several months. It was about one month.When he fought Bonavena, he was green. He had something like 11 professional fights. He wasn't in his prime.Actually, I believe it was 10 knockdowns, not 11. And 8 were at the hands of George Foreman. To say that he's weak against big punchers is ridiculous. Foreman was one of the 3 hardest punchers in heavyweight history. You also forget the fact that he got up after EVERY SINGLE knockdown. Your boy Muhammad Ali would have had the same fate as Norton and Frazier if he had fought Foreman like they did.I'd also like to add that Ali didn't escape unscathed, either. He couldn't walk right, and was urinating blood after their first fight, and was almost killed in the third one. He hit a blind Joe Frazier with 1000 punches in the last 3 rounds of Manila, and HE wanted to quit the fight. He told Dundee to cut his gloves off at the end of Round 14. That fight also is the main reason why Ali is in the condition he is today.

Noam - Joe's high blood pressure was exacerbated by the fight. He says so himself. You should buy your man Joe's autobiography because it's a good read. Joe admits (in the book) he felt exhausted and drained and he lost 10 to 15 pounds fighting Ali. Joe says he couldn't stand and couldn't urinate and couldn't walk after the fight. Blood pressure wasn't the cause of those impairments. His eyes were puffed and sensitive to light. So they kept the shades drawn for him. For relief Joe had to stick his head in a sink filled with ice. His body shut down after the fight. That was the diagnosis. He couldn't leave the hotel room.
Luke's Hospital treated by Dr James Giuffre where he was laid on a bed of ice and where he hallucinated in his sleep. Joe was in the hospital for at least two weeks. Joe even says that he released information saying he was only hospitalized from blood pressure because he didn't want anyone to know he was injured. The book's called Smokin' Joe - The Autobiography. By the way, Joe was knocked down 11 times...once by Mike Bruce, twice by Bonavena, and eight times by Foreman. Knockdowns are knockdowns, green, yellow or blue. Anyways, what are your top 10 heavies, Willard?

Joe should be proud of the effort he put in, and you should be proud of him, too, despite the loss. But Ali won fight 3, same as Frazier won fight 1. It's all in the history books. Regards.

I'm a lifelong Pittsburgh Pirates fan, and now we have Jim Tracey (former Dodgers Skipper) managing us! I'm not thinking World Series---but it would be nice to flirt with .500 and not be out of contention in June! I think Jim Leyland, one of the best Pirates managers ever, came from the White Sox organization. And if I recall, so did Gene Lamont. Thank you for your service to our country---and that comes from my heart---a sincere thanks for looking out for me, my wife and one year old baby. What you're doing literally means the world to us.

I don't have Liston or Tyson in my top ten because heart is the missing ingredient to go with their great physical skills. Holyfield's superior courage would prevail, even prime verses prime. Lewis' height advantage would give him the nod over the middle of the pack, Frazier, Marciano, and Dempsey but he would not be that much of a favorite as any of them could catch his chin napping with their power. Tunney beat Dempsey twice in the ring, a great feat but Dempsey was on the way down but Tunney might not have been able to do it prime verses prime but it would always be a tough fight for Dempsey. A lot of people don't realize that Tunney only lost one fight in about fifty career fights, as a light heavyweight to Harry Greb, which he avenged his loss later, a great record. Holmes' great jab would get him into the later rounds versus Foreman, so I rate him above George F, and Holmes would wear him down for the win. I don't see anyone, prime verses prime, having better boxing skills and power combined, despite his smaller size than some of the guys on the list than Joe Louis. The only one being Ali, the best of the best. It is hard to leave off someone like Jack Johnson, the absolute best of his era with great boxing skills.

I don't see anybody better than Charles and Walcott, in any era to take their spots with the best of the best.

Here is my top 10 Heavyweight champs:
#1 Ali
#2 Dempsey
#3 Louis
#4 Liston
#5 Marciano
#6 Foreman
#7 Frazier
#8 Tyson
#9 Holmes
#10 Tunney

I don't include Jack Johnson because I have not seen enough of quality films to make an objective decision about him. Although not a champion, I could say the same about Sam Langford.

I like your lists. I would rate Frazier just outside the top ten, or possibly at #10? I can't see ranking him above Sonny Liston. However, Kent, I think you've ranked Lewis awful high. Devastating KO losses to Oliver McCall and Hasim Rahman??? Higher than Liston? Higher even than Frazier? If Frazier lands the left hook flush on Lewis, they'd be counting to Y3K!

You can always tell a racist. They begin the conversation saying "I'm not a racist but .......", and then they make some racist comment. Same with Ali-haters guys. They begin by saying "Ali is my #1 all time great but ......." and then they make some hateful statement about him like "Ali's got Frazier to thank for his condition today." But there's a new trend. You know when an Ali hater is bursting at the seams to vent some hate. They say "Why don't you stop talking about your favourite subject of Ali and Frazier" and then the hater talks on and on about Ali and Frazier. Sans Pete. Amazing. Funny, too.

You can always tell a racist. They begin the conversation saying "I'm not a racist but ......." and then they make some racist comment. Same with Ali-haters guys. They begin by saying "Ali is my #1 all time great but ......." and then they make some hateful statement about him like "Ali's got Frazier to thank for his condition today." But there's a new trend. You know when an Ali hater is bursting at the seams to vent some hate. They say "Why don't you stop talking about your favourite subject of Ali and Frazier" and then the hater talks on and on about Ali and Frazier. Sans Pete. Amazing. Funny, too.

Although Liston destroyed Patterson twice, Foreman did the same to Frazier. I think Patterson would have to ranked higher than Walcott or Charles.

So what if I don't like Ali? You and some other guys have made it very clear you don't like Frazier. At least I give Ali credit, where you guys try and tear down Frazier's career as much as you can. I think it's about time you guys forgive Frazier for beating Ali.

Also, Noam, Ali was worse off after the third fight. While Frazier was singing songs at the after fight party, Ali was in his hotel room bent to one side, saying things like he felt like he was on fire. Here are a few comments from his fight doctor, Ferdie Pacheco:

"It was at the very top, the tip top of a slow murder," Pacheco said. "Do you think after the beating he took that day in Manila he went home happy and had chocolate ice cream? He goddamn near died. It's the reason he's a shambing, neurological wreck."

"He thought he was dying," Pacheco said. "He was at the ends of exhaustion. He was having trouble staying awake between rounds."

You are the #1 name caller on this board. If you know anything about boxing besides your Ali-Frazier ramblings you have not demonstrated it. When people disagree with you, you become angry and try and make it personal. You behave like your 8 years old. Your sarcasm is not funny, it just shows you to be an angry judgemental person. Your diatribe has driven interesting people off this site.
I don't tell everyone what to do

#2 You are the #1 name caller on this board

#3 If you know anything about boxing besides your Ali - Frazier ramblings you have not demonstrated it

#4 When people disagree with you, you become angry and try and make it personal. You behave like your 8 years old

#5 Your sarcasm is not funny, it just shows you to be an angry judgemental person.

#6 Your diatribe has driven interesting people off this site

#7 You have no new insights. You have been writing the same BS over and over again and again. It's boring guy
tendencies i knew his style quite well, but i feel that in todays heavyweight division my dad Jerry would have been champ, Vitali yes is strong but after watching him fight i dont think he would have gotten away with those robotic movements, especially against a counter puncher, yes height and reach would have been an issue but vitali in my opinion is a little too plodding and slow i will get more in depth with the rest of the division but i dont have the time, but i will say its not as fun to watch the heavyweight division as it used to be.|10/18/05 05:59:19 PM|Pete|Cleveland|||10|Howard C have you no shame? Don't drag Noam into this. Noam can fight his own battles. I was referring to you as the name caller. Didn't you call me a jerk today? As a matter of fact earlier today I suggested you read Noam's and Kent's posts to learn something about boxingRegarding Frazier, I saw a new show about him on TV about a month ago. He was walking okay no one had to assist him. Granted he had a toe removed because of diabetes and he does have a limp. But needing assistance to walk, and a wheelchair to get on and off planes what is your source for this claim? Did you witness it?Regarding my top 10 welterweight champions you will have to wait for that. In recent weeks I published my top ten lightweights and today I published my top 10 heavyweights. Quite frankly I regard time spent corresponding with you as less than fulfilling. You are very boringHoward C, once more leave Noam out of this. Noam is not a name caller. Don't try and sully Noam's character by linking him with you.Charles, Patterson really did have a glass jaw. He was knocked down more than any heavyweight champion. At his best he had skills that approached those of Charles and Walcott but I think both of them could take a punch much better than Patterson.I doubt if Patterson could have stayed as long with fighters like Marciano and Louis as Charles and Walcott did. Patterson was just not as strong as either of them.Also, hey thanks for the compliments. We have been corresponding for quite a while and you guys here, especially the long time posters such as yourself, are my friends.Your top 15 list is very reasonable, but maybe Massimo Schmeling and Massimo Baer could deserve to be included in it. I'm not sure. Maybe. Which do you think are Muhammad Ali's 5 greatest fights? Thanks. Cheers.Ali is the best heavy I've seen, even if I didn't like him as a person. Louis, the greatest champ ever, I'd put second to Ali. Marciano was a devastating and undefeated champion, as tough as anybody, is top five at worst. Tunney was also undefeated as a heavyweight, and just a class act out of the ring. Ali lauded Tunney for his use of movement, he was unquestionably better than flat-foot Dempsey, so I call Tunney top five also. The last top fiver on my list is Jack Johnson, who outclassed his competition with reach, defense and quicks. He was as much a revolution in his day as Ali was in his.The next five I have include the undefeated champion Jeffries, who was a world-class athlete at 6'3 and 230 pounds, Sonny Liston, the bad Bear, Mike Tyson and his lightning-quick dynamite, Dempsey, the white Tyson of his day and popular superstar, and I guess I'd give the last spot to Lennox Lewis, who in his prime, was clearly the best heavy in the last 15 years.Massimo makes a great case for both Schmeling and Baer, both clearly top 20 guys. Of course, cases can made made, and have been, that anyone of Holmes, Foreman and Frazier could sneak into the top ten, I just don't agree that they do. I'm also not as high on Holyfield, who I put near Norton in the top 20. A lot is made of how newer guys would pound oldtimers, but this is not fair or is it the whole story. You also have to take the new guys back to the past and compare them to the oldtimers in their days and see how they'd do without all their modern advantages, I think. QJ travels well this way, I think. Even though he did not take Ellis when he should have, and Patterson did have belts, I have Jerry better than Patterson, and just outside the top 20. I agree, Quarry was a tremendous counterpuncher, on top of being so quick and tough. I watched him and Spencer again recently, and it almost qualifies as art, it's a clinic on counterpunching. Vitali is robotic yes, but he's also a giant with impressive power and toughness, and he's smarter than people think. I think he'll be top 20 when he's done. Of course, he'll have to beat Rahman first to be on that road. Thanks. Oh, and Howard C., thanks for the chuckle on Frazier's manager, and his alluded salesman skills. I think he'd have to be MUCH better than that to change my views on those items.The films show that Jerry Quarry effectively handled a wide variety of styles and many talented heavyweight fighters of the 60's and 70's. For my money, the men that Jerry Quarry defeated as well as those who defeated him in his prime (I'm thinking Ali and Frazier) run circles around today's heavyweights. It was a totally different era. Title fights were 15 rounds. The competitors, in my opinion, generally had more determination and less quit. There weren't four or five "Champions" in each division so the talent wasn't diluted. Jerry Quarry was relatively small, especially in comparison to today's tall heavies---but he took on guys like Ron Lyle and Mac Foster, and cut them down to size. He could box and counter punch against a very solid opponent like Ron Lyle, and nearly pitch a shut-out---then he could go in against the hardest hitter of all time, Earnie Shavers, and outslug him in one round. Three regrets as a fan? 1) He had an opportunity to beat Ellis, and in my mind was better than Ellis, and he let it slip away. 2) The Foreman fight that never happened. I have a feeling Jerry Quarry had one more upset left in his bag of tricks. He surprised a lot of people by taking Thad Spencer, Mac Foster, Lyle, Shavers, etc.---every time, he was written off and every time, he rose to the occasion and stunned the boxing world. Against Foreman, around 1973-74, he wouldn't have been given a chance, yet with a few "breaks" (i.e. no major cuts and avoiding Foreman's power for at least 5-6 rounds) I honestly believe he could have run the table in the later rounds and shocked the world. Everything would have had to fall into place, but it isn't that far fetched. 3) He should have retired earlier and stayed retired. The films also show that the man was far more than a talented heavyweight fighter—he was a good all-around athlete, a capable commentator and had fun acting and singing, and could hold his own with either. The interviews showed that even a man ranked at the top of such a violent sport was a gentleman first and a boxer second. He was gracious in victory and defeat and conducted himself with dignity and respect when being interviewed. | 10/19/05 09:42:32 AM|Pete|Cleveland||N/A||||10|Noam, read my post again. I did not bring up the old stuff, Howard did. That stuff you where you had difficulties is in the past, and should remain there. Prior to calling Howard the #1 name caller on the board yesterday, he called me a jerk. I was hoping all the name calling was over and done with. But no Howard has become the #1 name caller on the board. Noam I was not confusing Howard with you. My time on this board I have for the most part been very complimentary towards you. Howard dragged your name into it hoping to deflect attention from himself on to you. Howard is a real standup guy. I asked Howard to name his top 10 welterweight champions. He names 2, Robinson and Armstrong, What happened to the other 8? Is he afraid to name them either because he does not know much about boxing, or he is afraid to be recognized as a person who only babbles about Ali-Frazier? He says the same BS over and over again and again, Frazier-Ali. Then when is called on it by me. He accuses me of bringing it up. Finally I am still waiting for his answer regarding Frazier needing assistance when he walks and a wheelchair to get on planes. He sounds like he is glad about it! | 10/19/05 09:47:43 AM|Pete|Cleveland||N/A||||10|Howard C, I am still waiting for you to document your source regarding Joe Frazier needing assistance walking and a wheelchair to get on and off airplanes. Howard if it is true I find it very sad. But you you seem to be glad about it. Another boxer suffering poor health in older age, and you are gloating. That is diabolical! | 10/19/05 09:53:17 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Jonathan, your dad Jerry would have a good chance verses Vitali Klitschko but it would be a very difficult task. Klitschko does appear clumsy but he is very accurate with his punches but speed would be in Jerry's favor and he could make K. pay for any misses. I see K's long accurate jabs and two handed combinations possibly cutting Jerry but beyond that, even though it would be a hard task beating K, I would bet my money on Jerry, maybe with my heart as his fan and he would be an underdog, but a very live underdog. I think a lot of the fans today would say, "no way that little guy could beat big Vitali," but there is a good chance they would be proven wrong. The missing ingredient? Heart, although Vitali K seems to handle adversity in the ring better than his brother Wladimir, in one of Vitali's losses he quit with an arm...
injury after nine rounds in a fight he was winning verses Chris Byrd.

I can't imagine Jerry Quarry quitting in any fight just because he had an injured arm. He would have endured the pain and fought on one handed even if he was hopelessly behind in the fight let alone leading on all of the scorecards.

I think heart could very well be the deciding factor in a match between Jerry and Vitali K.

As you have been discussing Ali and Frazier, I thought it was worth reposting something I wrote here a few years ago. An analysis of the scoring of Ali-Frazier 1 reveals some interesting things. If you watch the film “The Fighters,” the match seems very close, especially as there is no commentary in that film to bias the viewer. I think that Frazier won the fight by eight rounds to seven, but consider this: The closest scoring was that of the referee Arthur Mercante. He scored it 8-6-1. Had Ali won round 15, he would have had a draw on the ref’s card. The two judges scored it 9-6 and an absurd 11-4. On his website, Joe Kraus, who’s no fool, scores the fight 7-7-1 in rounds, a draw. Here’s the link: http://www.geocities.com/sadmspats/FraziervsAli.htm  In an article written in 1975 by Lou Erskin, who had refereed Ali’s fight with Blue Lewis in Dublin in 1972, Erskin claimed to have scored the fight 8-7 for Ali and he claims that many other ringsider observers had done the same, even though Frazier had two big rounds in 11 and 15. Finally, the most interesting thing for me about the scoring of that fight is that although Ali did not win more than six rounds on any one card, he did win ten DIFFERENT rounds when all three score cards were looked at in aggregate. That means that those rounds were close enough for Ali to have won all of them. Ali said on TV in 1990 that although he wouldn’t accept it at the time, Frazier did deserve to win their first fight. I agree, but the fight was very very close. Any thoughts?

Well, no name guy, I think it's funny that you call Bill Recht's score of 11-4 absurd, but you have no problem when someone calls the fight even. More Ali nuthugging going on that makes me dislike him even more.

You say that their were 10 close rounds that could have gone either way. So why not in favor of Frazier? Why is it okay for Ali to be given the close rounds, but not Frazier?

My point is, maybe Bill saw those 10 rounds going in Frazier's favor. But according to you, it's absurd to think that, while another guy could score all 10 in favor of Ali, and you would have no problem with that.

I know no one gave Ali 10 rounds, but if someone did, I'm sure you wouldn't be calling it absurd.

I might be Ali's biggest fan, yet I watch Ali-Frazier I. and can't make a reasonable case that Ali should have been declared the winner. Frazier forced the action. Frazier had a fight plan and stuck with it. Frazier entered the fight in superior physical condition, ready for a war. It's been a long time, but I recall giving Ali only six rounds. Frazier won at least eight and maybe nine. Even if I watched the fight again and gave Ali the benefit of the doubt, I can't see more than one round swinging his way on my scoring. This would leave the fight at 8-7 Frazier, or with a real stretch, 7-7-1. But honestly, with the knockdown, it was clinched for Joe. I think Frazier won his rounds a little more impressively than Ali's winning rounds. Incredibly, I don't think Ali realized Joe had so much left a few years later, in Manilla. Again, I think Ali underestimated Frazier. And again, Frazier fought Ali with more intensity than he ever fought anyone else. For my money, Ali's most consistent performance was probably their second fight, which I don't think was as close as most people say.

Back on the topic of Frazier title defenses though, I did some research into the boxing life of Terry Daniels AFTER his loss to Smokin' Joe.

Seems that Daniels' record was 5-25 after the Frazier loss. He was beaten by the likes of Joe "King" Roman, Johnny Boudreaux, Lonnie Bennett, Roy "Cookie" Wallace, Dino Dennis, Jean-Pierre Coopman, Scott LeDoux, Tom Frater, Alfredo Evangelista...and get this...low and behold, Ron Stander, who took out Daniels in one. And these are the biggest names on the list!!! This reads like a "who's not" of important 70's heavyweights, and at 5-25 FOLLOWING the loss to Frazier, I wonder what earned him the title shot in the first place?

Ali said on TV in 1990 that although he wouldn't accept it at the time, Frazier did deserve to win their first fight. I agree, but the fight was very very close. Any thoughts? "

The fight was matched but I don't think that it was particularly close. ALI clowned around quite a bit, which leads me to believe that JOE was a little more than he had anticipated. The knockout clinched it for FRAZIER. I think ALI looked better against JERRY in Atlanta.

Here's my version of the top 10 Heavyweights: 1. ALI 2. LOUIS 3. MARCIANO 5. DEMPSEY 6. FRAZIER 7. HOLMES 8. FOREMAN 9. JOHNSON10. TYSON

Daniels also did a stint in the WWF, now known as the WWE, as a pro wrestler. He was an opponent in that realm as well, taking the three count to the likes of Hulk Hogan, Randy Macho Man Savage, the Undertaker, etc, during the 80s.

I am not sure why Frazier gets so much flak for fighting him though as every champion fights such fighters. Ali had Brian London, Chuck Wepner, and Jean Pierre Coopman. Holmes had Scott Frank and Alfredo Evangelista, Foreman had Joe King Roman, and Joe Louis had his bum of the month club.

Add on to my last post, is it because Daniels lost to some of the other "opponents" of other champions that Frazier is singled out for fighting him?

Still, if "The Fighters" film were to be digitally remastered, it would be a gem. The fight was filmed using a dozen cameras and that was a big deal in 1971. It's a pity that the version available now is so dark and grainy. It was an excellent fight and I find the ref's scorecard is always the most interesting, especially when it's Arthur Mercante's. Again, had Ali won round 15 he would still have lost the decision, but he would have got a draw on the ref's card. Mind you, Mercante also scored round 15 of Ali-Norton III in Ali's favour, which doesn't seem right when you see the tape now. Then again, Mercante was in the ring that day and things must look very different when one is a few steps away from the action. Peace.

Gerry, I like your list and the logic and reasoning behind it, particularly regarding Jack Johnson. Your list has imagination and flair and you weren't afraid to be different. Johnson was very much an unsung hero to my mind and he was definitely just as much an innovator as Ali was. He had front and courage as well. I disagree with you on Holmes. He's in my top 5.

Pete, I've written numerously that I am very sad about Frasier's medical circumstances. And that's the truth. I don't like see any person or animal suffering. Frasier recently travelled to New Zealand for a function. He was loaded on and off planes by wheelchairs and he needed assistance when standing on stage. I read it in newspaper - don't ask me which ones - but if you'll bet your house that I'm wrong, I'll start looking this second. The knowledge is widespread in the boxing world anyway.

You asked me to list the welterweights, without even a please, I should add. So I gave you my list. And then you abuse me. I guess you just wanted to do that anyway, no matter what I wrote.

Still waters run deep, but not with you. Sophistry does. LOL :)
said the opposite. I offered an analysis based on the available evidence. Perhaps the most significant thing is that the judges could only agree on six rounds in their scoring of Ali-Frazier I. Naturally, this also raises the issue of scoring by rounds versus scoring by points. A good example of that is the first Leonard-Hearns fight. I remember Larry Merchant reminding viewers towards the end of the fight (when it appeared that Hearns would win a decision) that though Hearns had won more 10-9 rounds, the hurt that Leonard put on Hearns in around rounds five to seven would have earned him one or two 10-8 rounds, thus closing the gap in the scoring. But as we all know, judging in boxing is often terrible, as in the first Lewis-Holyfield fight which was not closer than 8-4. Mind you, had the rematch been scored a draw, I would not have complained because Holyfield fought very well the second time around. |

The flaw in your argument, Kent, is that Joe's list of the tomato cans he DID fight, and the punchers he DIDN'T fight, are MUCH longer than the respective lists of Ali and Holmes. Given that Joe had a much shorter career with far fewer fights, the lists are VERY telling. The lists of Ali and Holmes and others speak for themselves. You read it and you know the answer straight away. How would Ali go against Lyle ? Or Shavers ? Or Cooper ? Or Patterson ? Or Norton ? Or Liston ? Or Mac Foster ? Et al. We know the answers because Ali fought them in addition to squeezing in a few pasties to please the paying masses. Joe, however, at various points in his career, just fought the pasties without bothering to squeeze in the tough guys. With Joe's career there is need for explanations, excuses, qualifications, prevarications, debates, name calling, and dissembling. And not only did he have fewer fights than the others, he got knocked down more. Joe's career FACTS tell the story. Not opinions or hopes. Facts. Do so the career FACTS for Ali and Louis and Holmes and Marciano and Johnson. Facts, not opinions. Cheers (like Massimo). Pete, putting Ali aside, what were Joe's best victories in order 1 to 10 please ?} Holmes and Foreman fought a lower percentage of world class opponents than Frazier fought.

There are an awful lot of tomato cans on both Foreman's and Holmes' records.

Ali is the exception to most rules that is why he is the greatest.

There could be some argument as to who a world class fighter is but even if I added fighters like Scott Ledoux and David Bey to Holmes' list, he still fought a lower percentage of world class opponents than Frazier did.

Doubling up on guys already beaten. The second Ellis fight was world class. Ahhmm. Maybe Joe should have fought Ellis a third and fourth time to get Kent's percentages up some more. And forget about the more fights someone has the fewer world class fighters are available, etc. A misleading yardstick.

There could be some argument as to who a world class fighter is but even if I added fighters like Scott Ledoux and David Bey to Holmes's list, he still fought a lower percentage of world class opponents than Frazier did.

There could be some argument as to who a world class fighter is but even if I added fighters like Scott Ledoux and David Bey to Holmes's list, he still fought a lower percentage of world class opponents than Frazier did.

I'm outvoted. Democracy reigns. So......

1. Robinson
2. Armstrong
3. Gavilan
4. Basilio
5. Trinidad
6. Leonard
7. Whitaker
8. Griffiths
9. Naples
10. Walker
11. Hearns
12. McLarnin

Will you get off my back now Pete?

Patterson—he may have been knocked down more times than any other champ, but he also got up more times than any other! He was only knocked out by Ali, Liston (no disgrace there) and Johansson who was a huge underated puncher, who of course he came back to defeat twice. Patterson deserved to be beat Ellis and in Johansson, Machen, Chuvalo, Moore, Cooper, Bonavena beat some good fighters. In his prime he may well have beaten Quarry, I'm not sure as he was 34 when he lost to Jerry.

One point to pick up is how Frazier fought a man who is as tough as Bonavena as his 11th fight. Frazier's flaws have been exposed correctly in a few posts but this highlights one reason for a lot of respect for the man, particularly as Foreman only had Chuvalo on his hit list after 40 fights and today's heavyweights need 25 fights at least before approaching anyone in the top ten.

Kent: "Percentage" of world class fights is not valid in my opinion and it borders on ridiculous. How about "quantity" or "number of" world class fights? If a pro tennis player takes on Venus and Serena Williams, Lindsay Davenport, Maria Sharapova and okay, let's add Anna K. for some eye candy—and five unranked players, their percentage of world class opponents is 50%. If another player takes on Anna K. and Venus Williams, and one unranked player, their percentage is 66%. Okay, so what? Who accomplished more? If you have fewer matches, or fewer fights, and you miss a bunch of relevant world class athletes, who cares if your percentage is higher? You haven't taken the risks!

I prefer 'cheers', Massimo, to the other choices listed. I remember that Evren used to use that one a lot when he posted here ...

A lot being made of bums lately. To a point, this is a little curious. A Porsche that goes from 0 to 150 has to briefly do 30, am I right? Ali, during his Clay days, had a hard time getting fights early on, as did Frazier, Norton and Foreman. Why? Because they were tough to beat and they didn't draw. Ali only drew after he became the Lip. Honestly, would you stand against these guys with little pay? I wouldn't. Frazier's manager was given kudos for steering a good course for Joe to smoke thru. Not every manager is of the thinking that he should heave his guy in against Tony Doyle and Eddie Machen in his first full year just because his guy is so good. That fast approach obviously presents risk.

The name of the game is to fight the guys you have to fight, not every badass on the playground, and keep yourself in a place to contend. At least that's my opinion ... boxer, as I've said before. Great jab and great use of it. Solid defensively. The guy boxed and acted like a champ should.

I just feel he had too many sketchy performances to warrant top ten all-time. I've already posted to death on that, so I'll spare us on that here ... Kudos to the White Sox and Astros for making the World Series. My Indians chased the Sox all year, but they were awfully good. The 'Stros are a pickup to a city needing one, I think, also. Should be a fun Series. Houston also has a solid NBA team. I know Big George will be rootin' for them this year. Thanks. |

I'm sorry but I have to correct you, Paul from Sidney was the guy who used to use "cheers" often in his posts, not Evren. This is history. This is also legend, this is legendary history!

point well taken, Frazier's management selected his opponents and he didn't have many pro fights as his all out style meant he would burn out fast. People can use this to rank him lower than he might otherwise be ranked in all time great lists. I think otherwise as in his prime he was great, hard to beat by most in any era and his prime was at least for a while. It was pointed out that Joe fought more tomato cans than other champions and this just isn't true. I considered a world class fights as against someone who was a champion or contender or near the rankings for at least a couple of years. So I didn't even put a fighter like Manuel Ramos, who I believe was ranked at one time, but only briefly, on Frazier's list. While I put Roy "Tiger" Williams on Holmes' list based on his tough fights with Holmes and Shavers even though Williams was never a ranked fighter. Some may disagree with a fight or two on each list but the fact still remains, Frazier did not fight a higher percentage or more tomato can opponents (non world class) than champions such as Holmes and Foreman. Ali did fight a higher percentage of world class opponents than those other champions, again one of the reasons he is the greatest as he did things other champions, not just Frazier, didn't do.

I think some here go out of their way to be critical of Frazier's career but for what reason, I don't know. I know people don't like it when I name drop but tomorrow night I am reporting on the Vernon Forrest verses Elco Garcia fight and I think Sean O'Grady will be announcing (former lightweight champion). I have spoken to Sean on several occasions and while I doubt if he remembers my name, he always says hello to me. I am going to see if I can ask Sean what he thinks about Frazier ducking people or if I can ask any other boxing experts who may be there, maybe James Toney as his promoter is doing the card, the same question. Realize expert opinion is considered a valid form of information in logical arguments.

Agreed. Frazier at his peak, though his peak wasn't as long in duration as Ali's or Holmes, was more than formidable—he was beatable, but not by many. I've never argued the point that Frazier at his best was truly ferocious. As for Sean O'Grady, I don't consider him an expert on early 70's heavyweights any more than I am. I'm confident I could pull more names out of a hat than he could with regard to heavies of the 60's and 70's and I'm betting that my recall of the fights, fighters, dates is as good or better than his. I do like O'Grady very much though. I think the question of Frazier possibly ducking certain fighters/styles should be asked of his contemporaries. I'd love a CANDID answer from Foreman—"George, after you walked over Frazier, do you think he and his "careful/cautious" team thought twice about going in against Shavers or Lyle?" If Foreman were being honest and open, I wonder what he'd say? Thanks for the clarification, Massimo. Still, it clearly is a better term than some I've been addressed with, no matter who says 'cheers '. And the site clearly does miss Evren and other long-time posters not here today ... deal regarding 'tomato cans' and 'bums', while some of these second-tier guys are far from either. Longevity is also a big point. For Frazier to have had the career length of an Ali or Holmes, he'd have to be bulletproof. Quarry also. With exception of Ali, and I'll argue, Quarry, the other majors missed a number of top guys that could have been fought. Unless it was someone they absolutely dodged and should have fought, the question to be asked might be: So what?

Kent brought up an interesting point, that some here go out of their way to be critical of Frazier's career. Not surprisingly, Angelo didn't respond to that, and I don't expect Noam or Cosell to, either.

Maybe I've gone a little out of my way to be critical of Joe's career and "handling" but I certainly haven't been critical of Joe himself. He was a top notch fighter in a top notch era. He also seemed to be a decent guy. There are holes on his resume and I've given my opinion that maybe if the holes weren't there, more losses would be. I've stated that I don't think Frazier was afraid of anybody---he'd have fought Lyle, Shavers or King Kong---but his management didn't go after the big guns. Willard, instead of questioning a few of us who have pointed out deficiencies with Joe's fight schedule, why don't you take the Ali haters to task? They've spewed hate and even racism against Ali and admitted to enjoying his Parkinson's suffering. To me, that's a much worse offense than saying Frazier should have fought Shavers.

Angelo - sometimes people hate or dislike Ali so much that they cling to someone they perceive as being Ali's greatest enemy, in this case Frazier. They then perceive any criticism of Frazier, or any praise of Ali, as being somehow hateful of Joe. I can't recall any personally demeaning comments here about Joe or his health. I can recall plenty about Ali. I can recall personally demeaning comments here about Joe or his health. I can recall plenty about Ali. I can't recall you, me, Noam or anyone else saying that they personally dislike Frazier. Yet only yesterday Willard said that he dislikes Ali and plenty of others have expressed the same sentiment time and again.

That leads me to believe this: the criticism of Frazier is about his boxing unaffected by any personal animosity or bias, whilst some (note I said some) of the criticism of Ali is the reverse. In my opinion.

Kent, the percentage of world class fighters Frazier DIDN'T fight would be more appropriate and insightful......Tyson, Terrell, Mac Foster, Zora Folley, Lyle, Shavers, Norton, et al. All are his contemporaries. He could have faced them instead of doubling up on poor 'ol Jimmy in the 'Weekend At Bernie's' fiasco.

Massimo - I agree with Gerry that 'cheers' is more appropriate to sign off on than the other terms you listed such as bum etc. Cheers.

Oops. I wrote Tyson instead of Liston in the list below. One other thing. People talk about how Cloverlay carefully managed Joe's career. I prefer the term 'stage-managed', given that apart from Foreman, hard punchers were so carefully avoided. In reality the management was more hard-assed than clever. Joe's various medical problems - eye and blood pressure - were so pronounced at various points in his career that it was unsafe for him to fight. He shouldn't have been allowed in the ring. Yet Cloverlay let him fight. For the money. When the lemon was squeezed dry Cloverlay deserted him. Cloverlay exited stage right immediately before Joe's 'Weekend at Bernie's' fight with Ellis in Australia. At the point Joe most needed Cloverlay's guidance more than ever, it was time for Joe to say goodbye to boxing, but Cloverlay fled and left him standing alone in the ring.

It was all about money to Cloverlay. Not Joe's health. Not Joe's legend. And by carefully stage-managing the hard punchers to avoid, they brought his legend into question, as the debate here proves. Had Joe faced the hard punchers who were his boxing contemporaries then this debate here - rightly or wrongly - would never have taken place. The fact that this debate was necessary proves that there are holes and question marks on Joe's career courtesy of Cloverlay. I also believe Joe would have fought the hard punchers had he been allowed. Cloverlay stopped him.

Angelo, who are the Ali haters? And what have they been saying? All it seem to me is the same old prattle about Ali- and Frazier day in and day out. Why does this go on? I have seen countless rankings on this site where Ali is regarded as the greatest Heavyweight Champ ever. I have yet to see one regarding Frazier even in the top 5 all time. There is no problem with that. I have seen: Angelo, Howard C, Noam attack not only Frazier viciously but also Frazier's supporters supporters. For the most part the people who supported Frazier and attacked Ali viciously have left this site. Sadly, some of them were interesting when talking about things besides Frazier and Ali. In fairness to Noam he does not attack Frazier supporters and I think he would be more than happy to move on. Angelo when you discuss other things beside Frazier you are interesting and informative. But God, you have been saying the same stuff about Frazier for over a year now. Regarding Howard C he knows little or nothing about boxing other than name calling and Ali-Frazier prattle. If I could only filter out this Frazier-Ali garbage, I think I could really enjoy this site. Sadly. I can't. Then again if I could, and did, the Ali-Frazier supporters would accuse me of censorship.

I've been saying the same stuff about Frazier, some good and some not so good---but have generally left the topic alone when it died down and only began writing about it again in response to others' posts. It's not surprising that on a Jerry Quarry website, so much has been written about 60'-70's heavyweights and so much has been debated about two of the best fighters who beat him, Ali and Frazier.

In response to your post, if you really think about it, the Frazier supporters have won. Why? We're actually having to make a case and go on the defensive---that Ali was a good and charitable person, that Ali won in Manilla and would have still won had there been a 15th round (Rhodescholarette maintained that Frazier would have KOed Ali in the 15th). In short, it's tit for tat with Ali and Frazier. Frazier's supporters have actually elevated him to Ali's level and have engaged Ali fans in what appears on the surface to be a legitimate debate. The reality is that Muhammad Ali transcends boxing and athletics by a hundred miles. He was an important and iconic figure of the 60's and 70's and for a not so brief period of time, might have been the most recognizable living face on the planet. Depending on who you talk to, you hear many different things about Ali's influence. To me, he was a great boxing champion. To others, he's a political hero. To others, he's a religious/spiritual hero. To others, he's a charitable humanitarian who has shared his own good fortune and wealth. He's not without faults, but his life has meant a lot to so many. Meanwhile, Frazier is a great boxing champion and a nice guy and maybe a good family man and maybe an important guy in his community. That's pretty darn good, but it's not approaching the world figure that Ali was and is. So here we are, keeping Frazier's legend alive by comparing and contrasting him to Ali and for that reason, Frazier fans have won. If not for his relationship to Ali, he'd be forgotten by all but the most informed sports fans.

You have a way about looking at things from a perspective that I do not have. And when you do you have me looking at things in a entirely different way. You made good points.
are the Frazier supporters? I guess I would be among them but as I have stated on many occasions, Ali is the greatest of all time and I have never said anything else. I have also said, more than once, it is unfair to compare Ali's accomplishments to other fighters, including Fraier's. That is what set Ali apart. He did things other fighter did not do. Hence he is the greatest of all time.

10/20/05 08:29:50 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Angelo, who are the Frazier supporters? I guess I would be among them but as I have stated on many occasions, Ali is the greatest of all time and I have never said anything else. I have also said, more than once, it is unfair to compare Ali's accomplishments to other fighters, including Fraier's. That is what set Ali apart. He did things other fighter did not do. Hence he is the greatest of all time.

10/21/05 01:38:24 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Kent's percentages about the world class fighters faced by Frazier, Ali, Foreman and Holmes are meaningless. Say, for example, Holmes fought 7 world class guys (to use Kent's description). It means nothing. There may have only been 7 world class guys out there to fight. Holmes can't create them. It's not his fault that there were no more to fight. To make it meaningful you must not only list the world class guys he fought, but also the available world class guys he didn't fight. And then reduce it to a percentage. We could say that Holmes fought 17 world class guys and there were 20 available in his career. So he fought 75% of what was available. Same with Ali, Foreman, and Frazier. The way Kent has it doesn't mean a thing and proves nothing. As to the Ali haters, I've heard no one celebrating Joe's bad health. Plenty here gloat about Ali's. Many criticize Ali personally lots. Not so about Frazier where boxing, not personal things, is the main issue. Most of the time people talking about Ali are just responding to something. I've heard Pete, for example, make a point about Ali and then say this is boring and let's move on. However, the next poster is entitled to respond to what Pete said. Or Pete starts the post saying, "It's boring talking about Ali all the time" and then as Howard says Pete talks about Ali. If Pete wants to move on from the subject then he should just move on without trying to make sneaky little points all of the time at someone else's expense. And I guess if Pete doesn't want to talk about Ali then he doesn't have to. If Kent or Howard or Angelo or anyone does want to talk about it then they should be able to do that without Pete jumping down their throats. As it stands if a guy seen as pro-Joe, like Kent, says something about Ali, there is silence from Pete. But if Angelo, or me, or Howard says something (guys seen as pro-Ali) then Pete berates us. No real balance there. (Hey, Pete, I'm being honest in what I'm saying and not trying to antagonize you be saying it.) Anyway, Kent, I look forward to your percentages about the number of world class fighters fought against the number of world class guys available. For Frazier all you essentially need to do is take the list of world class fighters you drew up for Ali and then mark off the ones Joe fought and didn't fight. Simple. Then reduce it to a percentage. I'd call it the Braveheart Scale.

10/21/05 01:51:14 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Angelo, I agree with what you say about Ali wholeheartedly. Like everyone, he did some personal things not to be entirely proud of, but he also did lots more good things for people from all other the world. Little acts of kindness that never get praise. And, of course, the dignity he shows with his disease motivates many with the same condition. It must annoy his haters when they witness the universal accolades he gets, opening Olympics, getting prestigious awards, etc. I feel a bit sorry for Frazier. To be fighting in the same era as Ali must be intimidating. Joe thinks he doesn't get the praise he deserves, etc. I don't think Joe did himself any favours with his attitude. Boasting about Ali's medical condition, gloating about it, turned stomachs and made him appear small minded. In his book the way he criticizes other fighters, calling them tomatoo cans, and that type of stuff, does him no credit. It's a pity.But I don't think Frazier has been raised by the debate here. Quite the contrary. Someone asked Pete to name the greatest victory Frazier had, forgetting Ali. Of course, the question wasn't answered, mainly because it wouldn't reflect well on Joe. His best victory other than Muhammad ? Ellis ? Joe actually should be happy he was from Ali's era, because without him he'd be best remembered for beating Jimmy Ellis.

Now, Angelo, if I say that this is a boring subject, that we speak about this all the time, and that we should move onto something else, do you think Pete will let us ?

Oh, one more thing, Pete. I don't agree with you about Howard C. I find his posts informative and insightful. He obviously knows plenty about boxing even if you don't agree with him. You don't elevate a debate by accusing someone of being ignorant just because your views conflict. I've made that mistake previously. Howard probably thinks you know even less than him about boxing, mainly because you spend your time criticizing others and telling them what subjects to discuss, rather than actually discussing an issue and showing you know something about it. Give us facts and informative opinions, not orders and condemnation. For example, you chastized Howard for not giving you a list of welterweights. He did that and then you chastized him for not doing it in order of preference. So he did THAT and then, rather than discuss the good list he gave in order of preference, you ignored the list and kicked him for something else. Move on from kicking Howard and Ali, Pete. Show us that you actually know something about boxing. Time to prove yourself, young man ! Otherwise you'll always be bleating from the cheap seats.

I have never made fun of Ali's condition. Don't put words in my mouth or accuse me of things I didn't do. Frazier will never be as popular as Ali. Let Ali be as popular as you want, but don't talk about him like he can beat any fighter in history with ease. Also, don't call him a role model or hero. Head to head, prime against prime, Ali loses to Frazier, and maybe Louis. Frazier loses to Foreman and Liston.

And to the Ali-haters, don't make fun of his condition. Other than his trash talking and treatment of fighters, he was a good guy.

I know you'll be shocked ...

but I disagree with you on Kent's list of percentages. I think they are very telling. Ali fought everyone because of his dominance. Holmes never had that, Foreman did only very briefly. It also further shows Frazier as a guy who was dodged, not a guy who dodged others. Did Holmes have contending opponents he could have fought? Once again, yes, several of them. Some of them later held belts themselves. Holmes, also, as I've said earlier, owed us several rematches --- Norton, Snipes, Cooney, Witherspoon, Williams.
These were all undecisive performances for him. Show me an Ali or Frazier fight in that same category that didn't get a rematch. Willard, I have to disagree with you also, on Ali the good guy. The guy was a bigot, vocally anti-white, vocally anti-christian. He's perhaps sports history's most compelling figure.
He was a huge credit to the sport, it's hard to imagine boxing without him. But Ali the person was a great deal more. And less.

Incidentally, after his lopsided win over Ali, I think Joe Frazier's greatest win was over our own Jerry Quarry in their first fight. The first three rounds of that fight are still among the best I've ever seen.

Noam, lets clear up a couple of things here regarding Howard C and me. He calls me names, JERK being the most recent one. I never attacked Ali, where are you getting that from? I named Ali the #1 Heavyweight Champion of all time.#3 I asked Howard for a list of his top 10 welterweight champions of all time. He did not give a list of his top 10 he gave #1 Robinson #2 Armstrong. And he lumped the others all together, until you finally prodded him on to do the right thing. Also, note, I did not attack Howard C for his list after he finally posted them.#4 Can you tell tell me 2 significant posts Howard C ever made on this site regarding something other than Ali-Frazier prattle#5 Most of the Ali haters have left the site. You and Angelo have toned your anti Frazier attacks big time. This just leaves Howard C stuck in the past.#6 Noam, I think your time would be better spent counseling Howard C. And tell him to move on past Ali-Frazier. This BS has been going on for almost 2 years.Regarding my boxing knowledge. My post speak for themselves. |Why would Holmes have to fight Cooney or Norton in immediate rematches? He beat Cooney by TKO and while Cooney fought bravely, the fight wasn't in question. I believe Holmes would have loved to give Cooney a rematch if Cooney rebounded and fought his way back, which he didn't. As for Norton, he was in line for another shot with Holmes—but it would be the winner of Norton-Shavers to get a rematch with Holmes. Low and behold, Norton didn't make it out of the first round. I believe Snipes should have had a rematch with Holmes. That's valid.Ali a hero? To me, he was a boxing/sports hero, like Joe Namath, Len Dawson, Willie Stargell, Ken Dryden, etc. To others, he was a whole lot more. Talk to black people who were intimidated in the early 60s by racists—but by the end of the 60's, they could speak their mind, be their own people, fight the establishment instead of being victims of it. To me, Martin Luther King drove it. But to some others, it was Malcolm X and followers, especially a high profile guy like Ali, who had the *!x!!s to stand up and challenge the power structure. I'm not black—I don't know what it felt like to be a minority in 1960, afraid to get "out of line" and forced to the back of the bus, not allowed in diners, not able to use the same public drinking fountains as whites. I have a vague idea of how that must have felt, but not being in those shoes, how can I really know for sure? By the late 60's, things were changing quickly and many, many black people felt a sense of empowerment by watching Ali and others challenge the establishment and speak out. Please don't say he can't be viewed as a hero. I didn't agree with his stand against the war—but many people did and he was a hero to them. Willard—as a fan of Ali's, I would never say that he's the best ever with ease. If it was easy, Frazier wouldn't have beaten him and neither would Norton. The other losses (Spinks, Berbick, Holmes) don't play into it—but Frazier and Norton had success with Ali and many other fighters gave him tough, hard fought challenges. With ease? Never. I rank him slightly ahead of Louis, Holmes and Marciano, but not by a mile. |On Holmes, the fight with Cooney was very much in question if you look at the score cards at the time of the KO. Cooney was leading on at least one of them. It may be that all five that I mention may have had subsequent losses that interfered with rematches, sure. But I find that hard to believe for all five guys. It's interesting, I was reading about Ron Lyle the other day for my Quarry Yahoo site. Lyle met Jimmy Young as an eliminator to meet Ali. Lyle lost, and got to fight Ali anyway in his very next fight. So even the logic that seems to support this, does not always hold up. Again, so many iffy performances by Holmes, to me, diminishes his all-time standing. I haven't heard a lot of response to this here. On Ali, I would never say that he was not a hero. He clearly was to millions. He was iconic to many and has millions (billions?) of fans today. The general statement made was that he was a good guy, and I disagree, however much that actually means. His place in history is certainly solid no matter what I think. I think Noam makes a good point on Frazier also.It is a shame the guy has been so bitter.Sometimes in life, no matter what you do, the other guy gets the nod anyway.I think he has a lot to be proud of, and I'm sure he is.He came across to me as very likeable, but perhaps he may need to be more philosophical about his view of his tremendous career. I hope he is. Thanks.|Guys, my comments on showing that Holmes and Foreman fought a lower percentage of world class fighters in their careers than Frazier was not meant to put Holmes or Foreman down but instead to show that Frazier was not the only champion who could not measure up to Ali, the greatest of all time.Yes Ali and Frazier will always be linked by the history of their three great fights and linking them keeps Frazier more in the public eye but just because Frazier wasn't as great as Ali, that he wasn't great himself and Holmes and Foreman were great as well. They all were not as great as Ali.I agree that the so called Ali haters, who enjoy Ali's current ill health, are not here now and to the best of my knowledge, none of the current posters have said any such thing about Ali's health but I am not going to read every single post to prove this. I only know I have never said anything negative about Ali's health or for that matter about him as a person.|Gerry: You're correct about Lyle-Young. It's interesting that Ali seemed to take all comers. Guys who won an eliminator got to face him. Guys who lost an eliminator got to meet him. Sneaky boxers like Young, power punchers like Lyle/Shavers, "Rockys" like Wepner, rematches with guys who gave him fits, like Frazier and Norton, Europeans like Dunn and Bugner---you name it. Gerry, I agree that Holmes had some shaky wins, but they were wins nonetheless. Let's not forget that Lennox Lewis was iced by Rahman and McCall. This didn't happen to Champion Holmes. Staggered, yes, but iced, no. Holmes dug deep to rebound and hold his belt. Ali did not give Young a rematch, and some thought Young won that fight. Also, there are similarities between Cooney-Holmes and Lyle-Ali. Don't forget, Lyle was fighting very well before Ali scored the TKO. If Cooney deserved a rematch with Holmes after giving a good showing but getting stopped, then why not Lyle? Williams and Witherspoon seemed to occur very late in Holmes reign. Yes, they fought well, like Shavers fought Ali well. Again, no rematches among these fights either. Holmes missed Tate and Dokes, among others. I can't think of a deserving fighter who Ali didn't get in with. Both Holmes and Ali were great Champs. By the way, since you spell your name with a "G" is this possibly Gerry Cooney? No wonder you're still going on about not getting that rematch with Holmes! |Good points on Ali-Lyle, Angelo.One judge called it a draw, one gave it to Ali by a single point. Lyle was a very strong contender.Your case that Ali could have rematched a few of these guys is pretty good also.No, I'm Gerry Cooney. There are more than a few Gerrys out there, contrary to some stupid opinions posted on here a while back.You make a great point on Holmes. He took Ernie Shavers' best shot hard. But he got up and won.There's certainly something to be said for that.I still remember Lewis just decimating Razor Ruddock and was blown away by his talent at that time. Certainly the two, Lewis and Holmes, are very comparable.|Lewis and Holmes successes are comparable, but if the two met, prime vs. prime, I'd give a not so small edge to Holmes. Lennox was a long reigning champion and also an honorable one outside the ring---I think he restored some dignity to the title and carried himself well---but I think Holmes was grittier, tougher and more skilled. Lewis had that nice size advantage with the big reach to keep guys away from him. Lewis was a very good looking athlete too, with solid credentials. I just think that Holmes had that something extra that elevated him to perform well enough to win when it mattered most. Lewis lacked a little bit of that, hence his devastating losses. It's easy to recall Holmes near misses against The Truth Williams, Mr. Snipes, etc., but don't forget his masterpieces against Shavers (almost perfect first fight and shaking off the knockdown in the second) his gut it out war with Norton, handling big, skilled Leroy Jones and some of the easy wins over guys like Cobb, Marvis Frazier, Ocasio, Leon Spinks and others. Ocasio beat a very strong contender in Jimmy Young and Cobb managed to cause trouble for guys like Shavers and Norton. Holmes also had the KO over Weaver. Lewis beat Holyfield with his size. I don't think he'd have it as easy with Holmes though.

---

|10/21/05 09:58:59 PM|charles anderson|ark.|ctjjandfam@aol.com|10|how do you get on the jerry quarry yahoo site?|

|10/22/05 03:57:29 AM|Howard C.|Louisville|howarde@louisville|10|Gerry, I gotta agree with Noam. Kent's list was meaningless. Much better to compare who he fought against who was available. It would be very telling. No need for any excuses. Just the raw percentages. It was Kent, by the way, who put Ali, Foreman, Frazier and Holmes in the mix. Let's run with his suggestion and see what comes up. Pete, I tried to accommodate and appease you several times. You demanded a list of welterweights. I gave you a list but you abused me. You then demanded that I do them in order. I then did them in order and you then abused me again calling me stupid. Not only do you take angry pills, but stupid and ignorant ones as well. You behave like a jerk, among other things. Stop being boring by telling me, Angelo and Noam how to behave. We know how to behave. We watch you and then do the exact opposite. That's makes us acceptable and you unacceptable. Anyway, let's play the ball not the man. I gave you a list of welterweights in order just as you demanded. You said that I am stupid and that I know nothing about boxing. Okay genius, show me where. Debate the list I posted. Who shouldn't be there and why. Debate my list know-it-all. Show us how much you know, Pete, because all you've done so far is exhibit your ignorance. Thanks.|

|10/22/05 01:11:17 PM|Pete|Cleveland|N/A|10|Howard C, I never called you stupid, and don't pretend you can read minds. I never addressed Angelo, or Noam and told them how to behave. If they have a problem with me they can speak for themselves.|

|10/22/05 01:12:22 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca.|kentallenent@aol.com|10|Angelo, you are probably right, Sean O'Grady, although an expert at boxing, may not know any more than any of us about the era of the sixties and seventies, James Toney also, an expert about the boxing art itself, might not either. Besides, O'Grady didn't work the Forrest card and I didn't get a chance to talk to Toney. Forrest's fight with a fighter named Elco Garcia had a strange ending. Forrest, in the last round, threw a punch and he fell down from the momentum. The referee signaled it was a slip but before he could get between the fighters and wipe off Forrest's gloves, like they usually do, Forrest nailed Garcia with a left hook, knocking him out. The audience boooed, they thought it was a foul, but I thought Garcia let his guard down. You know, protect yourself at all times. What was the ref. going to do? Lift Garcia's arm while he was on the canvas and declare him the winner after Forrest had won every round?|

|10/23/05 04:53:12 PM|Jerry Quarry|Florida|10|I whooped all those guys.|

|10/23/05 11:10:12 PM|Howard C.|Louisville|howarde@louisville|10|Pete, at your demand I listed my top welterweights from one to 10 and then you said I didn't know anything about boxing. That might be so but please pay me the courtesy by demonstrating your contention. Please go through my list one to 10 and tell me where I got it so wrong that I demonstrated my ignorance of the sport. I'd like your comments on names on the list, rather than your opinion of me. My list is, Pete:1. Robinson2. Armstrong3. Gavilan4. Basilio5. Trinidad6. Leonard7. Whittaker8. Griffiths. |
Naples

Where did I get it so wrong, Pete?

Hi Kent, I still think the list you did should be who they fought against and who they didn't fight - in terms of what you call world class fighters. It's an interesting argument, although there is opinion involved as to who qualifies as world class.

For instance, who were the 17 world class fighters that make up Kent's list of 17 for Frazier are Daniels in July 1966 and working through in chronological order Bonavena (x 2), Doug Jones, Chuvalo, Ramos, Quarry (x 2), Ellis (x 2), Ali (x 3), Foreman (x 2), Mathis, Foster. A few comments: at the end of each year Ring Magazine published its Top 10 heavyweights for the year. They rate on the performance over the year, rather than on a month by month basis. Mathis never made the ANNUAL Top 10. Foster, of course, was a light-heavy, Daniels never ranked higher than 8, Machen never higher than 9, Jones never higher than 8, Chuvalo never higher than 8, Ramos never higher than 8. And, of course, there were guys never ranked in the annual top 10 Joe fought - Davis, Johnson, Doyle, Conners, Zyglewicz, Mathis, Daniels, and Stander. When he fought Ellis in 1975, Ellis hadn't been ranked since 1971 in the top 10.

These are the guys in the Ring Magazine's ANNUAL Top 10 that Joe never fought: Terrell ranked 1 in 1965, 1 in 1966, 10 in 1967, Folley 5 in 1965, 2 in 1966, Spencer 7 in 1965, 3 in 1966, 2 in 1967, Patterson 2 in 1965, 4 in 1966, 7 in 1967, Mildenburger 4 in 1965, 5 in 1966, 9 in 1967, Liston 5 in 1968, 8 in 1970, Martin 7 in 1968, 4 in 1969, Mac Foster 5 in 1969, 5 in 1970, 5 in 1971, Al Jones 9 in 1968, 8 in 1969, Cooper 9 in 1969, 6 in 1970, Lyle 4 in 1972, 5 in 1973, 3 in 1974, 5 in 1975, Norton 9 in 1972, 3 in 1973, 6 in 1974, 1 in 1975, and 2 in 1976, Shavers 6 in 1973, 6 in 1975, Young 2 in 1975, 3 in 1976, Holmes 6 in 1976, Others ranked in the annual Top 10 by the Ring Magazine and not fought by Frazier are Persol, Corletti, Peralta, Urtain, Gracia, Bodell, Roman, Wepner, Middleton, Clarke, Bobich, Nueman, Smith, Boudreaux, Ward....I don't count these guys as they only appeared in the rankings for a year or two at most. I'll give Joe the benefit of the doubt on these.) Please note that the above list has been for the same period as Kent's i.e. from July 1966 when Joe fought his first world class guy Daniels. Kent's list has 12 world class fighters Joe fought: Daniels, Bonavena, Jones, Chuvalo, Ramos, Quarry, Ellis, Ali, Foreman, Bugner, Mathis (to save argument I'll include this unranked guy) and Bob Foster. My list of world class guys he didn't fight is 15 fighters: Terrell, Folley, Spencer, Patterson, Mildenberger, Liston, Martin, Mac Foster, Al Jones, Cooper, Lyle, Norton, Shavers, Young, Holmes. To save argument I'll take Holmes out even though he was there in that era. Kent's 12 and my 14 equal 26. Joe fought 12 out of the 26 world class guys of his era. On Noam's Braveheart Scale (good one Noam), Joe fought 46.15% of the world class fighters available in his era. He didn't fight 53.85% of the world class guys of his era.

Hey Noam, you're the statistics guy. Stick these raw stats in your folder! Phew, now I can go to bed.

It looks like Las Vegas is going to crack down on boxing soon. Or most likely, give the appearance that it is going to...
Annual listings only tell part of the story, as Jimmy D. revealed earlier. Some of those opponents for Frazier, Chuvalo and Mathis in particular were ranked well within the Top Ten for stretches of months. Ultimately, it's where they are ranked at fight-time that matters most, not where the guy was last January. For example, it's October now. That's ten months after the last annual ranking, a time frame in which a lot can happen for today's heavies. A guy who was #1, might be #4 now with a loss in that interim. In your 53+%, you might also consider the subsequent losses of the potential opponents in the time frames you give. Patterson, Spencer and Foster all lost to Quarry; where were they ranked after those losses? Mildenberger was beaten in the '67 tournament. Where was he ranked after that? This is why annual listings don't go far enough with guys ranked 6-10. They can drop out, then pop back in. That's not the same as a guy who was top six for the whole year. What is with the aggressive anti-Frazier thing anyway? He wasn't talented enough for you guys?...

Angelo, I like Lewis with Holmes. Holmes did not have the pop that McCall or Rahman had, so he'd have to box the bigger man. Lewis, with better size and reach, would probably make Holmes come to him, a style Holmes does not fight well in. The bigger Cooney boxed Holmes well with his size. The Truth was 6'4, and also gave him problems, dominating Holmes for 11 rounds. Your point that Holmes was tougher is well-taken. Lewis could be iced, as you say, Holmes got up from Shavers, who hit hard enough to kill. I'm still not as impressed with the names on Holmes win sheet as most. Norton was flat-out robbed another Don King special. It's a wonder, with both Ali and Holmes, that Norton didn't chase down King with a bat. Good discussions, guys. Thanks. |

Another thing to add, sorry. Frazier didn't turn pro until mid-1965. If I'd have been his manager,
I would not have put Joe in with a top ten guy until 1967, giving him time to move up just like anyone else. Some of the 'contenders' listed weren't even ranked after 1967, and others only briefly based on the annual ranking shown. See ing the way Joe went thru the guys he did face, how many of those contenders were lined up to meet Frazier? "Hey Joe, beat the hell out of me next", they might say? I don't think so.

Frazier was still active in 1974, 1975, 1976—Lyle and Shavers were more than just "prospects" by that time. They were highly ranked fighters, going in against the Foreman's, the Youngs, Ali and eachother. I find it hard to believe that Earnie Shavers wouldn't have accepted the chance of a lifetime to fight a former World Champion, Frazier, for more money than all his previous fights combined, instead of someone like Ron Lyle—dangerous, but without Frazier's name recognition. When Frazier took on Ellis on Life Support in Australia, that could have easily been one of the other guys I mentioned. Tune-up, tune-down, whatever, he didn't go head-to-head with the sluggers. After Foreman dismantled Frazier in five minutes, I truly don't think Ron Lyle would have been scared off by Frazier's performance against Jerry Quarry—basically beating a guy he had already beaten previously and had outweighed by a comfortable margin. I don't believe that for a minute. The history shows that Lyle and Shavers weren't shy about stepping in with anybody at anytime. This is why I've never bought your contention that they avoided Frazier and he didn't avoid them. When the entire top ten is facing off against eachother in one 3-4 year period, but one guy is missing—I've got to believe it's him avoiding them, not the other way around. Where was Norton? I'll tell you where he was, ranked high, fighting Ali, fighting Foreman but not fighting Frazier. Lyle: Fighting Ali, fighting Foreman but not fighting Frazier. Shavers: Fighting Young, fighting Lyle, later, fighting Ali, but not fighting Frazier. Young: Fighting Lyle, fighting Shavers (I believe twice each), later, fighting Foreman, but not fighting Frazier. They were all afraid of ruining their "prospect" status by losing to Frazier? Baloney. I look at Joe's competition and number of fights after 1971 and I realize that his management carefully avoided the landmines and cement that were in Shavers' and Lyle's gloves. Once again, for the record, Frazier wasn't afraid of anybody and wouldn't duck anybody either. But maybe his management had reason to "proceed with caution."

Ok Howard lets go. But before I begin are you through with the name calling? I have no problem with #1 Robinson, and Armstrong #2. I have a problem with #3 Gavilan. Great boxer and exciting fighter. But he got a gift against Billy Graham in the MSG. So he was not that great of a boxer. He got a gift against Carmen Basilio in Syracuse. I have the tape of that fight. So he could not out box Basilio as others had done. Also Gavilan was not much of puncher. I would not have Gavilan at #3. I believe twice each), later, fighting Foreman, but not fighting Frazier. Shavers: Fighting Young, fighting Lyle, later, fighting Ali, but not fighting Frazier. Young: Fighting Lyle, fighting Shavers (I believe twice each), later, fighting Foreman, but not fighting Frazier. They were all afraid of ruining their "prospect" status by losing to Frazier? Baloney. I look at Joe's competition and number of fights after 1971 and I realize that his management carefully avoided the landmines and cement that were in Shavers' and Lyle's gloves. Once again, for the record, Frazier wasn't afraid of anybody and wouldn't duck anybody either. But maybe his management had reason to "proceed with caution."

Disagreement's can be cordial.
before 1975 he just wasn't ready. I do think seeing Frazier dominate Quarry would be a good barometer if I was the manager of a Lyle or Shavers circa 1973 to 1974, if I felt they would be ready for Frazier at that time or not. I mean you can be rated and still not ready for someone like Joe. Shavers definitely was not ready for Frazier before 1976 or even 1977, when Frazier was gone from the scene. Remember in 1974 he lost to Bob Stallings and he drew with Jimmy Young after having been knocked out by Quarry. Shavers spent 1975 and 76 rebuilding his career and he also had a knockout loss to Lyle during this period.

I am just saying there is more than one interpretation of the available information and that other champions did not fight a lot of the same fighters Frazier supposedly avoided. But the Frazier critics, mainly Noam and Howard, are singling him out for this. I mean did Foreman ever fight Liston, Mac Foster, Terrell, Spencer, Patterson, Bonevena, Henry Cooper, Jimmy Ellis, Leotis Martin, Joe Bugner, Jerry Quarry, Shavers, and others? No, he didn't but I don't think this takes away from his status as a fighter so why single out Frazier?

I am sure we could make a list for every champion saying the same thing with the exception of Ali, the greatest of all time. One of the few fighters who really did take on almost all comers.

I don't see why some of you guys can't at consider the point that some of the guys who Frazier supposedly avoided might not have wanted to step in the ring with Joe as at his best, he really was a terror.

That is why the world was so shocked when he was knocked out by Foreman. Remember before this fight most people expected Frazier to win.

|10/24/05 04:02:34 PM|Willard|East ||a||||10|Like I said, people need to forgive Frazier for beating Ali in that first fight. Frazier is sorry that he whooped your boy.

|10/24/05 04:20:20 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||||10|Willard: I doubt Frazier's sorry that he "whooped" my boy Ali, but he probably is sorry that he lost the two rematches, including having his face and head grotesquely reshaped in Manilla while Ali was exhaused but unmarked. And he's sorry to have eaten canvas 8-9 times against Foreman, who Ali knocked out in eight rounds. He's sorry two feature movies haven't been made about him. He's sorry he isn't looked up to as a role model and hero by millions. March of 1971 is so far in Ali's rearview mirror, it's laughable. He's moved onto being an ambassador. He also moved on to regaining the title and defending it countless times for a few years, then losing it, regaining it again, and finally failing against another fighter who would have had his way with Joe, Larry Holmes. Of course, Ali's final failed comeback attempt was against a ranked fighter, Trevor Berbick. Far for the course, Joe went in against the scary Floyd "Jumbo" Cummings. It's sort of like defending against Stander and Daniels instead of Lyle, Young, Shavers, Norton, etc. Joe is holding onto that 15 round decision win like an old bag lady holds onto a shiny silver quarter or a picture of her from her younger days. Unable to move on, because there was nothing to move on to save for losses to Ali twice and Foreman twice, Frazier's fans are holding onto that win like it's the golden egg.

|10/24/05 04:44:21 PM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville||||10|Wow, some of you guys are unusually touchy whenever facts are mentioned about Joe. Frazier fought only 44% of the available world class guys of his era - I proved this with facts - and some of you guys respond by throwing hissy fits. It's okay; we're used to it. Same inane excuses and explanations.

Willard - Joe beat Ali fair and square in that first fight. None of us disagree on that. Joe's entire legend is centred on that one fight, so we hardly ever forget it. But psst....guess what? Ali beat Joe in the second fight and Ali then stopped him in the third. And George knocked him down 8 times in two fights. Joe only fought two legends - Ali and Foreman. In 5 fights Joe only won once. He was stopped 3 out of the 5. That wiped the smile off your face, didn't it.

Gerri - The Ring Magazine calls it their ANNUAL rankings. Check the site. It's a compilation of their ratings of the prior 12 months. That's why they say A N N U A L.Kent - I began using the Ring A N N U A L rankings from 1966 onwards. If a guy was ranked in 1965 or prior, but not after 1965, I didn't use his name in my lists. This is a fair approach. After all, Joe fought Daniels in September 1966 and this was the first world class guy you listed for him. I've taken the same approach.I've also listed all the names and the Ring A N N U A L rankings and years beside them. Anyone arguing against these names aren't being fair. The Ring Magazine is a fair referee and if it names them as being Top 10 annually then, obviously, they are world class fighters. And the years I listed show that these guys ARE Joe's contemporaries.I've been more than fair. And note that I listed all the names. I made full disclosure, which was something Kent didn't do. Kent just gave us the figures and not the names.Yet Kent still cries 'foul'. (This is the same Kent who considers Ellis a great opponent for Joe in 1975. Ellis hadn't been ranked in the annual Top 10 by the Ring since 1971 but Kent says he was credible. Ellis hadn't won his four prior fights and had been beaten by Lyle and Shavers, but Joe fights Ellis in the 'Weekend at Bernie's', and Kent says it's okay because Jimmy was a killer!).

Pete - glad to see that YOU'VE stopped the name calling and have FINALLY had the courage to discuss facts. My reasons are as follows:Kid Gavilan - pay him more respect. He was never stopped in 143 professional fights. He was the guy of bolo punch fame. He deserves the respect I gave him.Whittaker - won titles in four weight divisions. He was welterweight champion from 1993 to 1997.Leonard - title holder in five weight divisions speaks for itself.Griffith - terrific body puncher, all round fighter, had 23 world title fights when title fights really meant something.Basilio - the 'action' man. Was involved in the Ring Magazine 'fight-of-the-year' in 1955, 1956, 1957, 1958, 1959. No one else has done that, have they? Basilio also beat Robinson.Trinidad - had the longest uninterrupted welterweight title reign ever. Great finisher. Even greater left hook.Naples - Made 13 successful title defenses over two reigns. His nickname was MANTEQUILLA. An assignment for you Pete? Why did he have this nickname?Ha, look at Angelo, whining like a baby. He can't let it go. He has to piss on Frazier's accomplishments every chance he gets.The funny thing is, one of you guys posted something like this about two weeks ago:'You can always tell who the Ali-haters are because they say they rank Ali number one all time, and then diss him.' You guys are quite the hypocrites. "Oh, I like Joe, blah blah blah" and then you take every shot you can at him. By the way, I saw the movie ALI, and it wasn't very impressive.Angelo, Ali was unmarked in Manila? He had huge lumps under his eyes, a ridge of bumbs across his forehead, he was urinating blood, and he was nearly passing out in between rounds. Holmes would have his way with Frazier? Yeah, like the time they sparred and Frazier cracked Holmes' ribs? Cosell, I still have the smile. I'm proud of what Joe did. He took massive beatings from Foreman and kept charging forward. He was hit 1000 times in the last three rounds of Manila, and kept coming forward. And he did all this with 20/50 vision in one eye, and blind in the other. Lots of reading to catch up on since I last visited here. Pete, you'd do better without the relentless niggling. It's boring. Willard, you've already admitted that you hate Ali so no one pays attention when you rant on against him, which is every day.Angelo, I like your rear vision concept. Imagine George looking in his rear view mirror after fighting Joe. What did he see? Speed humps and plenty of them. LOL. Howard, your list was enlightening. You named all the guys, the years they fought, and the rankings The Ring had for them. All above board. Facts that What you've done shows that Joe's career needs to be bolstered by explanations and excuses. ProJoes can't let his career stand on the facts alone. That's why they've got excuses why Joe fought this weak guy but not this strong guy, why he fought this over-the-hill guy but not this up-and-comer, and that's why they question the credibility of the bible of boxing - The Ring Magazine's annual rankings. We have guys saying that you can't count that guy because he was too much of a force when Joe was just a novice. That knock down against Bruce doesn't count because Joe was too green. That fight against Cummings doesn't count because Joe was over-the-hill. Not fighting Norton doesn't count because they were friends, they were sparring partners, there was more money in fighting Daniels. Yelp, yelp, yelp.

No one in boxing's history has had to rely on more excuses and explanations and qualifications than poor old Joe. What you did, Howard, was record the facts. You've listed the dates, the rankings, and the names. There's plenty to respect Joe for. His one win against Ali. He gets a lot of respect from me for getting up 8 times against Foreman. He stayed out of trouble out of the ring and was a decent guy. However, in my opinion, and the facts support me, Joe dodged plenty of guys, usually big punchers. He took the easy path too often for me. Not going in the WBA tournament and then fighting Mathis, who hadn't beaten a ranked guy for his prior 10 fights, sticks in my craw. So does the ridiculous title defenses against Stander and Daniels.

Hopefully, there's no need to talk about this again. We've all expressed a view and now might be the time to move on. Let's leave it in our rear view mirrors.

Willard, Holmes won 48 successive fights, he won 20 out of 21 title defenses, and he beat Shavers twice and Norton once. Comparing the careers of Holmes and Frazier is chalk and cheese. Larry's career facts kayo Joe's career excuses, every time.

Willard, Holmes won 48 successive fights, he won 20 out of 21 title defenses, and he beat Shavers twice and Norton once. Comparing the careers of Holmes and Frazier is chalk and cheese. Larry's career facts kayo Joe's career excuses, every time.

Noam, I am a man of color, and I resent that remark about "niggling," when you are referring to me. So this is what it comes down to. You slander people and call them alcoholics, you infer people are homosexuals. I've read your past posts, I know your history. And now you are stooping to make racial remarks. What type of miserable human being are you? And don't pretend you could not have found another better suited word. You disgust me. Go ahead Howard C, defend you fellow name caller, you guys make me sick. Somehow turn it around and make me the name caller. Isn't that your method?

Howard, I am not crying foul, I am just saying there is more than one way to interpret the information. That is possible some fighters Frazier supposedly avoided could have not wanted to fight Joe and that is why those fights didn't happen - ie - Patterson and Terrell. Also, why does Frazier deserve all of the scrutiny when Foreman also didn't fight a lot of the same fighters Joe didn't and others that Joe did fight such as Quarry and Bonevena?

No knock on Foreman though after all, he was great but not as great as the greatest, Ali. The same for Frazier. He was great but he didn't measure up to Ali, the greatest. But who does?

Pete, the word "niggling" has nothing to do with race or colour. The dictionary definition of "niggling" is: "trifling; lacking in breadth of view or boldness or effect; cramped; irritable." It has nothing to do with race or colour and your attempt to play the race card leaves you with no credibility. None at all. Can't win the argument with facts and logic; so play the race card. Who cares what colour you are? Who of us here even knew that you are coloured? And Pete, you've chastized others numerous times about leaving the past in the past and now you are doing exactly what you criticized them for. If you have to (hypocritically) go back so far as you have then, clearly, you've run out of logic and ideas. Guys like you are so easy to beat because you inevitably end up...
beating yourself. Like you have here.I'll say it again, Pete - please stop the niggling, try debating the facts, and put the race card back in your pocket. It doesn't work with any of the guys here, no matter what side of the argument we are on. Thanks.Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville | 10/24/05 07:46:44 PM | Kent - I understand what you're saying but I think you've been mischievous and disingenuous. Your list showed who Joe fought, not who he didn't fight. My list compares the two based on facts, not opinions. It gives it relevance and meaning.Pete - perhaps a few days off to clear your head is in order. Your tantrum about Noam was stupid. His comment was not racist. If he calls you niggling, he's not calling you a nigger. If I said that you are petulant, I'm accusing you of being irritable (not being someone's pet or animal).You are obviously very confused. Your last post berated Noam for things long in the past. What you said was completely at odds with other comments you've made, such as: 10/18/05 "Howard C, once more leave Noam out of this. Noam is not a name caller. Don't try and sully Noam's character." 10/18/05 "Start reading some of Noam's posts. You might learn something about boxing." 10/19/05 "Noam that stuff where you had difficulties is in the past and should remain there." So why are you bringing it up again Pete. Because you're losing the argument? Because you've run out of ideas? You accuse Noam of calling someone an alcoholic (when did this happen? Last year? The year before? Nothing wrong with your memory.) So what. On 10/14/05 you sarcastically told Noam to watch an Alcoholics Anonymous program on TV, thereby inferring that he has a drinking problem. Be consistent, my friend, or no one will bother reading your posts.Anyway, did anyone on this site know that Pete is black? I didn't. Did Pete ever tell anyone on this site he was black? No. Does anyone on this site think that Noam was being racist by saying that Pete is niggling? No one? Obviously not. So Pete, please take a few days off to clear your head, apologize to Noam for playing the race card, stop the silly tantrums, and then let's get in some really good debate about boxing. We'd all appreciate it.Hey Howard, I didn't even know that Pete was black. Makes no difference to me what colour he is. I hadn't even thought about what colour Pete is until he accused me of racism. So it beats me how what I said can be construed as racist. My opinion is that Pete is deliberately misinterpreting what was said so he can deflect attention away from himself. Truth is he has just made it worse for himself as he just comes across now as the boy who cried wolf. I won't be bothered conversing with him, unless he apologizes, as he doesn't add anything to the discussions. Playing the race card is the cheapest cheap shot you can take. With your welterweight list I agree with most of them, although I'd juggle the order around a bit. I'd try and fit Hearns in there somewhere, probably replacing Micky Walker who I know virtually nothing about. Naples was called Mantequilla because he was a very smooth fighter (Mantequilla is Spanish for 'butter'). I didn't know that Kid Gavilan invented the bolo punch. Are you sure that it was him? Can anyone else help out here? Ali mucked around with a punch like that.I think this latest issue about the use of the word "niggling" is just a misunderstanding and I hope the parties involved can resolve their differences peacefully. Remember our host asked us to stop fighting on these pages and even Jerry's son Jonathan asked us to do the same so please fellows, KNOCK IT OFF!!!! acted in such a way that you're entitled to tell me to knock it off. 1) Is using the word "niggling" racist (look it up in the dictionary)? If so, explain how. 2) Did anyone know that Pete was black? I didn't. Until this matter is settled fairly, Kent, I won't knock it off.

As someone who has used the English language for six decades, I can say with absolute authority that the term "relentless niggling" is not racist. It is silly to suggest otherwise. Really silly. For those of you with dictionaries, look it up. Kent, if you want to be the moderator then fairness is a must. You had no cause to tell Noam to "knock it off". He has not done anything wrong. Time for strength from Kent. Be strong and direct your edict to the real culprit (the sophist Pete). Say something like, "Pete, your allegation of racism against Noam was ridiculous and stupid. KNOCK THE SOPHIST OFF." Sophistry isn't a racist term, either. A sophist is a captious or fallacious reasoner, a quibbler; someone like Pete, who dishonestly twists the word 'niggling' to falsely accuse some innocent of using the word 'nigger' instead.) Unfairness and weakness is the bolt-hole of unrest and disrespect. Experience tells that rancour never settles until fairness reigns. Time for fairness to reign Kent. Apologize to Noam and then tell Pete to 'KNOCK THE SOPHIST OFF." Over and out.....for now.

Did I not say that Bruce's knockdown of Frazier counted? But all of a sudden I'm saying that it didn't count? When? You guys put words in people's mouths, and I don't like that. Noam, Angelo, and Coesell have made it their personal agenda to bury Joe Frazier and his career. Why Frazier? Why him alone? The guy only had 4 really good years. That's it. 68-71. During that time, he was a wrecking ball. He'd even give Prime Foreman and Prime Liston a run for their money. Are you guys trying to say that he's overrated? Because he certainly is not. I've seen many trainers and boxing fans not include him in their top 10. Is that good enough for you? Or does he have to fall out of the top 20? Angelo, you ever wonder why RAGING BULL was so successful? Part of the reason is because there is not worship in the movie. There are no David Remnicks, Bryant Gumbles, Thomas Hausers, Norman Mailer's, etc. involved with it. It shows the good and bad side. That's why, if someone were to make a film about Frazier, it would be important for them to include him stealing cars as a teen, hitting his girlfriends, and laughing at Ali's condition. Same with Ali. We needed to see him mock his black opponents and humiliate them. But we didn't.

I also don't know why you three get so angry if someone makes fun of Ali's condition. I didn't, but you said I did, accusing me of things I didn't say or do as usual. Ali certainly was stupid, however, so I guess that's why you three are drawn to him. The guy's whole personality was based off a damn wrestler that he watched! Ali was a small child in a 6'3, 210 pound body. He had an IQ of 78, and probably didn't even know what Vietnam is. Ali: Dur dur dur, is it something you can eat? Now excuse me, I'm going to go dehumanize my black opponents and then act like it was all for pre-fight hype. Wow, this Frazier thing has gotten personal and ridiculous. Why don't we just agree to disagree? Good arguments have been made in both directions. I personally stand with the guy because of his talent. Some of you clearly don't. Fine ...

Noam, I am repulsed by you. You pretend that you did not know I am a Black Man. Yet you pretend to know what members are alcoholics (you who has a problem drinking too much beer, or so you claimed). You who pretends to know what what members on this site are gay. And then you attack them for that. And in each case you never met the persons. You are an evil person

Howard C, I stated you would jump to Noams's defense, and so you did. Howard C have you ever been called a NIGGER? No, but I am sure you and Noam use that repulsive term in your private conversations.

Acusing me for "relentless nigging." When a Jewish person goes shopping do you refer to them as, "trying to jew someone down." Do you consider Joe Frazier a "House Nigger."

You guys should be banned from this site, you are both diabolical people|

Let's give Pete a pass on misinterpreting the word "niggling" as similar things have happened on a larger scale. A couple years back, a member of the Mayor of Washington D.C.s cabinet was asked to resign (I can't remember if he actually did resign or not) for using the word "niggardly" which just means stingy or frugal/cheap. Yet a bunch of people thought he was being racist and ganged up on him. I could see how Pete might have thought the root of "niggling" might be something negative. I don't think any of us knew Pete was non-white though, so even if we wanted to take a cheap shot using the "N" word, how would we know he was a person of colour?

Willard: Believe it or not, I never saw "Ali" all the way through. On a business trip, I saw the beginning of it on HBO late at night, but couldn't stay up for it. I did see the movie Ali himself starred in, which was "The Greatest" (made in the mid-70's). It was far from a great motion picture, certainly no Raging Bull!!! Also, from what I've heard, you're correct about "Ali." It shows us Ali the boxer, but not Ali the man, imperfections and all. You're probably right that it was a lot of fluff and tribute, though as I said, I didn't see it. I can't believe Ali's IQ was accurately measured to be under 80, though I guess anything is possible. Still, he starred in "Freedom Road" a television miniseries, and had to read and memorize lots of lines as he was the lead character. He's also traveled abroad to meet with heads of state, recorded albums of music---and in interviews, he seems bright, not stupid at all. As I said, maybe he has a very low IQ, but my guess is the test was skewed or not accurate for some reason.

As for in-prime Frazier giving Foreman a run for his money. Ummmm, no. Sorry, but styles make fights, and Foreman would have pounded him in like a railroad spike every single time they laced up the gloves. Foreman would never lose. In fact, I'll go as far as saying that Frazier at his very, very best, would lose to an out of shape Frazier or not accurate for some reason.

As for in-prime Frazier giving Foreman a run for his money. Ummmm, no. Sorry, but styles make fights, and Foreman would have pounded him in like a railroad spike every single time they laced up the gloves. Foreman would never lose. In fact, I'll go as far as saying that Frazier at his very, very best, would lose to an out of shape Frazier or not accurate for some reason.

Kent: Speaking of Foreman, you keep bringing up the quality of his opponents/title defenses. Are you limiting this to pre-Jimmy Young Foreman? Let's not forget that while Frazier has been in retirement, Foreman came back as a guy in his late 30's, boxed into his mid-40's, fighting Holyfield, Cooney, Moorer, Morrison and others. Kent, he had another whole career. You compare the complete careers of Foreman and Frazier and we're not talking apples and oranges or chalk and cheese---we're talking the Mona Lisa and the back of a cereal box. This is crazy to even be talking about. Foreman's number of fights, opponents, length of career, accomplishments, etc. aren't lacking in comparison with Joe's.
bash people for being alcoholics (how do they know this?). Alcoholism is an illness. Yet, I am now to believe they did not know I was a Black Man. Everyone knows their style, they manipulate words to attack people. The clinical term for it is passive aggressiveness. They repulse me.

Angelo, I appreciate your thoughtfulness and fairness on this whole disgusting matter.

I have just read an interview to Muhammad Ali' (the former boxer) on an Italiano newspaper in which Ali' said that one of his biggest regrets is to have betrayed Malcolm X (who was 6'3" 1/2 wilt) when Elijah Muhammad ordered him to. Not to throw gas on the fire, but why even use such a word, which draws suspicion in any modern context?

Does it matter if anyone knew or didn't know what some poster's race is? A lot of people, believe it or not, read here, some out of curiosity, some are too cautious to post, and sometimes I can't blame them.

Was the use of this word some kind of playground giggle for small minds? Was it meant to offend with some degree of deniability? Either way, yes or no, is does not say much for the user, given that someone has clearly been offended by it.

This kind of thing doesn't just bring this room down, it's just plain dumb. We can do better than this. are you guys fighting again? HA. isn't that what keeps us all in line? i believe a little bit of challenge keeps the mind going. it gets us to think critically about are beliefs. try to keep an open mind of what the author wrote and not just who they are. you may or may not like them but do you really hear what they are saying. you may find your selves stunned at the insight they may offer you. my mom, brenda quarry, and i use to banter back and forth on a lot of stuff. kept us both thinking just pushing are own limits to see what more we can learn from one another. if you close your ears or in this case eyes you may miss something really good.

it has been just over a year sense she died. i sure do miss are "fights". i know she love to read your comments and arguments. why because it kept her thinking. have a great day everyone. and keep up the challenge.

we can do better than this. |

are you guys fighting again? HA. isn't that what keeps us all in line? i believe a little bit of challenge keeps the mind going. it gets us to think critically about are beliefs. try to keep an open mind of what the author wrote and not just who they are. you may or may not like them but do you really hear what they are saying. you may find your selves stunned at the insight they may offer you. my mom, brenda quarry, and i use to banter back and forth on a lot of stuff. kept us both thinking just pushing are own limits to see what more we can learn from one another. if you close your ears or in this case eyes you may miss something really good.

it has been just over a year sense she died. i sure do miss are "fights". i know she love to read your comments and arguments. why because it kept her thinking. have a great day everyone. and keep up the challenge.

isn't that what keeps us all in line? i believe a little bit of challenge keeps the mind going. it gets us to think critically about are beliefs. try to keep an open mind of what the author wrote and not just who they are. you may or may not like them but do you really hear what they are saying. you may find your selves stunned at the insight they may offer you. my mom, brenda quarry, and i use to banter back and forth on a lot of stuff. kept us both thinking just pushing are own limits to see what more we can learn from one another. if you close your ears or in this case eyes you may miss something really good.

it has been just over a year sense she died. i sure do miss are "fights". i know she love to read your comments and arguments. why because it kept her thinking. have a great day everyone. and keep up the challenge.

isn't that what keeps us all in line? i believe a little bit of challenge keeps the mind going. it gets us to think critically about are beliefs. try to keep an open mind of what the author wrote and not just who they are. you may or may not like them but do you really hear what they are saying. you may find your selves stunned at the insight they may offer you. my mom, brenda quarry, and i use to banter back and forth on a lot of stuff. kept us both thinking just pushing are own limits to see what more we can learn from one another. if you close your ears or in this case eyes you may miss something really good.

it has been just over a year sense she died. i sure do miss are "fights". i know she love to read your comments and arguments. why because it kept her thinking. have a great day everyone. and keep up the challenge.

isn't that what keeps us all in line? i believe a little bit of challenge keeps the mind going. it gets us to think critically about are beliefs. try to keep an open mind of what the author wrote and not just who they are. you may or may not like them but do you really hear what they are saying. you may find your selves stunned at the insight they may offer you. my mom, brenda quarry, and i use to banter back and forth on a lot of stuff. kept us both thinking just pushing are own limits to see what more we can learn from one another. if you close your ears or in this case eyes you may miss something really good.

it has been just over a year sense she died. i sure do miss are "fights". i know she love to read your comments and arguments. why because it kept her thinking. have a great day everyone. and keep up the challenge.
well as I do. Instead of cherishing memories, it has become an insult filled madhouse. It seems certain people are ALWAYS involved in the angry back and forth arguments. Look at almost every big argument over the last year and one name will pop out at you. Maybe every single time it's just bad luck. Yeah right Noam.

|10/25/05 03:49:20 PM|Noam|same||same||10|Some low person is posting using my name and it's definitely not me.|
|10/25/05 03:58:32 PM|Noam|same||same||10|To suggest that the word 'niggling', which is in the dictionary, has any link to 'nigger' is plain stupid and any person linking the two is insincere. The meaning of 'niggle' is vastly different to that of 'nigger' and everyone knows it. Pete raised the allegation to cause the bickering and Gerry is deliberately inflaming it by suggesting otherwise.
Gerry's latest post is stupid. We all recall that this is the same Gerry who left this site in a tantrum to set up a competing site. When that didn't work out he came back. We now have the situation where I come to this site and see others posting under my name with known trouble makers like Fan and Gerry inflaming tensions. We don't need to be Einstein to work out who is inflaming the problems. As soon as Fan returned someone started posting under my name. |
|10/25/05 04:02:03 PM|Noam|same||same||10|One more thing. I didn't know Pete was black. No one here knew. So how was my use of the word 'niggling' in any way racist. Answer: it wasn't. What Gerry wrote is absolute crap and it is there for all to see. At least we know now that Gerry has not one iota of sincerity in his body when he can come out and say what he has. According to Gerry, 'niggling' is a racist word. A bigger bonehead has never been seen. Back to Dunce's Corner
Gerry.|
|10/25/05 04:30:34 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||same||9|Noam, you take the cake yet again.But it's very close to one that is, still with me?You can call me names again if you like, we both know that's what you're good at, and that's not just me talking, is it?The point is, it did not matter if you knew somebody's race or not. This is not an enclosed room for Noam and his fellow posters, is it?In fact, it actually represents something.Instead of issuing foul insults, you need to remember that and be accountable.
|10/25/05 04:49:22 PM|Gerry|Cleveland||jerjets11@yahoo.com|||10|David Tua picked up a win this week, he has been very inactive since his loss to Lewis.There was a heavyweight champ, Tommy Burns, who it was said was just 5'7 and 175 pounds, just barely a heavy after dinner. His big loss was to Jack Johnson, who was about 6'1 with perhaps 75 inches of reach or more.Given the success of Ali, Holmes, Lewis, among others, the question to ask might be: How much does height and reach dictate victory?Short punchers like Marciano, Frazier, Tyson seem to be more the exception than the rule? |10/25/05 04:52:55 PM|Pete|Cleveland||N/A|||10|Noam, how did you know the guy you called an alcoholic was one? How did you know the guy you inferred was a homosexual was one? You and Howard C are 2 growing cancers on this site, and you are ruining the site. You 2 love playing hate filled with words.You and Howard C are 2 growing cancers on this site, and you are ruining the site. You 2 love playing hate filled with words.Both of you Noam and Howard are a disgrace to this site. You take turns heaving digustig names on people who don't agree with you. And then you defend each other afterwards.Have I made myself clear? Even Angelo does not agree with you on this one|
single issue or incident even close to this there. Thanks. |

In all of my 60 years I have never witnessed a more shameless abuse of crocodile tears than is being exhibited by Pete and the two usual suspects (Fan and Gerri). What a load of baloney over nothing. Shock. Horror. Crocodile tears. Firstly, to believe precious Pete, we have to contort the language to somehow twist the word niggling to a racial inference that doesn't exist, wasn't intended, and wasn't conveyed. And then we have to pretend that Noam has ESP so that he miraculously knew and guessed the colour of Pete's skin. What a set up! Be ashamed you guys because Pete's allegation never had any legs and you all know it. Hey Noam, what colour dress is Gerri wearing? what brand of whisky does Fan drink by the carton? How much weight has Kent lost? What did Angelo have for lunch yesterday? Name the new star that Massimo discovered yesterday. If you knew that Pete was black then you'd know all these answers, too. Yuri Gela. That's you Noam. ESP. WOW! By the way, Pete, I am deeply offended at your use of the word 'revulsion'. I have a deformed arm from an accident and I am deeply sensitive about it and you knew it and you are laughing at my deformed arm and I've never been so hurt in all my life and I feel terrible about what you said. What sort of person are you to laugh at someone with a deformed arm and poke fun at them. Is there nothing so low that you wouldn't stoop to. Leave my deformed arm out of it and stop using words making fun of it. Geepers. I've honestly never heard of something so ridiculous in my life. Someone uses a dictionary word with no racial overtones and he is then alleged to have racially smeared someone he didn't even know was black. Talk about a fit up. And Kent, the lap dog, plays along with it. Noam, don't worry about Pete and his cheer squad of Fan and Gerri. I suspect that they are probably the same guys anyway. Every time there is a spot of bother, Fan's head pops up and Gerri inflames the trouble. DID ANYONE ON THIS SITE KNOW THAT PETE WAS BLACK? DID PETE EVER TELL ANYONE HE WAS BLACK? ANSWERS: NO AND NO. BS x 1000 = precious Pete's allegation of racism. |

Shut up, Howard. |

Hey Gerri, settle down. Noam can read minds, can't he. He knew Pete was black when nobody told him. So he knows what you're thinking, too. Precious Pete is good at word games. 'Relentless niggling' becomes 'rentless nigger'. Since when, Pete? What dictionary are you reading from? It's so stupid, it's funny. Dead Parroters, the Black Knight on the bridge, and then Weekend at Bernie's. Just when I thought it couldn't get any funnier, Precious Pete comes along with 'relentless niggling' is code for 'rentless nigger'. I just told my wife and she's crying with laughter. She says that the CIA needs Noam NOW. Noam, tell us where Usama is hiding. |

You can go get stuffed Howard Cunningham. I hope you choke on your deformed arm you prick. Remember.....deformed body, deformed mind. |

Gerry, I've never heard of the term rentless nigger. Never used it myself, never heard it used until now. Pete called himself that. I didn't. Please don't use the insult "enclosed room". I have a relative with psychiatric problems in an institution and my family doesn't like people poking fun at her. There was no need for you to say 'enclosed room' and I am very offended at you laughing at my relative. You must have known that enclosed room is street slang for mental institution. Stop your snide cruel insults please. Pete I'm dyslectic. I don't like poking fun at my disability by laughing at me for mixing words up. Laughing at people with reading disabilities like I have is not funny. |

Howard C, answer these questions please. #1 How did Noam know someone was an alcoholic when he put that label on the person?#2 How did Noam know someone was a homosexual, when he gay bashed that person.His bigoted history on this site is well known, and you defend him what does that make you?

Precious Pete - you demanded before that we forget the past, now you vomit it up at every opportunity. Noam didn't call anyone those names. He said that someone was behaving LIKE an alcoholic, just like I said you behave LIKE a jerk. No one was called an alcoholic or a jerk. We said that you behave LIKE that. It was a comparison, not a title. What is it about the written word that you need to twist the meaning? It's called sophistry.Anyway, go back through the posts and you'll see that Forest used to tell people to "put the bottle down" regularly. It's a manner of speaking. Grow up and stop the crocodile tears.Gerry - I am not "twisted of body, twisted of mind." That was a barb some bigoted teacher threw at me when I was a little boy because of my deformed arm. It seems that it is a standard bigot's insult, seeing you've used it too.Leave my disabled arm out of it, Pete and Gerry. That you'd tease me about it says more about you than me. It was the same with Ali. You guys celebrating his deteriorating medical condition. Poking fun at it. Thinking it was funny. Boasting that Frasier caused it. Well, no one disabled my arm. I was born with it. I don't care if Pete and Gerri keep poking fun at it, thinking a disability is funny.Noam - I'd forget about the bigoted name calling from Precious Pete. Calling someone a racist is insulting, particularly when it's not true and there's no evidence of it. However, I'd just laugh it off. It's so ridiculous that it's funny. The crocodile tears and the insincerity from Pete is pervasive.Change the topic. I remember you did some stats on the heavyweights and how many rounds they fought, etc. It was a good comparative tool. Any chance of you repeating the stats again so I can make a copy.Thanks.

Those of you who have come here for years recall that I call in from time to time and I say sometimes that some of you are white supremists. You guys didn't like it and said so. This time its different. Peter isn't black. If he was black like me then he'd know that making up false allegations of racism does the cause more harm than good. When people hear false reports of racism like Peter is making up here, they pay less attention when real racism occurs. Peter is a crying wolf opportunist telling lies to discredit people he plainly don't like. Believing Peter means you also believe in fairies down the bottom of the garden. Peter if you are a brother then stop harming the cause with made up reports of racism. White folke won't listen when it really happens.ONE THING WE ALL HAVE IN COMMON IS WE ENJOY COMING TO THIS SITE AND EXPRESSING OUR VIEWS.JUST REMEMBER THAT IT IS ALL OF YOU WHO ARE FIGHTING WITH EACH OTHER NOW THAT IT WAS ALL OF YOU WHO RUINED THIS SITE AND CAUSED BRANDI TO SHUT IT DOWN, REGARDLESS OF HER HUSBAND MR. JIMMY'S AND JERRY'S WISHES!!!I AM NOT TAKING SIDES IN THIS FUED. YOU ALL AR WRONG AND YOU ARE ALL DISHONORING JERRY AND JIMMY'S MEMORIES.
didn't. So your case is that I'm a mindreader. Yeah, sure you're being fair here. I'm a mindreading racist!

Howard - I haven't got the stats in front of me at the moment, but I'll get them for you. I watched the Leonard v Hagler fight again and I had Leonard winning it clearly (again). He was much faster than Hagler. I'm sorry about Gerry laughing at your arm. I almost heaved when I read that. I couldn't believe he said it. | 10/26/05 01:19:43 AM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Noam, I still have my notes when I scored Hagler and Leonard. I gave it to Ray 118 - 112. The win was easy in my opinion and I couldn't understand some of the controversy surrounding it. I was very surprised that Hagler's corner didn't instruct him to go for it before the last round. They were so casual about it and seemed not to know that Marvin was so far behind. I'd like to see the judges post the scores at the end of every round but the downfall there would be that we'd have midfight arguments, rather than post fight ones, if connections disagreed with a score. Zab Judah would be attacking referees before the end of the fight. It'd be a good idea to ignore the troublemakers and just discuss boxing.|

HEY, that last post was not me! I don't know who that was, but you better hope I don't find out who you are. That is absolutely sick, to use someone's name and post a piece of filth like that. Wow... if there is a way, Carl or whoever, to find out where that came from, I want to know now. That is the lowest. Unbelievable. This is why I called for registration here earlier. I'm stunned that ANYONE could post such a thing. I will not be posting until I get a response from this website. I want to know who did this, today.|

For lunch yesterday, I had a chicken salad sandwich from Potbellies, with Baked Lays chips and a Diet Coke. Noam: If you can read minds, can you tell us how Frazier thinks he would do, today, against Laila Ali? Back to 70's boxing, prime vs. prime, Norton against Lyle---how would it play out? Based on his shaky performances against guys who could hit as hard as Lyle, I think Norton would have some serious issues. Lyle could take a good punch and come back from it. I might actually give the nod to Lyle.
One more thing Howard C I NEVER COMMENTATED ABOUT YOU ARM, OR ALI'S CONDITION. This is just typical of you lying and name calling on this site. You are a bitter angry old man spawns hate, bitterness, and lies on this site.

No matter how this turns out, and who knows if it will yield anything, I definitely will not be back here after this. Not just because any slug can come on here, pretend he's someone else, and post filth. But because there's just no way to keep a decent discussion going here, at least from my point. There's some real good guys --- Kent, Massimo, Angelo, others, some now hesitant to post. But a handful of cretins bring it down, and that is more than wrong. Not because of me, which is bad enough. But because of the Quarrys and their terrific family. You few, and you know who you are, who write nonsense here, you're not worthy of this site or the family behind it. I had some fun here, and I've had this stuff. My advice to you who are behind this: don't ruin this for everyone else left after I leave today. And, again, you better hope I don't find out who you are. For those interested, my Yahoo Quarry group remains open and available for interested parties.

One more deal about the Buster Mathis/Jerry Quarry bout, and i'll out it to rest. If Big Buster was not at all ranked the bout 1) would not have been a heavyweight title eliminator, and 2) It would not have been scheduled for 12 rounds (think about it). Jerry was ranked no.2 WBA no.4 RING, and Buster, no.6 by both parties.

That's a true point about the fact that the fight was sanctioned as a 12 rounder, and not for only 10 rounds. We're all 12 round fights back then considered "eliminators" or was it routine for matches to be made at 12 rounds between contenders?

yes pretty much, some were state titles, the Mathis match was also in the Garden, so they both had to have some kind of big rating, mathis was 11-5 12-5 favorite too.

Gerry, although I've generally disagreed with most things you say (understatement ?), I've never known you to be spiteful like that last post and I have no problem now in accepting that it wasn't you. Someone is obviously playing games because they posted Noam telling me to shut up and in the current climate I doubt he'd be doing that. Just before then Noam complained that someone else had falsely posted under his name. Anyway, I accept it wasn't you. And, again, you better hope I don't find out who you are.

Oh, and Pete, I just noticed your threat of violence ("you better hope I don't find out who you are") Threats are juvenile and gives us all an insight into your troubled tiny mind and malicious mentality. Can't debate the logic, so you invent silly allegations, play the race card, and when that doesn't work you resort to threats of violence. Crawl back under your rock and take your silly allegations and threats with you.

The message board section of this website will be closing within two weeks if the behavior does not improve. It would be sad to see it end this way, but internet hero's and tough guys do this at many site. I have enjoyed the GOOD discussions if this is my last post. To those of you that post under assumed names, that was the last straw for this site. Sorry Jerry and James. You deserved better.

10/26/05 05:09:53 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Well, Angelo - Bobby Riggs played Billie Jean King, and Smokin' Joe did fight Jimmy Ellis in 1975. So I wouldn't necessarily rule Laila Ali out.Gerry, someone was using my name to post as well and I don't like it being done to you either. I'd be careful though. There are stern federal laws about threatening violence on the net and you might be shooting yourself in the foot. This is the second time you've been threatening violence on this site. Anger management is needed perhaps. Don't take it all so seriously padre.Pete - your latest looney post sums it all up. I tell Kent in jest that I like drinking beer and you whimsically base an allegation that I am somehow an alcoholic. Very similar to twisting my words to falsely accuse of racism. Mentioning Laila Ali will get me accused of sexism. You are a serial nutcase and, while I'm grateful for the laughs you've given me, you've run out of gags and I've run our of patience. Goodbye.Howard - I gather you mixed Gerry and Pete up. Their rants are similar, granted, but the threats came from Gerry. I'm losing track, too. Hey, we could have a tag team wrestle. Me and you v Pete and Gerry. Only joking guys. I'm not going to answer those guys any more. I'll just stick to boxing.

10/26/05 08:48:45 PM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||9|As you get older it gets harder and not easier to understand humanity. There's Gerry, the most vocal anti-war campaigner, the guy who calls President Bush a war monger. And then someone uses Gerry's name in vain and what happens ? Declarations of war. Lynch mobs and posses until Gerry catches and kills the imposter. Wow. Lucky for Bin Laden he didn't impersonate Gerry, because he'd be lynched before sun up.

10/26/05 11:32:20 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|I'd like to suggest something to return this site to its former glory. The ones in the middle of the turmoil generally speaking are myself, Pete, Forest, Gerry, Fan, Fan from Fandom, and Howard. Forest has gone and Gerry is on his way. If Pete, Gerry, both Fans, and Howard all agree to go, I'll go as well. So how about it guys, all the agitating parties go. Every one of us. Sacrifice something for the good of the Quarrys. Go and never return again. But if one returns, the rest come back, too. I'll do it, how about the rest of you guys ?

10/27/05 07:15:25 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Wow, I cant believe the previous posts that have been posted on this site. Its unbelievable and totally disappointing, I come to this site to view peoples opinions on the sport of boxing, and to remember the memories i shared with my father, but coming here and reading this crap that has gone on as of late is bs. i cant believe the words you say to each other and especially over a public site where you never know who is going to read this stuff, keep it clean men, and get this site back on the subject of boxing. Other than that stay safe men and keep it clean.
think Jonathan's suggestion is better than yours. No reason for everyone to bail on the site. Let's just keep things civil. It's fine to have spirited discussions and disagree with each other. The best course of action is to try to accomplish this without resorting to personal attacks. If that stuff starts up, the best thing is to ignore it instead of escalating it. This is a great boxing site—lots of fine opinions and intelligent banter used to be routine here. I'd like to see it get back to that. Guys like Kent and Jimmy Dorsey have always maintained a pretty high level of respect for the site, the hosts and the visitors. Look back at Jimmy Dorsey's posts and you see intelligent, informative and respectful writing. I'm sure we'll all disagree from time to time and some insults, hopefully humorous and not threatening or bitter, will fly, but at the end, we'll all move on to a new subject.

10/27/05 07:24:11 AM|Willard|East||Yeah|||10|I'm mostly responsible for all this crap going on. I started up the whole Ali/Frazier debate again. Nobody would back down. I'm sorry. Anyways, God bless Jerry Quarry.

10/27/05 10:51:54 AM|Pete|Cleveland||N/A|||10|DOES ANYONE ON THIS SITE HAVE THE COURAGE TO ANSWER MY QUESTION? QUESTION: IF ANYONE WAS TALKING TO ME FACE TO FACE, WOULD YOU ACCUSE ME OF "RENTLESS NIGGLING."

10/27/05 12:31:27 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Come on gang! This is a site to talk boxing. The Quarry's conduct themselves like they always do, with their utmost CLASS; it would embarrass me two times if they read some of this stuff. We should very much be thankful for the site, for it is great, Jonathan, I'M from nearby Delano, and actually played football, against Bobby when he was WITH THE NORTH STARS and BAKERSFIELD. I did some research on Mike Nixon/Sugar Ray Seales bout the scores were 48-44, with Nixon hitting the deck twice, if it weren't for the knockdowns, the scores would have been 46-44 and very close, Nixon was no joke! Angelo thanku for the kind words and I very much appreciate it.

10/27/05 02:17:21 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||10|Pete I wouldn't say that to you. I wouldn't say it for a couple reasons. First, I don't use words like niggling. Maybe that is a word used often in the U.K, but I have two masters degrees and have never heard of it. Also I don't like the word. I have learned that words people don't know are useless because your target audience doesn't understand you. On boxing site the word "niggling" is a useless word. Any word that has to be given a dictionary reference to the majority of people reading it is useless. Noam, speak to your audience, not above them.}

10/27/05 03:50:18 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Fan: You must have hated Cosell if you don't like college S.A.T. word usage. Actually, the word "niggling" isn't that uncommon—I've heard it used fairly often. I'm not sure if this was a correct use, but I read an article in a car magazine about Jaguar having "niggling quality problems." That's just one example and I'm sure there are many others. I'm not sure we should sensor words just because they SOUND offensive.

10/27/05 04:12:56 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Fan - buy a dictionary and read it. There is no racial inference to the oft used English word 'niggling'. None-what-so-ever. For someone with two degrees that shouldn't take long to sink in, especially if you got the degrees in English, as opposed to gobbledygook. (PS. stop making derogatory comments about Brits. That's racism. Ask Pete.)

10/27/05 07:24:11 AM|Willard|East||Yeah|||10|I'm mostly responsible for all this crap going on. I started up the whole Ali/Frazier debate again. Nobody would back down. I'm sorry. Anyways, God bless Jerry Quarry.

10/27/05 10:51:54 AM|Pete|Cleveland||N/A|||10|DOES ANYONE ON THIS SITE HAVE THE COURAGE TO ANSWER MY QUESTION? QUESTION: IF ANYONE WAS TALKING TO ME FACE TO FACE, WOULD YOU ACCUSE ME OF "RENTLESS NIGGLING."

10/27/05 12:31:27 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Come on gang! This is a site to talk boxing. The Quarry's conduct themselves like they always do, with their utmost CLASS; it would embarrass me two times if they read some of this stuff. We should very much be thankful for the site, for it is great, Jonathan, I'M from nearby Delano, and actually played football, against Bobby when he was WITH THE NORTH STARS and BAKERSFIELD. I did some research on Mike Nixon/Sugar Ray Seales bout the scores were 48-44, with Nixon hitting the deck twice, if it weren't for the knockdowns, the scores would have been 46-44 and very close, Nixon was no joke! Angelo thanku for the kind words and I very much appreciate it.

10/27/05 02:17:21 PM|Fan|Fandom||Fan@Fandom.com|||10|Pete I wouldn't say that to you. I wouldn't say it for a couple reasons. First, I don't use words like niggling. Maybe that is a word used often in the U.K, but I have two masters degrees and have never heard of it. Also I don't like the word. I have learned that words people don't know are useless because your target audience doesn't understand you. On boxing site the word "niggling" is a useless word. Any word that has to be given a dictionary reference to the majority of people reading it is useless. Noam, speak to your audience, not above them.}

10/27/05 03:50:18 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Fan: You must have hated Cosell if you don't like college S.A.T. word usage. Actually, the word "niggling" isn't that uncommon—I've heard it used fairly often. I'm not sure if this was a correct use, but I read an article in a car magazine about Jaguar having "niggling quality problems." That's just one example and I'm sure there are many others. I'm not sure we should sensor words just because they SOUND offensive.

10/27/05 04:12:56 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Fan - buy a dictionary and read it. There is no racial inference to the oft used English word 'niggling'. None-what-so-ever. For someone with two degrees that shouldn't take long to sink in, especially if you got the degrees in English, as opposed to gobbledygook. (PS. stop making derogatory comments about Brits. That's racism. Ask Pete.)

10/27/05 07:24:11 AM|Willard|East||Yeah|||10|I'm mostly responsible for all this crap going on. I started up the whole Ali/Frazier debate again. Nobody would back down. I'm sorry. Anyways, God bless Jerry Quarry.

10/27/05 10:51:54 AM|Pete|Cleveland||N/A|||10|DOES ANYONE ON THIS SITE HAVE THE COURAGE TO ANSWER MY QUESTION? QUESTION: IF ANYONE WAS TALKING TO ME FACE TO FACE, WOULD YOU ACCUSE ME OF "RENTLESS NIGGLING."

10/27/05 12:31:27 PM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|Come on gang! This is a site to talk boxing. The Quarry's conduct themselves like they always do, with their utmost CLASS; it would embarrass me two times if they read some of this stuff. We should very much be thankful for the site, for it is great, Jonathan, I'M from nearby Delano, and actually played football, against Bobby when he was WITH THE NORTH STARS and BAKERSFIELD. I did some research on Mike Nixon/Sugar Ray Seales bout the scores were 48-44, with Nixon hitting the deck twice, if it weren't for the knockdowns, the scores would have been 46-44 and very close, Nixon was no joke! Angelo thanku for the kind words and I very much appreciate it.
'bickering' to imply that I was calling Pete a bitch. I didn't say the word 'contribute' to imply that he is an ex-con. I didn't use the word 'conviction' to imply that Pete has been convicted of a criminal offense. Phew! Do we have to do this everytime to re-assure Pete that we are not being nasty to his fragile sensitivities?)

[10/27/05 04:24:39 PM|Pete|Cleveland||N/A|||10|Angelo, you did not answer the question. Nor did Kent, Howard C, Noam, Jimmy, Johnathan.ANSWER THE QUESTION BRAVE PEOPLE! ?????????? QUESTION: If you were speaking to me (a BLACK MAN) FACE TO FACE. WOULD YOU ACCUSE ME "OF RENTLESS NIGGLING." HAVE THE COURAGE AND THE DECENCY TO ANSWER THE QUESTION. SO FAR ONLY ONE PERSON HAS THAT COURAGE AND DECENCY. ALL IT TAKES IS A YES OR NO ANSWER.Fan, I thank you for taking a stand on this issue. Time will tell if others can be as forthright as you. I have my doubts.

[10/27/05 05:04:35 PM|Pete: I'd probably go ahead and use the word niggling with friends/aquaintances of mine who happen to be black. They know me, and I doubt they'd infer anything negative, even if I lead with "restless." Honestly, if speaking to a black stranger, I might still use the word---I wouldn't intend it to be offensive and might regret it if they reacted the way you did. Given your reaction, maybe it isn't a good idea to use this word when conversing with black strangers, though I'm not sure why it would come up in a casual conversation anyway---on the subway, waiting in line at a bank, etc. I wonder if others would feel the way you do???

[10/27/05 05:03:18 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Pete: I'd probably go ahead and use the word niggling with friends/aquaintances of mine who happen to be black. They know me, and I doubt they'd infer anything negative, even if I lead with "restless." Honestly, if speaking to a black stranger, I might still use the word---I wouldn't intend it to be offensive and might regret it if they reacted the way you did. Given your reaction, maybe it isn't a good idea to use this word when conversing with black strangers, though I'm not sure why it would come up in a casual conversation anyway---on the subway, waiting in line at a bank, etc. I wonder if others would feel the way you do???

[10/27/05 05:04:35 PM|Restless, relentless or relentless!!!!

[10/27/05 05:21:06 PM|Fan@Fandom.com|||10|I can promise that niggling is not a regularly used word that people know in the United States. I don't think it was meant to be racist to be honest, but I also think Noam was trying to impress us with his vocabulary. When people don't understand you, you get into this trouble Noam. You are a young guy that has a lot of learning to do, I wish you well with your studies in the UK. Figure your about 25, getting things going in life. Full of spirit and vocabulary. I don't like you. I also don't think your a bad guy. You don't care about my opinion though, because you are sure that your right anyways. I have no problem with the U.K, you all paid your war debts. Can't say the same about the frogs to the east.

[10/27/05 05:50:43 PM|Hey Fan, you just finished boasting that you've got two degrees (whooppee) and now YOU'RE accusing Noam of trying to impress us with his vocabulary! All because he used the words "relentless niggling". You're kidding, right? (At least we got the admission from Fan that Noam WASN'T being racist. Hear that Pete? Is Fan being racist by disagreeing with you?!)NEWSFLASH: the language we communicate in here is English. E N G L I S H. My English dictionary defines the word 'relentless' as 'harsh intention.' It also defines 'niggling' as 'triffling, petty.' Neither word has anything to do with 'rentless' or 'nigger'. Go look in your dictionaries. Off you go........
degrees, Fan, I HAVE travelled throughout the English speaking world and, guess what? Relentless niggling aren't big rarely used words. Now that that's settled, and Pete's greatest supporter Fan admits it wasn't racist, let's move onto something else. Time to dry those crocodile tears, blossom....

| 10/27/05 05:54:07 PM | Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville | |||10 | One more thing, Pete. LISTEN: NO ONE ACCUSED YOU OF BEING A RENTLESS NIGGER. IT'S YOUR PARANOIA SPEAKING. YOU WERE ACCUSED OF RELENTLESS NIGGLING. JUST LIKE YOU ARE DOING NOW. STOP IT OR YOU'LL GO BLIND. IMAGINE LIVING WITH THIS GUY. RELENTLESS CARPING, NAGGING, NIGGLING DOPE. |

| 10/27/05 06:10:58 PM | American Heritage English Dictionary | America | Fourth Edition YEAR 2000 | |||10 | NIGGLING is defined as "to be preoccupied with petty details. To find fault constantly and trivially carp." |

| 10/27/05 06:12:24 PM | Roget's | The New Thesaurus | America | |||10 | "Niggling" - "inconsiderable, negligible, paltry, piddling, small-minded, triffling". |

| 10/27/05 06:12:35 PM | Roget's | The New Thesaurus | America | |||10 | "Niggling" - "inconsiderable, negligible, paltry, piddling, small-minded, triffling". |

| 10/27/05 06:12:42 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | |||10 | Howard, the word relentless is used in everyday conversations. However if you and your friends use niggling in everyday sentences I must say you probably use words like quaint, verbose and melancholy. All other words in the English Language. I travel in all kinds of circles, I do talk with academics, but I also have many blue collar type friends. I have NEVER heard the words niggling before. I have heard Niggardly which was used in a similar context. I think I have heard that word used once or twice. I AM very certain Howard that you haven't heard niggling more than 2 or three times in your life unless your hanging out at Harvard social functions, and that's not happening is it. |

| 10/27/05 06:12:49 PM | Roget's | The New Thesaurus | America | |||10 | "Niggling" - "inconsiderable, negligible, paltry, piddling, small-minded, triffling". |

| 10/27/05 06:26:25 PM | Howard C. | Louisville | howardc@louisville | |||10 | Fan from Fandom - words mean what they mean. Do a google search on the word 'niggling'. No racist meaning is attached to it. Then read the American Heritage Dictionary. Same thing. If you haven't heard the word used before, you are moving in rarified circles and you must be quite young and very inexperienced in life. I'm not. Niggling means what the American Heritage Dictionary says what it means....."to find fault constantly". The professors who wrote that book had thousands of masters degrees, possibly millions of them, more than you. They are much smarter than both of us. Trust them.Pete was finding fault constantly in Noam and myself before Noam accused him of relentless niggling. Go read the sequence of posts. Read the petty small-minded comments Pete was making leading up to Noam's "relentless niggling' post. Any idiot with half a brain can see that it wasn't racist. Noam didn't know Pete was black. You didn't know Pete was black. No one here knew Pete was black. Except Pete and he didn't tell anyone he was black. So we have no body. No evidence. No smoking gun. No racist hate crime. So let's stop the relentless niggling for chrissake and move on. P L E A S E. |

| 10/27/05 07:07:16 PM | Noam | same | same | |||10 | I'll give you a practical demonstration of what "relentless niggling" means by referring to Pete's own posts.10/14/05: "Noam I saw a program on alcoholics on tv recently. They have great success with people drinking too much. You should check it out."...... 10/17/05: "Howard name your top 10 welterweights."...... 10/18/05: "Howard I told you to name your top 10 and you only give me 2 names. You really disappoint me. Are you afraid to commit yourself. Read Noam's posts and you might learn something about boxing."......10/18/05: "Howard if you knew anything about boxing you have not demonstrated it here."...... 10/18/05: "Howard you have no new insights. You write the same boring bs over and over again. It's boring me."...... 10/18/05: "Howard, have you no shame, read Noam's posts and learn something about boxing. Quite frankly I regard time spent corresponding with you as less than fulfilling. You are a very boring guy."........ 10/19/05: "Howard, I am still waiting for you to document your source regarding Frazier."........ 10/20/05: "Angelo, you have been saying the same stuff for years."........ 10/21/05: "I asked Howard for a list of his top 10 welterweights and he did not give me the list. Can you tell me two significant posts Howard has ever made. Noam go and counsel Howard."........ 10/22/05: "Howard don't pretend you can read minds."........ And on it went until I wrote on 10/24/05: "Lots of reading to catch up on since I last visited here. Pete, you'd do better without the relentless niggling."Guys, read Pete's posts because they justify the criticism of "relentless niggling" in every possible way. It was never intended as a racial slur and that is so obvious that I am very insulted and indignant that anyone could accuse me of it. Calling someone a racist is a horrible insult. On one hand Pete accuses me of being an Ali lover and on the other hand a racist. What colour is Ali, you bonehead ?I'd appreciate someone like Kent showing some moral courage here by explaining to Pete that it wasn't racist in any way and he should shut up. Otherwise this thing will only drag on to everyone's detriment.|Guys, read Pete's posts because they justify the criticism of "relentless niggling" in every possible way. It was never intended as a racial slur and that is so obvious that I am very insulted and indignant that anyone could accuse me of it. Calling someone a racist is a horrible insult. On one hand Pete accuses me of being an Ali lover and on the other hand a racist. What colour is Ali, you bonehead ?I'd appreciate someone like Kent showing some moral courage here by explaining to Pete that it wasn't racist in any way and he should shut up. Otherwise this thing will only drag on to everyone's detriment.|Many of us found your relentless niggling boring, too, Pete.|
I've never heard anyone use the word niggling in normal conversation either!

Angelo, Willard and Fan thank you for your thoughtful reply.

Niggling is a word, hell I don't know, I haven't the time for bickering with people, and as far as face to face goes, that would probably help the Quarry site. ask me something about boxing (mainly 70's) And I'll do my best to answer something. I have a lot on Quarry's career, the most exciting heavyweight bout I've witnessed would have to be Foreman/Lyle Everybody Take Care Would you? What'sniggling.com

Charles: Jerry lost to two of the best Champions of the era, Ali and Frazier, and yes, he did lose a heartbreaking decision to Jimmy Ellis, maybe the weakest Champion of the era (but a good boxer nonetheless). At his best, Jerry Quarry was hard to beat. He mowed down up and coming contenders and often, he was the clear underdog. Matchmakers penciled him in---a name fighter---but one they thought "their guy" would beat. Instead, Jerry ended up with a batch of impressive wins over guys like Mac Foster, Thad Spencer, Ron Lyle and Earnie Shavers. Shavers... gave Muhammad Ali fifteen tough rounds, and fought Larry Holmes closely twice, knocking Holmes down in a title fight. Quarry knocked out Shavers in one round. Ron Lyle knocked down George Foreman twice in their exciting fight, before Foreman won—and Lyle also fought very well against Muhammad Ali in a title match, yet Jerry Quarry won a very impressive decision over Lyle, one of the most dangerous punchers of the 70's. Quarry is best remembered for the losses to the greats, and also losses later in his career—against Frazier and Norton—and his amazing victories are overlooked by "ESPN Classic" and others who don't know any better. Do some research on his career—try to find his wins on video—you'll see what a great fighter he was. Our own Jimmy Dorsey can give you the blow by blow details on what a great career Jerry had!

Yeah, Angelo brought up a good point. ESPN Classic sucks. They show Rumble in the Jungle, Thrilla in Manila, and Buster Douglas beating Mike Tyson. I have rarely seen any other bouts not involving the guys who fought in those matches. They had Ali/Wepner on last night, and it looks like Frazier/Bonavena 1 will be on tonight. I'd like to see more fights from more weight classes, with much different opponents. The only fighters ESPN Classic honors are Ali and Tyson.

Massimo — come to an English speaking country — America, Britain, etc — and you'll hear 'niggling' used in a non-racial way. Other than silly Pete, no one gets offended. Crocodile tears from him. Pete, how many times do you want it answered. Yes, I say 'niggling' to people, even blacks. The dictionary definition allows me to. Read the dictionary, fool. Now Pete. Answer me questions: 1) Did you tell anyone on this site that you are black? 2) Is the name Pete peculiar to blacks? 3) How did Noam or anyone else know that you are black before you began shedding crocodile tears?

By the way, Pete, stop your relentless niggling. The list Noam posted on your past comments prove niggling, carping, nagging, and petty cheap shots. Everyone someone you didn't like posted you told them to stop being "boring". You stop being boring, you obnoxious fool. (Now that I got that out, I feel much better.)

Niggling is a word used all over the English speaking world and it has no racial slur or meaning. A simple Google check demonstrates that for those wishing to take the time, for those wishing to be fair. Even today this word was used in English speaking newspapers. For example, The Indian Tribune published today: "The niggling detail that President Bush and his White House staff have so far been unable to swat away is Valerie Plum, the CIA agent whose cover was blown..." Was the paper being racist? Of course not. Niggling is a word used regularly in all parts of the world with no racial inference attached to it. Does anyone here believe that the word niggling was used as a racial slur by the poster Noam? There's a difference between not knowing the meaning of this word as pleaded by some Americans here, or using it as a deliberate slur. There are plenty of on-line dictionaries to confirm what I am saying. Try them. Ask Pete to explain away the millions of definitions of the word 'niggling' on-line and none of them allege a racist element. Ask Pete to find just one entry out of the millions of on-line references to the word 'niggling' that alleges a racial slur. There are none. Pete is a word killer. We must nurse and pet the language to appease his feigned sensitivity to every imagined slight, however trivial. Innocently used words are mangled to pretend offense when none was ever intended. His alleged distress at the use of the word is feigned and he uses it as a weapon. Political correctness gone made. Suckers born every second. Take the time and do a google check on the word 'niggling' and see Pete for what he is. I'll give a prize to any of you who can find an entry on the word niggling demonstrating that it is a racial slur.
Peter in all honesty I had actually never even heard the word "niggling" before you mentioned it and it isn't a word I would use period, I am curious at why I was being dinged out as a part of the group to answer this question, I have never even written to you or been involved in any of the past posts that may have caused you to call me out on this one.

Noam, given your love of sports and Italy's involvement in world football (soccer), I'm surprised that you're not familiar with the term 'niggle tactics'. Enter it on a search engine and you'll find it's a common term used in Britain, New Zealand, Australia, and all other English speaking nations that play football, rugby union, and rugby league. You'll also find it mentioned in countries like Argentina.

I think what happens is that some Americans are a bit unworldly and never get out of their home towns let alone their country. They've never travelled internationally, have no interest in sports other than American, and don't use language widely known out of their sheltered and insular environment. 'Niggle tactics' is a term often used in the British House of Commons as well (as the search shows). To twist the meaning of the dictionary word 'niggle', and change the letters to 'nigger', is beyond silly. For someone to suggest that this was a racist inference is ridiculous. And for Pete to pretend that it distressed him so much makes him a big sissy, in my opinion and the opinion of others who can see through the niggle tactics I accused him of. I'd hate to witness his reaction if someone really insulted him. Weep, sob, boo hoo!

Massimo, the term to enter on the google search is 'niggling tactics' and you'll see my point proved. Thanks.

In my last post I was only joking, I'm Italiano, so it's not surprising that I have never heard the word "niggling". I have understood that the word "niggling" is not offensive.

Pete, yes I'd say 'relentless niggling' to your face (x 1000000000000) as it is NOT a racist insult (as can be verified by the dictionary). My use of the term to you was perfectly in context to the definition in the dictionary. And, besides, you were using niggle tactics to annoy Howard and me as the record shows. Alleging it as a racial insult is beyond silly and I think you need professional help with your emotions.

I've never made a racial insult to anyone in my life. Whenever I've stepped over the mark on this site I've always owned up and apologized where necessary. There's no need for me to do that in this instance because I'm not at fault. Pete you are a cry baby and huge sissy who can't admit it when you've got it wrong. In this case, you deliberately misinterpreted what was said to use it as a weapon. You flunked it with your crocodile tears.

Before you came here in August 2005, everyone had put the past problems behind. Since you've been here with your relentless niggling the problem deteriorated and you caused everyone to be at each other's throats. Stop your niggle tactics. Thanks.

Massimo, I wasn't niggling you about being Italian. I was just... saying that a google check on 'niggling tactics' shows that it has specific meaning to world sports like rugby, football, etc, in the same context I used it to Cry Baby Pete.Build a bridge, Pete, and get over your problem, pal, because you're boring everyone. And pull your head in because we're looking for wood. :)|

Us Americans don't use the word niggling much. As far as being insular, I would have to agree that is true. Although thankfully for you Brits we came out of our borders during WWII.|

As fan pointed out, it is a word that is not in common use in America.Maybe you are not aware but I am not a white man either, at least not completely.I am of mixed race, white European, and Native American. In fact I am a member of a prominent California Indian tribe.As a child some of my so called friends in my mostly white neighborhood would sometimes tell me that I wasn't completely white, that I was part beeper (a racial slur for Mexican) and the more I would tell them that I am not Mexican, that I am Indian, they would call me Beamer or Beamer lover. I do understand how you could misinterpret an uncommon word as being racist and I do understand racism towards me, if not as much as you but at least to a certain extent, about how you feel about it.I also understand how Noam and Howard are insulted by being called racist. BUT LIKE I SAID, I AM NOT TAKING SIDES IN THIS FEUD. I SEE POINTS ON BOTH SIDES BUT IT IS MORE IMPORTANT THAT WE VALUE THIS SITE AND WE ALL WOULD LIKE IT TO CONTINUE. SO PLEASE SOMEONE TAKE THE FIRST STEP AND MAKE PEACE SO BRANDI DOESN'T SHUT IT DOWN.YOU KNOW, I HAVEN'T EVEN VISITED THIS SITE SINCE MY LAST POST. IT JUST ISN'T FUN WHEN THE FIGHTING IS GOING ON. I AM NOT LEAVING BUT I DID TAKE ANOTHER SHORT BREAK HOPEING THE FIGHTING HAD STOPPED. HOPE IT DOES SOON.

Charles Young, Jerry Quarry had wins over former champion Floyd Patterson and contenders such as, Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers, Buster Mathis, Mac Foster, and Thad Spencer. Jerry was ranked in the top ten for almost ten years and George Foreman called him the best heavyweight who didn't win the title. In fact Foreman said he avoided fighting Jerry when he was in his first stint as champion.|
world as proved by a google search (try 'niggling tactics' - a common term in the sporting world). Just because you guys don't know a word doesn't mean that word is insulting or evil or racial.

I have watched alot of jerry quarry fights and much as i enjoy watching him fight there is no way he would have beaten foreman. He would have been badly hurt. jerry blew hot and cold and was never good enough to been a champion in any era.

Hello Mark from England, regarding Jerry's chances verses Foreman, realize styles make fights and each match up with different fighters is different. So just because Jerry lost to Frazier does not automatically mean he would lose to Foreman.

Consider that Jerry had success with other big punchers such has Ron Lyle, Earnie Shavers, and Mac Foster. He was quicker than them and still strong enough to hurt them. But the key point in his fight with them is in each case Jerry was hit very hard and he was still standing and fighting back hard. Jerry took a great punch, an attribute he would need in a Foreman fight.

In fact, Foreman, who was in the audience when Jerry knocked out Shavers in less than one round told Jerry, "you just blew your title shot." I think at the time people thought Foreman was joking but since Jerry didn't get his shot and Foreman later said he avoided Jerry when he was champion the first time around again his words, not mine, Foreman considered Jerry a threat.

It would be a difficult task for Jerry to make it out of the opening rounds when Foreman was most dangerous and Foreman's bombs could tear Jerry's tender skin but in the later rounds if Jerry did last until the sixth round and later, it is very conceivable that Jerry could take the play away from Foreman when Foreman grew tired.

Jerry Quarry was better than champions such as Leon Spinks, Primo Carnera (sorry Massimo), Johannson, Tommy Burns, Jack Sharkey, and he was certainly better a lot of the more current champions such as John Ruiz, Hasim Rahman, Oliver McCall, Frank Bruno, Gerrie Coetzee, Greg Page, Michael Dokes, and maybe even Vitali Klitschko.

So to say Jerry couldn't be a champion in any era is just not so as Jerry could have a very good chance to beat any and all of the champions I just listed. Mark, I would be surprised if you said you have seen more than the usual fights they show on the Classic channels such as Jerry's losses verses Ali, Frazier, and Norton.

Kent, i have seen jerrys fights against bodell, lyle, shavers, foster, chuvalo, ellis, spencer, norton, ali 1&2, frazier 1&2 so i have a few to say on his day he was a world class boxer but he was to hot & cold. I find him so frustrating, he was fantastic against lyle & shavers & down right suicidal against frazier. I just think he would have tried to slug it out with foreman like he did with shavers. How many fights did jerry have in which he stuck to the gameplan? Lyle i know of,anymore? On a lighter note how are kent? I have not been on this site for 3 years or more but you have always been the first to answer anything i have put down on this site so its nice to hear your thoughts again.

The smart money would be on Foreman to take Jerry Quarry, probably by TKO inside seven rounds. Kent is correct though, that the old saying is true---styles make fights. Not many people gave an aging Muhammad Ali any chance against Foreman, and we all know the outcome of that one. Foreman was beatable. We didn't know that until Ali accomplished it, but whose to say Quarry couldn't have taken the fight into the later rounds and earned a victory? Not likely, but certainly not impossible either. And Kent is right on target with his rundown of the Champions who Quarry could have beaten. He certainly WOULD HAVE been a champion in some eras, including the current one.
Primo Carnera. In a fight with Jerry Primo should have taken advantage of (or for, or from) his bigger size and should have tried to cut Jerry with his long left jab and to hurt him with his powerful uppercut, but I'd bet on Jerry in this one. Jerry wins 9 out of 10 times.

Massimo: Jerry could be stopped on cuts by someone with Primo's reach---but I'd like Jerry's chances because he'd be coming forward and working inside---forcing the action. Assuming he could avoid the pitfall of cuts around the eyes, I have to believe he'd win----maybe not 9 out of 10 as you say---but at least the majority of the time.

Mark: I agree angelo i could not imagine in a million years klitschko being in a fight like the foreman-lyle because yes he has no guts for that type of fight. But then again are there any heavyweights out there today who could drag him into that type of fight? I think not!! Jerry could beat most of todays heavyweights but i would think he would get busted up by klitschko's jab which is very long and very hard. Its not rocket science!
Liston would have busted Jerry up with his jab, Ali did bust him up, even Norton went on his bike and used his jab. Tell me Angelo how would Jerry beat the big fella? As people say its all about styles!

10/31/05 03:27:59 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC|funktron@yahoo.com|10|I'll mostly defer to Kent---but Quarry he could beat Klitscho much the same way you would beat Buster Mathis, another big man. I agree that a good jab might very well "bust" Jerry up, but honestly, I could see Jerry forcing the action against Klitscho, and Klitscho, on the receiving end of the same type of punches that Jerry used to hit Shavers, or even Frazier in the first round of their first fight, would not be jabbing, he'd be running. Klitscho would essentially be taken out of his game plan and would begin to fight in a panic. As for Norton vs. Jerry, give me a break. Jerry took the fight on what, 17 days notice? And for all intents and purposes he was done by 1975---done after the second Frazier fight as a serious contender. Norton was very, very fortunate to draw Quarry at the end of his career, instead of, say, the same Quarry who beat Shavers. If you want to know the outcome of a Quarry-Norton fight in 1973, watch Foreman vs. Norton. That will give you a good starting point.

10/31/05 03:45:37 PM|Howard C.|Louisville|howardc@louisville|10|Poor Pete. Sees things that don't exist. Pete, no one on this site has supported your crazy interpretation that the term 'relentless niggling' is racist. Not one person. Buy a dictionary. The term means that you are a petty, trivial, carping pest. It defines you. PERFECTLY. Also, Pete, people are avoiding conversing with you. That's why they don't answer your questions. It's not support for you. It's more like people walking through a shopping mall looking the other way when they see someone making a complete fool of themselves. They pretend they haven't seen them and hope the person doesn't approach. If they do, they walk faster to get away, sometimes running. When you came here in August, Pete, you wrote that "Noam didn't deter people from coming here, they just decided to leave." Now you allege the exact opposite. I can list many other examples of your hypocrisy and contradiction if you want. Ask me to. It's all in the archives. My personal belief is that you are very lonely, craving attention, yet to be diagnosed and medicated. That I have perhaps contributed to whatever devils are pecking at your mind does me no credit. I usually avoid like the plague interacting with fools. Now I'm arguing with YOU. CRIPES!

10/31/05 04:24:17 PM|Frask|copenhagen|fraskfe@dn.com|5| I want to more about why Jerry Quarry isn't more well known. All people say is that he got beat up by Ali and such. I looked at his record and beat alot of good fighters. I told my friended he beat Floyd Patterson and my friend told me I was nuts. I showed him and he said he didn't even know he fought Shavers. I enjoyed looking through boxrec.com for records, I just recently found that site. Thanks to Olle who helped me English so I could right this. Bye|
We must take the letter K out of the alphabet just in case. All words that start with the letters N I G, too. Have to find some other word for black. Hey, Pete, high time you wrote a new dictionary for mankind. One that won't offend everyone. Our ancestors stuffed the last one up! Pete even accused me of "institutionalized racism". What does he mean? Did I catch racism while doing time in an institution, like a psychiatric hospital or a jail. Can you catch racism like a virus? Does Pete think I'm a whacko and a criminal, as well as an institutionalized racist? The mind boggles so much I can't sleep. Before Pete life was so uncomplicated.

Forest Wardawhile back you talked about being a Ward fan, and that "FOREST WARD THE LAST I HEARD IS STILL ALIVE AND HAS BEEN IN AND OUT OF JAIL, AND HAS BEEN DECLARED MENTALLY INCOMPETENT". we're doing a feature length documentary on Chuck Wepner. the Ward fight was a major point in Chuck's career and though the prospects sound rather dim, we'd like to locate Forest and try to get an interview out of him. do you have a way to contact him or know someone who does? re: Liston/Wepner we have the weigh-in and the silent footage of the fight which circulates. I'm looking for any sound from the bout, and film or stills of Ali in attendance. referrals? re: 1964 NY Golden Gloves Chuck was heavyweight champion finishing at MSG. all I've found is film of the National finals. any of the NY finals around? have more questions, but want to keep this post short. can you contact me off the board? thanks a lot.

to everyone here on the Quarry letters page- some great reading to enjoy here. if anyone has photos or footage of any Chuck Wepner fights please contact me. looking especially for home movies, snapshots, etc. - things you don't see every day. email me if you're interested in helping out in this area. thank you all.

Hello Frask, even here in America people are surprised when I say Jerry Quarry beat a lot of good fighters such as Lyle, Shavers, and Patterson. Part of the reason is the media only shows his losses not his wins. But since we are still talking about him shows that Jerry is not forgotten that a lot of people still do know what a good fighter he was. Jerry Quarry was a champion, if not with a title, a champion for the efforts he put out and he always will be.

Regarding Foreman verses Quarry, one of things Jerry would have in his favor is the fact that Foreman would wind up his punches and telegraph when he was punching. Jerry, being a great counter puncher, would make Foreman pay by anticipating Foreman's punches and beating Foreman to the punch. Counter punching is not always punching someone back after being hit. It can be but it is often seeing a punch coming and landing first. Also, as I stated before, Jerry took a great punch which would give him a good chance of weathering the early storm and coming on strong in the later part of the fight.

Well, folks the results of my informal poll are in. Only 2 people on this site would and will use the term, RELENTLESS NIGGLING when referring to me a Black Man. Knowing full well that the term offends me, and I find it racist when used by white people. Of the 2 people I find racist, one is from Europe, Noam. The other is an old man who lives in the deep south, Louisville Kentucky, Howard C. Regarding the term "institutional racism." Howard C does not understand the meaning of the phrase. Well, I will be brief, but let me explain it to him. It is when white people do or say offensive things to blacks and insist they did nothing wrong. A mild example is assuming every black person supports "affirmative Action." A severe example is assuming every black thinks the US Goverment is against him, and out to put innocent blacks in jail. In both cases neither are assumptions are true. But a lot of whites think all blacks feel that way. And it simply is not true.
you understand, institutional racism |

Pete, while I am not jumping on Noam and Howard's side, why can't you just let this subject go, for the good of the site? A year ago in October we got off on a tangent, we were dicussing history and I asked the question, "Who discovered America?" One of the answers was Columbus and I said wrong, that people were already here and one of the posters said, "Well a bunch of savages in loin clothes doesn't count." Which is insulting to my native ancestors as if someone does any research they would find that there were some quite advanced civilizations in the Americas well before Europeans came and besides, it is racially biased to assume that a so called more advanced society is actually better than another society.

Pete, I come from a different perspective as I identify with both white people and native people and my point is I could have made a big deal out of this but this person did not know he was talking to a person with a native background so I let it go. TO THE PERSON WHO CommentED ON NATIVE AMERICANS BEING SAVAGES IN LOIN CLOTHES, I AM NOT TRYING TO START A FIGHT ABOUT IT NOW, I AM TRYING TO MAKE A POINT TO PETE ABOUT STOPPING THIS FIGHT. Pete, Noam had no idea you were black, in fact none of us did until you told us. But to Noam and Howard, you know now the term "relentless niggling" bothers Pete so why keep using it? Can't you just let it go also?

ALL OF YOU WHO ARE FIGHTING, CAN WE PLEASE MOVE ON NOW?

I'm worried about your health, Pete. If you feign outrage for too much longer, it will become permanent. The symptoms for 'outrage permanus' (non-racial Latin medical term) are there for all to see. Pete's face contorted in angry bewilderment (even when he's not angry or bewildered). Brows permanently arched to cap wildly bugged eyes owlishly searching for sinners to accuse and execute with imaginery 'poll trials'. His mouth (through which no vestige of humour ever passes) tightly pursed. Flared nostrils. Bulging forehead veins fueling red cheeks (caucasians only). Embarrassing flatulence. Confusion. Paranoia. And then 'end stage' relentless niggling. Pete's mother asking, "How are you today, Pete?" begets the response, "I'm outraged." She'll sympathetically query, "What about?" and he'll respond, "Everything!" before adding, "and everyone, ESPECIALLY HOWARD C. AND NOAM." A smile from a pretty girl will be met with a furious, "Get outta of my face." Should a puppy dog dare wag its tail displaying happiness and joy of life, Pete will tie the tail to a bus exhaust. Every word, every deed, EVEN SILENCE, will be misconstrued to trigger Pete's 'outrage permanus'. The most famous sufferer (before he got cut down to size) was, dare I risk saying it, the Black Knight crossing Monty Python's bridge. Zab Judah, Russell Crowe, Paula Jones, Gerry Shultz, and Mike Tyson also suffer from it. Sadly, once got, there's no cure. There's a colony of 'outrage permanus' sufferers living in the highlands of Afghanistan. In caves around Tora Bora County. Among the Taliban and UBL. They love unhappy, permanently outraged people like Pete up there. The more unhappiness and outrage, the better they like it. Pete, wake up before it's too late. Have some fun. Think good thoughts. Stop being unhappy and outraged. Don't take offense at insults not given. Otherwise, it will eventually become permanent and all consuming. So excise the demons pecking at your tortured mind. Listen to a wise ol' man with a withered arm from Kentucky. God bless, son. (P.S. and ditch the sophistry and relentless niggling, too! :) )

Pete: Maybe the media is at fault for fueling the stereotype that "all black people" think the government is against them, or "all black people" are in favor of affirmative action. My personal experience is that neither of these statements is true. I've known plenty of black achievers throughout my life, especially post-college. These are people who have gone further than I have--further with their education, further with their careers and they earn more money. I'm doing fine—I have two degrees (though neither are graduate degrees) from Penn State and I make a half decent living—but there are black people I know who are professionals with towering intellects, and many of them don’t believe in affirmative action and I don’t think any of them think the government is out to get them. Having said that, I believe that on television and in newspapers, all of us white folks see the same nonsense over and over—the ridiculous assertion that guys like Reverend Jackson or Minister Farrakahn are "representatives of black America" and that somehow, these few people speak for all black people. I know that it’s nonsense, but over and over, the media spins it that a few "leaders" can accurately speak for all black people. It’s written and shown so often, people actually start to buy into it.

Why can’t Noam just say "I’m sorry I offended you, I didn’t mean to.” Then Pete says "Thank you for that." Then Howard C. says nothing. I think that would cure all our problems.

Pan, would you apologize for something you didn't do ? I didn't know Pete was black. No one did. So how could I be racist towards him ?And, anyway, the words I used weren't racially offensive as proved by the dictionary and a google search. I can't apologize for Pete's ignorance and hypersensitivity. Why not ask Pete to apologize to me for wrongly accusing me of racism ? I find that offensive. I can prove my case. Pete can’t. Simple as that.

Fan, simply because I won't apologize for something I haven't done. I can't apologize for Pete's hypersensitivity and ignorance. That's his problem. Not mine.I am indifferent to colour. It makes no difference to me. Being called a racist is offensive. Pete ought apologize for that. He might also like to apologize for poking fun at Howard's age and arm problem. In the absence of an apology, I vote for moving on to a different subject, hopefully something to do with boxing.

Hello Everyone, I see we are back to fighting again, pretty silly to me. I do think that’s its time to get back to sports again. Kent I was reading back in the Archives, and Mr.Jimmy had asked you to keep up the good work of informing all of us on boxing. and that he had thanked you for the time you have shared with us all. I want to thank you too. I do read the letters on this site all the time. I just wish that all of you would stay on sports. I seen that Jerry's own son asked you to get back to boxing and that didn't work. Then Brenda's daughter. Now again I'm asking you all to get over this trip. Look up the word-read the meaning-and get over it. and this comes from this little half breed, thats what they called me in school.(half Irish, and half Indian.) and very proud of it. Always had the temper to go with it. Understand???? Now, how about those COLTS everyone here tells me I need to be a Colt fan, Naaaaaaaaaaaaaa not me.  Play nice, and have a great day!

Colts are like 0-14 against the Patriots the last few seasons. They aren't going to win this game.

My KC Chiefs take on the Raiders---hopefully the Chiefs will pull out the win at home.

Fan thanks for your considerate words. But fellows I have gone back into the archives, and anytime there is hostilities on this site those two are involved. They can't be right everytime.Noam, and Howard call people names, take sentences out of context and basically lie about what the person was saying. The quality, the fun that was on this board has disappeared since these 2 individuals became regulars. Does anyone think the site has gotten better since Noam, and Howard C joined? Personally, from reading the archives; I feel these guys should have been put in their place a long time ago. But, the regulars on the board ignored them when they lied, called people names...And what is the end result? More people leave the board and the quality of the board declines. Fan, Kent, Angelo and who ever else is a regular this board, you guys let these 2 guys run a muck. You guys pretty much ignored their revolting behavior, and now what do you have?You have basically daily posts about Ali-Frazier with the same old diatribe, never anything new, and daily posts with Noam and Howard C attacking someone, and calling the person vile and sickening names. Labelling people as alcoholics, or gay; as a way to belittle a person who disagrees with their ramblings. And I am to believe that nothing was meant by the term, RELENTLESS NIGGLING, given their history? Those 2 are hate mongers Then the arguments begin lasting for weeks or months at a time.Well, fellows I am out of here. Sadly I wasted too much time here already. As the expression goes, "you reap what you sow." And the Quarry site members sowed Noam, and Howard C. |11/3/05 11:13:10 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Pete, I hope you reconsider and stay. As you know, I have asked everyone who has been fighting to stop fighting for the good of the site. What else can I do? I can't make someone stop posting what they post.Hey, I have done all I can to try and restore peace here.Thank you Brandi for your kind words. Mr. Jimmy was helpful to me in encouraging me to do my writing and he was always willing to listen to what I had to say and he is still missed around here and he always will be.|11/3/05 11:53:49 AM|Brandi Quarry|Indiana||brandiquarry3@msn.com|||10|Pete- Don't go away, everyone has the right to say and think what they want, but after weeks of the same thing its time to move on to another fight. I'm sure we can all agree to that. We could fight about the Colts, but like I said its not my team. Now Mr Jimmy was a Rams fan, When they left Ca he became a trader, but then they started winning again and he again became a fan. Now I use to tell him he was a trader cause he gave up on the Rams for a while. Myself, I have always been a Packers Fan. no matter if they won or lost. Mr Jimmy and I use to go back and forth about this, wow was it alot of fun. So now its time to fight about something else. Maybe, who you think the next Champion will be? Maybe me! Naaaaa stick around and lets see who wins. Lets see who guesses right. you can never really tell right. strange things happen every day. Have a great day! |11/3/05 01:04:31 PM|mark|portsmouth, england||victoria.knight4@ntlworld.com|||10|Could anyone tell me more about mike quarry? what was he like as a fighter and could he have been a world champion if he was around today? I have only seen mike fight bob foster and that does not really tell me much.|11/3/05 02:50:44 PM|Howard C.|Louisville||howardc@louisville|||10|Pete, move on, please. Ever since you came here in August 2005 you have been a sanctimonious windbag telling us what to talk about and what not to talk about. Know-it-all posts followed by highhandedly berating people for being boring and talking "crap" (your word).When you got some back in return, guess what? Glass jaw. Crocodile tears. STOP CRYING. BE A MAN !Concentrate on what YOU write and leave everyone else alone. And no one is out to get you. That's just your tortured mind and paranoia speaking to you, not us.So, what are your Top 10 bantamweight champs of all time. I can give you a few names to get you started .....Ruven Olivares, Carlos Zarate, Lupe Pintor..... come on, Pete, think up some of your own, son. In order, please.|
Pete, move on, please. Ever since you came here in August 2005 you have been a sanctimonious windbag telling us what to talk about and what not to talk about. Know-it-all posts followed by highhandedly berating people for being boring and talking "crap" (your word). When you got some back in return, guess what? Glass jaw. Crocodile tears. STOP CRYING. BE A MAN!

Concentrate on what YOU write and leave everyone else alone. And no one is out to get you. That's just your tortured mind and paranoia speaking to you, not us. So, what are your Top 10 bantamweight champs of all time? I can give you a few names to get you started.....Ruven Olivares, Carlos Zarate, Lupe Pintor..... come on, Pete, think up some of your own, son. In order, please.

Pete, don't call people liars etc. Your words haven't been twisted. The below words are all yours as everyone can check on the archives:

- 8/24/05: "Noam, Angelo, and Howard go overboard about Ali. They keep writing the same things over and over and again and again. It does get quite boring."
- 8/29/05: "Noam, outside of Ali, your comments are limited."
- 9/5/05: "Howard quit boring us."
- 9/19/05: "The posts are lengthy and boring."
- 10/10/05: "Howard if you know anything about boxing, you haven't demonstrated it. You write the same boring bs over and over again. It's boring me."
- 10/18/05: "Quite frankly, I regard time spent corresponding with you as less than fulfilling. You are a very boring guy."
- 10/14/05: "Noam, I SAW A PROGRAM ON ALCOHOLICS ON TV RECENTLY. THEY HAVE GREAT SUCCESS WITH PEOPLE WHO DRINK TOO MUCH. YOU MIGHT WANT TO CHECK IT OUT.

Your relentless niggling droned on and one, Pete. The above are all your words. There's more if you want more proof. PETE, PLEASE STOP TELLING US THAT WE ARE BORING OVER AND OVER AGAIN. PLEASE STOP ACCUSING US OF TALKING BS. STOP ACCUSING ME OF BEING AN ALCOHOLIC. STOP ACCUSING ME OF BEING A RACIST. PLEASE STOP CRITICIZING US ALL THE TIME.

Noam, that's not the only time you've been wrong."

I accept what you say Angelo, but it was a bit much. Every time he opened his mouth an allegation vomited out. He called me an alcoholic, a liar, a racist, etc., with no justification for any of it.
The only boxer I know is Muhammad Ali. But then again he transcends the sport so that probably doesn't really count. I just found out that George Chuvalo was the popular Canadian Heavyweight that Ali had beaten twice. Chuvalo had since received hero status. BOY WERE PEOPLE ON MY CASE FOR NOT KNOWING THAT! Growing up here in Ontario I'm a hockey fan myself (I love my Toronto Maple Leafs). If you want to talk hockey then I'm your man.

As for boxing I only became interested due to the tragic death of a boxer named Leavander Johnson. He died just a couple of months ago. I hate to admit it but his death was the only thing that brought boxing to the Canadian media. I myself am researching sports injuries for my thesis and figured that boxing would be a good sport to research since it is a relatively dangerous sport. When I came to this site what caught my eye was the pug dementia article. The term used for people who've suffered from too many blows to the head in a match or over the years. Great I thought. This is what I needed.

I was hard pressed to see any post related to boxing injuries (as I seached past threads) until I saw a post by Nickory. I'll re-read that as well as the couple of responses. I like some of what he said.

I myself am a supporter of visors in hockey. Perhapes head gear in boxing is also needed. I hope Nickory or others have more to add to this discussion.

Hey Mark from England, Kent again, I hope you can read my article about Mike on Eastsideboxing.com, in the archives there from March 2004 called Mike Quarry, A Warrior in his Own Right by me, Kent Appel. If you do a google search on the title, it will come up also.

Out of the at least one hundred plus boxing articles that I have written, it is my favorite piece I have ever done. It is such an honor to know that members of the Quarry family read my article including Arwanda, the Quarrys' mother.

I haven't been doing much writing lately but am planning to be more active shortly.

Noam: No one like's being labeled a racist, especially when they aren't one. That's a dangerous game to play---accusing people of racism/bigotry, when it isn't true. Of course, since Pete is no longer reading or posting, he won't see this and even if he does, he won't respond. He thought "relentless niggling" was some sort of prejudice/racist term.

I love watching the old fights. I still enjoy Quarry vs Billy Daniels when the guy in the crowd yells "let's go home early Jerry." In the next 15 seconds or so Daniels was knocked out in the very first round. Also I re-watched again where Jerry does his Ali impersonation before Ali-Norton III. It is hilarious, I mean hilarious.

I think Pete initially jumped the gun and because he didn't recognize the term 'relentless niggling' he was confused and misinterpreted what was meant. However, it must have become obvious that I wasn't being racist (given the dictionary definition, etc) but he wouldn't admit his error and continued on knowing the allegation was false.

If I thought he genuinely believed that it was a racist insult, I'd apologize for the misunderstanding and move on. But he was using the false allegation as a weapon. You'd remember, Angelo, that when I've stepped over the line previously I've apologized. I've got no problem doing that when I'm wrong. Funny thing, though, is that on the one hand I'm accused of being an Ali lover, yet on the other racist against blacks. The allegations seem to contradict each other.

Anyway, I've heard that Ali's medical condition has deteriorated.

That's a shame about Ali's condition. I hate to hear that. You're correct---it's a contradiction to be a fan of Muhammad Ali and at the same time, a racist. I haven't yet met anyone like that. If Pete were still on the board, he could respond. But he signed off forever at 9:43 AM, Thursday, November 3.
Hey KENT, Massimo, Angelo, Jimmy Dorsey, Thanks for keeping a modicum of logic and sensible posts on the true, not always agreeable, career and mistakes made by the Quarry Handlers.

Hi Steve, welcome back, it's a pleasure to hear from you!

Angelo, one of Ali's daughters launched a book she's written on Parkinson's Disease and she commented that her father's health has deteriorated. It's sad, given that he's only 63, but there's lots of other sufferers, too. The disease isn't all that uncommon, even among non-boxers. Makes me wonder whether Ali was always going to get the disease, but boxing just accelerated the onset and he got it much younger than most.

Nice to see you back Steve. Yes Jerry's management made some mistakes, one was rushing him too fast, tough fights, too soon. But he was a very well schooled fighter with excellent boxing skills so his management and trainers did some very positive things also.

It's possible that the Parkinson's was destined to afflict Ali, in his late 30's/early 40's, had he been a boxer, a dentist, an author or a balloon salesman. It's possible that like Michael J. Fox, Ali would have gotten Parkinson no matter what. My personal opinion is that it was in his genetic code to suffer from Parkinsons. Believe me, getting hit in the head hundreds of times by people like Earnie Shavers, Ken Norton, etc., didn't help matters. But I don't think boxing is solely responsible for Ali's health problems. I tend to agree with your post that maybe the onset happened sooner because of the physical stress he was under, but we'll probably never know. I wish there were advanced procedures and medications that could help Ali.

By rushing Jerry, which fight(s) are you referring to? Machen? I know that a lot of people point to the Machen loss as unnecessary --- that Jerry should have been brought along further before going in against a tough veteran fighter like Machen. But didn't Jerry already have about 20 fights under his belt at that point? I know that he had only been fighting professionally less than two years, but he had managed to fight nearly 20 times and didn't have a loss. At some point, you have to give a fighter a test to see what he can do. If he wins, you move ahead. If he loses, you reevaluate, regroup and start again. Don't get me wrong --- for example, putting Marvis Frazier in against Larry Holmes was silly. For one, Holmes was the baddest heavyweight in the world, bar none. Frazier was inexperienced, and he was put in against the best heavyweight, not just a good one. Secondly, the bright lights, big crowds and nationally televised, prime time event should be reserved for someone who has the experience to handle it --- someone who has been there and done that. Granted, Marvis had probably seen it all before as a youngster, with his Dad fighting for the title and in big money fights. But it's another whole deal when you're the one. But I don't think Eddie Machen was an outrageous opponent selection for someone up and coming with almost 20 fights. Now, the draw against Doyle might have clued them in to work a little more before stepping up in class, but still, I don't think it was terrible management. Also, it did accomplish getting Jerry in the mix with name heavyweights like Patterson --- getting him primed for the tournament as well. Jerry might have been managed more carefully, but his biggest mistake was being part of the same era as Ali and Frazier.

Angelo, the two draws with Tony Alongi, a man with over forty fights that Jerry fought before Machen when Jerry was barely 21 years old were also a clue he was rushed too fast.
23 years old and amazingly the first Frazier fight before he was even 25 years old. While it may not have made his chances of winning the title any better in his tough era, maybe he would not have been shot as a fighter by the time he was 29 years old, still young by heavyweight standards and maybe he would have been as badly damaged in the end. Jerry would have only been 32 in February 1978 and it could have been him to take Ali's title instead of Leon Spinks if he had not been in so many wars early. Something to think about.

Jerry would have only been 32 in February 1978 and it could have been him to take Ali's title instead of Leon Spinks if he had not been in so many wars early. Something to think about.

But Tyson was very young when he was put in with ranked fighters, including the former champion Holmes. And of course you bring up Spinks, who was indeed rushed. I truly believe that Spinks would have had a better overall career if he DIDN'T stun everyone by beating Ali. I'm still not even sure how that fight was made--it seems incredible that Ali wanted it, or that Spinks handlers wanted it, or that CBS wanted it. Spinks had less than 10 pro fights--and he's in against Ali? Weird.

Hey Fan from Fandom, could you please tell me where you caught Quarry's imitation of Ali? Your correct, it is really funny. If you have a tape of Ali vs Norton, with the Quarry segment, I'd be interested in acquiring it. Thanks for mentioning that episode. I had forgotten.

Jerry caught the Frazier fight as Frazier was developing into his absolutely wrecking ball prime. I truly believe Frazier, at that one two or three month period, would have given Ali two much pressure and strength and could have taken a decision. If Ali never existed, boxing would have dwindled to the point where no one even remembered Joe Louis or Rocky Marciano.

Hi Steve. I'm glad you're back because I respect you. However, I don't understand your logic when saying if Ali never existed then no one would have heard of Louis and Marciano (or words to that effect and I hope I haven't got it wrong.)

I think that if Ali never existed, then people would have considered the greatest ever probably as Foreman, Louis and Marciano (given the whuppin' George gave Joe in his prime). Ali's legend ought not effect Louis or Marciano.

It comes back to the old criteria....if you take Ali out of the equation (pretending he hadn't existed as you have done), then who was Joe's greatest victory? Ellis, Mathis, Quarry?

On the other hand, Foreman's greatest victory (victories) was/were Frazier. Surely that must put him above Frazier in the scheme of things. I don't understand how any of that effects Louis or Marciano who were, after all, from other eras.

Again, welcome back Steve. I hope you stay. If my being here effects that decision, then I'll go and you stay because, after all, you've been here much longer than me and you haven't upset the others as I have done. I'll happily go if it benefits here.

Steve, on hindsight I think I've partially misinterpreted you. You seem to be saying that the interest in Ali because of his reputation kept boxing alive to the point people remembered Louis and Marciano.

I believe the mid-60's Ali and the late-60's in-prime but inactive Ali would have handled an in-prime wrecking ball Frazier with superior boxing skills, speed and footwork. Ali's speed was diminished by '71. If you watch films of 60's Ali vs. 70's Ali, it's two different men. Frazier, in my opinion, would have never hit a 1960's Ali with the variety of punches that caught Ali in that '71 fight. Meanwhile, Ali's hand speed would have peppered Frazier with stinging punches, earning him a 15 round "hard workout" decision. I could see Ali winning this by 3-5 points on a 10 point must system. Easy? No way. Unless you're George Foreman or another big hitter, there would be no easy fight against Frazier. But clear winner? Yes, I think Ali would have taken him in the 60's by a wider Tyson was fighting world class fighters at a very young age but he was the exception, not the rule and his situation was different in that he didn't have as many tough fights early as Jerry did. James "Quick" Tillis was about the only one before he won the title but even so Tyson developed much earlier than most heavyweights and probably Tony Tucker was the only other tough fight after he was a champion until the loss to Buster Douglas.

Bernardo Mercado was about the only one before he won the title but even so Tyson developed much earlier than most heavyweights and probably Tony Tucker was the only other tough fight after he was a champion until the loss to Buster Douglas.

Bernardo Mercado was about the only one before he won the title but even so Tyson developed much earlier than most heavyweights and probably Tony Tucker was the only other tough fight after he was a champion until the loss to Buster Douglas.

Bernardo Mercado was about the only one before he won the title but even so Tyson developed much earlier than most heavyweights and probably Tony Tucker was the only other tough fight after he was a champion until the loss to Buster Douglas.

Bernardo Mercado was about the only one before he won the title but even so Tyson developed much earlier than most heavyweights and probably Tony Tucker was the only other tough fight after he was a champion until the loss to Buster Douglas.

Bernardo Mercado was about the only one before he won the title but even so Tyson developed much earlier than most heavyweights and probably Tony Tucker was the only other tough fight after he was a champion until the loss to Buster Douglas.

Mercado-Cooney would have been something.
Who has he ever beaten? World champions have to defend their title against the best opponents in the world. The WBC should strip him of the belt and award it to Rahman. Klitschko should pay Rahman for all of the time he’s wasted training. They had to force him to fight Rahman and he still pulled out. What does Klitschko mean in Russian, chicken? He quit on the stool with a shoulder injury against (Chris) Byrd in the 10th round of a 12-round fight that he was leading big. A doctor gave him approval to fight Rahman, but he chose not to fight. He’s tall, big and may look like a heavyweight champion. But he doesn’t have the heart and soul of a world champ. It’s not what’s on the outside, it’s what’s inside that counts.

I'm really upset by this news about Vitali Klitschko. I consider him a very strong heavyweight champion and I can't beleive he is afraid of Has Been "Who" Rahman. I don't know exactly what happened to Vitali and how bad is his injury. I hope to see him back soon in the ring. The heavyweight division needs Vitali Klitschko.

Promise and potential do not a good fighter make. The guy seems hollow to me. Quarry stepped in with Ellis, presumably with a broken back. Vitali has strung us along now and it's gotten to be absurd. Maybe it's just the era, but my view is you fight the toughest guys out there. You go after the biggest fish, not the little guppy. Prove yourself by taking on the best and do it often. This is a cream puff champion until proven otherwise. Hand it to Rahman for pity's sake.

Well it looks like Vital has retired and the WBC will declare Rahman champion. Maybe Vitali really has some cronic injuries that haven't healed and he doesn't want to fight at anything but his best but who knows? I like the idea of the eight man tournament to get one champion but doubt it will happen that way. Too much money to be made with the split champions, at least in the near future.

King has said he wants some sort of tournament. Will see what happens.

Most fighters and most athletes in general have chronic pain and injuries. Ask Jim Otto. You compensate and you play hurt. Unless the injury is something severe, rendering Klitscho utterly unable to perform, my feeling is that he just doesn't really have the heart for boxing. There's nothing wrong with that---I would never fight professionally even if I had his ability. Some people have the "eye of the tiger" and others don't. It just seems as though it was always something.

Ali update: He, along with 12 others, received some sort of "Medal of Freedom" honor yesterday from the White House and President Bush. I saw photos. He joked with Bush---and appeared to look the same as he has for the past few years. I'm not sure what the daughter's book said exactly, but his condition doesn't seem too much different than it has for several years. He needed escort help to move around and he was gesturing with his hands more than speaking---but looked fine.

Angello and Noam,Noam,you've interpreted me correctly about Ali keeping the memory of other great fighters alive.Angelo, I'm letting you know that I honestly believe that Ali was a better overall fighter than Frazier.However,I still like Jerry Quarry,Joe Frazier, Marciano and Joe Louis as Great representatives of this sport at times when we really needed it.Noam,I sometimes let outside factors,you know ,personal shit,influence my big mouth on this site.I apoligize to you.You are a reasonable, logical poster.Don't bail out because of any disagreements,this site is too important to me.Even when I have to put up with Kent and that Nazi,Massimo.
Steve the "WISEGUY" is really back. Shut up ya Lunkhead!!

Steve, it must be one of you guys who are taking me to task. I admit I talk out of turn, and I admit it's not acceptable.

One of the Stooges (Stoogeville) (Moe, Larry, etc.)

Knuck, Knuck, Knuck! Steve, just a little Stooge humor among stooges. Don't sweat it.

Steve it wasn't me, thou I'm still quite one of "US" STOOGES, personally I think Jerry was maybe rushed a little bit, Maybe like Norton, where he's not long in the tooth like JQ at age of 29 would have been a little better, where he's had a chance to mature more, it definitely helped Kenny's career. Jerry also at that young age probably could have dropped a few pounds to light heavy. TAKE CARE!

Well I am down 22 pounds since August, three months. My target was to lose 25 pounds in three months so I am near my time table. Now just 100 more pounds to lose. Dieting all of the time sure is boring though, I can't remember the last time I had a beer.

The Klitschko verses Rahman fight was going to be the highlight of the recent two weeks, oh well, as I don't get out much these days.

I have to stick with my program so I won't end up dying to soon, except maybe out of boredom.

Thanks Ed, the holidays don't make much difference as I am giving myself at least two days off from dieting, Thanksgiving and Christmas and maybe New Years Eve. So that is only three days at the most out of about 40 days until the end of the year that I won't be dieting. The rest of the days I am just going to tell people that I can't eat or drink certain things like I do now.

I already told my mother not to cook anything for Christmas and Thanksgiving as I think I should not worry about what I am eating on those days, no one else has to.

I think if Vitali K. really wants to fight, he may, after a layoff of maybe a year or a year and a half to heal up, he then may make a comeback. We will have to wait and see.

A layoff of 1 year, 1 year and a half?! I didn't know that the injury is so serious! Too bad for boxing!|
| 11/13/05 01:30:13 PM|mark|portsmouth, england|victoria.knight4@ntlworld.com| 10|

Was George Chuvalo considered a heavy puncher when he was fighting? I know he was known for having a great chin and great heart but I watched his fight against Jerry last night and he was not in the same league as Jerry for six rounds but then knocks him out in the seventh. I know Jerry misheard the count but it never looked that hard a punch to put him down considering some of the punches he took from Lyle, Frazier, Shavers to name a few. Also why was there no rematch between Jerry & Chuvalo? |
| 11/14/05 08:06:46 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC|funktron@yahoo.com| 10|

Plenty of men over 6' 7" exercise intensely, year round---they're called players in the National Basketball Association. Running, lifting, strength and conditioning drills, to name a few, comprise their exercise program. All things considered, their joints seem to hold up well. Klitschko "overexercising?" Hardly. Look, if he's injury prone, so be it. But let's not talk about how Rahman "would have" eaten leather for a few rounds. The fact is, Rahman was, is and continues to be ready, willing and able to fight this guy. Instead, Klitschko backed down. |
| 11/14/05 11:14:27 PM|Ed|Cicero N Y|mooseygoop@aol.com| 10|

I seen a thing about how the Klitschkos trained a few years ago and IMO yes he did shorten his boxing career by overexercising. Football, basketball and all your sports have attending medical help for all the teams. Players are always playing hurt but unlike boxing they can take breaks and aren't going to be beat up should a joint give out on them during a game. "But let's not talk about how Rahman "would have" eaten leather for a few rounds. The fact is, Rahman was, is and continues to be ready, willing and able to fight this guy. Instead, Klitschko backed down". That was my opinion and I have a right to print it. Rahmans not a bad fighter but thats how I think the fight would have gone. Your post seems very unfriendly to me and if i am misinterpreting it I apologize....if i am not don't bother responding to my post because you'll be ignored. |
| 11/15/05 07:27:28 AM|Steve|Washington, DC|funktron@yahoo.com| 10|

Gee, the heavyweight division is so boring. The only guy I like watching now is Butterbean. At least he adds excitement and can punch hard. |
Koo Koo Klock, Foolface, and Brother DKS. We had some lively conversations, maybe more so than the recent feuds. By the way, WHERE IS THE MUFFINMAN of Massimo's hero, JUMPITY BRUCE.

What's the big deal about Klitscho. Bad back, bad leg...who cares. He's got money out the wazoo and can live the rest of his life without financial worry. If I were in his situation I'd probably quit to. Isn't that what everyone wants, to hit the lottery and hang it up. Do what you want to do. He hit the lottery. I really didn't think Rahman would beat him, give him some trouble maybe. I think it would have been a boring hug fest with Klitscho winning with his jab. Some guys need to fight regardless of money or fame, the "Eye of the Tiger" thing someone mentioned. Maybe to Klitscho it was just sport. Who knows. I never thought much of him in the first place.

Thanks for clearing the air Angelo. If we were talking face to face there would have been no confusion about things but you straightened things out nicely. Sorry for misinterpreting things.

I'd like to ask who you'd like to see Rahman fight next but to be honest there's not much to pick from.

Mark,

George Chuvalo wasn't considered a real hard heavyweight puncher. He was very strong and as u said had one of the best chins in history. He was in a lot of big fights and Jerry was his biggest win. I guess you could say Georges chin kept him alive till her got a lucky punch in (or flurry of punches if i remember right).

P S Ali use to call Chuvalo "The Washer Women" because he threw a lot of punches but didn't hurt anyone.

I think Vitali Klitscko has a lot of talent but his desire is questionable.

I can't imagine someone like Jerry Quarry ever quitting because of an arm injury like Vitali did agaisn't Chris Byrd. Jerry would have endured the pain and fought one handed, especially with only one or two rounds left in the fight and it wouldn't have mattered if he was ahead or behind on the scorecards.

I think the Byrd fight is a good indicator of Vitali's lack of desire to do what it takes to be a great fighter.

Fighters like Muhammad Ali fighting almost an entire fight with a broken jaw like Ali did against Norton in their first fight and Floyd Patterson, who fought in terrible back pain for most of his first fight with Ali also wouldn't quit because of injury.

Patterson was hopelessly behind on the cards of the judges yet he still kept on trying the best he could under the circumstances.

Add to that, Foreman vs. Holyfield. I remember talking to some sports fans after that fight, and everyone marveled at Foreman's performance. Finally, someone said---"It isn't that he fought brilliantly---it's just that he tried so hard to win." That's really the point. You watch M. Spinks vs. Tyson, then watch Foreman vs. Holyfield---and you see that Foreman is from a different era. Even in losing, he showed incredible heart.

Yes, e-mail can take on a life of its own. If we had a conversation, you would know that I wasn't being mean.

I think James Toney who is from the old school is the man to beat if age hasn't caught up to him.

Toney tore his bicep and tricep muscles in the first round of his fight with Rydell Booker yet he gave Booker a virtual one armed beating for ten rounds. Vitali and some of the others around today would not have came out for the second round due to the pain.

Say what you will about Toney, his big mouth and everything, but he is well schooled in his art, he really knows what he is doing.

Back in the 1990s when Toney was still a middleweight Toney won a close decision over a fighter named Dave Tiberi. Toney had bad leg cramps almost the entire fight but he fought on and came out on top.

Most of the media thought Tiberi had pulled off the upset win but I thought Toney was... blocking a lot of the punches and he landed just enough in return to win a close one.If people think Toney is on steroids these days and that is the reason why he has a bad temper, consider that after the Tiberi fight Toney yelled at the broadcasters of the fight saying they didn’t know what the hell they were talking about and that they were all a bunch of fools. I doubt Toney could have been using steroids when he was a middleweight. The guy just has a temper. |With Vitali out of the scene for injury, your brother James is the best heavyweight in the world. When is James going to fight his next fight and against who? Thanks. Toney-Rahman would be interesting, as well as Toney-Vladimir Klitschko or Toney-Nicolay Valuev. I’m sure James would call Nicolay "a big bum". |People from all walks of life are prescribed steroids to speed injury recovery. It's not uncommon for an injured athlete either. Just looking at Toney's shape at the time of the Ruiz fight, I don't think he used the type of steroid that would turn him into Mr. Olympia. I think most of his bulk comes from a combination of lifting weights and eating pizza. My wife was prescribed a steroid when she injured her shoulder, she also uses one for severe asthma and she has not turned into an East German swimmer. There are many types and uses for steroids, the one Toney used was for injury recovery. Should fighters that have their hands injected with novocaine or cortisone be banned?

Bob: Depends. If we're talking about a banned substance, the punishment should be as I stated. Prescription steroids are not the same as anabolic, performance enhancing steroids or designer steroids. I don't know what Toney took. If it was prescription and not banned, then I don't think he's at fault. But that's not what was reported at the time.

JIMMY DORSEY: I Heard Ali called Chuvalo the washer woman because he had one of his Canadian opponents draped over the ropes and hung out to dry. ALI was very amused when he said it.

Hey, Jimmy Dorsey, regarding your last post about Jerry Quarry vs Norton. I with you agree on the results from these two meeting prime for prime. I know that posters like Kent, [Thank you very much]. Appel and Noam, who always says, what if, if only, when he's busting chops. However, the story I heard long ago, and I think they came from you, Jimmy D., and Kent, was this. Jerry had taken a bad beating from Frazier about eight months earlier. Jerry was taking a much deserved vacation in Hawaii, don't know how to spell it and too lazy to look it up. Quarry got a call, while he was partying from a promoter who offered him Norton at a six figure fee. That was nothing to sneeze at back then. Quarry, always the cocky guy, who thought he could lick King Kong, foolishly took the fight on about three weeks notice, even though he, d not trained lately, and was half drunk when he agreed to this crazy matchup. Norton's vastly clever team had waited for a Quarry fight until they thought Quarry was shot, and out of shape. Norton was quoted as saying he never liked Quarry, and always thought he could beat him. This seems cruelly ironic that he waited until he was absolutely sure Quarry was shot. Even then Quarry hurt Norton before his lack of training, history of brutal fights, caught up with him.

Hello Steve (AKA SHEMP) yes I DID SOME RESEARCH, on the subject, JERRY HAD like 17 days to train from the announcement that he took Bonavena's place, (when didn't Bonavena pull out of a bout!!) its hard to get a training camp even going, on that little time, he'd fought Johnson 10 rounds like 2 weeks earlier, and like you said Jerry probably jumped at the chance, I really believe Jerry was really tired of boxing had a lot of other offers, and took the payday, a very well known light heavyweight in Oklahoma and friend Tony McMinn (THE IRISH EXPRESS) always said only take on a bout you might lose for the money, and besides I make KING KONG 5-2 dog vs JERRY, AND 4 TO 1 A KNOCKOUT, especially after his last dvd movie (a STOOGE DISGRACE!) TAKE CARE SHEMP.

Hey Massimo, and Hey Noam, I'm trying to restore a dialogue with the people I consider as serious and logical posters. Who don't go off with personal insults whenever their opinions are questioned. If you where doing a college treatise on the evolution of the Irish immigrants, during the dust bowl, the depression, the "Oakies" who migrated to California, you could do the Quarry's history, since that's what they evolved from. I know that other ethnic groups had a very bad time trying assimilated into this so called Melting Pot. That's what make's America strong. YOU come here as an immigrant, you learn to speak English, at least as a second language, assuming you want to make a free and safe life here in America. Talk about totalitarianism!, As your attacks on civilian target, which affords you no threat to your Military infrastructure, just some mentally weak or needy housewife, or semi intelligent college student.
opponents draped over the ropes and hung out to dry. ALI was very amused when he said it". That makes more sense, and I think I know the fight they're talking about. Chuvalo fought someone named Dejohn and he draped him over the ropes and k o'ed him (on national tv) and the referee ruled it was a foul and gave Dejohn a chance to recover and they fought on. George ended up winning a decision. Very crude, very strong and very tough is best way I could describe Chuvalo. I don't think even Ray Mercers chin was as strong as Chuvalos.|

Steve, the mother of a friend of mine was famous for complaining about the "bog Irish". Not sure what she meant, but it was intended to be an affectionate insult, rather than just an insult, if you know what I mean. Perhaps "bog" has a different American meaning and I shouldn't use it. I hope not. Regards steroids. Ed mentioned the East Germans. Imagine being an athlete who trained his/her guts out to get to the Olympic final of, say, the sprint. You get beat by an East German and come second. Ten years later you learn that he/she only beat you because they used steroids. How would you feel? Denied a gold medal because of a cheat! Same thing with Toney if he's guilty. Using steroids is a cheating shortcut. Norton didn't need them. Neither did Foreman 1. Hard work in the gym did it for them. Ali and Frazier had more natural physiques. So did Jerry. They had hard punches without the over-developed muscles behind them. Ali, Frazier and Quarry were all natural instinctive fighters, whereas Norton and Foreman were more the 'developed-in-the-gym' types. In my opinion, anyway. |

Mike Weaver looked like Hercules too, sort of like Norton. Regarding Quarry vs. Norton: It's not only ironic, but somewhat shameful and somewhat annoying that Norton made those comments about "always wanting to fight Jerry Quarry" after seizing the perfect window of opportunity to make a fight with an unprepared, past-his-prime Quarry. I heard often back in the 70's about how cocky Ken Norton was and it did show. For Norton to crow about fighting and beating Quarry---it makes Norton look bad, and foolish. It would be like Larry Holmes saying he "always wanted to fight Muhammad Ali" after beating Ali, who was only a shell of his former glory. |

George Chuvalo was only really hurt once in his career. It came against George Foreman in the third round. The most befuddled I ever saw him look was against Ali I in the late rounds and right before he knocked out Jerry Quarry. I own tons of Chuvalo fights and never saw him hurt otherwise. He was stopped against Frazier because his orbital bone was cracked by a Frazier left-hook. He wasn't about to go down though. He actually wasn't going to go down against Foreman either. Foreman was wailing away and tiring himself out while Chuvalo was recuperating. Chuvalo's manager threw in the towel and Chuvalo said "Are you crazy". I would have liked to see that fight go longer as I think Foreman was already tiring and Chuvalo got better as the fights went on. Chuvalo did slip against Bonavena and it could have been ruled a knockdown, however it wasn't. Ellis also hit him with many shots in the 11th round of their fight. Chuvalo was bothered but not actually hurt. Ellis could punch, he is totally underrated in that respect. | done back then...geez I sound old! Cutting down trees, busting boulders, digging ditches built strength and muscle endurance. Then it was into the gym for the boxing work. Look at pictures of Rocky Graziano, Primo Carnera, or Jim Jeffries just a few fighters off the top of my head. These guys were cut with big thick blocky muscles, Carnera did lift weights in the circus but I doubt he spent much time trying to develop his deltoids.

Steroid testing. It now has a place in major league baseball and in pro football. But Congress voted, along party lines, not to include testing in boxing. Congress also voted, along party lines, not to create a federal agency to do oversight for the sport of boxing. So, who voted for the boxers? The Democrats. Who voted against? The Republicans, who have lowered this country in unprecedented ways this decade in so many areas.

Boxing is a poor man's urban sport with many participants of color, so GOP opposition to cleaning up the sport is understandable. They don't care about people, just money. Democrats however see that this sport is not going away. So it's participants need monitoring for their own health and benefit. In short, they need a 'major league'. I hope that those here see which party they need to back in the future if they want to see this sport elevated back to a position of respect.

He was stopped against Frazier because his orbital bone was cracked by a Frazier left-hook. He wasn't about to go down though. I was a big fan of GEORGE CHUVALO'S but you have to look at him realistically. If that fight with FRAZIER had not been stopped then I'm certain that CHUVALO would have been stopped. You can see him turn away from FRAZIER, wave him off (he thought that his eye had been knocked out). George was a very tough guy but he was slow to get off. He had rather short arms and was at his best fighting inside and generally took a lot of blows to reach inside. He fought a great fight with FLOYD PATTERSON, went the distance with ALI twice and KO'd JERRY QUARRY (that fight was one of GEORGE'S proudest moments, although I always felt that JERRY had already suffered the effects of his boxing career by then. That was a funny KO. JERRY reacted after the fact and didn't seem to realize what the count was, which may have been a tad fast.) It would have made for a good re-match but I guess there weren't any interested parties.

The punch that dropped Jerry against Chuvalo was on the temple, which can cause a fighter to be disoriented. Jerry looked like he shook off the effects though when he went down and then he got up right away only to take a knee. I think Jerry lost track of the count and maybe somehow he forgot that he was down and he had gotten back up, thinking he had one or two more seconds in which to get up. Whatever the case Jerry was not badly hurt and he should have beaten the count.

Your friends mother was correct in that the Irish at the turn of the century were highly and stupidly conscious of their social statuses. Bog Irish refers to the peat bogs and a whole generation of Irish sturdy men and women who spent their lives digging out peat bogs for English commercialism.

Too bad about your Eagles. This year is not going to be the year they will finally win it all.
boxing, it's interesting to note that a heavily liberal organization, the AMA, has pushed to abolish the sport in the U.S.—not reform it or improve it, but abolish it. It's also interesting to note that Muhammad Ali, in a 1980's Ebony-Jet magazine interview, said that "in the days when white people were the only ones profiting from the sport—white champions, white promoters, white trainers—no one talked about getting rid of boxing. Now, with black people empowering themselves to be managing the sport, dominating it and making millions from it, suddenly, people want to get rid of it." So you see, Guess Who, racism here cuts both ways. I sincerely doubt your assertion that Republicans don't want to reform boxing because they don't care about the safety of inner-city black people. I think that's offensive and absurd. I don't see Democrats calling for the abolishment of skydiving and mountain/rock climbing. I don't have statistics to back me up, but I would venture a guess that it's mostly upper middle class white people suffering injuries and deaths to to sky diving, diving, skiing, rock climbing, etc.—since the Democrats are not calling for the reform of these sports, they must hate white people based on your logic. Right? Look, I agree with you in spirit, that things need to be made safer for the combatants. I just don't think politicizing it will help the cause. It needs to be bipartisan. By the way, I thought John McCain was helping with the measures to make boxing safer.

---

Steve: Hi Noam, did you ever hear these terms used, (please don't take offence at my language) because it's historically accurate. Once an Irishman attained some wealth and social prominence they where referred to as "Lace Curtain" Irish. Poor Irishman where called "pig shit Irish.

---

Steve: Hi, Kent, I'm so appreciative of your concern about the Eagles. I can almost hear you snicker. Kent, I have not been able to get the long, extended Quarry Tape this site used to offer. Can you help me out here?

---

Steve: Hello Angelo, I don't feel there's anything wrong with straying off pure boxing. It's keeps the sight a little more varied and interesting. As far as your obvious interest and commitment to boxing reform. It's not only up to political leaders, like McLain, whom I would vote for as President, if I didn't realize there were more important issues pressing. I take your posts seriously, but the only answer I can come up with is two minute rounds, championship fights ten rounds. You would probably get more concentrated, furious action. Man, I know I'm going to get racked over the coals on this one.

---

Steve: I haven't heard those terms before. I might not use them, though, when I talk to Irishmen, as they might take it the wrong way.

---

Gerald M. Condon: I'm 75 years of age: which is irrelevant to my question, but it appears to me that many (not all) fighters have been able to handle failure, but unable to handle success.
sport, but we should be fair about our comparisons. Republicans generally don't support John McCain. I wish they did, he's a voice of reason in their party. But where were the rest of the Republicans? And why weren't they there on this vote? They opposed because they do not care about boxers or those who run the sport the way they do. If they did, they would have supported their own man's bill. I also question your comparing both parties as a matter of opinion. We don't start wars for personal or political gain. We don't promote torture. We don't send jobs to China. We don't turn medicine into a cash cow. We don't leave thousands of urban schools to rot. Yes, the AMA tried to ban boxing. Any sane person would ban this sport in its current state, especially when were not allowed to reform it. Isn't this site about boxing's reform? If it is, you need to get with your supporters, and now you know who those are. Thank You.

Steve, yes the entire Norton fight is on the extended video. You would have to ask Brandi how you could get a copy as Mr. Jimmy was the person I got mine from. Well I considered saying Ha! Ha! about the Eagles but I thought better of it. I will save that for my friend from Philly next time I talk to him. Senator McCain has been very helpful in getting at least some boxing reforms passed but the truth is both major parties need to do a lot more for boxing but they often ignore the sport. Some of the reforms Mr. Jimmy was for include a three knockdown rule in which three knockdowns in an entire fight, not just one round would count as a knockout, stopping fights sooner, when a fighter is hurt, not just when he appears to be about to be knocked out, required brain scans where any sign of permanent damage regardless of symptoms, would mean denial of a license to fight, and stricter enforcement of the reciprocity act in which states have to honor medical suspensions of other states, on the books but not always enforced. I would favor thumbless gloves. There was talk about making them mandatory at one time but it was never implemented. These gloves could cut down on permanent eye damage of fighters.

Gerald, it's because many boxers come from a poor economic background and aren't conditioned for success and when it comes (suddenly usually) it completely bedazzles them. Look at how much Tyson wasted and one positive for him having no money now is that the parasites around him will all disappear. Perhaps he'll handle failure better than success because the parasites will go. Some boxers handle success very well. Larry Holmes and Sugar Ray Leonard are two who come to mind. Invested their boxing money very wisely. Lennox Lewis seems well grounded, too. I think Ali handled success just as well as he now handles poor health. Joe Frazier, George Foreman, Ken Norton handled success well. Marciano was doing okay, too, before his life was cut short. Liston wouldn't have been comfortable in this world whatever his circumstance, whether he boxed or not. He was never going to be giant of business, science, music, or the arts. Louis was a sad case. Jack Johnson had lots of fun. So did Max Baer. Hey Massimo Cini, where are you? Tell Gerald and me about Prima Canero. What happened to him after boxing? Did he die rich or poor? How did he die? Did he handle success? Primo Carnera didn't make much money with boxing (his managers stole almost everything) but he made a good amount of money with wrestling in his 40s and 50s. He became CHAMPION OF THE WORLD in 1957. He never became really wealthy like Holyfield or Foreman but when he died he had no financial problems. He had (or owned) a villa (now they want to transform it in museum) in his hometown Sequals. In his last years he owned a liquor-shop and made good money with it. I think he died of cirrosi epatica (hard to translate in English). |

Another fighter who handled success very well is Nino Benvenuti. Marvin Hagler is another, I think. I don't know about Tommaso Hearns. Evander Holyfield can't handle unsuccess and wrongly keeps fighting. |

Thanks, Massimo. Good to know you're still out there. I think you're saying that Carnera had liver problems like cirrohsis (not sure of the spelling). Perhaps it was because he was drinking his own merchandise. |

This is an interesting site. I've been looking over several posts from the past few days and am making my first responses. First I'll answer David Young. For Your Information: The Chuvalo loss was a bad one for Quarry. George Chuvalo couldn't box oranges. The guy has little skills. More like a glorified punching bag. Not only Ali, Frazier, and Foreman but also guys like skinny Floyd Patterson, Mike Dejon, Edwardo Carletti (who?), lumbering Oscar Bonavena and many more beat Chuvalo. Just about anyone with any skills. What made Chuvalo so popular was his ability to take punishment not his boxing ability. For Jerry Quarry to lose to him was a bad mark on his career. His loss to Frazier the 2nd time was also bad. Though Frazier (unlike Chuvalo) was a top heavy he was still on the decline. After the Ali ko loss Quarry's come back was successfull. He won 7 fights in a row. Some against quality boxers. Frazier on the other hand hardly fought and had a losing 1-2 record over 2 years. Blasted by Foreman and losing to Ali. Had a tough time in beating Bugner. The momentum was clearly on Quarry's side. Taking on Frazier at this point made perfect sense. Revenge and a title shot at the winner of Ali-Foreman. Despite all of this he still got blasted by Frazier and nearly killed in the ring. This proves that Frazier was just too much for Quarry. He was at a higher level than Quarry. This fight started Quarry's slow death. Ref and Quarry corner at fault. A forgotten good win for Quarry was Jack Bodell. Quarry beat Quarry during his earlier comeback (Quarry had a habit of "comebacks") from his first Ali loss. Frazier did in fact hurt Chuvalo. What fight were you watching? Chuvalo wanted that fight to end. Forget the bravado. All boxers claim they were never "really" hurt during a fight. The White Hope Syndrome was revived very heavily during the Larry Holmes vs Gerry Cooney fight. To a lesser degree it was also present during the Ken Norton vs Duane Bobick fights. Bobick and Cooney were unfairly ridiculed because of those losses. My friends badly wanted Bobick, Cooney and later on Morrison to win.\\Whether we like it or not the White Hope belief still exists even today. They really hyped up Joe Mesi.\\Likewise, Joe Bugner although a decent fighter, was never really embraced by American fans. James Quarry, Jerry's brother and Co founder of this site said Jerry owned Bugner in the gym. This and the fact that Jerry beat a higher quality of fighters than Bugner did makes me think Jerry would have come out on top over Bugner.\\The old saying styles make fights is so true so just because Bugner faired better verses Ali does not mean he would have beaten Quarry. Bugner did fair better against Frazier than Jerry did in Frazier/Quarry 2 but I don't think Bugner fought better than Jerry did in his first fight with Frazier. Frazier/Quarry one was a hard fought contest in which Frazier wore Jerry out over seven gruelling rounds and although Bugner did shake Frazier up late in their fight, the last round, Quarry went toe to toe with Frazier over their entire first fight and he shook up an in prime Frazier up several times. Jerry Quarry also beat a better quality of opponents than Henry Cooper did so you also can't say Cooper would have beaten Jerry just because Cooper was more effective verses Ali than Jerry was.\\Perhaps we should begin the 'great black hope' syndrome for straw-weights, flyweights, and bantamweights. Come to think of it, we should have a 'great Asian hope' syndrome for the heavies, too. We've had white heavyweight champs, but never an Asian one.\\I first saw Jerry Quarry on a video tape at my cousins I think it was the 1st fight with Joe Frazier. I couldn't get over how tough he was. I was interested to find out more about him due to the fact that he was one of the few white heavy weights around at the time. This site has been very informative for me. Thank you very much.\\Just watched Ellis/Frazier. Hell of a fight for 3 rounds. As good as any. Happy Holiday's!
And Henry being from France knows all there is to know about assholes, losing, and not turning up to fight. France excels at it.I heard recently that an elderly American tried to pass through customs in France when he misplaced his passport. The French immigration guy sarcastically said to him, "You can't come in here without a passport even if you are American." The veteran replied, "Really? Last time I came to France I didn't need one." The Frenchie said, again sarcastically, "I don't think so. Even Americans need passports to enter France." To which the veteran replied, "Well, last time I was here it was D Day and I couldn't find a Frenchmen on Omaha Beach to show my freakin' passport to." America gave France a gift decision in that war, Henry, so should shut up and take France's usual position ......... HIDING FROM DANGER !

Check out this article."Float Like a butterfly, sting like a flea many bums did whip Muhammad Ali."  Let's review Ali's record and briefly the career records of his opponents. Trevor Berbick (50-11-1). Berbick had a decent record but lost practically every time he stepped up in competition. He was starched in one round by Bernardo Mercardo before beating Ali. Berbick was also beaten by less than stellar competition such as S.T. Gordon and Jimmy Thunder, but Ali could not beat him. Berbick made Ali look slow and lethargic. Where some all time greats all had their share of journeyman that they faced, they beat them. Ali lost to a number of journeyman type fighters. At a similar age as Ali in this fight, Ray Robinson who was Ali's hero was still beating fighters of this caliber. At age 39 Robinson lost a highly disputed draw to Gene Fullmer in a title fight. Ali lacked the greatness to accomplish the same feat. It was a clear victory over the so called "Greatest." Berbick retired him. Larry Holmes (69-6) The best fighter Ali ever faced. What happened? At an age where Lennox Lewis was beating Vitaly Klitschko (32-1), Ali was completely outclassed and dominated failing to win a single round while being stopped by a fighter who could do everything he could do better. Did any heavyweight champion ever look so worthless in a title fight as Ali did against Holmes? Joe Louis, who had only 4 fights in the previous 8 years, at least won some rounds and landed some punches against Ezzard Charles and was competitive at a similar age against Rocky Marciano swelling his eye with his jab and made a fight of it. But Ali, who weighed only a single pound more for this fight then he did for Foreman a few years earlier, could not win a single round against Holmes. The NY Times reported, "In 10 rounds, he (Ali) landed fewer than 10 solid punches." Ali simply did not have the ability to deal with a bigger, stronger, superior technical fighter with a better jab. It should be noted that Holmes also feasted on a lot of inferior competition. Look at some of the careers of his title defense opponents; Ossie Ocasio (23-13), Mike Weaver (41-18), Lorenzo Zanon (27-6-3 ko'd 5 times in 36 fights), Scott LeDoux (33-13-4), Lucien Rodriguez (39-12-1), and Renaldo Snipes (39-8) nearly knocked Holmes out with one punch. Unlike Joe Louis and Rocky Marciano who defended against seasoned experienced veterans Holmes (and Ali too as well shall see) fought mostly green, inexperienced amateurs that made them look better than they were and sometimes those kids made them look bad! Holmes defended against such callow opposition as Tim Witherspoon (15 fights), Leon Spinks (14 fights), Ossie Ocasio (13 fights), David Bey (14 fights), Bonecrusher Smith (15 fights), Carl Williams (16 fights), and Marvis Frazier who had only 10 pro fights! How such a fighter could be considered great beating a slew of inexperienced amateurs defies intelligent reasoning. Yet this same fighter beat Ali 10-0 in rounds and made him quit on his stool. Leon Spinks (26-17). The worse heavyweight champion ever. He only won the title because he beat an over-rated Muhammad Ali. This bum Spinks had only 7 pro fights at the time and DIDN’T WIN all of those. Spinks was such a huge underdog that Las Vegas bookies would not give odds on the fight. Yet he gave Ali an ass whipping. He swarmed over him and gave him no room to breathe and won easily proving Ali was not close to “The Greatest.” Ali couldn’t deal with real pressure from a fighter who was not fit to be on Joe Louis “bum of the month club.” Spinks was knocked out 9 times in his career more than either Charles or Walcott and he had half as many fights. He was even knocked out by some guy named John Carlo in one round who was in his pro debut. Yet Ali could not put this hapless china chinned chump down in 30 rounds of fighting in 2 fights? There is more to the story. Some will no doubt try to say Ali was old, but he had just turned 36 the month before. To get more perspective on the age issue, consider that at 36 years of age, Larry Holmes stopped David Bey (6’3”, 233 lbs), and defeated Carl Williams (6’4”, 215 lbs), in back-to-back fights. (Note this is quoting Revolver and he is error Holmes was born in ’49 both fights were before his birthday in Nov. of ’85 so he was 35. Math, along with other subjects such as logic, must not one be of Revolver’s strong points) And just shy of his 38th birthday, Lennox Lewis as mentioned previously, beat Vitaly Klitschko (6’7” 248 lbs) who was the number one rated contender. It was Lewis’ third fight since turning 36. His two previous opponents were Hasim Rahman (236 lbs, 35-2) and Mike Tyson (234 lbs, 49-3). He won both of those fights by knockout. But Ali could not defeat an amateur opponent who weighed less than 200 pounds and had only 7 pro fights and not all of those were wins? Losing to a green kid like Spinks proves how truly over-rated and over-hyped Muhammad Ali is to this day. Spinks who at 6’1 ½” and a 76” reach beat Ali with a simple plan. Spinks used aggression, jabs and pressure to force Ali to the corners and outwork him. The NY Times reported, “Ali danced and jabbed, danced and jabbed and took Spinks shots in an apparent effort to let the St. Louisian, who at 197 ½ pounds was outweighed by 17 pounds, expend his energy.” But it was to no avail against an inferior challenger determined enough to beat him. Of course people will write the loss off as an old, out-of-shape Ali losing to a young, hungry although completely inexperienced opponent. But an examination of Ali’s career reveals few significant wins, a number of defeats, several close calls where he was almost knocked out, many controversial wins, and alleged fixed fights, as well as a fight where he was completely dominated (not winning a single round) and stopped by a fighter who is considered his inferior to this day by those who are blinded by their infatuation for this over-rated, over-hyped media phenom. However, a clear-eyed, realistic boxing historian sees Ali for the phony that he was. Before moving on, I must pause and summarize what we have thus far learned: Ali lost three of the three fights discussed so far! He was clearly beaten by Trevor Berbick (a journeyman), completely dominated by Holmes who proved a better technician could not only defeat him, but utterly dominate him Ali failing to win a single round or even land a significant punch in the entire fight, and he was beaten and battered by an amateur with less than 7 pro fights and not all of those wins! Earnie Shavers (73-14). Shavers was one of the more experienced opponents that Ali fought, but he was a one-dimensional raw slugger with no chin and few if any real boxing skills. He had a padded record of 54-5-1 at the time. He was knocked out 7 times in his career and lost 14 times. He made his reputation by knocking out nothing but tomato cans. He lost to everyone he fought who could box even a little. His losses include such stellar names as Stan Johnson, Ron Stander, Bob Stallings, Walter Santemore, George Chaplin (some relation to Charlie I think), and Brian Yates. He also lost to every good fighter he faced including Jerry Quarry and Ron Lyle. Hell, even the totally skill-less Tex Cobb beat him.
clearly. Ali proved that he couldn’t break an egg by failing to knock out this glass-jawed winging Neanderthal. Ali was hurt several times in this fight, staggered and rubbery legged but his opponent a one punch at time over-rated shoemaker could not finish the job that a real fighter would. Alfredo Evangelista (62-13), a typical talent-less European fighter with no skills. This bum twice lost to Lorenzo Zanon (27-9-3 with only 9 ko’s). In fact his last fight was a loss to Zanon. Evangelista coming in to face Ali had never before been beyond 8 rounds. The NY Times reported that Evangelista looked “soft” at the weigh in and didn’t look like a real fighter. ONCE AGAIN we see that Ali prefers to defend his title against unproven inexperienced opposition or talentless one-dimensional punchers rather than boxers of any real skill who always troubled him. Evangelista lost to every notable heavyweight he fought. He was knocked out by none other than amateur Leon Spinks in only 5 rounds and was also starched in 2 by Ali imitator Greg Page. Anders Eklund (19-5) also knocked him out. This worthless pile of crap made Ali look like a fool. Although Ali clearly won the Times wrote that Ali “did not look sharp” in this fight. Why isn’t Ali criticized for making such fights? Why is the large number of title defenses in the record book not problematized in such a manner as to raise concerns about Ali’s practice of holding up blatantly unqualified journeymen as legitimate contenders for the crown? It’s not just about the numbers. It’s about the quality of opposition. And we will see many more faces like Evangelista’s. Ken Norton (42-7). Norton was never as good as his reputation. He was in fact “chinny” being knocked out by every big puncher he faced including Jose Luis Garcia, George Foreman, Shavers, and Gerry Cooney. He was even down twice against Scott LeDoux who was not a big puncher. He should have lost that fight but was given a gift draw. Norton ducked Frazier and Lyle because he knew what the result would be. The films prove that Norton won 2 of 3 fights against Ali. Norton broke the big-mouthed Ali’s jaw in the first fight and embarrassed him. He also won the third fight. Everyone knows Norton was robbed in this fight except the hardcore Ali worshippers who think he was a god. Norton was slow-footed, even dragged his rear foot yet he had no trouble hitting Ali, cutting the ring and driving him to the ropes. He even out-jabbed Ali most of the time because he knew how to block a jab and counter-jab while Ali never in his entire career learned to block a jab. Ali in three fights never understood that it was the jab of Norton that gave him so much trouble. Norton was a better boxer than Ali and realistically beat him 2 of 3 times. Norton’s reputation has been enhanced because he did beat the overrated Ali (and of course, out of the need to build up the legend of another overrated heavyweight named Larry Holmes). Richard Dunn (33-12). How did this guy get a title shot? He was knocked out 9 times in his career. His chin was so bad that even a powder puff puncher like Ali was able to floor him 5 times. Of course Ali had to knock him down that many times because he didn’t have a real shock punch. Nobodies such as Danny McAlinden (in his pro debut), George Dulaire (8-18-4), Rocky Campbell (18-11-1) as well as Joe Bugner all had first round knockouts over Dunn. Ali definitely was not as good a puncher as those guys. The results speak for themselves. Jimmy Young (33-14). His record isn’t much better than Dunn’s looking at the numbers. At the time Young had only 17 wins as well as 4 defeats and a couple of draws. Young was such an inexperienced opponent the common question of the day was “Who is Jimmy Young?” Young was a 15-1 underdog in this fight. Young actually beat Muhammad Ali. Everyone knows this. This fight really exposed Ali. This fight proved that Ali did not know how to fight as an aggressor. This was the first time in his career Ali actually fought a boxer with some decent defensive skills and wasn’t just a puncher who came to him. So what happened? Ali did not know how to cut the ring on an evasive opponent and was never able to track him down. Ali simply followed him around the ring and got outworked and out hustled. What Ali really needed in this fight was body punching. Something he did not know how to do. The result was embarrassing, humiliating. Ali never looked so clueless on what to do in any fight. Young won that fight. No one who saw it live or who watches the film can say any different. It was an out and out robbery and Young was in utter shock and disbelief at the decision. So was the audience. The NY Times reported that the decision was “loudly booed by most of the 12,472 spectators attending the home televised bout at the Capitol Center.” The NY Times scored the bout for Young. The Young fiasco is another loss by Ali to an inexperienced boxer who had semblance of boxing skill. As we will see, Ali’s reputation is indeed mythic, and this construction is in fact just one of numerous reconstructions, as Ali’s penchant for disappointing fans and experts - expressed loudly in boos, jeers, and bad reviews -(as in the Young and Norton fights) had to be continually glossed over in order to manufacture an enduring myth of greatness. Indeed, Ali only appears to us in history as a legend because of the manner in which his legacy has been constructed by certain sportswriters who see their job as manufacturing fables for whom they must believe are the ignorant masses rather than accurately reporting history. Jean Pierre Coopman (36-16). The worst heavyweight title challenger of all time, a fighter who had all of his pro fights in Belgium when he was granted a shot at Ali’s title -undeservedly so. He was knocked out by Ireno Werleman (4-16-1) before facing Ali. He lost to every journeyman he faced. Fighters such as Coopman made Ali look great. The reality is he only looked great because Coopman was a fourth-rate boxer of shoddy skills, and no chin, who beat nobody. Joe Frazier (32-4). The best all around fighter Ali faced, but the reality is Ali never convincingly beat him. That’s right. You heard correctly. Frazier clearly won the first fight and gave Ali the worse thumping of his career. Frazier had Ali down and almost out in the 11th (the knockdown was ruled a slip) and down on his back in the 15th. Ali’s trainer Angelo Dundee even admitted that only the fact that Ali landed on the seat of his pants woke him up. As decisive a victory as any heavyweight champion has scored over another. The simple fact is in the biggest political fight of his career Joe Louis annihilated his opponent. Ali lost the biggest fight of his career. Frazier also deserved the decision in the second fight. The New York Times’ Red Smith and Dave Anderson both thought Frazier had won. Frazier was mugged and robbed by Ali in that fight. The judges gave Ali a gift in this fight because they wanted to match Ali and Foreman for a big money fight for the title. The third fight was a robbery too. If Eddie Futch would have just let Frazier stand up between the 14th and 15th rounds Ali would have quit like he did against Holmes. He collapsed right afterwards. Sports Illustrated reported that he was actually ready to quit after the 10th round against Frazier. He took such a terrible beating he said it was “the closest thing to death” that he ever experienced. Ali’s Parkinson’s was caused by Frazier’s punches. This is not too difficult to see. Frazier is really 3-0 against Ali and “Smokin” Joe believes that in his heart. But there is more to the story. Ali’s fight with Frazier also demonstrated Ali’s vulnerability to left hooks. Throughout his career Ali never learned to block a left hook. This is particularly evident in his fights with Frazier. Ali knew that Frazier was going to throw the left hook and he never did learn to block it! The left hook is the easiest punch to learn to block in boxing. But Ali did not learn how to do it in three fights with Frazier despite the fact that he knew it was coming every time. This shows that Ali’s ability to adapt and learn is vastly overrated. He could not learn the most basic of boxing skills. Joe Bugner (69-13). Bugner could box a little, punch a little but did neither particularly well. Bugner’s career record was that of an erratic journeyman beating third raters such as Manuel Ramos, Chuck Wepner, Henry Cooper, Brian London and Ali’s sparring partner Jimmy Ellis but losing to Dick Hall, Jack Bodell, Larry Middleton, Ron Lyle and even amateur Marvis Frazier. Bugner was not an inexperienced amateur like Spinks and Young who beat Ali, nor was he a one-dimensional slugger like Lyle and Shavers, he was simply a journeyman who twice went the distance with Ali. Ron Lyle (43-7-1).
Lyle, perhaps a bit like Max Baer, was a big strong puncher but a crude boxer.
Jimmy Young, a smallish heavyweight who had only 13 wins in their first meeting, twice outboxed him. A loss to Young was Lyle’s last fight before meeting Ali.
One can now see why Ali took the Lyle fight, once he realized the dangerous hitter lacked boxing skills he figured he would be no problem for an experienced fighter such as himself and he was right. Anybody with some skill could beat Lyle. He was outboxed by the smaller Jerry Quarry and besides losses to Ali and Foreman was knocked out by Lynn Ball who had only 14 pro fights. Gerry Cooney also dusted him in one round. Beating a fighter like Lyle was a rather hallow victory because of his lack of real boxing skills. The fact remains as to why Lyle was granted a title fight off a loss? Only because he looked so raw and was so easily outclassed by a journeyman boxer that it was figured to be another easy opponent for Ali. Why do men of logical reasoning fail to see how carefully handpicked Ali’s opponents were? Where is the criticism? Worshippers cannot see through the glitz and the myth. But a wise, clear-eyed historian can.
Chuck Wepner (35-14). Is one beginning to see a pattern here? Most of these guys Ali beat had a lot of losses. They were stiffs. Wepner had no boxing skills. He was a bowery bum plain and simple. He was stopped in 6 rounds by brittle chinned Duane Bobick four fights after going to the 15th round with Ali.
Before fighting Ali he was stopped by Buster Mathis, Jerry “Tomato Can” Tomesetti, a young wild George Foreman, an old decrepit Sonny Liston, Joe Bugner, and Jerry Judge. He also had point’s losses to Bob Stallings (6-5), Jose Roman (20-5-1), and Randy Neumann (career record 31-7). That a longshoreman like Wepner could knock Ali down and make it to the 15th round with a quality heavyweight champion defies belief.
George Foreman had a grossly padded career record of 76-5. He was a wild, swinging amateurish caveman if ever there was one. George, his feet stuck in the mud, struggled with every clever boxer he faced. He made his career by beating up on nobodies. George opposition was so bad on the way to the title he didn’t fight any has-beens, just never was’s.
Just look at some of these opponent’s. Roberto Davila (16-15) barely broke .500.
He went the distance with Foreman. Levi Forte (19-21-2) also went the distance with George. Gregario Peralta, who weighed less than 200 pounds, gave George fits in two fights. The only significant fighters he beat were a fat, out of shape Joe Frazier and a glass jawed Ken Norton, who as previously noted lost to every puncher he faced. Foreman was also outboxed in his career by journeyman such as Jimmy Young, Tommy Morrison, Shannon Briggs and Axel Schulz; the latter was robbed of the decision. Ali won this fight because he cheated by using loose ropes. Have you ever watched this fight on film? It’s ridiculous how loose those ropes were. Ali was able to pull back so far on the ropes it’s laughable. The ropes were fixed by Ali’s trainer Angelo Dundee and this is well known. Foreman, a slow handed, one-dimensional puncher with no stamina at all was easily beaten because Ali was able to survive the early rounds because of those loose ropes. Foreman, a free-swinging amateur, virtually collapsed from exhaustion in the 8th round. Ali could have pushed him over and he wouldn’t have got up he was so tired. Those are the facts. Foreman did not have the energy to fight past 5 rounds. To think he could last 25 rounds with a real tough fighter like Jim Jeffries gives me the shivers.
Ruddi Lubbers (29-8) was knocked out in early rounds by such household names as Domenico Adinolfi, Mike Shutte, Gordon Racette as well as Alfredo Evangelista. He is one of the worst fighters Ali ever fought and looks pathetic on film. But somehow he manages to go the distance with Ali over 12 rounds. A fighter like Lubbers would have been lucky to survive 2 minutes with Joe Louis.
Bob Foster (56-8). Not much to say here other than he was a light-heavyweight who lost to every single heavyweight he faced. Billy Conn and Archie Moore at least defeated some heavyweights.
Floyd Patterson (55-8). One of the few fighters that Ali faced who actually had good boxing skills and a good record. But there is more to the story. For as talented as Patterson was, he had not faced much real heavyweight competition. Indeed, he had faced only journeymen and light heavyweights in defense of his heavyweight title. Patterson ducked Sonny Liston and other top heavyweights for years when he held the title. Patterson spent most of his career ducking the top fighters off his time never facing Cleveland Williams, Nino Valdez and Ernie Terrell. He won the vacant title by beating 43-year-old light heavyweight champion Archie Moore. His title defenses were against guys like Tommy Hurricane Jackson (career mark 34-9-1). Jackson had been knocked out in two rounds by Valdez, a fighter Patterson avoided. Yet Patterson struggled against Jackson in their first fight winning a narrow split decision. He won the second fight by Tko but Jackson was hardly a worthy title contender as his record demonstrates. Another one of his title defenses was against Pete Rademacher who was in his pro debut. Roy Harris was undefeated at the time, but also unproven. He finished with a career mark of 31-5 and scored only 9 knockouts in his career and was hardly a worthy title threat. Another title defense was against glass jawed Brian London (more on him later). Tom McNeely, the father of Peter McNeely, was another inexperienced foe sent to the slaughter. Tom finished with a career record of 37-14. The first time Patterson met a heavyweight who could punch he was annihilated by Ingemar Johansson and then again by Liston twice. Joey Maxim a light-heavyweight managed to outbox him. He was also outboxed by Ali’s chief sparring partner Jimmy Ellis. It’s not surprising then that Ali could. However beating the overly protected and fragile Patterson hardly makes Ali great. Patterson weighed in the 180’s and had a very weak chin. Despite being so protected he still managed to be dropped 16 times in his career and was stopped 5 times. Jerry Quarry (53-9-4). Quarry started bleeding during the national anthem because he was so prone to cuts. He was doing well with Ali in the first fight before he received a nasty gash over his eye. Ali had the best fight of his career in the second Quarry fight. But beating Quarry is not that significant after all he was stopped in 7 rounds by George Chuvalo who was a nothing puncher as well as by Joe Frazier and Ken Norton, the latter was not known as a huge puncher either. Quarry was down twice against Memphis Al Jones before coming back to win. Yet Ali could not put him down in two fights. Joe Frazier also beat him more convincingly than did Ali in either fight. Quarry lost to Jimmy Ellis, and Eddie Machen both solid if uninspiring boxers. He had a draw and a narrow win over an over the hill Floyd Patterson. Quarry had two draws with Tony Alongi who never beat anyone of significance despite his career mark of (40-2-4). He also drew with Tony Doyle (40-16). With a spotty record like this it’s easy to see that Quarry was just another over-rated white hope who lacked both durability and true boxing skills. Jurgen Blin (31-11-6) One of Ali’s typical career opponents. Not as good as journeyman such as Joe Bugner or Jimmy Young as Blin lost or drew almost a third of his fights. He was knocked out in 2 of his next 5 fights after going the distance with Muhammad Ali. Ali, as usual, did not have the punch to knock out ham and eggers that other heavyweights toppled with no problem. Jimmy Ellis (40-12-1) Another fighter with a shotty record. Ellis weighed only 189 pounds for his fight with Ali. He was outweighed by over 31 pounds and it still took Ali until the 12th round to squeak out a last minute knockout. Oscar Bonavena (58-9) had a reach of only 73 ¼” Bonavena his stubby little arms was scarcely more than a journeyman who lost every time he stepped up in competition. He lost twice to Joe Frazier, and lost to Zora Folley, Jimmy Ellis, Floyd Patterson and Ron Lyle among others. He never won a fight against a highly rated top contender. Ali struggled and was in poor form against Bonavena until finally catching him and knocking him out in the 15th round. But this not before much of the audience decided to head to the exits early so bored were they with the lack of action in the ring. It is lackluster victories such as these over journeyman and stumblebums, where Ali struggled that prove Ali’s record is a manufactured media myth. Zora Folley (79-
11-6) Folley was a former light-heavyweight once weighing as low as 178 pounds for a professional fight. He had lost 7 times before coming into this fight with Ali, 6 times by knockout. One of those losses was to Alejandro Lavorante (career record 19-5), who only had 13 pro fights at that time. Folley would only win half of his next 10 fights after losing to Ali before retiring. Why are the great majority of Ali’s opponents of this inferior quality? Why is this not talked about more? This was a title defense for the heavyweight championship of the world. Folley was not a fit title challenger. Ali feasted on journeymen such as this for most of his career. Ernie Terrell (45-9). Another highly over-rated opponent of Ali. Who did he beat that was any good? Look at the career records of some of his opponents; Tunney Hunsaker (15-15) failed to break the .500 mark, Amos Lincoln (39-13-3) was hardly inspiring. Herb Siler was 15-12 this was Terrell’s 26th pro fight and he was still fighting bums. He won a split decision over Cleveland Williams but was also knocked out by Williams. His only significant victories were decisions over Eddie Machen (50-11-3), George Chuvalo (73-18-2), and Doug Jones (30-10-1) none who were much better than journeymen themselves, except for Machen who was marginally better. But the Machen that lost to Terrell was on his downswing in his last 2 years of fighting. So we can see that Terrell really beat no one special in his career. But there is more to the story. Terrell managed to lose to a number of journeymen and even fourth rate shoemakers in his career. He lost not once but twice to Johnny Gray a 190 pounder with a career mark of 16-10-1. He was beaten by Wayne Bethea (28-18-4). He also lost to Thad Spencer (32-13-1) and Manuel Ramos (25-29-3) had a losing mark for his career. These fourth-raters beat Terrell as easily as had Muhammad Ali who failed to score a knockdown or stop this big bum. Terrell was also beaten by none other than the hapless Chuck Wepner and stopped in the first round by Jeff Merritt. Ali’s win over Terrell hardly makes him great. Once again we see that beating so called contenders whose ability is far below that of their reputations is what forges the Ali legend. Cleveland Williams (78-13-1). Williams was a big, strong, powerful puncher at one time, but alas not when Ali fought him as he had a bullet inside of him as a victim in a shooting incident. Williams was physically not the fighter he had been a few years previous and was given a title opportunity as retirement pay. The win over Williams was simply not the real Cleve and is therefore insignificant in making a case for Ali as being a great fighter off this win. Karl Mildenberger (56-6-3). Before facing Ali the German had previously been knocked out in seven rounds by Helmut Ball for the German light-heavyweight title, and in one round by Dick Richardson for the European heavyweight title. Despite his lack of boxing ability and his rather fragile chin he went into the 12th round against the light-hitting Ali. This is so typical; a fighter who would not last 3 rounds with Joe Louis extends Ali and makes him look bad. Ali struggled to finish his opponent in this fight. Mildenberger had his moments as in the 4th round when he landed two jolting lefts to the liver and launched a two fisted attack that drove Ali to the ropes. Ali won clearly but it took him far too long to accomplish the task against a raw fighter of this low quality. Ali could not knock him out quicker than a light-heavyweight could! This fight demonstrates clearly what an abysmal puncher and finisher that Ali really was. At 6’0” and 201 lbs, Brian London was barely a full sized heavyweight. He was, however, not a legitimate contender. His record was 35-13 at the time he faced Ali. He finished with a journeyman’s record of 37-20-1. London was knocked out 11 times in his career. Every decent fighter he met in the ring stopped him. He was even decisioned by light-heavyweight Willie Pastrano. There’s not much more one can say about London. He was the typical Ali opponent. Another bum, ho hum. How good was Henry Cooper? He has been elevated because of his performance against Ali in their first fight. In truth, he was never a good fighter. He was 27-8-1 when Ali first faced him, and he had been knocked out or stopped five times. One of those knockout losses was to Peter Bates whose career
mark was 31-15-4; another was to Uber Bacilieri who achieved an abysmal 23-20-3 record. Clearly a fighter who lost to bums such as these can hardly be classified as even a second rate fighter. Henry Cooper is remember for one reason he nearly knocked out Muhammad Ali in their first fight with a single left hook to the jaw. The NY Times reported that the punch, “caught Clay on the side of the jaw and Cassius went over backwards through the ropes. He rolled back into the ring, then got dazedly to his feet. He was gazing off in the distance...starry-eyed. He wobbled forward gloves low. He started to fall but his handlers caught him.” But there is more to the story. Seeing that Clay/Ali was out in the corner they used smelling salts to revive him. Then they cheated in order to illegally give their fighter more than the legal one minute rest. The rules state that if a fighter cannot answer the bell in the allotted one minute rest period he is deemed the loser by technical knockout. Dundee took his finger and ripped a tear into Ali’s glove. Angelo Dundee has told this story many times. Since there were no extra gloves in the corner Ali was given up to five minutes of rest time to recover from the knockout that he actually suffered against a third tier heavyweight. Given enough time he was able to recover and came back to win not by kayo but by a nasty cut. But that is not all that can be said about Ali’s fights with Cooper. Even in the second fight Cooper showed that a third tier heavyweight who was slow of hand and foot could hit Ali with jabs without trouble. Because he never learned how to block a jab he was always vulnerable against any fighter with any semblance of boxing skill and not the bums, third tier heavyweights and raw, wild amateur slugging that he preferred to fight. CONCLUSIONS Consider the fights in which Ali was badly beaten or nearly beaten. Truth be told he lost 2 out of 3 to Ken Norton, and his only real win was razor thin. He was beaten soundly and made to look foolish by Jimmy Young who exposed his lack of real boxing skills. He had the shit beat out of him (literally) 3 times by Joe Frazier (a boxer who knew how to slip Ali’s jab and get inside). He was dominated by Larry Holmes, Ali not winning a single round or landing one significant punch in the entire fight. He was even bested by one of the rarest amateurs he faced in Leon Spinks, a fighter who had only 7 pro fights and not all of those victories. And truthfully he knocked out by Henry Cooper, a third tier bum who never beat a significant heavyweight in his career. He was knocked down by Chuck Wepner, who was not much more than a bar room brawler. An objective clear eyed look at Ali’s record and that of his opponents proves beyond a doubt that Ali was not a great fighter and has been vastly overrated by the media hyping machine who needed to build Ali into something he wasn’t at a time when the sport lacked a visible star. That is the truth. There is only one more fighter on Ali’s record worth mentioning and that is the one that made his reputation, Sonny Liston (50-4). Liston was a great fighter who could box and punch. The problem with basing Ali’s asserted greatness on his fights with Liston is that they were both fixed. Liston was owned by the mob this is a well known and established fact. Charles Farrell, wrote, http://www.boxingranks.com/Articles/Article646.htm After the second Patterson fight, there were no viable opponents for Liston. Aside from Ali, he had thoroughly destroyed every possible title aspirant. No one thought he could be beaten and, more importantly, no one was willing to pay to see him beat up anyone else. Sonny was getting old...and he had no great love for fighting. It didn’t make economic sense to have him fight an endless series of low paying title defenses for another ten years. The guys who controlled his career decided that it was better to make two huge, quick scores. They fixed the fight in Miami. Ali never knew about it. Liston’s people bet huge amounts, getting almost eight to one odds, on Ali. Because the conclusion of the first fight was so ambiguous, Liston remained a betting favorite—at about seven to five—in the rematch. The wiseguys got to clean up twice with the same play. It’s clear that, in the second fight, Ali spotted what was going on the moment
Liston went down from a non-punch. But Ali was a very quick study, and made his press release adjustments by the time he was out of the ring.” This historical journey has erased whatever remaining myths I still harbored about Muhammad Ali. I recognize that he is historically important that he revitalized boxing at a time when it was in the depths of despair. He brought in the big money purses that fighters have today and we should thank him for it. But he was jeered and criticized at the time for all his terrible performances such as those against Doug Jones, Henry Cooper, Karl Mildenberger, Ruddi Lubbers, Chuck Wepner, Jimmy Young and Leon Spinks among others. Reading through the articles you see repeated how the myth is being shattered, how the idol is being toppled from his pedestal. Nat Fleischer, founder of Ring Magazine, who saw every heavyweight champion ringside from Jeffries to Ali, refused to rate him in his top 10 all time heavyweights. It should now be clear even to the most ardent Ali worshipper as to the reasons why. Muhammad Ali was not a great fighter. He was fundamentally unsound and a flawed fighter. He won the title on a fixed fight, he was rescued from a knockout through cheating against Cooper, he fought nothing but bums and third stringers and some of those actually beat him in the ring. The only decent fighters he fought Joe Frazier and Ken Norton both beat him 2 of 3 times in the ring, while Larry Holmes thoroughly dominated him. He went 1-1 with amateur Leon Spinks who had fewer than 8 pro fights. No other fighter who was called great had such a dismal record. And this truth needs to be repeated until people clear their heads of the Ali fable. The very idea that he could beat a fighter like Joe Louis is ludicrous. One can only make such a ridiculous claim because they are ignorant of the facts. If Henry Cooper could knock out Ali in four rounds Joe Louis would do it in one. If Leon Spinks could beat Ali imagine what Rocky Marciano would do. Muhammad Ali lost in the ring to Jimmy Young because he had only a semblance of defensive skill. Imagine what Jersey Joe Walcott and Jack Johnson would do to him. They would embarrass him.

WHOEVER YOU ARE, I SENT YOU AN E MAIL CONCERNING HELPING YOUR BROTHER. IT WILL COME UNDER THE HEADING BOXING INJURIES, FROM ONE OF MY E MAIL ADDRESSES. I CAN BE REACHED AT THE E MAIL ADDRESS LISTED ON THIS POST OR AT THE ONE I SENT MY MESSAGE TO YOU FROM.

Henry Cooper is, the poster or imposter, not the boxer, age is relative where one fighter can be over the hill at 30 while another fighter can still be competitive at 40. So the comparison of Ali to other boxers at the same age as he was in his later years in the ring is irrelevant. It is all based on heredity and how many tough fights a fighter may have had in his career, with most of the cause is his genentic make up.

The American Association of Ringside Physicians (which has a web site) includes neurologists who are quite knowledgeable regarding head trauma injuries incurred by fighters. Two significant members are Doctors Robert Voy and Barry Jordan. Another good source of information is Dr. Margaret Goodman. The boxing commission in Nevada can tell you where Doctors Voy and Goodman can be found. The New York and/or New Jersey State Boxing Commissions can inform you of the whereabouts of Dr. Jordan. In providing a rather crude and unsophisticated answer to your question about head trauma, blows to the head rupture and tear blood vessels/veins that bring needed blood and thus oxygen to the brain. This process, in turn, causes the brain to atrophy, shrink, and potentially die. This ongoing condition worsens as the fighter/ patient ages, resulting in his/her inability to understand and remember to carry out important mental and physical tasks in life. Best of luck to you in assisting your loved one!!

At least we know what the imposter Forest Ward has been doing since he left here.... writing a book canvassing his hatred of Ali. He even refers to Ali fans as "worshippers" just as he did when posting here before. Nothing better to do with his time, obviously and pathetically.

If Henri from France is correct about Ali being a bum and not the greatest ever, then Henri is the only fan out of billions to get it entirely wrong. Billions of fans, Henri aside, are dummies. Likewise, if Henri is correct in saying that Ali is a bum, then every fighter Ali beat were bigger bums. Liston, Patterson, Frazier, Norton, Foreman, and also our very own Jerry Quarry. Losers one and all, according to brave Henri, the French fight expert. (Is that an oxymoron? A fight expert from France? Of all places!)

Like everything and everyone from France, Henri isn't taken seriously.

HAHAHAAHAHA. Many, many, people hate Muhammad Ali. In fact, the few who do like him are American. Those are the only ones who would like a scumbag like Ali. Two-faced bastard. Maybe you should do some more research into your God, Ali, and see him for what he really is. Stop holding on to his jock strap. He's a myth built up by writers.

Billions? HAHAHAHAHA. The ficticious name for this poster is appropriate. When you write something so silly, biased and totally off the mark, why use a real name? Mr. Cooper: I started to read your post with interest. I love reading/discussing viewpoints that are opposed to my beliefs. I often learn a lot from people who disagree with me. But about 1/3 of the way in, you lost all credibility. Your knowledge of boxing, boxing history and fighters is obviously extremely limited. Ali fought in what most consider the most competitive era in the history of heavyweight boxing. During his best years, the only two fighters to beat him were Joe Frazier and Ken Norton, two very good fighters—one, a solid champion and the other a great contender. You could make a case that Ali's loss to Spinks was valid, but he was already slowing down to a snails pace by this point. Shot at 36? So what? He was a great fighter from the early 60's to the mid-70's—even figuring in his three year ban, that's over a decade of dominance at a time when the division rocked! In fact, even his rematch win over Leon Spinks showed that he still had some boxing skills left toward the end. He was in against Frazier three times, Norton three times, Foreman, Lyle, Shavers, Young—some of the biggest hitters and most clever boxers ever to put on the gloves. He fought often and took on whoever was available and deserving—and did this for many years. How in the world can you compare that to Lennox Lewis, who didn't have the number of fights or caliber of competition? Of course Lewis was still fresher at 37 than Ali could ever hope to be. Do you really believe that Ali's performance against Holmes was the worst ever turned in by a Champion? Have you seen Mike Spinks vs. Mike Tyson? I guess not. Too bad, you made some interesting points. But some of your opinions and statements are so obviously wrong, they overshadow whatever truths (needles in a huge haystack) might have existed in that post. Like I said, losing credibility casts doubt on your whole argument.
Information: Cooper's article does make some valid arguments but also some ignorant ones as well. I'll deal with the ones I disagree with first. It's obvious that there's a lot of hate behind the article. This is why it makes some outright unfair statements which unfortunately clouds the many good statements made. I too feel that Ali is overrated. However I do feel that Ali must be treated like all other boxers when evaluating how good he is.

For instance Cooper isn't going to say that Louis sucks because he lost to Marciano at the same age that Ali lost his fights. Let's not forget he lost to former light heavyweight Ezzard Charles when he was around 35. Louis wanted to make a comeback at the title. Losing to Charles is worst than losing to a 6'3 217 lbs very skilled Holmes in my book (not to mention Ali was 38). Marciano feasted on bums and past their prime fighters. Louis was shot, Moore was like 40 years old and a light heavy to boot and Walcott was also past his prime at 37. Even though Charles was only 2 years older he was very battle weary and was slipping before he lost to Marciano. He lost some matches before he fought for the title. Marciano also got a gift decision against LaStarza. How Rocky won that fight was downright bogus. The fight was actually a draw. One judge had it Rocky the other for Roland. The ref had it even. Here's where the bs comes in. For some reason the rules were they had to have a winner. For this reason they just gave it to the more popular Rocco. Fifty years later people still say it was a bs decision. RL still thinks he won that fight. Rumor has it that Marciano also lost to a complete bum named Ted Lowery in 1949 but was given the decision. The crowd booted the decision. People believe that the film of the fight has been purposely lost to spare the late Marciano embarrassment. Besides those fights who did Marciano really beat?

Louis also got a gift with Walcott in the first fight. Years later he admitted that he lost. Not to mention that Louis admitted that he had a regular "bum of the month" schedual. Yet Cooper praises these heavys and puts down Ali. My point is no boxer is without fault or has a clean record without some controversy.

The article Cooper put up (he doesn't tell us where the source of his info comes from) is filled with erroneous arguments. I won't bother name the different types.

One error the article makes is to use age as a factor in deciding greatness. If that were the case then Lennox Lewis is the greatest of all times. While Ali, Louis, Marciano (remember HE QUIT at 32 after being decked by an old light heavyweight!!, Tyson, Bowe (remember him?)Johnson and many more were done by their mid to late 30's Lewis thrived. The fact is Lewis peaked later than others. That's what made him unique. For that he deserves his due. This creates another problem however. If you're going to use age as a factor then there's the other extreme to think about. What about how they fought in their youth? You see Cooper it can go both ways. While Ali, Patterson and Tyson were winning and defending titles in their early 20's LEWIS WAS STILL FIGHTING 4 AND 6 RD FIGHTS against the likes of Al Malcolm, Melvin Epps and Bruce Johnson (???)!!! So now we can argue that Lewis is no good because he accomplished much less at a younger age than many other boxers. This is what happens when we use hate to attack other fighters. By doing so we can discredit all boxers. From Ali to Sugar Ray Robinson. Let's not forget that SR lost to a total bum named Roy "Tiger" Jones when making his comeback. Jones never beat anyone of note. It wasn't a split but a CLEAR decision. Should we use this loss to prove that he was an overrated boxer as well? He also lost TWICE to a man who had brittle hands. Now don't go using the "over the hill" excuse if we can't use it for Ali. Cooper there's no doubt that Ali is overrated. It's just that I prefer to use the facts to speak for themselves. Not hateful babble.
fights than boxers from a more recent era like Lewis. Ali fought regularly, whereas the modern fighter doesn't. Some also forget that title fights used to be 15 rounds, now they're 12. Ali's fights were more ferocious, too.

If we listen to Cooper, Ali wasn't the greatest, he was the worst. He cheated against Henry Cooper, fixed the fights with Liston who was better than him, beat the enormously overrated Foreman which doesn't count, and was bashed senseless in all his fights against Frazier and Norton. Oh, and that wasn't Frazier who didn't come out for the last round in Manilla, it was actually Ali. We all need to get our eyes checked.

Thanks for setting us all straight, Henri.

As an Ali fan, maybe I'm guilty of some hero worship of some sort---maybe I dismiss some of his questionable performances now and then, and tend to dwell on his highlight films against Liston, Frazier in Manilla, Foreman, etc. But alas, the Ali haters have shown a capacity to be a lot more blind than I'll ever be. I'm blind to a couple mediocre Ali performances---while this guy using Henry Cooper's name is apparently blind to boxing history, 1960-1980. Ali's wins over Liston, Patterson, Quarry, Foreman, Frazier, Lyle, Shavers (he gutted out getting cold cocked at least 2-3 times by Shavers and finished strong, winning about 9 rounds in, yes, a 15 round fight, not a 12 rounder). The list goes on. Ali did get the benefit of the doubt in close fights against Young and Norton, 1976. To this day, I believe the decisions could have gone either way---but you don't take the title from a long standing Champion by sticking your head through the ropes as Young did, or swinging for the fences and missing, as Norton did. The 10 point must system was in effect and many of the rounds were even in these fights---Ali stole a few, lost a few and in the end, the Champion usually gets the nod unless the Challenger wins it more clearly, with no doubt. Anyway, the Ali hater responsible for that post has a familiar writing style and uses familiar buzz words. I haven't gone through the archives to compare verbiage and analyze it---and who really cares? Suffice to say, the guy hates Ali so badly, he isn't capable of reasoning things out and seeing another point of view.

Whoever this guy Cooper is he is obviously very biased against Ali. Rather than think Ali's performance while a shell of his former self verse Berbick shows that Ali wasn't great, this fight, which by the way was close, shows that Ali with most of his skills gone could still be competitive with a ranked contender and future WBC champion. Watch the tape, Ali is in the fight until the end and while a verdict for Berbick was fair, Ali gave a good account of himself. Others on the board have pointed out other holes in Cooper's arguments.

I'm right. If you disagree, then you are an uncle tom.

Yes, Ali's loss to Berbick was fair and square. In fact, I probably gave Berbick a stronger win than you did--but you're correct in that Ali, while no where near the fighter he once was, was competitive for most of the fight and didn't embarass himself. I have no idea why he took that fight though---Larry Holmes thrashed Ali and was still the top dog. What did Ali hope to accomplish by fighting Berbick? Anyway, I doubt that this Cooper ever even saw that fight or most of the bouts he wrote about.

Everyone wears rose colored glasses when viewing the career of boxers they most admire. No boxing fan comes without bias in some shape or form.

However, Cooper's argument against Ali goes further than mere bias. Some of his arguments are so fallacious that there must be hatred involved. For instance, Cooper ridicules Ali's win over Foreman by arguing that Foreman was a nothing. But later Cooper declares that Frazier was the best all round fighter Ali ever faced. While that might be true, the fact is that the guy he says was a nothing - George Foreman - knocked Joe out twice. Cooper's logic stinks. To describe Foreman in such demeaning terms, means, to me, that Cooper wasn't trying to argue the facts or logic about Ali. He was merely looking to put Ali down and when the truth didn't quite cut it, he resorted to untruths and fallacious arguments. Cooper talks about some of the bums Ali fought and no one can doubt that there were more than just a few. However, Ali fitted these bums in between regular fights against the elite of his era. Ali was one of the busiest heavies of all time and he ducked no one. Consider Ali's schedule in 1975. After beating Foreman a few months earlier, he fought Wepner in March 1975, Lyle in May 1975, Bugner in June 1975. Not a bad effort there. Think about it; Ali fought two ranked guys within a month when he was past his prime. Cooper's arguments are all smoke and mirrors and I suspect that he lifted his comments from another site, perhaps the KKK one. It was good reading, though.

To quote Ali, he said, "I thought I should go out of boxing with a win. Or if not a win, at least throwing punches." After Berbick beat him, Ali said at the press conference, "I came out all right for an old man. We all lose sometimes. We all grow old." Indeed. Ali's loss to Berbick, a ranked fighter and future Champion, was a bad way to go out for a legend—but he salvaged some respect I guess. However, more tragic than the loss would have been a win. God only knows what Ali would have done next if he managed to beat Berbick. A rematch against Holmes or a match against John Tate/Mike Weaver? Disaster. If Ali really wanted to, he could have fought for another year or two, against really low caliber club fighters. The type of guys you take on when you're just starting out, or the type of guys Foreman started with in his comeback. Ali could have added another half dozen decision wins to his career and then called it quits. These would have been like exhibitions. Instead, he took on a successful Olympian, a contender and future Champion, Trevor Berbick. He picked on a tougher guy and lost a decision and that's how it all ended. Ali didn't take the easy way out.

Some Ali trivia which I'm sure you all know: Chuvalo said that Ali was better pre-exile; Mac Foster was a former Ali sparring partner; Ali v Folley in 1967 was the first heavyweight title fight to be at MSG in 16 years; the first southpaw Ali met as a pro was Mildenberger; Ali sparred Ingemar Johansson before the Fleeman fight. A trivia question: who promoted the Ali v Logan fight in 1962? | For Your Information: You guys are wasting your time. All you need to do is scroll down to my 2 posts and most (if not all) of your rebuttles will be there. I dealt with age and other factors Cooper dealt with.Read them and use them. I didn't write all of that for nothing. For you guys just to ignore.The next time I return here I want to actually see comments on what I wrote. Thanks.I wonder if this Cooper character is related to the real Henry? I mean is he mad that Ali beat and bloodied his dad or something? Or is it uncle? He he he.Your intentions might be good, but I'm not sure if I understand the reason for your post. Kent usually gives his e-mail address, so if this is really a sincere concern about the site that you wish to share with Kent, you could have written directly to him. Lately, I think the tone has improved here, especially since members of the Quarry family chastised us carrying on the way we were. I think that for the most part, we've managed to get back to boxing lately. We'll always have spirited and sometimes bitter debate---some of us are emotional about the sport and our favorites---but we've toned it down and have gotten constructive again. By posting your opinion about how the site has deteriorated and how it's gone downhill, what does that accomplish? The timing seems weird because like I said, with a few exceptions, we've been doing well lately. Writing publicly to Kent and "dissing" the site will just cause people here to get defensive and start bickering again. Also, you recall fondly that we "used to" put our e-mail addresses down and correspond---but you didn't do this on your own post! I know you asked Kent and not me, but I'll answer anyway---no, this site is NOT a cesspool. I still think it's a great tribute to Jerry, Mike and the other Quarry's, and I still like the letters page. Again, I don't want you to think this is a knock on you---I hope you stick around and talk boxing with us.It wasn't civil thenIt goes in cycles, people feud and then things calm down.Some of the old regulars pop in every now and then but I think it is just people get on to other things in their life, they don't come here because of that, not because of the fighting here.Writing publicly to Kent and "dissing" the site will just cause people here to get defensive and start bickering again. Also, you recall fondly that we "used to" put our e-mail addresses down and correspond---but you didn't do this on your own post! I know you asked Kent and not me, but I'll answer anyway---no, this site is NOT a cesspool. I still think it's a great tribute to Jerry, Mike and the other Quarry's, and I still like the letters page. Again, I don't want you to think this is a knock on you---I hope you stick around and talk boxing with us.You girls can't even insult me good, much less make a good argument. I'm done verbally whipping you all. So long, fools!I think Lennox Lewis at 36-38 was clearly better than Ali' at the same age. I also believe that Tyson at 19-21 was better than Clay at the same age.But between 1964 and 1975 Ali' was probably the greatest ever. I think the first Liston fight was the real beginning of Ali's career. By the way, I don't think that both the Liston fights were fixed. I think the second one was probably fixed but the first one was regular. Liston fought hard for 5 rounds in the first fight and hit Clay with a good left hook in the fourth round. He even tried to blind Ali'. What did he do that for if the fight was fixed ?
universal lack of interest and if my memory is correct it had the smallest attendance in heavyweight history. It would have been difficult to get a bet on because there was so little interest. I just can't understand how that fight could possibly have been fixed. I don't agree with you on your fixed fight theory, Massimo.I accept what you say about Lewis and Tyson, though. | 11/29/05 04:08:11 PM| Paul| Las Vegas || private | || 1| Angelo, I first posted on this site in 1999. And at that time I did leave my Email address. Do you really expect me to leave it now. I have read many of the posts of the last year. People are labelled drunks, racists, homosexuals... This is not spirited debate, it is mean spirited ranting.Noam, where do you get your information from? You don't even know me. And yet you are bad mouthing me. Also, regarding some of your recent posts. You write that Kenny Norton did not use steroids. How do you know this? You write that Ali was an overwhelming favorite in the second fight with Liston. That is not true, Liston was still a favorite in the second fight. One more thing you and Howard C from my reading past posts are the biggest demagogues on this site.Kent those names you mention were not on this site in 1999, or 01, 02. They came later proving my point. This site has become a cesspool with pretending their opinions are facts. And terrible name calling. The fact that Brenda Quarry has threatened to pull the plug on this site proves my point. |

| 11/29/05 04:19:57 PM| Massimo| Roma || 4 || 10 | Noam-You're right, I shouldn't have used the word "fixed" for the second Ali'-Liston fight. What probably happened was that Liston as soon as he realized he was going to lose again, he gave up. Every time I see that fight I feel a sense of disappointment. That was a bad night for boxing. But it wasn't Ali's fault, it was Liston's fault. |

| 11/29/05 05:58:23 PM| Noam|same||same||| 10| Massimo, I agree. In my opinion, Liston's spirit was entirely broken and he was a beaten man and he didn't want to get up even though he could have.Ali seemed to acknowledge this himself. After the second fight with Liston, Ali said, "The punch jarred him. But I didn't think I hit him so hard he couldn't get up." According to a book I have The Rough Guide to Muhammad Ali), Liston commented two years after the fight, "Ali knocked me down with a sharp punch. I was down but not hurt....Ali is waiting to hit me, the ref can't control him. I have to put one knee and one glove on the canvass to get up. You know, Ali is a nut. You can tell what a normal man is going to do, but you can't tell what a nut is going to do and Ali is a nut."Personally, I think Ali gave Liston an excuse to quit and he quit. Ali was one of those rare fighters who took more than boxing skills into the ring. The sheer force of his personality not influenced the mindset of his opponents and probably even a few judges along the way. | 11/29/05 06:13:06 PM| Noam|same||same||| 10| Paul, lighten up. I stated my opinion that Ken Norton was not using steroids. Without proof to the contrary, you're only stating your opinion, just like me. Regards the second Liston fight, you are right. Liston was favourite. Thanks for setting me straight. Regards bad mouthing you. I wasn't. I was just replying to your unprovoked attack on me. Suddenly, appearing from nowhere, straight after someone else tried to start a fight about Ali, you come on making provocative comments. We can reply, can't we?And regards demagogues, or whatever the term was you used. When I've been wrong, I've apologized. Others haven't. The leaders of this site are the Quarrys. When they asked us to quieten down and clean it all up, we did. A month or so ago.Yet although everyone has been getting along smoothly, you come on to pick a fight. That's why I think your agenda is to start trouble here again. Hence the ridiculous posts about Ali from some whacko, but when that didn't start a fight, you come on with your moralizing. Well, thanks, but no thanks. You can have the last word if you want, Paul, and knock yourself out doing it, but I'm not going to acknowledge you further. |
Noam, in all fairness to Paul, I have known him for quite a while now and have written to him off of the site and I know him to be sincere, not a trouble maker. I would bet he is in no way this Henry Cooper character. He was stating his opinion. Paul, Foolface, etc were here in 2001, maybe even earlier I remember as I have been posting here since 2000. We did have some lively feuds back then here and at the old Frazier website. I know you are one of Jerry's biggest fans so keep coming back.

I accept what you say Kent, however it's odd that Paul appears when things are going smoothly here, when there's no need for his intervention. If he was really concerned, as he says, then now isn't the time to say what he has. Intervening with his comments seem designed to upset the steady cart (rather than right the upset one, if you get the drift). Each to their own, I suppose, but a lot of the debate before was robust and insightful. A lot of good points came up. It's only when someone can't logically argue a point that they complain.

Mr. Noam, you say things are going smoothly. What planet are you from? Read the posts from 1999-2002. That is when things went smoothly. This site is more fractionized than Iraq. Mr. Noam, I never made an unprovoked attack on you. In my first post, I never mentioned your name. But you immediately badmouthed me in your very next post. And as a result I responded accordingly. The more I read your past posts the more I see how mean spirited you are.

Paul, you know I have always tried to be fair so in this case, if you don't like Noam or his attitude, then maybe you don't need to post your opinion about him as Noam points out, things are going smoothly now. Paul, I have always considered you a friend so don't take my comment as an attack on your character. In fact, as I pointed out, I think you are a man of integrity. It is just nice to not have to pop in here to read a lot of negative comments (from anyone).

Mr. Noam, I began my first post a few days ago describing how the quality of this site has deteriorated. No names were mentioned. I did not likened any individual to a cesspool. I likened the "quality" of the board to a cesspool. I never said they were "cesspool guys." You are hyper sensitive.
following post after you bad mouthed me. Did you bad mouth me because you mistakenly thought I called you a cesspool guy. It is kind of strange Mr. Noam that you are so sensitive. You who has inferred that a person on this board was a repressed homosexual because he respected the talents Joe Frazier. You who was racially insensitive to a blackman on this site. You see Mr. Noam you are not the only person who reads prior posts. You can assume anything you want regarding my identity. When I posted on this site in 99, 01, 02; none of these characters you mention were on this site. The site consisted of good spirited dialogue. That is no longer the case. Tell me Mr. Noam if this site has improved in the years since. Why is Brenda Quarry threatening to close down the site? Finally, Mr. Noam I have read many of your posts. You state your opinions as facts. And normally you are wrong. You sometimes try and back up these "facts" by quoting a book you have read. And I am to believe makes them "facts." Mr. Noam do you believe all the facts in the New York Times? It is alleged to the paper of record. Where did you get your information that Kenny Norton was not using steroids. I will bet it is another of your unsubstantiated opinions.

| 11/30/05 07:35:39 PM | Noam | same | || ||| 10 |
|----------------------|------|------|---|---|---|---|---|
| Contrary to what you say, Paul, you came here in your first post and called three of us demagogues and accused us for turning this site into a cesspool. You name called us. There was nothing polite about what you said. I merely responded to what you said. I didn't call you a name. And my comments were not abusive. Unlike yours. To fuel your argument you have gone back deep into the past recalling matters long forgotten, some of which I already apologized for. Clearly, you are trying to re-ignite tensions by bringing them up again and, fortunately, others here have commented that they know what you are doing. We know your agenda. But be clear, Paul, I was NOT a racist towards anyone and you are being untruthful in alleging otherwise. I used a term recognized throughout most of the world as having no racial meaning, but unfortunately someone misinterpreted what was said. That was not my fault or intention. Please, Paul, for all our benefits, especially the benefit of this site, don't keep the argument going. It was calm before you arrived. |

| 11/30/05 07:45:34 PM | Paul | one more thing. I give an opinion and sometimes I am wrong. Like anyone. I don't state my opinion as facts, merely as opinions. Sometimes I get my information from books. What's wrong with that? I do not have information showing that Norton was using steroids. I would like to believe that he wasn't. You allege that Norton used steroids. That is a very serious allegation. How do you know this? What proof do you have that such a respected boxer was cheating? |

| 11/30/05 11:47:20 PM | My Name | From | Yes | || 10 |
|----------------------|---------|------|-----|---|---|---|---|
| Noam is a pompous ass who believes everything Ali worshippers say. Then Noam spouts off these opinions like they are facts. |

| 11/30/05 11:53:27 PM | Jumpity Bruce | Jumpville | jumpjump | || 10 |
|----------------------|---------------|-------------|---------|---|---|---|---|
| Eeek Eeek Eeek Eeek, Eeek Eeek, Eeek Eeek Eeek &gt;&lt; &gt;&lt; Jumpity Bruce is jumping, Jump Jump Jump, Jump! |

| 12/1/05 12:39:21 AM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | Kentallenent@aol.com | || 10 |
|----------------------|------|--------------|---------------------|---|---|---|---|
| Paul is right about one thing, the posts here have gotten worse but the only thing we can do out of respect for Jerry and Mr. Jimmy (James) is not to have the petty bickering. Paul, in fairness to Noam, he has toned it down lately and he deserves a chance to continue to do so. So both you guys, can we please let it go. It would be a shame if Brandi did decide to pull the plug but it would also be a shame if someone, like the poster who called himself or herself Me, who wanted help for a family member who was injured in the ring, was turned off by the bickering here and missed some of the information that was posted or may be posted. Remember the main reason for this site was to help just such people so that Jerry did not die in vain and also that all of the efforts put forth by Jimmy also means something. The silly posts can be funny and they don't bother me but the petty bickering does bother me.

Hello all, I see we are at it again, but to get things stright-Paul-its been along time since we have heard from you. so hello. I see you didn't know that Brenda Quarry passed away, and maybe you didn't know that my husbund Mr.Jimmy passed away also. now and then people do get upset with each other here. But you know that happens everywhere in life. We are glad to have you back, and glad that you have your own thoughts too. Now to let you know it was I that told this site I would shut it down for reasons I gave at that time. I see you didn't read those letters. Now you've had your bad hair day, So now lets get on with gettin on. Have a great day-

Paul, you are in a word, correct. And right. Several regulars have in fact been hounded away by the few. Months ago, out of respect for the Quarrys, I decided to deny the Gang of Two or Three a ready target for their insults, hoping things here would improve. My sin had been stating fact based opinions regarding Jerry's most well known opponent in an attempt to debunk some myths. The hostility and historical revisionism I encountered was quite extreme. I was accused of many crimes, most notably impersonating the Gang's most fiendish adversary, the ubiquitous Forest Ward, whose name is still invoked lo these many months after his final missive. (Forest was at least true to his word and ceased posting, unlike other's who routinely pledge that they have had their last say, yet go on an on and ...... where do they get the time?) Consequently, since then I have logged on only once or twice, read the same tired, often nasty drivel, and logged off. As you observed, things didn't improve. Woe betide anyone who offers an opinion not in step with the Gang's. Just ask "Henry Cooper", whose nationality was ridiculed. (PS France isn't the only second rate European "power" which owes its continued existence to the USA) The only reason I am here now is to tell Paul he is not alone in his opinion. The "Jerry Quarry" site has unfortunately been co-opted by the Gang Of Two Or Three and mutated into a 24 hour "I Love Muhammed" Fest. Beyond the Gang, those who remain are modern day Neville Chamberlains, masters of appeasment. So, as I'm sure you've already figured out, don't expect any back up, Paul. In the past I repeatedly opined that we can disagree without being derogatory and calling others drunks, homosexuals, Dead Parrots, etc. However, I finally reached the conclusion that the Gang enjoys just that, so why bother? Sorry Paul, and especially to the Quarrys. Keep On Keepin' On.

I haven't posted here for weeks and I return and see that some guy called Paul, who seems to hate the world, has called me and others demagogues who have made this place a cesspool. Then some guy called Fan agrees with him. Having gone back through the posts over preceeding weeks, there weren't any problems. Yet these guys suddenly appear. I'd say troublemakers like Fan and Paul want trouble. I can't think of any other reason they suddenly turn up. Paul says the good old days were better when characters like Coo Coo Clock and DKS were here. I bet Paul could speak intelligently to them. I went through the archives and Paul was bickering with that DKS guy even back then. I saw someone named Foolface was posting then too. Fan and Paul should feel at home. Thanks for calling me a demagogue and accusing me of making a cesspool Paul. Come to think of it, thanks for causing the latest round of problems when everything was settled around here. Your cheer leader Fan is cheering you. It's just a pity you call the site here a cesspool. That's disrespectful.
guys suddenly appear. I'd say troublemakers like Fan and Paul want trouble. I can't think of any other reason they suddenly turn up. Paul says the good old days were better when characters like Coo Coo Clock and DKS were here. I bet Paul could speak intelligently to them. I went through the archives and Paul was bickering with that DKS guy even back then. I saw someone named Foolface was posting then too. Fan and Paul should feel at home. Thanks for calling me a demagogue and accusing me of making a cesspool Paul. Come to think of it, thanks for causing the latest round of problems when everything was settled around here. Your cheer leader Fan is cheering you. It's just a pity you call the site here a cesspool. That's disrespectful.

Howard C.
Louisville

Fan, you should come to terms with the fact that not everyone agrees with you regarding your hero Frasier. There are some out here who were genuinely upset when your man Forest Ward ridiculed Ali's deteriorating medical condition and gloated that Frasier caused it. You never raised a yelp about those awful comments and that gave us an insight to your mentality. By comparison, the remarks made by Noam were nothing. Unfortunately, you guys (yes, you Dead Parroters) can't come to terms with Ali being the most admired and popular athlete ever. You hated it when he lit the olympic flame. You hated him receiving an award in the White House recently. Full of resentment that Frasier never received such prestige.

Get over it, Frasier Fan, or the envy and hate will keep you awake at night. And stop making fun of ex-boxers with disabilities. You don't have to be an Ali admirer to resent that. Thanks for starting all the trouble, Paul. You obviously like this site lots. I'd never heard of you and then all of a sudden you appear calling me names.

Henry Cooper
France
The "Gang" has an unhealthy obsession with Muhammad Ali. The guy isn't as popular or admired as you claim. The guy was a bigot, a womanizer, and a cruel bully. He was also a cocky, loudmouthed, jackass. Your love for him is so ridiculous, and you tear down the careers of every other fighter to build his legend up.

I hear the Gang go on and on about one comment made by Forest Ward or whoever like a year ago, making fun of Ali. And yet, the Gang shits on Joe Frazier DAILY. They try and dig up dirt on him, and then claim that they aren't doing so. Then they bring up comments other posters made to somehow justify their actions.

Of course, I don't even know why I'm writing this, as the Gang won't listen to anyone, and you can bet Muhammad Ali will be mentioned in their post. I thought this was a Jerry Quarry site?

Massimo
Roma
ONE MOMENT OF ATTENTION EVERYONE, JUMPITY BRUCE IS BACK !!!! JUMP JUMPITY, JUMP FOREVER MY HERO !!!

Massimo, YES IT IS GREAT THAT OUR HERO JUMPITY BRUCE MADE AN APPEARANCE.

Hi Brandi Quarry. Can you please post instructions for me to get the extended tape showing some of Jerry's fights in their entirety ? I hope you don't decide to close this site down! We've had some rough and tumble characters here over the years, Fool Face and KooKoo Clock to name a few. I think this site is pretty tame compared to 2001,2002. I've really enjoyed this site over the years. I think most of the posters here are well intentioned and really care about Jerry's life, and boxing history. I cannot understand why there hasn't been a book about him. The only poster on this site who bothers me is Kent. I think you should have a talk with him! He always disagrees with me, and he hates the Eagles!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>12/1/05 12:24:29 PM</th>
<th>Sreve</th>
<th>N.J.</th>
<th>NA</th>
<th>10</th>
<th>Hey Massimo, how ya doin? Who is Jumpity Bruce? I was looking over the archives, and I noticed that you must be a very fast learner. Your English has improved 200 percent since you started posting here.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>12/1/05 12:46:28 PM</td>
<td>Sreve</td>
<td>N.J.</td>
<td>NA</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>Hey Paul Murdaros, I read one of your posts from way back in Dec. 2001. You had a good idea. A movie about Jerry would be great, and the sound track of music from the years Jerry was around would be fantastic. It's good to hear from one of the old timers. If you can get over being P.O.ed at some of the posters, I would like you to start posting here about Jerry and boxing. Take it easy.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12/1/05 12:57:07 PM</td>
<td>Joe</td>
<td>Chicago</td>
<td>Unknown</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>It's nice to talk about Jerry Quarry, what is this site talking about?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12/1/05 01:15:55 PM</td>
<td>Massimo</td>
<td>Roma</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>Hi Steve, thank you for the compliment! I still have my problems with English, in particular with the spoken English (or one), but I'm working on it every day by writing here (or on here), by reading what you guys write and by listening to CNN. Who is Jumpity Bruce? Just the most important character on this site!</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12/2/05 12:58:51 PM</td>
<td>Kent</td>
<td>Southern California</td>
<td>kentallenent@aol.com</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>Hey Steve, at least you are a loyal Eagles fan, going down with the ship! &lt;br&gt;Hey it is a lost cause this year and at least I haven't said Ha! Ha! I did say this to my buddy from Philly though. &lt;br&gt;What is great about my situation, no one can say anything back to me as I don't have a team and I haven't had one for years, the Rams in St. Louis have never been my Los Angeles Rams so my friend from Philly can't say anything back to me.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| 12/2/05 06:09:49 PM | Paul | Las Vegas | private | 1 | Brandi, I am sorry to learn about your mother, Brenda. I was aware of the passing of your father Jimmy. First I will reply to Howard the Coward. By calling you a demagogue, I was being kind. I could call you a lot worse, and still be telling the truth. Where were you when your penpal Noam was labelling people as repressed homosexuals, alcoholics, and writing racially insensitive remarks? Oh that must have slipped by you. And you, who calls people "dead parroters." One more thing Forrest Ward was one of the more interesting posters on this site. And he never ridiculed Ali's condition, that is another case of you slandering someone, so many times that people believe it. And what happens? Ward gets fed up and leaves the site. Who gained from that? Now Noam, you are the master of slander and misinformation on this site. You smear someone with sentences taken out of context. You labell people repressed homosexuals because they admire Joe Frazier. You call people alcoholics. Which is interesting because you wrote on this site that "my (Noam) problem is that I drink too much beer." And last but not least you write racially insensitive remarks about black people, and then call them stupid because they were insulted by your race baiting. And you did not insult just "someone," quite a few people were insulted and upset about your remark. I don't know what part of the world you are from, but in the USA you don't accuse a black man of "relentless niggling." Noam, you never apologized for labelling someone a repressed Homosexual, an alcoholic, or for race baiting. So don't give me this nonsense that you apologize when you insult someone. A typical example of your mistruths is to say I alleged that Kenny Norton was on steroids. I never did any such thing. I just asked where you got your information that Norton never used steroids. As usual you could not defend your statement. Lastly, I did not go "back deep into the past recalling matters long forgotten." The race baiting you did took place a few months ago. I did go "back deep into the past recalling matters long forgotten," when I recalled how healthy and interesting this site was before you and Howard the Coward polluted it with your vile name callings and lies about people. One more thing Noam, you write lies, and mistruths throughout you posts when posters are in disagreement with you, and then at the end of the post you pretend you are an honorable man by nobly suggesting lets move on from here after you write paragraphs smearing someone.

| 12/2/05 09:37:24 PM | Fan | Fandom | Fan@Fandom.com | 8 |

Paul, good to hear from you. I posted back in the day when this place was of high quality. I changed to an alias because of too many e-mails being sent to me and too many idiots as well. Noam will admit he said some stuff he shouldn't have said. I think he's amn enough to do that. Once he does that could we just let the issue drop. This site in a terrible downward spiral and it's up to us to change it. How about this, Jerry Quarry vs Bob Foster 1970.

| 12/3/05 12:24:22 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com |

Fan from Fandom, you the people who posted regrettable things have not been doing so lately so I hope also Paul can move on. They deserve a chance to show that they have moved on. I think Jerry would have broken down Bob Foster. Jerry was just too strong for Foster. Jerry could have taken Foster best shots, even the one that put Mike down. That shot would have rocked Jerry but he would have withstood it and Foster would not have been able to take Jerry's best shots.

| 12/4/05 03:45:59 AM | Massimo Cini da Pisa | Roma | Jerry Quarry in 1970 beat Mac Foster so I think he would have beaten Bob Foster also. Mac was stronger than Bob. Bob lost against every(or any) heavyweight he ever fought: Doug Jones, Zora Folley, Ernie "Clay" Terrell, Joe Frazier, Muhammad "Who" Ali'.

| 12/4/05 03:01:22 PM | Brandi Quarry | Everywhere | brandiquarry3@msn.com |

Paul-Brenda was not my mother, she was my sister-in-law. She was James Quarry's sister, and James was My husbund. But Thank you for your kind words. Here's Wishing for all to keep the Magic of Christmas in their Hearts, and Throughout the New Year. Season's Greetings!

| 12/5/05 02:28:50 AM | Massimo | Roma | Take a look at this legendary picture! http://img205.imageshack.us/my.php?image=specialbigboy7co.jpg

| 12/5/05 03:42:40 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com |

Paul: Respectfully, we've been over the "relentless niggling" comment about 150 times, and say what you will about Noam, but this clearly wasn't racially insensitive. Admittedly, "niggling" is not the most widely used term, but on the other hand, a lot of respected writers/editorialists/columnists in all areas have used this word, if not frequently, at least occasionally. It's a bona fide English word and it has nothing at all to do with race. But the real clincher is that even if it were a negative word, which it isn't, no one here had any idea that the poster in question was African American---this was never even disclosed until after "relentless niggling" was used. Noam is good, but not that good. How would he possibly know the guy posting was black? When you say there are "quite a few" people who were offended, who were these people? I suspect that a couple people might have claimed to be offended, but it's because Noam has fired bombs at Frazier while defending Ali---my guess is that people are more upset at Noam for his strongly polarizing boxing opinions, not his use of the word "niggling." And on that subject, it seems incredible to me that someone who waves a flag for Muhammad Ali could be accused of racism. The two don't go together.
Angelo, at one time siding with Ali regarding social issues was racist when he was spouting off the rhetoric of The Nation of Islam. NOI often said all white people are inherently evil. Ali does not support such nonsense now and he hasn't done so for many years so supporting Ali is not racist now.

But Kent, that "racism" on the part of Ali would be racism against white people. I think Noam is being accused of racism against black people. That even drives home the point more strongly. Why would Noam, if he's racist against black people, be a supporter of a black man who has been accused (in his past) of being racist against whites? None of it holds any water.

Angelo, that is true some here thought Noam was being racist against black people, which I don't think he was. Being an Ali supporter, regarding boxing even when Ali was spewing out NOI propaganda would not make someone racist even back then.

I believe that the only time someone could be called racist and be an Ali supporter at the same time is if that person promoted NOI'S hatred (back then).

But NOI deserves no praise just because there have been no documented evidene of violence against white people as their philosophy is the same as the Ku Klux Klan minus the violence but only from the black point of view instead of the white perspective.

In my mind racism is racism regardless of who that mindset is directed at. I agree that supporting who Ali became and racism don't go hand and hand.

Especially supporting Ali as a boxer has nothing to do with race.

Angelo: I guess I could understand how someone who wasn't familiar with the term "niggling" could misunderstand and think Noam was saying something negative or ridiculing. But it's all been adequately explained and now all of us know that niggling is a proper English word, used widely by respected columnists and used verbally by educated, responsible and good people. I guess my latest issue is that when it was dead and buried, someone had to bring it all up again, intentionally taking it out of context and accusing Noam of racism. That's not only ridiculous and insulting, but it's also a dangerous thing to loosely accuse someone of racism when it is not deserved. That's like loading a pointed gun in someone's direction and pulling the trigger---you don't know if it will hit them or not, but you're damn sure it will scare them. I don't like it at all and I don't think there's a place for it here.

I hope Paul continues to post here as he is huge Jerry Quarry fan but I hope that he too can put this quarrel behind us and move on.

Noam and company, to their credit, have toned down their posts and they deserve credit for doing so but they are not the only ones who have posted something they regret. Most of us here have posted things they wish they hadn't so what is wrong with starting with a clean slate?

Angelo, you and I have disagreed about things from time to time but we have always been civil, so it is possible to argue and not make it personal.

Steve is another story. He continues to heckle me just because I am not an Eagles fan. Just kidding!! As although Steve has his football team, he is still a good guy.

Massimo, wouldn't it be a shame if Jumpity Bruce left forever because of the fighting here? Now that would be a shame.
17 John Ruiz is fighting Nicolay Valuev in Germany. I hope it is televised here in the U.S. I think Valuev is the biggest man to ever fight for a heavyweight title at 7 feet tall and 325 pounds. There was a fighter named Mike "The Giant" White who fought in the late 80s and 90s who was 6'10" 275 pounds who fought some world class fighters but except for a win over James Buster Douglas by a tenth round knockout, a fight in which Douglas had won almost every round before being knocked out, White never beat a world class fighter. But White did give Michael Moorer a good fight even though Moorer knocked him down three times in the fight on the way to a decision win. I have seen Nicolay fight 2 or 3 times and I think he is gonna beat Giovanni Ruiz. Nicolay's most impressive fight was against Paolo Vidoz. Vidoz is a former silver medal in the heavyweight division and is a good heavyweight. Well, Nicolay trashed him like he was a bum. Nicolay is really huge, Paolo Vidoz at 6'3" looked like Andre' in comparison.

I have seen Nicolay fight 2 or 3 times and I think he is gonna beat Giovanni Ruiz. Nicolay's most impressive fight was against Paolo Vidoz. Vidoz is a former silver medal in the heavyweight division and is a good heavyweight. Well, Nicolay trashed him like he was a bum. Nicolay is really huge, Paolo Vidoz at 6'3" looked like Andre' in comparison.

Hey Kent and Angello. You guys are allright with me as far as this stupid ass Racism accusations. I dont think any real boxing fan could be a racist. I think you two guys are sane enough to judge fighters by their skill, there success in the ring, and other less obvious factors. Such as thier personal behavior. I dont believe Noam is a bigot, nor is Jimmy Dorsey. I could take you to some late sixties and earlier 70's fights at the Blue Horizon in Philly, or at the Cherry Hill Arena. These philly fighters fought for thier lives in every fight I could have shown you really savage fighting, Philly style. GUYS LIKE, Joe Frazier, Dick Tiger, BOOGOLO Watts, DWIGHT Muhammed Quiwi, the Camden Buzzsaw, and Mathew Saad Muhamid. Joe Archie. These guys where philly fighters. They left more in thier sparring wars, than they left in the ring. I wish Jerry Quarry would have defeated Bob Foster. He might have had to adjust to Foster's quick left jab, straight monster right hand. I believe Quarry was way to strong, hit much too hard, and was quick enough to effectively counter anything Foster threw, and with twice the power. I wish Jerry Quarry, Merry Christmas and God bless.

Hey PAUL, you know, your not the only guy who for some reason is fascinated by the Quarry family. I feel the same interest in this family as you do. I also wish I was as strong and tough as Jerry. Although I could have lasted probably into the third or fourth round before he counter punched me into a coma.

I dont even know what to do with Samual Peters. How about him and Cris Byrd? I know of no such thing as racism among boxers. If anything the respect is shared by both as in no other sport. The thought of black vs. white never entered my mind. Win or lose you are a much more humble person when you walk out of that ring. I guess that's why boxers are special people. Too bad I can't say the same for the blood sucking, no good promoters and matchmakers that continue to pollute the sport we all love.

Max, you are so right, in all of the fights I have been to and of all of the boxers I have met, I have never seen even a hint of racism among the boxers themselves. It is a special brotherhood all its own where there is a lot of mutual respect among the contestants for each other. They alone understand the sacrifice they endure during training and the danger each of them faces each and every time they step into the ring. Even though trash talking does occur between boxers mainly to promote events and sometimes in the heat of battle, deep down every boxer has respect for all boxers regardless of ability level. It is only some of the media, some of the promoters who stand to make a fortune off the backs of boxers, and a small percentage of the fans that perpetrates the race card.

There is some racism in boxing as it can be anywhere in society but by and large I think it is the exception and not the rule. I believe that there is less racial bias in boxing then elsewhere in society at large. But I think society is getting better than it was in the past in that regard. The community where I live now is integrated at least to some extent. All different races seem to co exist without problems. I would guess the racial make up is about 60 percent white but with substantial numbers of other races represented.

It is not unusual to see several blacks, asians, Mexicans or other Latin Americans and others every time I enter a store or public place while the place where I grew up there were very few blacks, mostly the only non whites I saw were Mexicans and a few asians. I think that when there is enough economic opportunity, then people of all races can exist side by side without problems.

Yes Jimmy D, there is some racism in boxing as it can be anywhere in society but by and large I think it is the exception and not the rule. I believe that there is less racial bias in boxing then elsewhere in society at large. But I think society is getting better than it was in the past in that regard. The community where I live now is integrated at least to some extent. All different races seem to co exist without problems. I would guess the racial make up is about 60 percent white but with substantial numbers of other races represented.

It is not unusual to see several blacks, asians, Mexicans or other Latin Americans and others every time I enter a store or public place while the place where I grew up there were very few blacks, mostly the only non whites I saw were Mexicans and a few asians.

I think that when there is enough economic opportunity, then people of all races can exist side by side without problems.

Markham: I truly enjoyed your post, about just about every heavyweight there ever was, and everyone in America is entitled to their own opinion, but there is one big fact you left out about our own JQ, "besides bleeding before the national anthem!" Jerry also beat 8 top rated title contenders (and 4 knockouts). And 5 he was the underdog, and I can name them, and if people want to say "owe he's nothing!" they and their record were at the top of the time, as far as Cooper is concerned, he would not have had Jerry's record had he been from L.A., and Jerry would have even had a better record had he been in Britain, canu say 64 seconds?

Jimmy: The "fans" who belittle Quarry for bleeding or "losing all the time" expose themselves as uninformed idiots. These are not knowledgable boxing fans, but morons who saw a few key losses in the mid-70's and formed a silly opinion based on that alone. When these same people hear that Quarry KOed Earnie Shavers in one round, beat an undefeated Ron Lyle, won over Thad Spencer and Mac Foster----they give you a blank stare.

Weight loss update: I have now lost 31 pounds since August! I still have a long way to go to reach my goal but I have made major progress in the right direction. You're gonna be the fastest thing on two legs! And you're gonna jump better than Jumpity Bruce!
THANKU ANGELO: There is no heavyweight contender of Jerry's time that had 8 wins and a draw against the top ten that did not win a title, even Jimmy Ellis and Ken Norton never beat that many in the top ten! To say that Jerry was a mediocre journeyman! The Man was an alltime great period! And never ever ever quit! Some people think other fighter's might be better because they fared better against Ali and Frazier. This does not mean a damn thing. If it did George Chuvalo and Chuck Wepner and Joe Bugner and Alfredo Evangelista and Rudi Lubbers. Is JIM MURRAY STILL ALIVE???

JIM DORSEY: Karl Midlenberger and maybe even Jurgin Blin gave Ali more of a problem than Jerry did but that doesn't make them better fighters than Jerry. Jerry just didn't match up well with Ali because of styles but that is not a put down as not many fighters did match up well with Ali. Jerry would have beaten Mildenberger and Blin hands down, no question about it. Ironically, Jack Bodell may have given Ali some problems because he was a southpaw and Jerry knocked the guy out in less than one round. Earnie Shavers almost beat Ali, he gave Ali hell, and I realize Shavers had a lot more experience when he fought Ali then when he fought Jerry and he had improved a lot but he still never really could take a punch that great and it is possible Jerry could have still knocked out a more experienced Shavers.

ED: Ali was also ready for Quarry. He didn't take Jerry lightly as he may have some other fighters. I remember he had special sparring partners flown in from across the country because they could mimic Quarry's left hook. And you might remember he shut down Quarry's deadly left hook perfectly. In the Mildenberger fight Ali might have been a little off peak. He had several fights close together over in Europe and he seemed stale in that one.

KENT: P S Nice work on the weight loss!

KENT: To relate my last post to boxing consider that my comment, "it is better to look good, then to feel good," goes in boxing as well, at least according to uninformed fans. At first glance, if the people didn't know who the fighters are, a lot of people would think that the fighter with the better build would win most fights. But Jerry Quarry beat a lot of fighters who probably had a more cut body than he did. It was his skill and determination that did the trick.

KENT: Thanks Ed, but you know what is frustrating when you get obese and even when you lose a substantial amount of weight, some people don't give you much credit. For example, I have been wearing a 4x shirt for a while. They are getting big on me and soon I will buy some 3x shirts and some smart ass will comment on how big my belly is as the shirt will be snug on me at first. I hear the same thing when I go to a smaller shirt all the way down the line to 2x and maybe even 1x, if I still have a small belly sticking out, which I will probably always have. You get very little credit for the work you have done in this cosmetic world where it is better to look good than to feel good. I have been heavy for about fifteen years and even when I weighed about 230, people still made comments about how fat I was. Frustrating as I still am over 300 pounds and 230 would be a decent goal for now. I know I shouldn't care about what people think but it is hard to do when almost every day someone on T.V. or in a movie makes rude comments about some fat guy that I might still be bigger than. I have been asked, "how can someone gain over 100 pounds?" Consider that when I was younger I could eat anything I wanted and just exercise and weight wasn't that hard to take off. Also, people can understand gaining maybe 10 pounds but if you think about it, five pounds a year for 20 years adds up to 100 pounds, it can sneak up on you. would have had a very good chance to beat Ken Norton, a fighter with a more cut body than Jerry ever had. Also, as pointed out before, Jerry was nowhere near the fighter he once was when he fought Norton and he still gave Norton a lot of trouble, at least for a few rounds, before being stopped.

There was a fighter named Mike Williams who was built like an Adonis who fought a lot on ESPN back in the 1980s who was undefeated, about 17-0 against journeyman fighters, who's first fight verses an experienced world class fighter was against Buster Douglas on the undercard of Tyson/Spinks. Well Douglas knocked the guy down about four times on the way to a seventh round knockout and this guy Mike Williams was pretty much never heard from again. Note that Douglas, even when he fought the fight of his life a couple of years later against Tyson, always looked a little flabby even when he was in top shape.

There was a fighter named Mike Williams who was built like an Adonis who fought a lot on ESPN back in the 1980s who was undefeated, about 17-0 against journeyman fighters, who's first fight verses an experienced world class fighter was against Buster Douglas on the undercard of Tyson/Spinks. Well Douglas knocked the guy down about four times on the way to a seventh round knockout and this guy Mike Williams was pretty much never heard from again. Note that Douglas, even when he fought the fight of his life a couple of years later against Tyson, always looked a little flabby even when he was in top shape.

Sigh, since my letters are ignored by the posters I'll just write for my own interest and any visitors who stop by and want to jump in. First off to the Dorsey fellow. If by Markham you meant me (as I live in Markham, Canada) I never wrote anything about Quarry bleeding during any anthem. I think it was that Henry Cooper fellow. I actually rebutted him to no avail (since everyone ignored me).

Now back to my earlier topic (before the Cooper debacle sidetracked everything). Out of the top white heavyweights listed I think that Vitali is the best one. Someone wrote that he was unproven but I disagree. He showed his power against both Corrie Saunders and Danny Williams. Williams has since beaten Audley Harrison who's supposed to be the next Big Brit after Lennox Lewis.

Vitali vs Jerry would've been like Ali-Quarry 2. Jerry just couldn't handle big Ali. Well Vitali is EVEN BIGGER than Ali. A lot bigger. Vitali is 6'7" and 240 to 250 lbs. Thus Quarry would be too small. Not to mention Vitali's long reach. Quarry had problems with the jab. Big problems. Again check out the Patterson, Ellis, BOTH Ali fights and the Norton fight. Contrary to what Cooper and others have said Quarry DIDN'T do well against Ali period. I had Ali winning all three rounds in their first fight. The closest round was the second but Ali still did the better scoring. We all know what happened in the third. Considering that Ali was out of action for almost four years I was surprised at how well he looked in the fight. My point is that I noticed how much problems Quarry had with dodging boxers with good jabs. Vitali would capitalize on this and bloody little Quarry up. Vitali had a stronger punch than Ali, Norton, Ellis or Patterson.

Vitali would crush Bobick, Bugner, Cooper, Cooney, Kirkman, Morrison and Mesi. Though Cooney had a hard punch he lacked skill. I admit that I doubt Vitali could ko the tough George Chuvalo. No one ever did including Big George Foreman. However I could see him doing enough damage to stop him in the later rounds. Even if he didn't stop him I could still see him damaging him much more than any boxer in the past did accept for Frazier and Foreman. If Vitali was around during the 60's 70's and 80's he would've succeeded where the others didn't. Especially Bobick and Cooney against Norton and Holmes. At this stage in Vitali's career the Holmes that Cooney met would've been the tougher fight for Klitchko. Maybe Holmes would be a bit too much. Vitali could beat Norton though.

I believe Vitali at full potential could beat Holmes too. It's too bad we won't see what Vitali could accomplish at his best. I hope he can make a comeback sometime in the future. It would be sad if his career were to end like this. I'll deal with the others on my list later.

For Your Information: The younger brother Wladimir is a different story. Though he too is large I can see Quarry and others beating him. He's just too inconsistent. I'm not saying they would beat him I'm just saying it is possible. Much more likely than beating Vitali.

If anyone does respond make sure you read this post carefully before you do.

Vitali's POTENTIAL impresses me but his lack of accomplishments are glaring. Jerry Quarry did beat some big fighters, tall fighters and skilled fighters. Toughness counts for a lot, and so does determination. Jerry Quarry had both in spades and so far, I haven't seen enough of either from Klitscho(s). When the going gets tough, you're injured and you feel like quitting—that's when the boys pack it in and the men get going. Jerry Quarry fought Jimmy Ellis with a fractured bone in his back. Say what you will about Quarry's cuts—except for Frazier II., he tended to ignore the bleeding and fight. In Frazier II., even Frazier backed away from the flow of blood out of disbelief (and sportsmanship). Quarry takes Klitscho, either one of them, in the middle to later rounds. Now, the possibility of being stopped on cuts looms, in any JQ fight—but I think he'd manage to back up Vitali Klitscho with an attack that VK couldn't handle. Just an opinion.

Hey Kent, congrats on the 31 lbs. Don't let it bother you when someone still calls you overweight. You'll never get the credit you deserve for the difficult struggle of losing weight and keeping it off. When I retired, after a few months I just ballooned up to 265 lbs. I knew I needed a new knee. I was only 50, so the surgeon told me I was too young. The VA surgeon told me to get off my fat ass and start ing. I wear a size 4x shirt right now. If somebody says something about your weight, tell them, remember, under this extra weight is 200 lbs. of muscle. Ask them if they've ever had their ass kicked by a fat man!

Hey for your information, I'm sorry you feel your being ignored. I hope you know your coming off as a little pompous. I would very much like to trade opinions. Your not gonna like this, but I think George Foreman would have pasted both Klitcho brothers. Who can say who punched harder. I know who knocked out the more impressive fighters. I know who never quite from an injury, and got up from two knockdowns to stop Ron Lyle.

As I have said regarding Vitali Klitschko verses Jerry Quarry, it would be a very hard task for Jerry to beat him but it is possible. Vitali did have an accurate jab and accurate combinations but Jerry would have the advantage in agility and hand speed. He could get in and out of harms way and do his own damage. Yes, Vitali did have accurate punches but he was no Ali and he was somewhat of a plodder and a bit clumsy. Since unless he makes a comeback, Vitali's potential will never be realized and if that is the case and if he never boxes again, his potential of what he could have done means nothing. intangibles such as heart also come into play. Would I quit on my stool if I had a painful arm injury, quite possibly but I am not a champion athlete. That is one thing Jerry Quarry had, a champion's heart and there is no way he would have quit because of an arm injury like Vitali did against Chris Byrd. Jerry would have fought on with one arm, especially if he was leading on all of the cards late in a fight.
Boxing in the 60's, 70's, and 80's was as good as it got, ending with Holmes. Of course that is just my observation!!

Well the big palooka Valuev won a close decision over Ruiz for the WBA title. I didn't see the fight of course as it wasn't shown here in the U.S. but from reports I have read, it was a boring fight. Valuev versus Toney would be funny to watch as Valuev is about 9 feet tall and Toney is short, but I think James would chop down that tree without much trouble.

I wonder if our new friend FYI might think Jerry Quarry would lose to Nikolay the Midget?

Finally we got rid of that boring guy Giovanni Ruiz. We all boxing fans owe a big thank you to the big fella Nicola, the new WBA champion of the world (the wiltest and andrest champion in history, this guy would have made Primo Carnera look like his little son). The simple fact that he had so much trouble in beating Giovanni makes me think he ain't that good. He is a legitimate top 10 in this moment, but Vitali and Giacomo Toney would beat him quite easily in my book.

This Norman Stone character is one crazy son of a bitch. Bad enough that they put John Ruizzzzzzz against a grizzly bear but for Stone to go bezerk the way he did takes the cake, pie and any other desert their is. This isn't the first time Stone has blown up. Shows the sad state of the heavyweight division today.

For Your Information: This Norman Stone character is one crazy son of a bitch. Bad enough that they put John Ruizzzzzzz against a grizzly bear but for Stone to go bezerk the way he did takes the cake, pie and any other desert their is. This isn't the first time Stone has blown up. Shows the sad state of the heavyweight division today.

For Your Information: It's spelled Vitali KLITSCHKO.

I kind of admire Stone as he is intensely loyal to his fighter. He really cares about his fighter, kind of refreshing when so many others don't care enough what happens to them.

You never know what Stoney is going to say or do next.

What's the difference between John Ruiz and Rosie Ruiz? Well, Rosie Ruiz takes a boring sport, marathon running, and makes it exciting by catching a car ride to cheat to win. John Ruiz takes an exciting sport, boxing, and makes it boring by forcing fans to sit through a grab and hold marathon.

Could you imagine if title fights were still 15 rounds? With a minute between rounds, that would be almost a solid hour of living through "grab and hold" Ruiz.

What's the difference between John Ruiz and Rosie Ruiz? Well, Rosie Ruiz takes a boring sport, marathon running, and makes it exciting by catching a car ride to cheat to win. John Ruiz takes an exciting sport, boxing, and makes it boring by forcing fans to sit through a grab and hold marathon.

"Vitali vs Jerry would've been like Ali-Quarry 2. Jerry just couldn't handle big Ali. Well Vitali is EVEN BIGGER than Ali." It wasn't a question of ALI's size, it was his speed, his ability to move coupled with his left jab. To suggest that V.K. is comparable to ALI is a really big stretch. (A guy from MARKHAM ON should know better, eh?)

"Big Stretch" is putting it mildly, but you are correct. Ali and Klitschko don't belong in the same paragraph much less the same sentence. Quarry was a world class heavyweight in an era that will/has gone down in boxing history as perhaps the most competitive, best ever. Quarry contended with the Fraziers, Ali's, Nortons, Shavers, Lyles of the world, not Chris Byrd. To suggest that somehow, Vitali could "handle Jerry Quarry like Ali did" is laughable. You're right—we're comparing apples and oranges here. |

12/22/05 05:22:44 PM| Kent| Murrieta, Ca|| kentallenent@aol.com|||10| It was Ali's skill and style that gave Jerry so much trouble, not his size because Jerry was able to handle guys that were as big or bigger than Ali. Namely Ron Lyle and Buster Mathis.Yes Vitali K had skill but enough to defeat Jerry Quarry? I don't know about that.As I have said, it would not be an easy fight for Jerry but it is very possible Jerry could have come out on top. |

12/23/05 12:52:06 PM| Rip Taylor| Hollywood|| goodnessgracious.com|||10| GOODNESS GRACIOUS! THAT NIC VALUEV IS THE BIGGEST HUNK IN BOXING! THAT BIG HUNK LOOKS LIKE HE WAS MADE IN SOME GUY'S GARAGE! HE'S THE BURT REYNOLDS OF BOXING!! WHERE CAN I GET HIS POSTER? |
I have lost four more pounds and am heading into the New Year at least 35 pounds less than I was in August 05. My goal at this point was about 40 to 45 pounds so I am near my target. Funnily, when I talk to so called fitness experts, you know guys that work at health clubs, they tell me it is possible for me to have ripped abs and toned arms but if I can lose 120 or 130 pounds in about a year to a year and a half, then I will have accomplished something special. They will still say I need them when I reach my goal as I will still have a little bit of a belly and probably flabby arms but that is OK as I don't need them as I know what to do and the little gut and smooth arms is fine.

Valuev is an interesting fighter. He lacks the skills necessary to beat any of the top ten bums out there today. If he had an American trainer and boxed out of a good gym he may be able to learn a little about boxing. He might do pretty well. I can only compare him to Too Tall Jones as far as size goes. Too Tall couldn't fight a lick and almost lost a fixed fight against a Mexican light heavy back in the day. We'll just wait and see but I suspect the handlers of Valuev will put him right back in there against another half ass heavyweight who'll probably end his career.

Max, are you sure that fight that Too Tall Jones almost lost was fixed? The other fighter, a journeyman light heavy or cruiserweight who's name I can't think of at the moment, looked like he tried to win as he almost knocked out Too Tall in the last round. It is amazing how much disrespect casual fans of boxing had for our Jerry Quarry. I remember when Too Tall Jones started fighting and I remember telling some of my friends that he will get knocked out if he ever fights someone as good as Quarry. My friends laughed at me because they thought that Jones was so strong that he would beat Jerry easy. They weren't laughing when that Mexican fighter almost knocked out Jones as the Mexican guy wasn't even half the fighter that Jerry was.

Add on to my last post, recently I mentioned that the one fighter who was almost as big as Valuev was Mike "The Giant" White, who was a decent fighter who actually had a win over Buster Douglas. White had won nearly every round until White knocked him out in the last round. White also gave Michael Moorer a good fight but Moorer knocked him down about three times and Moorer got the decision. White was 6'10" 270 pounds and although, except for Douglas, he never beat a world ranked fighter, he was a decent fighter. I would even say better than Valuev is at this point. Max, do you remember Mike White?

Kent, maybe I should clarify my comment about the fight between Jones and Meneses. The outcome wasn't predetermined like most fixed fights but should have been an easy win for Jones. A no brainer to say the least. I know that because my matchmaker also made the fights for Too Tall. And to mention Quarry and Jones in the same breath is ludicrous to say the least. One right hand from Quarry and Jones would have been out in the first.
were still very beatable. Many of the heavies today are more athletically gifted. I believe. A prime Tyson and Evander Holyfield would kick Quarry's ass too. As well as Ellis, Bugner, Chuvalo, Bonavena etc. etc. What do you think of that? You guys seem to think that the boxing world revolves around the old era. As if competitive boxers ended when we still had 8 tracks and disco. GET OVER YOURSELVES! Boxers are human beings not gods. And that goes for your beloved Ali, Frazier and Foreman as well. You old foggies need to get your arses out of the 60's and 70's and realize THAT BOXING STILL EXISTS! Yes there is boxing now in the 21st century. Sheesh!!!

When I have the chance I'm going t take the time to research and respond to the absolute nonesense that being written by all you grandfathers on this site. I realise it will take some work so I'll probably be off the scene for some time. Cause you people need some serious help. The way you react to those who believe that there are modern heavyweights who can beat those of the past is downright scary.

There are talented boxers in the late 20th and early 21st century as well. It's true, it's true. Kent tries to be funny with the Nicoley vs Jerry bit. Well I wonder what you would think of the GREAT Chuck Wepner vs today's heavyweights. Well since Wepner is from the GODLY 70's era I guess he'd kill them all. Eat em all for breakfast. Even in their prime. Poor Vitali, Tyson, Holyfield, Ruiz, Toney, Brewster, Peter, Lewis etc. wouldn't stand a chance. Eh? PS: If there's anyone born between 1970-1990 please join in. It's tiresome dealing with these farts who were around when John Sullivan lost to "Gentleman" Jim Corbett.

Hello Max: I WAS going to ask you,if you knew Tony Licata, Edgar (Mad Dog) ROSS, MIKE BAKER, JOEY VINCENT, Then I see you fought them all! Did you ever know our own COCKY KO KING MIKE NIXON? Mike did not have a big Knockout record, but when he landed and pulled his punches over he would knock people like South African and 3rd ranked GERT STEYN AND MIKE AVANS (WHOM NEVER BEEN DOWN FOR THE COUNT FOR 5 PLUS MINUTES!! TAKE CARE)

MARKHAM: YU bring up some very good points,JQ has not a victory over the fighter's you mentioned,ELLIS,CHUVALO,BUGNER,BONAVENA. Yur right,however his all time ranking is much higher then any of they above, and I think right fully so, Just on the fact he beat better fighter's. Bonavena alone can only beat a top ten fighter, if he could get that in Buenos Aires, where they would get DQUED FOR HITTING RINGO IN THE MOUTH, say AL "BLUE' Lewis and ZORA FOLLEY, FOLLEY BEAT HIM EVEN WORSE IN ARGENTINA THEN HE DID IN NY AND THEY STILL GAVE IT TO OSCAR, YOU HAVE TO ADMIT THE 60'S AND 70'S WERE THE BEST ERA IN BOXING AND ADMITTEDLY MAINLY BECAUSE OF ALI FOR HIS ABILITY AND SHOWMANSHIP DUH! AND I KNOW WE SORT OF EXAGERATE JERRY'S TALENTS SOME TIMES, HE WAS NO OPPONENT OR JOURNEYMAN, BUT AT THE VERY TOP OF HIS PROFESSION, AND A CLASS ACT TO SAY THE LEAST|

For your Information, if the heavyweights of today are bigger and better than ones from our golden era, then why has Chris Byrd been IBF champion for quite a while now? What does Byrd weigh? About 212, hmm, let me see, that is way bigger than Ali, Foreman, Holmes, Shavers, Lyle, and Frazier isn't it? Not even, and if Byrd, who is the same size or smaller than a lot of the oldtimers, than it is very possible the oldtimers could compete just as well today as Byrd does. Also, one of the top heavys of today is Lamon Brewster, who is around the 220 mark himself, again, about the size of ones from the earlier era. In addition, James Toney if came down to under 210 pounds, he would still be strong enough to handle most if not all of the heavys around today as it is skill, not size that gives him the edge. Not to mention that John Ruiz, long time contender from this era and WBA champion lost to both Roy Jones Jr. and Toney, even if Toney's test results kept Toney from keeping the belt.
By the way, Jones only weighed 193 for the fight. You mention Holyfield, a fine fighter at his best, who won the title at under 210 pounds but I would consider him a throwback to the old era but even so, one could put him as one of this era, even if he was at his best in the early 90s. Holyfield though had difficult fights with over the hill Foreman and Holmes. An indication that even he didn't have the skills of the former era because I doubt he would have beaten either of them in their prime. We can also add contender Davarryl Williamson to the mix, who fights between 210 and 220 pounds who lost a close technical decision last year to Wladimir Klitschko. Williamson even knocked Wladimir K down only to have the fight end early due to a headbutt that caused Wladimir to have a bad cut. I am making the assumption that you think bigger is better but consider that there are several smaller heavyweights who are in the mix today and that if someone say like Joe Louis, has special skills, he can compete in any era. Consider that Joe Louis beat fighters such as Primo Carnera, 270 pounds, Abe Simon and Buddy Baer, both about 250 pounds, and Tony Galento, 235 pounds. I would give the Brown Bomber a very good chance of beating anyone today. You also missed my point that Vitali Klitschko would be a very difficult fight for Jerry Quarry but it is not out of the possibility that Jerry could come out on top and the reasons it would be difficult is because of Vitali's jab and accurate combinations. That fight would be hardly a given win for Jerry.

12/30/05 10:16:04 AM Kent Min Murrieta, CA kentallenent@aol.com | For your Information, just because Jerry didn't fight Bugner and Bonevena, doesn't mean he couldn't beat them. Jerry actually signed to fight Bonevena but the fight fell through. As I remember it Bonevena got injured during training. Mr. Jimmy (James Quarry) said Jerry got the better of Bugner during sparring sessions. Jimmy was with Jerry when Jerry knocked out Jack Bodell in England in less than one round. By the way, Bodell had just come off a win over Bugner so he had to have been a good fighter, a European champion. You mention Holyfield, I call this a pick em fight both were evenly matched. Holyfield was a built up cruiserweight who added twenty pounds by weight training and Jerry was naturally strong himself. Quarry verses Holyfield would be a war at close quarters and I am not sure who would win such a contest. Both fighters took a great shot and both could hit hard. They also both came in to fights in great shape. As far as Jerry's losses to Ellis and Chuvalo, Jerry was ahead on points when Chuvalo landed a left hook on the temple that left Jerry disoriented in the seventh round. Based on what had happened before the stoppage of the fight, I believe Jerry would have won a rematch if one happened. In the Ellis fight Jerry lost a split decision so he was hardly dominated. In fact he almost knocked Ellis out in the 13th round. Later it was discovered Jerry had a fractured vertebrae and if he was healthy in a rematch, which also never happened, I would have favored Jerry to win.

12/30/05 11:49:07 AM For Your Info Markham, ON FYI@yahoo.com Kent don't you dare turn this around. IT'S YOU NOT ME THAT'S being unfair. You, Angelo and the rest of the OLD FART crew are the ones who act as if good heavyeweight boxers ended in 1979. All I'm saying is that there are boxers today who can beat boxers of your precious era. That's all I'm trying to say. Once again you ignored my point.It's you guys not me who has the problem. I believe there were great, very good, good and weak heavyweights in all era's. YOU DON'T!ARRRRRRRRRGH! I feel like Charlie Brown. Kent I never said that Ellis, Bugner, Chuvalo etc. were better than Quarry, Jim Dorsey did. I said that Holyfield, Tyson etc. could (and most likely would) beat Ellis, Bugner, Bonavena and other 70's boxers. I include Lyle and Shavers as well. You people really overrate them. As for size. Byrd is 220 NOT 212. Byrd, Holyfield and Tyson are considered small by todays standards but would be big in the 70's. In fact little Byrd, Brock, and Holyfield are bigger than Quarry, Ellis, Bugner, Frazier etc. and the same size as Ali and the younger version of Foreman.See how times have changed in terms of size. Lamon Brewster is actually bigger. He's 230. Roy Jones was 199 not 193. Check your facts. Ruiz was 226 for the fight. It did so to be able to keep up with Jones' speed. Ruiz is usually in the 235-240 mark. As boring as Ruiz is he too could compete with your precious 70's era.Let alone Vitali who has skill along with size.|For Your Info|Markhan, ON||FYI@yahoo.com||12/30/05 12:05:48 PM|Please before responding READ CAREFULLY. You tend to just sprint through fast and then answer even faster without really thinking. Take your time. There's no need to rush. You end up claiming the complete opposite of what I said or meant.For instance I WAS THE ONE WHO MENTIONED THAT QUARRY BEAT JACK BODELL WHILE BUGNER LOST. I ALSO MENTIONED LARRY MIDDLETON TOO. SO WHAT WAS THE POINT IN POINTING THAT OUT TO ME WHEN I ALREADY DID SO A MONTH AGO! See what happens when you don't read properly. This leads to misunderstandings.I stated that PEOPLE MAY SAY... not that I SAY!.What I was saying was that people may argue that Bugner is better than Quarry because he was more competitive (though clearly losing) against Frazier and Ali than Jerry did. In fact people have said this. HOWEVER I COUNTERED THAT others can make a point that Quarry beat Bodell and Middleton while Bugner lost to them. So maybe Quarry was the better. As clear as this was you all misunderstood and thought THAT I WAS STATING THAT BUGNER BETTER THAN QUARRY! NO! NOOOOOOOO! I DINDN'T SAY THAT! My point was simply that both sides had merit. Since neaither ever fought each other we can only speculate. Both arguments had validity however. Whew! I guess you're all getting senile in your elderly ages. So maybe I'm wasting my time explaining things since you'll forget anyways. One more thing. Buner did better against Ali and Frazier PERIOD! That includes Quarry/Frazier 1.Saying that Quarry did better is bs. If you mean from rounds 1-4 then sure but if you mean the whole fight than absolutely NOT! Nonesense. Bugner was more competetive throughout the WHOLE fight than Quarry. After the 4th Quarry was fodder.|By today's standards Quarry and Ellis were built up cruiserweights as well so Holyfield would have no problems with them. In fact I believe it's Holy who's the bigger boxer.| Ft Angelo|DC||funktron@yahoo.com||12/30/05 12:28:24 PM|FYI: I was born in the mid-60's, so I don't fall too far from your cut-off---and yes, there have been some good fighters since '79, including Tyson, Lewis, Bowe, Holyfield, Witherspoon---the list goes on. But for guys like Byrd and Ruiz to be on top for so long---that tells me that there is a lack of dominating talent out there right now. Look, on any given night, Buster Douglas could have whipped most of the "golden era" guys we always talk about. Ditto for Riddick Bowe. But for the most part, I don't think the modern age (90's plus) heavies have the same competitive craziness that the 60's and 70's guys did. Just my opinion---and if you look to the lighter weight categories, there are still amazingly good fighters like Bernard Hopkins in this new era---guys who could light it up against anyone of any era. But for the heavies, I just don't see it. |
Your Info, I read once on the Internet that Primo Carnera was legitimately measured at 196 cm wilt (it’s Cinian Slang for tall) in the USA and so I agree with you on that. But according to boxing record archive Primo weighted over 270 lbs in many of his fights (for instance 280 when he beat the former European champion Pierre Charles on points). How do you know that these weights are false? It’s very hard to believe to me.

By the way, I was born in 1972 in Pisa, so I fall in your cut-off.

For Your Information, actually according to the listing for his career record in BoxRec.com records Roy Jones Junior was listed at 193 pounds verses Ruiz.

Chris Byrd's last five fights, dating back to December 2002 have him listed as the following weights: Williamson 213 pounds, McClone 214 pounds, Golota 210 1/2 pounds, Ogendo 211 1/2 pounds, and Holyfield 214 pounds, that is pretty close on average to my statement that he weighs in about 212 pounds.

Hey I made a mistake in thinking you said Jerry Quarry would lose to Bugner, Bonevena, and Chuvalo.

But as far as Holyfield goes, I still think him and Jerry would be a good competitive match. What is the reason you think Holyfield is better? He would get in there and brawl with Jerry and yes it is always possible Jerry could get cut in a war of attrition but Holyfield really wasn't that much stronger than Jerry and Jerry did have excellent skills. I think Bowe would be a more difficult task for Jerry than Holyfield.

Part of the reason I think Holyfield, one of the very best of his era, was not as good as top fighters from earlier eras is because Foreman and Holmes, getting along in years, were so competitive with him. I hardly think Foreman and Holmes were better in their forties than they were when they were younger.

Of course there are fighters around now who could beat fighters from our golden era, even some of the top people from back then. But in general, fighters from that era were better skilled and the fact that someone like Byrd is succesful now makes me think the fighters from the earlier period could be too.

I liked Jerry quarry i thought his wins over ernie shavers and ron lyle were impressive as was his effort vs ken norton he had norton hurt!!could he have beaten gerry cooney in his prime ?WHAT DO YOU THINK?MY SISTER USED TO SAY HIS A GOOD LOOKIN FIGHTER AND i thought he should have stuck with tv commentary thanks glenn ps monzon still the best ever at 160! id like to see shavers ko of jimmy young ....

President of Bruce's fan club|Somewhere USA|@|Hey Massimo, don't you think Jumplty Bruce is the greatest of all time?

I think he could take anyone because he jumps so good.

"Though the heavyweights of the past may have had more competitive matches or even more exiting matches (ie Foreman vs Lyle) they were still very beatable. Many of the heavies today are more athletically gifted." MARKHAM, your lack of experience is beginning to show. If you can show me a current heavyweight who is more gifted athletically than let's say ALI or HOLMES please do. There's nothing out there currently with the possible exception of BYRD, where pure athleticism is concerned, but he is nowhere near the class of the above mentioned. The bigger they are pal the harder they fall, eh?

Joey, but athletically gifted has to have skill added to it to make a heavyweight good and skill has to be developed over time.

Athletically gifted is just potential and it seems the fighters are not paying their dues as much these days. On any given day a fighter can beat another fighter so any fighter can be beatable.

I still say that the skill level of the past fighters gives them an edge. How else do we explain how a blown up middleweight, James Toney, can be a leading heavyweight contender now.

| 12/31/05 03:35:24 AM | Massimo | Roma || jumpybruceisthegreatest.com ||||| 10 | My PresidentYeah, Jumpity Bruce would make all the all time greats look silly by jumping and hitting, hitting and jumping. He would invent a new way to box: HIT and JUMP. Jumpity Bruce would shock the wordl. He is the greatest. |

| 12/31/05 09:32:49 AM | Joey | Toronto || e ||||| 10 | "Joey, but athletically gifted has to have skill added to it to make a heavyweight good and skill has to be developed over time." |

| 12/31/05 03:45:19 PM | max hord | fernandina bch, fla || maxhord@adelphia.net ||||| 10 | How can anyone argue over Monzons record/career? The guy fought like the great middleweights from the 40's and 50's. Most of all he retired a winner! |

| 12/31/05 06:23:34 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com ||||| 10 | I would have to go with Sugar Ray Robinson as the greatest middleweight. Of course I have only seen him on tape but he showed the skills that would make him hard to beat by anyone in any era at middleweight. |

| 12/31/05 10:31:45 AM | Jamie | Costa Rica, formerly Bayside NY || varlaker@yahoo.com ||||| 10 | Fine comments Glenn, as a former Baysider, (loved the neighborhood, lived a couple of blocks off Colden Park). I agree with you 100% with your appreciation of Monzon, the guy was the simply the best at 160, had it all: moves, chin, speed, stamina, punch, you name it! |

| 1/2/06 12:43:59 AM | Gerry | Cleveland || jerjetsall@yahoo.com ||||| 9 | Merry Christmas and Happy New Year to the Jerry Quarry Foundation site. Despite the way I was treated here, I'm glad to see the site for my favorite fighter and his family is still here. Quarry fans are encouraged to visit my site, irishjerryq@yahoo.groups.com, which is basically a fan site I started for the Quarrlys last year. While it is not even close to as good as this site, it does give members a chance to contribute to the building of a site which remembers not just the Quarrlys, but also the great match opponents they had and the great boxing era they were a part of. Please consider it as a second Quarry site to visit after this one. |

| 1/2/06 03:20:57 AM | Ed | Cicero N Y || mooseygoop@aol.com ||||| 10 | I saw a thing on tv about the top 10 heavyweight champs and one of the guests, Bert Sugar, gave an interesting triva tidbit about Rocky Marciano. He said the main reason... |
Rocky retired was to get out of a contract with his manager. The interesting thing that I never heard before was that he was going to fight Ingomar Johannsen (sp) if Big Ingo won rematch with Patterson. Sugar was asked why he didn't fight Patterson and Sugar didn't really have an answer. Rocky would have been in his late 30's for the Johannsen fight but it sure would have been interesting.

1/2/06 03:21:05 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|
I saw a thing on tv about the top 10 heavyweight champs and one of the guests, Bert Sugar, gave an interesting trivia tidbit about Rocky Marciano.

He said the main reason Rocky retired was to get out of a contract with his manager. The interesting thing that I never heard before was that he was going to fight Ingomar Johannsen (sp) if Big Ingo won rematch with Patterson. Sugar was asked why he didn't fight Patterson and Sugar didn't really have an answer. Rocky would have been in his late 30's for the Johannsen fight but it sure would have been interesting.

1/2/06 04:22:25 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|
Ed, my guess is that Marciano didn't want to fight Patterson was because of Patterson's speed. Rocky knew he had slowed down and that in his late thirties it might be harder to keep up with Patterson's quickness but that Ingo would be right in front of him and Rocky thought he could take Ingo.

An in prime Rocky verses Patterson, no contest for Rocky. His power would catch up with Floyd's fragile chin sooner or later.

1/3/06 03:39:39 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||mooseygoop@aol.com|||10|
I always wondered why there was never a Patterson/Marciano fight, say in 1955 or 1956. It would have been a huge draw. Maybe the way Floyd put away Archie Moore so easily kind of made Rocky think twice about it. I agree with you that Rocky would have won but with Floyds speed who knows. And at that time nobody had tested Floyd jaw yet so that weak link in him wasn't known yet.

1/3/06 04:09:36 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|
I know that after the Archie Moore fight Rocky said: "If an old fighter like Archie Moore could give me so much trouble, maybe it's time to give up. This has been my last fight". He was very determined not to fight again. I think he had no good reasons to fight Patterson, he was already in the legend, wealthy and still in good health. Anyway, I think he would have beaten Patterson in 1956 by KO.

1/3/06 11:50:36 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|
The rematch between Patterson and Ingo happened in 1960 so Rocky would have been very rusty and a Patterson fight at that time would have been more difficult.

In the end, when the heavy leather started to land, I feel Patterson would be game, but knocked out rather convincingly.

1/3/06 05:26:56 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|
The old saying about styles making fights is true---and even though I'd pick Rocky to win, I can't see Patterson knocking out Marciano.
Marciano to take Patterson, it would not be easy. Patterson's speed and clever boxing skills would give the Rock fits early in the fight. I have to believe that the punches would catch up to Patterson sooner or later---but it would be interesting to say the least. Liston's wins over Patterson sort of remind me of early Mike Tyson---just devastating power overtaking good boxing skills. Both guys (Tyson and Liston) were intimidators of the highest order. It's interesting to me that a smaller speedy guy didn't dismantle Tyson---it was a tall and heavy guy with good boxing ability, James Douglas. With Tyson, apparently you needed to be big enough to hold him off and slick enough to outmaneuver him. On that night, Buster was amazing.

If Marciano fought Patterson in 1960. Because of the long layoff it might have been a disaster for Rocky. But, if Rocky fought Patterson after the Moore fight. Rocky would have destroyed Patterson. BIG TIME!!Patterson was knocked down by 9 times by Johannsen. Once by Rademacher, once by McNeely. These guys don't come close to Marciano. Outside the ring Patterson was a credit to boxing. Inside the ring he was a disgrace as a champion. He ducked legitimate contenders and instead fought chumps. You can give me any excuse you want about Patterson fighting chumps. But, the fact remains he fought chumps. It took Liston almost 4 years to get a fight with Patterson.

Ultra Ray: This is true that Patterson clearly stayed clear of Liston for as long as possible. I guess even he knew the inevitable outcome of stepping in with Sonny. Those fights were disasters.

It is my opinion that Marciano would have destroyed Patterson whenever it made sense to the bookies.

For Your Information: You all seem to miss the point. LOSING TO LISTON WAS THE BEST THING THAT HAPPENED TO PATTERSON! Why you may ask? Because before he was crushed and humiliated by Liston Patterson was like Ultra Ray stated, a disgrace as a champion. He feasted on guys like McNeely, Jackson, Brian London, Harris and Pete Rademacher. The Rademacher fight should be a scandal since it was Pete's FIRST FIGHT AS A PRO! People I know howled at that one. The fact that Pete was a gold medalist doesn't matter. No fighter should defend his title against someone who has never EVER fought as a professional. You don't see Audley Harrison just come out of the olympics and fight Vitali, Chris Byrd, Hassim Rahman etc. etc. in his first pro fight. It was clear that Patterson was avoiding tough fights. More so when he was dethroned by a B- level Inghammer Johansson (or however you spell that name). Though Floyd came back to beat Ingo twice in a row it was still clear that his management did everything possible to avoid the dangerous Liston.

After Patterson was humiliated by Liston however (so much so that at one point he fled the U.S in a disguise) Patterson seemed to have a change of heart. In fact he gained a heart. He decided to take on all challengers. He fought the tough Eddie Machen (who was on a winning streak), Chuvalo, Ali, Cooper, a young Quarry, Ellis, Bonnavena and Ali a 2nd time. True Patterson had a china chin but at least he allowed it to be tested (he he he). Actually I felt he was jobbed against Quarry and Ellis. He deserved the nod in the first and the second could've gone either way. He definately beat Ellis. So that's official and "un" official wins against good boxers. Better than the crop he took BEFORE the Liston fights. I have no idea why Patterson changed his ways? Perhaps Patterson decided he needed to have some self respect. Thanks Sonny Liston. Thanks for turning a pathetic champion into a true warrior of a contender.
didn't have any guts, he wouldn't have gotten back into the ring with Ingo after being brutally knocked out. He showed guts by getting back in with Liston a second time also.

I think Patterson either got rid of Cus (his manager) or Cus quit when Floyd signed to fight Liston. Thus floyd was free to choose his own fights. I wonder how Patterson held onto his title when he ducked all the contenders back then. Did they have the alphabet world title phonies back then? Now they strip title from holder when he doesn't fight the top challenger. That doesn't work out either, because everyone is confused who the champion is most of the time. I follow boxing better then most people and I cant tell you who the world heavyweight champion is right now. Not having clearly defined champions has been one of the downfalls of boxing IMO.Speaking of Patterson ducking contenders. Can you imagine how a Patterson vs Cleaveland Williams fight would have been? Mass: It would have been billed the "Small Cat vs The Rabbit".

One thing that can be said about Patterson is that he had a very good left hook and very fast hands and feet. Many of his knockouts were left hooks and were pretty impressive to see. He lacked a chuvalian chin but had good power. The guy could punch. Muhammad Ali' called Patterson "the most skilled fighter he ever fought".

That was a great point you made about how Patterson changed after the Liston fights. I never stopped to realize that. I agree with everything you said about Floyd fighting contenders after he lost to Liston. A little know fact, Patterson was offered title fights with both Frazier and Foreman, and Floyd turned them down. I can't fault him on this. He was getting older. And at the time Patterson was offered those fights those 2 guys were going good.

Patterson was still active for most of Frazier's reign so I am not sure why he didn't take the shot. I think Patterson's performance against Ellis, a lot of people thought he won that one, and his win over Bonevena would have made him a credible challenger, at least one who earned his shot. But I think Frazier would have knocked Patterson out.

Another little known fact is that Patterson did indeed challenge after he last fought Ali. First off Kent is wrong about Patterson retiring. He never did. At least not officially. Patterson just didn't fight. Patterson called Ali out after he (Ali) beat Wepner for his first defence. As for why he didn't fight Frazier isn't it obvious. C'mon Kent for someone who's supposed to be so knowledgeable about the past you sure are acting ignorant. After what he went through with Liston do you think he wants to get beat down by guys like Frazier and Foreman? Patterson knew that his china chin would be had against guys like that. Regardless of how little experience Foreman had. He was way too big and strong and Floyd knew it. Henry Cooper even admitted that he purposely avoided Frazier for the same reason.

TO (aka joey) you're a blithering ignorant buffoon who never quotes me properly thus I will ignore you. You purposely misquoted me last time and never even admitted it even after I corrected you. BTW I'm FYI NOT Markham you idiot. Markham is where I'm from. Close to where you live. Learn your geography...eh? Does'nt Patterson proove my earlier points?
a skinny heavyweight and would have great difficulty against the big heavyweights of today. He looked small against Ali, and Ali isn't that big (compared to heavyweights today).Mercer, Tua and Ike Ibeabeuchi would've killed Patterson even though Patterson is more skilled (and better P4P).Heavyweights today on average are not only bigger but naturally bigger. Todays heavies who are in the 220-240 range look in great shape.Frazier, Ali, Ellis and Ken Norton looked out of shape when they were past the 215 mark.Check out Frazier at 215 in the Ali 3 and Foreman 2 fights. Check out Ali in the Thrilla (226) and Young and Spinks fights (over 230lbs). Ali looks downright fat. You can tell that it's not his natural fighting weight.Look at Ali in his earlier career and against Holmes (though he was shot by then) and you can see that his natural weight was around the 215 mark.Doesn't Patterson prove my earlier points? Kent made a big deal about how some of the smaller guys like Byrd beat bigger guys to disprove my points. But I can do the same with Patterson. P4P I believe Patterson was better than all of his opponents but lack of size played a factor in his career.Pattereson was a skinny heavyweight and would have great difficulty against the big heavyweights of today. He looked small against Ali, and Ali isn't that big (compared to heavyweights today).Mercer, Tua and Ike Ibeabeuchi would've killed Patterson even though Patterson is more skilled (and better P4P).Heavyweights today on average are not only bigger but naturally bigger. Todays heavies who are in the 220-240 range look in great shape.Frazier, Ali, Ellis and Ken Norton looked out of shape when they were past the 215 mark.Check out Frazier at 215 in the Ali 3 and Foreman 2 fights. Check out Ali in the Thrilla (226) and Young and Spinks fights (over 230lbs). Ali looks downright fat. You can tell that it's not his natural fighting weight.Look at Ali in his earlier career and against Holmes (though he was shot by then) and you can see that his natural weight was around the 215 mark.I have to agree with you KENT on your analysis of PATTERSON. He definitely won the ELLIS fight, even ELLIS seemed to be conceding this prior to the reading of the decision. The winner doesn't always come up with the decision (HOLMES/SPINKS) and often when it's close, it seems to go in favour of the up and coming rather than the guy who's on the way down.One more thing. I want to wish everyone a belated Happy New Year.I'd like to make some requests for the 2006. Please stop worshiping the past and give the present a chance. People from other forums like MAX Boxing would balk at this site. Hopefully some younger blood can come to this forum. Please be kinder to those who have a different opinion than you guys. You all ganged up on me when I suggested that Vitali was the best of the white heavyweights. It was just my opinion. I really wished you guys would've given me more credit and had a proper discussion about our differences. Instead you all acted like I was the biggest fool for my beliefs. Even misquoting me and taking everything out of context.I've been looking through the archives and I see a pattern. When someone has a point of view different from the Quarry forum you all tend to gang up on them and treat them like the plague. You all seem to be a stubborn bunch in your beliefs. No wonder characters like road charlerette and "Henry Cooper" come along with venom. They see all the idol worshipping and get sick of it. This forum is a breeding ground for the likes of Cooper. My point isn't to defend these attackers because personally I disagree with their methods (charlerette and cooper seem to have a lot of hate in them) but I can see how people can get angry when they see all the worshipping and lack of respect for others who don't share the same views as the mainstream. To avoid this please be more open to other peoples opinions. Before you answer make sure you read properly and not get overly emotional. Yes the past had some good and great boxers but they're not gods. They're human beings. There are good boxers today too. Kent, Angelo and the rest seem to have one mind. The 1970's heavyweights are the best ever and Ali, Frazier, Foreman in particular are the greatest heavyweights who are untouchable to todays heavies and on and on it goes. As a new poster here I really wish that I was more welcomed in a positive manner instead of as an adversary. Hopefully 2006 will see a more open and respectful forum. A forum where we share each others opinions and even learn from one another instead of putting people down and trying to force them to agree with you. | ever announced his retirement. It was Patterson himself who admitted in an article in Boxing Illustrated that Teddy Brenner offered him the title fight. I have no doubt about the reason why Brenner offered Patterson the match. It was because Patterson was so popular in NYC, it would have sold out the Garden. It was a wise decision for Patterson to turn down that fight, he may have been seriously hurt. The same if he fought Frazier, when Frazier was the champion. I always felt Patterson could have been the greatest Light-heavyweight champion ever!!!.

FYI: You're going to hate this, because it's more praise for those wonderful 70's fighters---but I'll say it anyway: Skinny Jimmy Young would beat any current/active heavyweight on today's scene, including, but not limited to Chunky David Tua, "big stiff" Vitali, Rockin' Rahman, etc. And yes youngster, I'm talking about a 15 ROUNDER, the real title length from a real era with real fighters!!!

Seriously, I'd see Young pitching a shut-out against most of these guys, like he did against Giant George back in the day. By the way, you talk about Rhodescholarette being run off because of our idol worship---OH, PU-LEAZE!!! That chick was a great poster, but she was so enamoured with Smokin' Joe, she actually thought he would have beaten Ali in Manilla if he answered the bell for the 15th! For the record, I think we enjoy having you on the board, whether we share opinions or not. You offer a very interesting alternative viewpoint from someone who is younger than most of us---and it reminds me of myself during the 70's. I would argue with my Dad and Uncle. They insisted that Marciano or Joe Louis would crush Ali. Of course, Marciano and Louis were guys from THEIR ERA, and I was sure the modern guys were better. Now, I'm telling you that guys from MY ERA are better than your modern guys---and we'll never know who is right---that's what makes these discussions so much fun. Same as comparing Vince Lombardi's Packers, Hank Stram's Chiefs, Jimmy Johnson's Cowboys and Bill Belichick's Patriots---would the 70's era Steelers beat the 90's Cowboys? We'll never know, but I'm sure strong arguments can be made both ways!

Angelo Young weighed in at 209 for his fight with Muhammad Ali 210 1/2 pounds for his fight against Ron Lyle, and 213 pounds for his fight with George Foreman, his three best performances. That is an average of 210.8 pounds, not much less than Chris Byrd's 212.6 pounds for his last five fights. Young is listed at 6'2" tall while Byrd is 6'0" tall. So if Byrd, with similar boxing skills than Young had, can beat most of the heavyweights around today, then your opinion of Young being able to beat them if he was around and at his best has a lot of merit.

Young is not an example of the so called bigger, better heavyweights and the fact that Roy Jones Jr. briefly held a title belt at 193 pounds, again that is what he is listed at in BoxRec. com, but even if he was 199 pounds as For Your Info. stated, he is still not one of the so called better, bigger fighters and also James Toney, a former middleweight, who even though he has fought around the 230 pound range recently, he could carry a lot less weight, say under 210 pounds, and still compete at the top of the division.

This shows that a lot of the smaller heavyweights of the past could compete at the top levels of today because of their skills just as the three fighters I mentioned have because of their skills. For Your Information, Floyd Patterson is an exception, not an example of the typical heavyweights of his day as even in his era, he was considered a small heavyweight, a puffed up lightweight heavyweight and no I don't think he could overcome his size and strength disadvantage against some of the fighters today but I think Ali, Foreman, Holmes, Frazier, Norton, Lyle, Shavers, Liston, and even Quarry could beat most of the guys around today with Ali, Foreman, Holmes, Liston, and likely Frazier being able to beat everyone around today.

I don't think I am blindly hero worshipping the fighters from the past, I have given reasons why they could compete, because of their skills, and I have given examples of fighter today who are not bigger than the fighters of the past who are doing well because of their skills.

That chick was a great poster, but she was so enamoured with Smokin' Joe, she actually thought he would have beaten Ali in Manilla if he answered the bell for the 15th! He would have, and without even throwing a punch. Mr. Muhammad couldn't walk after the 14th.

I just saw on the Internet with Google Earth your home town La Habra and I think it's really very nice, a lovable city. I was surprised there are no skyscrapers but a lot of trees and swimming pools.

Ali might not have been able to walk after the 14th---ONCE HE KNEW HE WON. Ali would have found a way to walk, skip, jump and dance for the 15th, and if needed, the 16th, 17th and 18th. He'd only collapse when he knew his work was done. If Frazier's corner let him out for the 15th, he would have been seriously injured. Joe was one of the best, but he couldn't see at that point in the fight.

I lived there for about 20 years when I was younger and more recently I lived there for 6 years. It is mostly residential with small industrial areas and some retail stores, big name chain stores and smaller businesses.

It is about 30 miles south of Los Angeles but it is more like a small town even though there are over 50,000 people who live there. It is also about 10 miles from Anaheim, the home of Disneyland, where I spent a lot of fun times in my youth. You are right, there are a lot neighborhoods with trees lining the streets and a lot of houses have swimming pools.

There is probably more crime there than when I was growing up but it still isn't among the leaders in the area as far as having a high crime rate.

For instance I wrote "Actually I felt he was jobbed against Quarry and Ellis. He deserved the nod in the first and the second could've gone either way. He definately beat Ellis. So that's official and "un" official wins against good boxers." The next day Kent wrote the same thing. As if I didn't write this BEFORE he did.

Next I wrote: "WRONG! Another little known fact is that Patterson did indeed challenge after he last fought Ali. First off Kent is wrong about Patterson retiring. He never did. At least not officially. Patterson just didn't fight. Patterson called Ali out after he (Ali) beat Wepner for his first defence." The next day U-Ray wrote the same thing. At least about Patterson not officially retiring. As if I didn't just write it before he did.

I hope you guys aren't stealing my material. Maybe I should patent my statements. He he he. Just kidding. | and he could fight again? I don't think anybody would think Patterson is not retired now. FYI, WHY NOT COMMENT ON MY CASE STATING THAT SEVERAL CURRENT HEAVYWEIGHTS WHO ARE AS SMALL OR SMALLER THAN FIGHTERS OF THE 60S AND 70S HAVE BEEN SUCCESSFUL RECENTLY AND THAT IT IS POSSIBLE A LOT OF HEAVYWEIGHTS OF MY ERA COULD DO WELL TODAY BECAUSE OF THEIR SKILL. |

FYI, don't flatter yourself at my expense. Believe me, if I was going to "steal" material, it would not be from you. It would be from the late: Dick Young, Gene Ward, Lester Bromberg, Milton Gross, Arthur Daley, Bob Waters, Ed Mullins, among others. Those still alive: Larry Merchant, Phil Pepe, Robert Boyle, among others. There are not too many "boxing writers" alive today who I would "steal from." And least of all you. Funny thing, the way you complain you remind me of Noam aka Howard C. They were both one and the same and they were from England too. Howard C claimed he was from Louisville Kentucky, but that was a lie. And should be apparent to anyone who paid attention to his posts.

In-Prime fantasy match: Ken Norton vs. Riddick Bowe. How would this one play out? What about Norton-Holyfield? I think this second match is even more interesting. Kent, I bet you have some strong opinions???? I think Norton would have problems with Bowe's size. But it wouldn't surprise me if Norton pulled off the win. I think if he could avoid an early knockout, he would gain confidence as the fight wore on, and Bowe might lose confidence (as he did against Golata). If Norton felt sure he wouldn't be KOed, he could be a very dangerous fighter. Norton vs. Holyfield would be a war. I have a hard time making a call on that one. |
game the way LT did. |
|1/9/06 05:12:33 PM|Steve|na||NA||10|Angelo,since you mentioned it.I would like to give you my opinion on Norton vs Hollyfield.That's a real tough one.Hollyfield was a throwback to the seventies.I think Norton was stronger,based on his seeming indifference to Ali's power.He was also much more methodical and disciplined in his attack.He showed his true trading punches power against Larry Holmes.Hey, I don't even like him.Just trying to be objective. |
|1/9/06 05:17:52 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|Steve: Same here---As a kid, I didn't like Norton because he gave my guy Ali so much trouble. Now, I look back on Norton's career and give him much credit for beating Ali, Quarry, Young---giving Holmes the fight of his life. Still, I watch Norton vs. Foreman, Shavers and Cooney, and wonder about his chin. On the other hand, Hollyfield didn't have the KO power of Cooney, Foreman or Shavers, not by a long shot. Norton-Holyfield is a tough fight to call. |
|1/9/06 07:02:55 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Angelo, I would have to go with Bowe over Norton, prime verses prime. Bowe had both size, strength an skill at his best and he also showed a lot of heart in his fights with Holyfield.I am not sure if it would be a knockout or not but you can't write Norton off as he did have an excellent jab and overhand right hand, plus an unorthodoxed style that can throw a lot of people off.I have to agree that Holyfield and Norton is a pick em fight. I think Quarry is also hard to pick a winner verses Holyfield but the cut factor always was present as far as Jerry goes but if he isn't cut, he would have a good chance against either of them.I know FYI thinks Jerry was too small but consider some of Holyfield's biggest fights were at under 210 pounds, not that much bigger than Jerry was at about 197 to 202 pounds at his best and Jerry was strong, stronger than some fighters who were bigger than him. Remember when he lifted Ali off of his feet and put him up on the ropes in their second fight?I know Jerry didn't show much in that fight as he just seemed to plod after Ali and take punches without landing many effectively but that moment in the first round did show Jerry was physically strong.I'd pick Bowe by ko over Norton. In his prime Bowe had terrific power and i think he'd find Norton's chin weak spot.I think Holyfield would get a hard earned decision over Norton. Holyfield was as tough as they come especially in big fights. My thinking is Norton would have his moments but lose in the late rounds.P S Did you know that, a few years ago, The Ring magazine ranked Holyfield the 3rd greatest heavyweight champion of all time?|
|1/10/06 08:12:20 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|I think Holyfield was a superb fighter at his best, but he has badly tarnished his legacy by hanging around so long. It's one thing to fail at a comeback, or stay a couple years too long and lose to one or two guys who you could have beaten in younger days---but Holyfield has had another whole career of losses and has become a bit of a joke. It's too bad.Kent---consider this: If Jerry Quarry came up in today's era, maybe he WOULDN'T BE in the high 190's or low 200's. With today's nutrition and training advances, he might have been a solid 210-212 pound fighter at his best, and a few pounds heavier later in his career. This goes for other athletes too---I talked about pro football linemen being huge today---I don't think it's necessarily human evolution, but instead different diets, training, supplements, etc. Maybe today, the classic Minnesota Vikings front line guys would all be 300 pounders!! |
|1/11/06 09:42:52 AM|Ultra Ray|Kansas||worldboxing.com||10|Hi, I understand Mike Quarry is in a nursing home. Does anyone know the status of his condition? Does he remember people, are vistors allowed, does he like receiving mail...|
Does he remember people, are visitors allowed, does he like receiving mail...

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/11/06 09:44:57 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>Murrieta, Ca</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Yes, a current Jerry Quarry would be heavier than he was in his era but even at around 200 pounds he was stronger than people realized as strong as men bigger than him.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/11/06 10:42:07 AM</th>
<th>For Your Info</th>
<th>Markham</th>
<th>FYI@yahoo.com</th>
<th>8</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Oh no NOT AGAIN! Kent and U-Ray of course I don't think you guys were copying me I WAS ONLY JOKING you idiots. I even wrote he he just kidding at the end of my comment. I'm SHOCKED you took this seriously. I thought things had cooled down.

When will this madness end.I guess Kent would do this despite the fact that I begged and pleaded for him to stop purposely misquoting me. But I guessed Kent hates me for whatever reason.But Ray attacking me hurts. I thought he was cool with me. I was so used to being attacked that it felt good for someone to write something positive for a change. Maybe I got too comfortable and thought that I could joke around with you. Boy was I wrong. Then to compare me with some Howard C character. I don't know who that is but I assume you meant that as an insult. Why do you have to act like a moron Ray?I'm going to bring up my New years pledge again. Things need to change for 2006. Enough of the fighting and hate.Unless that's what this site is really about?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/11/06 10:52:56 AM</th>
<th>For Your Info</th>
<th>Markham</th>
<th>FYI@yahoo.com</th>
<th>8</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

There truly seems to be a tragic misunderstand going on. I'm writing one thing and somehow you're all seeing something else. This is getting very frustrating. I have ABSOLUTELY no desire to be your enemies yet everybody is attacking me. I have nothing against people having a difference of opinion.The "great" FYI thinks...yeah very funny.The problem is you guys are so used to each other. Unlike other sites there doesn't seem to be many diff people here. Kent then Angelo then Kent then... A lot of you are older people used to your era. This site is like a club. So when someone new comes along with a different opinion you guys freak out and take it personally. You don't want anything to disturb the established order.So I'll clarify things right now.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1/11/06 11:04:36 AM</th>
<th>For Your Info</th>
<th>Markham</th>
<th>FYI@yahoo.com</th>
<th>8</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

I DON'T THINK THE 1970'S HEAVYWEIGHTS WERE A BAD ERA. I NEVER EVER SAID THIS!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

What I said was I just don't see them as the untouchable gods that you all make them out to be. There are heavyweights of the 80's, 90's and today that could beat them.Kent and Angelo took it upon themselves to claim that I think the modern era was better. Please let me Angelo I don't hate, you do. Why on earth would I hate someone who gives good sound arguments to support their view? So what if you think that As for Larry Holmes I think he's one of the best heavyweights ever. LARRY HOLMES IS MOR FROM MY TIME THEN THE HEAVYWEIGHTS TODAY YOU IGNORANT BUFOON! WHO SAID THAT YOU WERE OLDER THAN ME! YOU WERE ONLY BORN IN THE MID-60'S? WOW CAUS YOU SURE ACT LIKE AN OLD GOAT FOR SOMEONE SO YOUNG!!!! Angelo you're an ignorant person. Rather than be ignorant like your father and uncle we (not to mention your grandfather Kent) you should be better than them. Be more open. Forget about this era stuff. That's the diff between you and I. There's no dominant era with me. I don't believe in that. I believe that every era had their greats.

So stop calling me a modernist. Don't label me.

No Kent I won't respond since you don't respect me. You must stop purposely misquoting me. You do that whenever you disagree with me just to vilify me. STOP IT!

PS: About the spelling mistakes. Unlike you I have a life outside the internet and thus I'm often in a rush when I write. For this reason I sometimes write fast and have little time to correct mistakes. Though I have little time today I had no choice but to respond because of the unnecessary and hurtful responses from people. When I saw things being written I just had to respond despite the lack of time.

Kent you big old dummy the boxingrec.org shows the weights at the time of the weigh ins NOT the unofficial weights during the actual contest. During the fight Jones was 199lbs okay? I know that you get you info at boxrec. You also go to cyberboxingzone.com and eastside boxing. I can tell by your i..... well I'll keep that to myself. Let's just say when you go to a site you... Boxrec and Cyberzone are not always accurate. They have an agenda.

Kent you big old dummy the boxingrec.org shows the weights at the time of the weigh ins NOT the unofficial weights during the actual contest. During the fight Jones was 199lbs okay? I know that you get you info at boxrec. You also go to cyberboxingzone.com and eastside boxing. I can tell by your i..... well I'll keep that to myself. Boxrec and Cyberzone are not always accurate. Some of their writers have an agenda.

I don't think I ever said that you hate or that I hate---where are you getting that from? I was being facetious when I said "You're going to hate this, but..." because I thought it was an opinion you wouldn't agree with. As for eras, yes, there are eras. There is the big band era, the rock era, the rap era, the '70's era, the Roaring 20's, the Vaudville era---people use the word "era" to mark time. Lots of sportswriters define the mid-60's to late 70's as the "Golden Era of the Heavyweight Division in boxing." Pick up boxing periodicals, look on the internet, listen to Bert Sugar or other boxing analysts—there seems to be some agreement that this "era" showcased some extremely talented guys with varying styles making for exciting rivalries and fights. It doesn't necessarily mean these guys would walk over fighters of the 50's or fighters of today—but yeah, I'd put my money on Ali to manage wins against Tubby Tua or (snoring) Ruiz. I don't think I've been called a buffoon before (okay, maybe my wife and co-workers do it behind my back) but I kind of like it. | 1/11/06 04:04:55 PM|FYI|NA||NA||7|You ignorant fool. I know there are era's I just don't believe one heavyweight era is better than the next. Okay dumb-ass.Do you like being called a son of a b*tch as well?I'll call you any bad name you like.Okay, so you apparently don't have the nuts to take a stand. Oh, one era is no different than the last era or the next era or five eras in the future or five eras in the past. Hum dee dum dee doo...Byrd is an even match for Foreman. Chuck Wepner and Jack Johnson is too close to call. Duane Bobick and Sonny Liston could go either way. Wishy washy doo doo. FYI, you're a clown, an uninformed dumb clown. | 1/11/06 04:32:23 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com||10|Okay, so you apparently don't have the nuts to take a stand. Oh, one era is no different than the last era or the next era or five eras in the future or five eras in the past. Hum dee dum dee doo...Byrd is an even match for Foreman. Chuck Wepner and Jack Johnson is too close to call. Duane Bobick and Sonny Liston could go either way. Wishy washy doo doo. FYI, you're a clown, an uninformed dumb clown. | 1/11/06 04:41:51 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|FYI, I don't hate you, I don't even know you.I don't know why you are so hostile it is not that important that some of us don't agree with you. It is not that big a deal.For Your Information, I have been a staff writer for Eastside Boxing for almost five years and I also am a featured writer for the Retired Boxers Foundation run by ex middleweight Alex "The Bomber" Ramos. Alex was a good boxer but more importantly he is a great man, a credit to boxing.I come here to relax among friends. I know a lot of people who write for magazines, newspapers, or websites will not go to boxing boards because of the negative comments that are sent their way can be so personal and for quite a while now I have been only posting here as this place is special to me because of the Quarrys.I haven't been active recently but I am attending a card next week here in California and I will report on it.FYI, I hope you read my article on the card as it will be on Eastside and The retired boxers sites, and others that pick it up.FYI, I expect negative comments sent my way as you probably don't think I qualify to write for anyone but whatever you say about me will not be that different than what I have heard before so have at it.| 1/11/06 04:48:07 PM|KENT|MURRIETA, CA||KENTALLENENT@AOL.COM||10|THAT IS VERY SAD ABOUT MIKE QUARRY. WHAT A FINE MAN HE IS AND I FEEL HONORED TO HAVE MET HIM. MY HOPES AND PRAYERS ARE WITH HIM AND HIS FAMILY, ESPECIALLY BOB QUARRY, A YOUNGER BROTHER WHO LOVES HIS OLDER BROTHER.| 1/11/06 07:22:15 PM|Steve|NJ||na||10|Kent, oh, and this might interest Angelo too. Just as a point of discussion. I wonder what could have happened had Jerry ever had trainers who forsook old fashioned training methods. Maybe some power lifting with heavy weights. Not body building but a form of power lifting customized for boxing.| 1/11/06 07:31:45 PM|Steve|NJ||na||10|Angelo and Kent, I wonder if Jerry ever used heavy weight training. It's an excellent way to gain strength without a lot of bulk and muscle. You can increase your overall strength many times over without putting on a lot of bulk.| 1/11/06 07:34:36 PM|Steve|NJ||na||10|God bless Mike Quarry, a real warrior!!!| 1/12/06 05:41:11 AM|FYI|NA||NA||5|Angela you're a bastard. Hey, Angelo, I'm getting a kick out of hearing you get mad and tell that little creep to grow a pair of nuts. This is not like your usual posts. Too bad the FYI person doesn't know anything about 70's boxing. | period. All people have to do is go back and read them. As you can see I know more than you ever will asswipe.|
1/12/06 05:45:37 AM|FYI|NA||NA|||10|Oh Angela what I meant is that you're a worthless bastard so I don't have to prove anything to you. Unlike your lazy self I don't spend 24/7 at the computer. So of course it would take time for me to respond you piece of garbage. Take your opinions and shove it.| |
1/12/06 10:16:52 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Steve, I seem to remember Mr. Jimmy saying Jerry never used weights.\In the past they thought it would bind muscles and make boxers lose flexibility and speed but modern training techniques can work around that.Evander Holyfield built himself up from a cruiserweight with weight training to a heavyweight and I don't think it slowed him down one bit.| |
1/12/06 04:50:20 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|FYI: I was only joking but now you've hurt my feelings.| |
1/13/06 04:59:03 AM|Sabrina Quarry-Porter|Florida||SabrinaLPorter@aol.com|||10|FYI YOU NEED TO GO AWAY AND GO BOTHER SOMEONE ELSE.ALL YOU DO IS CUSS PEOPLE OUT AND CALL THEM NAMES.WE DON'T WANT YOU HERE SO GO THE F--K AWAY YOU ASSHOLE!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!| |
1/13/06 02:01:13 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Sabrina, what do you think your Uncle Jerry would have said to some of these guys who pop in here?| |
1/13/06 02:05:37 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Kent: Ken Norton swore he didn't build muscles with traditional weight training, but with gym systems like Soloflex, and isometric exercises. He claimed his chisled physique was largely hereditary---and that doing basic exercises like running, push-ups, etc. gave him that form. I'm not sure about Mike Weaver----he might have lifted. But either way, these guys still had enough speed and flexibility to beat world class competition consistently. If you look at guys like Foreman, Holmes, Lyle, Shaivers and Ali, they had powerful muscular bodies, but no where near the classic definition that Norton and Weaver had. The taboo about not lifting weights really stays with boxers, even today. I've been in gyms where fighters and trainers say that muscle building by weight repetition kills a boxer's ability to keep their hands up if the fight goes more than a few rounds.
It's very interesting. I've also heard that having chisled biceps/shoulders does a little for punching power---but apparently, leverage and technique count for a lot more. | |
1/13/06 06:55:04 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|I remember years ago I sparred with a few people at a boxing gym and one of those guys was a weight lifter who looked like he would tear my head off.I put the gloves on with him but I have to admit I was scared but it turned out he couldn't hurt me and he mostly missed but I hit him with some jabs and right crosses in a couple of two minute rounds. A couple of bystanders watching were surprised because even back then I didn't have well defined muscles and they said
I got the better of him.On the other hand a tall skinny guy who didn't look like he could punch his way out a paper bag gave me a bloody lip and drew some blood from my nose and I for sure felt his punches snapping my head back and I barely laid a glove on him.I did study karate for about four years but except for my limited sparring experience in the boxing gym, I never had full contact experience but from what I did experience I would say technique has it above weight training hands down.I do think that weight training and/or the kind of training Norton did does have a place for boxers as a supplement to their other training.| |
1/13/06 08:26:36 PM|Steve|nj||na|||10|Hey Angelo,Kent,and Massimo,take a look at Primo Carnero!Look at the bulging,sculpted muscles.He must have used a combination of Steroids,heavy weight training,and in reality lots of hard farming or labor.He had the heart,just not the boxing skills| |
1/13/06 08:45:54 PM|Sreve|nj||na|||10|Kent and Angelo,I'm just saying that if
Quarry had used some basic power lifting exercises, there's no telling how strong he could have become. People have a general misconception about lifting. Too bad Quarry's not around today. I remember during the TV's greatest athletes, Quarry pressed two hundred lbs. Joe Frazier missed, I think, with 220 lbs. It doesn't mean a thing, except maybe Frazier had just the slightest strength advantage over Jerry. | 1/13/06 09:06:58 PM | Seve | nj | na | 10 | Kent, boxing and karate tech., in the hands of a master, will usually, but barely, achieve the advantage over a real power puncher, like Tyson or Foreman. One of my sons went to full contact karate. He didn't do well against fighters who could crowd and stay on top of him. Thereby keeping him of balance, so he could not kick. Any professional boxer is much more effective with his hands. | 1/13/06 11:40:22 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Steve, I agree that boxers, if they get in close and crowd are hard for a karate or kick boxers to contend with but Ray Mercer went into kick boxing and he had trouble with kickers. I think no holds barred fighting, though kind of misnamed because there are rules such as no punching or kicking in the groin and no eye pokes, something karate students learn to be used in serious self defense situations, but the concept of those events is interesting. | 1/14/06 05:34:24 AM | Sabrina | Florida | sabrinalporter@aol.com | 10 | Kent I'm not sure what Jerry would say. I read this guestbook everyday, and all this BS that goes back and forth is childish. I know my father (Jimmy) would say everyone is entitled to their own opinion but I'm gettin sick and tired of reading all this crap. This is not what this page is for. And you keep asking about Robert, well he's in jail again, for drugs I believe and he lost his kids too, his sister is raising them. He's not as great as you seem to think he is. He's a loser!!! After my father died my family promised to keep in touch with us more, and they never have. My grandfather is on his death bed and nobody has called me or my sisters to tell us this. And this will be our 5th family member that has died in the last 4 years, 3 on the Quarry side and 2 on my mother's side. It's just really sad that nobody cares enough about us to call and let us know....sorry if I burst your bubble about Robert but he's the biggest loser of the Quarry family... have a great weekend. | 1/14/06 09:38:31 AM | Massimo | Roma | 10 | Hi everyone! I can't write very often in these days because (or as) my computer is out of order (I'm writing in an internet point), but I greet you all friendly. I don't think Primo Carnera was ever on steroids. He was a weightlifter (and also a persons-lifter sometimes). | 1/14/06 10:34:27 AM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Sabrina, no you didn't burst my bubble about Robert (Bob). He and I have talked a lot in the past three years or so and I knew about his substance problems before but I didn't know he had fallen back into that stuff again. I knew about the situation with his kids but not about the details, which are none of my business and I never asked him about why anyway. He was doing well for a while working in the oil fields and I all know is he treated me well and I consider him a friend and I would still like to find out where he is so I can write to him. Hey, we all fall short sometimes, some more so than others but I have messed up myself, maybe not to the point of going to jail, at least not for more than one night, and I don't hold it against him if he screwed up again. I am sorry also to hear that your grandfather Jack is not doing well. When it rains, sometimes it pours.
Sabrina, or Kent, what is the story with Mike? Was the post about him living in a nursing home true? The price he and Jerry paid was much too high, life can be so unfair. My prayers are with him.

Mike is in a hospital in Seal Beach not doing very well. But that's all I know like I said in my last post the Quarry (my) family doesn't have anything to do with Jimmy's kids. Never have and never will. Uncle Mike is in my prayers and I love him with all my heart.

Sorry for the duplication of my post I don't know what happened.

Steve, after reading your post about Mike, I can only say I'm so very sorry. I don't know what else to say! I just hope the Quarry brothers enjoyed the heck out of their boxing careers and those heady days of fame and fortune. They where both exciting personalities.

Hey Kent, I thought pro boxing was exploitive!!! These closed caged, anything goes all out street fights for a very small purse, is just too dangerous and should be stopped. There are thousands of guys who fight behind bars regularly. Give these guys a promise of a modest payday, give them some half assed unprofessional training. Then there ready to jump in a ring and punch, gouge, kick, strangle, whatever.
Steve, although the guys we see on T.V. in the cage matches have some skills, there is a circuit where lessor skilled fighters battle it out in "king of the cage" matches where they do fight for very little money and you are right it does exploit the fighters, big time.What is really dangerous about these matches is that when a fighter is knocked down his opponent can attack him while he is on the ground and if the referee is too slow to intervene or if he is poorly trained, a fighter can be seriously hurt.I will be surprised if we don't start seeing some deaths in these types of cage matches and then maybe someone will wake up and regulate this sport more.I know critics of boxing will say all of these combat sports, including boxing, need to be banned but at least boxing does attempt to safeguard the safety, as least to some extent and more needs to be done to make boxing safer, but these other physical combat events.Sabrina, your feelings about Robert are painfully clear. On the other hand, you seem to have real affection for Mike. He was a heck of a boxer and it sounds like he's always been a great guy. The photos of Mike fighting Bob Foster show a baby faced kid, while the later photos on this site sadly depict a man who stayed in a brutal business too long. Would you care to elaborate further on Mike, his career, and his life after boxing?No, I don't know why Howard and Noam have not been posting. I am sure they will likely be back at some point.Joe Frazier went out of the superstar weightlifting at 165 lbs. Bob Seagrin lifted 185lbs to win that one (1973). Then Smokin Joe nearly drowned. JERRY lifted 210 and went out at 220lb (1974) JQ finished third among the NFLERS and received another invite (1975) where he lifted 200 easy then went out at 210 easy, O.J. PICKED Jerry to win, it was Ken Norton who lifted 220 and went out at 230lb. I REMEMBER SHAVERS RAN A 10.5 100 yard dash. AND Jerry received more points in 1973 (28) then any other boxer ever in the competition, and according to MR.JIMMY WOULD HAVE WON THE WHOLE THING IN 1969. PEOPLE FORGET JUST HOW FAST AND ATHLETIC JERRY REALLY WAS IN THE RING. FORGET THOSE IGNORANT L.A. SPORTSWRITERS.
boxing. I enjoy his observations and have learned from him. "Class Act" Award goes to Kent. Kent has been the target of silly and unfair attacks, on and off, since I found this site, which was probably a good five years ago. Rather then get petty (as I admit, I have done) and retaliate, Kent almost always takes the high road. Kudos to Kent for his self control at the keyboard---which also shows in his weight loss efforts!

| 1/22/06 03:37:49 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

Thanks Angelo, every once in a while on the Eastside boxing site, I will get some knucklehead E mailing me about one of my articles calling me this or that but I just tell them, "thanks for reading." What else can I say? It isn't worth the effort.I must admit though, no site has had people putting me in their sites (as in using me as a target for their comments) as much has here but this place, for the most part, is the only message board I visit.I appreciate this.| 1/22/06 09:01:27 AM | The Academy | US | private | 10 |

2005 JQ Site Award for Ironic and Paradoxical Awarding: to self appointed Master of Ceremonies Angelo, for lauding the wit and wisdom of the late Noam, (who regularly and viciously tormented Kent) then recognizing Kent's class in absorbing the abuse in a dignified manner. What a team they made!|

| 1/23/06 04:31:32 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron@yahoo.com | 10 |

There is a sad irony to that, isn't there? But if you go through the real history of the site's posts, you'll find much more vicious attacks on Kent than those dished out by Noam or Howard C. As I said, Noam is the "Master" of sarcasm, and Kent was probably fodder for some of it, but some of the past stuff was far worse. Kent grinned and bore it without missing a beat. In fact, Kent handles the hostility of people here very well, even if it isn't directed at him---if it's just some lunatic spouting off about the site or the career of JQ or whatever---most of us will give into the temptation to be as juvenile as the posters, while Kent acts a little more dignified and measured in his responses. | 1/23/06 06:04:27 PM | Noam | same | same | 10 |

Well, I'll be ...... I go on vacation the world over and I stop in for a brief look and I'm still being called names and ridiculed. Someone even thinks me and Howard C. are the same guys. Add in the Holy Spirit and you've got three guys in one, just like you-know-who.Least you know I can take a punch, what with all the name calling about me. Hey, guys, I never swore and when I did the wrong thing, I ALWAYS apologized. Some of you guys should try it some time soon.And I only ever posted under the one name, unlike many. Chill out. Now picture this: Round 8. I'm leaning back on the ropes, motioning with my glove for you to resume the attack. I'm smiling and there's not a mark on my face and I'm saying, "Come on, chump, gimme your best shot. I'm still the prettiest." Alas. You've thrown your best, and run out of ammunition. Baaaad news. And I haven't spent a dime. Yet. Like a spider to the fly.......Anyway, I gotta resume my vacation. Regards to Kent, Angelo, Massimo and Steve who are all good guys, even though I've said the wrong thing by Kent. I'll look in from time to time to see whether any of the haymarkers (from the cowards who were hiding until I went on vacation) have found their mark (warm chortles). Cheers, big ears.|

| 1/23/06 06:25:02 PM | Noam | same | same | 10 |

Before I go... Steve, you mentioned Philly fighters and the Blue Horizon and lots of names. You didn't mention Benny Briscoe. Wasn't he a Philly fighter? Hey, he fought Carlos Monzon, perhaps the best middleweight of all time. Briscoe was awesome. In fact, I'm gonna get a photograph of him and put it on my wall next to Ali (x 4 - v Liston, v Frazier, v Foreman, and Ali posing), Johnson, Louis, Marciano, Sea Biscuit, Luca Brasi, and Prince Harry. Briscoe was seriously tuff and went the full 15 rounds against Monzon. Oops, must go. |
Yes Angelo, the award for dumping on me goes to those two (or one) from the past Foolface and the Koo Koo Klock. The all time president(s) of my fan club.

He (they) could rarely post without taking a dig at me.

Oooh, big bad scary Noam acting like a tough guy on a message board. I'd drop you like a bad habit.

And it's well known that Marvin Hagler was by far the greatest middleweight of all time. Get your boxing history right, retard.

Welcome back, Noam.

Joe? Could this be Joe Frazier wishing Ali a happy 64th? No, it's me, Jumpity Bruce. I'm obsessed with Joe Frazier, huh? I don't blame you, I suppose, being an Ali fan. Frazier made Ali pay for all the bad things he did to him.

I just read the news about Jerry's father Jack Quarry passing. I know he was a man that only wanted the best for his family. He along w/ James & the rest of the Quarry family took part in Jerry's career. Like Jerry he had a very difficult life. Without a doubt he loved all of his kids. My thoughts & prayers go out to the Quarry family in this time of grief. God bless the family & we all need to continue to pray for Mike.

Anon: Bad things Ali did to Joe? You mean building up the gate for the three fights to make Joe a millionaire? Or do you mean "creating" the rivalry so that people remember who Joe is, cause Anon, aside from hard core boxing fans, the world at large wouldn't have the foggiest idea of who Joe Frazier was/is if not for Ali. Oh, you must mean Ali torturing Joe, the same antics he started with "Old Man" Archie Moore, to fall in four, "Ugly Bear" Sonny Liston, "What's My Name" Terrell, "Acorn" Baldy Shavers, "The Duck" Leon Spinks. Hmm...these guys took their pay checks, went home and laughed all the way to the bank. Well, I suppose "Gorilla" would hurt someone's feelings more than Bear, or Acorn, or Duck. Poor Joe.

Frazier brought the drama to their fights, not Ali. All Ali did was sit back on the ropes and pose. Also, Angelo, you haven't the slightest clue what you're talking about, and you seem almost proud of your ignorance. Do a little history before you say that Ali helped Frazier.

Oh, yeah, as far as helping, I seem to remember it was Frazier who gave Ali money when he was on his ass in the streets. But the guru Angelo claims that Ali helped Frazier. How? Turning the whole black community against him? Having people send Frazier death threats? Having Frazier's kids harrassed at school? Calling Frazier dumb, ugly, stupid, a nigger, a gorilla, a monkey?

You're such a fucking idiot, Angelo. I am impressed that you are so proud of it. Good work, chap.

Hagler was great, too, but I'd still pick Monzon over him. Carlos was indestructable.
anyone would think of when Frazier's name was mentioned would be the shocking losses to Foreman. We'd all say, "Joe showed lots of courage picking himself up off the canvass eight times, but Foreman is a class above him as a fighter." And George proved that. Twice.We'd then have to chose Joe's best win from his fights against Ellis, Quarry, and Mathis. While we all believe that Quarry is the best of that bunch, Ellis was a champion.So, if Ali never existed, the most meritorious win Frazier ever had was against Ellis. (Of course, I'm talking about the first fight. Not the second one. Let's not go there again.)As such, it's safe to say that Ali delivered lots to Joe's legend. Without Ali, today's fight fans would either remember Joe as the guy knocked down 8 times by Foreman, or as the guy who beat Ellis twice. People are more likely to remember train wrecks. Frazier would be known for the Foreman fights.Without Joe, Ali's legend wouldn't have suffered. He still would have been the guy who shocked the world beating Liston. He still would have beat Foreman against the odds.It's good to be back. I'm thankful for all the awards, too. Warms the heart.

Angelo, in all 3 of the Frazier-Ali fights, each fighter fought for a guarantee. They did not fight for a percentage of the gate. Ali was just being cruel and mean. As was his normal nature when he fought black fighters who were older than him. He did not make it personal with Shavers or Norton, as he did with Patterson and Terrell; by calling both of them "white niggers." With Shavers and Norton it was not personal. Maybe because Ali knew they might kick his ass.A Angelo, try and get your head out of your ass when you glorify your idol. | 1/24/06 04:30:00 PM | Sam | White Plains | Wonderland.com | 10| Angelo, in all 3 of the Frazier-Ali fights, each fighter fought for a guarantee. They did not fight for a percentage of the gate. Ali was just being cruel and mean. As was his normal nature when he fought black fighters who were older than him. He did not make it personal with Shavers or Norton, as he did with Patterson and Terrell; by calling both of them "white niggers." With Shavers and Norton it was not personal. Maybe because Ali knew they might kick his ass.A Angelo, try and get your head out of your ass when you glorify your idol. | 1/24/06 04:30:23 PM | Sam | White Plains | Wonderland.com | 10| Angelo, in all 3 of the Frazier-Ali fights, each fighter fought for a guarantee. They did not fight for a percentage of the gate. Ali was just being cruel and mean. As was his normal nature when he fought black fighters who were older than him. He did not make it personal with Shavers or Norton, as he did with Patterson and Terrell; by calling both of them "white niggers." With Shavers and Norton it was not personal. Maybe because Ali knew they might kick his ass.A Angelo, try and get your head out of your ass when you glorify your idol. | 1/24/06 04:47:14 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10| Sam/Anon: It's actually the two of you who need to get facts straight. Sam: Do you suppose the second and third fights would have had the same "Guarantee" compensation to the fighters if the build up to the first fight wasn't as dramatic? Anon: Do you know anyone who went to school with Frazier's kids? I do. One of my best friends went to school with Marvis and believe me, Fraizer's children weren't harassed because of the Ali-Frazier Superfights. In fact, Frazier's offspring enjoyed a better standard of living and better schools, in large part, because Ali and their Dad had the trilogy of Superfights. Ali NEVER "had anyone make death threats" on Frazier and I don't believe he called Frazier "Nigger" either. Where is that tape? You're embellishing to make a point and it isn't necessary. | head out of your ass. If you are going to glorify Ali. Get facts straight. And don't adjust your story every time you are shown to be fibbing.

I AM SO SORRY TO HEAR ABOUT JACK QUARRY PASSING AWAY. MY HEART GOES OUT TO THE QUARRY FAMILY ON LOSING ANOTHER FAMILY MEMBER. GOD BLESS THE QUARRY FAMILY.

MY HOPES AND PRAYERS ARE ALSO WITH MIKE QUARRY, A VERY GOOD BOXER IN HIS DAY BUT MORE IMPORTANTLY, A DECENT MAN.

May I offer my condolences to the Quarrys on Jack's passing also. Kent is right, we should say a prayer for Jack, and Mike as well. Mike's plight must be deja vu for the family. By all accounts Jerry and Mike were both very decent fellows who deserved much better.

As far as the kids not being harrassed, I don't believe you. Especially if you heard it from the friend of a friend. Bullies don't go around announcing what they do. They butter up teachers and then bully you when no one is around.

As far as calling Frazier names, Ali did call him "A little old nigger boy from Philadelphia, who ain't got a thought in his dumb head 'cept for himself." And finally, of course Ali himself didn't send people to give Frazier death threats. But because of the light that Ali cast Frazier in, it happened.

As far as the kids not being harrassed, I don't believe you. Especially if you heard it from the friend of a friend. Bullies don't go around announcing what they do. They butter up teachers and then bully you when no one is around.

As far as calling Frazier names, Ali did call him "A little old nigger boy from Philadelphia, who ain't got a thought in his dumb head 'cept for himself." And finally, of course Ali himself didn't send people to give Frazier death threats. But because of the light that Ali cast Frazier in, it happened.

Dear Speaker of the House Hastert:

In writing once again regarding professional boxing, all efforts must be made during this next year to pass the McCain-Reid bill to set up a national boxing commission. The sport is dying and so are many of the fighters. On behalf of the AAIB and The Jerry Quarry Foundation I urge you to do this quickly. Thank you for considering this letter.

GEORGE OTTO, ESQUIRE

Anon: I don't know what Ali did to prompt death threats against Frazier. If people were making these threats, they were crazy—during the same era, Hank Aaron received death threats when he was chasing Babe Ruth's record. It's ridiculous. These are just sports—Frazier and Aaron were honorable people and no one should have been making death threats against them. Sam: So during the Wide World of Sports broadcast of the first Ali-Frazier fight, when the two gentlemen were in the studio with Cosell, and Ali made a comment about Frazier being in the hospital for a long time after the fight—and a scuffle broke out and the two guys ended up on the floor, wrestling, and had to be broken up—Sam, do you think this was real? Even after both admitted it was fun and games to build up the fight and the rivalry, are you the lone holdout who thinks this was a real fight? Are you ignorant enough to believe that they didn't have an interest in gate and closed circuit sales for all three of their fights?

Sam: Do you think when Ali was involved with the WWF, and Gorilla Monsoon picked him up and body slammed him—do you think that was a real fight? Sam, who's better, Bruno Sammartino or Chief Jay Strongbow? Sam, do you believe in Alice in Wonderland?

ESPN aired a special about Ali just last weekend. In it, Angelo Dundee says the studio scrap was real. He stated that Ali grabbed Frazier, who was indeed angry, because Ali thought that Joe was about to hit his brother Rudy. There is also a Sports
Century segment wherein Marvis Frazier himself talks about being harassed in school because he was Joe's son. |

Facts: If Marvis says it happened, then I guess we go with it. I can tell you, from Junior High on, I really, sincerely doubt he was "picked on" at Plymouth Meeting High School, where he attended. In fact, he was already an accomplished boxer and was involved with AAU boxing. He'd wear big medals he won to school. He was popular because Joe Frazier is a hero in Philadelphia and also because apparently, Marvis was a nice kid who happened to probably be the toughest kid in the school. I don't buy Dundee's account, if what you say is true. Ali and Frazier themselves have said that the scuffle was a put-on. Read "The Greatest, My Own Story."

Sam: Angelo, I never commented about the Frazier-Ali shuffe in the studio. But, I will add my thoughts anyway. It seems everyone but you knew it was real. Why is that? Angelo, GET YOUR HEAD OUT OF YOUR ASS!! You have no credibility when it comes to Ali. You idolize him the way some teenagers idolized Elvis when they kids. Angelo, you are a grown man. GROW UP ALREADY!!|

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH SOME OF YOU? THE QUARRYS' FATHER JUST DIED AND THIS IS THE JERRY QUARRY SITE AND MOST OF YOU CANNOT POST CONDOLESES TO THE QUARRY FAMILY?YOU WOULD RATHER ARGUE ABOUT MEANINGLESS DRIBBLE?GO AHEAD AND TAKE CHEAP SHOTS AT ME. I COULD CARE LESS AS SOME OF YOU HAVE NO CLASS AND WHAT YOU SAY MEANS NOTHING.THERE ARE JUST SOME THINGS MORE IMPORTANT THAN THESE STUPID ARGUMENTS.|

Sam: Angelo, I never commented about the Ali-Frazier brawl in the studio. Here again you are making up facts to suit your glorification of Ali. Ali may have said it was in fun, but FRAZIER NEVER SAID THAT IT WAS IN FUN. Anyone and everyone who was in the studio said Frazier was angry and not play acting. But, no, you know different.Why is it Angelo, that in your eyes Ali can do no wrong. It is because you worship him like a teenage girl worshipped Elvis. ANGELO, GROW UP!!GET YOUR HEAD OUT OF YOUR ASS!! You are a grown man. You have no credibility when it comes to Ali.Angelo, since you are the Ali expert, tell me. In this war on terrorism, who does Ali support? Does he support the muslim terrorists, or the American troops. Remember, Ali avoided the draft by claiming he could not fight in a war, unless the war was deemed okay by Elijah Muhammad. Which muslim leader now dictates to Ali whom he should support in time of war. Come on Angelo, you are the Ali apologist; give the board an answer| died last Saturday. And not one member of his family posted about it on this site. Doesn't that say something about Jack Quarry in regard to the Quarry family?

1/25/06 06:11:05 PM|Sam|White Plains||Wonderland.com||10|Angelo, I apologize for being so mean spirited to you. It is me and not you who behaves like a teenager. A very immature teenager.Angelo, you are a bigger and better man than me. From the bottom of my heart I apologize. And whatever feelings you have about Ali are okay with me.After I reading your post, I realize you are a standup guy, and you like anyone else in the USA are entitled to there feelings. And you God bless you stan's by them and defend them like a gentleman|

1/25/06 08:17:49 PM|SABRINA QUARRY-PORTER|FLORIDA||SabrinaLPorter@aol.com||10|YES MY GRANDFATHER JACK QUARRY PASSED AWAY ON SATURDAY. HIS FUNERAL WAS TODAY HE WILL BE MISSED VERY MUCH.|

1/25/06 08:18:33 PM|SABRINA QUARRY-PORTER|FLORIDA||SabrinaLPorter@aol.com||10|YES MY GRANDFATHER JACK QUARRY PASSED AWAY ON SATURDAY. HIS FUNERAL WAS TODAY HE WILL BE MISSED VERY MUCH.|

1/25/06 08:46:20 PM|George Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com||10|I became sad after reading of the death of Mr. Jack Quarry. I had the good fortune of visiting him on a number of occasions when he lived in Savage, Maryland and later in Crofton, Maryland from 1996 until 2001. After that, I spoke to him on at least one occasion during 2002 after he had relocated back to California. I once spent a whole day with him when I took him to Baltimore to enroll him as a patient in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Baltimore in 1998. About a year later we met up with James Quarry in that same city and attended the 1999 convention of the Association of Boxing Commissioners in Baltimore where we were interviewed together for a radio show, the contents of which once was present on this website. Furthermore, at that same event, I later gave an enthusiastic speech stating that both the Jerry Quarry Foundation and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) both strongly favored the passage of the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act—which did pass the U.S. Congress in 2000. As fate would have it, the only boxing organizations that lent their support to the passage of that bill were the AAIB and the JQF. Mr. Jack Quarry was always kind, gracious, and polite towards me; he had many great boxing memories both about his sons and many others in this sport. And yes, he did have the letters "H A R D L U C K" tattooed on his fingers. My deepest condolences to all of the Quarry family members on this terrible loss. I will pray for all of you to recover from this unfortunate setback of the death of another member of your family.|

1/25/06 08:46:55 PM|George Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com||10|I became sad after reading of the death of Mr. Jack Quarry. I had the good fortune of visiting him on a number of occasions when he lived in Savage, Maryland and later in Crofton, Maryland from 1996 until 2001. After that, I spoke to him on at least one occasion during 2002 after he had relocated back to California. I once spent a whole day with him when I took him to Baltimore to enroll him as a patient in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Baltimore in 1998. About a year later we met up with James Quarry in that same city and attended the 1999 convention of the Association of Boxing Commissioners in Baltimore where we were interviewed together for a radio show, the contents of which once was present on this website. Furthermore, at that same event, I later gave an enthusiastic speech stating that both the Jerry Quarry Foundation and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) both strongly favored the passage of the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act—which did pass the U.S. Congress in 2000. As fate would have it, the only boxing organizations that lent their support to the passage of that bill were the AAIB and the JQF. Mr. Jack Quarry was always kind, gracious, and polite towards me; he had many great boxing memories both about his sons and many others in this sport. And yes, he did have the letters "H A R D L U C K" tattooed on his fingers. My deepest condolences to all of the Quarry family members on this terrible loss. I will pray for all of you to recover from this unfortunate setback of the death of another member of your family.

I became sad after reading of the death of Mr. Jack Quarry. I had the good fortune of visiting him on a number of occasions when he lived in Savage, Maryland and later in Crofton, Maryland from 1996 until 2001. After that, I spoke to him on at least one occasion during 2002 after he had relocated back to California. I once spent a whole day with him when I took him to Baltimore to enroll him as a patient in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Baltimore in 1998. About a year later we met up with James Quarry in that same city and attended the 1999 convention of the Association of Boxing Commissioners in Baltimore where we were interviewed together for a radio show, the contents of which once was present on this website. Furthermore, at that same event, I later gave an enthusiastic speech stating that both the Jerry Quarry Foundation and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) both strongly favored the passage of the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act—which did pass the U.S. Congress in 2000. As fate would have it, the only boxing organizations that lent their support to the passage of that bill were the AAIB and the JQF. Mr. Jack Quarry was always kind, gracious, and polite towards me; he had many great boxing memories both about his sons and many others in this sport. And yes, he did have the letters "H A R D L U C K" tattooed on his fingers. My deepest condolences to all of the Quarry family members on this terrible loss. I will pray for all of you to recover from this unfortunate setback of the death of another member of your family.
which once was present on this website. Furthermore, at that same event, I later gave an enthusiastic speech stating that both the Jerry Quarry Foundation and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) both strongly favored the passage of the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act—which did pass the U.S. Congress in 2000. As fate would have it, the only boxing organizations that lent their support to the passage of that bill were the AAIB and the JQF. Mr. Jack Quarry was always kind, gracious, and polite towards me; he had many great boxing memories both about his sons and many others in this sport. And yes, he did have the letters "H A R D  L U C K" tattooed on his fingers. My deepest condolences to all of the Quarry family members on this terrible loss. I will pray for all of you to recover from this unfortunate setback of the death of another member of your family.

1/25/06 08:49:32 PM|George Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com|||10|

I became sad after reading of the death of Mr. Jack Quarry. I had the good fortune of visiting him on a number of occasions when he lived in Savage, Maryland and later in Crofton, Maryland from 1996 until 2001. After that, I spoke to him on at least one occasion during 2002 after he had relocated back to California. I once spent a whole day with him when I took him to Baltimore to enroll him as a patient in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Baltimore in 1998. About a year later we met up with James Quarry in that same city and attended the 1999 convention of the Association of Boxing Commissioners in Baltimore where we were interviewed together for a radio show, the contents of which once was present on this website. Furthermore, at that same event, I later gave an enthusiastic speech stating that both the Jerry Quarry Foundation and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) both strongly favored the passage of the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act—which did pass the U.S. Congress in 2000. As fate would have it, the only boxing organizations that lent their support to the passage of that bill were the AAIB and the JQF. Mr. Jack Quarry was always kind, gracious, and polite towards me; he had many great boxing memories both about his sons and many others in this sport. And yes, he did have the letters "H A R D  L U C K" tattooed on his fingers. My deepest condolences to all of the Quarry family members on this terrible loss. I will pray for all of you to recover from this unfortunate setback of the death of another member of your family.

1/25/06 08:49:53 PM|George Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com|||10|

I became sad after reading of the death of Mr. Jack Quarry. I had the good fortune of visiting him on a number of occasions when he lived in Savage, Maryland and later in Crofton, Maryland from 1996 until 2001. After that, I spoke to him on at least one occasion during 2002 after he had relocated back to California. I once spent a whole day with him when I took him to Baltimore to enroll him as a patient in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Baltimore in 1998. About a year later we met up with James Quarry in that same city and attended the 1999 convention of the Association of Boxing Commissioners in Baltimore where we were interviewed together for a radio show, the contents of which once was present on this website. Furthermore, at that same event, I later gave an enthusiastic speech stating that both the Jerry Quarry Foundation and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) both strongly favored the passage of the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act—which did pass the U.S. Congress in 2000. As fate would have it, the only boxing organizations that lent their support to the passage of that bill were the AAIB and the JQF. Mr. Jack Quarry was always kind, gracious, and polite towards me; he had many great boxing memories both about his sons and many others in this sport. And yes, he did have the letters "H A R D  L U C K" tattooed on his fingers. My deepest condolences to all of the Quarry family members on this terrible loss. I will pray for all of you to recover from this unfortunate setback of the death of another member of your family.

1/25/06 08:50:39 PM|George Otto|Youngstown, Ohio||ehnpbsa@aol.com|||10|
became sad after reading of the death of Mr. Jack Quarry. I had the good fortune of visiting him on a number of occasions when he lived in Savage, Maryland and later in Crofton, Maryland from 1996 until 2001. After that, I spoke to him on at least one occasion during 2002 after he had relocated back to California. I once spent a whole day with him when I took him to Baltimore to enroll him as a patient in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Baltimore in 1998. About a year later we met up with James Quarry in that same city and attended the 1999 convention of the Association of Boxing Commissioners in Baltimore where we were interviewed together for a radio show, the contents of which once was present on this website. Furthermore, at that same event, I later gave an enthusiastic speech stating that both the Jerry Quarry Foundation and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) both strongly favored the passage of the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act—which did pass the U.S. Congress in 2000. As fate would have it, the only boxing organizations that lent their support to the passage of that bill were the AAIB and the JQF. Mr. Jack Quarry was always kind, gracious, and polite towards me; he had many great boxing memories both about his sons and many others in this sport. And yes, he did have the letters "H A R D L U C K" tattooed on his fingers. My deepest condolences to all of the Quarry family members on this terrible loss. I will pray for all of you to recover from this unfortunate setback of the death of another member of your family.
U.S. Congress in 2000. As fate would have it, the only boxing organizations that lent their support to the passage of that bill were the AAIB and the JQF. Mr. Jack Quarry was always kind, gracious, and polite towards me; he had many great boxing memories both about his sons and many others in this sport. And yes, he did have the letters "H A R D L U C K" tattooed on his fingers. My deepest condolences to all of the Quarry family members on this terrible loss. I will pray for all of you to recover from this unfortunate setback of the death of another member of your family.

I became sad after reading of the death of Mr. Jack Quarry. I had the good fortune of visiting him on a number of occasions when he lived in Savage, Maryland and later in Crofton, Maryland from 1996 until 2001. After that, I spoke to him on at least one occasion during 2002 after he had relocated back to California. I once spent a whole day with him when I took him to Baltimore to enroll him as a patient in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Baltimore in 1998. About a year later we met up with James Quarry in that same city and attended the 1999 convention of the Association of Boxing Commissioners in Baltimore where we were interviewed together for a radio show, the contents of which once was present on this website. Furthermore, at that same event, I later gave an enthusiastic speech stating that both the Jerry Quarry Foundation and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) both strongly favored the passage of the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act—which did pass the U.S. Congress in 2000. As fate would have it, the only boxing organizations that lent their support to the passage of that bill were the AAIB and the JQF. Mr. Jack Quarry was always kind, gracious, and polite towards me; he had many great boxing memories both about his sons and many others in this sport. And yes, he did have the letters "H A R D L U C K" tattooed on his fingers. My deepest condolences to all of the Quarry family members on this terrible loss. I will pray for all of you to recover from this unfortunate setback of the death of another member of your family.
California. I once spent a whole day with him when I took him to Baltimore to enroll him as a patient in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Baltimore in 1998. About a year later we met up with James Quarry in that same city and attended the 1999 convention of the Association of Boxing Commissioners in Baltimore where we were interviewed together for a radio show, the contents of which once was present on this website. Furthermore, at that same event, I later gave an enthusiastic speech stating that both the Jerry Quarry Foundation and the American Association for the Improvement of Boxing (AAIB) both strongly favored the passage of the Muhammed Ali Boxing Reform Act—which did pass the U.S. Congress in 2000. As fate would have it, the only boxing organizations that lent their support to the passage of that bill were the AAIB and the JQF. Mr. Jack Quarry was always kind, gracious, and polite towards me; he had many great boxing memories both about his sons and many others in this sport. And yes, he did have the letters "H A R D  L U C K" tattooed on his fingers. My deepest condolences to all of the Quarry family members on this terrible loss. I will pray for all of you to recover from this unfortunate setback of the death of another member of your family.

[1/26/06 02:32:43 AM] Noam | same | same | ||||10 | My sympathies to the Quarry family. Angelo, I'm with you and I don't know how anyone can blame Ali for threats against Frazier. Ali wasn't responsible for the threats and no one can seriously allege that he countenanced or encouraged them. It wasn't his doing.When Ali fought Jerry Quarry the first time straight after his exile, Ali had many death threats made against him. Jerry and his camp had nothing to do with those threats. Ali never blamed them. It was the doing of loonies and full-mooners and red necks who hated Ali no matter what and we've heard from a few of them here. This hatred of Ali is keeping some of these guys awake at night, barking at the moon. Woof woof.

[1/26/06 06:36:36 AM] Angelo | same | same | ||||10 | Wait, I thought Noam was traveling around the world? I guess when he says "traveling the world" he means stepping out of his parent's basement for a little while. Mad props to Noam for exploring the universe.

[1/26/06 06:39:04 AM] George Otto | || |||10 | I apologize for being a moron and hitting submit 13 times.

[1/26/06 08:10:21 AM] Angelo | Washington, DC | || funktron || |||10 | George: Great post and tribute to Mr. Quarry. I think members of his family have probably been busy and in mourning since his death, without too many opportunities to visit the site. Nice job.Sam: Thank you and likewise. Noam: That last one has my name on it, but it's not my post! It's still kinda funny though. Now, the same guy can log on as you and bash me.

[1/26/06 08:44:12 AM] Selina | Hemet, Ca. | || sparrini35@aol.com ||||10 | I was very sad to learn of my Grandfather's passing. I will always have good memories of a man that treated my sisters, brothers and I with kindness and love. I remember the Lifesaver book he would give us at Christmas. Grandpa, I hope you are dancing on the glorious streets of heaven with Dad and Uncle Jerry. You will be missed. And for all you hater's out there, show some respect for the Quarry family. God Bless.

[1/26/06 09:05:24 AM] Selina | Hemet, Ca. | || sparrini35@aol.com ||||10 | I have not been on this web site since my dad passed away, at least it seems that way. I am a bit disappointed in the rude comments being posted, not disappointed in my sister though you go girl!! This site is not for vulgarity and/or profanity, show some respect for what Jimmy Quarry accomplished, and for his tribute to his brothers.

[1/26/06 06:49:22 PM] George Otto | Youngstown, Ohio | || ehnpbsa@aol.com ||||10 | I apologize for my computer gliche. Thanks to all who read my post and complimented it. Perhaps other readers can also submit their recollections regarding Mr. Jack Quarry.

[1/27/06 01:39:59 AM] Noam | same | same | ||||10 | It didn't read like one of your posts, Angelo. Someone was posting using my name some time ago, too. Whoever was impersonating you asks about me posting even though I'm supposed to be on vacation. Seems this guy lives in a zoo and hasn't heard of internet cafes.Been passing some time reading the latest book on Ali written by Muhammad and his daughter. Ali still insists that he didn't get Parkinson's from boxing; says he would have got it anyway regardless. I think boxing accelerated the disease and that he would have probably got it later in life anyway.Ali also says that he regrets calling Frazier names. He says that he was trying to promote interest in the fight but went too far and apologizes to Joe in a poem he wrote for the book.He also again stated that he was wrong to say that all white men are devils. According to Ali, Malcolm X told him that it wasn't about colour but about heart. Elijah Muhammad was the one saying white men are devils. Ali regrets that he turned his back on Malcolm X just before his assassination.Finally, Ali says that of all the guys he fought, Liston was the scariest, Foreman the strongest, Patterson the most skilled, and Frazier the toughest. It's a good read.|
There are plenty of white people who enjoy boxing and who don't want boxing outlawed. There are also a lot of white boxers, maybe less than in the past, but there are still plenty of white fighters. My conclusion is that most white people do not want to abolish boxing and it is just a few "bleeding hearts" who think they know what is best for the rest of us without even asking everyone else how they feel about the subject and those few bleeding hearts are the ones who want to abolish boxing.

TO THE QUARRT FAMILY, ON THE LOSE OF YOUR beloved father. Thats always the toughest loss for familys. He certainly raised a fine tribe, or family of decent Irishmen.

Hey Jimmy DORSEY, thanks for that wake up call. This is what happens when you've gotten to a certain age. MY SHORT MEMORY stinks. I always thought I remembered Quarry losing out to Frazier. HOWEVER, it was Frazier. I don't remember Norton at all.

Steve (AKA SHEMP) YES SMOKIN JOE did not far very well in the superstars, I ONLY WISHED WE HAD THE COPY OF JERRY'S 1974 VERSION WHERE HE FINISHED IN THE TOP 3 OF THE NFLERS, WAS IN SHAPE AND THERE TO WIN AND GAIN POINTS. I THINK HE TOOK THE 1975 COMPETEION AS KIND OF A VACATION. HE REALLY MADE 74' VERY EXCITING, I EVEN THOUGHT HE HELD UP 220 LBS LONG ENOUGH TO BE COUNTED AS A LIFT (YES JQ HAD 220 UP THERE. THEN IN 1975 HE WENT OUT AT 210 TAKE CARE.

I read a comment about none of the Quarry family writing about Jack's passing. Well, don't you think the Quarry family have had a lot of Deaths in the past few years? just maybe they are really just trying to pull it together. Think about it. we have lost 4 Quarry family members in a short period of time. Also, Mr Jimmy's Children lost their Mother and Grandmother just before and after their fathers death. Now Mike is in bad shape, and Arwanda too, so give us a break. This is a great site, but sometimes you get wrapped up in family instead of posting to the world. I Thank the ones who did post about Jack's passing, in letting everyone on this site know. I just wonder how many of you would have the sense of mind to think about a web page at these times. I think you would be thinking about your own family instead. All some of you care about is knocking the Quarry family in the middle of their hard times. Instead of thinking about what they are going through. I have asked you a lot of times to back off the fussing and the hating but you don't seem to want to do this. So I believe its time to just shut this site down for awhile. I for one am very tired of all the Bull. Your language has got so disgraceful, I don't even want my grandchildren reading this site. They were so proud of this site at one time. Now it seems some of you just want to hurt everyone. I wish you would just get off our site. Go somewhere else, where they will put up with your garbage, and foul language. Because we won't any longer. Enough is enough.

I have seen that the move has been made to shut down this site, I strongly move for this to be reconsidered, it is the perfect place for memories to live on and if the stress of keeping it running is too much I would be proud to run the site for My dad, Uncle Jimmy, Uncle Mike and the Entire family, it would be a shame for it to be shut down, I have to many memories here and have received so much support, please lets keep it going, dont give up on it through these hard times, lets stick to the motto of there is no quite in a Quarry, It's what My Dad would want.

Jonathan Quarry

I agree with you completely. This site should require it's posters to register with their real names and E-Mail address.

Jonathan Quarry

I've noticed lately that, no matter how hard some of the guys try to remain neutral, or just keep trying to get conversations going about boxing and Quarry family history, they just get talked over by somebody who wants to keep a meaningless argument going, or use this site as their political, or racial soapbox. Jimmy D is a good example. He always has good, solid information and comments. He never insults anyone. Kent, at the risk of people thinking I'm kissing up to you, your comments are always well thought out and rational. Except when you're discussing the Eagles. I really hope this site doesn't get shut down. I would like to see required registration. Of course, that's easy for me to say, I don't have to do the work.

Jonathan Quarry

SHUT IT DOWN!!

I,ve noticed lately that, no matter how hard some of the guys try to remain neutral, or just keep trying to get conversations going about boxing and Quarry family history, they just get talked over by somebody who wants to keep a meaningless argument going, or use this site as their political, or racial soapbox. Jimmy D is a good example. He always has good, solid information and comments. He never insults anyone. Kent, at the risk of people thinking I'm kissing up to you, your comments are always well thought out and rational. Except when you're discussing the Eagles. I really hope this site doesn't get shut down. I would like to see required registration. Of course, that's easy for me to say, I don't have to do the work.

Boxing Historian

This site is completely lacking class and clarity. People like Noam aka Howard C have ruined it.

Kent

If people want to be fair, I haven't ever used foul language on this site, and apart from the fact I didn't post here for over a month and can't be accused of any of the recent rants here, I did tone it completely down in the months before then. Even when I wasn't posting here, the cheap shots from the anonymous heroes kept coming but I ignored them. I was asked months ago to tone it down and I did.

Noam

I've only ever posted under the name Noam, and when I've been wrong I've apologized. When I came back on after a rest from here, I was disappointed to see the foul language. It's an insult to everyone, especially when people of all ages post here. My guess is that the people doing it are the disgruntled ones who left in a hurry.

Noam

There might be an administrative cost to changing the properties of the site to mandate registration. However, if there isn't an expense for the Quarry family to do this, maybe registration is the answer. It would give the webmaster some control and might weed out trouble makers. Moving forward, I will remind myself that this is a family site and language/content should be something people of all ages can read. I ask others to do the same. We can have spirited debates here, and can use colorful language without swearing. The Quarry family members who make this page available have given us a community to enjoy and we've blown it. Also, I stand by my response to the poster who thought some of the family should have been here posting about Mr. Jack Quarry---I'll say it again---I think maybe the family had other things on their mind. It is nice though, that Jonathan and the others have been here recently.

Angelo

IF WE ALL AGREE TO NOT FIGHT WITH EACH OTHER, TO KEEP THE LANGUAGE CLEAN AND STICK TO IT
THIS TIME AND TO IGNORE THOSE WHO CAN’T FOLLOW THE RULES AND STICK TO THAT TOO, THAN THE SITE CAN STAY IN ITS CURRENT FORMAT.IT WOULD BE A SHAME FOR JONATHAN QUARRY NOT TO HAVE THIS SITE, A TRIBUTE TO HIS FATHER JERRY.ANGELO, BRANDI WAS NOT TALKING ABOUT YOU WHEN SHE REFERRED TO THE POST ABOUT SOMEONE SAYING NO ONE FROM THE QUARRY FAMILY MENTIONED JACK PASSING AWAY. THAT POSTER IS A NEWCOMER WHO I HOPE, IF HE POSTS AGAIN, CAN RETHINK WHAT HE IS POSTING BEFORE HE POSTS ESPECIALLY IF IT IS ABOUT THE QUARRY FAMILY. | 1/30/06 10:59:09 AM | Boxing Historian | Texas | | | | CLOSING THE SITE DOWN!!!! I BELIEVE THE SITE DOES NOT MAKE ANY MONEY FOR THE JERRY QUARRY FOUNDATION. AND IF IT DID WHERE DID THE MONEY GO? WHO HAS SEEN THE FINANCIAL REPORTS?|MY SUGGESTION: IS FOR KENT OR ANGELO TO START A SIMILAR SITE, MINUS THE MONEY COLLECTING. KENT AND ANGELO ARE GOOD GUYS THEY CAN MONITOR THE SITE THEMSELVES AND TAKE ACTION WHEN NECESSARY.| 1/30/06 12:31:07 PM | Noam | same | | | | | | | | Skimming through earlier posts, I have realized what an idiot I really am. I just wanted to apologize to guys like Kent, Forest Ward, and Fan. I lied about a whole bunch of different topics, and tried to pass them off as facts.So, I'm going to leave the site for good. Bye.| 1/30/06 12:52:56 PM | Steve | N.J. | | | | | | | | Hey Boxing Historian, what the heck are you talking about? There's no soliciting of money on this site. It's probably costing the Quarries money to run this site. I don't even remember you as a regular contributor to this site. Yet here you are trying to ruin it for the regular posters. You insult the Quarries by insinuating that, somehow, money is being skimmed, and asking about the financial report. Then yelling in all capital letters, "CLOSE THIS SITE DOWN". How do you think the Quarry family will respond to your post, with all the grief they've had to endure in the past couple of years? Your the best argument Kent, Angelo, and myself could have for required registration on this site.| 1/30/06 01:24:33 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | | funktron@yahoo.com | | | | | | Steve: I agree with you.Also, the site did raise some money at one point---selling things like t-shirts and videos. Believe me, they hardly "raked it in" with this merchandise. In fact, James Quarry himself made a second video for me showing the entire Quarry-Ellis fight and he added Shavers-Quarry because the video clip for this fight was bad on my first tape. The Quarries probably spent more time and effort than it was worth with these goodies for the fans. I'd still love to see the online store come back with T-Shirts, videos and more. If James were still alive, he would have brought the hammer down on the posters here who cause trouble repeatedly.| 1/30/06 03:24:44 PM | Steve | Washington, DC | | funktron@yahoo.com | | | | | | As you've probably guessed, that last post bearing my name wasn't me. Kent, regarding the ongoing cheap shots, it involves people not posting under their names who previously exited this site disgruntled. They are trying to disrupt us. They are the ones swearing. Not me.Over Christmas I wasn't here for over a month. The cheap shots and sniping continued, so my presence obviously wasn't the problem. These disgruntled guys who departed under names we know but returned under new guises (sometimes even using our names), are back to cause trouble. Steve, you were writing about Philly fighters and made a list of them. I mentioned Bennie Briscoe and what a great fighter he is. You didn't respond. Don't you like Briscoe? Or is it me? I was being civil to you but you didn't respond. Registering names won't change attitudes. I hope this site flourishes with or without me. If I'm perceived to be the problem, then tell me and I'll exit, stage left. I'm sorry that Massimo doesn't post here anymore because he was the most entertaining and pleasant guy among us.

I agree that someone is causing trouble for the rest of us by insinuating money is missing. I don't believe this place was ever a money maker but it has done a lot of good by getting the word out about fighters getting hurt in the ring. Please Brandi, don't listen to the negative talk by a few isolated troublemakers. The rest of us have good hearts and it more than makes up for them, the idiots.

Hey, I regret coming on so strong about people not posting about Jack's passing but it was what I was feeling at the time.

Noam, I know you are not the one causing trouble. Don't worry about it.

I think selling those collectors items is an example of the Quarries doing us a favor. I can't believe their making any profit. And if they are, good, more power to them. As long as they keep this site going, their doing us a favor.

I never meant to ignore your posts. It's just that I get distracted by other stuff, and sometimes when I read the posts I only respond to the last post I've read. I can talk to you all day about Philly fighters. I'm sorry if I missed one of your posts on Philly fighters. It's one of my favorite subjects. Yes, my young friend, I loved Bennie Briscoe. I was present at the Blue Horizon for several of his fights. I think one was against Joe Archer. I do remember Eugene "Cyclone" Hart falling out of the ring and landing on a press table, with Joe Archer. How about Matt Franklin. He was found as a toddler wandering on Franklin Ave. by nuns. They took him in and named him Mathew Franklin. He later changed his name to Mathew Saad Muhammad. He took part in savage fights with Dwight Quawi, the "Camden Buzzsaw".

Five of my friends and I got tickets to see Jerry Quarry and Shavers on close circuit at the Cherry Hill Arena, which burnt down many years ago. We arrived very late. The place was jammed. As we fought our way to our seats, the fight started and ended. When we arrived at our seats, Quarry had already knocked Shavers out.

Noam was training for a fight with Bonevna in 1973 but Bonevna got injured in training so the fight never happened. Noam, Jerry was quoted as saying that after Jerry knocked out Shavers, Foreman, who was at ringside, told Jerry he had just lost... his title shot. I think most people thought Foreman was kidding but the fight never came off. I think Foreman went for the bigger money fight against Ali, which is what professional boxing is all about, making money, but a fight with Jerry, especially in New York, would have been a big money fight also but not as big as a fight between Foreman and Ali. I don't know if Jerry was considering fighting Bugner or not.

I was stuffering around on the internet and came across a story on Kosta Tsyu, who lost his title savagely to Ricky Hatton last year. Apparently, Tsyu, who is 36 old, spent a week in hospital after the fight with brain swelling, blood in his urine, and dangerously high blood pressure. His trainer and manager have told him to retire, but Kostya intends to continue on. It's a bit sad. His manager is taking him to court for unpaid fees and so is another member of his team. Looks like being the same old story about a champion fighter who keeps fighting way too long.

Also, when reading about Tsyu who is based in Australia, was an item about former three time Aussie world champion Jeff Feneck. He has been charged by police with stealing a watch from a jewellery store. What's going on? That guy is worth millions. The world's gone crazy.

On the 24th, an old regular informed us about Mr. Jack Quarry's death. Two posters responded in an appropriate manner. Until Kent subsequently took them to task, however, no other "Quarry fans" bothered to express sympathy in anything approaching an appropriate or timely fashion. Several continued to snipe, to accuse, to lament perceived insults. Sadly, their dramatic "all about me" attitude persists, as does their need for a forum for personal agendas unrelated to this particular site. Whatever the family decides to do with the site, remember there have been many genuine fans as well, and the opportunity to participate has been appreciated. Those folks will continue to sincerely support your family in these most difficult times.

First of all, Noam, welcome back and thank you for the compliments. I'm not posting in these days because my computer is out of order, kaputt. I'm writing in an Internet Point in this very moment, but I don't have the time to read all your posts and to write often. But very soon I'll have a new computer and I'll be back. For now, I greet you all. Good luck with your diet. I'm doing a diet of my own in this period (I need to lose a few kgs).
Steve, "Dissapointed made me feel a little guilty. I expressed my condolences in an untimely, and probably an inappropriate manner. I had not been checking the site for several weeks due to family stuff. I would now like to express my sympathy to the Quarry family. I can't imagine trying to cope with all the grief they've had in the last several years."

Steve, thanks for taking several us to task. As "Disapointed" said so well. On a different note, I once lost about 40lbs. This was when I was much younger and had been in bed due to two previous knee surgeries. I went to a different surgeon, an Army surgeon, to have an artificial knee replacement. He told me in no uncertain terms, that I was overweight and should try exercising a little more self control. Don't you just love it when that happens.?

Noam, You ain't seen nothing till you've sat in the eighth row at the forum or any Philly venue back in the seventies. I watched Bennie Briscoe before he broke out and became a nationally named fighter. You could get sweat and blood on you several rows back. It never happened to me, but the ringside sportswriters where always getting splashed with sweat, and sometimes blood. Noam, I know you like to look things up and do research. Here's a question for you. There was a lightweight fighter from Atlantic City who was a real showboat. He was very fast, and could hit a little bit. His name was Augie Panatellas. I think he ran of a string of knockouts and was becoming quite a celebrity in the Philly and Jersey areas. I can't seem to find anything on him, though a lot of guys I know remember him. Why don't you do me a favor and research him.?

Steve, I have lost weight in the past but this time is different because of a couple of scary moments that made me realize I have to get the weight off, or else.

One time, after I had been eating better for months, I ate a jumbo bag of salty potato chips at one sitting, something I used to do regularly, and for about five days afterwards my heart beat raced and it didn't seem to slow down. I went to the doctor but by that time my blood pressure and heart beat had slowed down to normal. I also used to pass out for no reason, watching T.V. or something and go into a deep sleep regularly and although I wasn't tested for it that time, I think I could have likely been diabetic or with other blood sugar issues but that doesn't happen to me any more and I tested negative recently for diabetes or other blood sugar problems.

I would also, even after I had started exercising regularly, take a weekend off and binge on bad food on the weekend and on Monday I would go back on my diet and come Monday morning I felt like I had a hangover, which was impossible as I drink very little, so little in fact I can't remember the last time I had a beer. I haven't quit drinking but I just haven't been doing it.

I made an amazing discovery, junk food makes me sick now! It always did, but in a gradual way, but now my body rejects the food if I eat like I used to.

Hi Kent, My Grandmother and father both suffered from Diabetes, now my wife does. It is a very complex and not fully understood disease. My wife and I share and go to monthly meetings at West Jersey Hospital for a group meeting with a dr. who is a diabetes specialist. Actually, he's an Endocrinologist. A doctor who specializes in autoimmune and metabolic diseases. One side effect is Hypoglycemia, which is when your blood sugar becomes unstable and plummets to a low point where you could be in danger. Not Good! Are you on oral medication, or insulin. It could also be that your getting a little radical and carried away with your diet. When you've had as much success as you have, it's easy to get carried away with the diet and the long, pushing endurance stuff, like swimming 100 laps a day. Maybe you should take a week or ten days off from your diet and exercise regime. RELAX, EAT WHATEVER YOU WANT, JUST NOT TO EXCESS, AND STOP EXERCISING. Then, start hitting it hard again. Give your system a little shock!
If you've tested negative for Diabetes, yet you've actually passed out, it's not from eating too many salty snacks. Even if you've had a glucose tolerance blood test, where you have to fast, get blood drawn, then eat breakfast, and come back two hours later, it won't always pick up hypoglycemia. Hypoglycemia is almost impossible to diagnose. You could also be having an anxiety attack. Don't laugh, it happens to the best of us.

To belabor the point. If you actually lose consciousness, that's pretty scary. That's not something to dismiss. Maybe you should carry around some orange juice, or an apple. I guess you know that on a strict diet, vitamin supplements are very important. If your passing out, you better get to a doctor!!!

I used to pass out but I don't anymore and I haven't done so for a while. I did go to the doctor before recently, I took some tests and the doctor asked me if I drank a lot as my liver function was lower than normal. I have never been a big drinker and my recent tests show normal liver function.

I saw a program on television recently where a man who was physically fit ate nothing but McDonalds food for a month and he didn't exercise during the month either. He gained over 20 pounds in that month and his tests showed lower liver function. The program mentioned that junk food is not good for the liver, while not as bad as alcohol, it can damage the liver. That was a shock and while the program, "Supersize Me," didn't cause me to eat better, it is reminder about what I was doing to myself.

I'll try and find something on lightweight Augie Panatellas of Atlantic City. Thanks for the story about Briscoe; it was very interesting.
natural foods that have not been processed and have as little sugar and chemicals as possible. Don't have foods with preservatives and MSG (monosodiumglutonate - not Madison Square Garden). Drink plenty of water to flush the system. Eat plenty of raw garlic because it kills overgrowths of bacteria caused by an over sugary diet. When you don't have the sugar at first, you'll get tired and depressed. But keep going. Also, eating junk foods over and over again DOES detrimentally effect your liver. Your liver needs diversity, not processing the same substance over and over again. And if you stay off the substances you have exposure allergies to, for, say, 6 months, you can lose your sensitivity to them and eventually return to eating them.

Kent, ask your doctor for allergy tests. Keep going with your diet and exercise because in the end it is worth it. By the way, passing out in front of the television may have been the result of obesity. Your snoozing in front of the tv, perhaps with sleep apnea. You get less and less oxygen and then you pass out or wake up startled. Sorry for getting off the boxing subject.

Massimo, good to hear from you.

Jerry Quarry was one hell of a fighter. Amen!

Fan: Ali retired several times and kept coming back. Sugar Ray Leonard kept saying "this is it for me" but kept coming back. I predict, and I hope I'm right, that "Fan from Fandom" will break his retirement vow and have a comeback at this site. But your "final" post will be tough to top because it really sums it up, doesn't it? I'd love a T-Shirt with an action shot of JQ and the simple words: Jerry Quarry: Fighter.

Joel: These are interesting observations you make. I know that at the end, his cognitive ability was impaired terribly. But it's peculiar that physically, I thought he looked good and strong for his age. That CBS news report on him showed how badly he deteriorated mentally--he couldn't get the words out---but he was joking around with Ed Bradley and still had a boxing pose and could throw a mock flurry of punches. I wonder at what point could he have retired and not suffered so much damage. What fight or fights were the turning point when the brain damage was too much?

The Quarry family has had so many losses in such a short amount of time---yet based on their interaction with fans here, including that of Jonathan Quarry, Sabrina, etc., we see that the family foundation was and is solid. These seem to be really good people.

Well today is the superbowl. Two years ago I was at a boxing card the night before the superbowl and Michael "Let's Get Ready to Rumble" Buffer happened to be the MC at the event. I was waiting to pick up my car at the valet parking and Buffer was waiting for his car too. I struck up a casual conversation with him but when I said, "tomorrow is Let's Get Ready to Fumble," a silly joke about the superbowl and Buffer's signature saying, he gave me a funny look like I had said something really stupid, he didn't think what I said was funny in the
He sure had a fancy car, the kind which has a door that opens up like some sort of spaceship instead of sideways like most cars. How someone can get rich by just saying one line is beyond me but I am sure Buffer likely has a lot of money.

Panatellas was a popular journeyman in the featherweight division (born 02/16/44) who had 28 wins (20 ko's) and 6 losses in 34 fights. His most famous fights were against Bobby Chacon and Sammy Goss and all of his bouts were in Philadelphia. There are some stories on him at www.phillyboxinghistory.com. and they even have some of his old fight magazines.

Steve - I meant "popular journeyman" (not "journey").

If you keep this up, You and Jimmy D., who I think is the all time best Quarry authority, may become our official researchers. All you have to do is take the high ground when you get insulted by idiots.

Hi Steve. I'm not going to respond to anyone spoiling for an argument. I figure that all it does is annoy the Quarrys and that is unfair and ruins the aims of this site. Stop trying to make trouble here and go to another website please.

Hi Steve. I read that Tommy Hearns just won his second come back fight at age 47. He struggled to win. It's sad. What's he fighting for? Does he need the money? NFL is not as enjoyable to watch as rugby. I've never seen anyone so deliriously happy as your guys all because they gain a yard or two. Too much protective gear. Too many rest breaks. Some of those guys need to eat more salad, too. Only kidding.

Kent, if you are going to introduce the Super Bowl with "Let's get ready to fumble", you could introduce an Olympic marathon with "Let's get ready to stumble"; weightlifting with "Let's get ready to crumble"; a preacher begins his sermon with "Let's get ready to humble"; a presidential debate starts with "Let's get ready to mumble"; and a college exam opens with "Let's get ready toumble". Just a thought.

A SAD NOTE: I just read that Ron Stander who fought Joe Frazier (and did very well) in 1972 has been diagnosed with first stage dementia at age 60. I met Ron years ago and he was a very nice, modest guy. I wish him well. He was also a fine referee.

John, that is bad news for Ron Stander and his family and for the boxing world as well. They are in my heart and in my prays.
determination in his title bid. Stander had a lot of potential but he never really lived up to that potential because he often didn't train enough for fights but that is not the point because Puglistica Dementia can strike the most successful boxers as well as fighters below the elite of the sport. The disease is an equal opportunity offender.

One more reason for better safety measures for boxing such as mandatory brain scans that show any sign of permanent brain damage regardless of symptoms not being present. If a fighter shows any kind of damage, then the fighter cannot get a license to box anywhere.

Who is next? Tommy Hearns or Evander Holyfield? I have a feeling fighters such as these may already have some damage that is not apparent.

---

| 2/8/06 09:24:12 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron ||| 10 | Kent: Holyfield and Hearns puzzle me. I don't understand it at all. What are they doing, and why? |

| 2/8/06 01:27:30 PM | Steve | N.J. | NA ||| 10 | Kent, playing with you is no longer fun. You must know when I'm fooling around. You seem to have a very dry sense of humor. "Except when it comes to Pro Football, where you can be malicious." |

| 2/8/06 01:57:33 PM | Steve | N.J. | NA ||| 10 | Kent, I apologize. It was only last year when cruel fate and bad luck conspired against the Eagles to rob them once again! |

| 2/8/06 02:36:46 PM | Noam | same | same ||| 10 | Okay, Kent, just ignore me. I was trying to be civil by posting a response to your joke, but I won't bother any more. |

| 2/8/06 02:37:06 PM | Noam | same | same ||| 10 | Okay, Kent, just ignore me. I was trying to be civil by posting a response to your joke, but I won't bother any more. |

| 2/8/06 03:13:30 PM | Steve | N.J. | NA ||| 10 | Angelo, I'm surprised your puzzled about Holyfield and Hearns. I don't blame either fighter. Can you imagine what it must have been like for them at the top? I blame whoever is encouraging them to fight again, and what State Officials are sanctioning it. I sometimes think we should try to identify these so-called officials and promoters. Then we could be appalled at their lack of integrity. |

| 2/8/06 03:35:21 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com ||| 10 | Noam, I actually got a laugh from your post. It was quite funny. Sorry if I didn't respond to your comments. |

| 2/8/06 04:36:08 PM | Steve | N.J. | na ||| 10 | Noam, I hope your not from Australia or New Zealand, as these countries are mainly populated by Irish convicts. Most of whom where unfairly convicted. Now don't get mad at me as I'm currently trying to acquire info on Rugby, or football, or whatever. What exactly is a scrum? All I can see is thirty guys piled up, pulling at the ball, and trying to sneak punches in on each other. What exactly does this maneuver mean in terms of the progress of the game? |

| 2/8/06 04:56:58 PM | Max Hord | Fernandina Bch, Fla | maxhord@adelphia.net ||| 6 | Saw Klitsko/Byrd on ESPN, talking about their upcoming fight. I'm gonna pick Klitsko because he's bigger. Both guys are class acts out of the ring. Too bad they can't fight a little better. |

| 2/8/06 05:06:17 PM | Noam | same | same ||| 10 | Steve, not from that part of the world, but they do play rugby down there even though they are convicts. The scrum is a contest where the participants compete by trying to rake the football back with their feet. The guy in the middle of the scrum, with his arms around the guys on either side, is called the 'hooker' (only because he 'hooks' the ball back with his feet). |

| 2/8/06 05:16:17 PM | Steve | N.J. | NA ||| 10 | Apart from the sneaky punches in scrums, there are also plenty of headbutts. If you put your fingers in the wrong place, like near a mouth, you get bitten. There's lots of eye gouging, too. If the scrum collapses, it is tradition to fall knee first onto any opposition player unlucky enough to be beneath you. So, if the scrum does collapse, try not to be the first player on the ground as plenty of knees will surely follow, usually to facial environs. However, kicking an opposing player is poor manners and is not encouraged or applauded. If you get caught kicking someone, you get "an early shower" (ie sent from the field). If not for rugby, there'd be lots more violence on the streets. Most of the players are so tired or beaten up by the end of the game, there's no strength left to fight anyone off the field. And, anyway, after games are for beer drinking - and lots of it. The aim of the game is to win by scoring more tries (like a touchdown) and kicking more goals. The other aim is not giving away penalties by getting caught by the referee punching, headbutting, biting, eye gouging, or kneeing. It's okay to do it as long as the referee and linesman don't actually see you do it.

I hope I have given you an insight into rugby. Played in the right spirit, rugby encourages discipline and manners and fair play in youth playing the game at schools.

---

2/8/06 05:30:25 PM | Steve | N.J. | na | 10 | Kent and Angelo, what exactly would be the best avenue of attack. Macain, seems to be a rare animal. A political animal who actually cares about the exploitation and suffering of others more than He cares about his next political pole. He was a North Vietnam P.o.w. I know He's the real deal! Perhaps a letter of support for what He stands for?

2/8/06 06:54:14 PM | Steve | N.J. || NA || 10 | Noam, once again you disappoint me. How can a civilized person like yourself condone all that beer drinking after a close match between two well disciplined teams of drunken, Irish convicts?

2/8/06 07:15:21 PM | Steve | N.J. | na | 10 | Noam, Just for your personal edification, MOST decent Irish families have done away with the drinking of single malt whiskey for all children at breakfast and lunch. I wish that social rule was in effect when I was growing up!!

2/8/06 11:31:19 PM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Steve, the best whiskey is Jamison's Irish Whiskey, especially the gold label one. It melts in your mouth, passes easily over the tonsils, and leaves a honey after taste. The trick is to only have one or two.

2/9/06 11:55:42 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 | Ahhh... the virtues of having a Grandfather from Italy who introduced me to wine and beer when I was four. Actually, drinking bitter beer at that age is probably the reason why I'm not a big beer drinker now, so score one for Gramps. But I do like whiskey sours (Ginny that I am) as well as Drambui and Galliano (not sure about those spellings).

2/9/06 12:29:51 PM | Orange Juice | Lake Winniebago | SPOT | 7 | I like to drink orange juice. My favorite orange juice is Tropicana. I also like Minute Maid. Sometimes I drink 3 or 4 glasses a day to keep up my strength. Orange juice is a good juice, especially after a long day digging ditches. You know who else liked orange juice? Muhammad Ali. He still drinks 48-60 oz a day. Here is to Orange Juice!

2/9/06 02:24:39 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 | Orange Juice is very good but too high in calories---stick with 8 oz. a day or less if possible. Grapefruit or Grape Juice or even Apple Juice give you some of the same benefits. The purple grape juice is supposed to be healthy---some of the same benefits as red wine without the alcohol.

2/9/06 02:25:27 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 | Noam, in any of the Ali biographies you've read, did it make reference to him liking orange juice? I don't remember hearing that.

2/9/06 02:27:31 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 | Kent: Do boxers train with Orange Juice as part of the diet, or is it too acidic? I think the pre-fight program of Norton vs. Shavers showed him having breakfast. I'll try to remember to watch it again, but I think he did have orange juice, along with six eggs and other stuff. OJ started a good discussion. Thanks.
funktron

OJ: I agree with you that Tropicana is probably the best. But for something different try Welsh's. It's a little too sweet, but good. Also, Nantucket Nectars makes a good OJ and "Very Best" isn't bad either. |

OJ: I agree with you that Tropicana is probably the best. But for something different try Welsh's. It's a little too sweet, but good. Also, Nantucket Nectars makes a good OJ and "Very Fine" isn't bad either. |

Angelo, Ali never drank alcohol, but I'm not sure about orange juice. He was a glutton with food. Liked junk food and ate with his fingers. Talked lots, too (with his mouth full of food). Frazier didn't like orange juice. His drink was alcohol and, at times (past tense), drank too much of it. Foreman didn't drink. He ate. And ate. And then he gorged himself. Norton didn't drink. He lifted weights and trained. Bonavena looooved alcohol (and hookers at the Mustang Ranch). Liston hung with made guys from the Bada Bing. So did Marciano. They drank Galliano instead of orange juice. With Massimo Cini. |

Angelo, I have never heard if boxers cannot drink orange juice. I think the only problem with it would be too much of it during training because of calories, particularly if they are trying to make weight. Next time I get a chance to talk to a professional corner man I will ask him about orange juice. I have also wondered why boxers usually spit out water in the corner. I do know if they drink too much water during a fight that isn't good but drinking small amounts between rounds seems like it would be helpful. I am also going to ask a trainer why boxers spit water out between rounds. |

Angelo and Kent, Tyson didn't drink orange juice. He's a koolaid guy. Apparently, Ali drank orange juice when he was Clay. But when he became Ali, he took to drinking goat's milk to wash down the date pies. He didn't go the whole hog, though. :) |

Angelo and Kent, Tyson didn't drink orange juice. He's a koolaid guy. Apparently, Ali drank orange juice when he was Clay. But when he became Ali, he took to drinking goat's milk to wash down the date pies. He didn't go the whole hog, though. :) |

When Chamberlain and Ali got together, it was Ali not Chamberlain who was scared. He was yelling and ranting about what he was going to do. Chamberlain kept asking him, very calmly to just sign the paper and fight. Chamberlain kept saying come on big mouth, sign it. Ali kept talking and finally walked off the stage. There is know way he was going to take a chance fighting Wilt. After all could he pull his head down like he did to other fighters? Ali never was an inside fighter. I am not talking about Ed Jones, were talking about the Big Dipper. Ali would have fallen in six. |

Roger, although Wilt Chamberlain was a very gifted athlete and he may well have been a great boxer if he had started boxing when he was a teenager, Wilt just didn't have the experience and skill needed to beat someone like Ali. Not only do I think Ali would have won handily over Chamberlain I also believe our own Jerry Quarry would have knocked out Chamberlain. Jerry also had too much experience and skill as as boxer for Chamberlain to handle. |

Kent, you are kidding! Don't forget that Wilt Chamberlain was Wilt Chamberlain! You should know, you even stood next to him once. Wilt could have made love with 10 women, scored 70 points and knocked Ali' out in 1 round and all in the same day!!!!!!! I'm almost teetotal (dictionary). I rarely drink. I drink in special occasions. My favourite drink is probably beer. I like drinking beer when I eat pizza. But I drink a lot of water. I once read that Giorgio Eduardo Foreman used to drink too much alcohol when he was a teenager. I saw his fight for the gold medal in the 1968 Olympics and he was already very impressive.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>2/10/06 10:04:14 AM</th>
<th>Kent</th>
<th>Murrieta, CA</th>
<th>kentallenent@aol.com</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Massimo, yes Wilt was Wilt and he was great and yes I don't doubt he could make love to ten women, score 70 points in a professional basketball game but we all know what a specialized skill boxing is and it takes years to learn this craft.

Roger, Kareem Abdul Jabbar was also a very gifted basketball player and while he wasn't as physically strong as Wilt Chamberlain, he was actually a student of Bruce Lee in the martial arts and he was of course much bigger than Lee.

But by all accounts when the Lee and Jabbar would spar Lee got the better of Kareem because Lee had practiced his art his whole life, he was the master and Kareem was the novice.

The same thing applies to Ali and Chamberlain with Ali being the master and Chamberlain being the novice and the size difference between Wilt and Ali was much smaller than the difference between Lee and Jabbar.

By the way, Bruce Lee weighed at the most about 140 pounds.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>2/10/06 10:17:22 AM</th>
<th>Angelo</th>
<th>Washington, DC</th>
<th>funktron</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Any top-25 heavyweight and possibly even any top 100 heavyweight would dismantle Wilt without too much trouble. Honestly, I don't think it would even be that difficult. First, it's about defense. I think Wilt would have a hard time landing punches without opening himself up to be thrashed. He'd wind up to throw a hard punch and get hit about three to five times by a quick heavyweight like Ali or he'd get clocked with one hard shot by someone like Frazier or Foreman. Believe me, even a shorter guy like Frazier would find a way inside. Sure, Wilt could use his reach to pepper a smaller guy with jabs, but Frazier would bore in, take a few to give a few and start to take Wilt apart. Ali's tactics would be prettier, with more showmanship. I don't think Wilt would ever lay leather on an in-prime Ali. Ali would stay outside and hit him with a variety of lighter punches but the cumulative affect would still end with a KO or TKO. Conversely, one giant hook from Frazier, and it would be, "timber" for Wilt.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>2/10/06 11:40:01 AM</th>
<th>Massimo</th>
<th>Roma</th>
<th>4</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

All jokes apart, I think that Frazier would dismantle Wilt inside 4 rounds, Foreman would destroy him in 1 and Ali would win on points or on a late KO. Frazier and Foreman would have an easier time with Wilt than Ali! because they were hard punchers. An in-prime Mike Tyson would have destroyed Wilt with a quick body-head combination.

Wilt against Ernie "Wrong name" Terrell would have been interesting, but I would bet on Terrell. Anyway, who knows if Wilt could take a punch? I personally wouldn't be wilt enough to land a punch on Wilt's face!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>2/10/06 12:26:11 PM</th>
<th>max hord</th>
<th>Fernandina BCH</th>
<th>maxhord@adelphia.net</th>
<th>10</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Are you guys trying to say that wilt, walking off the court could do all these things to a professional fighter of the 70's? The guys you are talking about learned HOW to fight from early on. Without training like they did he wouldn't stand a chance in hell against any professional fighter. Butterbean would kick his ass.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>2/10/06 01:00:45 PM</th>
<th>Roger</th>
<th>Illinois</th>
<th>brm48@hotmail.com</th>
<th>8</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Chamberlain would have had a tougher time fighting either Joe Frazier or Tyson than he would of Ali. None of us can say for sure who would have won. My only question is, why did Ali refuse to fight Chamberlain? It would have been a great gate and all of us agree that Ali loved money. Chamberlain all but got down on his knees to get Ali to sign for a fight. I agree that it would not be that easy for a person to go from one sport to another (ask Michael Jordan), but Chamberlain was a very special athlete. I certainly do not want to offend anyone and state that the years of training that these great fighters put in would not make a great difference, but my question still remains. Oh, by the way I have been on a lot of sports websites and I appreciate the calm and intelligent manner of the people on this site.
Chamberlain would have had a tougher time fighting either Joe Frazier or Tyson than he would of Ali. None of us can say for sure who would have won. My only question is, why did Ali refuse to fight Chamberlain? It would have been a great gate and all of us agree that Ali loved money. Chamberlain all but got down on his knees to get Ali to sign for a fight. I agree that it would not be that easy for a person to go from one sport to another (ask Michael Jordan), but Chamberlain was a very special athlete. I certainly do not want to offend anyone and state that the years of training that these great fighters put in would not make a great difference, but my question still remains. Oh, by the way I have been on a lot of sports websites and I appreciate the calm and intelligent manner of the people on this site. | 2/10/06 08:51:34 PM | Ed | Cicero N Y | mooseygoop@aol.com | 10 | I agree a Chamberlain/Ali fight would be a joke. Ali would toy with him. Chamberlain couldn't beat even a halfway good amateur fighter assuming he came into boxing w/o a lot of experience. |
| 2/11/06 03:30:38 AM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca. | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Ed, it was Lyle Alzado who fought an exhibition with Ali but the difference between Alzado and Chamberlain is Alzado did have some amatuer boxing experience. |
| 2/11/06 09:34:57 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 | I always thought that drinking the water would make a fighter "cramp up." Ron Lyle would have knocked out Lyle Alzado in the first round. I don't care if Alzado fought an amatuer or not----he was a football player. In a real competition that both guys were trying to win hard, Ron Lyle would get it over with quick. Now, there is a chance that Alzado could take a punch like Tex Cobb---that being the case, he might make it out of the first round, but the fight would be stopped in the Joe Frazier has a new book out called 'Box Like The Pros' in which he canvasses training routines and other issues about boxing. Unfortunately, he does not discuss water intake. He does make some interesting comments about boxing in the 1970s. Joe says that "most historians think it was the deepest heavyweight division in history, and I agree. There were so many good fighters: Jerry Quarry, Oscar Bonavena, Joe Bugner, Earnier Shavers, Patterson, Ellis, Ron Lyle, Ken Norton, Jimmy Young, and George Foreman. And late in the decade there was Larry Holmes." Frazier then added, "For all of the good heavyweights in the seventies, the best overall fighter of the decade might have been Carlos Monzon."

Hey Noam, glad to hear old Smoking Joe is still trying to turn a buck, and is still trying to keep on keeping on. I know your not a Frazier fan. I apreciate the information that much more. An excess of water during strenious physical activity would probably cause nausea. Actually, cramping is the result of dehydration. So much for that subject. I thought it might create more interest, guess not.

Try using different contact sports into a single match is not logical or satisfying. I firmly believe A Pro. boxer of top fifteen caliber in an equivalent weight class would very quickly cut off and crowd any Martial arts or wrestler, or cage fighter, into a war of close quarters holding, butting, keeping your lead leg between theirs, and much stronger body punching.

Back in the 80's, they used to televise on cable, boxers vs. martial arts black belts. I watched a few times. These were street boxers, not credible pros. They were sparring partners at best, or trial horses/amatuers at worst. The martial arts guys were different disciplines, black belts. To make a long story short, I never saw a boxer lose. In fact, I never saw a boxer not win convincingly. Often, the martial arts guys would strike a pose—sideways—presumably to give the boxer less of a target. They would lead with their feet at times, and show a lot of hand movement. The boxers were patient, but would quickly move in, take limited punishment, and often deliver crippling knockout punches with wild hooks or uppercuts. Your idea about cutting off the ring is exactly right—the karate guys would get out of position and seem to forget defense when the boxer moved to cut the ring off. That's when the boxers could seem to hit them at will. Granted, these guys weren't Bruce Lee, but neither were the boxers George Foreman either.
throat is also not out of the question. All of these things are illegal in boxing but would be fair game if my safety was in danger. I would not even try to kick someone with a high kick, which is the kind that would be used in a match with rules, even if I could kick high now, which I can't. Boxers have not always won mixed matches as back in the 1960s, a Judo man and professional wrestler name Gene Labell fought and defeated the number four ranked light heavyweight in the world, who's name escapes me at the moment by choking him unconscious. Boxer have also lost in king of the cage matches more recently.

We forget that a boxer versus a karate expert, or whoever, would mean that the boxer doesn't wear gloves. The boxer would be bare knuckled. Every punch not only hurts or knocks you out, but it breaks the skin or, worse, a bone. Ouch. Splat. HUUUUUGE advantage. Secondly, a boxer's instincts and reflexes are second to none. A wrestler has no comparable reflexes. A karate guy is used to taking deep breaths and then 10 seconds of deep mental reflection before attacking his target, usually a motionless piece of wood (which doesn't punch back). A good boxer, however, easily evades those kicks and chops before delivering the final knock-out blow leaving the karate guy snoring.

Thirdly, all parts of the body would be a target. Low blows would be okay. Hit the karate guys in the cads ? No problem ! Imagine a Foreman uppercut to your lunchbox, before Ali jabs you to the throat. You'd be doubled over unable to breath. The karate guy wants out of there, PRONTO.

Fourthly, karate guys are used to taking opponents out very quickly. If a fight went more than a few minutes then I'd be surprised if Bruce or Chuck or Van Weasel or whoever would have the stamina to go 12 rounds. Imagine any black belt guy in the heat of Manilla going 5 rounds against Ali or Frazier. Or round 6. Round 7. ROUND 15. It wouldn't happen ! They'd either win in five seconds or die of exhaustion after being bludgeoned to a bloody pulp.

Finally, Steve, I've ALWAYS acknowledged the heart and bravery of Joe Frazier. I just believe that - rightly or wrongly - he was handled with kid gloves by his match makers. He didn't fight all the best available of his time. To highlight that point, how many of the 12 best of the 1970s named by Frazier himself did he fight ?

Anyway, the book by Frazier is very informative. It tells you how to fight a southpaw, etc, how to train, the mindset you need, etc, etc. He makes a lot of sense and there's none of that macho hubris that was in his earlier book when talking about Ali.

It must be acknowledged, and I'm sure Angelo agrees, that if any of us were in a ditch some place being attacked by barbarians (the Alamo perhaps, with Davey Crocket and Daniel Boone), Joe would be one of the first guys you'd pick to be beside you. As to that there is no doubt.

Nobody is gonna believe this, but I would love to see the Andre' vs Chuck Wepner fight fought in 1976, in which "The Midget" threw Chuck out of the ring in the third round. I think a Wilt vs Ali' fight would have been very entertaining to watch and that everybody in the USA at the time would have payed to see it. I wrote in the USA because I don't know how famous Wilt was out (or outside) of the USA at the time. Too bad they didn't fight !! Can you imagine the staredown before the fight ? A 3 round fight Wilt vs Ali' would have been also interesting. I don't think Ali' would have found a way to knock the big fella out within 3 rounds. HIs jab would have been useless against a 7'1" 1/16 guy. What an entertaining fight would have been ! Anyway, I knew that Wilt dodged Ali' and not the other way around.

What you say is true---without rules, it becomes a street fight. Some boxers might adapt well to that. In fact, Frazier and Duran come to mind. I still like a good boxer's chance in this scenario, especially without gloves. It becomes a matter of getting close enough and being able to take a few hard punches/kicks to deliver a punch or five. The martial arts expert would obviously win if he took out somebody's knee cap, but I still think a boxer might get to him faster than he could get to the boxer. It comes down to the skills of the individual participants---but my experience in and around gyms and studios is that boxers are plain tougher---they'll fight with a broken nose or a broken jaw, bruised ribs, etc. They are used to getting hit to deliver their own punches. The karate guys seem more theoretical---they have the knowledge of how to fight, but not the practical skills that come with really going full bore against someone. Average vs. average, the martial arts guy will freeze up when the boxer hits him hard and unless the boxer is hit with a crippling kick like you described, they actually seem to get stronger by taking a few blows.

2/14/06 08:10:34 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Noam, yes, I've expressed the same views about Frazier that you have, but yes, if I were walking a dark dangerous alley in Philadelphia, or for that matter, Tehran, there aren't many people I'd rather have watching my back than Frazier. Frazier might be old, with circulatory problems and near blind, but believe me, most 30 year olds in the best shape of their life wouldn't want to mess with the guy. I'm sure the left hook still has some steam in it.

2/14/06 11:22:25 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|One thing, a kick to the knee can be delivered outside of a man's reach and it is unexpected.I am not sure, especially in my current condition, which has improved but is nowhere near the kind of condition good boxers are in, if I could win out over a boxer who wanted to hurt me but the things I would try would give me a better chance of escaping without too much harm.Noam, the only time a karate guy would take a pause to take a deep breath before striking would be in a demonstration such as board breaking.I do believe that boxers are able to take more punishment and that most karate people know more how to dish it out than take it but in absence of potentially damaging one self to being able to take more punishment, martial arts give people a better chance of defending oneself in most situations.

2/14/06 02:11:27 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Kent: One more way to illustrate my point---if you take a bunch of upper middle class kids---strong kids (by kids, I'm saying 18-21, young adults) who have had a lifetime of martial arts training and match them against an equal number of inner city kids who have spent years boxing---if there are 12 even (weight) matches, my nickle would be on the boxing kids to win at least 10 of the fights. I think there is an inherent toughness in boxers to go along with their craft. My experience is that many, many people who have studied years of martial arts and moved up in all these belt classes haven't been tested the way even an amateur boxer has. I've seen these "competitions" and they seem more like exhibitions. It's all built on theory. Yes, balance and shifting weight is important. Yes, making yourself a smaller target is important. Yes, knowing points of distress on your opponents body is also important and so is the ability to deliver blows, cover up, move side-to-side, etc. When these guys get hit solidly in the face, the game changes. Calling on all of that training isn't easy when you're bleeding and the guy you're fighting is just warming up. That might be why I've seen more boxers win than karate figures.

2/14/06 02:58:26 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Angelo touches on a very pertinent point: most boxers turn to boxing because they come from tough streets and impoverished backgrounds. Boxing provides the only route out of the slums. And when taking that route they become accomplished street fighters before they become boxers. They know how to kick, scratch, bite, and absorb punishment long before they have their first fight in the ring. Meanwhile, martial arts guys were at the library writing plays or at the hairdressers getting blond streaks in their hair. They don't come from needy backgrounds. A bloody nose is a big deal to them. They haven't been in street fights and they lack the intrinsic toughness of those who have. Karate is a hobby, not a means to rise from the slums. They do it to impress their girlfriend or, more usually,
Boxers are tougher and hungrier. They've been in more fights - especially the ones where there are no referees to ensure fairness, and no ring doctors to make sure they aren't kicked to death. Martial arts guys are personal fitness trainers, poodle owners, folk singers, manicurists, make-up artists, lawyers, kindergarten proprietors, playwrights, underwear salesmen, hairdressers, and actors. Doing karate is a way of keeping their butts firmer in their spare time. Boxers box because they have no other options. They need to do it to feed their families and they built up their core fitness from fighting on the streets - not by visiting garish pink-painted designer gymnasiums where a pansy with permed hair named Arton is the resident tough guy teaching karate. Kick boxers, especially from Thailand, are the exception. They were raised in the gutters and are as tough as boxers. Kick boxers kick to the knees just as effectively as a karate champion. I've watched a lot of kick boxing and I can't remember seeing a fight stopped because someone has a sore knee. So forget about karate guys kicking boxers to the knee. It doesn't matter. Boxers fight through the pain barrier. The actors, hairdressers and the others doing karate feint at the first sign of blood. If they get a broken nose or a teeny weeny cut they head post haste to the plastic surgeon. Doctors love karate guys. They present with trivial injuries and never quivel at the outrageous bills they get for applying a band aid. Boxers have their own cut guys, usually someone named Bundini they found in the local rehab clinic. Lots of Hollywood types claimed to have black belts. Tony Curtis. Liberace. Rock Hudson. David Cassidy. Bay City Rollers. Wayne Newton. Oprah. Would you back any of them against Frazier or Jerry Quarry or even Joe Bugner? Of course not! I rest my case, your Honour.

There is something called special training, which is required attendance for advancement to upper ranks, which is something you have to experience to relate to it. It is only 3 to 5 days of intensive training but the experience is something hard to explain because it is a personal experience. In fact a man named Tom Muzila was brought in as a conditioning coach to help Lamon Brewster before he fought Wladimir Klitschko. I believe Muzila had a lot to do with Brewster's mental attitude in overcoming adversity in the ring. Muzila, who is a long time member of SKA and who also is a former Green Beret, is not a media star but he is one of the best trainers of body guards in the United States and one of the toughest, if not the toughest man I know about. Muzila is only about 5'10" 170 pounds and he is in his 60s now but I would not want to have to fight him in a dark alley as I can't think of many who could handle him he is that skilled and he is that tough. I hope one day to return to this type of training when I am physically ready.

However, there is a practical example of what I'm saying about karate guys compared to professional boxers. Take the archetypical 'wimp' - Woody Allen. If Woody took karate lessons for the required period - four years or whatever - he'd end up with a black belt. But you could put Woody in the Kronk gymnasium, train him 28 hours a day, pump him up with steroids, make him lift weights, and put Emanuel Stewart and Angelo Dundee in his corner, and, guess what? Woody would never make it as a professional boxer, no matter what you did. So, if Woody wanted to be a black belt karate, Kung Fu, or some other martial art, he could; but he'd never be good enough to box professionally and he'd never be licensed to do it.
Noam, to get what I am saying about how a lot of martial artists have lost track what real training is all about I suggest doing a google search on Tom Muzila and read some of his articles on things like pushing yourself and his mental approach to the arts. Not all martial arts schools have gotten soft. I trained with him in the mid 1970s and he is an extraordinary individual and the SKA organization is one of a kind. It is not common knowledge that he has been a consultant in Lamon Brewster's training camp. I knew this because a friend who runs a Shotokan of America studio and Tom himself, who teaches a class there once a month or so, told me so. If you notice how much punishment Brewster took before knocking out W. Klitschko than you get an idea the mindset of someone like Muzila helped Brewster with. Muzila is a real warrior, as I said he and others still carry on a Samouri spirit in their training and also as I stated, even though he is over 60 years old now, I wouldn't want to tangle with him. I doubt if Tom would even remember my name but he did know me when he saw me and I reminded him of my previous training. Really nice man too as he didn't have an attitude that I put on so much weight.

Angelo,Noam,Kent,and anyone else who responded to this crossing of fighting styles discussion.While I respect all your informative posts, I still think we are just kinda talking apples and oranges. I really agree with Angelo and Noam. A few years of martial arts does not prepare you for, wait, let me rephrase that. I gotta say, in an alley fight, where strangling and kicking and hitting with whatever's handy, I'd go with a Ranger with 16 months of hand to hand combat, and a Colt .45 auto. Just kidding.

As for my last post, I'd really rather pardner up with Mike Tyson in an alley fight.

For a job I was doing a few years ago, I was taught self-defence, disarming offenders who have knives and guns, etc, from a black belt karate guy. He was genuinely a big scary guy who taught arm holds, pressure points, and that type of thing, and more than once he nearly broke my wrist and nose. He made my ear lobes hurt by pinching them. Try it. While I have no doubt that this guy was the real deal, and that he was a good street fighter, I'd still rather be the guy with the gun in any fight I had with him or any other black belt holder. Give me a loaded gun and I become a black belt in every martial arts known to mankind. Heck, I'll take several of those guys on at once (with a loaded gun). The really misguided people who think they benefit from martial arts classes are women worried about being sexually assaulted. They are taught to knee an attacker in the marble halls, poke them in the eyes or the throat, ram a pencil up a nose, run their high heels down the guy’s shins, stomp on his toes, scream, and generally cause the attacker as much pain and discomfort as humanly possible. Problem is that if the attacker is someone like Mike Tyson, who gets off on pain, the girl has bigger problems than she started off with - black belt training or not. The pain stuff makes it more exciting and, suddenly, the game becomes much more dangerous than it would otherwise have been. I've forgotten what the central point is that I started off trying to make. I'll take a time out to think about that.

Kent - I'll do some google checks as you suggest. Thanks. Ali was, if not the best boxer in the world at the time, one of the top 2 or 3. You could certainly make a strong case that he was the best heavyweight. Wilt Chamberlain was a basketball player. I don't care how big or strong he was, his endeavor in life was throwing a ball in a hoop, not throwing punches and taking them. I've been hit by an average amatuer boxer. He was wearing 8 ounce gloves or heavier, and he was pulling the punches. His punches to my mid-section were very hard to fend off, even though my reach was better. To make a long story short, three rounds felt like ten, and even though the guy went easy on me, the next day, I felt like I was hit by a truck. Believe me, Ali could use one hand, and beat Wilt Chamberlain blindfolded. It's ridiculous to even consider Wilt having any chance at all to beat a heavyweight champion in boxing---a very silly notion. The fight wouldn't be close and wouldn't last long. If Ali took it seriously, it would be humiliating for Chamberlain. The idea was the stuff carnivals are made of.

| 2/15/06 07:09:34 PM | Steve | NJ || NA || 10 | yow, Angelo, jeez, take it easy! I'm just saying it would be a very strange encounter. I agree with you pro boxing is the most brutal of sports, mainly because of the strict discipline involved in training, but also the extremely high level of natural talent needed to get anywhere close to getting good fights, good money, or even getting heard of. |

| 2/15/06 07:11:43 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca || kentallenent@aol.com || 10 | Noam, yes having training, especially for most women who are not physically strong is no guarantee of safely warding off a strong attacker but the choice of doing nothing and having some form of defense, I would go with some form of defense as it increases the chances of surviving an attack. I know I have told this story before but briefly, years ago I was jumped by some guy who was likely on drugs who blind sided me as I was walking down the street. He jumped out from some bushes and he punched me in the side of the face. For a moment I was stunned and if he had hit me one more time I might been out. But for some reason he hesitated enough for me to somewhat regain my senses and when he came at me again I did try to kick him in the knee and I returned the favor by nailing him with a straight right hand that took down. The cops showed up because the owner of the house he was lurking at had called them to report a prowler and they arrived just in time to see me hit him back. They took me down and handcuffed me but let me go and arrested him because the home owner told them I was defending myself. By the way, I didn't kick his knee cap straight on with my kick but he was limping somewhat from my kick and I think it set up my punch effectively. |

| 2/15/06 10:33:48 PM | Noam | same || same || 10 | Kent, I agree with most of what you say, but guys on drugs are a very different scenario. If a guy is whacked out on heavy drugs like heroin or whatever, then he can take a lot of punishment and not feel it. It's not until the drug wears off that he realizes that he got beat up. Trust me; you can hit that guy to the face so hard you break bones, but he won't know it. A few years ago I caught one of these whackos breaking into my place with a knife. He'd only got out of prison that morning, got on the drugs, stole a van, and broke into seven other places before mine. Even had all the proceeds in the stolen van. I jumped on him, sat on his chest, and punched him until the cops arrived. He wasn't feeling any pain. It was unbelievable. You could have done open heart surgery on that guy while he was awake and he wouldn't have felt anything. Regards, Wilt, I agree with Angelo. While a fight with Ali would be weird, Ali would keep his distance and jab. Eventually, he'd land a combination and that'd be it. One of the great things about Ali was the way he could adjust to styles and win. He did that against Liston. He did it against Foreman. And he'd find a way against Wilt. Also, Ali had a jaw like a brick. He took Frazier's left hook full on and got up. Foreman hit him flush a few times. Hey, he went 12 rounds with a broken jaw with Norton. So it's a stretch to say Wilt would knock him out. It wasn't Ali ducking Wilt, either. Ali had more confidence than anyone alive. He fought them all, even going to the (ridiculous) extent of fighting that karate guy. Ali would have seen fighting Wilt as a challenge, not a risk. In my opinion, of course.
I agree that guys on the really strong stuff feel no pain and it gives them extra strength. It sounds like you were lucky to get the drop on him and get him down, thank God for that as it could have been very bad for you if you had let him up. The guy that attacked me might have just been drunk. All I know is that it was a very scary situation that I hope I don't have to go through again. I tell you, he really dazed me but I guess I took his best shot and was still believing, one more and I would have been out and I am quite lucky he hesitated otherwise I could have been in really trouble.

Kent, I was lucky that I was bigger than him and, rather than using drugs like his habit, I was athletic. I've never used drugs. He had the knife in a handkerchief in his pocket. It was a huge handkerchief that was supposed to be used like a glove to avoid fingerprints being left. I didn't realize he had a knife in it until I heard a metallic sound as he placed it on a step. It was quite funny really. Imagine this. I'm sitting on his chest, punching him in the face, trying to stop him reaching over to the step to pick up the knife. Meanwhile, the elderly Italian in the unit next door, comes out to see what the commotion is all about. By then, I was starting to run out of puff and I'm telling the Italian, "Ring the police, ring the police." The elderly Italian goes away and comes back and says, "I ringa the polizia but they no understanda whata I say." Well, hit me in my fat head with a sledgehammer. Where was Massimo when you need him? I replied, with no patience whatsoever, panicking somewhat, while tiring out punching in the head this drugged-out imbecile who can't feel a thing, "Well, ring them again." Eventually, the cops understood him. They came. Ironically, the cop who turned up used to play football with me in the juniors. His name is Paul Cahill, the funniest guy I know. Which was bad news for the drugged out thief. Boy, did he cop it! The end of the story was that I did my L5 S1 disc in my back and I had surgery to remove it. That's why I swim (and walk) a lot now. To keep my weight in check and take strain off of my back. The druggie got sent to prison. Again.

Nobody can beat Calvin Lane in a street fight. He makes Wilt look short and Shaquille O'Neal look tiny (or tiny). He is over 400 pounds but not fat, 7'5" 1/2 in height, a mountain of muscles. He is the biggest body gard in the world and an actor. Oh, I almost forgot, he has a black belt in karate (to better defend himself...). He would be an unbelievable wrestler, he would make Big Show look Small Show. I was (or got) never involved in a street fight.

Mouthpieces are very uncomfortable. Try putting one in your mouth for 3 minutes and get hit two or three times. As soon as you take it out it's normal to want to rinse your mouth out. I don't think any trainer would give a fighter too much water because he is trying to tell his guy what to do and not to do in 1 minute. Taking out the mouthpiece is just a formality. Also the fighter can respond back to the trainer better when his MP is out.

Correction on my last post: Jumpity Bruce could take Calvin Lane in a dark alley!
on him in a dark alley with a club. |

As for the Eagles, long live Jaws and Wilbert Montgomery! |

Massimo is the type that would know how to take care of himself. If someone broke into his house, rather than go through the trouble of fighting the person, Massimo would just throw a pot of boiling coffee in the poor devil's face and be done with it. I'm sure he'd get the job done! |

Massimo would be a Mission Impossible type of fighter. He'd be very intelligent about how he got you and it'd happen when you least expect it. He'd be bouncing laser beams off space stations before he'd get you between the eyes with it. I'd be careful about upsetting Massimo. |

Did someone mention resurrecting the Great Frazier debate? |

It wasn't me, it wasn't me. But since you ask, why didn't he ever fight Bobick? |

Massimo would have fared against Frazier? I don't think Bobick had good enough defense and he didn't take a shot well so an early round knockout for Smoking Joe would be the result. As I have stated before, Duane Bobick was a good fighter who had a fairly good punch and he was strong but he lacked good defense and he didn't have a good chin. But he was good enough to beat most of the fighters at the bottom of the top ten or just below top ten contender status handily. He beat guys like Chuck Wepner and Scott Ledoux without too much trouble and both of those guys fought for the title. |

Angelo, if you want me to add Bobick's name to our list, I'll have to upgrade my computer with more memory. How much memory have you got left on yours? Perhaps we should make you the official archiver. :)|

If I remember correctly, this Duane Bobick beat Larry Holmes when they were amateurs. |

Massimo: Yes, Bobick beat Holmes in the amateurs, around 1971 or 1972. I've seen the fight. Holmes looked very skinny back then and Bobick was stronger and just used power to win. As pros, Holmes would have destroyed him. I didn't mean to slight Bobick and you're right, he was good enough to beat many of his contemporaries. I don't actually think he had a glass chin---but his defense was not good enough to fight the top of the top. Norton and Tate exposed him. I actually think Bobick would have given Ali some trouble around 1976-77. By this time, Ali didn't have the power he once had, as he could only manage a KO against Richard Dunn and not against a whole slew of others. Thus, I think Bobick would have avoided an early KO. Bobick had the style to make Ali work hard to earn a win. If Bobick trained extremely hard, and had the wind to go 15 rounds, I think he'd pose a problem for Ali, though I think he'd still lose. Against Frazier, post Manilla, Bobick would have a chance. But prime vs. prime, Frazier would go through him like a buzzsaw. |

Thanks Angelo, I think it happened in the year 0 (1972) at the Olympics or at the Trials. |

Bobick was a world class fighter at about the lower part of the top ten or just below that level as a professional and he was a very good amateur who did have a win over Holmes, I think in the olympic trials. But yes Holmes had not yet matured into the fighter he would become. People also forget that Bobick had a win over Teofelio Stevenson as well before the Olympics. Most people just remember Bobick losing to Stevenson in the olympics. I know he was rated in the top five as a pro, probably going into the Norton fight as he was undefeated, but he was exposed as having some flaws at that high level. I do believe that his chin was suspect as he seemed to crumble when Norton and Tate hit him. His defense at the high levels of the division was not good enough either as he was hittable.

I really like that Quarry's record and his fightclips are here. Sounds like there are some Philadelphia guys here. I grew up near there. Larry Holmes and Joe Frazier are my guys for boxing. I really like Joe's clip with Quarry. Wilt is may favorite Philly athlete. He is not just another hooper. Track was his best sport. He highjumped 6-9 in college. He could have played in the NFL too. I think he could have been ranked in boxing with just a few years work. I think alot of people would have liked to have seen him fight. I have heard of Jerry Quarry, he went a long way as a small heavyweight. Go Sixers and Pacers! THX.

Welcome Frank, Wilt is also a favorite of mine as he played for the Lakers. He seemed like a really nice guy too. He gave me an autograph when I was about ten years old and I think he was in a hurry as it was after a public workout at the L.A. Forum and he and back up center Mel Counts walked right by me and they stopped after I asked Wilt for an autograph. After they signed for me, I heard Counts say to Wilt, "the coach wants us back there now because we have a tight schedule." They may have been in hurry to get to their meeting or to get ready to go to the airport or whatever but Wilt still took the time to stop and sign his name for me. This was the first time I ever thought of my father as being short as he was about 5'6" and those guys looked like trees standing next to him.

In regards to the boxer vs karate debate a boxer would win if he gets close enough to take away the karate experts kicking ability.

Frank: I live near DC now, but grew up in Northeastern PA, about 90 minutes north of Philly. I was close to Easton and of course that means Larry Holmes! As a kid, Ali was my guy, but Holmes took the torch from him and gave us a Champion to really be proud of, something that we haven't had since (with the exception of Lennox Lewis, who seems like a decent guy). Yes, Bobick was a Minnesota guy. The loss to Norton made a joke out of him, and that isn't fair. He could fight. He wasn't in the class of Jerry Quarry or other perennial top 10 guys, but as Kent pointed out, he was in or around the Top 10 for a couple years and that's not easy to accomplish.

It is that whole white hope nonsenses that is a joke, not Bobick and as Angelo points out it was not fair to Bobick. So he got knocked out in the first round, so join the club. Norton himself got knocked out early before the second round a few times and nobody thinks he was a joke and Earnie Shavers suffered the fate against our own Jerry Quarry in the very first round. Also as pointed out many times in the great Frazier debate of 05, Joe Frazier went down six times in less than two rounds verses George Foreman and Frazier was hardly the laughing stock of the heavyweights in his time. Duane Bobick should be recognized for what he was as a fighter, a fighter with the skills to take him to the top of the amatuer ranks and to the top ten as a professional and to those white fans who may have thought he somehow let them down, what have they ever accomplished that even compares to what Bobick did?

Hey, Hey, Kent, don't start flirting with racial assumptions. I wasn't a white fan dissapointed in D.Bobbick, I, As well as every semi intelligent fight fan at that time, knew he was not for real. By the way, don't be so vociverious in his defence. How do you know what his critics have done in real life.

Hey, Hey, Kent, don't start flirting with racial assumptions. I wasn't a white fan dissapointed in D.Bobbick, I, As well as every semi intelligent fight fan at that time, knew he was not for real. By the way, don't be so vociverious in his defence. How do you know what his critics have done in real life.

Kent, in the time frame we speak of, There only a few fighters capable of actually physically defeating Ali, Frazier, Foreman, Norton, and Quarry. This may sound like "what if". Okay, Frazier is alliminated. Give Norton, Quarry, just one more shot at Ali, and who knows what could happen.

Steve Vociverous? VOCIVEROUS? Last time I used a big word that no one understood I got accused of racism and had to spend weeks trying to clear my name. So, by my own volition, I've taken big words out of my repertoire to avoid any misunderstandings. From now on I'm gonna post like a plebian without pleonasm. (PS. It's actually spelt v o c i f e r o u s.)

Steve, no I don't think most white fans felt Bobick "let them down" but some probably do and I think he was more succesful at what he did than most of them and he accomplished more than I ever have also. I know he was a flawed fighter but he was not a joke he did the best he could and if he fell short of expectations, then that is nothing to be ashamed of.

Steve: I don't know if white fans felt that Bobick "let them down" but I do know that white and some black fans joked about his one round loss to Norton. It was fodder for late night hosts and even that jackass Richard Dawson made some joke about Bobick not being able to stand for a minute (the fight ended in 58 seconds). And Kent is right about one thing—Bobick made it to the Top 10 in his weight division, in the world. He did beat some ranked fighters and he was an Olympic medalist. Many of the fans who joked about him couldn't say that they were in the Top 10 in the world at their profession, and that's assuming they actually had jobs. I guess I'm one of the gullible ones who thought Bobick was a special talent. It was by no means "pulling for whitey" as I've said many, many times that Ali and Holmes were my favorite fighters---but I watched Bobick progress for a couple years out of the Olympics, watched him build an undefeated record and beat a couple decent guys along the way---he had a punch and seemed to have stamina. I was shocked that Norton took him out so quickly and convincingly. Then, John Tate put the exlamation point on it. Still, Bobick made a living boxing and was world ranked---he had his fame and that's more than many can say.
you use the big word in context, it doesn't matter, unless someone doesn't understand the meaning, misinterprets it, and then you're in trouble. Like I was. The heavyweight division is very boring over recent years. It's very hard to get interested in it. It's like, who cares, who even knows their names, who could be bothered about them. Apart from Toney, none are colourful, none capture your attention. It's hard to like them or hate them. They're all just neutral, uninteresting, lowly talented, overpaid, underachieving type of guys. If Joe Bugner was fighting today, he'd be an excitement machine, comparative to the others. Heck, wrestling is more exciting than the current bunch.

|2/21/06 05:25:10 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Noam: The division is in a sorry state, when someone like Ruiz can hold a title and be relevant for so long. The Klitschos are a curiosity at best. Toney isn't a legitimate heavyweight. Holyfield has become a liability for the sport. So has Bowe. Tyson represents unfulfilled potential and is too old to matter now. Geez, I never thought I'd long for the days of Lennox Lewis---I considered him boring and vulnerable---but he's looking like a great champion now. I do hope some good young talent is on the horizon. |
|2/21/06 06:32:45 PM|Noam|same|same||10|Angelo, I think the last time I was looking forward to a heavyweight fight and was excited at the prospect of it was Holyfield v Tyson. That's a long time ago. The guys today I don't know their names or, if I do, I can't spell it because I'm not interested in reading about them. It's a shameful mess. Where are all the heavyweight prospects? Jail? Playing other sports? |
|2/21/06 06:39:37 PM|steve|NJ||NA|||10|Noam and Angelo, you're both on the mark. There doesn't seem to be the kind of electricity that I remember when Tyson's face was on the cover of Sports Illustrated back in the eighties. I thought, for a short time, and even tried to talk him up, that Samuel Peters was the second coming. Guess I was wrong about that one.|
|2/22/06 02:21:50 AM|Ed|Cicero N Y||mooseygoop@aol.com||10|Looks like Joe Mesi is going to be fighting again. I personally hate to see it. http://sports.espn.go.com/sports/boxing/news/story?id=2334408|
|2/21/06 04:01:09 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|I must admit I don't know for sure who the heavyweight champions are. Nicola Valuev is one of them and then? Is Chris Byrd champion? I don't remember. Is Kent's brother Giacomo Toney champion? Idem, I don't remember. There are too many weight divisions and belts, people get confused. The last exciting fight I saw was Toney-Holyfield. I think Nicola Valuev brought back some interest in the division by beating Giovanni Ruiz. I'm curious to see what the big fella can do. After all, he is not that much shorter than Wilt! "andreer" means shorter in Ceylon slang! |
|2/22/06 08:05:17 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron||10|Valuev managed the win over Ruiz---kudos for that. Many of the East Bloc heavies seem to be huge and physically gifted, but in a bizarre way, they are like characteratures (is that spelled right)? poor parodies of the big Russian from Rocky IV---they seem robotic and lacking heart and street smarts. The rebuttal to that should have been Andrew Golata, who gave two amazing performances against Bowe, who was one of the best heavies of his time. Golata's faults spoiled everything, but he fought with heart and purpose. I thought he was going to use those fights as a springboard. I was excited about Golata-Lewis, but we all know how that ended. I would take a smaller street smart guy like Jimmy Young over a seven foot tall, 300 pound solid Russian with all these great talents---when the bell rings, sometimes these physical advantages don't mean as much with heavyweights. |
|2/22/06 02:33:09 PM|Noam|same|same||10|Massimo - if you look back at the title holders in the 1970s, you see that there is only one champion in every division. There's none of this alphabet title stuff. |
|2/22/06 08:05:17 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron||10|Valuev managed the win over Ruiz---kudos for that. Many of the East Bloc heavies seem to be huge and physically gifted, but in a bizarre way, they are like characteratures (is that spelled right)? poor parodies of the big Russian from Rocky IV---they seem robotic and lacking heart and street smarts. The rebuttal to that should have been Andrew Golata, who gave two amazing performances against Bowe, who was one of the best heavies of his time. Golata's faults spoiled everything, but he fought with heart and purpose. I thought he was going to use those fights as a springboard. I was excited about Golata-Lewis, but we all know how that ended. I would take a smaller street smart guy like Jimmy Young over a seven foot tall, 300 pound solid Russian with all these great talents---when the bell rings, sometimes these physical advantages don't mean as much with heavyweights. |
|2/22/06 08:05:17 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron||10|Valuev managed the win over Ruiz---kudos for that. Many of the East Bloc heavies seem to be huge and physically gifted, but in a bizarre way, they are like characteratures (is that spelled right)? poor parodies of the big Russian from Rocky IV---they seem robotic and lacking heart and street smarts. The rebuttal to that should have been Andrew Golata, who gave two amazing performances against Bowe, who was one of the best heavies of his time. Golata's faults spoiled everything, but he fought with heart and purpose. I thought he was going to use those fights as a springboard. I was excited about Golata-Lewis, but we all know how that ended. I would take a smaller street smart guy like Jimmy Young over a seven foot tall, 300 pound solid Russian with all these great talents---when the bell rings, sometimes these physical advantages don't mean as much with heavyweights. | lightweight etc. And there was no cruiserweight. In the 1970s we had 7 title holders all up; now we have 45 or more champions. Just to have been a challenger for the title in the 1970s (like Jerry) and earlier was more of an achievement than actually winning a title today, given that many more titles are on offer in many more weight divisions. There needs to be a revolution in boxing where one body takes charge. By all means keep all the weight divisions, but cut it back so there's only one title in each division. Unify the whole damn thing!

Hey Angelo. All those eastern bloc fighters have huge strutting jaws, almost as big as the jaw of French female tennis player Amelie Mauresmo. Perhaps they all eat the same breakfast cereal. That's true that watered down champions has ruined boxing. Back in the old days everyone knew who the champion of each division was. Even when a mediocre champion, such as Ezzard Charles, fought almost everyone followed it. A lot of heavyweight fights were front page news. I saw an old newspaper of the Liston/Patterson fight and it had over 4 full pages of fight pictures. Unless we get a superstar like Mike Tyson again I don't think we'll ever see boxing rise to the heights it once was. I guess the greed of the promoters wanting to call a fight a title fight when it's not close to being that is to blame. Also they have more and more good fights on pay per view. I mean, people barely watch it when its free how do they expect to expose superstar fighters to the general public when people have to pay extra to see them? I wonder too, if the ultimate fighting cage matches has sort of pushed boxing back. Its caught on big time with the younger people and its much more violent. Everybody knows that a boxer wouldn't have a chance against the top guys in that sport and thats what boxing is all about...seeing who the toughest fighter is.

Also, Ed, a lot more people make money the way it is today. The WBA, WBC, et al, all get their sanctioning fees. Judges and referees get paid more for title fights. If the fights are overseas, they get airfare, hotel bills, a paid holiday. Title fights, however hollow, fill tv time slots, etc. The more the merrier for promoters and sanctioning bodies. It's all a big con job on the boxing fan. | I grew up in Coatesville, west of Philadelphia. Please don't get me started on the Eagles. Larry Holmes, along with Joe Frazier, was my guy. The great boxer and the great puncher. I have no idea who the top guy is now. Whoever he is, he's not that good. I did like Lewis alot and was a big Klitschko fan, now both are gone. It's funny, now there are so many belts and so few real champs. Back in the day, you had real champ-types and one or two belts. Oh well.

Oh also, don't be too hard on Bobick or some of these other guys because they could not beat Holmes or Norton. Like the man said, he still got pretty far. That would like jeering someone because they can't guard Allen Iverson. How many can? You know, take your turn at it. Kent I remeber Wilt with the Lakers too. I'm into classic NBA alot. They won 69 games with him in 1972 and he was hardly trying to score then. Thx.

Frank, yes Wilt was an amazing basketball player and even though in his last few years he didn't focus on scoring, if the team needed it he could still go out and get 40 points almost as if on demand.Wilt led the lead in some category for every full year of his career. The only year he didn't lead in some category is when he broke his leg early in a season and he only played about 25 games.Even in the years when he wasn't scoring a lot he still led in things like field goal percentage, rebounding, and even one year he led in assists.Coatsville... wasn't there a lighter weight guy in the 80's from your town named Calvin Grove? I remember seeing him on ESPN a couple times. I don't know what ever happened to him. He might have been weltherweight???Let's limit the spelling corrections to easy words like potatoe.I am the greatest of all time. I was robbed against Ali, I beat Foreman easily, and I whooped Frazier in sparring.Jimmy Young was a very good fighter but if he got the best of Frazier in sparring, it was probably towards the end of Joe's career as I don't believe Jimmy was ready to do battle with Joe before about 1975.Jimmy didn't fully live up to his potential until then as he had a lot of losses before that point.Jimmy didn't have a long prime as he also was beaten a lot of times after his prime but when he was a his best, he was very good.I had heard that Frazier KO'd Norton repeatedly in sparring, and that he broke Holmes' ribs, but I never knew he sparred against Jimmy Young. Jimmy was very clever. I think he'd have given Frazier a tough fight.Add on to Jimmy Young, I think the problem with Jimmy later in his career is he tried to get in and punch more, he went away from his style because people had criticised his stick and move style and it cost him.The exception was his fight with Gerry Cooney and because even though Young was past his prime, for almost four rounds he kept Cooney off stride.I remember thinking about Cooney, "this is the guy the are making so much fuss about?"
But then Cooney caught up to Young and he opened up a big cut above Young's eyes and the fight was stopped on cuts for a TKO win for Cooney.I based the fact that an over the hill Young had boxed circles around Cooney until Cooney caught him and if Young could out box him for even a few rounds, an in prime Larry Holmes would be able to take Cooney. Thanks to Jimmy Young, I was able to win some money betting on Holmes to beat Cooney.Greg Page is near death in a Louisville hospital. Suffering from seizures, hypothermia, and respiratory failure. I saw an interview with him a few years ago and he was out of his mind. The recent fight between Scott Pemberton and Peter Manfredo, after viewing the interview with Pemberton, I wondered how a commission would grant him a license to fight. He would lose his train of thought mid-sentence. I am afraid Mesi may end up this way as well; he is really not that good. He should walk away with what he has and call it a day.
What's the deal with orange juice? It reminds me of the first Tunney - Greb bout, which I did not attend. Tunney was so battered by Greb his handlers mixed orange juice with whiskey during the bout and made him drink it instead of water... to dull the pain.

2/25/06 07:04:47 PM| Kent| Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10| My heart goes out to the Page family. Yes I am not sure how some of these fighters get licenses to fight. Even though the rules need to be stronger to make boxing safer, there are rules on the book that you would think would at least prevent people like Greg Page from fighting past the time when he should have quit but what good are rules if the commissions don't enforce them?

2/25/06 07:04:47 PM| Kent| Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10| We need a national commission now and for other countries to honor suspensions because even if we have a strong commission here in the States, what good is that if a fighter can travel out of the country and fight there?

2/25/06 07:04:47 PM| Kent| Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10| Bob B you are right, Joe Mesi, if he fights, is a tradey waiting to happen.

2/25/06 07:04:47 PM| Kent| Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10| I remember back in 1983 our own Jerry Quarry, Bobby Chacon, and Tex Cobb were given brain scans and both Jerry and Chacon showed signs of permanent damage but no outward symptoms yet but the California commission allowed Jerry and I think Chacon also to fight after this. They should have never been allowed to fight again after this test.

2/25/06 07:04:47 PM| Kent| Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10| Another sad note to the Page tragedy is the fighter that put him in that shape has been accused of murder. CINCINNATI -- Former heavyweight boxer Dale Crowe has been indicted in the death of a man whose body was found in a trash bin. The 29-year-old Crowe was arrested Thursday outside the Hamilton County courthouse after he had made an appearance there on an unrelated misdemeanor. Prosecutors accuse him of killing Frank Branam, 23, of Cincinnati. Crowe faces charges of aggravated murder, murder and aggravated robbery. The victim's relatives told investigators that Branam was last seen with Crowe on Aug. 10, 2002. His body was found in a trash container a month later. The victim's sister, Amanda Mappes, 30, said she and her brother grew up with Crowe. Crowe, who was being held on a $1.6 million bond, defeated former WBA heavyweight champion Greg Page during a March 2001 fight in Erlanger, Ky. Page, sustained traumatic brain injuries during the bout, slipped into a coma and then had a stroke during post-fight surgery. He was paralyzed on his left side and has had to use a wheelchair since.

2/25/06 11:07:28 PM| Noam| same||same||||10| Angelo, I'll check up but I think Calvin Grove was a lightweight or featherweight. If my memory serves me right, he fought for a title against Jeff Feneck, the Australian, but lost. I think that Grove was working as a deputy in your country then and that he is still doing that now. I'll find out.

2/25/06 11:07:28 PM| Noam| same||same||||10| I'm sorry to hear about Page. Unless that make changes like Kent suggests, every generation of boxers will have their own sad cases.

2/26/06 04:20:18 AM| Ed| Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@aol.com|||10| 2 questions, please. First, how would Joe Frazier have done against a good, big heavyweight like Riddick Bowe? Second, does anyone think it would be good to establish an automatic limit on how long any fighter can be licensed and fight? How about 5 years? Thanks.

2/26/06 04:20:18 AM| Ed| Cicero N Y||Mooseygoop@aol.com|||10| Somebody wrote: "I remeber Wilt with the Lakers too. I'm into classic NBA alot. They won 69 games with him in 1972 and he was hardly trying to score then." Hardly trying to score then? Hmm, that must have been Wilt Smith, then, or Wilt Jones, or maybe Wilt Johnson. Never Wilt Chamberlain.
I think Frazier would have his hands full with Bowe or Lewis---good, big, skilled heavies. At the same time, I don't think either of these guys approach the power of George Foreman in his prime, so I wouldn't necessarily be looking for a quick KO. Frazier was relentless and had a bigger heart, I think, than Lewis or Bowe. This is really tough to call---I have a weird feeling that Frazier might find a way to get inside against Lewis and lay him out with a hook. Bowe should have the size and skills to beat Frazier, but if he came in lazy (as he did against Golata), he'd be out of wind by the sixth round, and Frazier would just be getting started. I think Bowe would have a legitimate chance to KO Frazier, but after watching over 20 snoozing rounds of Lewis-Holyfield, I don't think Lewis would hurt Frazier.

Hello Pat,
yes Wilt Chamberlain did score points while he was a Laker but he wasn't focusing on scoring as the most he ever averaged for a full season while a Laker was 20.7 points a game and he only averaged 14.8 points a game for the championship year in 1971-72 as compared to over 30 points a game for his career average. Wilt was playing more like Bill Russell by that time, concentrating on defense and trying to get the Lakers championships.

In his other championship year with the Philadelphia Seventy-Sixers he averaged about 24 points a game, also below his career average. But Chamberlain could get a lot of points almost any time he wanted to if the team needed it.

Given the recent worsening of the physical condition of former heavyweight boxing champion Greg Page, who lives in Louisville, both the AAIB and the Jerry Quarry Foundation hope that all efforts will resume to secure the passage of Senate bill 148 to establish a national boxing commission. As you well know, you voted against this bill last November. Please keep in mind that the establishment of such an entity can help prevent such a tragedy of this magnitude from occurring. Please get this bill through the House.

Thank you for your time and effort regarding this issue.

Sincerely yours,

GEORGE OTTO, Esquire

Mr. Otto: As usual--clear, to the point and persuasive. Thank you for looking out for the athletes we follow. It's a weird paradox---boxing fans (I count myself in that group) patronize the sport and through our interest, generate millions of dollars in purses, whether by buying tickets or driving up television ratings. We build our own "relationships" with the fighters, even though we rarely meet them. By supporting the sport, in a sense, we're enabling tragic outcomes like the Greg Page injuries. But with that said, the sport still does a lot of good for youth and though it's a high risk activity, there are many other risky sports that people participate in. Banning boxing isn't the answer---I think you've found the answer, and it's reforming boxing with common sense measures such as those that Kent has mentioned, along with the badly needed establishment of a national commission to provide closer oversight of the sport. When people counter by saying "That isn't going to prevent deaths and serious injuries" my response is that it might not prevent terrible things from happening, but it will give us reason to believe the frequency will be whittled down. If these measures you suggest stop even a small percentage of tragic head injuries from occurring, it's all worth it. This isn't an all or nothing proposition---if it helps SOME boxers, that's good enough for me.

Kent: I wonder if it would be legal to ban the closed circuit showing of fights held outside the U.S. if the fighters failed to meet U.S. competitive standards? This being the case, it would take out the incentive for promoters to go overseas or to South America for example, to stage a fight (if they were counting on an American audience to generate revenue). In your opinion, would the standards speak strictly to the physical condition of the fighter, or would the matchmaking itself be questioned? In other words, if it were determined that Riddick Bowe shouldn't fight a young tiger (because Bowe's reflexes and cognitive ability are too diminished to be competitive) would it be okay to match him instead against Tyson, another guy who is slower and less powerful than he used to be? I'm wondering if opponent selection plays into whether someone is allowed to fight or not?

I think the U.S. shouldn't take fights that don't meet high standards of safety even if it means losing T.V. money. That we shouldn't let those fights into our markets.

I have a feeling that both Tyson and Bowe might have permanent brain damage, even without symptoms and that no fighter should be allowed to fight with any sign of permanent brain damage.

Do you remember the article in Sports Illustrated that Jerry, Bobby Chacaon, and Tex Cobb took brain scans and both Jerry and Chacon showed permanent brain damage?

Well I know Jerry still had his wits about him but he still should not have been granted a license after taking this exam but I think he actually had three fights after this.

I met Chacon about a year and a half ago and it was like talking to a child he was in such bad shape. Maybe if he was denied a license he might not have the damage he now has.

people (including Eddie Futch from a few years ago) claim that Bowe does show signs of permanent brain damage. In fact, Bowe himself acknowledged that his verbal reactions are "slower" than they used to be. Many tend to forget that as an Olympian and young professional, and even as a young champion, Bowe was very conversational and animated. As well, for a guy without formal education, he was well spoken. Now, he slurs his speech and seems to struggle sometimes to find words. He's not himself. He's still a great athlete and with all-out training and prep, I'm sure he can still fight, but it's not in his own best interest. I think Riddick Bowe, deep down, is a good guy who has had some bad things happen to him---and has made some very poor judgements---and at the root of it might be the head trauma he's suffered.

It's not only Tyson and Bowe. Try understanding what Holyfield says when he's talking. Same with Frazier. They both slur their words and it's hard to know what their saying.

And these are the guys who were at the top of boxing. We never get to hear from the boxers who were middle to low ranking. You'd expect that more of them would be damaged from the sport than the elite guys.

Sorry I don't remember hearing about a Calvin Grove. I mostly watch the bigger fighters unless it's a name I've heard. Joe would have KOd Lewis no knock on Lewis. Bowe I'm not sure about. Seems like he was champ for ten minutes. He could have been a great one I think. Jimmy Young is another of my Philly heavies. Too quick for Ali and could box Foreman. There was some talent there too. He would never try Joe though. Joe was deadly serious. thx.

Jimmy Young, at his best, could pose an awkward problem for anyone at any time. Basically, if he was in shape and having on "on" night, he'd hit you more than you could hit him. His punches weren't devastating, but they piled up points. Meanwhile, his ability to slip punches and make really good fighters miss was amazing. Young was slippery and awkward. Sometimes, because he was all defense and not much offense, he didn't impress judges enough. But to me, there was beauty in his ability to have a strategy and fight plan and stick with it through the entire fight. He came in against Ali, Foreman, Norton and Ron Lyle with a plan. He didn't let the pace of the fight change his plan. He finished these fights impressively, all of them. These four guys were top caliber heavyweights of their era and in some cases of any era. Young was within a couple whiskers of being undefeated against these guys and being a Champion. Many people feel he was cheated.

Ron Lyle thought he won both fights with Young but the judges saw differently. In one of those fights Young had welts on his sides from Lyle's body attack and Lyle landed the harder punches but Young more of them so he got two decisions.

Noam, Holyfield has had a speech impediment all of his life. In fact when he was a child they thought he was retarded because of it. He worked with speech therapists to overcome the problem. Now I am not saying he hasn't suffered any damage, he probably has and I think he should stay home. But he won't. The other thing that boxing commissions should do is have the weigh in the day of the fight not a day or two before. In some of the lower weight classes these guys are coming in 10 to 15 pounds over the class limit. Most of the elite super middleweights and light heavies are 180 to 190 by fight time. If you are a natural 165 to 175 pounder you won't stand a chance against these guys.

I was shocked to see Joe Calzaghe totally dominate Jeff Lacy in a super middleweight title fight tonight. I thought Lacy would catch up to him and hurt him with his power but he pretty much never did and the British fighter won just about every round. Another American fighter loses a belt, oh well, better luck next time.

Bob, thanks, I didn't know that about Holyfield's childhood. I do know that Holyfield is a very decent man. A friend of mine happened to walk past Holyfield in the street a few years ago. Holyfield took the time to talk to him for about 30 minutes or so. There was nothing in it for Evander except human kindness. A lot of other sportsmen could learn from him. I hope he doesn't have any damage.

I agree with you that it's accomplished by dehydration and isn't good going into the fight. But I think Bob's point might have been just the opposite???? Guys make weight and then use the last two days before the fight to get back to their "normal" weight, which is much higher than the limit.

Still have enough faith in the regulars on this site to give out my E-mail address. Thank you Noam, for warning me of the dangers of this, I never forgot that. Angello, sorry, but as a long time fan of boxing, I don't think Jimmy Young was a great fighter. He was an aberration, much like John Ruiz. They where guys strong enough and with good enough reflexes to avoid being hit, while clutching and holding, with the occasional foul, you know, headlocks, holding, falling down and faking low blow damage. They didn't come to win against Lyle, or Foreman. Ruiz against anyone. They came for a huge payday, and to survive the fight.

I'm not in full agreement with anyone who thinks Young or Ruiz belong in any study that develops into a list of even top twenty heavyweights.

Angello, I disagree with the idea of a fighter not having to make the weight limit for his class on fight day. If you have to starve yourself and become dehydrated in order to make weight, then you haven't trained properly, or are trying to shrink yourself to a smaller weight class. Hey, just like Jockeys, you don't get to gain weight back, and fight a guy you are naturally bigger than.

Steve: I don't disagree with you---but I just pointed out why I don't think they'd ever go along with it---it would cause huge problems if a guy didn't make weight and fights had to be cancelled, money refunded, etc. As for Young, I totally disagree with you that he "didn't come out to win" against Foreman. That's utter nonsense. Young was a lighter hitter, so he didn't slug it out against everyone--- he was a classic stick and move guy who frustrated the hell out of bigger, stronger and yes, better fighters. He used a defensive fight plan and stuck with his strategy to compensate for lower weight and less strength than many of his opponents. His fight against Foreman was brilliant---the pinnacle of his career. He made one mistake in, I believe, the seventh round. But he quickly recovered and even finished that round strong, backing Foreman up. He knocked Foreman down and easily won two thirds of the rounds. I believe he outpointed Norton too, though the judges didn't see it that way.

Ed: Yes, "unafraid" is the key. Young wasn't intimidated by the bigger power hitters. He just stood in front of them and gave them moves and movement they hadn't seen before. On a different level, Buster Douglas accomplished this against Mike Tyson. Most of Tysons previous opponents lost before the fight started, because they were terrified of being hit by Tyson. A prime example is Michael Spinks, who was scared out of his mind---you could see in his eyes that he was shaking in fear before Tyson even hit him once. Enter James Douglas, who refused to buy into the fear factor. Douglas had a plan to jab and move. Now, it helps that Douglas was also tall and heavy, with a punch of his own. This is something Young and Byrd lacked. But the point is that Douglas was unafraid and he stuck with his plan for an entire fight. When Tyson caught him, he didn't panic or change his strategy. He shook it off. Just like Young did against Foreman.

Steve, I wouldn't compare Jimmy Young's style to Ruiz's though because Ruiz is more of a brawler and Young's style was more like Chris Byrd's style. I don't think it would have been wise for Young to abandon his stick and move style when he fought Foreman and Lyle. Why get your head beat in if you can hit and avoid punches coming your way?

Steve: I don't admire the fighting style of Ruiz, who hangs on, is sloppy, I believe weighs about 230, is big and strong and doesn't box, doesn't slug--- just survives his way to wins. I did admire Young's style--- a smaller heavyweight who counted on slick boxing to outsmart his bigger, more powerful opponents. What would have happened in a Young-Foreman rematch? We'll never know, because the fight put Foreman into retirement after he had hallucinations and heat exhaustion. My guess is that Young would have outpointed him again, as long as the judges weren't bought by King, who viewed Foreman as a bigger money maker and more intriguing opponent. Let's face it: Young was never a one-punch KO artist. He couldn't hit someone with one punch and turn the tide of a fight the way Foreman or other big heavies could. He needed to count on defense and reflexes and for a two year period in the mid-70's he was close to the best in the world. Finally, I'm fully aware that Young and Douglas had much different styles---my point was that lack of fear/intimidation of their opponents (respectively, Foreman and Tyson) served them well.

I watched a tape of Wladimir Klitschko against Jameel McCline from about 2002 today. Klitschko won by a late round TKO and he was ahead in the fight but I was amazed about how biased the announcers, among them George Foreman, were for Klitschko. Yes I agreed Klitschko was ahead in the fight at the time of the stoppage but it wasn't as one sided as the announcers were saying and as I remembered the fight when I originally saw it. Wladimir K won most of the rounds by having mainly a more accurate jab but when I saw the fight today on tape I thought there wasn't that huge of a difference between the fighters in a lot of the rounds, that Wladimir K had a slight advantage in a lot of them.

Foreman, Jim Lampley, and Larry Merchant made it seem like McCline wasn't fighting at all and if he had just landed a few more punches in a lot of the rounds, he could have been leading on the scorecards. There were not that many rounds when Wladimir K really hurt McCline, the most severe of course was when he knocked McCline down in the round that ended the fight and McCline's corner didn't let him out for the next round. At that time Wladimir was the media favorite and they were really building him up at the expense of McCline. Very biased reporting.

Of course this was before we found out what a brittle chin Wladimir has.

Great to see the site is still purring along after I haven't visited for a while. Kent - you are a keen fan. I can't bring myself to know anything about the current guys in the heavyweight division. I go back to the era before Liston and there was always something about the champions that drew me in. It didn't matter who...Patterson, Liston, Ali, Frazier - it didn't matter. You wanted to watch them. Of course, it was the same with Marciano, but even lesser champions like Charles and Walcott and all those guys. What's wrong with today's guys? Why can't they interest us? None of them interest me. It's not just because I'm getting old. It's because these guys have nothing going for them. Who is Ruiz and Rahman? I don't want to know anything about them.

At least Rahman pulled the KO upset of Lewis, which makes me interested in him as a fighter---but you're right. There's a drought of talent and intrigue with these guys today.

Another face of the problem is multi-faceted. Howard C: We don't get to know the fighters and have a personal interest in them anymore, because for one thing, the fights aren't televised on network television and secondly, the fights are way too infrequent. When these so called contenders are fighting once a year and the fight isn't on broadcast television---how can anyone develop much interest? What about 3 or 4 fights a year for guys in and around the top 10, most of this on television? We'd get to know the players and we'd take stock in the rankings and outcome of fights. "The Contender" was in the end, a failure on NBC (for a lot of reasons). But I actually found myself liking some of these guys, disliking others and interested in the outcome.

Another face of the problem is that the boxing organizers almost never organize the right fight at the right time, I mean the fight that everyone wants to see. Why organizing fights like Tyson-Etienne, 3 Holyfield-Ruiz? Who cares about them? Why organizing Lewis-Tyson at a time when Tyson was washed up? I mean, the same fight, a few years before (or earlier) would have been much more interesting. Another example: Tua-Tyson fought at the right time, would have been a very exciting fight, a real war! I was getting excited for Jameel "The bouncer" Mc Cline vs James "Lights out" Toney, the fight would have been interesting for the size difference, but we all know that that fight was never fought.

Howard C., I agree with Angelo and yourself. The charisma that used to surround successful fighters in the 60's and 70's, and Tyson in the 80's, doesn't seem to be there with the new fighters. Maybe you're right. Maybe it's because we're all getting older. Or maybe Angelo's got a point. Fighters just don't get the TV exposure they used to get on Friday night fights, or Saturday afternoon's Wide World of Sports. Maybe it's because Massimo is correct. In the history of boxing, (dream fights) seldom happened. Top fighters avoiding each other and demanding so much money to fight that I felt somehow slighted by paying exorbitant prices on pay-per-view. If you add to all these problems the mob connections in the 40's, 50's, and sixties, combined with Don King, and it's little wonder boxing has been reduced to a "niche sport", to quote Mr. Otto.

Hi Kent. I know you're watching this NFL free agency very closely. LOOK OUT! You California surfer type dude, with your new skinny body. The Eagles are making some pretty good to excellent moves in free agency. Next on our shopping list, Jeff Garcia.

Yo Kent, I would like to commend you on your recent fitness regime. I admire your determination. I only hope your not going to let your hair grow and bleach it blond. Hey man, don't get caught up in this whole Calif. thing. It's like, bogus man.

Hi Kent. I know you're watching this NFL free agency very closely. LOOK OUT! You California surfer type dude, with your new skinny body. The Eagles are making some pretty good to excellent moves in free agency. Next on our shopping list, Jeff Garcia.

Yo Kent, I would like to commend you on your recent fitness regime. I admire your determination. I only hope your not going to let your hair grow and bleach it blond. Hey man, don't get caught up in this whole Calif. thing. It's like, bogus man.

Kent, Best of luck to you sir. From what I've read on high prostate levels it's not at all accurate. But its good you're having it checked. I am sure that getting your weight down and having an exercise program like you do will work in your favor too.

Are you researching prostate testing and such online?

Hey Kent, good luck! I never pray but I do hope you're gonna be fine! Let us know how the things are going with your health.

Hey Kent, good luck! I never pray but I do hope you're gonna be fine! Let us know how the things are going with your health.
Congratulations for the 57 pounds, I'm doing a diet but I'm not having good results.
Kent: Best case (and probably the case) you're free and clear. Worst case, it's a treatable cancer.

I'm thinking about you and will say a prayer too.

Thanks friends for your support.

Steve my beliefs are Christian, more on the Protestant side though but I think most of the various sects, including the Catholic faith have basically the same message.

The heavyweight fighter in this article is probably unheard of for even the most ardent fight fans. He was the only fighter from Syracuse NY that ever fought for a heavyweight title. Even though he was long before my time I heard stories about him throughout the years. He was a cab driver after his fighting days were over and had some run ins with tough guys, always flattening them with one punch.

Syracuse, despite being a small city had quite a lot of good fighters over the years. Carmen Basilo and his Nephew Billy Backus were title holders and the De John family had heavyweight main eventers. Hal TNT Carrol was from Syracuse. He fought gamely against Bob Foster back when. We have the boxing hall of fame just outside Syracuse.

Nick Barone, the "Fighting Marine" who lost a heavyweight title bout in 1950 to Ezzard Charles, died at 79.

He died Sunday, the Welter-price Funeral Home said. Barone had a 47-11-1 record, mainly as a ranked contender in the light heavyweight division. But his most famous fight came as a heavyweight on Dec. 5, 1950, when he met Charles in the champion's hometown of Cincinnati. It was Charles' first defense of the title he took from Joe Louis three months earlier.

Charles was heavily favored, but Barone lasted until the 11th round when he was knocked down for the first time in his career. He got up, but the referee stopped the fight. "He was one tough son of a gun," said Don Hamilton, a former amateur boxer and friend of Barone's, told The Post-Standard.

"He weighed about 175 pounds when he fought Charles, but he went toe-to-toe with him."

Barone fought just five times after meeting Charles and lost four of those bouts. "Before the Charles fight, he fought Jimmy Beau in a main event at Madison Square Garden," Hamilton added. "He won a 10-round decision, but Beau damaged his left eye. He fought Charles with one eye." Barone hid the injury from doctors, and it wasn't the first time he hid the truth to fight.

Barone, whose real name was Carmine, had an older brother, Nick. At 16, Barone took Nick's birth certificate and enlisted in the Marines. He went on to fight in World War II and saw action at Iwo Jima.

That article/fighter didn't mean anything to me until the end, when I read that his real name was Carmine Barone---it's coming back to me now. My Dad and Uncle (both dead) might have told me about this guy a long time ago. I remember hearing about him covering up an eye injury to fight---I'm from Northeastern PA and my Dad and Uncle were from NYC by way of Italy! I know Syracuse isn't near the city, but I think I've heard about this guy from them.

If only you were a few years younger, you could try out for "American Idol" with your singing talent! You'd be the first boxing writer contestant they've ever had. You could sing some Lou Rawls to warm up the crowd, then switch to Zeppelin.
going to be performing anywhere any time soon as I don't practice much so my voice is out of shape but I have been working on a CD of songs for an American Indian language program where I am singing some kid's songs such as Mary had a Little Lamb and others with Indian words and English also to help revive a local Indian dialect. In the songs I sing the names of colors, shapes, sizes, locations, and numbers in the native tougue and English to help the kids remember the words of their language.I much prefer to singing in the studio to performing anyway as I don't like to have to please what some audience wants all the time.I don't need to practice much to sound good for a few songs. But singing for hours, I couldn't do that at the moment. I would have to build up to it over months.

3/15/06 04:24:27 PM|Noam|same|same||10|Kent, my best wishes and I hope everything turns out okay. I'm not religious, so I won't pray. But I am superstitious. Looks like I'll be avoiding walking on cracks in the pavement and all that type of stuff for you for the rest of the week or until we find out that everything is all right. Kind regards. |

3/15/06 07:39:20 PM|steve |NJ||NA||10|Kent, how dare Angelo imply that you are too old to begin a serious singing and recording career! If you have an original sound, and can hook up with a pro. song writer, you could put out something that is built around your particular voice and style. Just rent the studio and crank out some tapes. Then just go from label to label and try to sell them. Of course, this advice entitles me to a ten percent profit if your even moderately successful, which would put you in a not to uncommen slot of one hit wonders. Even if only one song at least gets played, it'll get sold, and you, with my careful guidance, will make a bundle. |

3/15/06 07:55:35 PM|Steve|NJ||NA||10|Hey Noam, I haven't heard from or even had a good altercation with you in a while. You don't have to be practising any formal religion. I'm catholic and I certainly dont practice it! I do however, pray my ass off for people I care about who are in trouble. |

3/15/06 08:22:42 PM|Steve|NJ||NA||10|Hey Kent, do you remember the group. "Red Bone". They where an Native American group who had a great hit, {Come and Get Your Love}? They where a one hit wonder but made several million dollars. |

3/15/06 11:40:58 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Steve, I am sure Angelo didn't mean anything negative about me. He was stating that there is an age limit on American Idol. I wouldn't do that show anyway even if I was the right age for it. I am not what they are looking for and I can sing in tune so they couldn't make fun of me. |

3/16/06 01:29:57 AM|Ed|Cicero NY||Mooseygoop@aol.com||10|Angelo, That's very interesting that your dad and uncle may have talked to you about that fight.Over the years I've heard many times that Charles damaged Barones eyes. Now it appears that they were injured in a previous fight. It would be interesting to know whether the fight was televised or not. Did you follow Johnny Bizzaro's career, from Erie Pa.? |

3/16/06 01:49:28 AM|Noam|same|same||10|Steve, I am superstitious and not religious. I know superstition is silly and nonsensical but I have it in my stupid mind that it is bad luck to do certain things. So instead of praying for good luck for someone like Kent when he needs it, I instead avoid doing certain things that my ridiculous mind somehow thinks might bring bad luck. It's stupid, I know. Kent, I read in the paper today that red hot chillies have a substance in them that combats prostate disease. Apparently they help to kill bad cells. Doctors also say that tomatoes are powerful medicine in stopping inflamed prostate. Eat a tomatoe a day. Anyway, lucky for you Kent that they check prostates with blood tests now. I understand that in the old days doctors had another way of doing it. |

3/16/06 09:32:53 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Steve, yes I remember Redbone, that is a good song and it still gets played on the radio sometimes and I have heard it in some TV commercials as well.I have a friend with a studio who runs a small independent label, that is where I have been working on my Indian CD, which is a donation to a tribe, not a money maker, who wants me to do another CD of my own stuff but I have to have some assurance of making some money on that one so I am not sure I am going to do it or not.Thanks Noam, I will take all of the help I can get. What concerns the doctors is I am 47 and normally they don't recommend men get checked for prostate problems until at least 50 years old. Contrary to one of our young friends, who popped in here a few times a while back, who said we were a bunch of old farts, I don't think of myself as being old and it seems absurd I could have this problem.

On a lighter note, any thoughts on the Hasim Rahman verses James Toney fight this Saturday?I think Rahman can take him unless age has caught up to him. Rahman can fool us though he sometimes can look great but other times he is just plain lousy.Contrary to current trends in having bad heavyweight fights, this fight is very interesting to me as the outcome is not a sure thing.TO MAX HORD, IF YOU SEE THIS MESSAGE, ABOUT THE QUESTION YOU ASKED ME, SOME PEOPLE HAVE STILL NOT BEEN VERY OPEN ABOUT INFORMATION, VERY FRUSTRATING BUT I WILL KEEP TRYING. | 3/16/06 01:22:30 PM

Kent, I didn't know that Rahman and Toney are fighting this Saturday. Thank you for the information. It's an interesting fight and I am sorry I probably won't be able to see it. I think your brother James is more skilled than Rahman and is gonna win. I think he'll win on points. | 3/16/06 01:42:57 PM

Steve, How do you get an Irishman to climb up onto the roof? Tell him drinks are on the house. | 3/17/06 06:55:47 PM

Hey Noam, that's a good one. I actually did get a laugh out of it. Yet, at the same time, you've managed to hurt my feelings. You know how fragile I am. You also never bothered to answer my question on your opinion on a match between Stanley Ketchall and any middleweight champ of this century. | 3/18/06 02:10:28 AM

Hi Steve. I'm away from my home at the moment and haven't had time to research the question you pose. I will be back home next Tuesday and I will then give you an answer. I have been very busy with some football matters at present and have an extraordinary meeting for my club tomorrow. Kent, I've been studiously avoiding walking on cracks in the footpath and will do so until you get the all clear. Remember: tomatoes and chillies. The redder the better. | 3/18/06 04:19:38 AM

Kent: This is a rarity---a current heavyweight fight that holds a little interest! I'll take Rahman I guess, but the outcome is very much in question. | 3/18/06 09:17:04 AM

Noam, thanks. I am not going to push my beliefs on you but if you give credibility to things like avoiding cracks and such superstitions, just consider that there is a God of the universe and there is much more historical credibility to this belief system than there is to avoiding cracks on sidewalks, not walking under ladders, etc.

It is a matter of personal faith though and I can't give you a faith in God as that is something one finds for himself. But it is something to at least consider, that there could be a God even if you are not sure that there is one.

Again, I am not going to try and argue with you and to try and make you believe as that is a personal choice. I am also not going to debate about the merits of God's existence as I can't prove it to you as it is my personal faith and the best logic and science can come up with is there is no proof one way or the other. It is an issue of the heart.

But believe, your concern and everyone's concern for my well being means a lot to me.

Well, the Rahman-Toney fight didn't settle anything as it was scored a draw. I agreed with the judges in that some rounds Rahman landed the better, harder blows and in other rounds Toney landed the cleaner blows and Rahman was missing a lot in those rounds.

It was Toney's fight to win but he just wasn't sharp enough and even though he wouldn't want to hear it, he would have been more active and he would have been able to avoid more of Rahman's punches in more rounds if he had been lighter than his 237 pounds.

Rahman was 238 pounds but he is five and a half inches taller than Toney.

You just saw the real me, Kent. Without steroids, I'm a fat, slow, tub of lard.

Kent, I know walking on or avoiding cracks or whatever is nonsense but I'm superstitious. You should see all the superstitions I have at the race track gambling on horses. Or at the casino. No disrespect, but I just come at religion, even though I was reared a catholic.

What isn't superstition or religion is what I said about red chillies and tomatoes. Do some research for yourself but the medical evidence is that they are good for prostate problems.

Oops, I meant to say "No disrespect, but I just can't come at religion." I left out the word 'can't'. I have to say, Kent, that I am not ridiculing religion. Each to their own. I actually like to see old people or the seriously ill embrace religion because it gives them hope. But it's just not for me. I actually don't tell my family I'm an atheist because I don't won't to dissuade them from their religious beliefs.

The division will continue to be a joke until a few premium fighters step it up with a few premium fights. These ridiculous draws, where most punches are missed---no major cuts, no knockdowns, no intrigue---it's like John Ruiz has cursed the entire division or put everyone into a deep sleep. I saw still pictures of Toney and he was fat and lethargic---not in condition to be a boxing champion.

Welcome! Welcome!!!
hello!

Hey Noam, on the subject of prostate cancer, you have been misinformed. When you visit your specialist, he does a {finger wave}, before he orders any test. As the doctor put on his rubber glove I demanded that the doctor at least take me to dinner and a show first. The blood tests are often inaccurate and misleading. The short arm inspection is still a first good indicator if your prostate is enlarged to the point of causing the usual problems.

Angelo and Kent, after that debacle, it's getting pretty hard to defend heavyweight boxing, even to a new sports fan who might show a little interest. Unfortunately, except for the West coast, as the heavyweight division goes, so goes all the other weight div. George Otto was correct in saying that boxing has been reduced to a {niche sport}. We desperately need a heavyweight like Mike Tyson to emerge and start flattening all these retreads. I don't care if he's crazy as a shit house mouse. I haven't talked to very many guys who are even willing to contribute to a pay per view event.

Hey Noam, on the subject of prostate cancer, you have been misinformed. When you visit your specialist, he does a {finger wave}, before he orders any test. As the doctor put on his rubber glove I demanded that the doctor at least take me to dinner and a show first. The blood tests are often inaccurate and misleading. The short arm inspection is still a first good indicator if your prostate is enlarged to the point of causing the usual problems.

It is because I am a small fry in the sports writing world and Merchant isn't. I realize he was injured at the time when I talked to him and he couldn't do anything about his weight then but that was late in 2004 and he has had plenty of time to recover from his injuries and get in shape. There is no way a fighter his height should have been 237 pounds for a title fight.

A notable exception was back in the old days "Two Ton" Galento was as short as Toney but he had always carried that weight and Galento was a brawler while Toney's style is more defensive, a counter puncher who relies on his reflexes, which are not at their best with too much weight.

For those who don't know, I write part time for some boxing websites, mainly Eastside Boxing, and I had an article called, "My answers to James Toney's Challenging Comments" or a similar title where I talk about an interview I had with Toney where he cut me off almost before it started because he didn't like my question about his weight.

This question was asked at another boxing site I post on so I'll ask here. Duane Bobick versus any of the current beltholders in the heavyweight division. He and a number of other 70s guys would be champ today. THE champ not just a beltholder. True or not true?

I think Vitali Klitschko was clearly the best heavyweight in this moment and he was actually flattening everyone until he got injured. He would have whipped Rahman. The heavyweight division needs Vitali back and a Rahman-Vitali fight. I think Vitali can be the undisputed heavyweight champ. I have no idea how serious is his injury. Anyone knows? Thanks.

Anyway I agree that the heavyweight division is not having a brilliant moment to say the least.
Kent, perhaps when Toney spoke with you he was on the steroids and subject to episodes of anger, while more recently he's clean and not as easily upset. If it's because he treats well known reporters better, then that's also a reflection on Toney's character.

Does anyone know what all the stuff is on this site? Is it some sort of maths formula? Am I stupid because I don't understand any of it? Massimo, what does it mean?

Url means UNIFORM RESOURCE LOCATOR, but apart that (or apart of that) I don't understand what that stuff means. I think it's very boring stuff. Maybe the poster is trying to compare this boring stuff with the current state of boxing.

It is just some idiot trying to spam this site. GOOD NEWS, MY CANCER TEST CAME BACK NEGATIVE!! MY FRIENDS, THANK YOU SO MUCH FOR YOUR SUPPORT. I WILL NEVER FORGET IT. IT IS A SCARY EXPERIENCE TO HAVE A DOCTOR SAY YOU MIGHT HAVE CANCER.

It's a wonderful news!

Kent, that's great news! But that doesn't mean you can ease up on the exercise and diet. Keep it going.

You guys got any questions about prostate cancer I probably got the answer.

You guys got any questions about prostate cancer I probably got the answer.

It appears the guestbook has been hacked again by spammers. I'll work on this today. Be aware that bookmarks you have made will not work with the new guestbook, but I'll revise the links on the Jerry Quarry site so the Letters page will be found like always. Thanks, --Carl

Today I saw for the first time the McBride vs Tyson fight (without audio) and I don't understand why Mike quit (or did quit or both) after 6 rounds. McBride was cut and Tyson quit !?!? Anyone knows ? Thanks.

Massimo, Tyson was actually ahead on the scorecards, well two of them anyway, but McBride was fighting back hard and Tyson, as he said after the fight, didn't have the heart to be a fighter anymore and maybe he never really did. It was all about Tyson's mental aspect, something he has a problem with his whole career.
He didn't know how to handle the mental pressure of what to do when someone was not afraid of him and who didn't fall when Tyson hit him. Mc Bride actually didn't do anything of special in the fight. He never hit Tyson hard or had him in trouble. I think Mc Bride is not that good as a fighter, I see him more as a bouncer. Tyson really showed lack of heart in this fight. What a sad way to end (or of ending) a career !!!!!

There's an ironic background story to the Tyson-McBride debacle. Less than a week earlier Kostya Tszyu didn't come out for the last round against Ricky Hatton in England. Tszyu received a beating, including a deliberate low blow that didn't do him much good. Tszyu's trainer wouldn't let him come out for the final round. At that time Tyson was trained by Jeff Feneck, the former three time champ in the lower weight divisions. Feneck, even though he lives in Australia like Tszyu, criticised Tszyu for quitting on his stool. He suggested that real warriors always come out and he (Feneck) would never let Tyson quit on his stool. Enter loud mouth Tyson. He criticised Tszyu for quitting on his stool. Tyson said he'd never quit like that. Well Tyson did quit only a few days later against McBride. And big mouth Feneck encouraged him to do it.

Kostya Tszyu was a great champion who may have stayed one fight too many. He was being comprehensively beaten by Hatton and there was no reason for him to take any further punishment. After that fight Tszyu (geez, I'm getting sick of checking the spelling of his name every time I write it) spent a week in hospital with internal bleeding and high blood pressure. (He should never be allowed to fight again.) On the other hand, Tyson quit against McBride with nothing more serious than tiredness. Tyson and Feneck shot themselves in their feet with what they said about Tszyu. Tyson doesn't have the heart to fight any more. His spirit is broken. Although he desperately needs the money, his character doesn't need the challenge. The bully was exposed.

At one point, Tyson had it all---up and coming young undefeated Champion who KOed almost everyone they put in front of him. He was good for boxing at that point---an exciting KO artist who unified the title. He was brash and confident---but also a boxing junkie who respected and admired the Champions who preceeded him, such as Dempsey, Marciano, Ali and Holmes. Then, I think it was a combination of things that lead to his downfall. Yes, the "bully exposed" is a legitimate theory that I have often endorsed. Also, the fame and fortune went to his head and not to sound cliche here, but he lost the proverbial "eye of the tiger" so to speak. Now he's just old and too inactive to take seriously. It's so very sad that he had so many opportunities even after he lost the title fight to Douglas. Even after he went to jail and was released. Even after Holyfield beat him. Even after all of that, if he had committed to boxing again, and if he had fought at least three or four times a year, stayed busy, focused on fighting---he would have been a contender again and maybe he would have won an alphabet title. But he refused to acknowledge that he had to start from the ground up again. He thought he still had the capacity to fight like a Champion. Just defend once a year or so. His skills disappeared over time and now he can't fight any decent heavyweight.

what was jery and joe frazier's military status? did either one of them serve or why were they not drafted?

Charles, I heard that Frazier was married and may have already had children quite young and that made him ineligible for the draft.

Joe Frazier married at 16.
Massimo: I think either phrase is correct actually.

Carl W: Hello Friends,

Steve: Kent,I'm very grateful your clean of any prostate problems. I hope that, by being observant, you'll actually find some talented new comer, IN ANY CLASS, that you can interview without instantly making enemies with.

Kent: Steve, a little over two years ago I had a chance to interview Samuel Peter one on one but I had something else to do that day so I couldn't do it. The sports writing is just a part time thing so sometimes other things interfere. I probably missed a good opportunity with Sam Peter but oh well.

Kookoo: Kent, I'm speaking for real, glad your doing ok, cancer is a big scare for sure. Kent, can you help me land a Quarry girl. They look good man, good looking family!

Noam: Massimo, you're the same height as John Gerald, slightly wilter than Kent, two inches wilter than Steve and 3 inches wilter than Angelo. But, if Jumpity Bruce is very short... It's right to be very short!

Hey thanks Koo Koo, when it comes down to it, I appreciate your concern for my health issues.
even if we haven't always seen eye to eye on everything in the past.| 4/1/06 11:30:45 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Lamon Brewster lost his WBO title by decision to a relatively unknown fighter from Belarus, Sergei Liakhovich. It was a good fight with a lot of action, something the heavyweights need, after the snoozer between Rahman and Toney. I thought the fight was close enough for maybe Brewster to pull it out as he scored the only knockdown in the fight and the champ often gets the benefit of the doubt in a close fight. It was a fair decision though and this fight was well worth seeing, two guys battling it out to the end.|
4/2/06 08:52:24 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Steve - an Irishman went to the train station ticket office and said, "I'd like a round trip ticket, please." The man behind the ticket counter asked, "Where to?" The Irishman replied, "Oh, der. Back here, stupid."....sorry.|
4/3/06 02:19:18 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Kent: I didn't see the fight. I trust you that it was good action and exciting. Still, there's a silliness to the fact that a guy no one has ever heard of beat a Champion that only a few diehards have ever heard of. Even with this good news that a decent fight took place, there's a rusty lining to the silver cloud---the division is awful when an unknown beats a relative unknown to win a title. Also, I'd rather that someone (except John Ruiz) could hold the belt for a while like Lennox Lewis did, so at least we'd have a stationary target for contenders to shoot for. Instead, it seems like a different name every few months. |
4/3/06 05:16:51 PM|steve |NJ||NA|||10|Noam, I gotta love ya! Even though you've once again trampled on my feelings. I've decided that your either an Englishman or a Scott. However, your joke about the eating of roadkill was uninformed. It's an acquired taste.|
4/3/06 05:41:40 PM|Steve|na|na|||10|Angelo, I agree that the pickings are getting mighty slim out there and I just have a guess. Could it just be an answer as simple as our modern society is giving the really talented young athletes, black and white, better nutrition, better education, and better opportunities in more humane, sensible sports, where they can make money and not retire with brain damage. I hate to write something like this. I love boxing! |
4/4/06 04:17:20 AM|mark sargeant|uk||mark_sargeant2003@yahoo.co.uk|||10|At least Brewster vs Belorussian (Lyakovich?) was a great match with knockdowns, plenty of guts and seriously hard counterpunches with both guys desperate to win. Brewster won't be an Ali, a Foreman or a Holmes, he won't even be a Bonavena but he has serious guts to win his last four fights from losing positions. That I'll give him credit for, compared to the turgid defensive rubbish bought up by Toney and Rahman. I think Klitschko is bound to beat Byrd and the Eastern Europeans/Russians will be dominating for a time. |
4/4/06 04:17:27 AM|mark sargeant|uk||mark_sargeant2003@yahoo.co.uk|||10|At least Brewster vs Belorussian (Lyakovich?) was a great match with knockdowns, plenty of guts and seriously hard counterpunches with both guys desperate to win. Brewster won't be an Ali, a Foreman or a Holmes, he won't even be a Bonavena but he has serious guts to win his last four fights from losing positions. That I'll give him credit for, compared to the turgid defensive rubbish bought up by Toney and Rahman. I think Klitschko is bound to beat Byrd and the Eastern Europeans/Russians will be dominating for a time. |
least Brewster vs Belorussian (Lyakovich?) was a great match with knockdowns, plenty of guts and seriously hard counterpunches with both guys desperate to win. Brewster won't be an Ali, a Foreman or a Holmes, he won't even be a Bonavena but he has serious guts to win his last four fights from losing positions. That I'll give him credit for, compared to the turgid defensive rubbish bought up by Toney and Rahman. I think Klitschko is bound to beat Byrd and the Eastern Europeans/Russians will be dominating for a time.

At least Brewster vs Belorussian (Lyakovich?) was a great match with knockdowns, plenty of guts and seriously hard counterpunches with both guys desperate to win. Brewster won't be an Ali, a Foreman or a Holmes, he won't even be a Bonavena but he has serious guts to win his last four fights from losing positions. That I'll give him credit for, compared to the turgid defensive rubbish bought up by Toney and Rahman. I think Klitschko is bound to beat Byrd and the Eastern Europeans/Russians will be dominating for a time.

Steve: You might be right about the best and brightest guys deciding not to get hit in the head for a living. I'll tell you one thing, after watching that guy get killed in the Indy car race, I think boxing, in a strange way, is safer than left turns at 200 MPH.

Angelo, I concede to you that there are other sports also insanely dangerous. However, you don't see a lot of race car drivers walking around at 60 yrs of age on their heels, with some form of pugilistica dementia. They also usually have most of the money they made in their sport. My opinion is, that the quality of fighter in the Heavyweight class has lessened considerably. Not only do most of them lack the offensive skills to score a decisive victory, they also lack the training and conditioning to absorb much punishment.

Maybe Liakhovich versus Brewster wasn't Ali versus Frazier skillwise but it still was a step in the right direction. Two men fighting it out to the closing bell.

Well, we knew Noam was biased against blacks, and now he is showing his bias against the Irish. Noam, have you no shame? Can't you keep your bigoted feelings off this board. Don't lay your cancer on this site anymore.

Noam is from England, Steve. That was quite apparent sometime back. When he was causing trouble on this site pretending to be Howard C from Louisville. The only reason he picked Louisville was because that was the only part of the USA he was familiar with.

#1 I said who I am. How many other people have you criticized for using pen names? None that I know of. What about Noam's other pen name "Howard C". You never ordered him to use his real name. Being an Ali fan does not make one a non-biased person. It only makes the person a front runner.

#2 Angelo, can you read (I thought you could)? I said clearly and precisely what is on my mind. Noam is a bigot. Or do consider someone a bigot only when the person disparages Italians. Jerry Quarry is described on this site as "the last son of Ireland" (go to the home page and see). And Noam the englishman tells a disparaging joke about an Irishman and you think it is okay. Suppose Noam stars telling dago jokes, would that bother you?

| 4/5/06 03:36:26 PM| Angelo| Washington, DC| funktron | 10 |
| You're right, I haven't criticized others for using a pen name. I thought it was at least a little out of line to go on as Malcom X considering your topic. In any event, I call it as I see it—a bigot is a bigot whether it's disparaging to Italians, Americans, minority groups, martians, etc. I haven't perceived Noam as a bigot. |

| 4/5/06 05:32:23 PM| Malcolm X| Detroit| Mosque7.com | 10 |
| Angelo, you have a point regarding the name Malcom X. As a result I will give a little background. Malcom X was a bigot. He hated white people and prayed for their destruction. When he realized that the black muslims were a sham under Elijah Muhammad and he was suspended from the group he went on a pilgrimage to Mecca. While in Mecca he had a spiritual transformation. He no longer hated white people or any people for that matter. Malcom X realized that good and evil lies within the individual. As a result of his spiritual awakening he quit the black muslims and started his own group. When he started his own group he changed his name to El-Hajj Malik El-Shabazz. When Mr Shabazz was murdered he was no longer Malcom X in thought or in name. Regarding Noam, he has in the past insulted Blacks and now he insults the Irish. You have no problem with that. I will ask you again, will you only have a problem with Noam if he starts telling dago jokes? |

| 4/5/06 05:41:38 PM| Kent| Murrieta, Ca| kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |
| Malcolm whoever you are, Noam's comments to Steve were just a joke between him and Steve. I believe Steve is an Irishman so don't you think he should be the one who is offended if offense was intended? I don't think it was meant to be offensive. We have gotten past the bickering that went on last year. Why are you trying to get it started again? |

| 4/6/06 12:35:40 AM| Malcolm X| Detroit| Mosque7.com | 10 |
| Kent, If Noam wants to exchange bigoted jokes with Steve or anyone else, fine. But let him do it in private. This is not a members only site. Why are you jumping on me. Noam's joke was not at all funny. It was plain to anyone reading it that the point of the joke was bigotry and not humor. Why was the man introduced as an Irishman? Maybe he should have been introduced as an American indian. Would that have made the joke anymore funnier? Your part indian Kent, you tell me. Of course not! The purpose of the joke was to insult Irish people. Kent, you want to jump on someone, jump on Noam. He is always the cause of these incidents. Who was responsible for insulting the blackman on this site? Noam!!!!!!!!!!!!! |

| 4/6/06 04:34:01 AM| Massimo| Roma | 10 |
| Noam is definitely not a bigot. He is just one who likes joking. And the famous "relentless niggling" was not an offence at all. |

| 4/6/06 09:51:30 AM| Angelo| Washington, DC| funktron | 10 |
| Massimo: I would think "infamous" is a better description than "famous" at this point, about Noam's use of "niggling". Actually Mr. X, I'm not offended by Italian or Catholic jokes. I'm not offended by the stereotypes of The Sopranos, Goodfellas or The Godfather movies. I think I have a good radar for when someone is hateful and when they're joking. I hope I'm not being naive---but really, I've told ethnic jokes myself and I truly don't think I'm a bigot. I will say, usually, when I tell an ethnic joke, it's to the audience of that group. i.e., my uncle was Polish and I ribbed him with a few Polish jokes and he responded in kind with jokes of his own. I do think it's a problem when someone is relentless with ethnic jokes within their own little circle—that's when it borders on hate sometimes. |

| 4/7/06 03:43:32 PM| Tina| Las Vegas| tplang2000@aol.com | 10 |
| Hi everyone, just thought i would drop you all a liine to let you know that jonathan quarry will be back in the states easter weekend.. He has been overseas fighting for our country and I am so proud of him, and I know that his father Jerry is his guardian angel. Thank you for all your support and prayers...

I just read a script called "World Class" it's more of a tribute to Jimmy than to Jerry. I'm sure it'll never get made!

I did not read it but I heard it sucks, who cares about his loser brother! They should try to make it into a soap opera.

No problem Kent, we've lost to many people on this site, I just can't believe how much one family can go through. I miss James and I feel bad for accusing him of Jerry losing the Ellis fight because James pushed Jerry into a jukebox and hurt his lower back. James reply that he never looked at it that way. I know that James was trying to protect himself from Jerry, I don't know if I guess booze was involved, hey it just the way it goes. Hope the rest of the Quarrys are alright, take care!

Being in this business you come across a lot of scripts. Over the years I've read a few "Quarry" scripts one I remember called "Hard Luck" which had a lot of heart and the other I believed was titled "The Bellflower Bomber" And that fricken script was Balls to the Wall!! Now that's a movie! Someone needs to make this one.

Just last night (that's why I'm posting this now) I finished reading "World Class" and Charlie Sheen said it best in the movie - WallStreet... It's a dog with fleas. There's no heart, no soul and most importantly NO Jerry. It's more about Jerry's brothers - a yawning fest - it's a movie of the week, at best. Please, please someone make "The Bellflower Bomber" $10 bucks for that film - I'd see it twice!!

Tina, that is good news that Jonathan will be home soon. May God keep him safe on his journey home.

Nothing personal, but as far as I'm concerned there's only been one real Quarry besides Jerry and that's his son, Jonathan. Saw a photo of him on the net and he's the image of his father. I hope he comes back safe and sound.

Nothing personal, but as far as I'm concerned there's only been one real Quarry besides Jerry and that's his son, Jonathan. Saw a photo of him on the net and he's the image of his father. I hope he comes back safe and sound.

Nothing personal, but as far as I'm concerned there's only been one real Quarry besides Jerry and that's his son, Jonathan. Saw a photo of him on the net and he's the image of his father. I hope he comes back safe and sound.

I wish Jerry woulda fought Foster, he woulda walked right through him and handed him his ass! I can't stand how all the Quarry's sucked the life out of Jerry and especially Jimmy who could never... amount to anything on his own. Don't care who's dad he is, the truth is the truth.

This site is getting more interesting. John, I'm afraid I agree with you. However, according to this "World Class" script - it makes the entire family look responsible for his demise and Jimmy comes out smelling like a rose which leads me to believe he was the one dictating the story.

That fact is to get a movie made in Hollywood is a lot harder than getting hit by a bolt of lightning. So if the studio heads want to make a movie about Quarry then they're going to want to focus on "Jerry". He is the brand, he's the commodity and he's marketable - - Not his Family!

For the people trying to turn "World Class" into a feature film - focus your energy into something else - - I suggest doing something like Books on Tape.

Everbody just needs to chill. That fact is to get a movie made in Hollywood is a lot harder than getting hit by a bolt of lightning. So if the studio heads want to make a movie about Quarry then they're going to want to focus on "Jerry". He is the brand, he's the commodity and he's marketable - - Not his Family!

focus your energy into something else - - I suggest doing something like Books on Tape.

Hear, hear, bill..!

PS does anyone know why in the script "World Class" they would refer to Jerry's mom as "Skipper" instead of "Arwanda"..? |

can anyone tell me who is running jerry's website?? i would like to send a picture of jonathan quarry to be put on the website, if that is ok... thanks|

I am glad the truth is finally being told about brother Jummy. It was felt by many that he was using Jerry as a prop to make money for himself. I know people who saw Jerry in the last 5 years of his life who say he looked and acted fine. But, once he was scheduled for a public appearance where there would be a media presence, Jimmy would have Jerry over medicated. And as a result Jerry would look pathetic and be in "Never never land." And Jimmy would hustle money from donations and TV appearances.

This Jerry Quarry website is very pitiful. Posters defend the people who exploited Jerry. Posters defend people who insult Jerry's Irish background. People fail to recognize Jerry as being human. And hold Jerry responsible for decisions he made in life as an adult. Such as fighting too long, drinking and drugging and not saving his money and basically being very self destructive. The posters on this site regard Jerry as a victim. Jerry was your typical boxing movie story. Humble beginnings, great success for a few years, and a terrible ending.

I meant neither is jerry here to defend HIMSELF|

neither is Jerry, kent and jimmy was not a good guy. he was a manipulator just like his father but atleast his father was brutally honest about it and at the end he repented. jimmy was passive aggeressive and dishonest. he was a baby. i said Mike was a pussy after the foster fight. Mike Quarry always fought his heart out, win or lose and I don't know how you can put down a fine man like Mike. A very good fighter but more importantly a decent person.
[4/8/06 10:18:46 PM] jon | Santa Monica | Rock Star || 3 | I meant raised the bar |
[4/8/06 11:41:40 PM] steve | NJ | NA || 10 | Hey Noam, believe me, I love your Irish jokes. However, you never acknowledge my clever and somewhat witty comebacks. You seem to have offended everyone but me! I still consider you an intelligent and interesting friend. |
[4/8/06 11:54:56 PM] steve | NJ | NA || 10 | Hey Kent, I feel very much as you do. Jerry was just a man. He happened to have a special talent, and I don't mean just brute strength. If my late older half brother was a fighter in a position to make millions of dollars, you know what? I'd gladly empty his spit bucket, or anything else to help his career. I'd also gladly take any money he felt my services were worth. |
[4/9/06 12:19:25 AM] jq's big fan | NYC | Kellygirlz || 7 | Bill wrote, "This Jerry Quarry website is very pitiful. Posters defend the people who exploited Jerry." Well Steve, I believe you just reconfirmed his point. |
[4/9/06 12:39:05 AM] steve | NJ | NA || 10 | Hey Big Fan, all athletes are exploited! Its where the money is. Don't you think Don King exploited any fighters. I'D SURE RATHER HAVE MY PURSES go to my family rather than Don King. Whenever someone make an inordinate amount of money from your labors, then you've been exploited! |
[4/9/06 06:41:01 AM] Sabrina | Florida | SabrinaPorter@aol.com || 10 | ALL YOU PEOPLE WHO ARE TALKING SHIT ABOUT MY FATHER, SHOULD JUST SHUT THE F--K UP...HE STARTED THIS FOUNDATION AND PUT HIS OWN MONEY INTO IT. HE DIDN'T POCKET IT. HE LOVED JERRY AND DIDN'T EXPLOIT HIM. IF ANYONE DID THAT IT WAS THE REST OF HIS FAMILY ALL THEY WANTED WAS THE MONEY BECAUSE THEY'RE ALL GREEDY AND DISHONEST. IF YOU DON'T LIKE THIS WEBSITE THEN STOP COMING HERE AND WRITING STUFF. IF IT WEREN'T FOR MY FATHER THIS WEBSITE WOULDN'T EVEN BE HERE FOR YOU TO TALK SHIT. AND SAYING THAT MY UNCLE MIKE IS A PUSSY...NO RESPECT...YOU'RE A PUSSY!!!!!!! |
[4/9/06 09:00:24 AM] jon | Santa Monica | Rock Star || 3 | Oh sorry, I guess I didn't realize this was a democrat run site, you don't want the truth you want your truth. so let me repeat one last time what I said about Mike (in a sweeter way) he never recovered from foster like jerry recovered from his losses. He just wasn't tough like jerry, he folded. everything I said about jimmy sticks and why his ridiculous picture up on the site instead of the soldiers picture anyways (Jonathan). listen to tina! |
[4/9/06 11:38:10 AM] jq's big fan | NYC | Kellygirlz || 7 | You cannot have a public site without people expressing their opinions, Sabrina. Perhaps you should not read what people are writing if you're not happy about what they are saying. Maybe you should stick to private emails. I just heard about this site on a note attached to that script read and I think that John and Bill have interesting things to say - unlike the usuals I gather, who are simply repeating themselves and trying not to offend one another. |
[4/9/06 03:26:15 PM] Kent | Murrieta, CA | KentAllenEnt@aol.com || 10 | JQ's Big fan, I only knew Jimmy for two years before he died and all I can go by is my impression of him by when I talked to him and by some of the results of this site, like making people more aware of fighters becoming injured in the ring, which I think has been more in the public eye. My impression of him was he was sincere and he tried to help his brother. The other stuff is to me unsubstantiated which the only conclusion I can make is I don't know. I can only go by what I saw and heard, not by something I didn't. As far as Mike goes, I would have to ask Jon if he ever fought for a world title or if he ever fought as hard as I saw on numerous occasions Mike Quarry fight, win or lose. Maybe Jon is a famous boxer who can tell it because he lived it but if not, than he like me, can't judge the courage of Mike in a negative light. I think Mike has a lot of guts and even if he wasn't as successful as Jerry was in the ring, he came close and he was successful in his own right and I have a feeling Jon, like me, never did it but Mike did do it. Mike was out there year after year putting himself on the line battling it out. |
[4/9/06 03:48:31 PM] Bill | Ohio | XXXXX || 10 | JQ, it is so refreshing to hear from... a guy like you on this site. I knew for years about Jimmy's hustle. But, God forbid, you defame the "good man" on this site. Kent, you opine that because Jimmy is dead it is not right to expose him for being a sham is child-like. Will you say the same thing about Don King when he dies.It is a funny thing about the people on this site. They blame everyone else for Jerry Quarry's woes except Jerry and themselves. There would be no Jerry Quarry's exploited, there would be no Don Kings; if these so-called fans were not willing to pay for the tickets. Boxing fans who subsidize Don King when he promotes fight's, and then call him evil. Are either hypocrites or stupid, or maybe both. Don't call Don King names when you pay for his "pay for view fights." It is the boxing fans money that enables Don King to hustle fighters.

4/9/06 08:06:08 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Bill, how is going by my own senses and not by so called evidence I have seen no proof of child-like?The best I can do without seeing proof is logically I don't know one way or the other. I just can't go by something that I haven't witnessed just because someone says it.As I have said, in talking to Jimmy he seemed sincere to me and I don't have anything else to go by.We have never said Jerry didn't have some responsibility for his condition.At least we can try to improve the situation by tightening the safety rules.It is doubtful boxing will become illegal but if it did, then it would become more dangerous as it would go underground with no regulations. |

4/9/06 08:47:15 PM|Bill|Ohio||xxxxx||10|Kent, what is childlike is saying, "he isn't around to defend himself." With that childlike logic, one could give Hitler a free pass.Kent, you want to make boxing safer but still enjoyable. Well that is like trying to make capital punishment safer. Boxing cannot be made safer and yet still enjoyable. Anyone who defends boxing is in the same league as Don King.People on this site talk a lot about poor Jerry Quarry. And blame everyone else for his plight, except. the fans who encouraged him. What about Mike Quarry." He is 53 years old and confined to a nursing home for life. How many of the Quarry fans on this site visit him or send a card. Have you visited him Kent, has Noam sent him a card? Of course not. The great Mickey Ward (and I mean great referring to his spirit and heart) has blurred vision and severe short term memory loss. How long will it be before he is in nursing home. If anyone really cares about boxers they will never buy a ticket to another fight or order "pay for view." Because if they do they are as culpable as Don King.

4/10/06 09:39:30 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron||10|I agree Angelo and saying since James is not alive then we can also cut Hitler some slack for his crimes against humanity because he is not alive either is absurd.There is proof Hitler committed crimes against millions of human beings but all we have is the statements of the newcomers saying James exploited his brother Jerry.

4/10/06 11:06:28 AM|Massimo|Roma|||10|I didn't know James Quarry but I'm pretty sure he was much better than Hitler.

4/10/06 05:54:36 AM|jon|santa monica||rockstar||5|kent and angelo otta get together and rent brokeback mountain, its about a couple guys just like you. as far as new people on the site, i think you'll get a bunch of them if there's a movie coming out and you're gonna hear all kinds of crap about Jimmy the liar! and kent who cares if i boxed? site ain't about me or you either you boring ass fool. this site is about jerry and mike and i say mike fell apart after foster
beat his ass. now is that true or false in your opinion, if you can give it without one of your long-winded soliloquys|

|4/10/06 06:37:59 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron||10|Jon: There are a number of people who would argue that James sacrificed a lot to take care of Jerry in the final years. At that point, Jerry wasn't commanding hundreds of thousands of dollars for fighting or for personal appearances—-he was a man in need and his brother stepped up to look after his best interests. James and his family took on the responsibility of caring for someone who might not be able to care for himself any longer. Say what you will about exploitation or profiting. I've heard it all before. I've also heard how Gerry Cooney's foundation is just a scheme and other such nonsense---no proof, just what people have "heard." Those who aren't doing much themselves have a knack for tearing down others. |

|4/10/06 06:55:39 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Jon, you are right that a movie shouldn't be about Jimmy that it should be about Jerry but that is a long way from proving Jimmy exploited Jerry.Personal insults like suggesting Angelo and I should rent Brokeback Mountain makes your credibility suspect.Stick to the facts and don't try to make our disagreement personal. Because I am not going to make it personal. |

|4/10/06 07:19:46 AM|Bill|Ohio||10|Kent, Angelo, Masimino, you guys are ridiculous.Massimino, I never compared James Quarry to Hitler. I was showing Kent how his logic is childlike. But if you want a comparison how about Cain and Abel. They were brothers.Angelo, what qualifies someone to be able to post on this site? Agreeing with you, Kent, Massimino, and Noam? This is a public site! If you like why don't you form a members only site, as someon suggested? Kent, the self proclaimed friend of the Quarry brothers. How many times have you visited Mike Quarry in the nursing home?Noam, how many cards have you sent Mike Quarry since he has been in the nursing home?All 4 of you guys criticize Don King. But all of you guys watch his fights. You guys are low rank hypocrites. |

|4/10/06 07:28:34 AM|tina|las vegas||tplang2000@aol.com||10|Hi, Just wanted everyone to know that Jonathan Quarry arrived safely in the states this morning,. Jerry would be so proud of him.. I wanted to thank you all again for your love and support. Please continue to pray for our soliders over seas.. and GOD BLESS OUR TROOPS...|

|4/10/06 07:40:03 AM|jq's big fan|nyc||kellygirlz||9|congratulatins, Tina and thank you jonathan. John the poster -- love you levity!! |

|4/10/06 09:04:04 AM|Massimo|Roma||10|Billino (or Billone ? How wilt are you ?)-I know you never compared James Quarry with Adolf Hitler ! I was only joking, I'm a joker !Who will be the new big fish in Italia ? Silvio Berlusconi or Romano Prodi ? I voted for... |

|4/10/06 09:22:27 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron||10|Come on Massimo, who did you vote for????|

|4/10/06 09:33:21 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Bill, how do you know I haven't tried to find out where Mike is? It is quite possible I haven't been able to find out this information. That it isn't public information.Maybe you know something I don't. Tina that is great news Jonathan had a safe trip home.| |

|4/10/06 09:55:32 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron||10|Jonathan: Again, a sincere Thank You for your service. Your safe return has given us all something positive to celebrate! All military personnel deserve our gratitude and prayers/thanks. |

|4/11/06 12:24:15 AM|Massimo|Roma||10|Angelo--I voted for Silvio Berlusconi. |

|4/11/06 12:43:32 AM|jon|sm||10|and I voted for steve buscemi|

|4/12/06 08:20:24 PM|Jumpity Bruce|Jumpville||Jump.com||10|I voted for my hero, the one who taught me everthing I know, Jumpity Joe!|

|4/13/06 05:17:08 AM|Massimo|Roma||legends@forever.com||10|That's Sorry, I couldn't resist!

Massimo, wow what a group of wrestlers! Big John Studd looks even Wilter than Andre the Midget! That must be a record of the most weight in a ring at one time, Studd, Andre, Hogan, and Bundy.

Kent, do you remember Buddy Rodgers aka "Nature boy?" He was the champ in the late 50's and early 60's.

Hey J.Q. big fan. No, I didn't reconfirm Bill's point. I've helped my mom, sister, all my kids with money all my life. Am I being exploited? I made a very good living in iron working. I help my grand kids with money whenever I can. Jerry and his family ALL WORKED TO HELP AN EXCEPTIONAL kid make 2.5 million dollars in the ring. It would have been pretty strange if he hadn't helped his family. YOU KNOW, the ones who took care of him when he was helpless and dying. Maybe you don't understand the concept of family taking care of family.

Wrestling Fan, I vaguely remember Buddy Rogers, more so from flims, but he was a real pioneer. I think wrestling went down hill starting in the steroid era when it was better to look good than be good. Not to say there haven't been people with real skills recently but a look is more important nowadays.

I also think it was a mistake to admit the matches are staged and even though we have always known this is so, it kind of changed the fantasy of the matches as entertainment. One that has always been real in pro wrestling and that is the stunts they do cause real injuries.

You should all be ashamed of yourselves for spitting on the memory of the Quarry's. Shut this site down. I don't think the baby should be thrown out with the bathwater by shutting down the site. I agree Forrest---it's incredible that people come here and are so amazingly disrespectful to the hosts and the family members of the men who are remembered on this site. But I think the good outnumber the bad and we just need to move on with more recollections of the great careers of the Quarrys and more boxing talk. I know that at some point, the people who are paying for this site will simply get fed up with the nonsense and close it down---but until then, let's try to enjoy it and try to discourage the hate that's been spewed here. I think it's fine to have opinions---but why does it have to get so personal? Kent: Your instincts are right---James Q. was a decent man who deserves better than the negative comments that were made lately. |
| 4/14/06 10:19:35 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Well, the negative people have not posted any comebacks for a few days now so it makes me think they have had their say or I hope so anyway.One thing Mr. Jimmy said about fans that booed his brothers, "if they bought a ticket, let them boo."He compared it to someone coming here and saying something, if they bought a computer let them have their say. He said all opinions are welcome here. After all this is an open forum.It is also possible that some of these people don't like this forum and they are trying to ruin it for the rest of us. They wouldn't care if this forum was gone but we would care!One thing Mr. Jimmy said about fans thatbooed his brothers, "if they bought a ticket, let them boo."He compared it to someone coming here and saying something, if they bought a computer let them have their say. He said all opinions are welcome here. After all this is an open forum.It is also possible that some of these people don't like this forum and they are trying to ruin it for the rest of us. They wouldn't care if this forum was gone but we would care! |
| 4/14/06 10:42:47 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron| | | |10|Kent: I agree on all points. It is discouraging though, to see a long time poster like Forrest Ward so fed up that he suggests doing away with the site. I agree with you that freedom of opinion and expression is important---not that these guys yelled "FIRE!" in a crowded movie theater, but by blasting the family and founders of the site as savagely as they did, it accomplished nothing and in my mind, puts the site at risk. I think the family expects us to exercise good judgment with our comments---like Mr. Jimmy used to do, they always discourage healthy debate, but unproductive personal attacks, I'm sure, won't be tolerated for long. |
| 4/14/06 03:43:23 PM|Steve|nj||na| | | |10|Kent and Angelo, don't you two guys ever get really angry at these idiot weirdos who just trawl the internet, looking for ways to take out their dissapointment with there lives on strangers on a site where they don't have to answer for their hatefull remarks. Kent and Angelo are usually the voice of restrain and reason. Free speech and everyones entitled to their opinion, blah, blah, blah. Stop being so reasonable and get this site where registration is mandatory. If I where the Quarry family, I'D be furious over these latest remarks. Yeah, call a guy who fought for the light heavyweight title a pussy. I guess you got away with it, you hidy hole pussy. |
| 4/14/06 04:45:16 PM|jon|santa monica||rs| | | |6|getting exciting, i was in mexico but steve i wanna tell you that it's okp to be gay. you don't need to be so angry about it dude. i just hope youre good at keeping house cause when you come flying out of the closet i dont want you to trip over anything and break your arm. |
| 4/14/06 06:42:05 PM|steve|NJ||NA| | | |10|Kent or Angelo, just for the sake of conversion. Do you guys remember Stanley Ketchell? I think he was one of the toughest, craziest (which is why he fascinates me), middleweights that ever lived. I think he could have whipped Ray Leonard, or most modern middleweights. Do you know how he met his demise? |
| 4/14/06 06:55:09 PM|steve |NJ||NA| | | |10|Hi Jon, you've caught me in an angry mood. I've just lost my brother at 52. I come to this site for fun and relaxation. Then I have to contend with little girls like you. |
| 4/14/06 07:14:54 PM|steve|NJ||NA| | | |10|Hi, JON, JON. Keep spouting your garbage. Your making my case for mandatory registration on this site. I'd even be willing to pay a reasonable fee to accomplish this. Just imagine, then I could locate you.
4/14/06 07:24:48 PM|jon|santa monica||rs||7|sorry steve, i'm not interested in having sexual relations with you.

4/14/06 08:23:12 PM|koo koo clock|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|THE HANDS OF TIME ARE POINTING AT ALL LIARS AND FAKES, THE QUARRY'S HAVE PAID THE PRICE, GIVE THEM THEIR RESPECT !!!!

4/14/06 08:30:36 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Steve, I have seen films of Kethchel, tough guy but hard to tell how he would have done against modern middleweights.Hey, sorry to hear about your brother that is a huge loss.Whoever this character Jon is, he showed he has no class by still taking digs at you after you posted the news of your brother's death.Just ignore him he is not worth our time.I REPEAT, NO CLASS!I FOR ONE AM NOT GOING TO RESPOND TO ANYTHING HE SAYS.

4/14/06 11:51:55 PM|jq's big fan|NYC||kellygirlz|||5|Gentlemen, it's good Friday. Perhaps whatever caused this dispute should be put aside. Steve, I do not think John fancies himself a tough guy and obviously you do. My thought is that neither of you are. At the risk of sounding redundant, I came on this site because of a script I read. I was looking to talk about it and gave some of my opinions -- I believe you'll receive more shortly. I see that a few of you lads have had a run of this site for a while and I'm certain will continue to do so. I am signing off. No offence intended for what I've posted -- and Steve if you really would like to you can always find me (after Easter of course, I'm a submarine Catholic) I live at 338 E. 116th street buzzer 3b in NYC -- by all means come get me. PS I'm a sporting man myself and my $ says you won't. All the best everyone...

4/15/06 04:45:23 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|Steve, I am very sorry to hear about your brother. My sincere condolances.

4/15/06 03:18:18 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Joe Frazier was a guest on ESPN Friday Night Fights.He seemed to be in pretty good shape mentally, he doesn't talk very good but then again he never really did and he didn't seem any worse now. But physically he has gotten thin and they showed him hitting the heavy bag and he didn't seem very strong anymore.He listed his five best fights. 1. Ali 1 2. Doug Jones 3. Eddie Machen 4. Quarry 1 5. Ellis 1.In the main event in a not very good fight Audley Harrison, former Olympic gold medalist, looked lethargic in losing a ten round decision to Dominick Guinn. At this point it looks like Harrison was a bit over hyped as a prospect.

4/15/06 05:18:51 PM|steve|nj||na||10|Kent, Massimo, thank you for your condolences. I generally try to keep my personal life off this site. This guy just caught me at a bad time, and I just blurted it out about Joe's sudden death. He was the baby of the family. Enough said. As long as we've got guys like Kent, Massimo, Angelo, Jimmy D., Noam, Forrest Ward, and all the other good guys I've not mentioned, this site should hold up. Maybe if I learned not to be antagonized so easily, that would help.

4/16/06 01:10:10 AM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia2163@aol.com||10|Hey All, how's it going? Been a while, hope you all have been good, and no fighting haha. Sure do love & miss you Dad, Mom, Uncle Jerry, Aunt Brenda, and Grandma. Keep coming back all!

4/16/06 11:08:19 AM|Kookoo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|Sonya, hey baby how are you? Hey it would be nice if there were more pics. of the Quarry family so everybody could see what all the quarrys looked like. I'm sure Jerry's sons look just like Jerry. Someday I will marry a Quarry women :)

4/16/06 01:58:42 PM|jon|sm||rs||5|Last you'd have to go live in a trailer! Happy Easter.

4/16/06 04:17:18 PM|koo koo|ny||kookooclock000@yahoo.com|||10|I'd have to buy one from you, you own all of them Jon Boy, your time is up Jon boy, the clock man is back, THIS IS QUARRYVILLE BABY and you wouldn't make pimple on a Quarrys ass. Happy Easter to all the Quarrys
[4/16/06 05:46:29 PM] SABRINA | WHEREVER | WHEREVER@WHATEVER | 10| JON YOU NEED TO SHUT THE FK UP ABOUT MY FAMILY... YOU SHOULD GO LIVE IN A TRAILER PARK YOU FKEN PIECE OF TRASH!!!! STOP COMING HERE IF ALL YOU WANT TO DO IS TALK TRASH ABOUT MY FAMILY YOU LOSEER! !!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
[4/16/06 06:02:49 PM] jon | sm | rs | 10 | thank you for making my point -- i will go away now cuz i've had my fun, no hard feelings!!
[4/16/06 06:06:37 PM] SABRINA | FLORIDA | WHEREVER@ | 10 | GOOD YOU ASSHOLE!! GO THE FK AWAY
[4/16/06 06:19:35 PM] steve | NJ | NA | 10 | Hey Sabrina, Koo Koo, it's amazing how one small child like Jon/JQ's biggest fan, can so disrupt the natural flow of this site. It's amazing, that when I challenged Little Jonny, J.Q.'s biggest fan responded. I think their all three the same baby angels, looking for a place in life. It's, funny, that someone I know couldn't find that N.Y. address.
[4/16/06 06:30:02 PM] steve | NA | NJ | 10 | PS wasn't I brave sending SOMEONE ELSE to that address in nyc.!!
[4/16/06 09:05:25 PM] koo koo | ny | (kookooclock000@yahoo.com) | 10 | Not really Steve. It sounds like he called your bluff.
[4/16/06 09:46:23 PM] steve | na | na | 10 | Yeah, you got me, heh, heh, KOO KOO. HE SCARED ME AND CALLED MY BLUFF. However, there's no such address. By the way, that last post under my name, wasn't me! The fact that I'm justifying myself to a fucking weirdo who calls himself KOO KOO, or Jon, or Bill, [and I suspect their all the same nightcrawler], tells me it's time to get the fk out of Dodge till maybe the Quarry family cleans this site up. Require registration!!!!!!
[4/16/06 11:28:24 PM] Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia2163@aol.com | 10 | Hey Jon, I don't live in no trailer, and who cares where we live anyways. Home is what you make it. And if you have nothing nice to say then keep quiet. There is still "No Quit in a Quarry" don't you forget it
[4/16/06 11:34:52 PM] Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia2163@aol.com | 10 | And another thing you all know who you are need to keep your traps shut about our family, cause all in all, you don't fight one of us you fight all of us. Any how you really have no idea what the hell you are talking about.
[4/17/06 07:32:52 AM] Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 | Steve: I don't think I remember Stan Ketchell----familiar, but I don't remember much about him.Sonia: You prove that there are still some fighting Quarry's! Glad to have a family member backing the reasonable people on this site!Kent: I'm surprised Frazier didn't include Manilla on his list of greatest fights. It doesn't matter that he lost---in fact, I think his performance in Manilla was about as good as the first fight against Ali that he won---but the outcome wasn't as good obviously.
[4/17/06 08:26:23 AM] koo koo | ny | (kookooclock000@yahoo.com) | 10 | That last comment was not from somebodys playing with the clockman's name. You will know if it's me, I don't have anything bad to say about the Quarrys, so if that happens it's one those frauds again
[4/17/06 08:35:13 AM] koo koo | ny | (kookooclock000@yahoo.com) | 10 | Quarry ladies calm down, don't lose your dignity over these cowards, thats what people that snipe & run are. People with nothing better to do than give a family that been through so much even more grief. THE QUARRY'S CAN ALWAYS HOLD THEIR HEADS UP HIGH, THEY ARE QUARRY'S. STEVE, WHAT STEVE, JUST SOME NOBODY TALKING TRASH, CAUSE HE IS TRASH
[4/17/06 09:38:34 AM] Sonia Hathaway (Quarry) | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia2163@aol.com | 10 | Koo Koo, don't sweat it, those people know who they are the comments were for. Just remember the regulars are faithfull, so thanks for that. Remember "There's No Quit in a Quarry". We love & miss you Dad, Mom, Uncle Jerry, Aunt Brenda, and Grandma Marie.
[4/17/06 06:37:47 PM] Noam | (same) | same | 10 | Well, I see there has been a lot going on since I've been away.Sonia, I am sorry to say this but I think Jerry and Mike would have been better off if there was not, "no quit in the Quarrys". Sonia, you are not helping your cause by using vulgar language. You are just lowering yourself to the same level as your detractors. Have some respect for Jerry and stop using the vulgar language.Sonia, I am sorry to say this but I think Jerry and Mike would have been better off if there was not, "no quit in the Quarrys". But if people keep saying things they no nothing about, it ain't right, then it ain't just me you all gotta worry about. Family is family.Sonia, you are not helping your cause by using vulgar language. You are just lowering yourself to the same level as your detractors. Have some respect for Jerry and stop using the vulgar language.4/17/06 11:06:02 PM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA|Sonia90101@aol.com|10|Excuse me Noam, No vulgar language came from me. But if people keep saying things they no nothing about, it ain't right, then it ain't just me you all gotta worry about. Family is family.4/18/06 01:09:04 AM|Noam|same|same|10|Sonia, I apologize for the mistake. I confused you with Sabrina. But, be that as it may, are you threatening me?4/18/06 07:51:00 AM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA|Sonia2163@aol.com|10|Excuse me Noam, no threat. Anyone, who reads this there are no threats, just watch what you say, who you say it about, and things will go smoothly. Dad, and Uncle Jerry, wanted this for boxing, not petty fights. If you have nothing nice to say, then say nothing at all, is what my Mom, taught us. Keep checking out the site, its great.4/18/06 08:07:10 AM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA|Sonia2163@aol.com|10|Hey Kent, whats up? Hey KooKoo, whats up? Let's get back to boxing people.4/18/06 03:39:28 PM|Kent|Murrieta, CA|kentallenent@aol.com|10|I am getting a chance to take part in a telephone press conference with Chris Byrd and Wladimir Klitschko tomorrow.There will be about 20 other reporters on the conference call but I should be able to ask them two questions a piece. Should be interesting.Folks, any question ideas? You may have something I like better than what I come up with, assuming somebody else doesn't ask the same questions.4/18/06 04:47:42 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC|funktron|10|Kent: I'm not sure how you could phrase the question, but I'd be curious to know if Byrd expects to be at his best early in the fight or later in the fight. I'm wondering if he expects to take the fight to Klitscho in the opening rounds, or if he thinks he will just try to weather the storm and then rally to steal a decision?4/18/06 09:31:07 PM|Steve|na|na|10|Angelo and Kent, as the only two mythical experts who seem to be above being called trash or have their opinions challenged or their persons threatened. I would humbly like to offer this opinion to you two class acts. I'd like to pick Byrd in a late knockout or a decision. I've been posting here for 6 or 7 years. I've been posting here for six or seven years. I'M GETTING A LITTLE WEARY OF BEING THREATENED BY IMAGINARY posters with fake addresses. Yeah, I've still got enough resources left to find a fake address. Sometimes, there are so many bullshit artists on this site, it becomes like Alice and Wonderland.4/18/06 09:34:33 PM|INSIDESCOOP|LA|HOLLYWOOD REPORTS|10|http://www.imdb.com/name/nm0000982/click above link to find out who's playing Jerry Quarry in the soon to be announced film "The Bellflower Bomber" will come back with more information>>>>>>>>4/18/06 10:10:43 PM|Steve|nj|na|10|Angelo, you don't even have to bother to respond, since I have never been able to make a friendly connection with you. Kent, I if may be so bold. Stanley Ketchell was one of the baddest, toughest middleweights ever. He fought Jack Johnson, and actually went for a knockout, and dropped Johnson. Johnson, enraged, manfully KO'D Ketchall, who he outweight by 52lb's, in the next round. Stanley Ketchell was a wild child to say the least. He was shot dead at the age of 23 or 24, by the jealous owner of a diner, where he was making an inappropriate pass at the owner's wife.4/18/06 11:55:00 PM|Steve|nj|na|10|By the way, after I pretended to send someone over to spanish harlem to the address I pretended wasn't real, does anyone believe I'm tough yet? Because I just can't shut up about it until somebody believes that I'm tough.
I think Cristiano Byrd will win over W. Klitschko, probably on points. He is a very smart, a very good fighter. Kent, you may ask Wladimir how is his brother Vitali and when he'll come back.

I'd love to see Byrd win in the fashion Steve predicts, by late round KO or TKO maybe?? But I think he might win by decision with no knockdowns.

Angelo, do you think I'm tough? Why won't you respond to me! We know you're not Steve.

1) We know you're not Steve. 2) Steve is probably tough. 3) You're definitely not.

Thank you for defending me, Angelo. Can we please be friends now! I did ask Chris Byrd your question and here is part of my article that I sent in to Eastside Boxing.com. I didn't get a chance to ask Klitschko anything as there were a lot of reporters on the teleconference and the operator cut me off before I could ask him anything. I asked Byrd the following two questions, 1. "You have had several very close fights recently, do you expect this fight with Klitschko to be a close fight and have those close fights helped you?" Byrd said, "they have helped me for sure. They gave me valuable experience that I have learned from. I have trained hard for this fight and I am ready for anything." 2. "Are you planning to come out fast or are you planning to weather Klitschko's early storm if he comes out fast and then come on later on in the fight?" Byrd answered, "sometimes I come out fast and sometimes I don't it depends on how the fight is going and I won't know until I get in the ring. I am ready to go twelve hard rounds." Of course the transcript may be slightly different as I didn't record the conference and I wrote my article from my notes. Sometimes the transcripts are edited anyway.

Kent: His "ready to go 12 hard rounds" comment, translated, probably means he expects this thing to go the distance. My guess is that he's going to be cautious early and throw hands in the second half of the fight. He's today's Jimmy Young. I expect him to win this---but anything can and sometimes does happen. Hey everyone, I havent stopped by this site in a while mainly because i have been busy, but it is dissapointing to have read through the last 100 or so posts and seen all the fighting, I mean think about it what do you accomplish fighting.... nothing a lot of people here have to much pride and just need to relax and take a look at the big picture, the fighting just isnt necessary lets act like adults here and just have an informative discussion, lets get back to the talking about boxing and please do it without insulting my familiy, this is me being calm and rational, I have seen things in my short life so far that clearly illustrate the little shit just isnt worth it, well i have said my piece lets stick to the boxing can we, also thank you for everyones support while i was gone i appreciate and look forward to talking to many people here through the coming months. Everybody take care and God Bless women in our military.Welcome back Jonathan, you are right, the tone of recent posts has not been good but there have been a couple of newcomers who have rocked the boat and while we should have ignored them, some people felt a need to respond, sometimes in kind.Again, it is good that you returned home safely.Well Jonathan, welcome back and God bless you. You'll be different now. I was an airborne Ranger in Nam, I don't know about what you had to witness or actually do yourself, son. I do know you should carry no guilt. I'm sure you did your duty.Hey Jonathan. If ever you need anyone to talk about your combat, or even witnessing the results of close quarters combat, please say so on this site. I am a representative for the V.A. We can always try to find a way to shake that old, past stuff away. Remember, none of it means a fuckin' thing.Wlad just cemented his place as the greatest heavyweight of all time. Wladimir K., did beat the crap out of Byrd but the greatest of all time, he has a ways to go. For those that don't know, Wlad K won the IBF heavyweight title by a seventh round knockout and he won almost every round. I only saw one round as even, the first and the rest for Wlad.So I wasn't right when I said that Cristiano Byrd was going to win on points... Now, when Vitali comes back, a fight between Vitali and Wladimir for the crown seems inevitable. If Vitali wanna be the king of the world he has to whip his dear little brother. It's like Kent against Toney! To the visitors to this site, below is a fairly recent article written by New York attorney David Berlin who has been a strong advocate for change in boxing. His comments reflect many of the beliefs and efforts by The Jerry Quarry Foundation as espoused in the past 11 years.Wednesday Mar 29, 2006Boxing and the Lawby David BerlinAs Joe Mesi looks to make his comeback in sunny Puerto Rico, far from Buffalo's bitter chill, he has found not only warm weather but a warm welcome which he probably would not get from his home state's commission. There might be differing points of view on whether Mesi, who suffered three late knockdowns and bleeding on the brain in his 2004 battle with Vassiliy Jirov, should be allowed to fight again. But the fact that he can choose to avoid Nevada and New York - states that likely will not license Mesi because of the danger to his health and life - and instead find a soft commission that will allow him to enter a boxing ring highlights the need for reform in boxing. Boxing needs a single set of safety standards to protect fighters, a single set of rules to protect the integrity of the sport, a single ratings body to determine champions and contenders and a single national commission to govern the sport. Inside the ropes, boxing remains “the sport to which all other sports aspire,” to borrow George Foreman's words. Pure. Elemental. Like the men inside the ring, stripped down to the bare essentials. Man against man, matching strength against strength, speed against speed, skill against skill, will against will. But the purity of what takes place inside the ropes is too often tainted by what takes place just outside those ropes. Too often we see incompetent judges, negligent commissions and corrupt sanctioning bodies all making questionable decisions. When Dave Tiberi outworks James Toney over twelve rounds but is robbed by incompetent judges of the title he has earned in the ring, boxing suffers. When Brad Rone, overweight and with 26 straight losses under his belt, is denied a license to fight in Nevada and then dies in a boxing ring when he is permitted to fight in neighboring Utah, boxing suffers. When Zab Judah loses his championship in the ring but is allowed to retain his IBF belt, boxing suffers. When the rules are made up as you go along - like the card game in Bang the Drum Slowly - the legitimacy of the sport suffers. Because no matter how great the fight, when the best man doesn’t win, or when the winner doesn’t get the title he fought for, the sport is compromised. And when the sport loses its legitimacy, the fans turn away.

Long experience tells us that change will not come from within. The power brokers of the sport are not looking for change. Don King and Bob Arum are thriving on the status quo. The IBF and the WBC and the countless other sanctioning bodies, each with its own champions, continue to collect sanctioning fees. The state commissioners, many of them political appointees who enjoy their ringside seats and their government salaries but who have limited experience in boxing, do not want to lose their petty fiefdoms. And HBO and Showtime are more interested in their bottom lines than in using their powerful positions in the sport to correct boxing’s ills.

The boxers themselves, most coming from tough neighborhoods, most with limited opportunities, most fighting for close to nothing as they pursue their hard dreams, do not have the power to effect change.

Change must be imposed on boxing from the outside. It must be imposed by the law. Only the law has a chance of cleaning up “the red-light district of sports,” Jimmy Cannon’s label of half a century ago which remains an apt description today.

Senator John McCain and his colleagues in Congress are trying. But their efforts and the passage of two congressional bills in the past decade have done little to alter the way that boxing is run.

The Professional Boxing Safety Act of 1996 imposes on state commissions general rules regarding the health and safety of boxers, suspensions and conflicts of interest. But the rules are so vague that they are virtually meaningless. The Act requires that a physician certify whether a boxer is fit to safely compete, but fails to specify what medical tests, if any, a boxer must pass. It requires that health insurance be provided to each boxer to cover any injuries sustained in a bout, but fails to specify the amount of that coverage; as it stands, most state commissions require so little medical coverage that a boxer who requires surgery for a broken hand or jaw, not uncommon injuries in boxing, will find himself in debt, owing far more in medical bills than he has earned for the fight.

The Muhammad Ali Boxing Reform Act, passed by Congress in 2000, correctly identifies some of boxing’s problems but fails to provide meaningful or effective solutions. The Ali Act acknowledges that boxing, unlike other major professional sports, operates without any centralized authority “to establish uniform and appropriate business practices and ethical standards”; it acknowledges that unscrupulous promoters can take advantage of the lack of uniformity in the way boxing is run by bringing boxing events to states with weak commissions; it acknowledges that boxing’s sanctioning organizations have failed to establish “credible and objective criteria to rate professional boxers,” and that the ratings, because they are subject to manipulation, “have deprived boxers of fair opportunities for advancement, and have undermined public confidence in the integrity of the sport.” The Act attempts to address some of these ills with provisions intended to protect boxers from coercive promotional contracts, with its suggestion (yes, suggestion) that the sanctioning organizations adopt criteria to be developed by the Association of Boxing Commissions for rating boxers, and with rules requiring financial disclosure by sanctioning bodies, promoters, judges and referees. But while some managers and promoters have added clauses to their contracts saying that they must abide by the Ali Act, the 1996 and 2000 laws have had little practical effect on the way boxing is run and have done little to improve the lot of boxers.

The problem with the Professional Boxing Safety Act and the Muhammad Ali Boxing Reform Act is that they attempt to tinker with a system that needs an overhaul. These laws are half-measures at best, defined by their inherent contradictions. Even while raising questions about the ethical shortcomings of the sanctioning organizations, the Ali Act implicitly recognizes these same organizations’ legitimacy; it says, for example, that a promoter cannot require future options from a boxer who is fighting in “a mandatory bout under the rules of a sanctioning organization.” And while recognizing that professional boxing, alone among the major sports, “operates without any private sector association, league, or centralized industry organization,” and that weak state commissions are exploited by less-than-honest promoters, it nevertheless posits that state commissions are “the proper regulators of professional boxing events.”

Proposed legislation in the form of the Professional Boxing Amendments Act of 2004 and then the Professional Boxing Amendments Act of 2005 sought to rectify this latter problem by creating the United States Boxing Commission, a federal commission under the auspices of the Department of Commerce. But for two years running the legislation did not receive the necessary votes in Congress to become law, in part because a number of congressmen who received monies from promoters like King and Arum voted against the bills. The Professional Boxing Amendments Act would have created the United States Boxing Commission, a national commission responsible for protecting “the health, safety, and general interests of boxers” and for ensuring “uniformity, fairness, and integrity in professional boxing.” Specifically, it would have been the job of the USBC to “promulgate uniform standards for professional boxing,” “oversee all professional boxing matches in the United States,” and “establish and maintain uniform minimum health and safety standards for professional boxing.” This would include the establishment of a medical registry which would maintain “comprehensive medical records and medical denials or suspensions for every professional boxer.” The creation of a central commission and of uniform standards would have been a positive step forward for boxing. If implemented successfully, it would have meant that boxing in the United States would have been run in large part by a single set of rules, it would have ended the practice of shopping for weak state commissions to hold certain fights, and it would have prevented a boxer denied a license in one state because he was not medically fit to compete from securing a license in a different state. In bringing some uniformity and consistency to the sport, the law would have brought a legitimacy to the business of boxing which is presently missing. But the proposed law did not go far enough, and for that reason it may be a good thing that the bill did not garner the necessary votes. Even while it sought to create a new governing body for boxing, the United States Boxing Commission, it would have left in place existing organizations which we already know do not work. Boxing guru Cus D’Amato famously said, “People who are born round don’t die square.” That goes for sanctioning organizations and state commissions as well. The sanctioning organizations have a long history of manipulating ratings, favoring promoters with whom they have a relationship (Don King comes quickly to mind), and putting greed far ahead of integrity - all of which add up to the boxer, the “exploited worker,” to borrow Jack Newfield’s description of the fighter in his penetrating piece “The Shame of Boxing,” getting less than fair treatment. So the law’s mandate that the Commission develop guidelines for rating fighters and that the sanctioning organizations follow these guidelines would leave in place exactly what is wrong with boxing. It would leave in place organizations like the IBF, which was exposed in a 2000 federal trial for its long-standing practice of accepting bribes to rig its ratings. Despite the exposure of this rampant corruption and despite the appointment of a federal monitor who oversaw the IBF for several years, little has changed.

According to the IBF’s ratings criteria, which state that a boxer who beats a higher-ranked boxer “will take the position of the higher rated fighter,” Carlos Baldomir’s recent victory over IBF champion Zab Judah should have made him the new IBF champion. But the IBF, true to its corrupt form, chose to ignore its own published criteria and left Judah with its worthless title. Appropriately for an organization with no true standards, it has written into its rules that “all ratings criteria are subject to exception,” a catch-all that makes the rest of its rules meaningless. Instead of perpetuating these alphabet soup organizations by recognizing them in the law, Congress should work to abolish the need for these organizations. Instead of legislating that “the Commission may not. . .rank professional boxers,” Congress should mandate the opposite, that a national commission not only develop guidelines for rating boxers but implement those guidelines as well. The hope is that the Commission’s rankings, “based on the athletic merits and professional records of the boxers”, to use language from the proposed law, and not based on the political and financial maneuverings of powerful promoters, would come to be accepted by the boxing community. And if that could happen – boxers ranked based on merit, a champion becoming a champion because he vanquished the previous champion in the ring – boxing would achieve a level of respect it has been missing for a long time. Of course it will take more than Congress passing a law. It will take the cooperation of certain elements of the boxing community, and particularly the cooperation of the television commentators and boxing writers. If the commentators and writers recognize the legitimacy of a United States Boxing Commission champion, if they refuse to pay homage to corrupt sanctioning bodies, then the WBC and WBO and WBA belts will become worthless, and the organizations that hand out those belts will melt away like the Wicked Witch of the West. Even if the sanctioning bodies could change their nature (and I believe, like Cus D’Amato, that they have neither the ability nor the willingness to change), even if they could apply purely objective criteria to their ratings, under the proposed law boxing would still be left with multiple champions in each weight division. And when the grand title of “world champion” doesn’t mean what it says, the title is diminished and the sport is diminished. The very idea of having multiple world champions seems to clash with the mission of the proposed United States Boxing Commission, which is to ensure “uniformity” and “fairness” and “integrity” in professional boxing. The proposed law also fails because it leaves in place state and tribal boxing commissions. While the Professional Boxing Amendments Act would set minimum standards for local commissions to follow and in that way would bring a measure of uniformity to the sport, it would allow different state and tribal commissions to operate under different rules and would leave day-to-day operations, including the enforcement of these rules, to the presently existing local commissions. This too goes against the goal of uniformity in the way that boxing is run. A sweeping indictment of all local commissions would not be proper. There exist commissions with appropriate medical standards in place, competent operations in place, and directors who care about boxing and care about its practitioners. Unfortunately there are too many commissions without the proper safeguards, too many commissions where rules are not followed and where boxers are not protected. Examples abound. I witnessed a weigh-in in Indianapolis where the two members of the Indiana commission who were “supervising” the weigh-in sat in folding chairs ten feet away from a bathroom scale and asked each fighter’s handler for the reading on the scale. In Utah, Brad Rone was allowed to fight with 26 straight losses coming into a July 2003 bout, even though a state rule mandated that, where a boxer has lost six consecutive fights (yes, twenty less than Rone’s streak), the commission must review those losses before allowing the boxer to enter the ring; typically, no review ever took place. Clearly, if rules are not enforced, they become worthless. And state commissions that have a proven record of misusing their discretion in deciding when and whether to enforce rules should not be entrusted with the enforcement of new rules. Congress has recognized the existence of weak commissions - indeed, this was one impetus for the proposed federal legislation - and would be wrong to now rely on these same commissions. Perhaps what is needed are local branches of the United States Boxing Commission, branches which are overseen by the national commission. (Directors of state commissions who have demonstrated their competence could be placed at the head of these branches.) These local branches could employ a single set of rules throughout the country. And an enforcement division of the USBC could be responsible for making certain that local branches followed these rules. What is key is that a structure be established to bring real uniformity to boxing. Uniformity in the rules, uniformity in the rankings, uniformity in safety standards, uniformity in medical tests required for a boxer to be licensed, uniformity in standards for judges and referees, uniformity in the way fights are scored. And what is equally key is that competent, principled people be employed to create and to enforce these rules and standards, people who know boxing, who care about boxing and who care about the boxers who participate in the hardest game.

The government may not be well suited to the role of knight in shining armor, but the job of taking on the greed of the most powerful promoters, the corruption of sanctioning bodies and the incompetence of state commissions has not attracted any other candidates. Congress, having failed to pass the Professional Boxing Amendments Act, has another chance to get it right - to create the United States Boxing Commission, as already proposed, and to go further than the proposals of the last two years. It must establish uniform standards in boxing throughout the country and rid the sport of the sanctioning bodies. Only the law can give boxing a fighting chance to be a respected sport. That way boxing fans can focus their attention on what matters - two men, inside the ropes, doing battle.

4/24/06 07:55:53 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron||10|Well Goll-ly! Geez, I've been wrong before, Lord knows I've been wrong before, but never this wrong about the outcome of a fight, save for me picking Mike Spinks to decision Mike Tyson! Kent: How bad was it? Did Byrd do ANYTHING?|4/24/06 09:38:30 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Angelo, no Byrd didn't do much. After watching the replay of the fight, I thought Byrd won the first round by landing some body shots while Wlad was mostly probing with his jab, slow round.|4/24/06 03:32:32 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron||10|Kent: Is it possible that Byrd just got too old overnight? I read that he was 35---I didn't think he was that old. |4/24/06 05:31:13 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||10|Angelo, it is possible, especially because of his style of making the other guy miss and then landing punches that Byrd's reflexes are not what they used to be. But apparently Klitschko won most of the rounds in their first fight five and a half years ago so maybe it is a stylistic match problem for Byrd.|4/24/06 09:48:16 PM|Steve |NJ||NA||10|Look, Angelo, after all the years together on this site, you've got to realize their is some strange person posting under my name. I've never ment to disrespect you, or curry your favor. I greatly respect your opinion on any subject. You seem like an Intelligent man. I have lead a pretty rough life. However, I don't consider myself a tough guy at all. I apologize if I project myself that way. I simply don't have a lot of tolerance for troublemakers|4/25/06 01:44:04 AM|Noam|same||same||10|I haven't visited here for about 3 weeks, maybe longer. I just started going back through the posts and saw that someone has been using my name posting stuff I didn't write. My mother had surgery and I had to go there and stay with her. That's why I haven't been posting here. I don't know who has been posting using my name, but I suppose I didn't have a shortage of guys who didn't like me. To whoever was insulted by the person using my name, please realise it was not me. I toned down my posts ages ago. Now I'll go back and read what has been written using my name.

4/25/06 01:54:39 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 | I went back through and the last post I made was on 2 April 2006. It was the Irish joke to Steve. Steve, I wasn't being racist to the Irish. I've got Irish blood (half) myself. I actually got told that joke as a blonde joke and I changed it to Irish for you. It was meant to be funny, not racist. I think you know that. After I posted that joke I left home and didn't read this site until now. That's when I saw that someone used my name to insult some of you. That wasn't me. It happened just after Forest posted.

4/25/06 02:05:08 AM | Noam | same | same | 10 | Hey listen guys and the Quarry women. I'm reading some of the old posts while I've been away and I have to say I'm not bigoted to blacks. That's nonsense. If I was racist, Ali wouldn't be my favourite fighter. I'm not Howard C. I've never been to Louisville. The closest I got was New Orleans and Houston.

4/25/06 07:31:28 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 | I think we've had a lot of that nonsense---using our names to post rubble. By the way, is it Daygo or Dago? I'm Italian, so I should know. Noam---those are mafia or Italian jokes. Have you ever heard of Dago Red Wine (Cheap Italian table wine)? I've been called a Wop too, but usually affectionately! I hope!!

4/25/06 09:33:39 AM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Guys, obviously there is/are some clown(s) using other people's names so the best thing we can do is just ignore any suspect posts and hopefully he or they will go away.

4/25/06 07:31:28 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 | I think we've had a lot of that nonsense---using our names to post rubble. By the way, is it Daygo or Dago? I'm Italian, so I should know. Noam---those are mafia or Italian jokes. Have you ever heard of Dago Red Wine (Cheap Italian table wine)? I've been called a Wop too, but usually affectionately! I hope!!

4/25/06 09:33:39 AM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Guys, obviously there is/are some clown(s) using other people's names so the best thing we can do is just ignore any suspect posts and hopefully he or they will go away.

4/25/06 09:21:40 PM | Kid Quick | Philly | Quickie2@spores.net | 9 | Bernard is gonna smoke Tarver. Bernard has actually only lost one fight in his life. Bernard has been robbed twice by the establishment. It was already pre-ordained that Taylor would beat Bernard and Bernard knew this but couldn't stop it. Just like Sonny had to lay down twice, so did Bernard. Bernard almost made a mistake in the first fight and got mad and knocked Taylor out. Just like Sonny started punching too hard and Ali wanted to quit. Bernard and Sonny both weren't what the public wanted anymore. Winky has already heard the jive and knows he has to knock Taylor out or he has no chance. Bernard knows.
Hi Kent. Have you had anything to do with Roy Jones senior? Is he a good trainer? I read something the other day and the writer was describing him as a "legendary trainer?" I know that he trained his son, Roy junior, but I don't know of him training any other champions, justifying the "legendary" tag.

No one would call Tony Soprano a name like that and live to do it again!

I agree, in the heavyweight class that phenom doesn't apply. Noam, welcome back. You know, I read your latest Irish joke, and reread it, and I just didn't get it. Then I caught the word "frier", which I was reading as fire. Duh. Good one though. It just shows how easily a well intentioned post can be misinterpreted.

I just watched the movie, "Godfather 3". I noticed that Vito Antiferumo, had a fairly large part, no dialog, but plenty of on camera time. He looked like 160lbs. of muscle stuffed into a $170.00 double breasted suit.

I noticed that Vito Antiferumo, had a fairly large part, no dialog, but plenty of on camera time. He looked like 160lbs. of muscle stuffed into a $170.00 double breasted suit.

I noticed that Vito Antiferumo, had a fairly large part, no dialog, but plenty of on camera time. He looked like 160lbs. of muscle stuffed into a $170.00 double breasted suit.

I noticed that Vito Antiferumo, had a fairly large part, no dialog, but plenty of on camera time. He looked like 160lbs. of muscle stuffed into a $170.00 double breasted suit.

I love the Godfather films. Watched them dozens of times. Afterwards I walk around whistling the Godfather theme and I can't help it and it lasts for months and gets annoying and people look at me like I'm nuts. I had noticed Vito Antuofurmo (how to spell?) before. I don't think he speaks, though. Angelo, The Sopranos is tops. The dialogue is hilarious. Is this how Mafioso types speak in New York? After watching an episode of The Sopranos, it is hard not to swear a lot. I walk around here talking like I'm some 'made' guy.

Steve: I saw Al Martino a coupla months ago at the Kemmet Center in Philly. He is 65 years old. He sang the Godfather theme song. His voice is still as strong and beautiful as ever. They also had the Johnny Maistro and the Brooklyn Bridge, and the Skyliners. Hah! You infant, you have no idea who I'm talking about do you?

I've heard of Al Martino. Good singer. I prefer Tony Bennett though. When I watch the Godfather film, I walk around afterwards whistling the theme tune. I love the tune but get sick of whisking it after a month or so. When I watch The Sopranos, I walk around afterwards swearing like a 'made' guy. I don't like swearing, but I just can't help it after watching that show. It's a real problem for me.

I saw Johnny Maestro and Brooklyn Bridge on the PBS Series "My Music." Do you ever watch that? It's mostly 60's and 70's music of various genres---one week they'll have soul, the next week doo wop, then rock---Brooklyn Bridge sounded great. One of the shows had the Stylistics, and they were really smooth sounding---haven't lost it. |
[4/27/06 01:23:22 PM]Massimo|Roma||4|||10|I have never seen Mafia movies. I don't like violent movies, with the exception of Rambo that is funny.|
[4/27/06 01:49:03 PM]Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|I know the Mafia (in real life) would be insulted but I don't see any difference between them and inner city street thugs like the Crips and the Bloods.Both of them deal in death so one group is a bad as the other.The Mafia likes to think they have a lot of class because they have nice things like cars and clothes and probably art work but remember the Nazi leadership under Hitler in Germany had the best of everything, wine, clothes, cars, etc and they lived high at the expense of others and to me they had no class.Evil is evil.|
[4/27/06 03:41:23 PM]Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Kent: You better be careful, some of the made guys and top dons might be reading this board!!
[4/27/06 11:14:44 PM]Noam|same||same|||10|But Kent, Mafia movies and programs are entertaining to watch. Let me ask whether you know of anything Roy Jones Senior has done except train his son. Has he trained any other champions? Was he a boxer himself? I don't think it's accurate to describe him as a legend, is it?What do you call a bear missing an ear? A b. I've still got it!|
[4/28/06 12:40:08 AM]Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Angelo, I am not worried. I just got to tell it like it is.Noam, I have never met either Roy Jones, father or son, and I have never heard of Roy Senior doing much besides training Roy Junior.Senior a legend, not to my knowledge.|
[4/28/06 11:40:07 AM]Steve|NJ||na|||10|Massimo, you seem like a nice guy sometimes, except when you threaten to steal my Italian wife. However, how do we know your not Mafioso, or worse, a communist. I don't really blame you for admiring an Italian woman, as they are among the most beautiful women in the world.|
[4/28/06 11:56:19 AM]Steve|NJ||na|||10|Angelo, thanks for the tip. I assume PBS runs the same programming up here as they do in Wash. I'll definitely be looking out for that series. If the Mafia is listening in, how about a loan? Their vig can't be any worse than the credit card companies charge if your late with a payment. Nor can they be worse than EXXON having just posted 8.2 billion in PROFITS, Yet I'm paying $3.00 per gallon. Almost a 100% increase from last summer. Now Congress and the senate are back from spring break. Their going to look into price gouging. Gee, you think?|
[4/28/06 11:57:25 AM]Steve|NJ||na|||10|Angelo, thanks for the tip. I assume PBS runs the same programming up here as they do in Wash. I'll definitely be looking out for that series. If the Mafia is listening in, how about a loan? Their vig can't be any worse than the credit card companies charge if your late with a payment. Nor can they be worse than EXXON having just posted 8.2 billion in PROFITS, Yet I'm paying $3.00 per gallon. Almost a 100% increase from last summer. Now Congress and the senate are back from spring break. Their going to look into price gouging. Gee, you think?|
[4/28/06 12:49:28 PM]Steve|NJ||na|||10|Kent, well, The NFL draft is upon us once again. I am an Eagles fan to the death. I can only assume that Angelo is a Redskins fan. I'm afraid I really must take a stand here and demand that you commit yourself to an NFL team for this season, at least on this web site. I know your from Cal. and are probably more interested in surfing and roller skating and stuff like that. No offence intended. You know, even a sports writer is allowed to have a fav. team and argue their changes here in private.|
[4/28/06 12:59:24 PM]Massimo|Roma||4|||10|Steve-I am not a communist and I can prove it: I voted for Silvio Berlusconi at (or in) the last elections (I swear!). Unfortunately Berlusconi lost [for just (or only) 25000 votes]. I cannot prove that I am not a Mafioso, all I can say is: trust me, I AM NOT A MAFIOSO. American women are also very beautiful, at least those I have seen on TV (I have never seen an American woman in person, in real life). I particularly like Angelie Jolie.

4/28/06 01:10:51 PM|Steve|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Steve, I live about half way between Los Angeles and San Diego. I guess I can start following the Chargers, the closest team to me.

4/28/06 01:41:35 PM|steve |NJ||NA||||10|Kent, the Chargers arent a bad team to follow. They've greatly improved their defence in the last two years through the draft and free agency. They've have already turned the corner.

4/28/06 01:42:17 PM|steve |NJ||NA||||10|Kent, the Chargers arent a bad team to follow. They've greatly improved their defence in the last two years through the draft and free agency. They have already turned the corner.

4/28/06 01:44:21 PM|steve |NJ||NA||||10|Kent, the Chargers arent a bad team to follow. They've greatly improved their defence in the last two years through the draft and free agency. They have already turned the corner.

4/28/06 01:47:35 PM|steve |NJ||NA||||10|Kent, the Chargers arent a bad team to follow. They've greatly improved their defence in the last two years through the draft and free agency. They have already turned the corner.

4/28/06 02:36:41 PM|Steve|NJ||NA||||10|Massimo, Hah! You voted for a reform socialist-capitalist Gov. At least it is removed from communism in some ways. However, since you swear you are not a member of La Cosa Nostra, or a commie, then I still want to be your friend.

4/28/06 06:55:02 PM|Noam|same||same||||10|Massimo - when I hadn't heard from you, I was worrying that you were the Don guy arrested in Corleone after 43 years on the run. Either that, or they've given you a computer in your cell.

4/29/06 03:55:22 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Noam-I'm sorry but I don't know anything about Corleone or this Don guy. I have never been in jail.

4/29/06 03:57:09 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Hi Jumpity, keep jumping!!

4/29/06 05:11:45 PM|Steve|NJ||NA||||10|Massimo, hey goombah! I'm just busting your chops about your political affiliations, it's absolutely none of my business! If you care to associate with criminals, well, that's your business too. I hope you realize when you're just being kidded around with.

4/29/06 05:19:40 PM|Steve|NJ||na||||10|Angelo, I think you and I discussed this a while ago. You seem to like old music as much as I do. Are you a doo-wop fan? Do you enjoy the Flamingoes, Dion and the Belmonts, the Skyliners, Danny and the Juniors?

4/29/06 06:20:39 PM|Noam|same||same||||10|Massimo, I was only joking! I'd been reading about the Mafia boss on the run for 43 years who got caught in Corleone. I've never been to jail either.Kent - thanks for your comment about Jones snr. You confirmed what I thought. The only champ he's trained was his son. I don't think that makes him a legend.

4/29/06 06:48:22 PM|Steve|NJ||NA||||10|Hey, Massimo, what's with this jumpity Bruce stuff. Is it some kind of metaphorical way of avoiding questions or subjects your not comfortable with? You know, like are you really a physicist being controlled by La Cosa Nostra. God only knows what you could be up to! Not that I suspect you of any wrong doing.

4/30/06 03:32:45 AM|Massimo|Roma||4||||10|Noam-I knew you were only joking! You are a joker like me! 4/30/06 09:32:43 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Jumpity Bruce is a funny and harmless character. I see him as some sort of mascot for this site.

5/1/06 09:06:44 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Steve: I'm a KC Chiefs fan since childhood. I grew up in Wilkes-Barre, PA, so I guess I should have been an Eagles fan (people there generally followed the Eagles, Jets and Giants---some Steelers fans too because they won all those Super Bowls). But for some reason, maybe something dumb like the nice uniforms, as a kid, I became a Chiefs fan. I suffered through many, many years of futility until Marv Levy started to improve the team. Then, they made a mistake and fired him, and finally, when Marty Schottenheimer came, he rebuilt the franchise. Also, Philadelphia's favorite son, Carl Peterson, has been a great GM for the Chiefs. By the way, the Eagles second round pick was a steal.

[5/2/06 03:23:33 AM]Noam|same||same|||10|Kent, I agree with you on Jumpity Bruce. Same with Koo Koo. I think Koo Koo is a talent. I went back through archived posts and he has a good sense of humour. But why won't the Quarry girls date him?

[5/2/06 10:25:38 AM]Andre Rene' Rousimoff known as Andre the Giant but actually Andre the Midget was legitimately measured at 6'9" 3/4 at the age of 24. Was that his max height? Who knows? He shrunk considerably in the last years of his life. How much did he shrink?That's the million dollar question. Some say he was 6'9" 1/2 when he died, some 6'6" and some 6'5". He looked no more than 3 inches shorter than Wilt in their picture together (dated about 1984) and about 3 inches taller than 6'6" Hulk Hogan at Wrestlmania 3 (1987), when they have that famous staredown. Andre's true height will always be a mystery (I want to write a book about this subject). They billed him as 7'4" or even 7'5" but that's ridiculous!By the way: Hulk Hogan has also shrunk and now is 6'3" 1/2.Here's his famous fight with Hulk Hogan at wrestlermania 3 (29 March 1987).http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=it1XNbu3mRU&search=ANDRE%20HOGAN

[5/2/06 03:52:34 PM]Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Well, Andre might have gotten shorter, but he sure didn't get narrower.

[5/2/06 06:19:21 PM]Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, CA||Sonia2163@aol.com|||10|Hey Noam, I am married about 23 yrs now, but its been alot of laughs with KooKoo. I hope everyone keeps coming back to this site, its always good for some laughs, yells, and some history lessons. We sure miss you Dad, Uncle Jerry, Aunt Brenda, Grampa Quarry, Mom & Grandma too.

[5/2/06 10:35:12 PM]Steve|NJ||NA|||10|Angelo,I'm glad to hear your a K.C. Chiefs fan.I love Peterson and Vermeil.Even that Cal.guy picked the Chargers..Both teams have a very high percentage chance of making the playoffs.Now,you and Kent can belittle me and the Eagles all season.I promise to be kind and compassionate at the end of the season.

[5/2/06 11:58:49 PM]Angelo if your referring to second round pick Justine winston,I agree with you, he was a badly needed guy on the line.

[5/2/06 05:47:46 PM]Angelo, I agree that pick seemed to lay there a few spots too long. Although some teams pick the best overall athlete. While other teams, who are usually in dire straights, pick for need. I think we just got lucky for a change.

[5/3/06 06:20:07 PM]Kent, I think a guy like Acelino Freitas, who fought one of the most awkward.boring,tentative fights I've seen in a while against Zahir Rahime, is a prime candidate for having his career ended involuntarily. He showed nothing against a guy who has mysteriously moved up the ranks by fighting like a crap. Freitas has made a fortune in the ring. He's starting to lose that animal attack he capitalized on. Here's the perfect opportunity to save a young fighter's live. Pull his licence. The guy has been around for thirteen years!!! His victory over Raheem was a gimme!!

[5/3/06 08:53:13 PM]JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA||RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|||10|ANGELO: Did you know a Very good guy, by the name of TOM CANFIELD when you were growing up in WILKES BARRE PA.? he was my roomate and best friend in the service when we were stationed in WHIDBY ISLAND WASHINGTON. he unfortunately died of cancer at the age of 29 in 1994|

|5/3/06 11:47:44 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Steve, I didn't see the fight but I agree that Freitas was a good fighter but it may be time to hang em up. He could be a tradegy waiting to happen. That is all we need, another fighter damaged for hanging around too long. It would be a good idea for Freitas to take his win and go out on top. Did you think Raheem won?|

|5/4/06 04:15:22 AM|Noam|same||same|||10|Sonia - having gone back through the archives I note that Koo Koo is one of the staunchest supporters of the Quarry family. And he and Kent seem to have patched things over, too. I think it'd be nice if Kent invited Koo Koo to sit up front with Kent and the other reporters at a boxing night. I've got a very sick joke for Steve: Why can't banks keep secrets? Because they've got too many tellers.|

|5/4/06 08:00:41 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Jimmy: That name isn't familiar. I was born in '63, so I think he was right in my age group, but I don't know him. I actually grew up outside Wilkes-Barre, though I had friends who went to the Wilkes-Barre schools. If you know what highschool he went to, chances are, I would know somebody who knows him.|

|5/4/06 11:17:46 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Noam, I can only get a pass for myself and the only way I could get anybody in to an event is if the person is a photographer on assignment. The last time I paid for boxing was last year and it was because my friend went with me, we had to pay as I can't get anybody in. I sat right behind press row and Dan Goossen, the promoter, looked at me funny when I told him that he had better put on a good show as I was a paying customer. Before that it had been about four years since I had paid to get into a boxing card.|

|5/4/06 11:52:23 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Kent: Jerry was so competitive----I think this carried into his training too. His claim that he would never lose another fight due to poor conditioning really stuck through his career, probably up until Norton. He lost fights to better opponents, not due to lack of conditioning. But for Norton, he wasn't physically ready to rumble with a top heavyweight. He could have bounced back into the picture if he would have demanded a few months to train. Of course, they needed an opponent for Norton quickly----but they probably would have found someone else who Norton would beat----then Jerry could have fought him later. A prepared Quarry could have beaten Norton, even then. |

|5/4/06 04:29:08 PM|Noam|same||same|||10|Kent - I was 'pulling your leg', having a joke. It would be funny to see you sitting alongside Koo Koo at the fights. We all have a fair idea what you look like as you continue to lose weight. But what does a Koo Koo look like? Anyone know?|

|5/4/06 05:39:02 PM|Bob|Wilkes-Barre, Pa.||RVEEBOB@AOL.COM|||10|Does anybody remember the REILLY brothers that fought from Luzerne, Pa. in the early seventies? They are good friends of mine.|

|5/4/06 07:52:31 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|As it was, Jerry still gave Norton a tough battle for a few rounds but he got cut and he ran out of steam by round five. The third round of Norton verses Quarry is still one of the best rounds I have ever seen. The two of them pounded each other with bombs for the whole round and I don't know how either of them kept standing after the shots they both took.Hey Darrell Huntley, if you happen to come to this site, Kent A says hey!| 5/4/06 08:53:01 PM|Steve|nj||na|||10|Angelo, you and I finally agree on one possible fact. Jerry, in prime shape, either earlier that year, or, again with time to train, on the date they did fight. I feel Quarry was the superior fighter. Maybe not in pure physical strength, but in a much better, more fluid style. Faster hands, better counter puncher, and he equal, if not better, in heart and toughness.| 5/4/06 09:05:18 PM|Steve |nj||na|||10|Angelo and Kent, by the way. I'm talking about Quarry vs. Norton.| 5/4/06 09:18:19 PM|Steve|NJ||NA|||10|Kent, I couldn't give you an informed, analytical answer. I think you could call it a draw. That only proves that these two guys are fighting on the dangerous down slide.| 5/5/06 04:41:11 AM|Massimo|Roma||4|||10|Noam -> KooKoo once said he looks like Woody Allen.Quarry vs. Norton with Jerry in prime shape it's hard to call. Norton did always very well against fighters who weren't huge punchers. I don't know if Jerry had the power to knock Norton out.| 5/5/06 07:57:02 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Bob: No, I don't remember them. I'm from Swoyersville/Shaferstown, but I was pretty young in the 70's and didn't go to local fight cards regularly. What weight class were the Reillys? Didn't one of the Van Scoy boys (Wilkes-Barre diamond brokers) take up boxing?| 5/5/06 10:06:53 AM|Charles anderson|Arkansas||ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|Prime vs. prime Jerry would have knocked Norton cold, i guarantee it.| 5/5/06 10:10:33 AM|Charles anderson|Arkansas||ctjjandfam@aol.com|||10|The fight was a joke, you found out when Jerry took off his robe he had not trained for this fight, first time i ever saw him out of shape. fought his heart out tho.| 5/5/06 03:10:03 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Charles: I believe that barring some terrible cut, Jerry would have found a way to beat Norton if he was ready to fight. I'm not sure if he would win by KO though.| 5/5/06 03:32:44 PM|Steve|nj||na|||10|In Norton's book, "Going the Distance". Norton portrays himself as an amiable soul, who doesn't really want to seriously hurt anyone. That is, until he finally gets his change with a completely wash up Quarry, who was given two weeks to train. Exactly when Norton worked up the balls to fight him. To quote his book, "I'll freely admit that I did not like him. Quarry was the only man whom I fought in anger, and I went in to punish him. With Quarry, I wanted to pick him apart, savage him with body punches, snap his head back with jabs, and cut up his face. I wanted him to be carried out on a stretcher." That's a quote, folks. Page 97. Pretty ironic coming from a guy who folded every time he faced a guy as big and strong as himself.| 5/5/06 03:34:22 PM|Steve|nj||na|||10|In Norton's book, "Going the Distance". Norton portrays himself as an amiable soul, who doesn't really want to seriously hurt anyone. That is, until he finally gets his change with a completely wash up Quarry, who was given two weeks to train. Exactly when Norton worked up the balls to fight him. To quote his book, "I'll freely admit that I did not like him. Quarry was the only man whom I fought in anger, and I went in to punish him. With Quarry, I wanted to pick him apart, savage him with body punches, snap his head back with jabs, and cut up his face. I wanted him to be carried out on a stretcher." That's a quote, folks. Page 97. Pretty ironic coming from a guy who folded every time he faced a guy as big and strong as himself.
worked up the balls to fight him. To quote his book, "I'll freely admit that I did not like him. Quarry was the only man whom I fought in anger, and I went in to punish him. With Quarry, I wanted to pick him apart, savage him with body punches, snap his head back with jabs, and cut up his face. I wanted him to be carried out on a stretcher." Thats a quote, folks. Page 97. Pretty ironic coming from a guy who folded every time he faced a guy as big and strong as himself.

In Norton's book, "Going the Distance," Norton portrays himself as an amiable soul, who doesn't really want to seriously hurt anyone. That is, until he finally gets his change with a completely wash up Quarry, who was given two weeks to train. Exactly when Norton worked up the balls to fight him. To quote his book, "I'll freely admit that I did not like him. Quarry was the only man whom I fought in anger, and I went in to punish him. With Quarry, I wanted to pick him apart, savage him with body punches, snap his head back with jabs, and cut up his face. I wanted him to be carried out on a stretcher." Thats a quote, folks. Page 97. Pretty ironic coming from a guy who folded every time he faced a guy as big and strong as himself.

Hey, I'm new to the site. Cool video scrapbook on Jerry. I haven't seen too many of his fights, but the ones I have, he seemed great.

Angelo, Ken simply froze when he fought fighters that could hit, case in point, Foreman, (who wouldn't) but he was knocked cold by some cat named Garcia, who you never heard from again. Jerry was not scared by Shavers, Lyle, who were pretty hard punchers. The best fight he may have fought and won was probably against Ron Lyle when he "boxed beautifully" for 12 rounds. I liken Norton to both of these guys get him early or box his ears off. No doubt a about it Ken whipped him but we all know Jerry was in no shape to fight anyone that day. Sad but true, I lived and died with every Jerry Quarry fight and I miss him very much. Thanks for your reply.

I too knew a guy that looked like a world champion in the gym but man when he got in the arena he was 180 degrees the other way most of the time. Maybe it's the crowd or uncertainty that a fighter faces when going "live". I took several beatings from Elisha O'bed in the gym and I doubt I would have lasted that long in a real contest. Mind games?

Steve you are right, Jerry should have retired after the second Frazier fight. The Norton fight and all of those afterwards should have never happened. In that fight Jerry came in good shape and although he had a couple of good rounds, rounds one and two, after that Frazier dominated as Jerry just didn't have it. That should have been a huge warning sign that it was time for Jerry to pack it in. I believe even if Jerry had come into the Norton fight in shape he would have taken a beating. It might have lasted longer and Jerry may have had a few more good rounds but the end at that point in Jerry's career would have been the same.

kent i strongly disagree with you about jerry not being able to beat norton (if he was ready), it's easy to look at the norton fight and think that guys too big for jerry, to strong, but the thing about norton is that if things get to rough and he gets hit with a good shot, he could fold, it would take the jerry of the lyle fight to do this, but when motivated and in top shape, norton would fold, jerry as he appeared in the norton fight was just a target, a mere shell of himself, but he won the hearts of anybody that knows anything about what boxing is all about, BY THE WAY PLEASE LET EVERYBODY KNOW THE ADDRESS OF WHERE TO SEND MONEY. QUARRY WOMEN KEEP LOOKING GOOD, THE KOO KOO CLOCK'S A HELL OF A MAN, EVEN IF HE DOES LOOK LIKE WOODY ALLEN, KOO KOO, KOO KOO

Kent, I am a firm believer in an outdated medical phenomenon known as "Biorthymes". I read somewhere that Jerry was a believer in it too. I firmly believe that your body goes through at least three rhythms on a regularly recurring basis. This could go a long way on explaining why on some fight nights, you just don't have it! A punch that normally wouldn't bother you, on this particular night feels like getting hit with a rock. By the way please let everybody know the address of where to send money. Quarry women keep looking good, the Koo Koo Clock's a hell of a man, even if he does look like Woody Allen, Koo Koo, Koo Koo!

I agree Kent, by the way kent can you help me land a quarry women, i been after one for a long time, i don't know if they like short guys like me though, kent you son-of-a-gun, are you still doing those interviews, you do well looks like, I DON'T MEAN MAKE THIS A LOVEFEST BUT HEY, I'M KOO, KOO, KOO, KOO !!!

Woody Allen? Koo Koo? Oh. I don't know whether I'm right in what I'm about to say. But I've always wondered why Foreman was so suited to Joe Frazier in styles. Joe bobbed from side-to-side and it was a great defensive thing that could turn into attack. When you least expected it, he'd bob across with that hidden left hook and tag you. Like he did with Ali in the first fight. Ali kept his right down low so that suited Joe's left as well. As Joe bobbed from side-to-side, George's haymakers came in roundhouse. The bobbing side-to-side head then collides with the roundhouse left or right. They were made for each other. I think that Joe's bobbing style gave Foreman's roundhouse punches more power. The head and the fist were moving towards each other for a collision. Maximum impact.

Foreman always had more trouble with tall stand up fighters. His punches didn't have the same effect when he threw punches higher. The toughest fights of his early career were against Young, Ali, Lyle, Peralta. All were tall and 3 of them were boxer types. Foreman would have had tons of trouble with any really slick tall boxer with alot of skills. Tunney comes to mind as a guy that would beat Foreman probably. Lennox Lewis would have given him trouble until Foreman landed something huge, which he probably would have done.
punch was the type that would lay Lewis out. Norton had a reputation for arrogance, which seems to be well earned considering the book excerpt. He had a ton of courage against JQ, whose best years were behind him, and who fought on two weeks notice and was not in fighting shape. Hooray for big bad Kenny. Of course, he was deer in headlights against Foreman, Shavers, Cooney—crumbled when hit with a power punch.

| 5/8/06 10:43:46 AM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 | Steve: Ironic title too. Norton isn't an authority on going the distance. Ask Earnie Shavers or Gerry Cooney, who only had part of one round to "punish him" the way he wanted to punish JQ. Ask Foreman, who in Caracas, pounded on Norton for about half a minute when it became clear that Norton wouldn't make it more than two or three rounds (didn't finish two actually). Ask Jose Luis Garcia if you can find him anywhere. Oh, and while Norton did "go the distance" against Young, Norton was "lucky" to get the decision. Let's face it, the whole world was clamouring for another Norton-Ali fight and Norton had more going for him (excitement and recognition wise) than Young. So they gave the close match to Norton. I will admit to admiring Norton's performance against Holmes—though those who think Norton should have won are crazy. Go back and score the fight and Holmes had him beat. Norton showed some guts, but didn't win. |

| 5/8/06 12:17:44 PM | kookoo | ny | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | 10 | like they say , what goes around comes around, norton beat jerry up , as fate would have it, an irishman beats norton with-in an inch of his life, he had it coming, he was arrogant as hell, i loved also when larry holmes beat him, jimmy youg is the guy that got robbed, beat norton & ali, they never gave him the title because of his hit & run tactics. i think he just quit trying after those robberys, sad case, but i don't blame him , life is not fair, it never will be |

| 5/8/06 12:26:49 PM | Steve | NJ | na | 10 | Noam, I agree with you that Forman usually looked like he was throwing haymakers in slow motion. He also looked like he was throwing arm punches, with no hip leverage behind them. In reality, he usually got his opponent with straight, short, shots. He started Frazier on his way out with a short, straight uppercut that lifted Joe off his feet. He waited all night for Moorer to square up in front of him, then dropped in a short, downward trajectory right, that flattened Moorer. |

| 5/8/06 01:20:55 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 | Steve: You won't believe how many people (very casual boxing fans without a lot of knowledge) thought Moorer took a dive because "Foreman hardly touched him." Ridiculous! That punch would have KOed a buffalo. I think people equate a big wind up and swing with power, but I've learned (both from watching hundreds of boxing matches and being in a few—knocked out once) that sometimes short, quick punches, thrown with leverage and purpose, can accomplish more. Like you just wrote, Foreman was patient as Jobe that night, waiting, waiting, waiting for Moorer's mistake in positioning, then BAM, lights out. |

| 5/8/06 02:29:57 PM | Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 | Angelo, if Moorer took a dive, then he is a great actor because his eyes were rolling back in his head, he was out. You are right, often the short to the point punches do the most damage. |

| 5/8/06 02:49:47 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 | Kent: Agreed. But that still doesn't explain Ali's phantom punch in Liston II. Was that the real thing? |

| 5/8/06 04:22:28 PM | Sam Walker | Washington, D.C. | sendtosw@hotmail.com | 8 | Hello, and my (very late) condolences to the family of Jerry Quarry, who I thought was a great fighter. I remember watching him against Ali, and I remember Jose Torres saying in his bio of Ali that if Jerry hadn't been cut, Ali was in for a long night, because Jerry was getting the rhythm, figuring it out when the fight was stopped. I still haven't seen Jerry's fight with Joe Frazier, which was quite exciting for Jerry for the first few rounds, from what I understand. I plan to get it on DVD. Anyway, I'm glad he has |
a Web site, and good luck with your Foundation. |

Jerry was many things, including exciting. When he came to fight, you knew he'd give it his all. That's missing in many of today's "contenders." Jerry Quarry fought in the best era ever who never won a World Title. |

Steve - Foreman certainly hit Moorer with a short sharp punch. |

I agree with Angelo that something was not legitimate in the second Ali'-Liston fight. Sonny Liston could certainly take a punch. He took Cleveland Williams' best shots and was knocked down I think only 3 times in 54 fights (second fight with Marty Marshall, Ali', Leotis Martin). Probably Sonny was beaten in his mind before the fight started. We'll never know the truth, it's like Andre's height.

The key word is LOOK, the punch did not look like it would knock him out, the punch that knocked out Zora Foley looked about the same, a right hand over the top, Liston was caught cold, simple as that, the theories of Liston taking a dive will continue forever, people love a good story |

While in my opinion it was a legitimate knockdown, I think that Liston could have got up had he wanted. But he was beaten psychologically and decided to stay down rather than suffer a worse beating than the first fight. For that reason I don't think the fight was fixed; I just think that Liston had had enough. This is what Angelo Dundee said about that second fight in his book:

"Some people, who obviously never saw the fight, or if they did were not paying enough attention, said that Liston went down without being hit. They said he had not been counted out and that the fight had been fixed. Horsefeathers!"
then continued:......Muhammad slid to the right, threw a short right over the top of Liston's outstretched left, and caught him on the temple. The punch was so hard, Liston's left foot came off the canvas involuntarily as he rocked back before collapsing in a heap. Muhammad stood over Liston, taunting him to get up and fight. But Sonny couldn't get up. He couldn't even move.' I think Listin could get up, but didn't want to. Not a fix; just a bully beaten mentally.

Another thing I don't understand about that fight is why Liston was declared counted out. Liston actually got up and Walcott hadn't counted 1-2-3 until 10 on him. James Buster Douglas layed (or stayed) on the canvas for more than 10 seconds against Mike Tyson but he was not considered counted out. Jersey Joe Walcott was really totally confused. He should have started counting on Liston instead of declaring him counted out. How could Liston know where the count was while he was laying on the canvas ? He had the right to be counted by the referee (Walcott).

Clay/Ali would have still won the fight and I do believe Liston might have pulled a "no mas" in his own way by deciding not to continue. But the fact is, former star fighters do have a spotty record as referees. Let's not forget confused old Joe Louis during Frazier-Quarry II.

I've watched highlights of that fight and I've always complimented Frazier on his sportsmanship and concern for Jerry. Frazier was not showboating by pausing and hoping Louis would have common sense enough to stop the fight. Frazier was genuinely concerned about Quarry---probably for his eyesight more than anything. If the fighters' corner doesn't intervene, the referee is the one on the spot, who must make the decision. Louis failed. A fighter, especially a guy like Quarry, will fight to the bitter end. He would have stood there if Frazier hit him with an axe. You can't trust a fighter or even their corner to know what's best. It's on the referee, and it was an incompetent job that night, for an important fight.

The old "styles make fights" saying is true. Jerry didn't have the right components to fend off Frazier when Joe started smokin'. I'll go to my grave believing that the Jerry Quarry who gave a boxing lesson to Ron Lyle and a punching lesson to Earnie Shavers would have had a somewhat decent chance against Foreman around 1974. The second Frazier fight shouldn't have been made, I think we can all agree on that.

1974. The second Frazier fight shouldn't have been made, I think we can all agree on that.

| 5/11/06 03:52:00 PM | George Foreman | Texas | Grill@aol.com | 10 |

Yep, I avoided Quarry. Instead, I chose to beat up on 37 tomato cans, 17 of which had a losing record. I then dispatched of fat ass Frazier, and glass chin Norton, before getting destroyed by Ali.

| 5/11/06 04:50:00 PM | Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 |

But George, you did beat those five guys (wasn't it in Canada?) before Young retired you. Of course, you did stage quite a comeback!!

| 5/11/06 07:14:11 PM | Steve | NJ | na | 10 |

Angelo, I don't know how you regard the Heavyweight title, I'm sure you realize how hard it is to attain and hold for any length of time. I only know that very few great fighters have been able to hold it for very long.

| 5/11/06 07:17:05 PM | Steve | NJ | na | 10 |

Condolences to the family of Floyd Patterson.

| 5/11/06 10:59:56 PM | George | Foreman | Grill@aol.com | 10 |

Angelo is right. Now buy my grill!!

| 5/12/06 02:00:31 AM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

The boxing world lost a man who did the most with his ability, Floyd Patterson, a pumped up undersized light heavyweight who held the heavyweight title twice. A fine boxer who seemed like a decent man as well. He will be missed.

| 5/12/06 07:56:28 AM | Debbie Cozzetto-Grimm | Woodstock, GA | m222086@netzero.com | 10 |

As a child growing up in CA, my grandmother and mother used to talk about Jerry Quarry. Somehow they are related, but I'm not sure, my grandmother's name was Lois Talbert married to Dallas Talbert and my mother's name was Lana Talbert-Cozzetto. Can someone please clarify this for me?

| 5/12/06 10:23:33 AM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

Debbie, I seemed to remember hearing that Jerry's mother's maiden name was Talbert but of course someone from the family would have to verify this.

| 5/12/06 10:42:40 AM | Tolbert | FL | fsneed@regencycenters.com | 10 |

Arwanda Maiden Name was: TolbertShe is Jerry's Mom.

| 5/12/06 10:42:54 AM | Tolbert | FL | fsneed@regencycenters.com | 10 |

Arwanda's Maiden Name was: TolbertShe is Jerry's Mom.

| 5/12/06 10:43:01 AM | Tolbert | FL | fsneed@regencycenters.com | 10 |

Arwanda's Maiden Name was: TolbertShe is Jerry's Mom.

| 5/12/06 04:05:10 PM | Terry | Belgium | ron@pochta.com | 1 |

Nice site![url=http://ozuoevom.com/fuqq/xceu.html]My homepage[/url] & #124 [url=http://goyvwsum.com/renk/cmgm.html]Cool site[/url]Even the guys who haven't held the title long have my respect for climbing to the top of the mountain---Buster Douglas, Mike Spinks, etc. I do think the title has been cheapened because there are so many versions of it now.Bert Sugar said a lot of nice things about Floyd Patterson last night. A great tribute.

| 5/12/06 10:23:33 AM | Kent | Murrieta, CA | kentallenent@aol.com | 10 |

Debbie, I seemed to remember hearing that Jerry's mother's maiden name was Talbert but of course someone from the family would have to verify this.

| 5/12/06 10:59:56 PM | George | Foreman | Grill@aol.com | 10 |

Angelo is right. Now buy my grill!!

| 5/13/06 03:53:57 AM | Eugene Mourne | Fullerton, CA | VisitA64@aol.com | 10 |

Angelo, I respect you immensely but must disagree with your April opinion about size not mattering much beyond 205 or so for heavyweights. I think the reverse. The thing is we see so few really good, skilled heavyweights past 220, 230. I used to fight in the late 60s and I think 230+ pound guys often get lazy or complacent, because they can usually win (over smaller guys) by strength, power and size.
alone. But I'm not sure about some situations. At a "low" 190 or so, I think Joe Louis would have been a good match for practically anybody, including Big George, Ali at 225, Frazier at 220 etc. Possibly Billy Conn the same way. After all, JQ was "small" and might have been champ if he hadn't cut and bled pretty easily. Incidentally -- although I agree JQ may have been a Top 10 All-Timer -- what I've always admired most about him was his shark-like killer's instinct. When he hurt you, he followed and when he hurt you bad, 9 out of 10 times you were done. Just one more thing and I'll shut up. A couple of people here wondered why JQ didn't quit or why his corner didn't quit in Frazier2 and other fights. To me the answer is simple. He was Irish. No, I'm serious. I was taught by my uncles making us boy cousins fight from when we were 4 or 5 years on. The one thing you HAD to learn was NEVER EVER QUIT. Even if your guy knocked your head loose and it was hanging by a single tendon, YOU DO NOT QUIT. I think Jimmy and Kent and others will agree. (There can be a bad side to that, too.) Great site. Oscar de La Hoya looked sharp, but he is not even 50% of what he once was. I grew up in La Habra, just down the road from you and I had lived there again for about six years until a year ago.

I do disagree about a fighter's corner having a responsibility to protect their fighter by asking the referee to stop a fight or for not letting a fighter come out for a round if he is hurt too badly, a good corner man knows his fighter better than anyone and they can tell when something isn't right. I do agree that a fighter should have the attitude that he himself will never quit. If they don't have this attitude, the warrior attitude, then they are in the wrong profession. I remember the story that Mr. Jimmy Quarry, Jerry's brother, telling me that Jerry was working the corner of their brother Mike's third fight with Mike Rossman and Mike had suffered a bad cut and Jerry had the referee stop the fight. Well Mike was upset with Jerry for stopping the fight but I believe it was the right decision and that if the situation was reversed and it was Mike who was working the corner and he had one of Jerry's fights stopped, it would have been Jerry who would have been mad at Mike for doing so. My point is the Jerry did what was best for the fighter. I realize the final authority to stopping a fight is the referee and/or the ringside doctor but I don't think any competent referee would ignore the advice of a fighter's corner to stop a fight or at least they shouldn't ignore it.

I made a change to the code, which should rope-a-dope them again for a while. Thanks for hanging in there! --Carl Valdes, Howard King etc. How many of the 54 Sonny Liston's fights are available on tape? Is the Zora Folley fight available? Anyone knows? Thanks.

Steve: Mine wasn't like that---it was just boxing for fun in a friend's basement. I went on the offensive, but got tagged in the first moments of the fight with a straight right (Cosell would call it a telephone pole lead) that dazed me badly---vision blurred and I stepped back to try to clear my head and got nailed again and went down. I would say that if my life depended on it, I probably could have gotten up by the ten count, but was unaware of what was going on and got counted out. It's hard to remember if I lost consciousness completely---maybe just for a brief second.

Angelo, with all your years of boxing knowledge, I know you learned one thing that day. Never move straight back if your hurt. Always give em angles, and for God's sake, HOLD ON. CLINCH! Who cares what the spectaters think. The idea is to survive. I didn't have that option. I don't even remember getting dropped.

Massimo, I happened to be in a furniture store looking at tv's and saw the Liston, Leotis Martin fight. Liston, as I remember it, hit Martin with some huge shots. In fact, Martin suffered a career ending detached retina. He did, however, nail Liston flush and just dropped him on his back. As I remember it, it was a pulverizing KO. I think it pretty much ended both their careers. It was a long time ago, and I never saw the fight again on tape. So my impressions could be somewhat inaccurate, but I think that's how it went.

Eek eek a eek eek, Jumpity Bruce is jumping all over Make Money Online's head! Jump! Jump! Jump!

Steve: I have two questions involving fantasy fight and wanted to see every one's opinion.

I picked 130 because I thought both Nelson and Arguello were at there best at that weight.

Thank you Jumpity, keep your good work.

Sonia, I am almost unbeatable until he moved up to fight Pryor and the weight disadvantage did him in. I might go with Chavez, but ever so slightly.

Hey I'm an Irish Woman, and we don't quit either. All my life the saying my Dad, always said was "There's No Quit in a Quarry", and believe me we all stick by it to the end, my kids laugh at me I quit at nothing. Its good to see all the spam gone. Hey Kent how's it going? To all the regulars thanks for sticking with the site, and keeping the rif raf from here. Dad, Uncle Jerry, Mom, Aunt Brenda, Grandma, and Grampa Jack, you are all missed, and loved always.
doing OK. How are you?

I have fond memories of your brother Eric battling it out at the Police Athletic League benefit in 2002 and of you and Brenda working the corner. Your dad and your Uncle Jerry would have been very proud of all of you as you all showed there is no quit in a Quarry. Eric sure showed a lot of heart by fighting with a cut lip and hanging on for the win. I was there at Soboba that night but didn't get a chance to talk to you as everyone had already left by the time I got backstage.

I was there reporting for an Indian news site but they never used my article for some reason.

---

Angelo, I see your point about unleashed dogs. I raise Siberian Huskies. I only have two now, Jack and Casey, both males. There are very strict laws about unsupervised dogs in N.J. I don't really know what I'd do about an unleashed dog. I'd probably do the same as you. I'd heel my huskies, try to calm down the loose dog. I don't believe your the kind of man who'd hurt a dog. I'd just hope it wasn't a pitt bull. Even a Rottweiller can be calmed down. Of course, then I'd sue the ass of the owner.

Angelo, I never felt good about those Arguello, Pryor fights. Even though Pryor was such a wild, unnaturally strong fighter, I feel Chavez, who was also almost impervious to punishment, and much the better defensive fighter, and also, threw much shorter, equally strong punches, would have worn that maniac Pryor down in the later rounds. There's a big difference in drug induced homicidal rage, and superbly trained, disciplined strength, which might be why Chavez lasted so long, and Pryor's just like a crazy afterthought.

---

By the way, one of the nicest dogs I met was half Rotweiller and half Doberman, and weighed at least 110. The dog belonged to a friend of mine—was standoffish at first, when I entered the house. But once he knew I was welcome there, he sat with me and even slept in my bed.

---

Massimo: To answer your question, I'd never seen Liston in with anyone except Ali. Would have loved to see him and Leotis Martin, Machen, Wepner etc. Him and Bonavena likely would have been a war. Take care.

Thanks Jimmy. Liston was very impressive against Harris and Cleveland Williams (second fight). What you say confirms to me that Liston's fights are very rare in comparison, for instance, with (or to) Ali's fights.

---

I'm sorry I digressed and got away from your subject. It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm sorry, but that's a dream fight that I just can't figure out a call on.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give you my by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 07:41:29 PM] Steve

It's just that Pryor and Argeello was won of the most interesting and suspicious fights I've ever seen. Just to give me you by no means expert opinion. At 130 lbs. He would have slowed up Nelson, and stopped him in the latter rounds. Chavez would have had his hands full with Arguello at any weight. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.

[5/20/06 09:13:10 PM] Kent

The Eagles will come roaring back this season. I'm especially disappointed in you, Angelo, since you grew up around here.
If you don't pop in here too often, good luck. I have now lost 80 pounds. I can now tell people what my peak weight was. Last summer I weighed 375 pounds. I am now about 295 pounds. Still people consider me to be obese as they look at me funny when I say, "I have worked hard to get into the kind of shape I am in" and then I pat my stomach. They think I am joking but they understand when I tell them how heavy I was before and that yes, I have worked hard to get into the kind of shape I am in.

Little things like now being able to sit in a restaurant booth without having to sit sideways are reminders of the progress I have made.

5/22/06 02:46:22 AM| Eugene Mourne | Fullerton, CA | | VisitA54@aol.com | |||10|

Congratulations, Kent. That's fantastic. Good work, dude. I'm glad to see you guys remember Alexis Arguello as the all-time great he was. Nobody I ever saw treated more opponents to BOXING CLINICS than Alexis. He was just about the most patient fighter I ever saw, then he'd strike like a rattlesnake and it was over. I always thought the Pryor fight was weird, too. Can a style threw you off that bad? Kent, how is Joey Orbillo doing? How about Mando Ramos? Looks like nobody commented on Oscar de la Hoya. That's cool. Anybody impressed with that big Russian who manhandled Chris Byrd? He looked like a gym fighter to me. That upright, stiff European style is no good.

Seems like too many of the ranked heavyweights now are gimmicky: huge squat kids like Tua, supertall Russians, converted smaller guys with added weight. Where are natural heavies now who can really fight and box, coming up through the ranks, learning their trade? Does it happen any more, Kent?

5/22/06 10:22:00 AM| Massimo | Roma | |||10|

Kent bravo, you're getting in good shape. I don't know how you managed to lose all that weight. Losing 80 pounds in just (or only) one year is almost a miracle. If you didn't happen to live so far I'd like to meet you and congratulate you personally, maybe drinking a good coffe or something together. Maybe we would have some problems in understanding each other tough cause you speak difficult ;-) David Tua is a natural heavyweight and a terrific boxer. If you don't believe Tua is a terrific boxer just look:

http://youtube.com/watch?v=8AVh5TKS80M&search=Boxing%20Ruiz%20Tua

5/23/06 02:28:46 AM| Eugene Mourne | Fullerton, CA | | VisitA54@aol.com | |||10|

Massimo says, "David Tua is a natural heavyweight and a terrific boxer. If you don't believe Tua is a terrific boxer just look:". I looked and am not impressed at all, Massimo. I'd expect Ali, Frazier, Foreman, Quarry, Liston, Holmes, Young, Tyson, Bob Foster, Oscar Bonavena, Earnie Shavers or Leon Spinks to knock Tua out in 3 or less rounds. Tua's not ready. Kent, what happened to Mickey Davies, who helped Aileen Eaton book fighters for the Olympic Auditorium in LA and also called the bouts on TV with a young guy named Dick Enberg?

5/23/06 07:01:13 AM| Angelo | Washington, DC | || funktron | |||10| Eugene: It's interesting that you listed Leon Spinks among the fighters who would have an easy time with Tua. I agree with most of the others you mentioned, but am not quite sure about Leon Spinks. I've often wondered how Spinks would do against today's top heavies. Part of me says he would ge handled easily in decision losses to guys like Byrd or KOed easily by the power punchers of today (didn't Gerrie Coetzee blast him out early?). But another part of me thinks that if he were trained and focused, he could take most of the better heavies today. I'm uncertain. One thing I do know is that Spinks would have had a better career and overall record if he didn't win the title with less than 10 pro fights under his belt. If he had been brought along correctly, he would have gradually stepped up in competition and learned the trade better---would have known how to grab and hold to survive tough rounds, how to fight effectively against different styles, how to use early rounds to set the tone for a longer fight rather than just come out headhunting. In short, if Spinks would have gotten a more rounded scope of teaching and really learned the craft, he might not have ever won a title—but he would have been a serious contender for a long time and would have retired with a better record than he did.

On some good cards at the old Olympic Auditorium. I remember in one of the early UNC tournaments that former cruiserweight champion Alfred Cole entered and came in second place, he was beaten by a Jiu Jitsu expert by a submission hold in the finals but of course had won all of his preliminary matches going into the finals.

Eugene, NO with the possible exception of Ken Shamrock, I figure he is a real boxer/FIGHTER. Email me your address and I'll send you a detailed 4 page copy of Jerry Quarry's "REAL" boxing record I researched from microfilm of every one of Jerry's bouts including Cranmer! It includes stats like the weight differentials, scores, time/KO-TKO, I even have a column if Jerry or the other fighter was ranked in the top ten going into the bout by Ring Magazine.

Maybe "terrific" is exaggerated, but I think David Tua is a devastating puncher and can be a factor in the heavyweight picture. Would Bob Foster have knocked down Tua in less than 3 rounds? Maybe the other way around? Leon Spinks? I respectfully disagree. And David Tua went the distance with Lennox Lewis, who is a better puncher than Ali', Holmes and Young. I think David Tua can be outboxed by guys like Young and Byrd, but not easily knocked out. As I said before Tua-Tyson around 1996 would probably have been a great fight! Puncher against puncher, like George-Ron or Ron-Earnie.

Massimo: You're correct that Tua is a tough guy and maybe difficult to KO—but that description fits Tex Cobb too. A schooled fighter like Larry Holmes could box circles around either one of them. Tua-Tyson, 1996, might very well be interesting. I think a younger Tyson from the late 80's/early 90's would pose a huge problem for Tua because he would come after Tua from the opening bell, relentlessly. By '96, the gig was over and Tyson's heart wasn't 100% in it anymore.

My one year old husky and my eleven year old husky always playfight. They both, however, are close to 80 lbs. The fighting can get pretty rough and tumble. The one year old dislocated his kneecap. He just had surgery, two pins put in to hold his patella in place. On bringing him out of the doctor's office, they were weighing a Rottweiler named "Nitro". He weighed 110 lbs. Nitro and my Husky, named "Casey", (named because he is a red haired husky) began smelling and licking each other in mutual sympathy. So much for the fearsome rep. of the Rottweiler, huh.
Tyson, Foreman, Shavers. These were guys who could take some early pressure, and they hit so hard that you had to be more than a straight ahead, poor defensive fighter. Otherwise, you would get your head handed to you.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.

Steve, I'm sorry but you're wrong. Tua never got knocked out in his entire professional career. He lost on points against Byrd, Lewis and Ibeabuchi. He can be outboxed by a wilter fighter, but not easily knocked out. David Tua is a very good heavyweight.
against Joe Frazier back in ’73-'75! It won't end our debate I'm sure, but at least it will be an opinion from one of the greats!|
|6/1/06 01:14:58 PM|Steve|N.J||NA||||10||Kent,first of all ,did you notice the term, "buttfuck", listed as my E-MAIL ADDRESS. Do you really think I wrote that. This strengthens my argument about registration. If you had to pay a registration fee for every name and address you used,don't you think that would discourage the multiple personalities. It would certainly discourage the posters who mysteriously disappear. Then,suddenly we have two or three new troublemakers. Remember Rhoads Schillotette? Hey, if they want to pay for the privilege of insulting people under three different names,fine. Let them pay two or three registration fees. |
|6/1/06 01:22:28 PM|Steve|nJ||na||10|Angelo,I agree with you .I hope that was Earnie Shavers posting.I would be a great addition to our debates ,from a legendary fighters who was there.|
|6/1/06 01:29:43 PM|Steve|na||na||10|Massimo, I agree with you that David Tua was a very dangerous and existing fighter. I didn't mean to downplay his talents. I's just that I seem to have lost track of him. He seems to have dissapeared from the heavywight picture. That's a great turn of phrase, "he had a Chuvalien chin". Jerry Quarry had a leonine heart.|
|6/1/06 03:14:40 PM|Earnie Shavers|UK||.||||10|Most likely, Frazier would have KO'd me in two rounds. I'll get a few good shots off, but I'll be overwhelmed. This fight never happened because I kept getting "sick", though. |
|6/1/06 03:33:16 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Well, I believe the first post might have been Mr. Shavers, but not the second. Even if he was honest enough to predict a Frazier win, I doubt he would phrase it that way or talk about being "sick" all the time. I stand by my own theory that Earnie Shavers would have had more than a punchers chance against Joe in the mid-70's--I'd take Shavers by an early round KO. If Frazier made it through the first six rounds, it would swing to his favor though. |
|6/1/06 03:51:02 PM|Steve|NJ||NA||10|OK!!! Bullshit!! This is not Earnie Shavers!!! C'mon, Kent, Angelo, Massimo, Jimmy Dorsey! A pro fighter like Earnie Shavers is never that humble. This site is going into the twilight zone! If you guys are really gullible enough to believe that's Ernie Shavers saying, "oh, yea", Frazier would have kicked my ass in two rounds."This is a guy who went toe to toe with Larry Holmes! NOW, after all these years of biting my fucking tounge, I'm trully pissed! Where, by the way, is that little fucking wierdo, Noam????|
|6/1/06 04:57:57 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Well, the first post rang true or at least was plausible---but the second one was ridiculous. Kent was ready throw darts and have a bowl of pretzels and low carb beer with Earnie, and now Steve, you're ruining it!!|
|6/1/06 08:24:54 PM|BIG DEE|LAKEVIEW, OHIO||harry greb|||10|BIG DEE HERE= Jerry Quarry was one of the all-time best heavyweight contenders and one of the best never to win a title. He belongs with those greats like Sam Langford, Sam McVie, Joe Jennette, Charley Burley, Sailor Tom Sharkey and other contenders that either never got a shot or just came up short. Considering the era Jerry fought in that happens to be one of the greatest in Heavyweight history because of the huge influx of talent in the 60s and early 70s. We now look back and can really appreach his skills and punching power. Today Jerry Quarry would go thru the Cruiserweight Division like a house afire. To Earnie Shavers as a Boxing Historian you are right the only true KO was by Quarry because the other ones you just plain ran out of gas like Oscar Bonavena did coming out for the 15th rd against Ali. A child could have KOed Bonavena in the 15th of that fight and you were about the same against Lyle and Cobb. |
|6/1/06 10:11:49 PM|Earnie Shavers|UK||.||10|I dodged Frazier by making up excuses that I was sick anytime a possible match was discussed. I know what the result would have been. I would have been lucky to survive 5 minutes with Joe.|
David Tua has been without fighting for a couple of years. Then he came back to win a couple of fights. He is on his way back. I think he is one of the best outta there in this moment, his biggest flaw is (or being) he is a little slow (he is very very big for his height). This guy ain’t Earnie Shavers. If he is Earnie Shavers, I am Ron Lyle. The first post seemed plausible tough.

On the Shavers theme, well he lives in the UK with his English wife and the first post was correct in saying that he lives in Wolverhampton, a non-descript town just outside Birmingham. A national broadsheet wrote an excellent piece a couple of years ago on how Earnie became a 'greeter' for a club in Liverpool. I can't imagine that this particular establishment had too much trouble! I have seen him advertised in both boxing and general sporting magazines doing talks and auctions for boxing clubs over the country. Although I have no clue whether the posts are genuine or not (the first probably was) I think it is important to realise that Earnie is hugely religious and as we have seen with Big George, this can often a previous confident man to being very humble and reserved about his achievements. Even Larry Holmes who may not have been the easiest boxer to get on with, declared his respect and affection for Earnie before and after their battles. If George can claim that Patterson and Quarry would have beaten him, it is not unreasonable for Shavers to suggest that Frazier would had one over him.

Given Shavers' immense power, Ali's victory over him at the very end of his career was undoubtedly one of his best performances.

Hey Everyone i thought i would come to this site to ask for some advice to help me decide what i want to do after the army, yes it is 4 years away but i will only be 23 when i get out, I have been seriously contemplating following in the footsteps of my father and although i am many years behind i do believe with my hard work and dedication it could become a reality, right now i am 6'1 217 lbs and no i am in no way fat when i was lifting weights in i iraq i was up to 225 but i dont hit it as hard now as i did then, i also worked with some people over there on my boxing skills and although i definately dont have the experiance or the know how now i believe that if i trained for the next 4 years before i get out, that just maybe i would have a shot at taking it to the next level, i am just so disappoointed in the heavyweight division right now, everyone doing stuff just for the money, the heart will and desire just dont seem to be there anymore, you dont see the fire in guys eyes anymore, they just dont look hungry, and that needs to change, Anyway i was just trying to get peoples thoughts on the subject, i know the risks i am well aware of it and i see what boxing can do,Someone needs to step up and take the reigns and i hope maybe someday after a few years of working hard and of course some experiance that just maybe i will be ready to get that shot, anyway everyones opinion would be greatly appreciated, take care and god bless.
anymore, you don't see the fire in guys eyes anymore, they just don't look hungry, and that needs to change. Anyway i was just trying to get peoples thoughts on the subject, i know the risks i am well aware of it and i see what boxing can do, Someone needs to step up and take the reigns and i hope maybe someday after a few years of working hard and of course some experience that just maybe i will be ready to get that shot, anyway everyone opinion would be greatly appreciated, take care and god bless!

[6/2/06 02:23:14 PM] Angelo | Washington, DC | funktron | | 10 | Jonathan: Most of us here would love nothing more than for a Quarry heir to ascend to the top of the heap... again. Sure, it would make us feel like we were reliving great years of our own past---make us feel young again. But with that said, my advice is to you is to try to find another avenue to success and fulfillment of your dreams. You seem like a very intelligent person and we know from your military service that you are courageous as well. Someone who is well spoken and willing to take chances in life, as you clearly have shown, can go anywhere and do anything. I think you can be involved with the business side of boxing and certainly your Quarry heritage will open doors for you. With your military background, you can work in national security. I'm sure you have talents we don't even know about. I have a son who is about two years old. I love boxing, but I wouldn't want him to be a fighter. The game is not only dangerous, but I think it is too shady for decent people. I know you will make the choice that is right for you---and if that choice is to box, I say good luck and I will pray for your success and safety. But I also think you owe it to yourself to stretch your other abilities to their limits---you will make it in life no matter what you choose to do.

[6/2/06 10:48:39 PM] kookoo | ny | kookooclock000@yahoo.com | | 10 | johnathon, please don't even think about being in boxing, it's just too dangerous, your father would not want this, he would want better for you, you don't have to try and follow in his footsteps, I have never seen you or met you, but chances are you would not succeed, there's only 1 Jerry Quarry, even Mike found this out, don't have time to get in to all the reasons, JUST DON'T DO IT, PLEASE!

[6/3/06 03:07:01 AM] Ed | Cicero N Y | mooseygoop@aol.com | | 10 | Johnathon, My advise is don't go into boxing on any level. You are playing Russian Roulette with your brain. Talk to a physician with your unit and ask what he thinks of getting punched in the head on a regular basis. Ask to see the trauma that a brain goes through everytime it is punched. Consider this too, that as great as Jerry was, even he got injured. And he had defensive skills far above the average fighter. Also, the greatest defensive fighter ever, is suffering from dementia. As far as thinking the heavyweight division needs exciting new fighters, well thats true but don't kid yourself. The top fighters even in this sorry bunch are VERY tough guys. Note that Lamon Brewester suffered a detached retina in the first round in his latest bout and finished the fight. Untold injuries abound in boxing and the glory is fleeting. Don't let the high spirit of your youth ruin you life down the road. P S The fact that you asked for advice indicates that you are a "thinking" person and i am confidant that after you consider the dangers of getting punched in the head in the way you will make the right choice.

[6/3/06 01:03:29 PM] Steve | NJ | na | | 10 | Jonathan, you asked for advice, so I'm giving it. I was in Nam for two years, I was also a drill instructor. I'm sure you remember people like me. So take this good advice. Combat is nothing like pro boxing. Your dad was a one of a kind fighter. No offence, son, but you've already proved your manhood. Use your VA benifits and get an education. You can be a good man without beating people up.

[6/3/06 03:04:32 PM] Kent | Murrieta, Ca | kentallenent@aol.com | | 10 | Jonathan, I tend to agree with the consensus here that you should not go into boxing. However, it is a personal choice you are going to have to make on your Bare in mind though you would be getting a late start and it would be more difficult to develop the skills needed to get to a world class level but not impossible. But also understand that even though your father Jerry and your Uncle Mike both had highly developed skills, they both suffered injuries from the ring but a lot of it had to do with them staying in the game too long so it is possible you wouldn't suffer the same fate if you become a fighter and get out before something happens.

On the negative side is heredity, if members of your family suffered permanent damage from the ring, then you would probably be more likely to experience the same thing if you were subjected to the same things they went through.

If it was me and my father and my uncle both were injured severly from being fighters, I wouldn't become a fighter but like I said, it is your personal choice. If you do decide to box, you could compete in the army and it would be there that you could find out if you have what it takes to make it to the next level. I have to admit that the fan in me would love to see another Quarry enter the ring but I agree with Steve, you have already done more than enough to prove yourself and this overrides the fan in me. GOOD LUCK! I support whatever decision you make.

Jonathan.GO FOR IT!!!!!but remember, never surround yourself with negative people. Wives, girlfriends parents ect....that has been the downfall of many of us.

Unfortunately Silvio Berlusconi lost the elections and Italia is becoming a comunist country. I hope at least we perform good in the World Soccer Championship in Germany.

Jonathan could try his skills in Army boxing, as Kent suggested. Hopefully he could get a fair evaluation of his potential—not by "yes men" who just want to monopolize on the profitablity of the Quarry name, but by objective and hopefully impartial parties. Look, Jonathan probably does have the genes Kent is concerned about—that could lead to more rapid and more pronounced brain damage by getting hit, as all boxers get hit in the head. Also, Jonathan probably does have the genes and maybe the drive and determination that have made his family a boxing institution. He's got decent size and probably good power too. All that said, I'm still where I was with this last week—the young man is articulate and courageous and can be a success in life without being a prize fighter. I think the business of boxing is as terrible as the beatings and injuries to the combatants. People are cheated, bilked out of money, used and abused—by promoters, managers, networks, etc. It's a dirty game in more ways than one. Some people deal with the slime because it's their only hope in life. But Jonathan probably has other avenues to wealth. That was my point. But if this man gets it in his mind that this is the life he wants and if he shows a fraction of the ability of his father and uncle—none of us will be able to talk him out of giving it his best shot. If he makes that decision, we have to support him and pray for his success and safety.
agree that Jonathan is an intelligent and articulate man but he is also his own man and ultimately he has to make up his own mind. It is good Max posted a different view than some of ours.

It is good Max posted a different view than some of ours. Kent, stop walking the fence! I can tell you Angelo, this is not the time to try and get his M.O.S. changed to "entertaining the troops with sporting events." I boxed a little bit against other drill instructors and Ranger wannabees as part of my training. He won't be facing real fighters. He's too old to start now. Kent, Jonathan just has to listen to people who care about him, like his family. If he had a fraction of Jerry Quarry's talent, it wouldn't be enough!

Jonathan, I have no doubts you're a big, tough man. So stay in the Army! You can even go to college in the Army. You can do good for yourself, your family, and your country. Instead of being exploited by a boxing promoter. Who I'm sure would love to get their hands on another Quarry. Kent, stop walking the fence! I was just trying to point out different sides of the issue. If it was me, I wouldn't do it but it isn't me it is his decision.

Today's heavyweight scene is somewhat undermined by the rankings system. How can Ray Austin (who?) be so high in all the ratings when he has a solitary victory over Owen Beck and has drawn with Larry Donald and Lance Whittaker? Madness. I see that Kevin McBride is fighting the WBO champ, (who fought and beat Brewster impressively) but even John Ruiz had names on his win list. Play off the eight best boxers and have an undisputed champ. (Four champs and next four best contenders)

(fighting for 2 years at heavyweight now and only has a shot Holyfield and declining Guinn on his win list)Samuel Peter (for excitement only—nothing approaching a strong contender on his win list)Sultan IbragimovCalvin Brock

What does it mean "walking the fence" Roadscholarlette?

Mark: The division has had a pronounced and sad decline. I had no idea how good we had it with Lennox Lewis, Holyfield, Bowe, Golata—instead, I blasted some of these guys because they weren't as exciting as Tyson. Before that, I blasted Tyson because he wasn't as professional or as proven as Holmes. Others (not me) blasted Holmes because he was no Ali. But yes, starting with Ali, Frazier, Foreman, Norton—things have slipped. Holmes was a great champion, but aside from Shavers, the quality of most of his opponents was slightly less than the previous generation. Tyson wasted himself. Holyfield/Bowe/Lewis were a couple cuts below Holmes. Now, the current guys are miles below Holyfield and Lewis. It's amateur hour in the heavyweight division—a bunch of dunces and big stiffs. At this point, maybe Marvis Frazier should come out of retirement to fight Shannon Briggs.
each other. These should produce some good battles to get people talking positively about the division. Ideally the top names should fight 3-4 times a year and not the current level of 2 max (one of the reasons I'm glad Byrd was beaten). James Toney was gifted a draw in his last fight and I hope that one of the other champions gets the chance to fight Rahman. Otherwise we spend 12 months in the life of the WBC belt not really going anywhere. This isn't a time warped rant as I know that all fighters are protected. Angelo is certainly right about the quality of fighters in the early to mid 1990s. It's a shame that Bowe didn't fight Lewis and Tyson as he was outstanding against Holyfield, producing three very exciting, brutal and brave performances with high levels of skill. Even behind the big four of Byrd, Lewis, Tyson and Holyfield you had some very talented and exciting fighters. Morrison, Mercer, Moorer, Ruddock and even Golota produced moments of top quality and I suppose you don't really appreciate them until their gone.

Angelo is certainly right about the quality of fighters in the early to mid 1990s. It's a shame that Bowe didn't fight Lewis and Tyson as he was outstanding against Holyfield, producing three very exciting, brutal and brave performances with high levels of skill. Even behind the big four of Byrd, Lewis, Tyson and Holyfield you had some very talented and exciting fighters. Morrison, Mercer, Moorer, Ruddock and even Golota produced moments of top quality and I suppose you don't really appreciate them until their gone.

Mark: Exactly. I didn't appreciate how good the 90's guys were until suffering through the futility of the current crop of heavies. I can't imagine this, but who knows? Maybe in 10 years, things will be so pathetic, we'll be wishing we had Ruiz and Bird back.

Tina: Well said. Maybe I was wrong about something—-I said that if Jonathan gets it in his head to be a pro boxer, we can't stop him. I didn't consider the power of a mother's love when I wrote that. I wish Jonathan the best in life with whatever choice he makes, but I hope he finds success and happiness with his other talents---not putting on the gloves. Jonathan's service to America is something we're all proud of and you should feel honored to have raised a man who would sacrifice for his country as he did.

Steve: Pro boxing is becoming better regulated, with better safety rules, slowly but surely. Thanks to the efforts of the sane people who run the organizations like the Quarry Foundation. Only a few rare men with the physical, emotional and mental right will make it to the top. Lennox Lewis and Oscar De la Hoya are examples of men who made boxing work for them.
just to please his dad, that no son should have to work that hard to be loved.Through out our years together as husband and wife, later as father and mother and then later to best friends, we shared one goal...to have the best we could give to all our children. He told me that he never wanted Jerry Lynn to put on the gloves, nor Keri that he hoped that they would use their talents in a safe and civilized career. So I'm assuming that since you also are his son, he would want the same for you. After all he loved you too, and wanted the same for both his sons.Your father wouldn't have wanted you to join the service, but if you wanted to, he'd have backed you all the way, he couldn't get into the service, due to bad kidneys and flat feet...haha...little did the doctors know huh?...So allow us still here to be proud of you, and love you, and watch you prosper in your life, allow us to share in your choice of life, to brag about our boy...Jonathan...lovegrandma kathleen|6/9/06 03:32:35 PM|tina|las vegas|tplang2000@aol.com|thank you angelo, and kathy thank you so much for your posted letter..Some say I go overboard in my admiration and respect for the men and women in the U.S. military. I never served myself—and I've said before, the volunteer army makes it possible for those who don't join to choose other avenues in life. Guys like Jonathan put it all on the line for us—if it weren't for these strong and courageous volunteers, we'd all have to serve in some capacity, through a draft. The armed forces are a bunch of amazing and special young people who decided not to take the easy way out. I've mentioned that I have a two year old son. After 9-11, it's become painfully obvious that our military, more than ever, has to protect our families from harm and that's what Jonathan was a part of. To those who don't agree with going to war or with the way the war has been handled—you're entitled to your opinion, but if nothing else, please respect these young people who answered the call. |6/11/06 11:10:42 AM|kookoo|ny|kookooclock000@yahoo.com|Well, i think that everyone here agree's w/ the clock man, even if Jonathon became heavyweight champ, the time is short lived and damage would be done, if he's been serving our country, what else do we need from this young man, THERE WILL NEVER BE ANOTHER JERRY QUARRY, he was very unique, for me it's like jerry is still here, i watch him all the time, reliving all the memories, THANK YOU JERRY, WE LOVE YOU, ALWAYS|6/12/06 01:15:53 AM|Brandi Quarry|N/A|I want to let everyone know that Michael Quarry passed away late Sunday night. Please keep his wife Ellen and the Quarry family in your prayers and thoughts in these very hard times. We all will remember you Michael. You were one of the great boxers. Also one of the best Quarry's. You were loved, and already missed.|6/12/06 07:46:59 AM|Sonia Hathaway (Quarry)|Joshua Tree, Ca|Uncle Mike you will always be loved, and you definitely will be missed. You were the best, always good to me and my brothers, and to us that says an awful lot. You are now with Dad, Uncle Jerry, Aunt Brenda, Mom, and Grandma Marie, Debbie and Grampa Jack, and your all watching over us. I LOVE YOU UNCLE MIKE|6/12/06 07:59:18 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC|It's very sad news to hear about Mike's passing. The Quarry family has proven that they will always weather the storms—from the regulars here on the letters page, our deepest sympathy, prayers, love and support for your family. |6/12/06 02:12:33 PM|SABRINA QUARRY-PORTER|FLORIDA|UNCLE MIKE I LOVE YOU ALWAYS IN MY HEART FOREVER.YOU WERE GOOD TO ALL OF US AND MY KIDS THOUGHT YOU WERE AWESOME.REST IN PEACE DEAR UNCLE.....|6/12/06 02:58:47 PM|Kathleen Quarry-Mauger|California|My Dear Sweet Mikey.You were such a great kid growing up, I loved you so dearly. Your heart was the biggest thing about you, you showed it proudly for all to enjoy.

When you started high school, you made a promise to stick to the books and to graduate, for this your brother and I gave you a car and an allowance. You studied hard, you kept your word, you graduated and made us all proud. And you did it because you wanted to box, you wanted to share in the excitement of boxing with your brothers.

You deserved better from the boxing world. You deserved better from your wives. You deserved better from your doctors. These things I won't forget. Each night I will ask god to bless you with happiness and to give you all that you missed out on here on earth.

You learned your lessons in life, and I guess our father needed you more than us.

I'll remember to bring you a salt shaker, when I come to see you for the last time here on earth. It will have to do until I see you next in our "Fathers" house.

Make room for me, I'll see you soon as will all of us.

Dear Uncle Mike,

I'll miss you. You were good to all of us. I'll never be able to eat ice cream without thinking of you. You were a champion human being, a great joy to be around. I love you and will remember you always.

Love,

Jerry

It is very sad to hear that Mike Quarry has passed from this Earth.

As I have said, Mike was a very good boxer but more importantly he was a decent human being. Although I only met him briefly, I will never forget the conversations I had with him.

My heart goes out to the Quarry family on their loss. GOD BLESS THE QUARRY FAMILY!

It is very sad to hear that Mike Quarry has passed from this Earth. The world is a lesser place without him.

Although I only met him briefly, I will never forget the conversations I had with him.

My heart goes out to the Quarry family on their loss. GOD BLESS THE QUARRY FAMILY!

I am very saddened by the news of the death of this young man, Mike Quarry. My heart goes out to the Quarry family, a very lovable family. Condolences.

I'm very saddened by the news of the death of this young man, Mike Quarry. My heart is close to the Quarry family, a very lovable family. Condolences.

My heart goes out to the Quarry family in these sad times. Growing up Irish in N.Y. I idolized Jerry Quarry, and then his brother, Mike. I always rooted for the brothers in all their fights. My thanks to them both for improving my childhood through boxing. I just hope that Jerry and Mike's struggles in later years helps boxing to continue to improve ways to ensure boxer's health, now and in the later years of their lives.

Sorry to hear about Michael. Our love and prayers go out to Aunt Arwanda and her family. We will cherish the memories made. Lot's of Love* xoxo

I am truly sorry for the Quarry family. God's blessings to all of you.

So much sorrow for one family to bare, to all the Quarry family you have my deepest sympathy. Even though I've never met any of you, please know that my heart is with you during this time. We love you Mike and we love what you stood for, may God bless you.

My heart goes out to the Quarry family in these sad times. Growing up Irish in N.Y. I idolized Jerry Quarry, and then his brother, Mike. I always rooted for the brothers in all their fights. My thanks to them both for improving my childhood through boxing. I just hope that Jerry and Mike's struggles in later years helps boxing to continue to improve ways to ensure boxer's health, now and in the later years of their lives.

So much sorrow for one family to bare, to all the Quarry family you have my deepest sympathy. Even though I've never met any of you, please know that my heart is with you during this time. We love you Mike and we love what you stood for, may God bless you.

My condolences to the Quarry family and their friends regarding the death of Michael. His life and boxing career obviously helped inspire the establishment of the Foundation and its mission. And, from what I was told, he did a pretty good impersonation of Muhammed Ali on the telephone, at least in the opinion of his brother Jerry !!
I followed Mike's career as well as Jerry's and felt like they were my big brothers. When they won I was so happy for them and when they lost I felt their pain and disappointment. I loved the Quarry brothers and boxing has lost a piece of history with these two real champions of the sport.

Was a big fan of Mike's. Condolences to all.

Growing up in New York, we followed the Quarry brothers closely. We never met them, but we felt we knew them. A true celebrity can do that. Down to earth, honest to God and tough as nails, that's them both up. Thousands of us out here grieve with the Quarry family. Let us all be comforted knowing that Jerry and Mike are in God's arms. As long as I live, no one will ever disparage the Quarry name in my presence. EVER!!

Wonder if there's room for a pic of Mike along with James and Jerry?

I really feel badly for the Quarry family, and am very sorry for their losses. But I come from a somewhat different direction. I come as a huge Ali, and to a much lesser extent, Joe Frazier fan. I realize my comments are more about Jerry than Mike, but that is because I am almost exclusively a heavyweight follower. But I knew who Mike was, and saw a couple of his fights on TV. I think my remarks apply very much to both brothers. At the time of Jerry's greatest success, I did not "like" him at all, in fact just the opposite. However, I would never have wished his fate upon him, and was very, very sad years later when I learned of his condition, followed by his much too early death. At the time, in his prime, I did not quite realize, or give him credit for having the bad luck of being a really good fighter during the Ali era, or the Frazier years. And Mike had Foster. I did not know Mike had developed the same problems as Jerry until I heard the news. It brought back the sadness I had felt about Jerry, and I thought to myself "Oh, no". So I thought that "as not a fan", I would tell you how sad I feel about the loss of both brothers. Jerry and Mike literally gave their lives to the sport they loved and excelled at, and in that act made boxing better than before they came along. God bless them both, and their families in this terrible time.

In reference to my earlier letter, I would like to correct an error in my letter. Please exclude the s on the end of the word wife. His wife of many years (ellen) was a devoted wife and did every thing possible to make Mike comfortable. Please except my apology if I was miss leading.

Again it seems I made a mistake. Please do not call Arwanda, she said she needs her time to grieve. Instead of contacting Arwanda just contact the foundation and go through them for information. If anyone can tell me way of dealing with loved ones during the grieving process, you'd make a million. Mike was dear to alot of people, the family can't thank everyone individually, but wants you to know your thoughts and blessings are appreciated.

Uncle Mike. i have already been missing you. You were the greatest man in my life growing up as a child. When mom and i lived with you in SLO in the basement apartment i had the best fun with you. like Jerry Lyn, i will never forget the way you ate ice cream and especially the Vanilla Swiss Almond (which i eat too). i never forgot how you made all of your nieces and nephews feel as special as individuals do. in addition, i know there are a lot of us. i am grateful you are with Uncle
Jerry, Uncle Jimmy, my Mom, and Jack. you were with those who loved and cherished you here and now there. thank you Uncle Mike for a great childhood and adult memories. Sheri Coolbaugh | 6/15/06 01:03:18 PM | Sheri | Phoenix | lizzardluver@hotmail.com | 10 | hello again. i am on the phone with my grandmother Arwanda, she has asked me to write this stating that there are no donations needed for Uncle Mike's services. If you want to make a donation of any kind please contact your local Alzimehers asso. (think i spelled that wrong). thank you for your prayers. |

Sue Aton | 6/16/06 10:31:46 AM | Utah | suzziegcokebear@aol.com | 9 | I would like to send my deepest sympathy to the Quarry Family, for the loss of Mike and Jerry, I use to hang out with Jerry and Kathy in Downey before they were married, they were both great fighters, |

Sue Aton | 6/16/06 12:19:42 PM | London | evren.bekir@btinternet.com | 10 | I would like to say how very sorry I am to hear the news and all my condolences to the Quarry Family. |

Sue Aton | 6/16/06 11:26:34 PM | East Coast | emb_1906@yahoo.com | 10 | God bless all the Quarry's. I had the pleasure of watching Jerry and Mike in their heyday. Although I usually rooted against them in their title tries, I had to admire their determination and grit. They were true warriors!!!!!!!!! |

Sue Aton | 6/17/06 04:08:32 PM | Kentucky | WorldChamp@msn.com | 10 | My condolences to the Quarry family. |

Sue Aton | 6/17/06 11:45:19 PM | Utah | Tyronie@bellsouth.net | 10 | I am a psychologist and would love to help with the Jerry Quarry foundation----561-306-9070 oe email |

Sue Aton | 6/18/06 10:18:03 AM | Joshua Tree, CA | Sonia2163@aol.com | 10 | Happy Father's Day Dad, Uncle Jerry, We all miss you and love you always. Happy Father's Day to all the father's on this site. |

Sue Aton | 6/18/06 04:45:27 PM | fernandina bch, fla | maxhord@adelphia.net | 10 | After Larry Holmes lost to Spinks and then Tyson I beleive the heavyweight division went in the tank.The only real heavyweight with any class after that was Holyfield.I wish he would have come along when the real fighters were giving each other hell.And you all know which ones I mean. Happy fathers day all you dads! |

Sue Aton | 6/19/06 10:29:00 AM | Washington, DC | funktron | 10 | Max: Do you think Bowe or Lewis deserve props for being very good fighters? I'm on the fence. I think they were tops in their era (along with Holyfield) but I don't know if Lewis had the chin to compete with the all time greats and I don't know if Bowe had the heart, consistently, to be in the mix with the 70's guys. Holyfield had both. |

Sue Aton | 6/19/06 11:13:09 AM | fernandina bch, fla | maxhord@adelphia.net | 10 | Lewis has a punchers chance no matter who he fights.I agree with you about Bowe. I still would'n include them among the elite. Jerry Quarry would have chopped Bowe down and he and Lewis would have been a good fight before Jerry took him out. Lewis didn't have "fire it took to stay in there. |

Sue Aton | 6/20/06 03:23:13 AM | uk | mark_sargeant2003@yahoo.co.uk | 10 | I think that all of Holyfield, Bowe and Lewis at their respective peaks would have had the skills to compete very well in the seventies. All three in my opinion are a drop down from the elite and 9 times out of ten would have lost to Ali, Foreman, Holmes, Frazier, Liston etc. However, all three including Tyson would have to be drawn in the same bracket as the guys below such as Norton, Quarry, Shavers and Lyle, and were better than Ellis, Mac Foster, Bugner, Bonavena. I suppose styles do make fights and we could get an upset (Bonavena and would give all four 90s heavyweights fits). I'm not really sure anyone could predict with any confidence how Jerry Quarry would fare against the four heavies. It depends on what Jerry Quarry turns up. I think at his absolute peak when he gave that utterly outstanding performance against Ron Lyle, the man who creamed Shavers and Ellis and gave Foreman and Ali absolute hell before succumbing, was a formidable fighting machine. His knockout of Shavers in the same year proved that he was an extremely accomplished all round fighter—in fact Quarry at his best had the skills to beat many a top class fighter. However, that was Jerry at his best and several times during his career he did slump to defeats he shouldn't have. Draws to Tony Alongi and losses to Machen, Chuvalo and Ellis definitely undermine his chances against the modern four. Although those three above are good fighters and their extenuating circumstances in all three the fact is that Jerry lost them. Lewis at his peak (which from Ruddock to Tyson was 10 years) was very formidable and would have had the measure of Jerry 6 times out of 10 on account of size, power and Jerry's proneness to cuts. | 6/20/06 11:23:29 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Mark: I think you were pretty much on target. Jerry's "Ready to rumble" attitude would have kept him in any fight against the best of the 90's. Holyfield-Quarry would be a war—two guys with granite chins and unmatched determination and toughness. Toe-to-toe, I'd like Holyfield's chances of winning on cuts or on taking a decision. Lewis and Bowe had that huge size and reach---this would present problems for Jerry as again, jabs and punches from a distance could open cuts and take Jerry off the offensive. Interestingly, I think he'd have about a 50/50 chance against either guy. I think he could make Bowe quit by giving a performance similar to what Golata accomplished (without the low blows). I think he could flat out KO Lewis if he landed early and often. But in both cases, the fights could swing the other way if Quarry got cut or in the case of Lewis---if Quarry simply could not get inside. | 6/20/06 06:26:42 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|I agree with Angelo and Mark, that Jerry would be a very live underdog but an underdog nevertheless against either Lewis or Bowe.That the size and reach advantage would be a somewhat uphill climb but hardly impossible as anything can happen in a fight.The underlying problem would be Jerry's tender skin but if he didn't get cut and if he could get inside, which I believe he would more likely to get inside with Bowe than with Lewis, than Jerry could do damage and win either fight. Lewis would be more likely to get hurt by Lewis than Bowe would though but if Holyfield could hurt Bowe, than Jerry could also. Jerry verses Holyfield, a great fight that I am not sure who would win.6/21/06 09:04:34 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Kent: If an in-prime JQ fought in Holyfield's era, I believe he too would have been a champion. The way I have it figured, once Douglas took out Iron Mike, all hell broke loose and a guy like Quarry could have done exactly what Holyfield did---beat Buster and defend a few times against guys like the older Foreman and Holmes. Quarry would have been a champion in the early 90's, at least for a short time. How do you think JQ would have done against Mike Spinks and Leon Spinks?| 6/21/06 05:08:24 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Kent:The Lewis-Holyfield fights showed that even a tough guy like Holyfield was getting hit too often and too hard by Lewis' long reach---it made him shy about getting inside pressure on the attack. If guys like Quarry or Holyfield can't get an inside body attack against Lewis, they're dead in the water. I would have loved to see Jerry try to figure it out and try to break Lewis down. He did it and made it look too easy against Lyle--but Lewis and Bowe were even taller than Lyle, though Lyle gave nothing up in the power department to either of these guys. | 6/21/06 05:21:16 PM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|||10|Angelo, but bear in mind Lewis got Holyfield when he was already on the way down. Maybe if he had fought an in prime Holyfield, Holyfield would have had a better shot at breaking Lewis down.So if Jerry was in his prime he might have a shot at getting to Lewis. A very difficult task but not impossible. | 6/22/06 01:10:57 PM|Slade|Washington State||billing@jeffscycles.com|||10|Hello folks, it's been a year or so since I posted (I remember writing emails to James Q. back in '95 when he had his old AOL email address and no website)....
I read through the letters posted, there are lot's of "Boxing Minds" out there.
I have a dilemma for you to consider. In several industries, you can take average material and make a champion out of it. For example, a professional song writer can take average talent and drop a well written song in their lap and get them to the top of billboard charts (an example would be the fine writing that Neil Diamond did in 1966-67 for The Monkees)...so here's my question. Given an average fighter (say a contender, but not a champion), and given the best trainers in the world, (if they teamed up), could they make a champion out of the average fighter. In other words, if this average fighter had the desire and all the best boxing minds in the world at his disposal, could he be developed into a champion. Better yet, lets say he only has to focus on one champion to beat - so he and his world class training team could focus on the reigning champions shortcomings... I understand a trainer has to have “something” to start with, even to consider championship honors, in this case they do, an average heavyweight. I was going to list some possible match-ups; like a 1975 Wepner vs. 1973 Foreman—but I found myself thinking of all of Wepners shortfalls (slow, prone to cuts, etc.) and I stopped considering the influence of the best boxing minds in the world (who would promote Wepners positives, and focus on Foremans shortcomings). Wepner may not have been the best example to use, but his level of contention is what I'm referring to, not the top level contenders. Top contenders, like Bonavena, Lyle, Shavers, Quarry, & Chuvalo, could have easily been champions—in many cases, the only difference was a “disputed” decision. So...not considering the top level contenders, could a finely picked team of Trainers, Technicians, Physicians from around the world turn a Chuck Wepner class fighter into a Champion? My thoughts& and prayers go out to the Quarry family. Sincerely, Slade.

[6/22/06 07:17:39 PM]Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com||||10|Welcome back Slade, no I don't think you could take a journeyman and make him a champion but of course anything can happen in a fight but the odds would be against it.Interesting that you mentioned Wepner of 1975 verses Foreman of 1973 as Wepner did fight and lose to a young Foreman on his way up and big George improved after they first had met.

[6/22/06 10:31:59 PM]Jim Amato|Ohio||jimsboxing@zoominternet.net||||10|First of all, sorry to hear about Mike's passing. He hung tough with the best of them in his era. Jerry was one of my favorites. Always came to fight.
I think this is a great tribute site. |

[6/23/06 08:37:39 AM]Bob Bumbera|NC||renfbera@aol.com||||10|My sincere condolences to the Quarry family for the loss of Mike. A very tough man who gave it all every time.|

[6/23/06 10:39:37 AM]mark|uk||mark_sargeant2003@yahoo.co.uk||||10|This weekend sees two of the best potential heavyweight challengers fight each other as Calvin Brock takes on Sultan Ibragimov. However, combined the two have wins over just Jameel McCline, Etienne and Lance Whitaker—obviously they haven't been pushed too much so far and I'm not sure whether either deserves a title challenge yet.Another excusable rant is against the rankings system which sees challengers undeservedly fighting for titles. I know that Oleg Maskaev fought very well indeed to blast Rahman out and has a win over Sinal Sam but the first was over 7 years ago and since he has been blasted out by Oliver McCall, Lance Whitaker, Kirk Johnson, David Tua and Corey Sanders. Not exactly a glorious career. At the moment the best heavys and champions should be fighting each other to help gain credibility.|

[6/23/06 05:37:35 PM]Ray|Las Vegas||||10|It was 37 years ago tonight that Joe Frazier defeated Jerry Quarry in MSG in NYC. I was at that fight I was convinced that Jerry would win coming of his big win over Buster Mathis 3 months earlier.It's funny it does not seem like 37 years ago. it seems like yesterday. My condolences to the Quarry family|

[6/23/06 08:51:17 PM]Phil|MO||||10|My sincere condolences to the Quarry family on the loss of Mike. Although Mike always seemed to be in Jerry's shadow, he was outstanding boxer. I just learned of the passing of Mike Quarry from dementia pugilistica. The fact that Jerry Quarry was thought to be suffering from the same disease makes this seem altogether too unlikely. Was any other disease, particularly a familial disease, considered? I watched both Quarry brothers fight in the 1960's and 1970's (while living in southern California). Although Jerry got hit quite a lot in his title fights, Mike was a much better defensive fighter and didn't get hit that much. I think that there is often too much of a rush to judgement regarding boxing and neurological disorders. Nobody has really proven that boxing leads to Parkinson's disease but everyone was quick to make that association with Ali. Nobody has proven that boxing leads to Lou Gherig disease, but that was assumed by some to be the case with Ezzard Charles. Nobody has proven that boxing leads to Alzheimer's disease although both Sugar Ray Robinson and Floyd Patterson suffered from it. I know of only two boxers who were thought to have demential pugilistica, and those two are the Quarry brothers, two very good boxers. I am sorry that their diseases were written off as being caused by boxing when another underlying cause could have been at play. I'm not trying to defend boxing; it is a violent sport. But I've seen a lot of football players get knocked around with concussions. None of them have been thought to have had demential pugilistica. Is that only because they weren't pugilists?

Not all boxers and football players suffer the same degree as Jerry and Mike did. Boxers with long careers take tremendous punishment throughout their careers, not only in their fights but in the gym as well. Jerry Quarry and Mike both had long careers and trained hard in the gym months before you ever saw them in the ring. I am in touch with many retired fighters here in Florida and most of them suffer from some of the same terrible conditions Jerry and Mike died from, including myself.

Mr. Smith, if you are not a doctor how can you say it was highly unlikely that Uncle Mike passed away from the same thing as Uncle Jerry, are you a Doctor?

To correct an earlier post it was Timor Ibragimov (Sultan's cousin and not so talented) who fought and lost quite tamely to Calvin Brock last Saturday. It doesn't look as though Brock has the top qualities to be champ even in this era of heavyweights. I know that Shannon Briggs and David Tua are fighting on July 26th but there are tips that Briggs will fight Klitschko in November which may give him a puncher's chance. Another thread, looking at Boone kirkman's record is to see that he looked like a pretty accomplished fighter by the strong standards of the 1970s. He beat Ellis, Machen and Doug Jones and only lost six times including bouts to Foreman, Lyle, Norton, Bugner and Doug Jones in a rematch so he's been in good company.
Kirkman is not regularly spoken of but he has good credentials fighting in the great standards of the 70s. He beat Ellis, Doug Jones and Machen and lost only 6 fights including bouts to Foreman, Norton, Lyle, Bugner and Doug Jones, hardly embarrassing company.

6/27/06 11:29:54 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|||10|Jeffrey:
I've made the same point about Parkinsons/Ali possibly being from boxing, but possibly not. Last I heard, Janet Reno and Michael J. Fox hadn't fought Frazier and Norton, but they suffer from Parkinsons or similar afflictions. Something like MS---if a boxer got that, it would be assumed it's because he's a boxer.
It is indeed a violent sport, and I'm not defending it either---but facts are facts. In the case of the Quarry brothers, I do believe they might have had a predisposition to DP, and it was brought on by boxing. They were too young to think of their DP as "natural" so I'm making an assumption, right or wrong, that head trauma caused this to surface.As for football players, yes, some of them are in bad shape due to blows to the head for years and years. Al Toon (former Jets receiver) had severe light sensitivity and headaches after he retired. I don't know how he's doing now---hopefully he retired soon enough to recover.

6/28/06 09:17:58 AM|Steve|N.J.||dmmsrm@comcast.net|||10|My sincere condolences to the Quarry family on the passing of Mike.He was a great,exciting fighter,a master boxer.

6/28/06 03:11:49 PM|Soccer Kid|Mundial||..............|||10|Italy should be fined for having such an easy road to the semifinals. Australia and Ukraine?
The Ukraine is weak and feeble! Deutschland Eber Alles!!

6/29/06 01:27:00 AM|Wilma|Bakersfield||robwilma@hotmail.com|||7|This is a letter I wish never had to be written, but my family has held their breath for fifteen years. Now we need your prayers. We were forbidden by Ellen for 15 years to call our Brother Michael, we had to call her. She said it disturbed him. The truth of the matter is we had to call her so that when he was on the phone she would listen to ever word, if she didn't like where the conversation was leading she would take the phone away. When we came to visit we had to stay at a hotel. It wasn't until about 5 years ago when she had an auto accident and needed help did we get to stay at my brothers house. We also never got to spend the holidays with them, as she would take him a christian man to celebrate chanukah for two or three weeks at a time, but our family could only see him rarely no longer then 15 hours. They would come up on Saturday afternoon and leave on Sunday morning. He would be drugged up, so she would send him to bed as soon as he arrived. Then she would leave at 6am before anyone woke up. She called my dying father and told him that she hated him and what ever happen to Michael was his fault, but she said she didn't care because Michael had replace him with her father whom he loved more than his own. I have said all that to say this. It took Ellen almost two weeks to send the remains of our beloved brother and son. She released the ashes to the Quarry family and said we could do what we wanted with him, at the last minute my 80 year old mother wanted to keep his remains until she passes. Ellen called up and agreed that she could have him and if after my moms death one of us girls or my brother Robert wanted the remains we could have him. Now she is threatening to take legal action againsts her. Because she wanted the cemetary to give back the money for the opening and closing of the grave my mom has already agreed that if none of us wanted to keep Michael's remains after her death she will pay for such cost her self. I ask for your prayers for my mom. Please understand that Ellen is a woman that on two occaisions told me my brother was her "thorn in the flesh" and medically labotomized him with Haldol, which she said she would never do as she saw it expediated my brother Jerrys death. Please read between the lines as we do believe in prayer and we know yours would help. I am sorry I felt this needed to all be said, so you would know what we are up against, as Ellen is a millionaire and the costs of the opening and closing did not hurt her financially. I apologize in advance for the angry tone to this email but we are very hurt. Ellen was given notice that Michael was not going to last more than a few days yet none of his family was notified. Just her and her friend was allowed to say goodbye. I know this is very informative but I didn't know what else to do except be honest with you, and so that you can totally understand our needs. Please understand we tried to confront Ellen with a letter addressing these matters but it went unanswered. God Bless you in advance for your concern and prayers. Sincerely in His Love, god Bless All of you.  Wilma (Quarry)

Pearson| 6/29/06 08:48:00 AM|Sal April|Wilmington, DE|sal@thereachfm.com|10|I was very saddened to hear of Mike's passing. I would just like to offer my prayers to the Quarry family. I never had the opportunity to meet Mike or Jerry, but I did meet and had a chance to interview James while working at radio station WCHE in West Chester, PA. That was a wonderful time for my wife Gloria and me.I take comfort that Michael is now with his Lord and Savior and suffering no longer.Peace and love be with you at this time, your friend, Sal April| 6/29/06 10:01:32 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca|kentallenent@aol.com|10|Wilma, my prayers are with you and your family but also for Ellen that somehow God can soften her heart.It is hard enough to lose a loved one without all of what has been going on. Anyway, at least we know Michael is at peace now and he is whole again.

6/29/06 05:01:15 PM|Slade|Oregon/Washington State|billing@jeffscycles.com|10|This message is for the Webmaster. As we browse through the history of these postings, we can see regular fans posting often, Quarry family members that post often, an occasional pro athlete, an occasional doctor, an occasional celebrity, an occasional media person, etc. But it's not always clear (family member, a selected profession, etc.). Is it possible for you to add a "Profiles" link for each person that posts (optional of course for the person posting) - it would be GREAT and helpful to see a little more info on the person posting (again, only if they choose to provide the info). Just a thought. Many of the postings are very interesting - a little more voluntary background on the poster we be helpful. At any rate, this is a Great Site that has been very professionally developed and maintained. Sincerely, Slade

6/30/06 06:35:30 AM|SABRINA QUARRY-PORTER|FLORIDA|DOESN'TMATTER@NOWHERE|10|WELL AUNT WILMA, NOW YOU KNOW HOW IT FEELS TO BE TREATED LIKE CRAP FROM YOUR OWN FAMILY FOR YEARS.THAT IS THE WAY YOU AND THE FAMILY HAVE TREATED ME ALL MY LIFE, NEVER WANTING ANYTHING TO DO WITH US UNLESS THERE WAS SOMETHING TO GAIN.AFTER DAD PASSED AWAY, EVERYONE HAD SOMETHING BAD TO SAY ABOUT HIM...WELL HE WAS THE BEST FATHER ANYONE COULD EVER HAVE AND A MUCH BETTER PERSON THAN ANY OF YOU PEOPLE...HECK THERE IS A CHILD MOLESTER AMONG YOU...JUST ASK YOUR BROTHER ROBERT....

6/30/06 11:48:12 AM|JIMMY DORSEY|VENTURA CALIFORNIA|RONNYRAINS@YAHOO.COM|10|KENT: JUST BLEW INTO RIVERSIDE FOR A WEDDING SO EMAIL ME ASAP OKAY,THANKS. AND MY MOST SINCERE CONDOLENCES FOR MY FRIEND MIKE QUARRY,HE SURE TREATED ME GREAT FOR THE SHORT TIME I KNEW HIM IN BAKERSFIELD IN 1980. HE WAS ALSO VERY FUNNY AND UPEBEAT, I HAD MET HIM AT QUARRY'S CORNER RESTAURANT,AND WE TALKED BOXING AND STUFF ALL DAY.

6/30/06 11:51:46 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC|funktron|10|The emotions among the family members are very real and very painful to read and understand. I hope in at least some small way, everyone can make peace or call a truce. But I know that as fans of the boxing brothers, we really don't know anything about the dynamics of the family situation---not that it's our business anyway. This is the kind of stuff that would make a fascinating TV show---reality or talk. It's almost a website unto itself---a whole family tree and how everyone is related would be fascinating. As for "the other Quarry," Mike, he is in a better place now. |
I remember all of Jerry's fights. He beat our neighbor Floyd Patterson twice. I honestly feel if Jerry had different management/trainers he would have been heavyweight champ. Same for Mike...maybe not champ but more successful. Biggest mistake was having his father control his career. Both Quarry's would have been better off with the Gil Clancys or Ray Arcels from the beginning. There was no way Jimmy Ellis should have beaten Jerry in that elimination tournament. He never should have lost to Chuvalo either. Mike, he should have never fought Bob Foster at that time in his career. Mike needed more big time fights to test him more thoroughly before taking on the power punching Foster. I always pulled for Jerry because he gave 110%...except his last few fights. The 2nd Frazier fight and Ken Norton. A top shape, in conditioned Jerry would have KO'd Norton in the later rounds. My condolences to the Quarry family on the loss of Mike. | quarry's please, stop going at each other's throats, my God you were always fighting the world, much less each other. don't blame jerry's dad for Christ sake, he was doing the best he could and what he thought was right at the time, how the hell is an uneducated man like himself w/ the limited medical information of the 60's know what the future will bring w/ jerry & mike, does anybody think he would have let them be fighters if he were to know the future!!! most of us will never have a place in history like jerry & mike, it's not only how long you live , but how much life you can live while your living, they both could have gotten labor jobs or whatever and we would not be talking about them today. QUARRY'S PLEASE STOP FIGHTING, DEATH IS BETTER THAN BEING NOBODY, JUST ASK ME!! | everyone is somebody in God's eyes and while Jerry and Mike Quarry are better known than any of us in the boxing world, there are still some boxing fans, mostly younger fans, who don't know who they are. Remember also that there are over a billion Chinese who probably have no idea who the Quarrys are. So fame is relative. But more importantly than any kind of fame or success is how people treat other people and most people who ever came in contact with Jerry or Mike will tell that they were down to earth guys who were easy to talk to. That in itself says a lot. To me celebrities in any field are the same as the rest of us. When it comes down to it they are not any better or worse than any of us and I have no respect for those famous people who don't treat people decently. | kent, your beginning to get under my skin, something you have not done for a while, this fighting amongst each other is what makes people think the quarry's are trashy people, their (Quarry's)weakness is like Jerry & his brothers they have too much guts and will not back down, even from each other! kent I realize that God thinks we're all somebody, but the people of now or in the future don't look at it that way, whether in the ring or in a regular job, life is a fight for survival, yes Jerry
& Mike should have retired before they did, James should have not smoked, but all we have is what is, sadly now, what was. KENT STOP TRYING STEAL MY THUNDER !!! |

You seemed to need it. Sorry if I misread what you were saying. I do believe what kind of people we are is much more important than what we do and what others think of us.

Hard for some to believe but I would really rather be who I am and have my integrity than be someone famous and not live by my prinicables. When it all comes down to it, we all put our pants on one leg at a time and no one is really better than anybody else.

I do believe that Jerry and Mike were for the most part good people, not perfect but good people nevertheless and that is important.

Understand, I don't try to steal anyone's thunder.

Ok kent thats fine, hey i wish i had the guts of the quarry's, but hey most people don't anyway, quarry's i hope you are listening to the clockman, because i care about each & every one of you, you are very special people. Sheri Coolbaugh , where are you? You should never accept another name other than Quarry, make him accept your name.

Jefferey Smith, I can't stand by and read you saying, "I just learned of the passing of Mike Quarry from dementia pugilistica. The fact that Jerry Quarry was thought to be suffering from the same disease makes this seem altogether too unlikely. Was any other disease, particularly a familial disease, considered?" ARE YOU FREAKIN' CRAZY? Let's have a little more respect for these two warriors and their families, and not provoke ABSURD SPECULATION. Dementia pugilistica is a garden variety disease among long time boxers. Go to any big city gym where old boxers hang around and you'll meet some of them with DP. The human brain is really not designed to withstand 1 or 2 or 3 punches without risk of serious damage. Any good professional boxer has been training, sparring, and fighting for YEARS, sometimes 20 years or more. MILLIONS OF HEAD PUNCHES. Neural cells, it turns out, can regenerate, but very few and very slowly. When one of them is destroyed, it usually stays dead forever, and a boxer will lose tens of millions of them.

This is sophomore in high school biology, Jefferey. If you're a doctor at all, you must be a TREE SURGEON.

One more thing: the effects of brain damage are extremely variable and can be subtle. A patient doesn't have to "look" or "act" punch drunk, by having spells of incoherence, or drooling, or amnesia, or tics, or anything else, to be afflicted. Sometimes obvious symptoms don't become obvious for many years.

I express my deepest condolences to Mike's family, and of course to Jerry's family, too. Great, great boxers -- all-time greats.

Posting any sort of comment on this site appears to be an open invitation for insults and verbal abuse. I cannot imagine that the personal attacks that seem to dominate these letters does anything positive for raising money for The Jerry Quarry Foundation.

Your a stranger here Mr. Jeff, stay out of family business, i've been coming here for many years, i know a lot about the quarry's. i happen to know what i'm talking about, THE QUARRY NAME STANDS TALL NO MATTER WHAT PEOPLE SAY !!!!

You don't need to ask me twice. You guys need a life.

I wonder if that's the Dr. Smith from "Lost In Space"?

Yes, I believe it is my old friend Dr. Smith.
Hi everyone, greetings from Germany!

By the way, Germania-Italia 0-2 Grosso-Del Piero

Deutschland raus!

Deutschland unter alles!

Just another step babies, just another step!

Forza Italia!

Ciao!

Sabrina, it's been 4 years ago today that you passed and I still have a hard time dealing with it. I love you more than any words can say. I love you always in my heart forever daddy cool. Hug and kisses always.....

Dad it's been 4 yrs today, and we still think of you every day. That will never change. I love you and miss you terribly. Things will never be the same again.

Dad, it's been 4 years today, and we still think of you every day. That will never change. We love you and miss you terribly. Things will never be the same again.

Today is the great day! Being second in the world would already be very good, but being world champion would be much better. I hope you will root for Italia against France, as you are of Italiana's descent.

Well Dad, it's been 4 yrs today, and we still think of you every day. That will never change. We love you and miss you terribly.

Hey Massimo, soccer is great, my 3 kids play it and have for 12 or 13 years, and I have coached it for 8 yrs, gotta love it. Hey and Dr. Jeff, maybe you should just stay off the site for good, cause you're not really welcome here. To all who stick up for the Quarry's "THANKS, YOUR AWESOME".

Jeffrey: I really do not feel you meant any harm, I'll tell you why the Quarry's both suffered from dementia, not to be confused with a DR. either, there condition was due to a thing called BOX-FIGHTING, thousands of thousands of rounds of slinging leather, and usually with no head gear. No I do not believe they were born with it. And if the truth was known, Ali is suffering from the same affliction, tons of sparring with the world's best. Take care!
watch some news on the fire we have out here in Yucca Valley, its unbelievable.| 7/13/06 08:25:22 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|10|Sonia: In the Washington, DC area, we just had flooding, and now you're having wildfires---can't escape this stuff!|Massimo: Of course, I would have loved to see the USA perform better in the World Cup. We've never been a soccer power because soccer has really only become popular in our country in the last 15-20 years, but we've been steadily improving. We were all disappointed in the way our team played in the tournament, though I think we gave Italy a tough match. I've always loved American Football (I guess more similar to European rugby than soccer) and baseball, basketball and even hockey. I became interested in soccer in the mid-1970s, when Pele joined a new professional team in the U.S. in a new league---the team was the New York Cosmos and the league was the NASL (North American Soccer League). It didn't last too long, but while it was here, Pele, even though he was older and past his peak, was amazing. Now we have MLS (Major League Soccer). The quality of play isn't what you have in Europe, but it is still pretty good and fun to watch. |

7/13/06 10:02:42 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Massimo, congratulations on your country winning the world cup.Although we are not big soccer fans, Americans would have been extremely interested if our country's team had done better in the tournament and we are disappointed that our team didn't go further in the tournament.|
7/13/06 11:30:30 AM|Massimo|Roma||wordlichampions.com|10|Thank you. The American team gave Italia a very tough match and I think you have already reached a good level. On a single day you can give trouble to anyone. |

7/13/06 11:31:11 AM|Jimmy "second coming" Ellis|Kentucky||EllisNumber1AllTime@aol.com|10|Massimo: Ken, congratulations on your country winning the world cup.Although we are not big soccer fans, Americans would have been extremely interested if our country's team had done better in the tournament and we are disappointed that our team didn't go further in the tournament.|

7/14/06 04:29:00 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron@yahoo.com|10|Welcome Jimmy Ellis! Is this THE Jimmy Ellis?Hey guys. Cool site.| 7/14/06 07:23:22 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Thank you. The American team gave Italia a very tough match and I think you have already reached a good level. On a single day you can give trouble to anyone. |

7/15/06 01:34:11 PM|Massimo|Roma||worldchampions.com|10|You're very humble, Jimmy, you didn't mention that you gave Bonavena a boxing lesson. Muhammad Ali is and will always be in your shadow. |

7/16/06 03:05:40 PM|Jumpity Bruce|Jumpville||Jump.com|10|I rooted for Italy to Jump all over France in the World Cup and they did!Jump! Jump! Jump! Jump! Jump! Jump! Jump!| 7/16/06 10:08:55 PM|Kathleen Quarry-Mauger|Moreno Valley, Ca||Maugermom@msn.com|10|Yes Jimmy Ellis you keep on dreaming cause that's all it is. I was there, I also watched you train, the only reason Jerry didn't whip your ass was I had just lost our baby....so keep on jimmy dreams are what makes us.|

7/17/06 12:23:22 AM|Jimmy Ellis|Kentucky|10|You can make excuses all you want. The fight was not close, I lopsidedly beat Jerry. He usually lost when he stepped up in competition, except for the big, slow, talentless sluggers like Shavers and Lyle.| 7/17/06 09:14:10 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|10|Jimmy: You were talented---a nice boxer. But do you think you stayed in the game too long? By the way, if JQ's back wasn't injured, I think he would have taken you out. But fair is fair and you did get the win. You also did a good job in the "Rumble Down Under" against Frazier, but Dundee stopped it. | 7/17/06 10:46:34 AM|Kent|Murrieta, Ca||kentallenent@aol.com|10|Folks, although I think Earnie Shavers did post here recently and the real Jimmy Ellis might have posted in condolance of Mike's passing, I doubt the recent so called Jimmy Ellis is the real Jimmy.

[7/17/06 11:07:00 AM] Ken "Big Biceps" Norton|Legendsville||realornot.com|||10|This one certainly ain't Jimmy Ellis! But I'm not... I have a game for you: who I really am?

[7/17/06 11:33:53 AM] Ken "Big Biceps" Norton|Legendsville||realornot.com|||10|Correction, the real addresses are:

[7/17/06 12:00:34 PM] Joe Frazier|Philly||n/a|||10|It's my main man, Jimmy "Pudding" Ellis. Thanks for being a punching bag as I prepared for Ali III. Quarry was a better fighter than you.

[7/17/06 04:38:41 PM] Angelo|Washington, DC||funktron|||10|Wow, this reads like a who's who of 70's boxers. Maybe Duane Bobick and Jody Ballard will be the next ones to check in.

[7/17/06 10:49:12 PM] Johnny Boudreax|nevermind||nevermind|||10|I guess Boone Kirkman and Scott LeDoux are not far behind.

[7/17/06 11:47:38 PM] Sheri|Phoenix||lizardluver@hotmail.com|||10|It saddens me to see that my family would use this site to air their dirty laundry. It saddens me that my family would act like total idiots. To lash out in pain, anger, frustration, hatred is just ugly. This site is about the lives of men and their families who have worked hard in the world of boxing, their sacrifices, their dedication, accomplishments, failures, joys and pains. It was not created to bash one another, degrade, attack, lash out at or humiliate other people. I don't believe my uncle Jimmy would be proud to put his name on this, I don't believe my uncle Jerry would either. I know my mom would be pissed, hurt, embarrassed and ashamed of the behavior of her family. I know I am. I can't believe someone would sink as low as some have here. I am not writing this to be pointing fingers at anyone, I know we have all been guilty of stuff but this is the worst I have seen from any of you. You all have done things to people in the family that have hurt them. You may not have seen it or even wanted to see it. But you have.

[7/18/06 12:26:01 AM] Chuck Wepner|Bumblefucksville||Tomato Can|||10|I beat Ali. It was a booming body shot that knocked him out. That long count was crap, I am the real champ.

[7/18/06 12:32:04 AM] Sheri|Phoenix||lizardluver@hotmail.com|||10|i misspoke... i should not have directed that to sonja...but sabrina. thanks |
TRYING, IT WON'T HAPPEN.. |
[7/18/06 10:04:42 AM|Sonia Hathaway(Quarry)|Joshua Tree, Ca||Sonia2163@aol.com||10|We are not idiots and how dare you, slander us. I will stick up for my family til the day I die, that is what I learned from my Father Jimmy, my Mother Roberta, and my Grandma Marie. I know my sister will too. if you have anything else to say know you my email address use it. Ok now lets get back to boxing.| |
[7/18/06 09:34:49 PM|Kathleen Quarry-Mauger|California|Maugermom@msn.com||10|It seems that this site needs some guide lines as to what should and shouldn't be discussed. This site was an idea and dream of two men who wanted other boxers to have a chance to talk with other boxers to discuss their careers to speak with their fans. A place where a fan can express his or herself about a sport or and event where life was at work, playing, cheering, being a part of good fun, the american way. Jerry and Jim were just men, doing a job, doing it extremely well, as best as they could. They did not flont their personal lives or their family's. This site needs to be given back to the people. Family matters should be directed to their personal e-mail addresses and not aired for debate. I love all of you, I've diapered every cotton pick of you, do I need to do this again?...be ladies and gentlemen, as would Jerry and Jim, and Mike.| |
[7/19/06 07:37:38 AM|Sabrina|Florida|????????||10|MY DAD ALWAYS SAID EVERYONE IS ENTITLED TO THEIR OPINION.AND I JUST VOICED MY OPINION.IT'S NOT MY FAULT IF THE TRUTH HURTS.I'M TIRED OF PEOPLE TRASH TALKING MY FATHER, IT'S BEEN GOING ON SINCE I CAN REMEMBER.JUST REMEMBER PEOPLE IF IT WASN'T FOR MY FATHER(JIMMY) THERE WOULD BE NO JERRY QUARRY FOUNDATION.AND KATHY, MY MOTHER CHANGED MY DIAPERS BECAUSE NONE OF THE QUARRY FAMILY WANTED ANYTHING TO DO WITH US ALL OF OUR LIVES.I DON'T NEED ANY OF THEM.THE WAY ARWANDA AND DIANNA TREATED MY FATHER WHEN HE WAS DYING WAS TOTALLY WRONG, POKING HIM IN THE CHEST AND THROWING HIS WIFE OUT RIGHT AFTER HE DIED..WHAT A BUNCH OF LOSERS!!!!!!!| |
[7/19/06 12:51:59 PM|Massimo|Roma||4||10|I just heard that Silvester Stallone will play as (or will be) The Italian Stallion in Rocky 6.Who would win Holyfield-Norton prime vs prime ? I think it's hard to say!| |
[7/19/06 03:59:52 PM|Angelo|Washington, DC|funktron||10|Massimo:  I'm on the fence about Norton vs. Holyfield. I could see Norton winning a close decision. I think Norton would gain confidence as the fight wore on, feeling as though he would not lose by KO. When Norton wasn't intimidated, he was hard to beat. I think he would win the second half of the fight and get a split decision. Even if I don't know what "being on the fence" means, I think you're probably right. Norton performed great against Holmes, and Larry was a better overall fighter than Holyfield, even if probably a worse puncher.| |
[7/20/06 08:57:43 AM|Angelo|Washington, DC|funktron||10|Massimo:  On the fence means undecided! It's like being on top of a fence and not knowing which side to jump down so you're stuck on the fence and can't decide what to do! I was very impressed by the way Holyfield stopped Tyson in their first fight. He hurt him big time. I think that Tyson could take a punch, he proved it for instance against Ruddock (especially in the second fight) and Douglas. I'm also very surprised that an old Holmes did much better than a 30 years old Tyson against Holyfield. But what you say is right. Maybe Tyson was weaker than I thought. I have seen Holmes in his prime only twice (against Marvis Frazier and Scott Frank) so I can judge him only by his record. Let's say that I am on the fence about Holyfield and Holmes punching power.

Yes, I think evaluating Holmes and Holyfield's punching power vs. the other is not easy. In his prime, Larry Holmes was, in my opinion, an easy Top 5 all time heavyweight. I put him in the same category as Ali, Louis, Marciano—he was that good. There was a period of a few years when Larry Holmes came into every fight in top physical and mental condition—and even in the tough matches against guys like Earnie Shavers—and even when things were going badly for him—he would summon up the courage and resolve to hold his title. His left jab rivaled Sonny Listons, he had the ability to come back from knockdowns, he fought very well defensively—and his heart was on par with the best. Almost equally amazing is the fact that he came back long after his physical dominance had eroded and he performed brilliantly against Ray Mercer and even Holyfield (in losing). It also appears, at least now, that Holmes managed his money perfectly and has his physical and mental health. He bought up a bunch of real estate and owns businesses (including a bar/restauant). He still makes a bunch of appearances and still entertains fans. He even posts regularly at his website. His has been one of the few positive boxing stories.

ATTENTION EVERYONE—
I AM SHUTING DOWN THE LETTER PAGE. DON’T KNOW FOR HOW LONG. PLEASE COME BACK TIME TO TIME TO SEE IF ITS UP AND RUNNING. NEED TO GET SOME THINGS STRAIGHTEN OUT FIRST. I’M SURE THIS IS WHAT JAMES AND JERRY WOULD WANT FOR THE TIME BEING. THANK YOU FOR COMING TO THIS MEMORY SITE IN HONOR OF JAMES, JERRY, AND MICHAEL. I WILL BE ADDING NEW PICTURE OF THEM VERY SOON. LOVE YOU ALL

BRANDI QUARRY

I' m am sorry that the site took so much abuse. I hope the site will be opened again, but with stiffer guide lines as to what can and can not be put on the site. More fans and boxers use this site with anticipation on talking to their idols, there peers, and expressing their views on the boxing and sports world.

This is a great page, its just to bad its being shut down, its not what my Dad, would have wanted. But life goes on. To all the regulars its been nice chatting with ya. Take care and be safe. The regulars you have my email address keep in touch, be nice to keep in touch. Good luck in life all.

Like all websites, this one has been completely vulnerable to windbags, lunatics, and the generally maladjusted and/or terminally bored. Originally, it was a great concept, a tribute to a great guy who also happened to be a world class athlete. Years ago, the agenda was limited to Jerry and boxing. At some point, that changed. Perhaps it is time to go now; that is not our decision.

For tonight, I would like to raise a glass to Jerry, Mike, James, and all the fighting Quarrys. While manifestations of their well known tenacity and loyalty have recently spilled over onto these pages - not always admirably - it seems to me the best tribute to Jerry, Mike and James and would be the family doing the best they can to reconcile. I know this is much easier said than done, however, to the Quarrys - and their true fans - good luck, God bless, and Keep On Keepin' On.

7/22/06 01:52:44 PM Jeffrey Smith Fagville Shit Fuck you guys.

7/23/06 03:01:40 AM Ed Cicero N Y mooseygoop@aol.com Sorry to see the site is shutting down. I haven't posted lately but have checked in from time to time. But anyways, a lot of peeps on here really know boxing and Mass, Kent, Angelo or anyone else that wants to keep in touch my E-mail is right there. I know this is much easier said than done, however, to the Quarrys - and their true fans - good luck, God bless, and Keep On Keepin' On.

7/23/06 06:24:40 AM Massimo Roma Cini_Massimo@libero.it I'm very sorry the site is shutting down! I don't want to lose all my friends on here. So, I give you my e-mail address, if you want to keep in touch, you're welcome. Good luck to all and Kent keep your exercises, you're gonna be in great shape very soon!

7/23/06 09:49:14 AM Kent Murrieta, Ca kentallenent@aol.com Yes it is too bad the letters page is being shut down. I hope it can return, maybe registering is the key so it can be controlled better. I will put my E-mail address one more time also.

7/23/06 10:01:48 PM Alfredo Del Vecchio you know where Al.com Nothing lasts forever, eeeeeeeeeeh gia', gia', gia' !!!!!!! Where is Chucky? Chucky, Chucky, Chucky! Have I ever talked to you of Rosa Coletti? Or Did I ever talk to you of Rosa Coletti?

7/25/06 09:22:42 PM Gerry Cleveland jerjets11@yahoo Just wanted extend my best wishes to the Quarry family. I remain a big fan. I hope the site does return with better guidelines. I learned a lor about boxing in a great era here. That's something I'd like to do more of. In the meantime, my yahoo group for the Quarrys is also available. Just look for irishjerryq or Irish Jerry Quarry under yahoo groups. Thanks again and God Bless.

7/26/06 01:20:49 AM Massimo Roma Fan from Fandom, if you happen to read this message, I know that you are a great fights-collector and I would like to know how many Sonny Liston's fights are available on tape. Thank you very much. Fan from Fandom, if you happen to read this message, I know that you are a great fights-collector and I would like to know how many Sonny Liston's fights are available on tape. Thank you very much.

7/26/06 09:41:26 AM kookoo ny kookooclock000@yahoo.com is it not possible to for the webmaster just to simply erase the over the top attacks on here. i know they shut down the frazier site because of this same crap. THANKS A LOT JEFF. AND PEOPLE LIKE YOU THAT HAVE BEEN SO SHITTING, COWARD, I'LL BE BACK WHEN IT'S ALL NORMAL, GOD BLESS THE QUARRY'S !!!